BUDGET
OF THE
UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT

FISCAL YEAR 1970

FOREWORD

This is one of several documents which relate to the budget for 1970. The Budget of the United States Government, 1970, is a volume containing the Budget Message of the President, information on the Federal program by function, and summary tables and statistical information.

The Budget of the United States Government, 1970—Appendix contains the text of appropriation estimates proposed for the consideration of the Congress together with specific supporting information on the various appropriations and funds, and other supplementary material. The contents of this volume are further explained at the beginning of each of its three parts.

The Budget of the United States Government, 1970—The District of Columbia is a volume which relates specifically to the estimates for the municipal government of the District of Columbia.

In addition, a pamphlet type of publication, The Budget in Brief, 1970, is available for those who wish a more concise and less technical presentation than any of the foregoing three official volumes.

A second pamphlet type of publication, Special Analyses, Budget of the United States, 1970, contains 18 special analyses of significant aspects of the Federal budget.

NOTE.—Unless otherwise indicated, all references to years in this volume are to fiscal years ending June 30. Financial tables are nearly always stated in thousands of dollars; details may not add to the totals because of rounding.

EXPLANATION OF ESTIMATES

Part I contains various types of tables and schedules in support of the budget, explanatory statements of the work to be performed and the money needed, and the text of the language proposed for enactment by Congress on each item of authorization. It also contains the text of general provisions proposed for enactment by the Congress which often apply to entire agencies or groups of agencies.

ARRANGEMENT

The chapters of this part reflect the branches of Government, and the major departments and agencies of the executive branch. For the latter, smaller agencies are grouped in one chapter—"Other independent agencies."

Within each chapter there are three main sections. The first section covers programs authorized by existing legislation (including items for which extension or renewal of existing legislation is requested). This section is organized by major subordinate organizations within the agency (usually bureaus). For each bureau, Federal funds, covering the funds owned by the Government, precede trust funds, covering funds which are held in a fiduciary capacity by the Government.

The second major section of each chapter covers the legislative program which reflects the costs of proposed new legislation. This section is also organized by bureau, or other major subordinate organizations. The proposals are applicable to Federal funds unless otherwise indicated.

The third section of each chapter includes the general provisions of appropriation language which are applicable to the agency as a whole, and are in addition to the specific paragraphs of language pertaining to individual appropriation items.

An explanation of the types of funds included in the budget may be found in the compact volume—The Budget of the United States Government, 1970 (part 4).

FORM OF DETAILED MATERIAL

APPROPRIATION LANGUAGE

The language proposed for inclusion in the 1970 appropriation acts is printed at the head of each item requiring action by Congress, except for those items which are not formally recommended at this time but will be proposed for separate transmittal. The language of the 1969 appropriation acts, printed in roman type, is used as a base. Italic type indicates proposed new language. Brackets enclose material which it is proposed to omit, as in this example:

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For necessary expenses to carry into effect the provisions of the Commodity Exchange Act, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1-17a), [$1,530,000] $2,321,000.

[For an additional amount for "Salaries and expenses", $300,000.] (Department of Agriculture and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1969; Supplemental Appropriation Act, 1969.)

Following the language, and printed in italics within parentheses, are citations to relevant authorizing legislation and to the appropriation act from which the text is taken.

BASIS FOR SCHEDULES

The basic schedules for Federal and trust funds usually exclude supplemental estimates, which will be transmitted to Congress separately for 1969 and 1970; these are covered separately by brief schedules of program and financing, without appropriation language. However, in the 1969 column, the basic schedules include (and identify) supplementals required to meet costs of military and civilian pay increases effective during 1969 under legislation enacted in 1967, and those resulting from wage-board decisions.

The 1970 column includes, within the regular schedules, appropriations for recommended extension or renewal of expiring laws; however, money for new legislation is shown separately, under the legislative program. Appropriation language is included for the former, but not for the latter.

Where the required data are available in the accounting system, budgets are presented in terms of cost. Detailed operating cost figures for each activity or object are the value of goods and services consumed in carrying out the program. In the case of capital outlay programs, they are the value of assets acquired.

Total obligations are always shown; activities and objects are reflected on an obligation basis where cost data are not available. Obligations refer to orders placed, contracts awarded, loan agreements made, and recurring services (such as rent, utilities, and personal services) received during the year, regardless of the time of payment.

In a few cases, the detail and the totals of limitations are on the basis of accrued expenditures.

SCHEDULE OF PROGRAM AND FINANCING

This schedule consists of three parts. In the program by activities section, costs or obligations are classified by purpose, program, type of activity, or project for 1968, 1969, and 1970. This classification is individually developed for each appropriation or fund, and is not uniform on a Government-wide basis. Similarly, the identification of capital outlay is not handled uniformly. Where it is of significance, capital outlay is shown by activity. Otherwise, the total for each year is disclosed by footnote.

Where budgets are presented in terms of cost, the relation of costs to obligations is summarized in an entry "Change in selected resources." For appropriation accounts, and for revolving funds for which no business-type financial statements are presented, this entry is supported by a footnote identifying the amounts of the resources involved. For the remaining revolving funds, the items are identified on the statement of financial condition and the appended tabulation.

In certain cases, this schedule is expanded to include additional columns that provide a more informative presentation. This is done, for example, in some construction or procurement programs to show related cost data; for certain Defense items to identify the total obligations programmed; and for programs financed at a "preobligation" stage (such as "commitments" in some loan programs).

NARRATIVE STATEMENT OF PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The work planned and services proposed to be carried out are described briefly in a narrative statement for each appropriation or fund. Where practicable the narrative statement indicates the expected accomplishment in relation to the financial estimates, and gives some measure of program and performance.

SCHEDULE OF OBJECT CLASSIFICATION AND PERSONNEL SUMMARY

There is shown for each account a classification of obligations, costs, or accrued expenditures according to the following uniform list of object classifications:

10 PERSONAL SERVICES AND BENEFITS	30 ACQUISITION OF CAPITAL ASSETS
11 Personnel compensation	31 Equipment
12 Personnel benefits	32 Lands and structures
13 Benefits for former personnel	33 Investments and loans
20 CONTRACTUAL SERVICES AND SUPPLIES	40 GRANTS AND FIXED CHARGES
21 Travel and transportation of persons	41 Grants, subsidies, and contributions
22 Transportation of things	42 Insurance claims and indemnities
23 Rent, communications, and utilities	43 Interest and dividends
24 Printing and reproduction	44 Refunds
25 Other services
26 Supplies and materials

These object classes reflect the nature of the things or services purchased, regardless of the purpose of the program for which they are used. Data according to this classification are reflected in the following schedule:

Object Classification (in thousands of dollars)
Identification code 05-40-1900-0-1-355	1968 actual	1969 est.	1970 est.
Personnel compensation:
11.1 Permanent positions	1,242	1,550	1,884
11.3 Positions other than permanent	3
11.5 Other personnel compensation	1	1	1
Total personnel compensation	1,246	1,551	1,885
12.1 Personnel benefits: Civilian employees	98	120	143
21.0 Travel and transportation of persons	25	37	57
22.0 Transportation of things	3	3	4
23.0 Rent, communications, and utilities	50	67	86
24.0 Printing and reproduction	21	36	46
25.0 Other services	19	47	73
26.0 Supplies and materials	10	13	17
31.0 Equipment	27	7	10
99.0 Total obligations	1,498	1,881	2,321

Several of the object classes are broken down into subclasses—personnel compensation, for example, is shown separately for permanent positions, for positions other than permanent, and for certain other payments. A third digit is therefore used in the object schedules to identify the subclasses; a zero is used for the third digit when there are no subclasses. Additional entries are shown for unvouchered obligations—those for which accountability is waived (coded 91.0); for amounts which cannot be distributed by object class (coded 92.0); and for certain other adjusting entries that are needed to reach a total which agrees with the total obligations shown in the program and financing schedule.

A personnel summary is appended to the object classification schedule, as illustrated:

Personnel Summary
Total number of permanent positions	153	164	197
Average number of all employees	136	155	190
Average GS grade	7.8	7.6	7.6
Average GS salary	$9,125	$9,547	$9,333

Permanent positions are those of a full-time nature and indefinite duration. Some are filled by persons with temporary appointments. Other positions include those of a temporary nature (a year or less), part-time jobs (less than a full workweek), and intermittent employment (occasional employees).

Average grades and salaries are computed arithmetically. Thus the average salary sometimes falls outside the salary range of the average grade.

STATEMENT OF REVENUE, EXPENSE, AND RETAINED EARNINGS

For many revolving funds there is a statement of revenue and expense that shows the resulting net income or loss for the year. This statement is usually on a full accrual basis, including provision for depreciation, for losses on receivables, etc. Where a fund consists of several programs, or revenue is derived from nonoperating sources, revenue and expense are identified for each, as follows:

Revenue, Expense, and Retained Earnings (in thousands of dollars)
	1968 actual	1969 est.	1970 est.

Analysis of retained earnings:
Retained earnings, start of year.....	538	545	545
Adjustments and writeoffs, prior years.....
Retained earnings, end of year.....	545	545	545

The statement includes an analysis of the retained earnings or the cumulative deficit. This analysis shows any additions to earnings, other than net income for the year, any adjustments of retained earnings, and the balance of profits kept in the enterprise as of the end of the year (whether as cash, inventories, or other assets).

STATEMENT OF FINANCIAL CONDITION

For each fund showing a revenue and expense statement, there is also presented a balance sheet of assets, liabilities, and equity of the Government at the close of the year.

The balance sheet excludes balances of appropriations and borrowing authorizations which have not yet been paid into the revolving fund. The section on equity of the Government is divided into three subsections as appropriate: (a) interest-bearing capital, (b) non-interest-bearing capital, and (c) retained earnings.

Total Government equity..	918	925	925	925

Because the balance sheet is on an accrual basis, it does not reflect the obligations incurred which have not yet matured into liabilities, nor does it reflect unfilled customer orders received and available as a basis for obligation in the case of intragovernmental revolving funds. Therefore, there is normally appended to the balance sheet an "Analysis of Government Equity" which shows obligations other than liabilities, the unobligated balance, unfilled customers' orders on hand from other Government accounts (where relevant), and invested capital and earnings.

BUDGETS NOT SUBJECT TO REVIEW

The presentations herein for the Legislative Branch, the Judiciary, the Comptroller of the Currency and the Exchange Stabilization Fund in the Treasury Department, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and the Milk Market Orders Assessment Fund of the Department of Agriculture have been included, without review, in the amounts submitted by the agencies.

DIFFERENCES BETWEEN BUDGET TABLES AND APPENDIX TABLES

EXPENDITURES AND LOANS

In accordance with recent recommendations of the President's Commission on Budget Concepts, the compact budget volume this year separates out from expenditures the amount of net lending for most loan programs. Similarly, it segregates loan authority from general new obligational authority. While the individual schedules in Part I of the Appendix do not make this breakdown, the details on net lending are set forth in a separate table in Part III.

INTERFUND AND INTRAGOVERNMENTAL TRANSACTIONS

The consolidation of Government-administered funds in the compact budget volume requires the deduction of interfund and intragovernmental transactions from the combined aggregates, to avoid duplication in the totals. Schedules in the Appendix show the various funds and accounts separately, and therefore do not make such deductions.

PROPRIETARY RECEIPTS FROM THE PUBLIC

The compact budget volume offsets against expenditures for each agency and function the receipts from the public which are market-oriented or are mainly payments for goods and services, regardless of the fund structure. The Appendix continues the conventional practice of offsetting only those receipts that are earmarked by law for use in revolving funds, or as reimbursements to appropriations or other funds.

1. Acquisition of library materials.—The Library's collections are developed in accordance with established acquisition policies: materials are procured by purchase, gift, exchange, copyright deposit, transfer, and official deposit; and materials are selected for addition to the permanent collections. The objective for 1970 is continued improvement in acquisitions procedures. The collections totaled 58,463,358 items as of June 30, 1968, and consisted of 14,479,171 books and pamphlets; 29,145,621 manuscript pieces and 14,838,566 maps, pieces of music, reels of microfilm, photographs and other miscellaneous items. Of the items received, about 1 million are added to the permanent collections annually. Those received from various sources in 1968 and estimated for 1969 and 1970 are as follows:

2. Organization of the collections.—Library materials are cataloged, classified, marked, and arranged; Library of Congress catalogs are maintained; special collections are organized for use; and binding operations are controlled. The objectives for this activity in 1970 are the continued maintenance on a current basis of the Library's record of serial publications, the maintaining of currency in the filing of cards into the Library card catalogs, the reduction of cataloging arrearages, the improvement of cataloging methods and procedures to assure the usefulness of the collections. The continued microfilming of deteriorating materials as a necessary preservative and space-saving measure, and the conversion of the nitrate portion of the Archival Collection of Motion Pictures to safety base film.

Selected performance data for 1968 and estimated for 1969 and 1970 (not including processing activities performed by the Reference Department and the Law Library) are as follows:

3. Reader and reference services.—Books and other library materials are provided inside and outside of the Library, reference and bibliographic assistance is rendered, and custody of the collections is maintained. The objective of this activity for 1970 is to organize more material for use and to improve reference and circulation services. The workload in all major activities is expected to increase in 1969 and 1970 as follows:

The guard force staff of 79 is necessary to prevent fire and theft, to maintain order, and to provide regular inspections of all areas in both buildings in which is assembled one of the greatest accumulations of national treasures in the world.

The Copyright Office is responsible for recording copyright claims, assignments, and renewals, for supplying copyright information to the public, for collecting and accounting for copyright fees, and for printing complete and indexed catalogs for each class of copyright entries. The Office is conducted for the most part on a self-sustaining basis. The amount requested is substantially counterbalanced by fees received for services rendered and the value of books and other library materials deposited in accordance with the Copyright Act and transferred to the Library of Congress. The income and costs for 1968 and estimates for 1969 and 1970 are as follows:

1. Receiving and accounting for applications, etc.—Materials received by the Copyright Office are assembled and routed; accounts are maintained for all moneys received; records relating to the registration of copyrights are filed; and materials are deposited in accordance with the Copyright Act. Performance data for 1968 and estimated for 1969 and 1970 are as follows:

3. Indexing and cataloging materials received.—The Register of Copyrights is required to print complete and indexed catalogs of all items registered. The catalog entries prepared by the Copyright Office are made available in part to the Library for its general operations. There were 303,451 registrations cataloged in 1968 and estimates for 1969 and 1970 are 312,600 and 322,000, respectively.

4. Reference services.—The Copyright Office makes available to the public information concerning the provisions of the Copyright Act, including procedures, policies, and rulings; information concerning registrations is furnished on a fee basis. Obtaining compliance with registration requirements is also part of this activity. Performance data are as follows:

Titles searched.....	159,259	160,900	166,000
Letters and search reports written.....	26,167	27,000	28,000

5. Printing the catalog of copyright entries and bulletins of decisions.—Catalogs for each class of copyright entries and bulletins of copyright decisions are printed and made available to the public.

6. General supervision and legal services.—The work of the Copyright Office includes legal supervision and research into the present copyright law and international copyright relations. It also involves a study of improvement of the domestic law and our international copyright relations.

1. Research and analysis.—The Legislative Reference Service assists Members and committees of Congress by preparing research reports, digests, translations, charts, and consultative services, and by supplying reference information and materials. The bulk of these services are furnished through seven subject-matter divisions and a reference division: American law, economics, education and public welfare, foreign affairs, government and general research, natural resources, science policy research and the congressional reference division. Under specific authorization of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946, senior specialists are also available for high-level research and consultative services in the following fields: International economics, international relations, American government and public administration, conservation, American public law, labor, engineering and public works, agriculture, price economics, national defense, social welfare, taxation and fiscal policy, and science and technology. In 1968, 131,558 congressional inquiries were answered. The number of inquiries in 1969 is estimated at 135,000, and in 1970, 140,000.

2. Preparation of indexes and digests.—The Digest of Public General Bills covers all public bills and resolutions. It is expected that the number of bills to be digested during the first session of the 91st Congress will be somewhat higher than the number digested for the first session of the 90th Congress.

3. Reference files, bibliographic and congressional reader services.—Reference files, containing clippings, pamphlets and documents, are maintained as the basis for reply to a high percentage of inquiries; researchers are supplied with bibliographic and reference tools; selective and comprehensive bibliographies are prepared for Members and committees of Congress; and reader services are provided by the Congressional Reading Room. During 1968, 133,794 reference file items were processed, 34,363 bibliographic citations prepared, 454,167 published items acquired and processed, and 5,302 readers served.

The Card Division sells copies of the Library's printed catalog cards and publications. It maintains a stock of over 218 million catalog cards representing approximately 4,500,000 titles, and fills orders from approximately 25,000 regular subscribers—mostly libraries—in the United States and abroad. In 1968, 113% of this appropriation was recovered in the form of receipts from card and publications sales. Receipts of $7,026,602 were deposited in miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury in 1968. The objectives for 1970 are: Meeting the increased demand for catalog cards and maintaining a reasonable level of service and economy; the continued development of the "National Union Catalog" as the country's major bibliographic and locational tool; the development of other technical publications; and the use of new technology to increase efficiency and reduce costs.

1. Supplying cards for the Library of Congress.—The number of cards supplied to the Library of Congress in 1968 was 31,166,014; estimated for 1969, 36 million; and estimated for 1970, 40 million.

2. Supplying cards for other libraries.—The number of cards sold in 1968 was 78,767,377; estimated for 1969, 82 million; and for 1970, 90 million.

3. Preparation, printing, and distribution of publications related to cataloging.—These publications are an integral part of the cataloging activities of the Library of Congress and include the "Classification Schedules," lists of "Subject Headings," "Cataloging Service Bulletins," and similar publications.

4. Preparation, printing, and distribution of the "National Union Catalog."—This catalog (a cumulative author list) is issued monthly and cumulated quarterly and annually. Subscribers also receive issues of "Motion Pictures and Filmstrips" (quarterlies with annual cumulation), "Music and Phonorecords" (issued on a 6-month basis and annual cumulation), as well as the "Register of Additional Locations," and the "National Register of Microform Masters." There were 2,000 paid subscriptions for all issues in calendar year 1967 and it is estimated that there will be 2,200 subscriptions for 1968 and 2,300 for 1969.

5. Preparation, printing, and distribution of the "Subject Catalog."—This catalog is issued in 3 quarterly volumes with an annual cumulation. There were 860 paid subscriptions for calendar year 1967. It is estimated that there will be 900 paid subscriptions in 1968 and about 1,000 in 1969.

The publications acquired by purchase constitute a very important part of the Library's acquisitions although they represent only a small portion of the material received annually. The objectives for 1970 are: to continue the program for procurement of important research materials to strengthen the Library's collections; to continue the acquisition of selected important foreign newspapers and periodicals; to continue the program for procurement of important materials from critical areas, particularly from Eastern Europe, Africa, Asia, and Latin America; to continue to strengthen the Library's acquisitions in the fields of science and technology; to continue the purchase of selected current titles on microfilm as an economy measure in lieu of binding; to acquire a few important special collections long needed by the Library to fill gaps in the collections; and to preserve important materials now on nitrate negative stills by converting them to a safety base film.

This appropriation constitutes the only means of acquiring law books published in the regular domestic trade (except for copyright deposits) and many foreign law books published in countries all over the world. The legal publications acquired by purchase constitute a most important part of the Law Library's acquisitions, although a substantial part of the annual receipts is received by means other than purchase. The special objectives for 1970 are: to continue the procurement of current foreign legal materials by placing purchase orders for certain necessary publications now received only irregularly through exchange or gift; to improve the procurement of important Hispanic, African, and Far Eastern materials; to continue the procurement of both current and non-current materials needed to strengthen the Law Library's already comprehensive coverage of critical areas in Eastern Europe, Asia, and Africa; and to continue the acquisition of photoduplicates of important research items, especially those from critical areas, which are no longer obtainable in the original.

The Division for the Blind and Physically Handicapped is responsible for administering a national program to provide reading material for the blind and physically handicapped (Public Law 89-522) of the United States, and its outlying areas. It has two closely related operations.

1. Procurement and distribution.—It provides books in embossed characters, and talking books with their associated reproducers. The books are distributed through 41 regional libraries which assume responsibility for their custody and circulation. The reproducers are distributed through 55 State agencies and libraries. The maintenance and procurement of these books are shown in the following table:

Objectives for 1970 are: (1) a moderate increase in procurement of braille titles and magazines, (2) procurement of more titles and copies of talking books including magazines, and (3) procurement of a sufficient number of machines to equip newly registered blind and physically handicapped readers and to replace some of the obsolete machines.

