INTRODUCTORY LETTER.

October 31, 1919.

His Excellency WILLIAM D. STEPHENS,
Governor of the State of California,
Sacramento, California.

DEAR SIR: I herewith submit the annual report of the Superintendent of Banks of the State of California, pursuant to section 140 of the Bank Act, enacted by the twenty-eighth session of the Legislature and effective July 1, 1909. This is the tenth annual report under the present law, but the first of the present Superintendent, who succeeded to the office by virtue of your appointment in December, 1918.

The figures here given are those of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919.

The fiscal year under discussion—the climax of four eventful years—marks the most radical transition that the financial life of California has known. For five years a world in ferment had been evolving a new heaven and a new earth, a new definition of government and a new conception of its powers, its duties and its responsibilities. In this period of evolution the world over, the things that had been were on trial for their lives before the bar of the things that are. Its agencies of government, of business and of finance that failed to meet the demands of changing conditions were, of necessity, ruthlessly scrapped, regardless of their antiquity or previous service.

That out of it all there has developed a cleaner, safer world no man may doubt.

As in government, so in finance. The wars of today are commercial—they are born of economic conditions and nurtured in the belly hunger of nations. The war was won in terms of money as well as men. The war could not have been won without money. In financing this titanic struggle, our country discovered resources that could be made available, a financial patriotism that could be called upon, and a financial capacity to shoulder staggering burdens that we had not dreamed we possessed. The patriotic response from the banks and the bankers of our country played a tremendous and unforgetable part in securing the final victory.

California may well be proud of the work done by her own banks and her own bankers in this crisis. Business of all kinds, public or private, was subordinated to the national needs. Each successive call found our patriotism more ready and our ability more conspicuous. That in this time of trial so wonderfully met our banks should have shaken off the ultra-conservative habit of thought and taken their true part among the public utilities of our state, upon which devolved duties and the responsibilities for the growth and welfare of our people, was inevitable. The bank and the banker that were not able to recognize this changed condition and meet this new conception have fallen by the wayside.

During this fiscal year the government made its last two calls for popular financing through the medium of Liberty bonds; between these issues, short-term treasury certificates were sold direct to the banks. During this fiscal year came the sudden cessation of hostilities through the signing of the armistice. Since this event our problem has been to turn from war to peace with the same thoroughness and efficiency that we mobilized and turned from peace to war. How well this is being done and under what circumstances is the theme of this discussion.

TREMENDOUS GROWTH OF STATE BANKS.

The outstanding feature of our banking situation is the tremendous growth of our state banks. At a time when mammoth development and extension had become commonplace, when banking assets and banking wealth were attaining unthought-of magnitude, our banking institutions have established a series of new high records.

In analyzing the facts and figures that tell the story of the condition of state banks on June 30, 1919, the savings banks and savings departments of departmental banks must have first consideration because in our tripartite banking, savings institutions play the most significant part. Of the aggregate of $1,132,110,034.43 in assets in all our banks, $779,532,112.04 are the assets of our savings banks. Of a total increase during the year of $110,600,012.57 in assets in all our banks, $74,765,-798.22 are the increase in assets of the savings banks. Of an increase during the year of $113,283,586.96 in deposits in all our banks, $66,854,-053.26 are now deposits in our savings banks.

During the year the increase in individual deposits was $113,283,-586.96 as against $65,678,493.44 for the preceding year. The increase in total resources was $110,600,012.57 as compared with $92,285,933.13 for the preceding year. At the close of the fiscal year June 30, 1919, the aggregate assets of the banks operating under state jurisdiction was $1,132,110,034.43 and the total of deposits was $947,333,420.85, of which $702,534,780.23 were in the savings banks and invested in securities free from the hazards of commercial banking.

A significant feature of this inquiry is the tremendous aggregate of individual depositors in our state banks.

At the close of the fiscal year there were 1,734,212 depositors in the state banks of California. Of these 1,247,452 are savings depositors While there was a net gain of 39,434 depositors during the year, there was a loss of 12,620 depositors in commercial banks and in commercial departments of departmental banks and an increase of 52,054 depositors in savings banks and savings departments of departmental banks.

Looking back over a period of ten years we find the average increase in savings deposits in California approximately $25,000,000 per annum. Beginning well over a year ago we find the savings deposits in California increasing steadily, uniformly and consistently by approximately half a million dollars a day. In the latter months of 1919 this increase has been gradually raised until the last called report showed, for fifty-seven days, approximately a million a day increase. It is interesting to note that during the period of each Liberty loan there was no increase in deposits, but a decrease of approximately half a million a day for the period of the "drive." This would roughly indicate the contribution of the savings bank depositors to each loan.

Were these increases spasmodic or inconsistent, they could be accounted for on the theory of the deposit of the seasonal crop returns, etc., but their uniformity leads to but one thought, namely, that our people are making regular trips to the depositors' window in the savings banks. If we may, from these circumstances, conclude that the people of this great state have acquired the habit of thrift, what wonderful things it puts within our reach. For example, it makes possible the financing, from our current savings, of a complete highway system within half a calendar year; it makes possible the internal development of California with our own funds on a scale we have heretofore never contemplated. The following tabulation expresses the situation for the fiscal year; conditions here exemplified, however, have become increasingly conspicuous in the period from June 30 to date.

ENORMOUS PROGRESS OF A YEAR IN SAVINGS BANKS.

Compared with the reports of June 29, 1918, the condition of savings banks and of savings departments in departmental banks of the state system at the close of business on June 30, 1919, expresses the following facts:

There is a corollary to this condition that I shall discuss as a part of the question of bonds and bond investments for savings banks. But here let me voice a solemn obligation of every California banker to encourage and develop this habit of thrift among our people, not only for its own sake, as expressed in the welfare and comfort of the depositors, but because of the tremendous things that must be done in California, which can be done if this saving power is capitalized.

THE STRENGTH, GROWTH AND LIQUIDITY OF COMMERCIAL BANKS.

The operations of the commercial banks and the commercial departments of departmental banks of California for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919, disclose a strengthening of these institutions, a growth that is surprising and noteworthy and a participation in national as well as locality finance that is exceptional in volume and magnitude in a system so characteristically savings as is that of this state.

