FINANCIAL STATISTICS OF CITIES HAVING A POPULATION OF OVER 30,000: 1925

INTRODUCTION

Scope of report.—The present report of the Bureau of the Census is practically limited to a presentation of statistics of the financial transactions during the fiscal year 1925 of the 247 cities, each of which had a population of over 30,000 as enumerated by the Federal census January 1, 1920, or by a subsequent special enumeration under the supervision of the Bureau of the Census, and of the financial condition of those cities at the close of the fiscal year reported. The report presents statistics as accurate and as comparable as it has been feasible to compile from the records of the cities and relates to a number of subjects, the principal of which are (1) the total and per capita receipts from revenues and from the principal classes thereof; (2) the total and per capita payments for expenses and interest, and total outlays, and totals for each of the principal classes of expenses and outlays; (3) the total value of municipal properties; (4) the total and per capita municipal indebtedness; and (5) the total assessed valuation of property subject to the general property tax, and total and per capita levies.

Purpose of report.—The purpose of the reports of this series is to provide information in regard to the financial administration of the cities, in such form as to be comparable, with the hope that it may be of assistance to the officials who are charged with responsibilities incident to the administration of local government and the betterment of the local communities; directly, through personal study of the reports, and indirectly, through the interpretations and recommendations of practical students of civic affairs and of local civic bodies.

The cities of this class are responsible for the protection of the lives, property, and health of their own inhabitants, constituting over one-third of the population of the Nation, and of many millions of persons who visit them, as well as for providing educational and recreational services, caring for the indigent, defective, and delinquent classes, and arranging for a constantly growing number of conveniences and services which are demanded by associations interested in the betterment of the several urban communities.

Increase in the number and population of cities having over 30,000 inhabitants.—The growing importance of a report such as this is shown by one of the most striking features of our national development during the 13 decades that have passed since 1790, when the first Federal census was taken—the greater increase in the population of cities than in that of smaller places and of rural communities. In 1790 the United States had but one city with a population of over 30,000. That was New York, N. Y., which at that time had 33,131 inhabitants. The two cities which ranked next to New York in population were Philadelphia, Pa., with 28,522 inhabitants, and Boston, Mass., with 18,320 inhabitants. In 1790 the national population numbered 3,929,214, and the population of New York, the one city of this class, constituted only 0.8 per cent of that of the Nation. In 1925 the national population numbered 115,378,000 and the 247 cities of this class, with a total population of 40,757,434 contained 35.3 per cent of the entire population of the Nation.

Table I, which follows, shows the population of the Nation, exclusive of outlying possessions, and the number and population of the cities having over 30,000 inhabitants, as enumerated at each Federal census beginning with 1790 and ending with 1920. There are included, also, the number of cities of over 30,000 population at the middle of their fiscal years for which data for this report were secured, and the estimated population of such cities and of the Nation.

FINANCIAL STATISTICS OF CITIES HAVING A POPULATION OF OVER 30,000: 1926

INTRODUCTION

Scope of report.—The present report of the Bureau of the Census is practically limited to a presentation of statistics of the financial transactions during the fiscal year 1926 of the 250 cities, each of which had a population of over 30,000 as enumerated by the Federal census January 1, 1920, or by a subsequent special enumeration under the supervision of the Bureau of the Census, and of the financial condition of those cities at the close of the fiscal year reported. The report presents statistics as accurate and as comparable as it has been feasible to compile from the records of the cities and relates to a number of subjects, the principal of which are (1) the total and per capita receipts from revenues and from the principal classes thereof; (2) the total and per capita payments for expenses, or operation and maintenance, and interest, and total outlays, and totals for each of the principal classes of expenses and outlays; (3) the total value of municipal properties; (4) the total and per capita municipal indebtedness; and (5) the total assessed valuation of property subject to the general property tax, and total and per capita levies. The report for 1926 also presents, for the first time, financial data relating to the city and county of Honolulu, Hawaii.

Purpose of report.—The purpose of the reports of this series is to provide information in regard to the financial administration of the cities, in such form as to be comparable, with the hope that it may be of assistance to the officials who are charged with responsibilities incident to the administration of local government and the betterment of the local communities; directly, through personal study of the reports, and indirectly, through the interpretations and recommendations of practical students of civic affairs and of local civic bodies.