2. Cataloging, reference, circulating, and training services.—Printed catalogs of recorded and braille books are provided. For the convenience of readers these catalogs may also be in braille, recorded, or large type format. The Division maintains the national collections of braille and recorded books to supplement titles deposited in libraries across the country. During the past 5-year period, 1964-68, the number of readers throughout the country requiring catalogs from which to select reading matter has grown from about 94,000 to over 140,000 and circulation from approximately 3,466,000 units (volumes, containers, and reels) to over 5,265,000. As a result of the expanded program, the number of readers and circulation are expected to continue to increase in 1969 and 1970. Inquiries are received concerning library and related services available to the blind and to other physically handicapped persons. Individuals throughout the Nation who are interested in transcribing or proofreading braille are trained and those qualified are certified. During 1968, 756 individuals were certified, and it is anticipated that this level will continue during 1969 and 1970. In addition tape books are recorded by volunteers throughout the country.

Public Law 85-147 (71 Stat. 368), approved August 16, 1957, authorizes an appropriation of $720 thousand to remain available until expended, to arrange, index, and microfilm the Papers of the Presidents of the United States in the collections of the Library of Congress. This law was amended by Public Law 88-299 (78 Stat. 183), approved April 27, 1964, which removes the $720 thousand limitation and authorizes to be appropriated such amounts as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of Public Law 85-147. The purpose of the program is to preserve the contents of the Papers of the Presidents and to make them more readily available for research. It was started in 1959. The objectives for 1970 will be to provide negative and positive service copy on microfilm of material arranged and indexed, and to continue publishing indexes in editions of 1,000 copies each.

Under authority originally granted in section 104(n) of Public Law 85-931 (now section 104(b)(5) of the Food for Peace Act of 1966) the Librarian of Congress may use foreign currencies accruing under this act to provide information of technical, scientific, cultural, or educational significance to the United States through the collection of foreign library materials and the distribution of copies thereof to libraries and research centers in the United States. The program is being continued on a full-year's basis in seven countries in 1969: Ceylon, India, Israel, Nepal, Pakistan, the United Arab Republic, and Yugoslavia. If circumstances permit, a program will be initiated in Poland. The initiation of similar programs in Tunisia and Morocco is proposed for 1970. Of the total amount requested, $1,907 thousand will be used to purchase foreign currencies, while $213 thousand will provide U.S. dollar support.

1. Acquisition of books and other library materials.—Based upon the information received during the exploratory stage concerning materials available in the two additional countries and the requirements of other Federal agencies and certain research libraries in the United States, publications and other library materials will be purchased in multiple copies from 10 countries and distributed to selected libraries and research centers in the United States including the Library of Congress.

2. Program support (U.S. dollars).—U.S. dollars are required to pay certain expenses which cannot be paid by foreign currencies, such as salaries and personnel benefits of U.S. personnel abroad, salaries of the coordinating staff at the Library of Congress, travel in some instances, and equipment and supplies which cannot be procured abroad.

ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

Appropriations in this Act available to the Library of Congress for salaries shall be available for expenses of investigating the loyalty of Library employees; special and temporary services (including employees engaged by the day or hour or in piecework); and services as authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109.

Not to exceed ten positions in the Library of Congress may be exempt from the provisions of appropriation Acts concerning the employment of aliens during the current fiscal year, but the Librarian shall not make any appointment to any such position until he has ascertained that he cannot secure for such appointments a person in any of the categories specified in such provisions who possesses the special qualifications for the particular position and also otherwise meets the general requirements for employment in the Library of Congress.

Funds available to the Library of Congress may be expended to reimburse the Department of State for medical services rendered to employees of the Library of Congress stationed abroad; for purchase or hire of passenger motor vehicles; and for payment of travel, storage and transportation of household goods, and transportation and per diem expenses for families en route (not to exceed twenty-four), subject to such rules and regulations as may be issued by the Librarian of Congress.

Payments in advance for subscriptions or other charges for bibliographical data, publications, materials in any other form, and services may be made by the Librarian of Congress whenever he determines it to be more prompt, efficient, or economical to do so in the interest of carrying out required Library programs. This schedule covers (1) funds received as gifts for immediate expenditure and receipts from the sale of recordings and photoduplication materials financed from capital originally received as gifts, (2) income from investments held by the Library of Congress Trust Fund Board, and (3) interest at the rate of 4% per annum paid by the Treasury on the principal funds deposited therewith as described under "Library of Congress trust fund, principal accounts." (2 U.S.C. 156-160; 31 U.S.C. 725s; 37 Stat. 319.)

1. Acquisition of library materials.—During 1968, this included the procurement of manuscripts, Hispanic materials, fine prints, books and other library materials from certain foreign areas for the Library of Congress, and the acquisition and distribution of Government documents for the Library of Congress and cooperating libraries.

2. Reader and reference services.—These services during 1968 included the preparation of bibliographies, indexes, digests, and checklists; lectures; surveys of bibliographic services; poetry readings; musical concerts; furtherance of musical research, composition, performance and appreciation; and providing photostats, photographs, microfilm, and other forms of photoduplication, and sound recordings of folksongs and poetry to other Government agencies, libraries, and other institutions, and to the general public.

3. Organization and control of the collections.—In February 1967, the Library of Congress began the largest single bibliographical project in its 167-year history, the publication of the pre-1956 "National Union Catalog." It is expected that the project will be completed in 10 years, and that the published catalog will comprise 610 volumes. By the fall of 1968 work was almost completed on the publication of the 1963-67 quinquennial cumulation of the "National Union Catalog." The preparation of the 18th full edition and the 10th abridged edition of the "Dewey Decimal Classification," begun during 1966, was continued in 1968. Editorial work on the 1967 issue of the "National Union Catalog of Manuscript Collections," scheduled for publication in late 1968, was substantially completed during 1968. The preparation of the index and subject headings for "Dissertation Abstracts" was continued, and the second cumulation of the "National Register of Microform Masters," was published in November 1967.

This schedule covers two principal accounts—permanent loan and bequest of Gertrude M. Hubbard.

Both funds represent gifts or bequests in cash, which have been deposited with the Treasurer of the United States as permanent loans to the United States, the interest upon which, at 4% per annum, payable semi-annually, is available to the Librarian for the purposes specified in each case.

As of June 30, 1968, the principal in the permanent loan account, which shall not exceed the sum of $10 million (2 U.S.C. 158; 31 U.S.C. 725s, Public Law 87-522), was distributed as follows:

Music activities.....	$2,708,605
Fine arts.....	396,558
American history.....	307,040
Hispanic activities.....	211,315
Poetry and literature.....	1,007,240
Miscellaneous purposes.....	616,034
Total principal.....	5,246,792

The additional principal sum of $20 thousand, representing the bequest of Gertrude M. Hubbard, is for the purchase of engravings and etchings (37 Stat. 319).

The use of the income from these accounts is described under Library of Congress gift and trust fund income accounts.

The work programs of the Office of the Superintendent of Documents are of a service nature, and hence there is no control over the volume of work which is required by law.

1. Sales distribution.—Government publications are purchased from the Public Printer to be placed on sale. Acquisition costs are paid from sales receipts; hence no appropriation is required for printing sales copies. By law, the sales price is set at cost of manufacture plus 50%. At the end of each year, excess receipts from sales not required for purchasing additional publications are turned in to the Treasury Department as miscellaneous receipts. For 1968, earnings from the sale of publications amounted to $6,628 thousand. It is estimated that earnings for 1969 will be $8,300 thousand and $9,200 thousand for 1970. These earnings more than cover the appropriation required to finance the sales program.

The sale of Government publications has been steadily increasing, and in the last 10 years the sales volume has more than doubled. The current public interest in the Government's publishing program points to a continuing increase in the volume of sales.

2. Distribution for other agencies and Members of Congress.—The Superintendent of Documents maintains mailing lists, including the list for the Congressional Record, and performs mailing operations upon request of any Government agency. Mailing services for Farmers' Bulletins, Soil Surveys, and other publications which are allocated to Members of Congress on a quota basis are also provided.

3. Depository library distribution.—Upon request, one copy of every Government publication is supplied to libraries which are designated depositories for Government publications.

4. Cataloging and indexing.—This activity covers the preparation and distribution of catalogs and indexes of all publications issued by the Federal Government, the principal series being the Monthly Catalog of U.S. Government Publications and the Numerical List and Schedule of Volumes.

The U.S. Customs Court has exclusive jurisdiction over civil actions arising under the tariff laws, the internal revenue laws relating to imported merchandise, the several customs simplification acts, the proclamations of the President issued under reciprocal trade agreements, and other proclamations imposing taxes or quotas on imported goods. The court also has appellate jurisdiction of cases litigating the value of imported merchandise. It tries cases without a jury, making findings of fact and applying the law.

The U.S. Court of Claims has jurisdiction over all cases involving claims against the United States (except in pension suits) instituted upon constitutional grounds or under Federal law or regulations, all claims arising out of any contract with the Federal Government and its agencies, and claims for the refund of taxes. It also has general jurisdiction to hear and determine claims for damages other than tort actions, provided the claimants would have the right to sue in law or equity if the United States were not immune to such suits. It has jurisdiction in suits against the United States by contractors dissatisfied with the findings and decisions of contracting agencies under terminated war contracts and jurisdiction concurrent with that of the courts of appeals to review district court decisions in cases involving tort actions. It has exclusive jurisdiction to review the decisions of the Indian Claims Commission on appeal from the Commission. It also has jurisdiction in special act cases referred to the court by the Congress, and the commissioners of the court have jurisdiction to render reports to the Congress on claims set forth in bills referred to the chief commissioner by either house of Congress.

Provisions have been made for the nine additional circuit judgeships created by the act of June 18, 1968, and for an anticipated increase in the number of senior judges.

The primary and appellate jurisdictions of the courts of the United States are vested in the 93 district courts and 11 courts of appeals. Provision for the salaries of the administrative and legal aides required to assist the judges in the conduct of hearings, trials, and other judicial functions and to man the component offices of the courts, including the Federal Probation System, is under this heading.

The estimate for 1970 provides for the employment of 36 additional deputy clerks and 33 stenographers for the courts of appeals. Provision has been made for 205 deputy clerks for the district courts; 166 required for administration of the new random jury selection process and 39 to cope with a general increase in workload. The estimate also contemplates adjustments in the grades and salaries of law clerks and crier-law clerks, based on new classification standards approved by the Judicial Conference of the United States.

This appropriation provides for the statutory fees and allowances of jurors, fees of jury commissioners, and the fees and related benefits of U.S. commissioners who serve primarily as committing magistrates.

The earnings of commissioners are directly related to the volume of cases presented by law enforcement officials. The amount of service and the compensation of jurors depends largely on the number of jury trials requested by the parties to civil and criminal cases in the U.S. courts. The estimate for 1970 takes into account the full-year cost of statutory increases in the fees of jury commissioners and fees and allowances of jurors, effective December 23, 1968, pursuant to the Jury Selection and Service Act of 1968, Public Law 90-274, approved March 27, 1968.

The district courts of the United States are constituted courts of bankruptcy, vested with original jurisdiction at law and in equity in proceedings brought under the bankruptcy statutes. This jurisdiction primarily is exercised through referees appointed by the several district courts. Their compensation and benefits are paid from this appropriation, which is derived from a special fund in the Treasury to which are deposited payments of fees and charges by parties to the proceedings.

The increase requested for 1970 will provide for three additional full-time referees, an additional part-time referee, and the conversion of two referees from a part-time to a full-time status. The new positions and changes in arrangements have been authorized by the Judicial Conference of the United States.

The Office of Emergency Preparedness serves as a staff office to advise and assist the President with respect to the nonmilitary defense programs of the United States. This includes the coordination of emergency preparedness activities of Federal agencies, the development of emergency preparedness programs not covered by the responsibilities of the regular departments and agencies, and the performance of other duties in the areas of stockpiling, Federal disaster relief, Federal-State relations and imports affecting the national security.

1. Resource evaluation and readiness.—Maintain a complete capability for evaluating, predicting, and monitoring the status of the Nation's resources and economy under all degrees of emergency, which includes identifying resource deficiencies, feasible production programs, strategic materials, stockpile, and import policies. Provide resource evaluations at national and subordinate levels to support mobilization planning, continuity of Government, resource management, and economic recovery. Determine the impact of various current or proposed domestic and national security programs of the United States and major allies on the mobilization base. Provide economic and statistical analytical support to these programs.

2. Government readiness.—Plans and programs are developed to reduce the vulnerability of all levels of government to enemy attack and control in an emergency. These include achieving a standby capability for emergency operations on the part of existing Government agencies; relocating essential governmental functions in an emergency; maintaining the capability to administer a program of direct controls for economic stabilization; administering OEP program activities stemming from U.S. membership in international organizations concerned with civil emergency planning, guiding the development of emergency communication systems, and the recruitment and training of qualified executive reservists who would be called to duty in an emergency.

3. Federal-State relations.—Eight regional offices and a small national office staff of the Office of Emergency Preparedness work with the State and local governments on emergency preparedness planning. They also coordinate Federal disaster relief and assistance, assist the Federal offices in the field to develop a capability to perform their functions in an emergency, and maintain a liaison with Governors of the States on matters of mutual Federal-State concern. In addition to liaison at all levels of government, this activity maintains contact with national, business, labor, veterans', and farm organizations.

4. Executive direction, programming, staff, and administrative support.—Total staff support is provided to the Director of the Office of Emergency Preparedness and other OEP offices under this activity. Services include general administration, public information, health adviser, legal assistance, and program planning. Funds are also included to finance the housekeeping expenses of the Office of Emergency Preparedness, in Washington, and the salaries of the presidential appointees and their immediate staffs. The Director is a principal adviser to the President on nonmilitary defense. He serves as a member of the National Security Council and participates in meetings of the Cabinet by invitation of the President. He also assists the President in overall relationships with the Governors and key State officials.

Executive Order 11365, establishing a National Advisory Commission on Civil Disorders, authorized each department or agency, to the extent permitted by law and within the limits of available funds, to furnish information and assistance to the Commission. Those departments and agencies which were closely concerned with the areas of the Commission's activities, and which were most likely to benefit from the Commission's findings, formed an Interagency Committee on Civil Disorders to support the work of the Commission through investigations and studies into civil disorders.

The work of the Committee was financed from contributions from the Departments of Justice, Commerce, Labor, Health, Education, and Welfare, and Housing and Urban Development, and from the Office of Economic Opportunity. In addition, the Department of Defense provided support for contractual studies undertaken for the Commission pursuant to the Executive order.

The Committee's work ceased early in 1969 upon final publication of supplementary studies underlying the Commission's report of March 1968.

The expenses of the Commission itself were funded from an allocation from the Emergency Fund for the President, as shown on page 66 of this document.

The Appalachian regional development program assists the Appalachian region to meet its special problems, promote its economic development, and to establish a framework of joint Federal and State efforts to provide the basic facilities essential to economic growth in Appalachia.

Program investments made in the Appalachian region are concentrated in areas where there is significant potential for future growth and where the expected return on public dollars invested will be the greatest.

The States, acting through the Appalachian Regional Commission, are responsible for recommending local and State projects within their borders for assistance under this program.

Legislative authority for appropriations for the 1970-71 fiscal years will be requested for other than highway programs.

1. Appalachian Development Highway system.—Section 201 of the Appalachian Regional Development Act amendments of 1967 authorizes construction of an Appalachian Development Highway system including local access roads. This system is designed to improve the accessibility of Appalachia; to reduce highway transportation costs to and within Appalachia; to provide the highway transportation facilities necessary to accelerate the overall development of Appalachia. In addition, access roads to specific development facilities are authorized. Funds in the amount of $545 million are currently authorized to be appropriated after 1969. An advance appropriation of $175,000,000, within existing authorization, is proposed for 1971. The status of the system of roads is as follows:

Development system miles (cumulative):
Approved for construction.....	1,326	1,350	1,400

2. Demonstration health projects.—Grants are made for the construction, equipping, and operation of multicounty demonstration health facilities, including hospitals, regional health diagnostic or treatment centers, and other facilities. Under the 1967 amendments to the act, emphasis will be given to operational assistance for health activities in selected demonstration areas within the Appalachian region. Projects approved by fiscal year include:

Operation.....	58	71	90
Construction.....	23	28	32

3. Land stabilization, conservation, and erosion control.—Section 203 of the act authorizes contracts of up to 10 years for assistance for landowners, operators, or occupiers of land in the Appalachian region. Such contracts provide for land stabilization, erosion and sediment control, and reclamation through changes in land use, and the establishment of measures for the conservation and development of the region's soil, water woodland, wildlife, and recreation resources. The Federal share may not exceed 80% of the total cost on not more than 50 acres of land for any person. The program is administered through the Department of Agriculture, with the following fiscal year workload:

4. Mine area restoration.—Section 205 of the act authorizes a program for the sealing and filling of voids in abandoned coal mines, the planning and execution of projects for the extinguishment and control of underground and outcrop mine fires, and the reclamation and rehabilitation of strip and surface mine areas, including waste banks, on public land in those areas where the greatest potential for economic growth exists in Appalachia. States or local sponsors must bear 25% of projects costs. Projects under contract on a cumulative basis are:

Mine subsidence.....	6	7	7
Surface restoration and well sealing.....	1	10	35

5. Appalachian housing fund.—This program authorizes the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development to make loans and in certain circumstances, grants for up to 80% of the preliminary cost of planning a project and obtaining an insured mortgage under section 221 of the National Housing Act, including such costs as preliminary site engineering and architectural fees, site options, FHA and FNMA fees, and construction loan fees and discounts. Funds are transferred to the Appalachian housing fund, a revolving fund.

6. Vocational education facilities.—Grants are made to States and school districts within the Appalachian region for the construction and equipment of vocational education facilities in Appalachia. Vocational education facilities are key elements for the training and upgrading of potential and existing labor force entrants in skills required in commercial and other vocations. Grants are administered through the Office of Education.

7. Supplements to Federal grant-in-aid programs.—This program provides supplemental grants to enable areas to take advantage of other Federal programs. Direct grants, plus supplemental grants, cannot exceed 80% of the project cost. The amount of supplemental grant depends upon the relative need of the area and nature of the project. The estimates provide for approved projects as follows: 1968—321 projects; 1969—257 projects; 1970—222 projects. Supplemental assistance has been provided from inception through 1968 to the following types of projects:

8. Research and local development district program.—Appalachian planning assistance is provided through grants to multi-county local development districts and for research and demonstration projects. Grants are made for up to 75% of the administrative expenses of local development districts. Other planning and technical assistance is provided for (a) programs which improve the base for economic growth; (b) programs which will attract industrial development within the region; (c) programs which improve the health, education, and skills of people; and (d) projects which conserve, maintain, or improve natural resources.

Under the Defense Production Act of 1950, as amended, designated agencies are authorized with Presidential approval to incur obligations and make expenditures to expand production of critical materials for programs certified as essential to the national defense by the Office of Emergency Preparedness. The program is conducted primarily through a revolving fund financed by borrowing from the Treasury. The amount borrowed may not exceed $2.1 billion outstanding at any one time.

Allocations of borrowing authority by the Office of Emergency Preparedness and net borrowing from the U.S. Treasury as of June 30, 1968, were as follows (in thousands of dollars):

	Authorized agency	Borrowing authority allocated	Borrowings outstanding	Net available for borrowing

	Office of Emergency Preparedness (reserve)	5,610	-----	5,610

<sup>1</sup> In addition, an appropriation of $108 million was applied to General Services Administration activities, thus providing financing of $2,067 million to that agency materials and new techniques for utilizing low-grade domestic ores. Only one new contract has been entered into under the expansion program in recent years, and no other contracts remain outstanding at this time. The major problems now are custody, maintenance, and disposition of the materials and facilities.

On March 29, 1966, the President made a finding that new expansions of copper production are essential to the national security. On November 28, 1967, the General Services Administration entered into a domestic copper production expansion contract providing for delivery of approximately 109,000 tons of wirebar copper through the period ending June 30, 1975. The contract will result in an increase in U.S. production capacity of approximately 65,000 tons a year during a period of 20 years. The Office of Emergency Preparedness announced in January 1967 an expansion goal of 70,000 additional short tons per year for domestic production of rutile. No detailed proposals have been received under this program to date.

As one of the inducements for expanding production, most of the contracts provided a guaranteed market for the production from expanded facilities. The option rights of contractors were examined with a view to reducing deliveries to the Government as far as possible within the terms of the contracts whenever basic stockpiling objectives have been attained. Between July 1, 1957, and June 30, 1968, a reduction of $449.1 million in gross commitments was attained through renegotiation of contracts. However, significant amounts of materials have been delivered to the Defense Production Act inventory under these contracts. Progress has been made in disposing of these materials primarily by sales to other Government agencies and industry and steps are being taken to increase and accelerate the disposal program for these materials wherever this can be accomplished without disruptive effects on the market. Investment in inventory of $1,500 million on June 30, 1963, has been reduced to $978 million on June 30, 1968, and is expected to be further reduced to $875 million by June 30, 1970.

A summary of sales transactions involving the strategic minerals and metals under this fund follows (in millions of dollars):

Department of Agriculture.—The purchase, management, and resale of agricultural commodities, except forest products, was carried out by the Commodity Credit Corporation which was reimbursed from an allocation to the Secretary of Agriculture from this fund. The program was completed by 1961, but interest expense still accumulates on the loss incurred.