On June 30, 1919, there was an aggregate of $179,569,979.74 in loans, an increase over the preceding year of $21,367,297.10. Bond purchases increased during this period in the sum of $5,888,161.32 evidencing not an indulgence in investment securities by the commercial banks but showing a participation by our commercial banks in the general endeavor to assist the federal government in its wartime difficulties.

The amount due from banks was increased $7,269,495.90, while that due to banks was decreased $7,154,597.39, two highly material items reflecting the purpose of these institutions to maintain a signal liquidity at a time when exigent needs of the federal government or the credit demands of contributary districts would have to be met. With the same motive cash on hand was increased $1,676,006.24, the total in the possession of the banks being $24,116,708.87.

Other resources in the commercial banks and the commercial departments of departmental banks decreased in the sum of $8,906,645.10 and other liabilities increased in the sum of $7,170,317.69. The increases and decreases are practically offsetting items reflecting the participation of California commercial banks in financing issues of United States Government war paper.

Individual deposits in those institutions increased during the year in the sum of $46,429,533.70, the largest increase in the history of the commercial banks of the state. The aggregate at the end of this period was $244,798,640.62.

Compared with the reports of June 29, 1918, the condition of commercial banks and commercial departments of departmental banks of the state system at the close of business on June 30, 1919, expresses the following facts:

Trust companies and trust departments of departmental banks, operating under state jurisdiction, have shown a very satisfactory development during the year. These institutions, restricted in this state solely to fiduciary functions and enjoying none of the privileges of banks, are slow in growth. Their success, however, is sure and they form a most admirable feature of our departmental banking.

During the fiscal year these institutions increased their own assets almost a million dollars and added to their trust responsibilities considerably more than six million dollars. At the beginning of the fiscal year the assets actually owned by trust companies and trust departments of departmental banks made a total of $9,456,916.10; at the close of the fiscal year the total was $10,440,857.91, an increase of $983,941.81.

Private trusts, by operation of law, are not under the supervision of this department. They may, however, be characterized by interested persons as court trusts and as such become subject to the visitorial power of the State Banking Department. It is interesting to note that of an aggregate of $71,760,628.67 under the jurisdiction of this department at the close of the fiscal year on June 30, 1919, $11,530,365.63 were private trusts transferred into court trusts that they might receive the advantages of supervision.

IMMENSE INCREASE IN BANKING POWER OF THE STATE.

Compared with the reports of June 29, 1918, the condition of state banks at the close of business on June 30, 1919, as expressed in a combination of the assets and liabilities of savings, commercial and trust company departments, disclose the following facts, among which is the experience of passing the billion dollar mark in deposits:

CURRENCY INFLATION AND DOLLAR DEPRECIATION.

That these figures reflect a wonderful prosperity in our state is self-evident. It may be safely said that never before has there been so much money in California nor in the hands of so many people. Our state has been gloriously prosperous because her prosperity is based upon the all-important thing in the world today—essential food production. While half the world is going hungry, a beneficient nature has smiled on California. From every source of her varied industries, her cotton fields, her citrus belt, her rice and grain fields, her orchards, come stories of tremendous production.

A study of the statistics of production for our essential crops shows a substantial increase in tonnage over the previous year, but an enormous increase in value. We must not be misled by a comparison, however, expressed in terms of dollars. Doubling the cost of a bushel of wheat will not increase the number of loaves of bread that it can make; and a bushel of wheat and kindred commodities are the real measure of our wealth and not the expansion of value in terms of money. It follows, therefore, that a full realization of this condition discloses menacing possibilities.

The tremendous inflation of the value of our crops, expressing itself in the tremendous increase in the resources of our banks, is part and parcel of a national currency inflation and dollar depreciation. There has followed in our state a tremendous expansion of bank credit, a dangerous corollary to the financing of war prices and wages. Every possible cost is inflated. Costs for essentially everything that enters into public consumption are so high that even normal buying means a very large increase over preceding years in liquidating purchases.

Inflated prices, large deposits and credit inflation are the interpretations by which the true condition of our banks must in part be read.

California is very prosperous, but in that prosperity are the problems involved in the conduct of a business on a dizzy level of high prices, especially those that enter into the costs of living. There is labor unrest, widespread and ominous. There are the questions of reconstruction and of readjustment that will so vitally affect our future. The relationship of wages to prices is yet to be solved. We are riding the crest of a wave that is sweeping us forward with unparalleled rapidity, but that waves are prone to break themselves on rocky shores must not be forgotten.

We will do well if we recognize the true coefficiency of this expansion, whether it expresses itself in terms of crop values, of bank deposits or of credit expansion. We will do well if we recognize that we will face our gravest problem when the period of contraction comes, when prices and wages move toward a normal level. We will do well if we so lay our course that we may feel that our state banks can feel assured that their assets will then stand the acid test.

Our problem, therefore, is twofold: First, that we shall direct our financial resources to the internal development of our state, to the support of every industry and every activity that lends itself to the growth and strength of California—that we shall place back of our food production the financial strength that alone can guarantee its increase, but that we shall do all those things in an orderly far-seeing fashion, that the values that we accept today and the forces we set at work today shall survive the readjustment of tomorrow.

That our banks in California desire to do these things I have every confidence; that they shall be enabled to do these things requires that we shall place at their disposal every facility of sound regulation and every bit of sound information within our command.

LIQUID ASSETS IN OUR SAVINGS BANKS.

There have been times in the history of this department when its working relations with other financial agencies, particularly with the agencies of the federal government, have not been the most harmonious. Since my incumbancy I have made it a point to extend the cooperation of this department to the Federal Reserve Bank on the one hand and the national banking organization on the other.

It is my pleasure to say that we have established the most cordial personal and working relations with both these federal departments, to the end that the information and resources of each of us are common to all of us. A house divided against itself can not stand, and in the finances of California the functions of those three departments are so inextricably intermingled that this cooperation is essential.

The increase in our bank resources has tremendously widened the field for investment; and the changed conditions have affected the character of these investments. For example:

At the close of the fiscal year June 30, 1919, there was an aggregate of $428,233,357.17 of loans in the savings banks, an increase over the preceding year of $2,312,561.12. There was, however, an increase of $54,908,286.34 in investments in bonds, warrants and other securities, the total investment of the preceding year being $170,747,006.58 and that of the current year being $225,655,292.92.

This enormous accretion in bond holdings is dominatingly in obligations of the United States government and discloses the substantial response of the savings banks of this state to the necessities of war finance.