The cities of this class are responsible for the protection of the lives, property, and health of their own inhabitants, constituting over one-third of the population of the Nation, and of many millions of persons who visit them, as well as for providing educational and recreational services, caring for the indigent, defective, and delinquent classes, and arranging for a constantly growing number of conveniences and services which are demanded by associations interested in the betterment of the several urban communities.

Increase in the number and population of cities having over 30,000 inhabitants.—The growing importance of a report such as this is shown by one of the most striking features of our national development during the 13 decades that have passed since 1790, when the first Federal census was taken—the greater increase in the population of cities than in that of smaller places and of rural communities. In 1790 the United States had but one city with a population of over 30,000. That was New York, N. Y., which at that time had 33,131 inhabitants. The two cities which ranked next to New York in population were Philadelphia, Pa., with 28,522 inhabitants, and Boston, Mass., with 18,320 inhabitants. In 1790 the national population numbered 3,929,214, and the population of New York, the one city of this class, constituted only 0.8 per cent of that of the Nation. In 1926 the national population numbered 117,136,000 and the 250 cities of this class, with a total population of 41,840,033 contained 35.7 per cent of the entire population of the Nation.

FINANCIAL STATISTICS OF CITIES HAVING A POPULATION OF OVER 30,000: 1927

INTRODUCTION

Scope of report.—The present report of the Bureau of the Census is practically limited to a presentation of statistics of the financial transactions during the fiscal year 1927 of the 250 cities, each of which had a population of over 30,000 as determined by the Federal census January 1, 1920, or by a subsequent special enumeration under the supervision of the Bureau of the Census, and of the financial condition of those cities at the close of the fiscal year reported. The report also presents financial data relating to the city and county of Honolulu, Hawaii.

The statistics are as accurate and as comparable as it has been feasible to compile from the records of the cities and relates to a number of subjects, the principal of which are (1) the total and per capita receipts from revenues and from the principal classes thereof; (2) the total and per capita payments for expenses, or operation and maintenance, and interest, and total outlays, and totals for each of the principal classes of expenses and outlays; (3) the total value of municipal properties; (4) the total and per capita municipal indebtedness; and (5) the total assessed valuation of property subject to the general property tax, and total and per capita levies. The form of presentation has been approved by a census advisory committee chosen from the International Association of Comptrollers and Accounting Officers.

This report was prepared under the supervision of Starke M. Grogan, chief statistician for statistics of States and cities, and Lemuel A. Carruthers, expert chief of division. The text discussion was prepared by Miss Cora Higgins.

Purpose of report.—The purpose of the reports of this series is to provide information in regard to the financial administration of the cities, in such form as to be comparable, with the hope that it may be of assistance to the officials who are charged with responsibilities incident to the administration of local government and the betterment of the local communities; directly, through personal study of the reports, and indirectly, through the interpretations and recommendations of practical students of civic affairs and of local civic bodies.

The cities of this class are responsible for the protection of the lives, property, and health of their own inhabitants, constituting over one-third of the population of the Nation, and of many millions of persons who visit them, as well as for providing educational and recreational services, caring for the indigent, defective, and delinquent classes, and arranging for a constantly growing number of conveniences and services which are demanded by associations interested in the betterment of the several urban communities.

Increase in the number and population of cities having over 30,000 inhabitants.—The growing importance of a report such as this is shown by one of the most striking features of our national development during the 13 decades that have passed since 1790, when the first Federal census was taken—the greater increase in the population of cities than in that of smaller places and of rural communities. In 1790 the United States had but one city with a population of over 30,000. That was New York, N. Y., which at that time had 33,131 inhabitants. The two cities which ranked next to New York in population were

Philadelphia, Pa., with 28,522 inhabitants, and Boston, Mass., with 18,320 inhabitants. In 1790 the national population numbered 3,929,214, and the population of New York, the one city of this class, constituted only 0.8 per cent of that of the Nation. In 1927 the national population numbered 118,628,000 and the 250 cities of this class, with a total population of 42,716,411 contained 36 per cent of the entire population of the Nation.