Department of the Interior.—Department of the Interior operations to expand defense production under section 303 of the Defense Production Act of 1950 prior to 1968 were limited to the encouragement of exploration for strategic and critical mineral commodities. The operations are administered by the Office of Minerals Exploration, a unit of the Geological Survey. This office uses appropriated funds to administer the Defense Minerals Exploration Administration contracts under which royalty obligations remain.

Obligations for repayment of loans (on a royalty basis—no interest) remain on 56 contracts, amounting to $3,547 thousand. Royalties on production from any of these projects within specified periods will be applied toward the Government funds spent. Royalties received totaled $6,742 thousand on a cumulative basis at the end of 1968 and are estimated at $200 thousand for 1969 and $150 thousand for 1970.

This program also includes in 1968 and 1969 the Rutile and Titaniferous Materials Development Program administered by the Office of Minerals Exploration but carried out in cooperation with GSA and the Bureau of Mines.

Treasury Department.—The function of making and administering loans to private business enterprises under the authority of section 302 of the Defense Production Act of 1950, as amended, was assigned to the Secretary of the Treasury by Executive Order 10489 dated September 26, 1953. Applications for loans are considered only upon certification of essentiality by the Office of Emergency Preparedness (formerly the Office of Emergency Planning).

No new loans were authorized during 1968. It is anticipated that there will be no additional loans authorized during 1969 or 1970.

Loans outstanding are estimated for 1969 and 1970 as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Outstanding, beginning of year.....	11,744	10,129	6,089
Repayments during year.....	1,615	4,040	600
Outstanding, end of year.....	10,129	6,089	5,489

Financial condition of the fund.—Losses under these programs are reflected as $1.1 billion as of June 30, 1968, with inventory of metals and minerals carried at acquisition cost of approximately $1 billion. Using inventory market price of $600 million, the deficit would amount to $1.5 billion. Interest expense on borrowing from Treasury will increase to more than $100 million for 1970 and annually thereafter with negligible offsetting income.

Cash plus unused borrowing authority is expected to total only $72 million as of July 1, 1969. This balance, plus receipts of some $45 million, primarily from inventory sales, will not be sufficient to cover committed 1970 expenditures of $145 million. However, because of reduced interest payments due on maturing Treasury notes the following year, requirements will be met during 1971.

The Inter-American Development Bank is an inter-governmental institution, corporate in form, whose capital stock is owned by its member governments. The Bank promotes economic development in member countries through loans, technical assistance, and guarantees of private investment in development projects. Twenty-one Western Hemisphere republics, including the United States, are members of the Bank.

Ordinary capital.—After completion of arrangements for subscription to the latest increase in the Bank's capital, authorized ordinary capital will be the equivalent of $3,150 million. As of November 30, 1968, $2,183.5 million of this had been subscribed. Of the total subscribed, the equivalent of $383.6 million is in the form of paid-in capital, and the remaining $1,799.9 million is subject to call by the Bank if required to meet its obligations arising out of borrowings or guarantees. The U.S. subscription to ordinary capital as of November 30, 1968, totaled $967.6 million.

By November 30, 1968, Bank commitments from ordinary capital had reached $1,011.9 million equivalent on 164 loans.

Fund for special operations.—In addition to its ordinary capital operations, the Bank lends from its Fund for Special Operations in circumstances where ordinary capital financing is not appropriate.

The Board of Governors of the Bank during 1967 recommended an increase in Fund resources of $400 million per year to support operations during the 3-year period from early calendar year 1968 through early calendar year 1971. The U.S. share of this increase is $300 million each year or a total of $900 million. A U.S. contribution in this amount has been authorized by the Congress (Public Law 90-88 of September 22, 1967). Appropriations for the first two $300 million installments were obtained in 1968 and 1969. The third installment is due in 1970.

As of September 30, 1968, commitments from the Fund for Special Operations amounted to $1,123.3 million equivalent on 188 loans.

The International Development Association is an international organization affiliated with the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development. The Association is designed to provide its less developed member countries with development financing in the form of long-term credits at a nominal service charge.

U.S. membership in the International Development Association was authorized by Public Law 86-565 (74 Stat. 293) approved June 30, 1960. The United States joined the Association in August 1960, and the institution began operations in November 1960.

As of September 30, 1968, the Association had made credit commitments for high priority economic development projects totalling $1,855.7 million in 42 countries and territories. As of the same date, membership in the Association, which is open to all members of the World Bank, totaled 102 countries. Total capital resources were $1,807 million, of which $1,571 million was in hard currencies.

The Asian Development Bank finances regional economic development projects and programs in the developing countries of Asia. The Bank was established by Asian member governments, with participation by developed countries outside the Asian region.

The authorized capital stock of the Bank is $1.1 billion. Of this, $970 million has been subscribed by the present membership: $615 million by the regional members, including $200 million by Japan, and $355 million by nonregional members.

The Asian Development Bank Act of March 16, 1966, authorizes U.S. membership in the Bank and the appropriation of amounts necessary to meet U.S. subscription obligations. The U.S. subscription is $200 million, of which $100 million is to be paid in five annual installments and $100 million is callable. Three installment payments have already been made. The fourth is due on August 22, 1969.

In addition to its ordinary operations, the Bank's Articles permit the establishment of special funds. Such special funds would be used to finance high-priority development projects on repayment terms which would be easier than those which apply to the Bank's ordinary loans.

Legislation has been proposed to the Congress to authorize an appropriation of up to $200 million to be provided over a 4-year period for a U.S. contribution to multilateral special funds of the Bank. The U.S. contribution would comprise less than one-half of the total special funds, and would be used for the purchase of U.S. goods and services.

The Military Assistance Program strengthens the security of the free world by contributing to the development, maintenance, and training of modern military forces through the grant of defense articles and services. The military forces of countries receiving military equipment on a grant basis provide free world defense capability, depth in reserves, and flexibility. Many of these countries have joined regional defense pacts such as NATO, and some have entered into bilateral defense arrangements with the United States.

Military assistance is now substantially reduced from the program level of earlier years. Most Western European countries no longer receive defense articles as grant military assistance. Moreover, other countries throughout the world are assuming an increasing share of the costs of their military forces as their economic capacities increase. The costs of military assistance to Laos and Thailand and of the U.S. share of NATO infrastructure (military facilities constructed for the use of, and jointly financed by, the participating nations of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization) were transferred to the budgets of the military departments in 1968.

The program for 1970 does not provide for the U.S. share of the costs of International Military Headquarters and Agencies (administrative support costs of military headquarters and agencies primarily of NATO, but also of CENTO and SEATO). Funds needed to meet these costs in 1970 are included in the budgets of the military departments.

The major portion of the military equipment and supplies which the United States furnishes under the military assistance program is produced in the United States and is obtained by placing orders with the U.S. military services. Military assistance funds are reserved when the orders are placed and the military services accounts are reimbursed when the items are delivered. The materiel supplied by the United States varies with our objectives and the requirements and capabilities of individual countries. The current emphasis is on the maintenance of existing forces and materiel, although modernization is included as funds permit. Materiel already on hand, but excess to the needs of U.S. forces, is supplied, whenever possible, at no charge to the military assistance appropriation except for the costs of rehabilitation and transportation.

The administrative costs related to foreign military sales, however, continue to be included in military assistance appropriations. Before 1969, funds were included in the new obligational authority for military assistance to finance credit sales of military equipment to foreign countries and to guarantee credit for such sales extended by financial institutions.

This is an annual account used to finance the sale of defense articles and services to foreign countries and international organizations. Legislation was first proposed in calendar year 1968 for its establishment. The Foreign Military Sales Act was enacted by Congress October 22, 1968. The funds for this account are provided by appropriations and will be used to (1) finance directly credit sales, (2) guaranty privately financed credit sales, and (3) guaranty sales of promissory notes received from credit sales.

An appropriation of $296 million was made for 1969, to cover a credit sales program of $296 million. An appropriation of $275 million is requested for 1970 to cover a credit sales program of $350 million. Of the $350 million program, $100 million will be privately financed and $25 million of the appropriation will be set aside as a guaranty reserve for this private credit.

The administrative expenses related to this program are funded from the military assistance appropriation.

As authorized by sections 21 and 22 of the Foreign Military Sales Act of 1968, this trust fund is used for sales of defense articles and services. Defense articles sold consist largely of aircraft, ships, combat and other vehicles, missiles, electronic equipment, spare parts, and related supporting equipment. In dollar volume, the major portion of this program consists of sales to European and other developed countries of the free world.

Defense articles from Department of Defense stocks and defense services are sold to eligible countries and international organizations if they agree to pay in U.S. dollars not less than the value thereof in advance or, as authorized by the President, within a reasonable period not to exceed 120 days after delivery.

Defense articles and defense services are also procured for sale if the purchasers provide the U.S. Government with a dependable undertaking (1) to pay the full amount of the procurement contract, which assures the Government against any loss on the contract; and (2) to make funds available in such amounts and at such times as may be required to meet the payments or other costs under the contract. Where it is found to be in the national interest, the Department of Defense may accept a dependable undertaking under which the eligible purchaser agrees to pay 120 days after delivery. In such cases, Department of Defense appropriations are used to meet payments required by such contracts, and these appropriations are reimbursed by amounts subsequently received from the purchasers.

The administrative expenses related to the execution of contracts under this authority are funded in the military assistance appropriation.

1. Technical cooperation.—Grants are used in developing countries to: (1) Provide the advisers, teachers, training and equipment required for the improvement of educational, administrative, technical, and professional skills; (2) assist in the control and eradication of major disease and other menaces to health; (3) establish and improve institutions which further economic and social development; (4) assist in planning development programs and projects; (5) assist family planning programs; and (6) finance research and the development of American universities and other institutions concerned with problems of economic development.

2. American schools and hospitals abroad.—Grants are provided to American-sponsored institutions abroad to help train qualified leadership in developing countries.

3. Surveys of investment opportunities.—This program encourages private enterprise to undertake surveys of investment opportunities in developing countries. Up to 50% of the cost of such surveys is paid by AID if the concern sponsoring the survey does not proceed with an investment, in which case the survey becomes AID property for use in attracting other investors.

4. and 5. International organizations and programs.—Voluntary contributions are provided to programs affiliated with the United Nations and its specialized agencies, and grants and loans are made to the Indus Basin Development Fund associated with the World Bank. These programs promote the economic and social development of developing countries and help maintain peace in threatened areas.

6. Supporting assistance.—Commodities and services are provided to countries which need help in maintaining defensive forces or in attaining economic and political stability. When country situations have stabilized sufficiently, reductions in supporting assistance are made and efforts are concentrated on development. The largest portion finances economic programs to help Vietnam preserve its national independence.

7. Contingency fund.—These funds are used for urgent requirements which cannot be foreseen at the time the budget is prepared. They are available for emergency assistance in disasters and to meet international situations which need an immediate response in the U.S. national interest.

8. Alliance for Progress, technical cooperation and development grants.—Grants for technical services and equipment are made to Latin American countries as part of the Alliance for Progress program.

9. Administrative expenses (Agency for International Development).—These funds are used in Washington and in overseas missions to administer economic aid programs.

10. Administrative and other expenses (State).—Expenses are provided for Department of State activities related to the administration of U.S. NATO, OECD, and the Battle Act; and coordination of the military assistance program.

Loans.—A small portion of economic assistance funds available for grants are lent rather than granted. These loans may be repayable either in dollars or in foreign currency.

The following table summarizes the loans made from grant funds each year, repayable in dollars and foreign currencies (in millions of dollars and dollar equivalents):

Through 1961, a portion of the mutual security appropriations was used to purchase surplus agricultural commodities which were then sold to friendly countries for their currencies. These local currencies accruing from the sales are used for economic and military activities in furtherance of objectives of the U.S. foreign assistance program, including local costs of projects and procurement of supplies and equipment for third countries. Starting in 1967, certain supporting assistance section 401 funds are being used to generate local currency for support of U.S. projects.

The Alliance for Progress was established in 1961 as a cooperative effort of the United States and Latin American countries to promote the economic and social development of Latin America. The United States is helping in these efforts by providing economic and technical aid. The Latin American countries, in addition to providing a steadily increasing share of their own resources to development, are carrying out substantial self-help and reform programs. The need for even more rapid reform and increased investment, particularly in the critical areas of agriculture, education, health, and economic integration, was reconfirmed by the Presidents of the Latin American Republics at a meeting at Punta del Este, Uruguay in April 1967. The new AID sector loan technique based on general sector reform measures being taken by the host government is a principal means of encouraging such reform. The Congress appropriated $255 million for the Alliance loan program in 1969, which, through that fiscal year, makes a cumulative total of $2,916 million that has been appropriated. Total Alliance for Progress appropriations of $606 million are proposed for 1970. Of this amount $490 million is proposed for development loans, largely in support of programs which encourage increased agricultural production, education, social and civic development, and regional integration.

Development loans including those made under the Alliance for Progress are made to promote economic progress in developing countries. Funds are used to provide imports from the United States of goods needed for industrial and agricultural production and for the financing of specific projects and institutions.

Before a loan is made, the Agency for International Development must take into account: (1) whether financing could be obtained in whole or in part from other free world sources on reasonable terms, including private sources within the United States; (2) the economic and technical soundness of the activity to be financed, including the capacity of the recipient country to repay the loan at a reasonable rate of interest; (3) whether the activity gives reasonable promise of contributing to the development of economic resources or to the increase of productive capacities; (4) the consistency of the activity with other development activities being undertaken or planned, and its contribution to realistic long-range objectives; (5) the extent to which the recipient country is demonstrating its determination to take effective self-help measures; and (6) possible effects upon the economy of the United States. Development loans are not made unless there is a finding of a reasonable prospect of repayment. Additional loan criteria and standards are established by an interagency Development Loan Committee chaired by the Administrator of the Agency for International Development.

Development loans are repayable in U.S. dollars. Under the provisions of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1968, interest charged on all loans, with the exception of those covered by special provisions relative to the use of the facilities of the International Development Association and those funds already committed to be lent, will be at an interest rate of not less than 3% per annum. Loan repayments must begin not later than 10 years following the date on which the funds are lent. During the initial 10-year period the rate of interest shall not be lower than 2% per annum.

This program replaced the Development Loan Fund corporation, which was abolished November 3, 1961. A total of $435 million was appropriated for development loans in 1968, $300 million in 1969, and $720 million is proposed for 1970.

The Development Loan Fund was established as a corporation by the Mutual Security Act of 1958 to extend loans, credits, and guaranties to American or foreign individuals, businesses, financial institutions, or foreign governments in order to provide capital for projects and programs contributing to the economic growth of friendly developing countries.

Under the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, the Development Loan Fund Corporation was abolished and its functions were transferred, effective November 3, 1961, to the Agency for International Development. Subsequent to that date, the Fund has remained open for the purpose of liquidating outstanding obligations. As of June 30, 1968, the undisbursed loan agreements amounted to $66.7 million. It is estimated that this balance will decrease to $23.5 million in 1969 and will be fully disbursed in 1970.

Loan repayments and interest earned totaled $148.8 million in 1968 and are scheduled to total $138.4 million in 1969 and $148.3 million in 1970.

Guaranty programs encourage and facilitate private U.S. investments abroad which further the economic progress of developing countries. Guaranties are available only for new investments.

Three investment guaranty programs are authorized:

1. Specific political risk guaranties against (a) inconvertibility of foreign currency, (b) loss by expropriation or confiscation, and (c) loss due to war, revolution or insurrection;

2. Extended risk guaranties which cover up to 75% of investments against both political and business risks.

3. Extended risk guaranties covering up to 100% of losses on certain housing projects and investments in credit unions.

Except for Latin American housing guaranties, guaranties are available only for investment in countries whose governments have agreed with the Government of the United States to institute the investment guaranty program, and where there are suitable arrangements to protect the interests of the U.S. Government in connection with assets or claims acquired as a result of having provided relief under a guaranty. As of November 1968, agreements have been signed with 88 developing countries.

As of June 30, 1968, there was a Treasury balance of $116,411,483 in the Foreign Investment Guaranty Fund as a reserve against possible claims arising under the various guaranty programs. All guaranties are backed by the full faith and credit of the United States.

The statutory authorizations for the three programs are:

Specific risk.—As of June 30, 1968, the ceiling on guaranty issuing authority was $8 billion; an increase to $8.5 billion was authorized in the Foreign Assistance Act (FAA) of 1968 for 1969; a further increase of $1.0 billion to $9.5 billion is requested for 1970;

Extended risk.—As of June 30, 1968, the ceiling was $475 million; this was increased to $550 million in the FAA of 1968 for 1969; a further increase of $100 million to $650 million is requested for 1970;

Latin American Housing.—As of June 30, 1968, the ceiling was $500 million; in the FAA of 1968, this was increased to $550 million. No further increase is requested for 1970.

The value of gross contracts issued under the three programs is as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Specific risk guaranties issued.....	2,513,685	2,473,537	1,200,000
Extended risk guaranties issued.....	34,271	97,893	94,000

Total guaranties issued.....	2,602,751	2,656,609	1,369,000

As of June 30, 1968, claims totaling $1,422,658 have been paid, of which $1,097,658 was paid from that portion of the reserves representing accumulated fee income and $325 thousand from appropriated funds. The costs of claims investigation, administration, and adjustment are paid out of fee income. Prior to 1968, administrative and operating costs directly related to the guaranty programs were paid from funds appropriated for the Agency's general administrative expenses. Effective 1968, these costs are being paid from fees collected under the investment guaranty program.

<sup>2</sup> The revolving fund is prepaying the Department of the Army for ocean freight services performed in connection with the shipment of domestic section 608 property. Since these services are directly chargeable to the receiving missions, they are direct reimbursement to the revolving fund.

Section 608 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 created a revolving fund to provide for more effective use of U.S. Government-owned excess personal property in foreign assistance programs by authorizing such property to be acquired and rehabilitated in advance of specifically known requirements for country programs.

Many types of excess property such as tractors, construction and roadbuilding equipment, machinery, and machine tools, the general needs for which can be anticipated with a reasonable degree of certainty, are included.

GENERAL PROVISIONS

Sec. 101. None of the funds herein appropriated (other than funds appropriated under the authorization for "International organizations and programs") shall be used to finance the construction of any new flood control, reclamation, or other water or related land resource project or program which has not met the standards and criteria used in determining the feasibility of flood control, reclamation, and other water and related land resource programs and projects proposed for construction within the United States of America as per memorandum of the President dated May 15, 1962.

Sec. 102. Obligations made from funds herein appropriated for engineering and architectural fees and services to any individual or group of engineering and architectural firms on any one project in excess of $25,000 shall be reported to the Senate and House of Representatives at least twice annually.

Sec. 103. Except for the appropriations entitled "Contingency Fund", "Alliance for Progress, development loans", [and] "Development loans", and "International organizations and programs, loans", not more than 20 per centum of any appropriation item made available by this title shall be obligated and/or reserved during the last month of availability.

Sec. 104. None of the funds herein appropriated nor any of the counterpart funds generated as a result of assistance hereunder or any prior Act shall be used to pay pensions, annuities, retirement pay, or adjusted service compensation for any persons heretofore or hereafter serving in the armed forces of any recipient country.

Sec. 105. The Congress hereby reiterates its opposition to the seating in the United Nations of the Communist China regime as the representative of China, and it is hereby declared to be the continuing sense of Congress that the Communist regime in China has not demonstrated its willingness to fulfill the obligations contained in the Charter of the United Nations and should not be recognized to represent China in the United Nations. In the event of the seating of representatives of the Chinese Communist regime in the Security Council or General Assembly of the United Nations, the President is requested to inform the Congress, insofar as is compatible with the requirements of national security, of the implications of this action upon the foreign policy of the United States and our foreign relationships, including that created by membership in the United Nations, together with any recommendations which he may have with respect to the matter.

Sec. 106. It is the sense of Congress that any attempt by foreign nations to create distinctions because of their race or religion among American citizens in the granting of personal or commercial access or any other rights otherwise available to the United States citizens generally is repugnant to our principles; and in all negotiations between the United States and any foreign state arising as a result of funds appropriated under this title these principles shall be applied as the President may determine.

Sec. 107. (a) No assistance shall be furnished under the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, to any country which sells, furnishes, or permits any ships under its registry to carry to Cuba, so long as it is governed by the Castro regime, in addition to those items contained on the list maintained by the Administrator pursuant to title I of the Mutual Defense Assistance Control Act of 1951, as amended, any arms, ammunition, implements of war, atomic energy materials, or any other articles, materials, or supplies of primary strategic significance used in the production of arms, ammunition, and implements of war or of strategic significance to the conduct of war, including petroleum products.

(b) No economic assistance shall be furnished under the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, to any country which sells, furnishes, or permits any ships under its registry to carry items of economic assistance to Cuba, so long as it is governed by the Castro regime, or to North Vietnam.

Sec. 108. Any expenditure made from funds provided in this title for procurement outside the United States of any commodity in bulk and in excess of $100,000 shall be reported to the Senate and the House of Representatives at least twice annually: Provided, That each such report shall state the reasons for which the President determined, pursuant to criteria set forth in section 604(a) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, that foreign procurement will not result in adverse effects upon the economy of the United States or the industrial mobilization base which outweigh the economic or other advantages to the United States of less costly procurement outside the United States.