During the year the savings banks availed themselves of the privilege of purchasing bankers' acceptances and commercial paper granted to them with the purpose of permitting them to employ idle funds safely in short time securities and to encourage them in building up a veritable secondary reserve. The small aggregate of loans must be read therefore in connection with the fact that the savings banks of the system had invested $3,027,870.36 in bankers' acceptances, an increase of $2,066,-153.25 over the preceding year and $10,227,810.57 in commercial paper, an increase of $4,578,058.94 over the preceding year.

AGRICULTURAL LANDS UNDER BOND.

To meet the need for savings bank investment had been one of the principal activities of this department during the last year. During the period of the war large development enterprises in California were practically at a standstill. Following the signing of the armistice this accumulated financial pressure was immediately upon us.

The bond market was very wide and very strong. Millions of people who had never thought of bond investments prior to the war had become habitual investors and had the wherewithal with which to buy. There came, and there is still with us, a deluge of financing of every kind through the medium of stocks and bonds. This has been the heyday of the get-rich-quick promoter and the fake financier. Thanks to an efficient blue sky law in California and an efficient administration thereof, the investing public in California has been, in a measure, protected, but none the less millions of dollars have been invested by our people in enterprises that can never return their capital.

That out of this maelstrom of paper there should be secured that which is safe for savings bank investment, has been one of our problems. Practically all of the big agricultural development projects of interior California have applied for certification of their bonds. In each instance we have made a careful appraisement of values. We have recognized that there are three ordinary standards for establishing values and that none of these are today final.

(a) Original costs to the present holders of agricultural lands do not establish their value because of the tremendous increase in values in the last few years.

(b) Selling prices of these lands in subdivisions or of similar lands in the same locality do not establish values that may be accepted five years hence.

(c) Capitalizing the demonstrated earning power of these lands in these days of abnormal prices for every food product does not establish a valuation upon which a long-term bond may be based.

We have therefore tried to secure from among these projects for savings bank purposes, those issues predicated upon properties that represent the best we have in California; that are marching forward progressively toward subdivision, intensive cultivation and the support of additional units of population and that will appear to demonstrate an earning capacity to support a sinking fund requirement calculated to extinguish the principal of the loan within the term of its life.

We have encouraged the banks subject to our jurisdiction to extend credit to agricultural activities of every kind—first, in order that our food production might be increased, and, second, that the value of the land that produces this food is least subject to the hazards of social, political and financial unrest. We have encouraged the thought that these loans should be upon a basis of rapid amortization.

VITAL AMENDMENTS TO THE BANK ACT.

These conditions were developing conspicuously when the undersigned assumed the office of Superintendent of Banks. They became the basis for an intensive discussion with representatives of the Federal Reserve Bank, the California Bankers' Association and other interested financial agencies. Out of these discussions came the amendments that were submitted to the last Legislature designed to accomplish these things:

1. To establish a basis upon which our state banks might cooperate with the federal reserve banks.
2. To broaden the field for safe and profitable investment by our savings banks.
3. To realize the wonderful opportunities that are within the reach of California today in developing our foreign trade.
4. To place more accumulations of savings bank assets within reach of commercial activities and at the same time restrict that extension within the bounds of safety.
5. To provide for an increasing liquidity in our bank assets.

These amendments are discussed in detail in the following pages of this report. I have every reason, at this time to feel that their passage was wise and that their effect will be increasingly beneficial.

At this time I wish to express my sincere appreciation of the courtesies and cooperation extended to me by the Bankers' Association through the medium of its legislative committee and by the Federal Reserve Bank. With all interested parties represented, we were able to reach a harmonious conclusion that expressed the best theoretical thought and practice within the limits of sound state regulation. The thanks of this department are also due to the members of the Legislature and particularly to the members of the banking committee in each House to whom these amendments were presented. The department was accorded the fullest, most cordial cooperation, to the end that its needs were fully met without amendment and without controversy.

The amendments adopted were of sweeping scope and have become operative only within the last few months. In view of this fact and the further fact that another annual report of this department will be submitted to you prior to the convening of the next regular session of the Legislature, I am purposely refraining from suggesting any additional legislation at this time. It would seem to be the part of wisdom to predicate such recommendations only upon a full experiment under the existing law and to present them at as short a time as possible before the session that will consider them.

MISCELLANEOUS STATEMENT.

Because of the amazing increase in deposit liability during the fiscal period, savings banks found it necessary to increase their capital in the sum of $422,705.80 and their surplus in the sum of $1,516,905.64. While the aggregate of sums due from banks increased $8,639,279.85, that due to banks decreased $121,030.60, disclosing a marked tendency to liquidation of debts and a very material improvement in these institutions with relation to their position with their correspondent banks.

State banks reported an aggregate of $54,681.18 and national banks a total of $5,573.02, or a combined sum of $60,254.20 in unclaimed deposits of more than twenty years' standing and thus subject to escheat. State banks reported $520,381.81 and national banks $60,301.58, or a combined sum of $580,683.39 in unclaimed deposits of more than ten years but less than twenty years' standing. These deposits do not escheat until after the expiration of twenty years.

At the close of business on June 30, 1919, there were 425 state banks with 146 branch offices. Of these 84 are commercial banks, 114 are savings banks, 7 are trust companies, 193 are commercial and savings departmental banks, 20 are commercial, savings and trust companies, one is a commercial and trust company and 6 are savings and trust companies.

During the fiscal year nine new banks and fourteen branch offices were licensed. Thirty-four applications of a single bank to make collections of deposits from school children were granted. Nine banks extended their activities by adding new departments. Of these three were commercial departments, five were savings departments and one a trust department.

Three banks and five branch offices were closed, these results being accomplished either by sales to going institutions or by consolidations that give to the communities interested greater and more centralized banking facilities.

Three banks entered the federal system by conversion. Six banks and one branch office were sold and four banks became extinct by consolidation. Four banks changed their names.

Thirty-four banks increased their capital stock, while only two decreased their capitalization. During the year calls for reports of condition were issued for August 31, 1918, November 1, 1918, December 31, 1918, March 4, 1919, May 12, 1919, and June 30, 1919.

Looking at the situation in its larger aspect, there were two great problems confronting us in the redrafting of the California Bank Act: First, our financial relations with the world at large as they apply to the American commercial invasion of the orient and South America; and, second, the problem of the federal reserve bank as it applies to state banks in California.