Table I, which follows, shows the population of the Nation, exclusive of outlying possessions, and the number and population of the cities having over 30,000 inhabitants, as enumerated at each Federal census beginning with 1790 and ending with 1920. There are included, also, the number of cities of over 30,000 population at the middle of their fiscal years for which data for this report were secured, and the estimated population of such cities and of the Nation.

[1] Population shown for the years 1922, 1924, 1926, and 1927 is the estimate as of July 1 of those years; for each of the other years the population is that shown by the Federal census. For 1920 and subsequent years a revised estimate is shown.

[2] Population shown for the years 1922, 1924, 1926, and 1927 is that compiled from the estimates as of the medial dates of the fiscal years of the several cities; for each of the other years the population is that shown by the Federal census.

[3] Number of cities which had a population of over 30,000 by Federal enumeration as of Jan. 1, 1920, or by a subsequent special enumeration.

[4] Number of cities which had an estimated population of over 30,000 at the medial dates of the fiscal years of the several cities.

Cities having a population of over 30,000 in 1927.—In the tables of this report, with the exception of Table 23, the cities are arranged in the order of their estimated population, and each is given a number corresponding to its position in the table. For convenience in finding the position in the table of the data for each of the cities, there is shown on page 10 a list of the cities arranged alphabetically by States, with the number assigned to each. The location of each of these cities is shown on the map of the United States on page 6.

FINANCIAL STATISTICS OF CITIES HAVING A POPULATION OF OVER 30,000: 1928

INTRODUCTION

Scope of report.—The present report of the Bureau of the Census is practically limited to a presentation of statistics of the financial transactions during the fiscal year 1928 of the 250 cities, each of which had a population of over 30,000 as determined by the Federal census January 1, 1920, or by a subsequent special enumeration under the supervision of the Bureau of the Census, and of the financial condition of those cities at the close of the fiscal year reported. The report also presents financial data relating to the city and county of Honolulu, Hawaii.

The statistics are as accurate and as comparable as it has been feasible to compile from the records of the cities and relate to a number of subjects, the principal of which are (1) the total and per capita receipts from revenues and from the principal classes thereof; (2) the total and per capita payments for expenses, or operation and maintenance, and interest, and total outlays, and totals for each of the principal classes of expenses and outlays; (3) the total value of municipal properties; (4) the total and per capita municipal indebtedness; and (5) the total assessed valuation of property subject to the general property tax, and total and per capita levies. The form of presentation has been approved by a census advisory committee chosen from the International Association of Comptrollers and Accounting Officers.

This report was prepared under the supervision of Starke M. Grogan, chief statistician for statistics of States and cities, and Lemuel A. Carruthers, expert chief of division. The text discussion was prepared by Miss Cora Higgins.

Purpose of report.—The purpose of the reports of this series is to provide information in regard to the financial administration of the cities, in such form as to be comparable, with the hope that it may be of assistance to the officials who are charged with responsibilities incident to the administration of local government and the betterment of the local communities; directly, through personal study of the reports, and indirectly, through the interpretations and recommendations of practical students of civic affairs and of local civic bodies.

The cities of this class are responsible for the protection of the lives, property, and health of their own inhabitants, constituting over one-third of the population of the Nation, and of many millions of persons who visit them, as well as for providing educational and recreational services, caring for the indigent, defective, and delinquent classes, and arranging for a constantly growing number of conveniences and services which are demanded by associations interested in the betterment of the several urban communities.

Increase in the number and population of cities having over 30,000 inhabitants.—The growing importance of a report such as this is shown by one of the most striking features of our national development during the 14 decades that have passed since 1790, when the first Federal census was taken—the greater increase in the population of cities than in that of smaller places and of rural communities. population of New York, the one city of this class, constituted only 0.8 per cent of that of the Nation. In 1928 the national population numbered 119,861,600 and the 250 cities of this class, with a total population of 43,442,800, contained 36 per cent of the entire population of the Nation.

Table I, which follows, shows the population of the Nation, exclusive of outlying possessions, and the number and population of the cities having over 30,000 inhabitants, as enumerated at each Federal census beginning with 1790 and ending with 1920. There are included, also, the number of cities of over 30,000 population at the middle of their fiscal years for which data for this report were secured, and the estimated population of such cities and of the Nation.