Sec. 109. (a) No assistance shall be furnished to any nation, whose government is based upon that theory of government known as communism, under the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, for any arms, ammunition, implements of war, atomic energy materials, or any articles, materials, or supplies, such as petroleum, transportation materials of strategic value, and items of primary strategic significance used in the production of arms, ammunition, and implements of war, contained on the list maintained by the Administrator pursuant to title I of the Mutual Defense Assistance Control Act of 1951, as amended.

(b) No economic assistance shall be furnished to any nation, whose government is based upon that theory of government known as communism, under the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended (except section 214(b)), unless the President determines that the withholding of such assistance would be contrary to the national interest and reports such determination to the House of Representatives and the Senate. Reports made pursuant to this subsection shall be published in the Federal Register within seven days of submission to the Congress and shall contain a statement by the President of the reasons for such determination.

SEC. 110. None of the funds appropriated or made available pursuant to this Act for carrying out the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, may be used for making payments on any contract for procurement to which the United States is a party entered into after the date of enactment of this Act which does not contain a provision authorizing the termination of such contract for the convenience of the United States.

SEC. 111. None of the funds appropriated or made available by this or any predecessor Act for the years subsequent to fiscal year 1962 for carrying out the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, may be used to make payments with respect to any contract for the performance of services outside the United States by United States citizens unless the President shall have promulgated regulations that provide for the investigation of such citizens for loyalty and security to the extent necessary to protect the security and other interests of the United States: Provided, That such regulations shall require that any such United States citizen who will have access, in connection with the performance of such services, to information or material classified for security reasons shall be subject to such investigation as may otherwise be provided by law and executive order.

SEC. 112. None of the funds appropriated or made available under this Act for carrying out the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, may be used to make payments with respect to any capital project financed by loans or grants from the United States where the United States has not directly approved the terms of the contracts and the firms to provide engineering, procurement, and construction services on such projects.

SEC. 113. Of the funds appropriated or made available pursuant to this Act not more than ~~[$8,000,000]~~ $10,000,000 may be used during the fiscal year ending June 30, ~~[1969]~~ 1970, in carrying out section 241 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended.

SEC. 114. None of the funds appropriated or made available pursuant to this Act for carrying out the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, may be used to pay in whole or in part any assessments, arrearages, or dues of any member of the United Nations.

SEC. 115. None of the funds made available by this Act for carrying out the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, may be obligated for financing, in whole or in part, the direct costs of any contract for the construction of facilities and installations in any underdeveloped country, unless the President shall have promulgated regulations designed to assure, to the maximum extent consistent with the national interest and the avoidance of excessive costs to the United States, that none of the funds made available by this Act and thereafter obligated shall be used to finance the direct costs under such contracts for construction work performed by persons other than qualified nationals of the recipient country or qualified citizens of the United States: Provided, however, That the President may waive the application of this amendment if it is important to the national interest.

SEC. 116. No assistance shall be furnished under the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, to any country that sells, furnishes or permits any ships under its registry to carry to North Vietnam any of the items mentioned in subsection 107(a) of this Act.

SEC. 117. None of the funds appropriated or made available in this Act for carrying out the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, shall be available for assistance to the United Arab Republic, unless the President determines that such availability is essential to the national interest of the United States.

SEC. 118. None of the funds appropriated or made available pursuant to this Act for carrying out the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, may be used to finance the procurement of iron and steel products for use in Vietnam containing any component acquired by the producer of the commodity, in the form in which imported into the country of production, from sources other than the United States or a country designated as a limited free world country by code number 901 in the September 1964 Geographic Code Book compiled by the Agency for International Development, and at a total cost (delivered to the point of production) that amounts to more than 10 per centum of the lowest price (excluding the cost of ocean transportation and marine insurance) at which the supplier makes the commodity available for export sale (whether or not financed by the Agency for International Development).

SEC. 119. The President is directed to withhold economic assistance in an amount equivalent to the amount spent by any underdeveloped country for the purchase of sophisticated weapons systems, such as missile systems and jet aircraft for military purposes from any country, unless the President determines that such purchase or acquisition of weapons systems is important to the national security of the United States and reports within thirty days each such determination to the Congress. <sup>1</sup> Includes $4.8 million multiple-year funds appropriated in 1968.

1. Work and training programs.—(a) Job Corps.—The Job Corps provides work and training in residential centers for young people aged 14 through 21 who are out of school and out of work.

Conservation centers, located in rural areas and managed by the Interior and Agriculture Departments and by State governments, range in enrollee capacity from 100 to 256. Their objective is to raise the enrollee's level of basic education while improving prevocational and basic work skills.

Urban centers range from 300 to 3,000 in enrollee capacity and are operated under contract by private businesses, universities, and State and local nonprofit organizations. Young men and women urban center enrollees receive specialized vocational training as well as general education, counseling, and help in improving work attitudes and habits.

In 1970 Job Corps will continue the five new inner-city skill centers initiated in 1969. These centers will allow young men and women to be trained away from home while remaining in an urban environment.

Job Corps program levels are estimated at:

Man-years of training.....	30,800	36,558	33,500	35,000

Enrollees at end of year.....	42,032	33,013	35,000	35,000
Number of centers at end of year.....	123	108	113	113

(b) School and summer work program.—This program assists disadvantaged students of high school age to remain in school by providing part-time and summer work experience. In 1969 and 1970, nearly 400,000 jobs will be provided.

(c) Comprehensive employment programs.—These programs, which the Office of Economic Opportunity delegates to the Department of Labor, offer a wide range of manpower services which include work experience, counseling, remedial education, on-the-job training, and jobs leading to career opportunities. Individuals served, in both urban and rural areas, are unemployed and underemployed low-income people needing special assistance to develop their occupational potential. In 1970, it is estimated that about 200,000 work and training opportunities will be provided.

The Job Opportunities in the Business Sector (JOBS) program will provide 60,000 of these opportunities, with an additional 80,000 jobs and $240 million from Manpower Development and Training Act (MDTA). JOBS encourages private industry to hire the hard-core unemployed by reimbursing participating firms for the extraordinary expenses connected with on-the-job training of disadvantaged persons.

Economic Opportunity Act (in millions).....	$69.6	$162	$180

Another major activity is the Concentrated Employment Program (CEP) which brings together manpower programs and necessary supportive services such as day care and medical examinations in cities and rural areas with unusually heavy concentrations of poverty. In 1970, 82 CEP's will be re-funded with $133 million of EOA, and $105 million of MDTA, funds.

Other programs provide work experience and training opportunities in Operation Mainstream, New Careers, and Out-of-School activities.

(d) Special Impact (industry incentive).—This program provides monetary incentives to attract private industry to relocate plant facilities and create additional employment opportunities in selected urban and rural depressed areas. It emphasizes hiring, training, and retraining disadvantaged workers through job promotion and stock-sharing.

(e) Work experience program.—This program is being replaced by the Work Incentive Program in 1970.

2. Community action.—Community Action Agencies (CAA's) have been established in 1,000 American communities to plan and mobilize a concerted attack on poverty. These agencies provide a vehicle for bringing together all segments of a community to work on the specific poverty problems of that community. Provision is made for involvement of the poor in the selection and operation of antipoverty activities. Grants for community action programs perform a catalytic and gap-filling function to focus the public and private resources of a community on the problems of poverty. While CAA's serve as a community mobilizing agent as well as a purveyor of services, many of the specific program operations are carried out through other long-established community institutions, or in selective cases through newly formed community-neighborhood institutions such as Neighborhood Centers or Housing Development Corporations.

In 1970, OEO will continue existing service programs in the areas of child development, legal assistance to the poor, health care and family planning, emergency nutritional assistance, and the numerous locally initiated programs designed for each community's particular problems. Additional efforts in 1970 will include expanding Head Start Follow Through programs for primary grade children, and providing greater emphasis to the development of self-help capacities in poor neighborhoods, particularly in Model Cities areas.

Almost all Community Action Agencies receive Head Start funds to operate child development programs for preschool children. Head Start grants are also made to areas that have no Community Action Agencies. In 1970, greater emphasis will be placed on experimentation through an estimate $25 million program of planned variation in Head Start using the Follow Through evaluation approach. The following table summarizes participation in this program:

Children participating in Head Start:
Summer -----	477,000	477,000	477,000
Academic year -----	218,000	218,000	218,000

Follow Through -----	15,000	31,000	63,500

Special Impact (community economic development) projects provide for participation by the disadvantaged in the development, operation, and ownership of private businesses in areas having high concentrations of low income people. One such project, the Hough Development Corporation in Cleveland, was funded under this activity in 1968. There will be five or more similar projects begun during 1969. Funding proposed for 1970 will provide for approximately eight additional development projects, as well as for the second incremental funding of projects begun in 1969.

In addition to the grants described above, additional funds are included in 1970 for support activities, including research and pilot programs, training, and technical assistance. Research and pilot programs are designed to study the causes of poverty and to provide new approaches to combating poverty. Training programs for Community Action Agency staff, certain local, State, and Federal agency personnel assisting in poverty programs, and poor persons working in local programs will be continued. Technical assistance will be provided to Community Action Agencies and neighborhood organizations by State agencies, universities, and other organizations. In 1970, training and technical assistance needs related to poverty problems in Model Cities areas will receive priority attention. Technical assistance will also be provided to rural communities and smaller cities which do not have resources to fully develop and operate complex antipoverty programs.

3. Migrant workers program.—This activity provides special programs to help meet housing, educational, day care, and other needs of migratory and seasonal agricultural workers and their families. Grants or contracts will be made to aid public and nonprofit agencies to improve the health and living conditions of these workers in the three major national streams of domestic migrants. In 1970, an additional 1,200 families will start work on self-help housing units. Job-oriented education will benefit 28,000 adults and re-employment and adjustment assistance will be provided 3,500 heads of families.

4. Rural areas program.—This activity finances administrative expenses incurred by the Farmers Home Administration of the Department of Agriculture in operating the rural loan program under delegation of authority. Program expenses are included in the schedules for the Economic Opportunity loan fund.

5. Volunteers in Service to America.—VISTA offers an opportunity for volunteers with a spirit of service to work directly on the problems of poverty. Volunteers are participating in the programs supported by the Economic Opportunity Act, in other Federal programs attacking poverty problems, and in related State and local activities. The normal period of service, including training, is 13½ months. As of June 30, 1968, 5,032 volunteers were in training or on field assignments. During 1969, VISTA will provide about 4,900 man-years of service to the poor. For 1970, there will be an increase of 700 man-years of volunteer service for a total of 5,600. During both 1969 and 1970, increased emphasis will be placed on the use of indigenous and specialist volunteers, often on a team basis. In addition, 1,500 associate volunteers will serve 90-day periods during 1969 and 1970.

Budget authority (in millions) -----	$30	$32	$37
Volunteer man-years -----	4,275	4,900	5,600

6. General direction and administration.—The Office of Economic Opportunity directly administers the Community Action, Migrants, and VISTA programs, and exercises primary responsibility for the Job Corps program which is operated under contract by other public and private agencies. The Office also coordinates and reviews all OEO programs delegated to other agencies and assists in coordinating the programs of all Federal agencies in an integrated attack on poverty.

Rural areas program.—The Farmers Home Administration of the Department of Agriculture makes loans to low-income rural residents to acquire or improve real estate, purchase operating supplies and equipment, and/or participate in cooperative associations. Loans are also made to low-income farm and nonfarm rural families to finance small nonagricultural enterprises. The maximum individual principal indebtedness outstanding at any one time is $3,500. In 1968, 12,121 loans were made, and about 5,500 rural families will be assisted in 1969. The funds requested for 1970 and collections on outstanding loans will be utilized to make approximately 6,500 individual loans in 1970.

Loans are also made to help establish new cooperatives and finance existing cooperatives whose members are predominantly low-income rural families. In 1968, 357 such loans were made. In 1969, 400 loans will be made to cooperatives that will assist almost 8,500 low-income rural families. Approximately 12,000 families will benefit through membership in over 500 cooperatives receiving loan assistance in 1970.

The purposes of the Peace Corps are to provide trained Americans to interested countries in need of middle-level manpower and to promote understanding between the people of the United States and the peoples served.

Volunteers are working in four principal kinds of assignments at the request of host countries. Approximately 46 percent are engaged in teaching at all levels and 26 percent are serving in agricultural development. Additionally, about 15 percent are involved in rural and urban development, public works and public administration projects, and 13 percent in health programs.

Prior to overseas assignment, each volunteer is given intensive training designed to develop required skills, to provide a knowledge of the country to which he will be sent, to develop his language abilities, and to assure physical fitness for service overseas. During training, all prospective volunteers are carefully evaluated through continuous observation. To provide the most realistic training environment and experience, about 36 percent of all volunteers will be trained overseas in the host countries where they will serve.

Planning is based on a program year which runs from the beginning of September through the end of August.

1. Volunteer and project costs.—This activity includes all costs directly associated with volunteers. The 1970 budget supports a total strength of 13,800 volunteers in training and overseas by August 31, 1970. The planned assignment of these volunteers is as follows:

	Aug. 31, 1968 (actual)	Aug. 31, 1969 (planned)	Aug. 31, 1970 (planned)
Africa.....	3,180	3,300	3,325
East Asia and Pacific.....	3,000	3,100	3,125
Latin America.....	4,600	4,775	4,800
North Africa, Near East, and South Asia.....	2,412	2,525	2,550
Total.....	13,192	13,700	13,800

Requests from countries for Peace Corps volunteers continue to increase. The proposed 1970 volunteer and trainee strength of 13,800 will improve U.S. response to this demand. Programing criteria limit projects to those which are consistent with the purposes of the Peace Corps Act, and which can be manned by anticipated available volunteers of the highest caliber. The use of the Planning, Programing, Budgeting System (PPBS) has assisted in focusing programs more sharply on key problems in the developing countries.

Though the majority of programs in African nations will continue to be in primary and secondary education, there will be a major emphasis on new agriculture and health programs.

Most of the volunteers in the East Asia and Pacific region will be engaged in teacher training, classroom teaching, and health programs.

In Latin America, one-third of all volunteers are in agriculture programs. In addition, there will be a continued emphasis on education, particularly teacher training, and on community development.

The North Africa, Near East, and South Asia region has a variety of programs. The majority of volunteers in the region are working in agricultural and educational activities.

2. Administrative expenses, limitation.—This activity includes expenses related to recruitment, selection, direction of training, and the management of the Peace Corps, both in Washington and overseas.

Under an amendment (Public Law 88-94) to the Philippine war damage legislation of 1963, a special fund ($28.1 million) for education derived from the Philippine war damage claims fund has been established to be used as jointly determined by the two Presidents for the purpose of furthering educational programs to the mutual advantage of both countries. Projects totaling $25.3 million have been tentatively approved to support various educational projects in the Republic of the Philippines. Additional educational projects are currently under consideration for the utilization of the balance of the funds in 1969.

Public Law 87-490, approved June 19, 1962, authorized an appropriation, to remain available until expended, of $2 billion for U.S. participation in a 10-nation, $6 billion arrangement providing, under specified conditions, for loans by the participants to the International Monetary Fund when needed to forestall or cope with an impairment of the international monetary system. The necessary appropriation was obtained on October 24, 1962.

The arrangements have been drawn on by the Fund on four occasions in the total amount of $1,671 million. The United States did not participate in the loans made under the arrangements because the Fund's holdings of dollars have been fully adequate.

Under a 4-year renewal decided by the Executive Directors of the International Monetary Fund, the arrangements remain in effect until October 24, 1970. The U.S. commitment to lend up to $2 billion to the Fund under the arrangements will continue during the renewal period.

The service conducts basic and applied research relating to the production, utilization, and marketing of agricultural products, research on nutrition and consumer use, and carries out those control and regulatory programs of the Department which involve enforcement of plant and animal quarantine, the control of diseases and pests of animals and plants, and related work.

1. Research.—(a) Farm research.—Improved breeding, feeding, and management practices, including management of animal wastes, are developed for farm livestock, poultry, and domestic fur animals. Practical methods are sought for control of diseases, parasites, and insect pests affecting them and to protect them from toxic chemical poisons and other hazards.

Investigations are conducted to improve varieties of food, feed, fiber, and other plants, and to develop new crops; to improve crop-production practices, including methods to control plant diseases and nematodes, and reduce cost of production; and to develop safe chemical, biological, and other methods for control of harmful pests affecting farm production.

Investigations are conducted to improve the management of natural resources, including investigations to improve soil and water management (including salinity and saline soils), irrigation, and conservation practices; to study hydrologic problems of agricultural watersheds; to determine the relation of soil types and water to plant, animal, and human nutrition; and to apply engineering principles to improve efficiency and reduce costs of agricultural production.

The research is aimed at the profitable production of an adequate supply of food, feed, fiber, and other agricultural products of desired quality at minimum costs.

Attention continues to be given to the production of agricultural products having industrial uses. Increased attention has been given to studies on protection of plants, animals, and natural resources from harmful effects of polluted soil, water, and air. Research also concerns the application of remote sensing techniques in meeting agricultural problems. The proportion of farm research funds going into basic research is currently estimated at 45% of the total funds for this research. The basic research is fundamental to and strengthens the other research efforts.

The increase requested for 1970 would provide for research in the following areas: improve methods to control avian leukosis in poultry; study of resistant micro-organisms resulting from the use of antibiotics in livestock and poultry production; studies on low-income rural housing; pollution research concerned with animal waste management; and expand remote sensing research, including the acquisition of an aircraft.

(b) Utilization research and development.—Chemical, physical, and biological research is conducted to develop increased industrial uses of farm products, and new and improved foods, feeds, and fabrics; and to develop improved methods for processing agricultural commodities.

The research aim is to expand the demand for farm products by developing new and improved products and economical processes tailored to the requirements of the domestic and foreign markets. The research conducted includes studies to protect food and feed products from harmful micro-organisms and naturally occurring toxins and studies of health-related problems of tobacco. Increased effort is being given to the processing of agricultural commodities to minimize waste formation and to utilize waste products to avoid pollution.

The increase requested for 1970 would be used for research on processing characteristics of new varieties and upgrading the quality of peach products.

(c) Nutrition and consumer use research.—Studies are made of human nutritional requirements, composition and nutritive value of foods, and consumer and food economics. The research aim is to determine nutrient requirements and how foods can supply these to best assure nutritional well-being of people throughout their lifespan, to provide up-to-date information about food consumption and nutrition of the population, and to develop improved procedures for household preparation, care and preservation of foods which will preserve their nutritional, sanitary, and wholesome quality. The increase requested for 1970 would be used to expand information on the nutrient value of foods, to identify factors contributing to poor nutrition, and to provide guidelines for improvement of programs to better the nutritional well-being of people.

(d) Marketing research.—Practical answers to reduce costs and maintain product quality in moving products from farm to consumer are sought through research. For farm products as they pass through marketing channels, efforts are made to develop safe methods to protect against insect attack, find objective methods to determine quality, reduce losses from waste and spoilage, and improve efficiency in physical handling. The work includes research at each stage of marketing, such as assembly points and storage facilities, and of transportation at terminal or central markets. Research is also concerned with mycotoxins in agricultural products in relation to off-farm handling, conditioning, and storage.

(e) Coordination of departmental and interdepartmental activities related to pests and their control.—The 1970 estimates propose that $100 thousand of the $225 thousand provided for this activity in the 1969 Appropriation Act be continued available for use by the Secretary of Agriculture to meet emergency situations relating to the safe use of pesticides. The project provides for coordination with the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, Department of the Interior, and other agencies of the Federal Government in development of measures to protect the public health, producers, and resources. Of the total reduction of $125 thousand, the 1970 estimates reflect proposed transfers of (1) $58 thousand to the Office of Information for the Department's coordinated pest control information programs, and (2) $50 thousand to the activity pesticides regulation for control and regulatory work related to the registered uses of pesticides, including fungicides and nematocides. The remaining $17 thousand is proposed as a program decrease in 1970.

(f) Construction of facilities.—An increase of $1,685 thousand is requested in 1970 for planning, construction, and improvement of research facilities. Funds totaling $710 thousand are for planning (1) a facility for bluetongue research in one of the Western States, (2) a fruitfly laboratory in the Hawaiian Islands, and (3) additional facilities at the Plum Island Animal Disease Laboratory. Funds totaling $975 thousand are included for construction and capital improvements at the Agricultural Research Center, Beltsville, Md.

(g) Contingencies.—Beginning in 1962, $1 million is available to meet urgent research needs that develop unexpectedly during the year, when such needs cannot be met by redirection of resources from other projects.