CALIFORNIA BANKS EQUIPPED TO CONTROL PACIFIC TRADE.

California, fronting on the Pacific, the new commercial highway of the nation, closest to the Orient and within easy reach of both shores of South America, is in splendid position to take the cream of the Oriental and South American business, formerly held by Germany. Whether we shall do this will depend very largely upon the character of financial relations that we establish with those countries, and particularly upon the character of financing of their buying operations that we are able to offer.

The Japanese are keenly alive to this situation. Well financed branches of Japanese current financial organizations have been established in California for this specific purpose.

Section 58 of the Bank Act as amended is, we believe, the first comprehensive and intelligent handling of this situation. Briefly, it provides that any California bank with a capital and surplus of $1,000,000 or more may establish foreign branches or branches in the dependencies or insular possessions of the United States for the furtherance of the foreign commerce of this state and of the United States. Second, it may invest an amount not exceeding in the aggregate ten per centum of its paid-in capital and surplus in the stock of one or more banks or corporations chartered or incorporated under the laws of the State of California and principally engaged in the international or foreign banking business in a dependency or insular possession of the United States. Every bank operating foreign branches within the limitations of this amendment shall be required to furnish information concerning the condition of such branches to the Superintendent of Banks upon demand, and shall be subject to the examination and jurisdiction of the State Banking Department.

The purpose and effect of this amendment are self-evident.

RELATION OF STATE BANKS TO FEDERAL RESERVE SYSTEM.

The commanding fact in the history of American finance since the adoption of the National Bank Act was the enactment of the Federal Reserve Act. This eventful statute is designed to make impossible the repetition of money panics, to insure the legitimate expansion of American credits and to prevent a waste of gold in the reserves of American banks.

None of these purposes has yet found justification in experience. There has been no occasion for a panic since the Federal Reserve Act came into being. American commercial credits would have expanded enormously under war pressure without a federal reserve law, and there has been no proper demand for rediscounts because there has been an outpouring of credit. We have not needed to husband our gold because the immense quantity of gold that has flowed to us from Europe has not made thrift in its use necessary, and we are now striving with every energy of financial intelligence to get rid of its burden.

Results of paramount importance have, however, been attained by the federal reserve system, and at the session of the California Legislature this year it was my duty to urge the adoption of such laws as would permit the state banks of California to share in whatever benefits that might inure in a modernized federal finance.

The Federal Reserve Act has given to the national banking plan an organization it never before possessed. A unity of administration has been established in American banks. A tremendous quantity of gold is under a centralized control, and our foreign trade has received an unexampled impetus through the expedient of foreign branches of American banks and the acceptance of foreign bills.

The situation with relation to the federal reserve banking system does not lend itself to an academic discussion. Without holding any brief for the federal reserve idea, and without guaranteeing the future success of the federal reserve structure, the fact remains that it is today the dominant financial note in American finance, and this, if nothing more, demands the cooperation and support of state banks.

Upon this theory we have proceeded with the amendment of the Bank Act. We are all familiar, of course, with the situation that arose in 1917 when the federal reserve banks called for the gold in the hands of the state banks, and we are familiar with the fact that that call was answered by the patriotic California banks, entirely in defiance of the Bank Act of California and with the acquiescence of the State Banking Department. The necessity warranted the action then taken, it being thoroughly understood that it would be the first duty of the Legislature at its next session to rearrange the situation within the law.

Briefly, then, the amendments to sections 20, 56, 56*a*, 62, 67 and 68 provide for the entrance of state banks into the federal reserve system as member banks, but still within the jurisdiction of the laws of this state and the control of this department, for the exercise of all rights and privileges of such state member banks while in the federal reserve system, and for the general acceptance of the theory of the federal reserve system and its practical application as expressed in the form of securities in which a member bank may invest.

Section 67 provides that such a state member bank may exercise the vital privilege accorded to a member of a federal reserve bank, namely, the privilege of rediscount. Upon the theory of the establishment of a secondary reserve in the form of liquid paper rediscountable on demand at a federal reserve bank, this section permits a California member savings bank to invest a total of twenty per centum of its deposits in commercial paper of two forms: First, a bank acceptance uttered by a bank with a paid-in capital of at least $1,000,000, this arbitrary capitalization being established for this purpose on the theory that a million dollar bank will have a competent credit department and a smaller bank may not; and, second, in ordinary commercial paper of a character specifically described in this section arising out of an actual commercial transaction, with a maturity of not more than six months, and upon a current statement showing a relationship of at least two to one as between quick assets and quick liabilities, including in liabilities at face value all contingent liabilities. Generally speaking, these are the definitions established to determine the eligibility of paper for rediscount with the federal reserve bank, although the federal reserve bank reserves the right to pass upon each piece of paper when presented.

In a word, this permits the member bank to have in its possession a 20 per cent line of liquid paper that may be converted into cash in emergency on demand, and opens our savings banks to a profitable line of business, while at the same time so characterizes the paper that may be there handled as to involve no question of hazard within reasonable limitations.

As a practical proposition, we must recognize the growing competition between the national banks and the state banks. If we are to maintain the integrity of our state banking system, we must meet the situation as it develops, progressively, sanely and safely. In these various liberalizing amendments to the California Bank Act, we believe we have met this situation conservatively and without invalidating any theory or principle of state regulations. We believe that under this revised act our banks may go forward serving the communities and the state in general, in a larger way than they have heretofore served, and this without forfeiting any elements which have heretofore made for safety.

As a matter of fact, the entrance of these banks into the federal reserve system, giving them the opportunity to establish a secondary line of reserve which will be a practical help in time of emergency, entitling them to the support of the federal reserve system should they need it, and, finally making them subject to the critical examination, not only of this state department but of the Federal Reserve Bank itself, will go a long way toward additional safeguard.

COMMERCIAL BANK RESERVES MODIFIED TO MEET FEDERAL LAW.

The amendments to the Bank Act, which became operative on July 22, 1919, are of such moment that it is necessary particularly to characterize them and to suggest their application in the banking system of the state.