FINANCIAL STATISTICS OF CITIES HAVING A POPULATION OF OVER 30,000: 1929

INTRODUCTION

Scope of report.—The present report of the Bureau of the Census is practically limited to a presentation of statistics of the financial transactions during the fiscal year 1929 of the 250 cities, each of which had a population of over 30,000 as determined by the Federal census January 1, 1920, or by a subsequent special enumeration under the supervision of the Bureau of the Census, and of the financial condition of those cities at the close of the fiscal year reported. The report also presents financial data relating to the city and county of Honolulu, Hawaii.

The statistics are as accurate and as comparable as it has been feasible to compile from the records of the cities and relate to a number of subjects, the principal of which are (1) the total and per capita receipts from revenues and from the principal classes thereof; (2) the total and per capita payments for expenses, or operation and maintenance, and interest, and total outlays, and totals for each of the principal classes of expenses and outlays; (3) the total value of municipal properties; (4) the total and per capita municipal indebtedness; and (5) the total assessed valuation of property subject to the general property tax, and total and per capita levies. The form of presentation has been approved by a census advisory committee chosen from the International Association of Comptrollers and Accounting Officers.

This report was prepared under the supervision of Starke M. Grogan, chief statistician for statistics of States and cities, and Lemuel A. Carruthers, expert chief of division. The text discussion was prepared by Miss Cora Higgins.

Purpose of report.—The purpose of the reports of this series is to provide information in regard to the financial administration of the cities, in such form as to be comparable, with the hope that it may be of assistance to the officials who are charged with responsibilities incident to the administration of local government and the betterment of the local communities; directly, through personal study of the reports, and indirectly, through the interpretations and recommendations of practical students of civic affairs and of local civic bodies.

The cities of this class are responsible for the protection of the lives, property, and health of their own inhabitants, constituting over one-third of the population of the Nation, and of many millions of persons who visit them, as well as for providing educational and recreational services, caring for the indigent, defective, and delinquent classes, and arranging for a constantly growing number of conveniences and services which are demanded by associations interested in the betterment of the several urban communities.

Increase in the number and population of cities having over 30,000 inhabitants.—The growing importance of a report such as this is shown by one of the most striking features of our national development during the 14 decades that have passed since 1790, when the first Federal census was taken—the greater increase in the population of cities than in that of smaller places and of rural communities. In 1790 the United States had but one city with a population of over 30,000. That was New York, N. Y., which at that time had 33,131 inhabitants. The two cities which ranked next to New York in population were

Philadelphia, Pa., with 28,522 inhabitants, and Boston, Mass., with 18,320 inhabitants. In 1790 the national population numbered 3,929,214, and the population of New York, the one city of this class, constituted only 0.8 per cent of that of the Nation. In 1929 the national population numbered 121,526,400 and the 250 cities of this class, with a total population of 44,318,900, contained 36.5 per cent of the entire population of the Nation.

Table I, which follows, shows the population of the Nation, exclusive of outlying possessions, and the number and population of the cities having over 30,000 inhabitants, as enumerated at each Federal census beginning with 1790 and ending with 1920. There are included, also, the number of cities of over 30,000 population at the middle of their fiscal years for which data for this report were secured, and the estimated population of such cities and of the Nation.

[1] Population shown for the years 1922, 1924, 1926, 1928, and 1929 is the estimate as of July 1 of those years; for each of the other years the population is that shown by the Federal census. For 1920 and subsequent years a revised estimate is shown.

[2] Population shown for the years 1922, 1924, 1926, 1928, and 1929 is that compiled from the estimates as of the medial dates of the fiscal years of the several cities; for each of the other years the population is that shown by the Federal census.

[3] Number of cities which had a population of over 30,000 by Federal enumeration as of Jan. 1, 1920, or by a subsequent special enumeration.

[4] Number of cities which had an estimated population of over 30,000 at the medial dates of the fiscal years of the several cities.

Cities having a population of over 30,000 in 1929.—In the tables of this report, with the exception of Table 23, the cities are arranged in the order of their estimated population, and each is given a number corresponding to its position in the table. For convenience in finding the position in the table of the data for each of the cities, there is shown on page 10 a list of the cities arranged alphabetically by States, with the number assigned to each. The location of each of these cities is shown on the map of the United States on page 6.