2. Plant and animal disease and pest control.—(a) Plant disease and pest control.—Programs are designed to keep out of this country by inspection at ports of entry those harmful insects, plant diseases, nematodes, and other pests that cause great damage to agriculture in other countries. Working with the States, programs are conducted to eradicate or prevent spread of crop pests that become established in this country. Assistance is given to the States to suppress incipient and emergency outbreaks of crop pests when and where they occur. The increase requested for 1970 would be used to increase plant quarantine inspection at ports of entry because of increased travel and shipping and to employ inspectors for the three new satellite terminals at the J. F. Kennedy International Airport in New York.

The level of activities for plant pest control is shown by the selected examples that follow (in thousands):

(b) Animal disease and pest control.—Programs are conducted to keep communicable diseases of foreign origin from entering this country and to prevent the spread of disease through interstate shipments of livestock or distribution of impure or impotent veterinary biologics. Other programs are directed at the control and eradication of livestock diseases. The animal welfare program is concerned with the humane care and handling of certain laboratory animals. The increase requested for 1970 would be used to cooperate with Central America and Panama on foot-and-mouth disease and rinderpest, for new testing material to assure the safety and potency of veterinary biologics, and to increase animal inspection and quarantine at ports of entry to reduce the hazard of introduction of foreign diseases.

Foreign currencies, generated by the sale of surplus agricultural commodities under title I of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended, are used by the Department for market development research under subsection 104(b)(1) and for agricultural and forestry research under subsection 104(b)(3) of the act. Work is carried on through agreements, in both basic and applied fields, by research institutions and organizations in foreign countries. In addition to developing scientific information of great importance to American agriculture, the research under this program is making a contribution to the solution of agricultural production and related problems of the countries in which it operates. Accordingly, it represents an important component in achievement of U.S. foreign policy and technical assistance in the food and agricultural area. It serves to preserve and expand existing markets and develop new ones for agricultural commodities, including cotton, dairy products, fats and oils, grain, feed, livestock and meat, poultry, and fruit and vegetables. It also provides for research supplementary to domestic programs on farm, forest, marketing, utilization, agricultural economics, and human nutrition problems. Specialized projects provide for the translation and dissemination of foreign language scientific publications. The appropriation proposed for 1970 will be used to purchase those currencies determined to be excess to the normal requirements of the United States. Total estimated cost in U.S. dollars (charged to regular appropriations) for program direction and supervision of projects in 1970 is $464 thousand.

The Service administers funds for payments and grants to State agricultural experiment stations and other eligible institutions for the support of research in agriculture, the rural home, the rural community and forestry. This administration involves supervision of the funds, and close advisory relations with the State agricultural experiment stations, schools of forestry and other institutions eligible to receive funds. This agency participates in planning and coordination of research programs among the States and between the States and the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

1. Payments to agricultural experiment stations under the Hatch Act.—Grants under the Hatch Act are allocated to agricultural experiment stations of the land-grant colleges in the 50 States and Puerto Rico for agricultural research including investigations and experiments to promote a permanent and efficient agricultural industry and improvements in the rural home and rural community. In 1970, emphasis will be placed on food and nutrition, community improvement, and pollution research.

2. Grants for cooperative forestry research.—These grants are allocated to land-grant colleges or agricultural experiment stations in the 50 States and Puerto Rico and other State-supported colleges and universities offering graduate training in the sciences basic to forestry and having a forestry school. The act requires that the Federal funds paid to each institution be matched by funds from non-Federal sources for forestry research. In 1970, emphasis will be placed on timber production and forest products utilization research.

3. Contracts and grants for scientific research.—These funds are for the support of grants on specific research problems at nonprofit institutions of higher education or nonprofit organizations whose primary purpose is the conduct of such research. Funding is on a competitive basis. Every research proposal selected for funding must be evaluated and classified as outstanding and appropriate to the needs of the designated problem area.

4. Grants for facilities.—These funds providing additional facilities for research are allocated to State agricultural experiment stations in the 50 States and Puerto Rico. Assistance is available to the States for construction, acquisition, and remodeling of buildings, laboratories, and other capital facilities which are necessary to more effectively conduct research in agriculture and sciences related thereto. The Federal funds are provided on a matching basis.

5. Penalty mail.—Funds to cover the cost of penalty mailings for State agricultural experiment station directors are provided under this appropriation.

6. Federal administration.—A coordinating and review staff is maintained to examine research projects and assist State institutions and Federal agencies.

The primary function of the nationwide system of cooperative extension work is out-of-school applied education in agriculture, home economics, and related subjects. This educational work takes research results, technological advancements, and situation and program facts of the Department of Agriculture, the State agricultural colleges and experiment stations, and incorporates them into a national educational program for action. In its educational role, Cooperative Extension Service interprets, disseminates, and encourages practical use of knowledge. It transmits information from researchers to the people.

1. Payments to States and Puerto Rico.—Funds appropriated under the Smith-Lever Act for payments to States and Puerto Rico are distributed primarily on the basis of farm and rural population and to a limited degree on the basis of special problems and needs. Funds appropriated under the Agricultural Marketing Act for educational work in marketing are distributed to the States and Puerto Rico on a matching basis under approved projects and on the basis of contracts. Funds are used primarily for the employment of State and county extension workers who work with rural families, marketing concerns, and others by providing advice and assistance in the application of improved methods involved in production, marketing, and family living. They assist local leadership to determine extension programs of work. Work with youth is accomplished largely through 4-H clubs. Funds also provide for Federal program support. Extension agents are paid from Federal, State, and county sources. The increase of $2.8 million in this item will be used (1) for assistance to low-income families relating to farming, diets and nutrition,

4-H and youth activities and (2) for programs of training in home counseling, nutrition and youth development to strengthen family units in the District of Columbia. The increase will be distributed on the basis of the formula provisions of the Smith-Lever Act (section 3c) and as authorized by Section 109 of the District of Columbia Public Education Act as amended.

2. Retirement and employees' compensation costs for extension agents.—The increase of $681,500 proposed is required to meet these costs for cooperative extension agents. The mandatory retirement contribution is authorized under Public Law 854, approved July 31, 1956. The employer's contribution to the Federal retirement fund, to match contribution of these agents, is provided by this Federal appropriation.

3. Penalty mail.—Funds to cover the cost of penalty mailings for State extension directors and cooperative extension agents in the States are provided under this appropriation. The increase of $201 thousand proposed is required to meet these costs.

4. Federal Extension Service.—The Federal Extension Service provides leadership, counsel, and assistance to the States and Puerto Rico in developing extension programs, improved teaching methods, efficient use of available resources, evaluation of programs, inservice training for extension personnel, and administrative services. The Federal Extension Service also coordinates the educational activities of other U.S. Department of Agriculture agencies. The increase requested is composed of $101,540 to enter into cooperative agreements with selected State extension services to develop and expand pilot programs for low-income families and $11 thousand for administrative, technical and other services provided by the Federal Extension Service in carrying out the program in the District of Columbia.

Farmer Cooperative Service conducts research, directly advises cooperative leaders and others, promotes cooperative organization and development through other Federal and State agencies, and publishes reports, "News for Farmer Cooperatives," and other education material. This work is aimed (1) to help farmers get better prices for their products and reduce operating expenses, (2) to help rural and small town residents use cooperatives to develop rural resources, (3) to help these cooperatives expand their services and operate more efficiently, and (4) to help all Americans understand the work of these cooperatives. The Agency also administers the Agricultural Fair Practices Act of 1967.

In 1970, the Agency will assist in developing cooperatives to improve the marketing of livestock and eggs, to expand the benefits of the marketing of vegetables, small fruits, and grain to all income groups, and to aid small farmers through joint purchasing and marketing. Experience indicates that these cooperatives can significantly enhance the income and well-being of small farmers who have limited opportunities outside agriculture.

SOIL CONSERVATION SERVICE

The Soil Conservation Service is responsible for various soil and water conservation activities of the Department of Agriculture, including seven action programs for which separate appropriations are made, reimbursements from other agencies for technical services performed, trust funds and miscellaneous accounts involving cooperative agreements with local organizations.

The main purposes of these program operations are to help farmers, ranchers, and other landowners in making needed land use adjustments; to conserve soil, water, and plant resources; to reduce the hazards of floods, sedimentation, and related damages; and to assist in establishing a permanent and economically sound agriculture. Such soil and water conservation treatments also provide for recreational uses of rural lands and the beautification of rural communities. These activities are conducted in cooperation with Federal and State agencies, locally managed conservation districts, and other sponsoring organizations.

The Service provides professional leadership in soil, water, and plant conservation and works directly with locally managed conservation districts and sponsors of watershed projects. Local programs and cooperative work plans are designed for the benefit of rural and urban people in their areas.

The Service also furnishes technical services for the Agricultural Conservation program; the soil and water conservation loans made by the Farmers Home Administration; the State and county rural areas development committees; and other agencies or local groups having soil and water conservation problems. These interrelated program activities are primarily for the conservation, protection, and improvement of land and water resources for the beneficial uses of all people.

(b) Technical assistance to cooperating farmers and ranchers in the planning of conservation programs and installation of needed conservation treatments; (c) Technical programing, design, layout, installation services, and consultation with those practices and measures provided for in farm and ranch conservation plans;

(d) Technical and other assistance with community-type jobs and control measures, including mine-spoil restoration, that can best be solved through coordinated local action; (e) The granting of special equipment to soil conservation districts for use in applying conservation practices; (f) Water supply forecasts prepared from snow surveys in Western States that are useful in making efficient seasonal use of water; (g) The selection and testing of plant materials to determine their suitability for erosion control and conservation purposes; (h) Technical assistance to participants in the agricultural conservation program in establishing specified practices; (i) Technical services to participants in other programs involving land use adjustments; (j) Technical assistance in planning and applying the soil and water conservation practices for which loans are made by the Farmers Home Administration; and (k) Consultative assistance to rural areas development committees.

Combinations of needed soil and water conservation practices are planned together and in relation to each other so as to have well balanced conservation programs in each district and for each farm or ranch. Both vegetative and structural measures are used in accordance with the needs of the land for protection, treatment, and resource improvement. Each plan reflects the decisions of the cooperating farmer or rancher as to how he will use and treat his land.

Technicians of the Soil Conservation Service explain the various soil conditions, develop alternative uses and treatments with each cooperator, help to evaluate the costs and returns of conservation farming, and furnish assistance in applying the needed treatments. Cooperating landowners and operators are providing more than half the cost of practices and measures installed in district programs. Local agencies and private individuals also furnish about one-third of the total installation services used to help cooperators apply soil and water conservation practices in districts throughout the country.

River basin program development and coordination.—Section 6 of Public Law 566, 83d Congress, as amended, authorizes the Department to cooperate with other Federal, State, and local agencies in making surveys and investigations of the watersheds of rivers and other waterways as a basis for the development of coordinated water and related land resource programs. The Department currently is participating in cooperative surveys and investigations in river basins with the Corps of Engineers and other interested Federal and State agencies. It is represented on the Water Resources Council which was established to coordinate water and related land resource activities of Federal departments and agencies. It also maintains representation on four river basin commissions and four river basin interagency committees. These serve as points of contact and coordination between representatives of this Department and of other Federal departments and agencies and the States in these basin areas. They keep all concerned mutually informed of the activities of the member agencies and facilitate matters of interagency coordination. During fiscal year 1969 the Department maintained such representation on committees in the Arkansas-White-Red, Missouri, Pacific Southwest, and Southeast areas.

This Department, together with the other member departments of the Water Resources Council, have jointly considered river basin surveys and investigations currently needed to attain the goal for surveying the river basins of the Nation which was proposed by the Senate Select Committee on National Resources and recommended by the President. Based on this joint consideration, this estimate includes $2,383 thousand to continue these interagency comprehensive surveys during fiscal year 1970; $4,369 thousand to continue other cooperative river basin surveys begun in prior years and to start six additional surveys in cooperation with States; and $1,385 thousand for interregional economic analyses and interagency coordination activities. The estimate also includes $50 thousand for flood hazard analysis.

The following tabulation shows the number of surveys and actual or estimated obligations by type of survey in fiscal years 1968, 1969, and 1970.

The Department cooperates with the States and other agencies in installing works of improvement in small watersheds to reduce damage from floodwater, sediment, and erosion, and for the conservation, development, utilization, and disposal of water. It provides loans to local organizations to help them finance their share of the costs of certain works of improvement.

1. Watershed works of improvement.—The Department provides technical and financial assistance to local organizations to install the watershed works of improvement for watershed protection, flood prevention, agricultural water management, recreation, and fish and wildlife development features specified in the work plans.

(a) Pilot demonstration watersheds.—Sixty-two pilot watersheds were started in 1954 in cooperation with local sponsors under authority of the Act of April 27, 1935 (16 U.S.C. 590 a-f) to demonstrate and evaluate the effectiveness of works of improvement installed in small watersheds for watershed protection and flood prevention. As of June 30, 1968, work had been discontinued in eight projects and completed as planned in 52 except for project evaluation studies which will be underway until 1970 in some of these. The following table shows the current status of the pilot watershed projects. Obligations for project evaluation studies are not reflected in the table subsequent to 1959 as these costs were determined not properly chargeable to projects. Obligations for such studies amount to $74 thousand in 1968 and are estimated at $100 thousand each year in 1969 and 1970.

<sup>1</sup> Includes $1,264,860 for project evaluation studies charged to project costs prior to the fiscal year 1960.

(b) Public Law 566 watersheds.—After local sponsoring organizations have developed watershed work plans with the Department's assistance or with State and local resources, and the projects have been approved as suitable for Federal participation (projects involving an estimated Federal contribution in excess of $250 thousand for construction or any single structure having a capacity in excess of 2,500 acre-feet require congressional approval), technical services and financial assistance are provided for specified works of improvement. On non-Federal lands local sponsoring organizations may contract for construction work or request the SCS to do the contracting for them, operate and maintain the projects, and in the case of multiple-purpose structures, bear a share of construction costs. In addition, local organizations must acquire water rights and furnish land, easements, and rights-of-way for all structural measures except that the Federal Government may pay up to one-half the cost of land, easements, and rights-of-way allocated to public fish and wildlife and recreational developments. Federal agencies do this work on Federal lands which they administer with appropriate contributions being made by the local people who receive benefits.

Preconstruction land treatment and engineering services are furnished to all approved projects before they are advanced to the construction stage. During the preconstruction stage, surveys and investigations are made and detailed designs, specifications, and engineering cost estimates are prepared for construction of structural works; areas are delineated where easements are required, and technical services are furnished for accelerating planning and application of land-treatment measures if provided for in the watershed work plan.

The project construction stage begins with the execution of the first project agreement for construction of works of improvement. Under a project agreement the local sponsoring organization agrees to construct a segment of the project which may consist of an individual or an inter-related group of structures. The agreement obligates the Department to furnish its share of the construction cost. Engineering and other services are provided for the preparation of contracts and inspection of construction. Payments are made to the local contracting organization when they do the contracting in accordance with the project agreement as the work progresses. When a local organization requests the SCS to do the contracting for works of improvement, the SCS makes payments directly to the contractor as work progresses. This will include both amounts financed from Federal funds and contributions received from local organizations for their share of construction cost. Technical assistance in planning and installing land-treatment measures is continued as called for in the watershed work plan.

The following tabulation shows the status of Public Law 566 projects and amounts obligated or estimated to be obligated. The table does not reflect minor obligations for project evaluation studies ($222 thousand cumulatively as of June 30, 1968) for balances remaining in the undistributed equipment account ($504 thousand cumulatively as of June 30, 1968) or for advances for future water supplies ($251 thousand cumulatively as of June 30, 1968).

The following tabulation shows on a national basis the status of projects by category of assistance provided, and funds obligated in 1968 and programmed for obligations in 1969 and 1970 on the basis of available funds.

2. Loan services.—Loans are made to local sponsoring organizations to finance the local cost of installing works of improvement in approved watershed projects. Repayment with interest is required within 50 years after the principal benefits of improvements become available. Loans will be made from prior year unobligated balances of $355 thousand and an additional $3 million will be available in 1969 and $5 million in 1970 from the Direct Loan Account of the Farmers Home Administration. Loan services related to processing and making loans will be financed from new obligational authority available in this appropriation.

1. Works of improvement.—The Department cooperates with soil conservation districts and other local organizations in planning and installing works of improvement for flood prevention and for furthering the conservation, development, utilization, and disposal of water in the 11 watersheds authorized by the Flood Control Act of 1944. One of these, Buffalo Creek, New York, was completed in 1964. The Federal Government shares in the cost of works of improvement for flood prevention, agricultural water management, recreation, and fish and wildlife development facilities.

The Department furnishes additional technical and in certain instances financial assistance to landowners to accelerate planning and installation of land treatment measures for runoff retardation, sediment control, and water management. Local sponsoring organizations must furnish all land, easements, and rights-of-way, water rights, and the entire cost of works of improvement for nonagricultural water management measures, except those for fish and wildlife development and recreation, and operate and maintain all completed works of improvement.

2. Loan services.—Loans are made to local organizations to help finance their share of the costs of planned works of improvement. Repayment with interest is required within 50 years after the principal benefits of improvements first become available. Loans from this appropriation will be made in 1969 from the $1.9 million in unobligated balances carried over from prior years. Additional loans if needed in 1969 and in 1970 may be made from the Direct Loan Account of the Farmers Home Administration.

<sup>2</sup> Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1967; $28,895 thousand; 1968, $27,650 thousand; 1969, $29,650 thousand; 1970, $28,800 thousand.

This program provides cost-sharing assistance and technical services to participating farmers and ranchers in the development and installation of long-term conservation plans for their land. It is a voluntary program which supplements other conservation programs of the Department in 421 designated counties of 10 Great Plains States. Cost-sharing contracts with individual landowners extend over periods of 3 to 10 years and include a plan of conservation operations for each farm or ranch.

The primary purpose of this program is to achieve needed land use adjustments, conservation treatments, and economic stability when the contracted work is installed within specific time schedules. The needs for technical help increase over a period of years as more participants enter the program. This increasing workload is in two parts; namely: (a) assistance to new participants in preparing long-term contracts; and (b) installation services in accordance with the terms and period of time specified in each contract.

MAIN WORKLOAD FACTORS

Program participants:	1968 actual	1969 estimate	1970 estimate
New contracts during year.....	3,227	4,250	3,000
Active contracts end of year (net of terminations).....	18,732	19,482	18,800

As of June 30, 1968, there was a backlog of 5,019 unserved applications pending, and a total of 18,732 farmers and ranchers were cooperating in this cost-share program. Cooperating landowners finance the entire cost of installing recurring management type practices and pay a specified part of the cost-shared practices installed on their land.

Program regulations provide that cost-share rates offered in any contract shall not exceed 80% of the average cost of installing each eligible practice within the designated county. The rate of cost-sharing varies among practices and between States due to differences in average costs for installation. Federal cost-sharing is further limited to $2,500 for the construction, enlarging, or deepening of any dam, pit, or pond for irrigation water; and to not more than $2,500 for irrigation practices in any one contract, or one-fourth of the total Federal obligation, whichever is larger. There is also a cost-sharing limitation of $25 thousand for any contract.

Each participant who signs a Great Plains program contract is responsible for installing his plan of operations; and the Department is committed to furnish the necessary technical help needed for design, layout, and other services. Cooperating farmers and ranchers are encouraged to make use of other available assistance under local, State and Federal programs as a means of further improving their land and water resources.

The Department cooperates with other Federal agencies, States, local units of government, groups and individuals in developing and carrying out programs and plans for resource conservation and development on private lands and shares in the cost of installing planned project measures, when justified as a public need. Loans are provided to local sponsoring organizations and to individuals, when needed to help them finance their share of the cost of certain measures which are in the public interest.

Technical assistance is provided in each project area approved for planning to help sponsoring organizations prepare overall plans for resource conservation and development. Project measures planned will contribute to improvement in the economy of the area and to needed land use adjustments. Project plans are expected to be finished and operations begun in 44 areas by June 30, 1969. Completion of the seven project plans started in 1969 and the 12 project plans initiated in 1970 will bring the number of projects in operation by June 30, 1970, to 63.

Each project authorized for operations is provided technical assistance to help cooperating groups and individuals plan and install land treatment measures for which no cost-shares are paid from this appropriation; to design and supervise installation of project measures; and, to assist the preparation of plans for resource development and economic improvement within project areas.

The main workload factors in 1970 include:

- (a) Assistance to local sponsors in developing suitable plans.
- (b) Operations in 63 project areas for which plans will have been completed.
- (c) Acceleration of project measure installation expected to be made possible by additional State and local funds.

Field work under this program consists, primarily, of planning, designing, and supervision of installation of project measures and conservation practices, the purpose of which is to develop or improve the economic use of natural resources. This includes recreation facilities and income-producing enterprises where needed and based on proper land use. Investigations, surveys and planning are prerequisite to the operating phase of this program. Financial contributions, loans, and other Federal assistance are used to help plan and install project measures as specified in work plans.

Local sponsoring organizations are expected to provide about $20 million of non-Federal funds for project operations during 1970. This is an average of $450 thousand per operating project.

Loans are made to local organizations to help finance their share of the costs of installing project measures. The unobligated balance of loan funds carried forward to 1969 will be obligated for loans in 1969. Additional funds will be available for loans from the Direct Loan Account of the Farmers Home Administration.