Section 5 of the Bank Act is amended so as to enlarge the definition of commercial banking to include a capacity by commercial banks in cities of a population not greater than 5000 persons to act as the agent for any fire, life or other insurance company authorized by the authorities of the State of California to do business in this state. Such agency shall be regulated by rules to be prescribed by the Superintendent of Banks. The section is changed in this fashion to permit commercial banks in the state system to compete upon an equality with national banks in the same locality. The amendment is of identical phrasing with an amendment to section 5202 of the Revised Statutes of the United States adopted as of date September 7, 1916, and made part of the National Bank Act. Contingent liabilities involved in such agency are removed absolutely.

Section 8 is revised to remedy a conflict that existed as between this section and section 290*a* of the Civil Code. The last named section was amended in 1917 so as to eliminate the requirement of the affidavit of the organizers of a banking corporation with reference to the paid-in capital thereof. Section 8 continued, however, to demand this requirement, and the elimination of this feature of section 8 is the only purpose of the correction.

Section 16 of the Bank Act was repealed. This section and section 1454 of the Code of Civil Procedure were identical in a provision which granted to certain surviving heirs of a deceased depositor in a bank, privilege to withdraw from that bank any sum not greater than $1,000 if that sum is the aggregate of all moneys deposited in banks of this state by the deceased depositor. Section 16 of the Bank Act also gave authority for joint accounts in savings banks with right of survivorship, but as this was simply declarative of a right of contract it was not deemed necessary to retain it.

Section 19 of the Bank Act was reformed to release deposits of the United States and postal savings deposits and deposits of the State of California, and of any county and municipality in the State of California, which are secured as required by law, from the aggregate of deposit liability against which capital must be maintained in the commercial and savings banks of this state. The fact that these public deposits are secured, makes it unnecessary to require a double security by adding to the collateral pledged by the bank for the deposits an increase in capital of the bank. The purpose of the amendment is to relieve state banks, without in any sense lessening their responsibility in capital, from a burden which the national laws do not require from national banking associations.

The revision of section 20 of the Bank Act is the first of a series of amendments intended to bring the banks of the state system into relationship, established by membership in federal reserve banks, with the federal system. The scheme of reserves as fixed in the Bank Act of California is not in any way invaded or impaired. The amendment assumes two forms: First, to permit the carrying of reserves on hand in any money or currency authorized by the laws of the United States; and, second, to allow any bank in the state to carry any or all of its reserves, either those on hand or those on deposit, in a federal reserve bank. A primary consideration is to empower such banks as become members of the federal reserve bank of the twelfth district to carry reserves established by the Federal Reserve Act for all member banks in lieu of the reserves demanded by the Bank Act of California. The amendment enables any bank under the jurisdiction of the laws of California, whether a member of the federal bank or not, to contribute its gold to the federal reserve banks without a violation of our state law, and the change will also give full freedom to all of the banks in the state to avail themselves of the privilege of entering the federal reserve system as state member banks.

COOPERATION BETWEEN STATE AND FEDERAL SUPERVISION.

Section 21*a* of the Bank Act is amended to establish new limitations within which commercial banks in the state system may borrow money. The change is intended to restrict this capacity to prevent inflation, unwise and unwarranted broadening of activities and the dangers involved in operating on borrowed money. The amendment maintains all of these restrictions, but enlarges the power of commercial banks to rediscount with a federal reserve bank such notes, drafts, bills of exchange and loans to the same extent as is granted by national law to national bank members of the federal system. The amendment is necessary to place banks in the state system on a parity of indulgence with their competing national bank members. There is granted also authority to state commercial banks to borrow any amount for the purpose of buying from the United States, United States bonds, United States Treasury certificates or notes or obligations of the United States. This is to give state banks opportunity to play their proper part in the financing of national obligations.

Section 37 of the Bank Act is revised in two vital relationships. The first permits any bank, with the previous written consent of the Superintendent of Banks, to purchase or otherwise acquire and hold the whole or any part of the capital stock of not more than one trust company organized and existing under the laws of this state, if that purchase shall not exceed 25 per cent of the capital and surplus of such bank, and also allows any bank, with the previous consent of the Superintendent of Banks, to purchase the whole or any part of the capital stock of not more than one corporation authorized and empowered to conduct a safe deposit business. The change is intended to strengthen our trust companies and also to indulge smaller banks in a desire to participate in the profits of those companies. Care is taken, however, to prevent any commercial or savings bank from engaging in a title insurance company.

The amendment to section 43 of the Bank Act is a minor one designed to except a federal reserve bank from the necessity of being either nominated by a depositary bank or designated by the Superintendent of Banks as a reserve depositary for funds of any bank in the state system. It is assumed that any federal reserve bank, in which the banks of California may deposit, does not require such a designation as is demanded for other banking institutions.

Section 48*a* is a new section. Its purpose is to make effective the national law which gives the right to national banking associations to conduct a trust department in connection with their commercial banking business. The federal law places upon the state in which a national association desires to indulge fiduciary functions, the burden of making operative the provisions of the national statute. Section 48*a* therefore provides that the Superintendent of Banks shall have authority to perform for national associations, which are authorized to conduct a trust department in this state, such service as is demanded by the Bank Act for state trust companies. The expense of this service is to be determined by the Superintendent of Banks and to be paid by the national association receiving it. Eight national banks have accepted the privilege granted.

Section 56 of the Bank Act is changed so as to make more explicit the statement of conditions under which state banks may become members of the federal reserve bank of the twelfth district. Such state banks remain fully within the government of state law, but they are given capacity to contribute the capital required for membership from any of their three departments, commercial, savings or trust. The Superintendent of Banks is authorized to supply the federal reserve board, federal reserve bank examiners, duly appointed by the federal reserve board, or the federal reserve bank, copies of all examinations made by the Superintendent of Banks and he may disclose to the officials named any information with reference to the condition of affairs of state bank members. He may also accept the examination of the federal reserve bank of the twelfth district in lieu of the examination required under the provisions of the Bank Act. The amendment is a highly desirable one as it gives to the Superintendent of Banks opportunity to fortify his own investigations by those of an independent and competent analyst. The result, in effect, is a double examination of each state bank in each year where one was only possible. The amendment is essentially constructive legislation, valuable to the banks and all-important to the depositing public.

Although the Bank Act was amended in 1913 to give authority to state banks to become members of any federal reserve bank that might be created by the national Congress only four state banks, possessing aggregate assets of $9,195,520.38, availed themselves of this privilege prior to the close of the fiscal year 1918–1919.