Agricultural economics research in the Department is administered by the Economic Research Service. The results of the research program are relied upon by (a) producers, dealers, importers and exporters as aids in planning the most profitable adjustments in their operations, (b) Government agencies in formulating and administering agricultural programs, and (c) Congress in considering agricultural legislation.

1. Farm economics.—Research is conducted to measure, appraise, and analyze on a continuing basis, economic changes that occur in farming and in the use of human and natural rural resources and to indicate needed adjustments.

Research on the economics of farm production includes the economics of organization and management of farms; adjustments in production to prospective demands, and changing technologies; appraisals of costs and returns on farms representative of important types, sizes and locations, and the appraisal of costs of producing important commodities; development of measures of farm output and productivity; problems of farm size and capital requirements; financing of farm enterprises; and appraisal of alternative agricultural production policies and programs.

Natural resources economics is concerned with the economics of use, conservation, development, management, and control of natural resources and their relationship to economic activity. It includes economic analysis of land and water resources, resource institutions, and the economic and social conditions affecting use of resources.

Economic development is focused upon the well-being and opportunities of rural people. It includes a broad research program on economic development of rural areas, opportunities and employment of rural people and factors affecting them, including local governments and other organizations. Special attention is given to the poor who are found in heavy concentrations among rural people.

The increase requested in 1970 would permit development of economic indicators of change in the rural economy.

2. Marketing economics.—This activity covers economic aspects of marketing farm products, including the nature of farmers' bargaining power; potentials for new products and new uses; market structure, costs and margins; the economic effects of school feeding programs, food stamp, and direct food distribution programs.

3. Domestic and foreign economic analysis.—Domestic economic analysis is concerned with identifying, measuring, and analyzing: (1) the factors affecting demand, supply, and price of agricultural commodities; (2) relationships between agriculture and the national economy; (3) farm income and the income of the farm population; (4) demand and consumption of farm products; (5) long-term projections of economic growth and demand for farm products; and (6) historical developments in the policies, programs, and organization of the Department.

Foreign economic analysis includes trade studies and investigation of supply-demand relationships. The trade and market studies focus on the problems of developing foreign markets and the effect of these developments on U.S. agricultural production. Research is carried on for more than 100 countries around the world, focusing on the forces affecting supply, demand, and trade in farm products, and their impact on U.S. agricultural exports.

The Service administers programs relating to crop and livestock estimates and statistical research and service. The statistical and economic data developed on food and agriculture are essential to farmers, processors, and handlers in making production and marketing decisions, and to legislators, administrators, and others concerned with developing and administering agricultural programs. The basic data provided by this service are also essential to economic analysis and other agricultural research programs.

1. Crop and livestock estimates.—This service provides the official estimates on this Nation's agriculture, including acreage, yield, and production of crops, stocks, and value of farm commodities, numbers, and inventory value of livestock items. Data collected and published on prices paid and received by farmers are basic to computation of parity prices. Data on approximately 150 crop and livestock products are covered in some 700 reports issued each year. The activity is conducted through 44 State offices serving 50 States, most of which are operated as joint State and Federal services. Cooperative arrangements with State agencies provide a considerable volume of additional State and county data which would not be collected or made available from Federal funds. During 1968, cooperating States expended an estimated $2.8 million of their own funds on these associated State programs. A comparison of activity data for 1967 and 1968, including work performed under cooperative arrangements is as follows:

	1967 actual	1968 preliminary
Separate mailings of inquiry forms, average per field office.....	414	428
Total questionnaires handled:
Number distributed.....	9,240,000	8,980,000
Number of returns tabulated.....	2,800,000	2,700,000
Number of objective survey contacts (measurements and interviews).....	232,000	240,000
Number of official reports issued, all offices.....	10,500	10,500
Copies of reports distributed.....	16,300,000	16,290,000
Publications distributed.....	3,570,000	3,470,000
Special requests for information answered by field offices.....	77,200	74,100

The increase for 1970 provides for quarterly probability surveys for estimated farm stocks of grains in 12 north-central States.

2. Statistical research and service.—This work includes review of all statistical forms, survey plans, and reporting and recordkeeping requirements originating in the Department and requiring Bureau of the Budget approval; liaison for coordination of statistics within the Department and with other statistical agencies; development of new and improved methods and techniques, and providing technical consulting services to other agencies of the Department; research on and development of sampling, forecasting, and other basic statistical techniques and methods to improve the crop and livestock estimates of the Department; use of and consultation on automatic data processing to develop and adopt this medium for improving the accuracy and timeliness of crop and livestock estimates; and conduct of special surveys relating to the marketing of agricultural products. A comparison of activity data for 1967 and 1968 is as follows:

Statistical forms-reports (Federal Reports Act): Departmental clearance and review for submission to Bureau of the Budget.....	451	475
Improvement of crop and livestock estimating methods: Number of research projects.....	7	7
Special surveys: Number of research projects.....	10	10

The 1970 budget reflects an increase to improve the crop and livestock estimates of the Department.

These activities provide consumer protection through inspection for wholesomeness of meat and poultry products. They assist producers and handlers of agricultural commodities through various marketing and regulatory services. These services continue to expand and become more complex as the volume of agricultural commodities increases, as a greater number of new processed commodities are developed, and as the market structure undergoes dramatic changes. These marketing changes include increased concentration in food retailing, direct buying, decentralization of processing, growth of interregional competition, vertical integration, and contract farming. The individual activities include:

1. Market news service.—This service provides current information on supply, movement, and prices at specific markets for practically all agricultural commodities. This day-to-day market information enables American farmers to determine where and when to sell and at what price. The information is collected and disseminated at year-round and seasonal offices maintained in more than 140 cities and towns, often with local and other support and cooperation, generally from State departments of agriculture. Dissemination is made primarily by radio, television, and mimeographed reports. The volume of work performed is indicated by examples given in the following table:

2. Inspection, grading, classing, and standardization.—
(a) Meat inspection.—Federal meat inspection is required for all meat and meat products moving in interstate and foreign commerce to assure a clean and wholesome meat supply for human consumption, free from adulteration, and truthfully labeled. The work includes inspection of animals, carcasses, meat, and meat-food products at various stages of handling and processing. Measures are enforced to assure informative labeling, and that meats imported or exported are inspected. The Federal program also provides financial and technical assistance to States for improving the quality of their inspection programs. The estimates for 1970 include increases to provide for inspection of additional plants and expanded facilities in presently inspected plants, and for the Wholesome Meat Act of 1967, including financial assistance to States.

The volume of inspections and examinations is indicated by examples given in the following table:

(b) Poultry inspection.—Inspection of poultry meat and poultry meat products for wholesomeness is provided pursuant to the Poultry Products Inspection Act of 1957, as amended. All poultry processed in plants shipping in interstate or foreign commerce is required to be inspected both before and after slaughter. Birds found to be unfit for human consumption are condemned and removed from channels of trade. The Federal program also provides financial and technical assistance to States for improving the quality of their inspection programs.

The increase for 1970 provides for inspection of an anticipated increased volume of poultry and poultry products and for the Wholesome Poultry Products Act of 1968, including financial assistance to States. The volume of work performed is indicated by examples given in the following table:

(c) All other (inspection, grading, classing, and standardization).—Nationally uniform standards of quality for agricultural products are established and applied to specific lots of products to promote confidence between buyers and sellers; reduce hazards in marketing due to misunderstandings and disputes arising from the use of nonstandard descriptions; encourage better preparation of uniform quality products for market; and furnish consumers with more definite information on the quality of products they buy. The standards are applied by or under the supervision of Federal employees at the request of any interested party, and generally for a fee. Approximately 78% of the total cost of this work was offset by fees and other revenue in 1968.

Legislation is being proposed to repeal the Naval Stores and Wool Standards Acts resulting in a reduction of $87 thousand in appropriated funds for 1970. The volume of work performed is indicated by examples given in the following tables:

3. Regulatory activities.—These include the administration of regulatory laws such as the U.S. Warehouse and Federal Seed Acts to assure fair play in the marketplace, to protect producers and handlers of agricultural commodities from financial loss due to careless or fraudulent marketing practices, and preserve free and open competition in the marketing of farm products. Assistance is also provided to farmers and others in obtaining and maintaining equitable and reasonable transportation rates and services on farm products and supplies. The Cotton Research and Promotion Act is designed to improve the competitive position and expand markets for cotton through a program of self-assessment by cotton producers.

The increase for 1970 is for additional work on transportation services in connection with rate structures for shipments of agricultural commodities. Legislation is being proposed to repeal the Naval Stores Act and the Tobacco Seed and Plant Exportation Act resulting in a total reduction of $26 thousand for 1970.

In 1968 this work was carried on in 44 States and 171 work projects.

The supplemental appropriation will provide $1,000 thousand for development of cooperative Federal-State inspection programs as authorized by the Wholesome Poultry Products Act of 1968, Public Law 90-492. An additional $350 thousand will be needed and it is proposed that it be transferred from the meat inspection program. The merger of the meat and poultry inspection programs has resulted in savings of $350 thousand which are available for this transfer.

Payments are made on a matching fund basis to State marketing agencies for carrying out specifically approved marketing service programs designed to bring about improved marketing. Under this activity marketing specialists work with farmers, marketing firms, and agencies in solving marketing problems and in putting to use marketing research results.

This program covers such projects as methods of maintaining and improving the quality of products, ways of reducing marketing costs, expanding outlets for surplus products, collecting and disseminating special State and local market information and statistics, and improving the organizational structure of the marketing system. Through this cooperative approach, the Federal Government's leadership and money are coupled with State resources and experience to aid in the solution of the most urgent local and area marketing problems.

1. Cash payments to States.—This program is designed to increase the consumption of fluid milk by children in nonprofit schools of high school grade and under, child-care centers, summer camps, and similar nonprofit institutions. The program will be terminated at the end of fiscal year 1969 as new programs for feeding complete meals to schoolchildren are greatly expanded. Most of these meals will include milk.

Funds are provided under letters of credit to State agencies to reimburse eligible participants for a part of the cost of the fluid milk consumed. Based upon available funds, and prior year participation, initial reserves were established for each State for reimbursement payments through fiscal year 1967. Beginning in fiscal year 1968, available funds are apportioned among the States on the basis of payments made to schools and child-care institutions for program reimbursement during the preceding fiscal year.

In especially needy schools, reimbursement payments are being made for the full cost of this milk for children who are unable to pay. In fiscal year 1970, funds will be made available under section 32 to finance milk to needy children in schools without lunch facilities.

The school lunch, child nutrition, and special food service programs, and additional section 32 funds aid in financing all child feeding. These programs are directed at providing complete meals and food supplements, including milk. Expansion of these programs proposed in 1970 will result in increased milk consumption with the additional meals to be served. This eliminates the necessity for a separate special milk program appropriation. It is proposed to terminate the special milk program as a separate program at the end of fiscal year 1969, and confine any milk-only assistance that is necessary in schools without lunch facilities to a partial year in 1970 until arrangements can be made for serving lunches.

Program activities from 1967 through 1969 are as follows:

The primary objective of the child nutrition programs is to make the best possible nutrition available to every child, regardless of the economic condition of the child's family or the local district. Special emphasis is directed toward reaching needy children in low-income areas in schools, child-care centers, settlement houses, recreation centers, and similar nonprofit institutions devoted to the care and training of children. These programs also contribute to a second major objective, to increase farm income by expanding agricultural markets.

These programs are authorized by the National School Lunch Act, as amended, and the Child Nutrition Act of 1966, as amended.

1. Cash payments to States.—The programs are operated under an agreement entered into by the State educational agency and the Department of Agriculture. Funds are advanced under letters of credit to State agencies for use in reimbursing participating schools and child-care institutions. Sponsors make application to the State agency and if accepted are reimbursed in accordance with the terms of their agreement.

(a) School lunch program.—Food assistance, in the form of both funds and food, is provided to the States, as defined in the National School Lunch Act, in serving lunches to schoolchildren. Each State's portion of the funds available is determined by a statutory formula. The formula takes into account the participation rate in the State, and the relationship between the per capita income of the State and the average U.S. per capita income. States must match the Federal cash grant from sources within the State at a $3-to-$1 ratio, except for States with below-average per capita income the ratio is decreased.

In 1968, the States contributed to this program over $1,428 million, most of which came from children's payments. This was far in excess of the statutory matching requirement of $3 for each Federal dollar of cash payment.

The program during the peak month in 1968 provided lunches to about 36.7% of the approximately 51.2 million schoolchildren in the country. The number of lunches served increased approximately 1.6% over 1967. Participation in the program in December 1967 reached 18.8 million children in 71,983 schools and an appreciable increase is expected in 1969 and 1970.

(b) Special assistance.—Section 11 of the National School Lunch Act provides for special assistance to schools drawing attendance from needy families for serving free or reduced-price lunches. The legislation carries carefully prescribed criteria as to the eligibility of these schools, and also a special formula for the apportionment of these funds among the States.

In fiscal year 1968, about 800 schools were designated to serve lunches at special assistance rates. About 185 thousand children in these schools were served 37 million lunches. The goal for 1970 is to provide lunches for every needy child in the country by year end.

(c) School breakfast program.—The Child Nutrition Act of 1966 authorized a school breakfast program for 2 years on a pilot basis to assist States through grants-in-aid and other means to initiate, maintain, or expand non-profit breakfast programs in schools. Public Law 90-302, approved May 8, 1968, extended the breakfast program through 1971.

Funds are apportioned to States by a statutory formula. While the basic payments are limited to food assistance, in circumstances of severe need financial assistance may be authorized up to 80% of the operating costs. Applicant schools must provide justification of the need for additional assistance.

The program is operated in schools drawing attendance from areas in which poor economic conditions exist and where a substantial portion of the children enrolled travel long distances. In fiscal year 1968, programs operated in schools in 47 States, the District of Columbia, and Puerto Rico.

About 70% of the breakfasts were served free or at token charges to children.

By the end of fiscal year 1969, it is estimated that the program will be operating in some 1,500 schools with about 200 thousand children participating.

(d) Nonfood assistance program.—The Child Nutrition Act of 1966 authorized a permanent program to assist the States through grants-in-aid and other means to supply schools in low-income areas with food service equipment, other than land or buildings.

Applicant schools are required to justify their need for assistance on a project basis, and to submit a detailed description of the equipment to be acquired and their proposals for its use in meeting the nutritional needs of children. In addition, State and local sources must bear 25% of the cost of equipment or facilities financed under this authority.

In fiscal year 1968 about 755 schools in 49 States, the District of Columbia, Guam, and American Samoa, serving meals to some 191,488 children received equipment assistance of about $744 thousand. In 126 of these schools, no food service had been available prior to receiving equipment funds.

In order to provide nutritious meals, many schools in the country must be provided funds for equipment. In 1969, the funds provided will reach about 500 schools. The increase for 1970 would be sufficient to provide equipment for 1,000 schools at an average contribution of $10 thousand a school.

(e) State administrative expenses.—The Child Nutrition Act of 1966, as amended, provides for advances to each State educational agency for administrative expenses. These funds are to be used for supervising and giving technical assistance to the local school districts and service institutions for the administration of additional activities undertaken by them to extend the school lunch special assistance, school breakfast, nonfood assistance programs, and the nonschool food program to reach more needy children.

(f) Nonschool food program.—The National School Lunch Act was amended in 1968 to authorize a pilot program for 3 years to assist States through grants-in-aid and other means, to initiate, maintain, or expand non-profit food service programs for children in service institutions. These programs will reach pre-school and school-age children during the summer months in settlement houses, neighborhood houses, and recreation centers, and provide year-round assistance in child day-care centers.

Each State may receive a basic grant of not more than $50 thousand. The remaining funds will be apportioned by a formula to be determined by the ratio of the number of children aged 3 to 17, inclusive, from families with income under $3 thousand per year in each State, compared to the total number of such children in all States. Up to 80% of the total cost of meals served may be paid in cases of severe need, and not more than 75% of the equipment costs may be paid to the institutions. All meals served must meet minimum nutritional standards as a condition for receiving assistance. This new program is being initiated in 1969.

2. Commodity procurement.—Commodity procurement under section 6 of the National School Lunch Act provides additional commodities to schools to supplement foods purchased locally for the lunch program. Section 6 procurement helps to insure nutritionally adequate lunches and appreciation for quality foods. It also broadens agricultural markets. Commodities are purchased by the Department on the basis of their nutritional value and acceptability to schools.

Protein items of chicken and meat accounted for two-thirds of the purchases in fiscal year 1968. The remaining one-third was fruits and vegetables. In fiscal year 1969 frozen ground pork, chicken, and fruits and vegetables are being purchased. Section 6 procurement is being financed with funds transferred from section 32, Removal of Surplus Agricultural Commodities.

Commodities acquired under price support and surplus removal programs are available to schools and child-care institutions. The volume of surplus commodities distributed depends upon market conditions.

During 1968 about $1,161 million worth of agricultural commodities and other foods were used. About 24% of this amount represented commodities contributed under section 6 and the Federal surplus removal and price support programs. Over 76% was purchased through local suppliers.

3. Operating expenses.—Administrative and technical assistance is furnished to State agencies, participating schools and child-care institutions. Policies, procedures, and standards are developed for administering the programs and determining eligibility. The programs are administered directly in private schools where the State educational agency is prohibited by law from disbursing funds and in child-care institutions where no State agency has assumed the responsibility for administering the program.

Participation in the programs from 1967 through 1970 are as follows:

<sup>2</sup> Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders, 1967, $1,069 thousand; 1968, $204 thousand; 1969, $204 thousand; 1970, $204 thousand.

This program aims at providing increased nutrition to households with limited resources and, thus, at making more effective use of our food abundance. Food coupons which may be used in retail stores for the purchase of commercial brand foods are issued to needy households that qualify to participate. The program is inaugurated at the request of State welfare agencies and these agencies are responsible for certification and coupons issuance functions.

The Department determines the allotment of coupons for each household unit, including the portion to be purchased, based on income, food needs, and other factors. The participant's normal food expenditure is maintained by the purchase requirement. The supplement or bonus coupons, provided free of charge, permit the family to upgrade its diet.

Coupons are issued by a non-Federal issuing office. Cash paid for the coupons by participants is deposited periodically in a designated Federal depository. Food stores receive cash or credit for the coupons from any commercial bank, which must accept them at face value. The coupons then flow through regular banking channels to the Federal Reserve banks where they are redeemed.

The Food Stamp Act of 1964 was amended on October 8, 1968, to provide appropriation authority of $315 million for fiscal year 1969, $340 million for fiscal 1970, and $170 million for the first 6 months of fiscal 1971.

The $280 million appropriated for 1969 will finance expansion into new areas and some program modifications. Recent evaluations and reviews have indicated the need to reduce the amount of cash required of recipients, and the total amount of coupons issued per participant is not high enough to cover the full cost of a low cost adequate diet. Planned program improvements for the lowest income families would lower the participants' cash requirement level and in addition provide an increase in the total coupons issued. It is anticipated that a participation level of about 3.6 million would be reached by June 30, 1969. An increase of $60 million will be needed in 1970 to cover the full-year costs of the June 30, 1969 level plus expansion into new areas in 1970.

The following table reflects coverage, participation, and costs for fiscal years 1962 (the first full year of operation of the pilot program) and 1968, and estimates for 1969 and 1970 (dollars in millions):

Under section 32 of the act of August 24, 1935, as amended (7 U.S.C. 612c), an amount equal to 30% of customs receipts collected during each calendar year (except for an amount equal to 30% of such receipts collected on fishery products transferred to the Department of the Interior to encourage the distribution of fishery products), plus unused balances up to $300 million are available for expanding domestic and foreign market outlets for farm commodities. As provided in recent appropriation acts, transfers have been made from this fund primarily to the school lunch program for the purchase and distribution of agricultural commodities and the special milk program to cover the full or partial cost of milk served to schoolchildren. Section 32 funds are also authorized for the administration of marketing agreements and orders. The basic legislation provides that funds devoted to any one commodity or product thereof must not exceed 25% of funds available. It also provides that the funds must be devoted principally to perishable agricultural commodities other than those receiving price support under title II of the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended. It has been determined that this provision can be legally satisfied by setting aside or reserving the principal portion of section 32 funds for the use of perishable nonbasic agricultural commodities.

1. Commodity program payments are of four types: (a) Direct purchases are donated to schools, summer camps, child-care centers, nonprofit institutions serving needy persons, persons certified by welfare as eligible for relief, and disaster victims; (b) Diversion payments enable processors to purchase surplus commodities on the domestic market, divert them to byproducts and new uses, and sell them at prices comparable to competing products, thus creating new markets for surplus commodities; (c) Export payments enable exporters to purchase surplus commodities on the domestic market and sell them on the world market at competitive world prices; (d) Production payments, none of which were made in 1968, help to reestablish farmers' purchasing power. During the past 2 years, assistance under these programs was given to the following commodity groups (in millions of dollars):

Dairy products.....		9.1
Eggs and poultry.....	4.3	44.6
Fats and oils.....	25.8	9.6
Fruits and vegetables.....	38.0	24.7
Grains.....	5.3	10.6
Livestock products.....	93.9	58.0
Peanut butter.....	6.4	10.9
Miscellaneous.....	.5	1.8
Total.....	174.2	169.3

The use of section 32 program funds is contingent upon marketing conditions. The estimates for both 1969 and 1970 reflect the foreseeable needs for perishables and other activities regularly financed with section 32 funds. If troublesome surpluses not now foreseen should develop, steps will be taken to use additional available funds for their removal or diversion as conditions might warrant.

Funds are being used to develop and implement a cost-sharing program whereby financial assistance is offered to selected low-income counties to enable those with inadequate resources to distribute food to needy families. The Department provides for the certification and distribution of food to needy families in selected counties where local governmental agencies are unwilling or unable to operate food distribution programs. Additional cost-sharing arrangements are proposed in 1969 to improve existing programs which are locally financed.

The Department purchased six additional items—a fortified milk drink, evaporated milk, fruit juices, canned vegetables, canned chicken, and corn syrup—for distribution in 1968 to needy persons, and other items are being considered in 1969. With the addition of these products, the foods in the commodity donation program will provide over three-fourths of the daily requirement of each of the eight basic nutritional elements.

Working with the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare and the Office of Economic Opportunity, the Department is developing a distribution system to provide special food packages for infants, young children, and expectant and new mothers.

2. The special feeding program was initiated in 1969 to meet the urgent need for providing additional foods to needy children and adults who are determined to be suffering from general and continued hunger. The funds provided will be channeled primarily through the child feeding programs authorized by the School Lunch and Child Nutrition Acts. Funds are included in the 1970 request to finance a milk program for needy children in schools without food services.

3. Surplus removal operating expenses occur mainly in connection with purchasing, diverting, and exporting surplus commodities, and in distributing section 32 and Commodity Credit Corporation commodities to eligible outlets. Distribution in 1968, including that under section 6 of the National School Lunch Act, is summarized below (in millions):

Distribution	Number of recipients (peak month)	Value of commodities distributed	Pounds of commodities distributed
By recipients:
Schoolchildren.....	21.1	$276.1	1,026.8
Needy persons.....	3.5	124.0	723.2

In cooperation with the food trade, press, and radio, greater consumption of abundant foods is encouraged through publication of a monthly plentiful foods list and conducting various food drives. In 1968 the monthly plentiful foods list contained an average of six foods. Seven national and ten area, State, and local drives were conducted.

4. Marketing agreements and orders are put into effect upon request of producers or handlers after hearings and investigations, and upon approval of producers (and handlers in the case of marketing agreements). They help to stabilize prices, and benefit producers and consumers by establishing and maintaining orderly marketing conditions. Administration at the local level is financed by assessment upon handlers. On June 30, 1968, there were in effect 73 orders for milk, 47 agreements and orders for tree fruits, nuts, and vegetables, and one order for shade grown tobacco. The expenses of advisory committees established to advise the Secretary, public hearings, referenda to determine producer sentiment, and other developmental work as authorized by the Agricultural Act of 1961 are also financed under this project. Legislation will be requested for payment of approximately $3 million of the Federal administrative costs of this program by producers and handlers.

5. The food and nutrition aids program was initiated in December 1968 for educational work among low income groups to achieve more effective utilization of surplus agricultural commodities. The funds provided will be distributed by the Federal Extension Service to the State extension services to employ the home-maker aides who in turn will work directly with the low income people to use information, knowledge and skills to enable them to utilize all resources toward the achievement of a nutritionally adequate diet.

License fees are deposited in this special fund and are used to meet costs of administering the Perishable Agricultural Commodities and the Produce Agency Acts (7 U.S.C. 491-497, 499a-499s). The law provides that annual license fees may be set at a maximum of $50. Effective January 1, 1969, the fee was increased from $42 to $50.

The acts are intended to assure equitable treatment to farmers and others in the marketing of fresh and frozen fruits and vegetables. Commission merchants, dealers, and brokers handling these products in interstate and foreign commerce are licensed. Complaints of violations are investigated and violations dealt with by (a) informal agreements between the two parties, (b) formal decisions involving payment of reparation awards, and (c) suspension or revocation of license and/or publication of the facts.

Legislation authorizing an increase in license fees is being proposed.

<sup>1</sup> Administrative fund totals are comprised of 74 separate independent order accounts in fiscal year 1968, including one which has been terminated. The Marketing Service fund totals are comprised of 65 separate independent order accounts in fiscal year 1968, including one which has been terminated.

The Secretary of Agriculture is authorized by the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, as amended—under certain conditions—to issue Federal milk marketing orders establishing minimum prices which handlers are required to pay for milk purchased from producers.

Market administrators are responsible for carrying out locally the terms of specific marketing orders. Their operating expenses, partly financed by assessments on regulated handlers and partly by deductions from producers, are reported in these schedules. These funds are collected locally, deposited in local banks, and disbursed directly by the market administrator.

Each milk order is administered locally by a market administrator who is appointed by the Secretary. His staff is employed directly by the market administrator.

The activities conducted in the local office are concerned primarily with monthly computations and public announcement of class and uniform blend prices, associated butterfat differentials, examination of handlers records and facilities to verify their reports and payments to producers, and in checking weights and tests of producer milk.

The expenses of each local office are met from an administrative fund and a marketing service fund which are prescribed in each order. The administrative fund is derived from prorated handler assessments. The marketing service fund of the individual order provides for the expense of disseminating market information to producers who are not members of a qualified cooperative. It also provides for the verification of the weights, sampling, and testing of milk from these producers. The cost of these services is borne by such producers.

The maximum rates for administrative assessment and for marketing services are set forth in each order and adjustments below these rates are made from time to time upon recommendations by the market administrator and upon approval of the Consumer and Marketing Service to provide reserves at about a 6-month operating level. Upon termination of any order, the statute provides for distributing the proceeds from net assets pro rata to contributing handlers or producers as the case may be.

Milk sold by regulated handlers supplied about 104 million persons in calendar year 1967.

The following table gives an indication of the growing role of Federal orders on the marketing of milk over the past few years.

The Foreign Agricultural Service helps American agriculture to maintain and expand foreign markets for its products and reports foreign developments as a guide to American agricultural production, policies, and programs.

(a) The agency helps to develop foreign markets for U.S. farm products through aggressive market promotion under special export programs and through active work to remove international trade barriers that inhibit export sales.

(b) The agency maintains a worldwide agricultural intelligence and reporting service that enables American agriculture to carry out its production, policies, and programs in the context of world developments. This is done through a continuous program of analyzing and reporting foreign agricultural production, markets, and policies.

1. International trade.—The Service directs and coordinates Department responsibilities in international trade agreement programs and negotiations, utilizing authority of the Trade Expansion Act. It identifies and seeks to reduce foreign barriers to U.S. agricultural exports. It continuously examines and reports on developments in foreign trade policies which affect U.S. agricultural trade and operations and recommends courses of action.

The Service recommends Department positions and participates in negotiations on trade agreements and international commodity agreements. It continuously reviews and reports trade regulations of countries signatory to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade as such regulations affect the movement of U.S. farm products in world trade.

It administers a program of import controls in accordance with section 22 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act as amended, and is responsible for administering any import controls established under the beef import control legislation of 1964.

2. Agricultural attachés.—The Service maintains agricultural attachés at 60 foreign posts. These attachés assist in the development of markets abroad for U.S. agricultural commodities, working closely with numerous U.S. agricultural trade groups. They maintain continuous contacts with foreign governments in the interest of obtaining more favorable import treatment for American farm products. They carry out a comprehensive schedule of reporting foreign agricultural production, marketing, and trade policy developments as a means of keeping U.S. agriculture, industry, and Government currently informed.

3. Export programs.—The Service carries out export programs (a) to expand commercial sales of all U.S. farm products in world markets and (b) under the Public Law 480 program, to sell and ship U.S. farm products to less developed countries under long-term dollar credit sales and under foreign currency sales. About four-fifths of U.S. agricultural exports are commercial sales for dollars. The Service works with over 60 U.S. agricultural producer and trade groups in over 70 countries in carrying out commercial sales promotion programs under cooperative agreements. Such programs are jointly financed. Contributions from the Service come from foreign currencies received in payment for commodities sold under title I of Public Law 480.

Almost one-fifth of U.S. agricultural exports move under Public Law 480 and other Government programs, largely sales for foreign currencies and credit sales for dollars. The Service develops these sales agreements with governments of friendly foreign countries and with private trade entities. The Service is responsible for export shipment of the commodities and for assurance that such commodities actually are received and utilized in the importing countries. Also the Service is responsible for initiating and programming contracts involving the donation of surplus food commodities made available to voluntary and intergovernmental agencies that operate in over 100 countries of the world.

4. Commodity programs.—Information essential to domestic planning and to foreign marketing of specific U.S. farm commodities is obtained, analyzed, and made available to U.S. farm and trade groups and to Government.

Foreign agricultural competition similarly is analyzed and reported. Marketing programs, in which producers, exporters, and Government officials participate, are developed to maintain and expand the foreign market for U.S. farm products. Assistance is given to U.S. trade representatives in negotiations with foreign officials. Assistance is given to American exporters and foreign importers to bring them together under conditions favorable to trade.

5. Barter and stockpiling.—The Service, in cooperation with other Government agencies, conducts a barter program designed to utilize agricultural commodities, in lieu of dollars, in acquiring from other countries, goods, materials, equipment and services required by other Government agencies and for the national and supplemental stockpiles.

6. General sales management.—The Service administers a general sales program to develop export sales and related pricing policies and programs. The program includes price and quality review. Foreign market data such as rates on rail, truck, and ocean freight, together with commodity prices and stocks, and other market information is collected for use in program development. Information concerning prices and other sales terms, sales programs, and commodity availabilities is furnished to U.S. exporters, foreign importers, and foreign government officials.

Market development projects.—Foreign currencies generated by the sale of agricultural commodities under title I of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended, as well as foreign currencies acquired by the United States from other sources, are used by the Foreign Agricultural Service to develop new foreign markets and expand existing markets for U.S. agricultural commodities, including cotton, dairy products, fats and oils, grain, feed, livestock and meat, poultry, fruits and vegetables, and tobacco.

The type of market development projects being carried out include sales promotion campaigns, trade fairs and exhibits, nutrition demonstrations, and market analyses. In 1970 it is planned that the unobligated balance brought forward in this appropriation will be used to purchase those currencies necessary to carry on the program. Dollar funds for use in other countries are included in the appropriation Salaries and expenses.

The Service administers the Department of Agriculture's responsibilities in the agricultural phases of the foreign development assistance programs. This includes direction of the Department's activities under agreement with AID, particularly in agricultural assistance and training programs for foreign areas as well as participating with AID in the planning of agricultural development policy, in the formulation of self-help agreements with food-aid nations and in the review and evaluation of agricultural assistance efforts. In performing these functions the Service works closely with international and U.S. organizations to utilize the scientific and institutional competence of American agriculture in carrying out such programs. The Service is financed with funds allocated from the Agency for International Development.

<sup>2</sup> Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Unpaid undelivered orders; 1967, $44 thousand (1968 adjustments, $2 thousand); 1968, $30 thousand; 1969, $30 thousand; 1970, $30 thousand.

The major objectives of the Commodity Exchange Authority, in the enforcement of the Commodity Exchange Act, are to protect the pricing and hedging services of the commodity futures markets. These services are widely used by farmers, merchandisers, and processors. To carry out its enforcement objectives, the Commodity Exchange Authority works to maintain fair trading practices and competitive pricing on commodity exchanges, and to prevent price manipulation, cheating, fraud, and abusive acts and practices in commodity transactions. Enforcement of the act includes supervision over 19 commodity exchanges designated as contract markets, approximately 420 brokerage firms registered as futures commission merchants, and about 940 registered floor brokers operating on the exchanges.

On June 18, 1968, Public Law 90-258, the first major amendment to the Commodity Exchange Act in over 30 years, became effective. The principal provisions of this law are: (a) The inclusion of futures trading in livestock and livestock products under regulation for the first time. In 1968, there were 3,273,000 transactions in these markets with an estimated value of over $15 billion. (b) Permitted for the first time the establishment of minimum financial standards for brokerage firms handling regulated commodity customers' trading. (c) Provided for the first time for the refusal, suspension, or revocation of licenses of brokerage firms and floor brokers if these firms or individuals are found to be unfit for various reasons to engage in the business for which the licenses are sought or have been issued. (d) Increased penalties for certain law violations such as price manipulation and embezzlement. (e) Authorized for the first time the issuance of cease and desist orders in cases where persons have been found guilty of violation of the Act. (f) Extended the fraud provision of the Act to all persons handling customers' orders. (g) Required exchanges to enforce their rules relating to trading and contract terms and authorized the Secretary to disapprove exchange rules which violate or would violate the provisions of the Act or regulations issued thereunder. On July 23, 1968, Public Law 90-418 added still another important commodity to the Commodity Exchange Act—frozen concentrated orange juice.

1. Licensing and auditing of brokerage houses.—This consists of (a) prevention of the misuse of customers' funds by the analysis of financial statements of futures commission merchants and the periodic audits of their books and records; and (b) annual registration of futures commission merchants and floor brokers.

This account includes funds to cover expenses of programs administered by, and functions assigned to, the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service. The funds consist of direct appropriation, transfers from the Commodity Credit Corporation, and miscellaneous advances from other sources. This is a consolidated account for administrative expenses of National, commodity, State, and county offices.

The commodity offices and the data processing centers in Kansas City and New Orleans play an important role in administering price support programs and the field operations stemming from producer loan and purchase agreements, inventory management, and merchandising activities.

The State committees are in general administrative charge of all programs carried out in their respective States. Within the framework of national policy, they determine the policies to be followed and direct the adaptation of national programs to the State.

The Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation county committees are responsible for the local administration of programs. They carry out all functions dealing directly with farmers. The elected county committee is in charge of the county office.

The programs and activities carried out by this Service include: agricultural conservation program, Appalachian Region conservation program, acreage allotment and marketing quota programs, Sugar Act program, conservation reserve program, wheat, feed grain, and cotton diversion programs, cropland conversion program, cropland adjustment program, dairy indemnity payment program, Wool Act program, bin storage program, and price support and related programs.

The activities carried out by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service fall within three major categories:

1. Program formulation and appraisal.—The supply adjustment, conservation, and the price support programs and the management and merchandising of commodities acquired under the price support program have a tremendous impact on the national and, to a lesser extent, the international economy. This activity provides for constant review of the effectiveness of these programs. It also provides for the analysis of data to formulate even more effective programs.

2. Operation of supply adjustment, conservation, and price support programs.—This activity includes all functions dealing with the administration of programs carried out through the farmer committee system, including: (a) developing program regulations and procedures, (b) holding meetings with employees and producers to discuss new programs or changes in existing programs, (c) collecting and compiling basic data for individual farms, (d) establishing individual farm allotments, (e) establishing proportionate shares for sugar farms, when necessary, (f) notifying producers of allotments, proportionate shares, productivity indexes, and payment rates, (g) determining farm marketing allocations, (h) handling appeals, (i) determining county normal yields, (j) conducting referendums and certifying results, (k) checking compliance with acreage allotments and use of diverted acres, (l) developing pooling agreements under which several farmers work jointly to solve a common conservation problem which cannot be solved by individual action, (m) issuing marketing cards so that production from the allotted acreage can be marketed without penalty, (n) processing producer requests for conservation cost-sharing, and (o) processing commodity loan documents and issuing sight drafts.

3. Inventory management and merchandising.—This activity includes (a) overall management of CCC-owned commodities, (b) selling commodities, (c) donating commodities, and (d) accounting for loans and commodities. The value of the commodities owned by CCC on June 30, 1968, was about $915 million.

The objectives are to provide consumers with adequate supplies of sugar at reasonable prices, to protect the welfare of the domestic sugar industry, and to promote the export trade of the United States. Total U.S. requirements and quotas are determined each year. The quota for each domestic area is allotted to individual sellers when necessary to achieve orderly marketing. Restrictive farm acreage allotments are established for producers when necessary to avoid surpluses.

Payments are made which supplement the income of domestic producers of cane and beets. Payments require compliance with specified conditions of employment, production and price. Payments are also made for abandonment of planted acreage and crop deficiencies on harvested acreage due to natural calamities.

The increase of $14.3 million proposed for 1970 is required to provide necessary funds to complete payments on the 1968 crop, and to make payments on the 1969 crop to eligible producers in the fiscal year 1970.

Tax collections from imports of sugar exceed total obligations by $594.9 million for fiscal years 1938 through 1968.

This program is designed to encourage conservation by sharing with farmers, ranchers, and woodland owners the cost of carrying out approved soil-building and soil- and water-conserving practices, including related wildlife-conserving practices. These are practices which farmers generally would not perform to the needed extent with their own resources. The rate of cost-sharing averages about 50% of the cost. Cost-sharing may be in the form of conservation materials and services or a payment after completion of the practice.

Conservation measures offered include those primarily designed to establish permanent protective cover, improve and protect established vegetative cover, conserve and dispose of water, establish temporary vegetative cover, temporarily protect soil from wind and water erosion, and provide wildlife and beautification benefits.

The following and other practices were installed under the 1967 program on a million farms:

[In thousands]

Constructing water storage reservoirs..... structures..	55
Constructing terraces..... acres..	573
Establishing stripcropping systems..... acres..	266

Establishing or improving enduring vegetative cover..... acres..	11,688

Funds are distributed among the States on the basis of conservation needs. They are, in turn, distributed by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation State committees to counties. The county committees approve conservation practice cost-sharing for eligible persons.

Loans from Commodity Credit Corporation are used to make advance payments to vendors. These payments are for conservation materials and services furnished to farmers and ranchers prior to the time funds are appropriated each year. Repayment is made from balances of prior appropriations or from new funds appropriated.

The cropland adjustment program, authorized by the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965, assists farmers, through long-term agreements, to divert cropland from the production of certain crops to more needed uses that will promote the development and conservation of our soil, water, forest, wildlife, and recreational resources. The period of an agreement cannot be less than 5 years nor more than 10 years. The program also helps farmers establish, protect and conserve open spaces and natural beauty, and prevent air and water pollution.

In return for diverting the cropland to approved public benefit uses, producers receive adjustment payments. They also are eligible to receive cost-sharing assistance for establishing approved land treatment measures. Additional incentive payments are made to producers who enter into agreements to permit free public access to land designated under the cropland adjustment program agreement, for hunting, trapping, fishing, and hiking.

Funds may also be made available to Federal, State or local governmental agencies for use in acquiring cropland to be permanently converted to specified public uses, and cost-shares may be paid to such agencies for establishing approved land treatment measures consistent with the conditions and costs under agreements entered into with producers.

Under cropland adjustment programs approved for 1966 and 1967, producers in 47 States entered into agreements to divert 4 million acres from production of crops to other uses. Also, free public access agreements were entered into on 1 million acres of this land. In addition, under the Greenspan provisions of the program, State and local government agencies in 25 States entered into 139 agreements, under which they were assisted in purchasing cropland for permanent conversion to uses such as public parks, playgrounds, nature study centers, and pollution control projects.

There were no authorizations to place additional acreage in cropland adjustment programs for 1968 or 1969. A program of 4 million acres is proposed for 1970.

CONSERVATION RESERVE PROGRAM

For necessary expenses to carry out a conservation reserve program as authorized by subtitles B and C of the Soil Bank Act (7 U.S.C. 1831-1837, 1802-1814, and 1816), and to carry out liquidation activities for the acreage reserve program, to remain available until expended, [$109,000,000] $37,900,000, with which may be merged the unexpended balances of funds heretofore appropriated for soil bank programs: *Provided, That no part of these funds shall be paid on any contract which is illegal under the law due to the division of lands for the purpose of evading limits on annual payments to participants. This program, initiated in 1956, has two objectives. One is to bring total crop acreage more nearly in line with demand by withdrawing cropland from production. The other is to establish and maintain sound conservation practices on the land withdrawn. The Secretary was authorized, through calendar year 1960, to enter into 3- to 15-year contracts with producers. For removing designated cropland from production and for establishing necessary conservation practices, the producer receives an annual rental payment each year of the contract period. He also receives cost-sharing assistance for the establishment of required practices. Total annual rental payments to a producer are limited to $5 thousand.

Participation in the program is summarized below:

Number of contracts, 1968 program.....	88,415
Number of acres, 1968 program.....	9,243,787
Payments made in program year 1967, estimated.....	$121,801,612
Estimated payments to be made in program year 1968.....	$109,000,000

The reduction in 1970 reflects the relatively large number of contracts which expire at the end of calendar year 1968.

EMERGENCY CONSERVATION MEASURES

For emergency conservation measures, to be used for the same purposes and subject to the same conditions as funds appropriated under this head in the Third Supplemental Appropriation Act, 1957, <sup>1</sup> Selected resources as of June 30 are as follows: Advances 1967, $18,631 thousand (1968 adjustments, $2,759 thousand); 1968, $13,943 thousand (1969 adjustments, $3,535 thousand); 1969, $10,038 thousand (1970 adjustments, $3,533 thousand); 1970, $0.