Immediately following the amendments to the Bank Act that became effective on July 22, 1919, and the object of which was to make attractive to our banks membership in the federal reserve system, four banks, with aggregate assets of $128,381,964.24, were granted membership. There are now pending before the federal authorities the applications of ten more banks having total assets of $286,873,886.55. Very shortly therefore eighteen state banks, with combined assets of $424,451,371.13, will be members of the federal reserve bank of the twelfth district. The figures herein used are representative of the assets of banks as recorded on September 12, 1919.

PROTECTION TO SAVINGS DEPOSITORS UPON CONVERSION OF STATE BANKS.

Section 56*a* is a new section and is one of the important changes in the Bank Act. It is introduced to insure the right of every state bank to convert into a national association if it so desires, but such conversion in the case of a savings bank or of a departmental bank having a savings department can be accomplished only under such conditions as will advise every depositor in the savings bank or in the bank having a savings department of the character of the change which takes place by conversion. Coincident with the application of a state bank to convert, notice of such intention shall be given to the Superintendent of Banks. Before such conversion is effected, such savings bank or departmental bank having a savings department shall place in the hands of the Superintendent of Banks a constructive notice for newspaper publication, directed to its savings depositors, of the fact of conversion and an actual notice, addressed to each and every savings depositor at his or her last known address, enclosed in a stamped and addressed envelope ready for mailing, advising said depositor that the bank has ceased to be under the jurisdiction and direction of the California State Banking Department and the Bank Act of California and is now under the jurisdiction and control of the Federal Reserve Act and the National Bank Act. Both of these notices are made effective after the conversion; one by publication and the other by mailing by the Superintendent of Banks. Such a statute was made possible by an amendment to section 5154 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, which in its new expression becomes section 8 of the Federal Reserve Act and provides that the conversion of a state bank into a national association shall not be in contravention of state law. Prior to this amendment to the federal statute any state bank, without any sanction from the state government, could convert and its savings deposits would be carried by operation of law into a national association. Section 56*a* gives to every savings depositor in the state system the right of determining whether or not he shall remain as a depositor under state jurisdiction or as a depositor under national law.

Section 58 of the Bank Act is a new section and its character and import have already been discussed.

Section 61 of the Bank Act was also improved in several major aspects. This section is the governing section of the Bank Act for savings bank investments. It is one of the most critically established laws in any state in the union, and the changes that have been made are designed to fortify the regulations governing investments by savings banks. Savings banks are given a new privilege to invest in bonds or interest-bearing notes or obligations of England or the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland or France or the Dominion of Canada or those for which the faith and credit of any one or more of said countries are pledged for the payment of principal and interest, and also bonds or interest-bearing notes or obligations of any other foreign country or government which shall first have been approved in writing by the Superintendent of Banks. The law governing investments by savings banks in notes or bonds secured by real estate is also strengthened to prevent any of the hazards which may follow locality optimism or the speculative indulgence of real estate promoters.

Section 61*a* of the Bank Act, which is the section providing for certification of savings bank investments by the Superintendent of Banks, is amended to give to the Superintendent of Banks power to extend or renew his certificate of eligibility of bonds of savings banks without requiring an application from any corporation issuing the bonds or of any person interested in them. This change was required because as soon as the bonds are certified and have become investments in savings banks the issuing corporation loses all interest in the bond, which at the expiration of a fixed period ceases to be eligible. The amendment is intended to protect savings banks in the continued holding of such bonds.

EFFECTIVE LIQUIDITY WITH SAFETY GRANTED TO SAVINGS BANKS.

Section 62 of the Bank Act, which governs, restricts and guards borrowing by savings banks, was also amended. The section is liberalized to permit savings banks, to the extent of their capital and surplus, to rediscount such assets as they may possess with a federal reserve bank and to borrow in any amount to buy from the United States, United States bonds, United States Treasury certificates or notes or obligations of the United States. The first amendment is designed to make absolutely liquid the secondary reserve of the savings bank, and the second offers a suggestion of assistance to the federal government without impairing the character of the savings bank.

Section 65 of the Bank Act, the statute which establishes the limitations upon any relationship as between the bank, its officers, directors, agents or employees, is revised to provide that by and with the consent of the Superintendent of Banks previously obtained in writing, all directors may vote upon a loan made by one bank to another bank where the entire capital stock of one is owned by or is held in trust for the stockholders of the other bank and where all or a majority of the board of directors of each of said banks are composed of the same persons. This amendment is designed to obviate unnecessary obstacles which the section raised as against certain transactions which may be of benefit to both of the banks concerned. Another amendment to the section makes it possible for a savings bank to loan to any director, other than an officer, directly or indirectly, and to an agent or employee of a savings bank upon the security of United States bonds, United States Treasury certificates or interest-bearing notes or obligations of the United States or those for which the faith and credit of the United States are pledged for repayment of principal or interest or those issued under authority of the United States. Borrowing by officers, directors, agents or employees in savings banks is strictly restricted and very carefully supervised, but the liberalization of the section in no way creates an injurious influence in the bank as the security for the loan is beyond question.

The amendment to section 67 of the Bank Act is one of the most important of the changes in the banking statute of the state. California was the first of the American states to permit its savigs banks to invest a certain proportion of their assets in liquid form, namely, in bankers' acceptances and commercial paper of a class that is considered by leading financial experts and bankers of the United States to be of such a grade that it is practically equivalent to cash. This law became operative in 1917 and restricted our savings banks to a limit of 10 per cent of their deposits in short time paper. With the advent of the federal reserve system the need of state banks to possess a greater amount of liquid assets eligible and acceptable for rediscount by the federal reserve bank of the twelfth district and thus to have at command an actual secondary reserve was apparent and the limit of investment by savings banks in liquid, short time assets was raised by the amendment this year to 20 per cent of the deposit liability of the bank. All of this 20 per cent may be invested in bankers' acceptances which bear a low rate of interest; but no more than 12½ per cent may be invested in commercial paper. The character of this commercial paper has the endorsement of the federal reserve board itself and is introduced in our system to give to our savings banks opportunity to rediscount with the federal reserve bank of the twelfth district at such times as they may need. The amendment is of first importance and is one of the series necessary to the full enjoyment of the privileges and protection of the federal reserve system by banks in California. The leading authorities in the financial world consider that such a modification of the Savings Bank Act is of vital moment in protecting savings banks from danger, if not from disaster. Three of the conservative and powerful states of the Union, New York, Connecticut and Massachusetts, have followed the lead of California in this direction. Section 67 is also modified to harmonize its provisions with the alterations made in section 61 relating to loaning and investment by savings banks.

Section 68 of the Bank Act, which relates to the reserves which must be maintained by savings banks, is revised to permit the profitable admission of savings banks in the State of California into the federal reserve system. All savings banks now may place their reserves, or any part of their reserves, in the federal reserve bank of the twelfth district, but member banks must carry as reserves on hand 2 per cent in addition to the amount demanded by the Federal Reserve Act for time deposits.

CONTROL OVER CREATION OF BANKS RESTORED TO DEPARTMENT.

Section 70 is a new section qualifying every savings bank to receive as depositary or as bailee for safekeeping and storage, Liberty bonds or other bonds or securities issued by the United States government for war purposes or otherwise. The enormous acquisition of Liberty bonds by the public has created a real situation as to their safekeeping and steps are being taken in every state to afford some protection as against theft and loss.

Section 80 of the Bank Act, which is the governing section for loans made by commercial banks, is changed so that loans to any director, other than an officer, directly or indirectly, or to any agent or employee of a commercial bank may be made without limit on the security of United States bonds, United States Treasury certificates or interest-bearing notes or obligations of the United States or those for which the faith and credit of the United States are pledged for repayment of principal and interest or those issued under authority of the United States. The amendment was adopted upon the theory that such security as is offered by the interest-bearing obligations of the United States offers no hazard to the banks accepting them.

Section 90 of the Bank Act is modified simply with that reference which seeks to provide a continuity of the trust relationships established by existing trust companies before they entered the federal reserve system.

Section 123 of the Bank Act is changed to increase the appropriation required for the conduct of the State Banking Department to $110,000 a year or as much less as may be necessary properly to administer the banks through the agencies of supervision and visitation. An increase in the revolving fund, which is directly under authority of the Superintendent of Banks, is made from $500 to $2,000. The opinion of both bankers and the State Banking Department is that these amendments are demanded for an adequate government of the banks. These institutions have expanded enormously within the last few years in assets and liabilities and the requirements of supervision have become very much greater than when the original fund was established.

Section 124 of the Bank Act is amended to provide that whenever the Superintendent of Banks may deem that a bank requires extraordinary or extra attention and examination he may have authority to charge at the rate of $20 a day for such examination for the main office and for each branch office of the institution. He was formerly restricted to a charge of $20 a day for an extraordinary examination of a bank irrespective of the number of its branch offices. The extension of branch offices has made the amendment essential.

Section 131 of the Bank Act is changed to make coincident at least three of the called reports demanded by the Superintendent of Banks with the called reports ordered by the Comptroller of the Currency. This is intended to give wider and more critical and intimate information from the point of view of state supervision and that of national.

The amendment to section 142 of the Bank Act insures that none of the records of the State Banking Department shall be deemed to be public documents nor shall any of such records be open to the inspection of the public. This protection has become vital because of the endeavors of ill-advised or ill-disposed persons to obtain information of the condition of banks from the State Banking Department. The relationship between the department and the banks is a confidential one and all of the records must be confidential records. The amendment in no way restricts nor attempts to limit the right of the courts to exercise such control over the banks in evidenciary matters as they now possess.

When the Corporate Securities Act was amended in 1917, an unintentional conflict between it and the Bank Act was introduced. Considerations of the highest moment had prompted a change in the law to place exclusively within the jurisdiction and discretion of the Superintendent of Banks the organization as well as the licensing of state banks. The control of the Superintendent of Banks over the creation of banking corporations was taken away by the change in the Corporate Securities Act in 1917, but it was restored by the Legislature at its session this year.

CALIFORNIA'S CONTRIBUTION TO THE GOLD HOARD OF THE UNION.

One of the most interesting features of the functioning of California banks during the fiscal year that closed June 30, 1919, was the splendid response made by our financial institutions to the appeals of the federal government to give up all available gold that its credit structure, already enormous in its proportions, might be maintained to meet any need, even the most exacting, of wartime finance. This response was made in violation of our law under the spur of a patriotic appeal.

The importunities of the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco for gold during this period were insistent. This department gave its hearty cooperation and the banks generously met the appeal. At the beginning of the fiscal year the commercial banks and the commercial departments of departmental banks held $13,932,092.26 in gold, gold certificates which are warehouse receipts for gold, and United States notes, which have an underlying security of one-third gold. At the close of the fiscal year our commercial banks and commercial departments of departmental banks held in gold, gold certificates and United States notes $8,150,768.73, a decrease of $5,781,323.53 during the year.

At the beginning of this fiscal period the savings banks and savings departments of departmental banks held $12,958,838 in gold, gold certificates and United States notes. At the end of the fiscal year the savings banks and savings departments of departmental banks held $4,981,568.87, a decrease during the year of $7,977,269.13. The total decrease in the holdings of gold, gold certificates and United States notes in both savings and commercial institutions of the state was $13,758,592.66.

At the commencement of the fiscal year 1918–1919 the commercial banks and commercial departments of departmental banks in the state system held $8,508,610.33 in currency, other than gold certificates and United States notes, and in silver and minor coins. At the close of the period these institutions held in currency other than that representing gold, $15,965,940.14, an increase during the year of $7,457,329.81, most of which is federal reserve notes.

At the beginning of the fiscal year under consideration the savings banks and savings departments of departmental banks held in currency and in silver and minor coins, excluding gold certificates and United States notes, $6,988,742.91. At the close of the fiscal year the savings banks and savings departments of departmental banks held in the same mediums $14,497,215.81, an increase during the year of $9,515,646.94, the major part of which is in federal reserve notes. The total increase in the possession of both savings and commercial banking institutions of the state in currency, other than that reflective of gold, during the year was $16,972,976.75.

On June 30, 1919, our state banks possessed $13,147,927.60 in gold, gold certificates and United States notes. In a year their holdings had been reduced one-half, a very commendable performance when we consider the great preference the people of the state have for gold. The distribution of the present holdings is as follows: Commercial banks and commercial departments of departmental banks, $8,150,768.73; savings banks and savings departments of departmental banks, $4,981,568.87; trust companies and trust departments of departmental banks, $15,590.

The Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco continues to ask of our banks full contribution of their gold, but I very seriously doubt the wisdom of increasing the gold reserve of the federal banking system and thus contributing to the potentialities of an inflated credit condition against which the federal reserve board has itself sounded the most emphatic warning.

It is not conceivable that we shall require in times of peace a credit expansion greater than was sufficient in times of war. Cheap money, low rates of interest and high reserves, centralized in the federal reserve system, are the inspiration for high costs and prices, speculation and stock gambling

The legitimate occupation of the federal reserve system is to insure a positive reserve of credit all the time and not to maintain constantly a new reservoir of credit to be called upon whether it be needed or not. The credit organization of the federal reserve system must inevitably contract under peace conditions.

Federal borrowing is decreasing and war paper in our banks will, with measurable rapidity, be paid off and retired. As this occurs private borrowing will decrease. The liabilities of the federal reserve system will become less as the return to normal peace levels of trade is accomplished.

The percentage of gold reserve of the federal reserve banks will then increase. The need of the federal reserve system for the gold in our banks will abate as I assume that even the most optimistic conception of our trade under peace conditions does not involve or imply the same gigantic credit edifice which was compelled by war finance.

LAZY LIQUIDATION BEING HASTENED TO A CONCLUSION.

There are seven state banks in the possession of the Superintendent of Banks and in process of liquidation. Six of these institutions have pursued for several years a lazy course toward the final conclusion of their affairs. Delays caused by minor and inconsequential considerations have impeded the final steps in closing these defunct banks and I am using every possible legal expedient to expedite the disposition of their remaining assets and to end their long continued and needlessly expensive existence.

One of these banks, Union Savings Bank of Santa Rosa, is of immediate concern to the general public. Its doors were closed by the Superintendent of Banks on September 30, 1918. This bank had the same officers, directors and stockholders as the Santa Rosa National Bank, which, on that day, was ordered by the federal authorities to suspend. The business of each institution was so intimately and dangerously interwoven with the other that the collapse of the national bank demanded the suspension of the affiliated state bank simply as a measure of precaution to protect the depositors of the Union Savings Bank.

When I assumed the duties of Superintendent of Banks I discovered that the notice to creditors of Union Savings Bank was fatally defective. A new publication of three months was necessary, but notwithstanding this unfortunate delay I am pleased to report that I have been able to pay two dividends, aggregating eighty per cent, to depositors, within a year from the closing of the bank.

This expedition in connection with the payment of depositors in a defunct bank is without a parallel in the history of the department. I am gratified also to advise you that the depositors of Union Savings Bank will be paid in full even if claims, that I have for proper reasons rejected, be included, by court decision, in the ultimate aggregate. The first dividend to depositors, of sixty per cent, was declared on May 14, 1919, and the second, of twenty per cent, on September 16, 1919.

Of the remaining six banks in liquidation I have the following to report:

I paid a final dividend of 1.9 per cent on March 31, 1919, to the depositors of the Japanese Bank of Sacramento. Liquidation will be closed as soon as a report is made to the State Controller. This bank has been in liquidation for ten years, since October 13, 1909.

A final dividend of 2 per cent was declared on August 25, 1919, to the creditors of Union State Bank, a corporation formerly operating in San Francisco. Final report to the State Controller will be made on February 25, 1920, and the liquidation closed. This bank has been in the possession of the Superintendent of Banks since July 17, 1909.

I am now prepared to present an application to the Superior Court of California for permission to pay a final dividend of 3.25 per cent to the depositors of the State Savings and Commercial Bank, formerly of San Francisco. Upon the payment of this dividend the concluding incidents of liquidation will quickly be accomplished. This bank has been in the hands of the Superintendent of Banks since July 17, 1909.

The liquidation of Kimmon Ginko, a Japanese bank formerly doing business in San Francisco with branch offices in Los Angeles and Yokohama, is practically finished. Two small parcels of realty owned by the bank are to be sold and this will be done shortly. This bank has dragged its way toward dissolution since March 29, 1909.

I expect to close the affairs of the Japanese American Bank within six months. Several suits have obstructed the conclusion, but they will be prosecuted with energy. This bank has been in control of the Superintendent of Banks since October 18, 1909.

Much progress has been made during the year in hastening the final liquidation of Kern Valley Bank. Litigation has received needed attention, certain valuable properties have been acquired and negotiations are under way for the advantageous sale of some of the assets of the bank. Decisions upon two important suits are awaited. This bank has been in the possession of the Superintendent of Banks since May 12, 1911.

I was compelled to close Bank of Perris on April 13, 1919. The controlling stockholder of this institution had sold his stock in the bank to an adroit rascal who made the purchase that he might loot the corporation of its liquid assets. He paid nothing for the stock and absconded with a sum approximately equal to the capital and surplus of the bank.

I took possession of the institution, set in motion proceedings to cancel all outstanding stock and levied an assessment equal to the loss. The controlling stockholder, fortified by public citizens interested in the welfare of the bank, repaired the loss and on July 17, 1919, I permitted the bank to reopen its doors. It has resumed its life under conditions that give assurance of its continued usefulness in a community which very generously has given its confidence under circumstances the most trying.

Appended hereto and made a part of this report are the following:

1. Summary of condition of every state bank.
2. List of new banks and branch offices.
3. Name and compensation of each person employed and the whole amount of receipts and disbursements of the department during the fiscal year.
4. Names of banks placed in the hands of the Superintendent of Banks in process of liquidation and the amount of dividends paid thereon.
5. Miscellaneous changes in banks.
6. Reports of deposits in state and national banks unclaimed for more than twenty years.
7. Reports of deposits in state and national banks unclaimed for more than ten years.
8. Banks authorized to make collection of savings from school children.
9. Tabulated statements of condition of banks.

This report has attained its end only if it has given you an adequate conception of the tremendous growth, the potential power, the inherent virility of the state banks of California; that the glorious potentialities of our state will be adequately met by the actualities of her banks; that with a full knowledge of the problems of reconstruction and of readjustment that surround our present and future, our banks are going forward progressively but sanely, playing their full part in the readjustment and development, but playing it within the limits of sound finance.

We realize that today's statement is for today. We realize that we are afloat on a current whose destination no man knows.

If, in the future as in the past, we shall bring to bear upon these problems the combined vision, thought and experience of all the agencies interested in their solution, then the state banks of California need have no fear, come what may.

To this end every resource of the State Banking Department of California is being directed.

Yours very truly,

CHARLES F. STERN,
Superintendent of Banks.