This appropriation provides special funds for sharing the cost of emergency conservation measures to deal with cases of severe damage to farm and rangelands resulting from natural disasters. The criteria under which assistance may be made available are set forth in the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act (16 U.S.C. 590(h)).

Funds are allocated for use only in those counties designated by the Secretary of Agriculture as disaster counties. Assistance is made available to treat new conservation problems which (1) if not treated will impair or endanger the land, (2) materially affect the productive capacity of the land, (3) represent damage which is unusual in character and, except for wind erosion, is not the type which would recur frequently in the same area, and (4) will be so costly to rehabilitate that Federal assistance is or will be required to return the land to productive agricultural use.

Under the 1968 program cost-sharing assistance is being provided to treat farmlands damaged by drought, flood, fire, and tornado. As of August 31, 1968, there were 217 counties in 24 States where assistance is being provided.

INDEMNITY PAYMENTS TO DAIRY FARMERS

Under this program the Department makes payments to dairy farmers who have been directed to remove their milk from commercial markets because it contained residues of chemicals registered and approved for use by the Federal Government.

This program began in 1964 and was funded from the Office of Economic Opportunity appropriations since the authorization was in the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964 (sec. 331).

For 1968, the program was funded by transfer from Office of Economic Opportunity from funds provided in the Supplemental Appropriation Act, 1968. This program was extended through June 30, 1970 by Public Law 90-484.

Claims made from the beginning of the program through June 30, 1968 amounted to $1,011,135.

It is estimated that additional claims amounting to $300 thousand will occur during fiscal year 1969.

Long-range agreements were approved with farmers and ranchers from 1963 to 1967 to make changes from their past cropping systems and land uses to other income-producing, public benefit uses.

The agreements, not to exceed 10 years, provide for payments, the furnishing of materials and services, and other assistance to farmers. In return, farmers change the land-use and install and maintain conservation practices. Adjustment payments were authorized to be made either upon approval of the agreement or on an annual installment basis. Land treatment practice payments are made after the practice is installed.

The law places a limit of $10 million on payments made in a calendar year under signed agreements.

<sup>2</sup> Statutory obligations against borrowing authority include only borrowings from, or with the approval of, Treasury. A sufficient amount of CCC's borrowing authority is required to be reserved to cover obligations to purchase notes, certificates of interest, or other obligations evidencing loans held by banks and accrued interest thereon, but such obligations, other obligations, contingent liabilities and commitments do not become charges against the statutory borrowing authority until they result in borrowings from Treasury. Only that portion of the borrowing authority is available which has neither been so reserved nor charged by actual borrowings.

The Commodity Credit Corporation was created to stabilize, support, and protect farm income and prices, help maintain balanced and adequate supplies of agricultural commodities, their products, foods, feeds, and fibers, and help in their orderly distribution (15 U.S.C. 714-714p). It may also make available materials and facilities required in connection with the production and marketing of agricultural commodities. In addition to its basic functions, it is used to administer, and in some cases, temporarily finance numerous special activities.

The Corporation's capital stock of $100 million is held by the United States. Up to $14.5 billion may be borrowed to finance operations.

Budget assumptions.—The following general assumptions form the basis for the Corporation's 1969 and 1970 budget estimates: (a) Employment, production, and national income will rise both in 1969 and 1970 from the present level; (b) generally, exports of agricultural commodities in 1970 will increase over 1969 levels; (c) yields for the 1969 crops are based on recent averages adjusted for trend; (d) acreage allotments and marketing quotas will be in effect for the 1969 crops of peanuts, rice, cotton, and certain kinds of tobacco (flue-cured tobacco will be on an acreage-poundage program); and (e) special programs for cotton, feed grains, and wheat will be continued.

It is difficult to forecast with accuracy requirements for the year ending June 30, 1970. Complex and unpredictable factors are involved, such as weather, other factors which affect the volume of production of crops not yet planted, feed and food needs here and overseas, and available dollar exchange.

PROGRAMS OF THE CORPORATION

The basic functions of the Corporation include the following programs for which appropriations are made for net realized losses sustained (in thousands of dollars):

Program	1970 estimate
	Gross obligations	Outlays	Net realized loss for year
Price support payments.....	1,508,600	1,488,600	1,508,600
Wheat certificates issued (515 million bushels).....	738,400	324,100	348,400
Other price support.....	3,611,967	310,072	699,442
Commodity export.....	175,978	37,748	37,748
Storage facilities.....	48,000	8,000
Supply.....	254	-21	-21
Feed grain diversion (37 million acres).....	632,100	494,200	632,100
Wheat diversion (11 million acres).....	80,000	79,000	80,000
Cotton diversion (small farms).....	31,000	31,000	31,000
Other items not distributed by program.....	390,433	324,313	328,563
Total.....	7,216,732	3,097,012	3,665,832

Price support.—The Corporation, through loans, purchases, payments, and other means, supports the prices of agricultural commodities to producers. This is done mainly under the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act (15 U.S.C. 714 et seq.) and the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1421 et seq.).

The 1949 act makes price support mandatory for the basic commodities—corn, cotton, wheat, rice, peanuts, and tobacco. It also requires support of the following non-basic commodities: Tung nuts, honey, milk, butterfat, and the products of milk and butterfat, barley, oats, rye, and grain sorghums. The National Wool Act of 1954, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1781-1787) requires price support for wool and mohair. Price support for other nonbasic commodities is discretionary. However, whenever the price of either cottonseed or soybeans is supported, the support price of the other must be set at such level as the Secretary determines will cause them to compete on equal terms on the market. The price support program may also include operations to remove and dispose of surplus agricultural commodities in order to stabilize prices at levels not in excess of those permissible by law.

The principal methods of providing price support are loans to and purchases from producers. With limited exceptions, price support loans are nonrecourse. The commodities serve as collateral for the loan and upon maturity thereof, the producer may deliver such collateral to satisfy his obligation without further payment, unless there is a deficiency in quantity or quality, or the producer is guilty of fraudulent representation.

Direct purchases are also made from processors as well as producers, depending on the commodity involved. Also, special purchases for the removal of surpluses are made under certain laws, for example: The act of August 19, 1958, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1431 note), and section 416 of the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1431). In the case of feed grains, in addition to loans and purchases, a portion of the price support is made through issuance of negotiable payment-in-kind certificates which are handled in the same manner as payment-in-kind certificates issued under the feed grain acreage diversion programs. In the case of upland and extra-long staple cotton, in addition to loans, producers receive price support payments in cash or in payment-in-kind certificates. In the case of wheat, in addition to loans and purchases, producers receive marketing certificates as hereinafter described.

In all the price support operations, normal trade facilities are used to the maximum extent practicable. Local banks, cooperatives, and other financial institutions are used in lending activities. Commercial facilities are used to a great extent for storage.

Besides the Charter Act and laws mentioned above, many other laws are applicable to the disposition through sales, donations, and barter of commodities acquired under the price-support program.

For accounting purposes, the Corporation credits to the price-support program sales proceeds of commodities sold from its price-support stocks, including those disposed of through redemption of domestic and export payment-in-kind certificates and through special activities.

Commodity export.—The Corporation promotes the export of agricultural commodities and products through sales, barter, payments, and other operations. Other than in barter for stockpiling purposes, such commodities and products may be those held in private trade channels as well as those acquired by the Corporation in its price-support operations. This program is carried out under the authority contained in the Corporation's charter, particularly sections 5 (d) and (f), and in accordance with specific statutes where applicable. Export sales for foreign currencies are made under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended, although such sales of commodities owned by the Corporation may also be made under its charter authority.

The activities described below are illustrative of those conducted under this program during 1969. With respect to barter, the emphasis is on exports in connection with various types of offshore procurement of materials and services needed by the Department of Defense, the Agency for International Development, and other agencies, for which they pay the Corporation. Barter may also be made for strategic and other materials for the supplemental stockpile but such barter is on a limited scale. Commodities available for barter vary from time to time.

When necessary to encourage export movement from free-market supplies, as well as from its own stocks, the Corporation makes payments on wheat, wheat products, cotton, corn, grain sorghum, barley, oats, rye, rice, flaxseed, linseed oil, tobacco, butter, nonfat dry milk, milk-fat, and cheese. The rate of payment generally is the difference between the prevailing world export sales price and the domestic market price, and in the case of wheat, the payments are made at levels needed to meet U.S. obligations under the International Grains Arrangement.

To help develop or expand foreign markets, the Corporation also furnishes farm commodities and products for samples or exhibits at international trade fairs and for use abroad in testing consumer acceptance and commercial market potentials.

To maximize exports of agricultural commodities, including products thereof, the Corporation conducts an Export Credit Sales program under which it finances commercial export credit sales by exporters of agricultural commodities obtained either from CCC inventories or from private stocks. The financing agreement between CCC and the exporter provides for payment, with interest, in U.S. dollars within periods of not to exceed 3 years, assured by both acceptable bank obligations and an assignment of the account receivable arising from the export sale. The payments received are applied against current costs. These commercial transactions are financed under the Corporation's charter authority and section 4 of the Food for Peace Act (7 U.S.C. 1707a) and are to be distinguished from the long-term credit contracts involving foreign assistance authorized by the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended. Section 4 of the Food for Peace Act of 1966 authorizes appropriations to reimburse the Corporation annually for its actual costs incurred or to be incurred under this program. Estimates for this activity are included under special activities.

Storage facilities.—The Corporation conducts a program to provide storage adequate to fulfill its program needs. This program is conducted pursuant to sections 4 (h) and (m), and 5 (a) and (b) of the charter.

The Corporation has authority to buy bins (in storage-short areas) and equipment for the care and storage of grain owned by Commodity Credit Corporation or under its control. This authority to purchase bins has not been exercised since 1956. The Corporation has now reduced its storage capacity by more than 50%. The Corporation makes loans for the purchase, building, or expanding of facilities for storage and care of commodities on the farm and sells to producers and others bins needed for the storage of grain. Bins sold by the Corporation may be those acquired for resale for this purpose or those which are no longer required by the Corporation for the storage of its own grain. Public Law 89-758 permits the sale of grain storage facilities no longer needed for such program use to public and private nonprofit agencies and organizations. The Corporation may also provide storage use guarantees, to encourage building of commercial storage and undertake other operations necessary to provide storage adequate to carry out the Corporation's programs.

Supply and foreign purchase.—The Corporation procures from domestic and foreign sources food, agricultural commodities, and products and related materials to supply the needs of Federal agencies, foreign governments, and private and international relief agencies. It similarly procures or aids in the procurement of such foods, commodities, products, and material for sale to meet domestic requirements during periods of short supply or during such other times as will stabilize prices or facilitate distribution. Through purchases, loans, sales, or other means, the Corporation may also make available materials and facilities needed for the production and marketing of agricultural commodities. The Corporation, on behalf of the Secretary, also purchases at market prices dairy products which are donated to meet the requirements for schools, domestic relief distribution, community action programs, and other programs as are authorized by law when there are insufficient stocks of such products in the hands of the Corporation available for such purposes.

Purchases for other Federal agencies of commodities not in the Corporation's price-support stocks has been the main activity. Purchases of limited quantities of breeder, foundation, and registered seeds of improved varieties of grasses and legumes are made through production contracts in order to assure supplies thereof for farmers. No foreign purchases have been made in recent past years.

This program is conducted under section 5 (b) and (c) of the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act and with respect to dairy products under section 5(g) of that act and section 709 of the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965. Section 4 of the act of July 16, 1943 (15 U.S.C. 713a-9), requires that the Corporation be fully repaid from funds of such agencies for services performed, losses sustained, operating costs incurred, or commodities bought or delivered to or on behalf of any other Federal agency. Operations not subject to section 4 may involve losses if such are necessary to the accomplishment of the objectives of the particular operation.

Feed grain acreage diversion program.—An acreage diversion program is conducted on 1968 and 1969 crops of feed grains by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service utilizing the facilities and stocks of the Corporation. Under this program payments are made to farmers who divert acreage from the production of feed grains to an approved conservation use. This program is carried out under the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, as amended by the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965 (Public Law 89-321), as extended by Public Law 90-559, approved October 11, 1968.

Payments are made by the issuance of negotiable payment-in-kind certificates. The farmer may elect either to have the certificate redeemed in feed grains from the Corporation's stocks or if he requests the Corporation's assistance in the marketing of the certificate he may obtain cash by issuance by the Corporation of a negotiable sight draft. The Corporation markets rights, represented by certificates on which it has made cash advances to buyers for redemption in feed grains from its stocks.

Wheat certificate program.—A wheat certificate program for 1968 and 1969 crops is conducted by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service utilizing the funds and facilities of the Corporation. This program is authorized by the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended by the Food and Agriculture Act of 1962, the Agricultural Act of 1964, and the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965, as extended by Public Law 90-559.

Under the voluntary wheat certificate program, domestic marketing certificates are issued to participating farmers which may be sold at face value to Commodity Credit Corporation. Processors of wheat are required to buy domestic certificates equivalent to the number of bushels of wheat used in the manufacture of the food products.

Exporters may not ship abroad any wheat without buying export marketing certificates equivalent to the number of bushels exported at a cost determined by the Secretary to make U.S. wheat and wheat flour competitive in the world market, avoid disruption of world market prices, and fulfill the international obligations of the United States. The net proceeds, if any, from the sale of export marketing certificates, after deducting export subsidies paid exporters, will be distributed to producers on a pro rata basis.

Wheat acreage diversion program.—An acreage diversion program is conducted on the 1969 crop of wheat by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service under section 339(b) of the Agricultural Act of 1938, as amended by the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965, as extended. Payments will be made to wheat producers who divert a portion of their acreage to approved conservation use through issuance of CCC sight drafts.

Cotton acreage diversion program.—An acreage diversion program is conducted on the 1968 and 1969 crops of upland cotton by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service under section 103(d) of the Agricultural Act of 1949, as amended by the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965, as extended. Cotton producers complying with allotments or diverting a portion of their cotton acreage allotments to conservation uses receive payments from CCC in cash or payment-in-kind certificates which CCC will redeem for cotton. CCC may assist the producers in the marketing of certificates in the same manner as it assists feed grain producers in the marketing of their payment-in-kind certificates.

Administrative expenses.—Administrative expenses are for the operating staff and the services of employees of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service engaged in the Corporation's activities, services performed by the Foreign Agricultural Service and other agencies of the Department, costs of audit, and payments to the General Services Administration for space. Estimates for 1970 include a limitation of $31.5 million for costs of administration including a reserve of not less than 7% for contingencies.

Except for purchases and donations under section 709 of the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965, the requested authorization excludes administrative expenses in connection with the supply program, which has a markup in the sales price to cover administrative expenses, and excludes the wool and mohair program, under the National Wool Act of 1954, as amended, and the sale of long-staple cotton transferred from the national stockpile, which are included with the costs of those programs under Special activities.

Nonadministrative expenses.—Expenses of acquisition, operation, maintenance, improvement, or disposition of property which the Corporation owns or in which it has an interest have been treated as program rather than administrative expenses. Such expenses include inspection, classing, and grading work performed on a fee basis by Federal employees or Federal or State licensed inspectors; work performed on a contract or fee basis by Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation county committees; and special services performed by other Federal agencies outside of this department.

Most of these general nonadministrative expenses, including storage and handling, transportation, inspection, classing and grading, and resale payments are included in program costs, in the entry entitled Storage, transportation, and other costs not included above in the program and financing schedule. The item Nonadministrative expense which appears in the schedule covers county offices, other ASCS expenses offset by revenue, custodian, and agency expense of the Federal Reserve banks and lending agencies, and miscellaneous costs.

The Corporation receives reimbursement for grain requisitioned pursuant to Public Law 87-152 (7 U.S.C. 447-449) by the States from Corporation stocks to feed resident wildlife threatened with starvation through the appropriation Reimbursement for net realized losses. The Corporation also obtains recovery through this appropriation for the funds transferred to the Agricultural Research Service pursuant to the Department of Agriculture and Related Agencies Appropriation Act of 1964 for cost of production research and other related research designed to reduce surplus commodities held by the Corporation.

SPECIAL ACTIVITIES

These activities are carried out under authority of section 5(g) of the Corporation's charter act and specific statutory authorizations or directives with respect thereto which are currently in effect or which may subsequently be enacted.

A summary of such current activities not included under other designated activities is as follows (in thousands of dollars):

The Corporation receives appropriations or reimbursement for cost of these activities as described under each.

To the extent sufficient appropriations are not provided in advance, expenditures under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended, and investments in materials transferred to the supplemental stockpile, are made by the Corporation subject to reimbursement from subsequent appropriations authorized for such purpose.

Activities currently being carried out are as follows (see foreign assistance programs and special export programs for details of items (1)-(4)):

(1) Sale of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies.
(2) Sale of agricultural commodities for dollars on credit terms.

(3) Commodities disposed of and other costs incurred in connection with donations abroad.

(4) Bartered materials for supplemental stockpile.

(5) Military housing (barter and exchange).—During 1957, a contract was completed for the disposition of Corporation-owned commodities valued at $50 million for the construction of military housing in France with foreign currencies obtained from this transaction. 10 U.S.C. 2681(b) as amended, provides for annual payment to the Corporation by the Department of Defense until liquidation of the amounts due for foreign currencies obtained under Public Law 480 for military housing. It is estimated that $2 million will be applied against the amounts due under the French housing transaction in each of 1969 and 1970. Beginning in 1967, the Treasury Department has classified this as a nonexpenditure transaction. The agreement between the Commodity Credit Corporation and the Department of Defense provides that upon sale of any of the housing, the Corporation will receive the proceeds.

(6) National Wool Act.—Under the National Wool Act of 1954, as amended, incentive payments are being used to encourage the annual domestic production of about 300 million pounds of shorn wool. Support of prices of wool and mohair is mandatory. Incentive payments are made to eligible producers in order to bring the national average price received by all producers up to the announced incentive level which is determined in accordance with a formula specified in the act.

Total payments made under the National Wool Act cannot at any time exceed an amount equal to 70% of the accumulated totals, as of the same date, of the gross receipts from import duties collected on and after January 1, 1953, on wool and wool manufactures. Actual and estimated payments compared with this limitation are as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Funds of the Commodity Credit Corporation are used to carry on this program. For the purpose of reimbursing the Corporation, section 705 of the act appropriates each fiscal year an amount equal to amounts expended by the Corporation during the preceding year and to amounts expended in prior fiscal years not previously reimbursed, but not to exceed an amount equal to 70% of the gross receipts from duties collected on wool and wool manufactures during the calendar year preceding the fiscal year.

Estimated costs and appropriations to Commodity Credit Corporation during 1968, 1969, and 1970 are indicated in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

(7) Grain for migratory waterfowl feed.—To prevent damage of crops by migratory waterfowl, the Corporation is directed to furnish to the Secretary of the Interior (7 U.S.C. 442-445) such grain acquired through price support operations and certified by Commodity Credit Corporation as available for such purposes or in such condition as to be undesirable for human consumption, as the Secretary of the Interior shall requisition. This appropriation item is included under that department.

(8) Surplus grain for migratory birds.—Under Public Law 87-152, approved August 17, 1961 (7 U.S.C. 448) the Secretary of the Interior may requisition grain of the Corporation to feed starving migratory birds. This appropriation item is included under that department.

(9) Grading and classing activities.—The Corporation may make advances to the Consumer and Marketing Service for classing and grading of agricultural commodities without charge to producers (7 U.S.C. 414a, 440). Such advances used for classing cotton and grading tobacco not placed under price support loan are repaid from an appropriation of the Consumer and Marketing Service.

(10) Research to increase domestic consumption of farm commodities.—The Department of Agriculture and Related Agencies Appropriation Act of 1964 authorized the transfer of not more than $16 million from the appropriation Removal of surplus agricultural commodities (sec. 32) to the Corporation to be used to increase domestic consumption of surplus farm commodities, and provided for the transfer for such purposes thereafter of such sums not in excess of $25 million in any one year, as may be approved by Congress. The 1965 appropriation act authorized the transfer of $12,175 thousand of section 32 funds for this purpose. The Corporation transfers such funds to the Agricultural Research Service and Cooperative State Research Service to conduct the required research. For comparability, all transactions under this item are shown in the budget schedules for these two agencies (except expenditures).

(11) Defense activities.—Upon the declaration of a national emergency, the facilities, services, authorities and funds of the Commodity Credit Corporation may be used, as directed by the Secretary of Agriculture and in accordance with applicable provisions of law, to carry out responsibilities and functions assigned to the Secretary of Agriculture under the Defense Production Act of 1950, as amended, the Civil Defense Act, as amended, and such other defense legislation as may be enacted.

(12) Transfer of long-staple cotton from national stockpile for sale by Commodity Credit Corporation.—The act of July 10, 1957 (71 Stat. 290), authorized the transfer of 50,000 bales of domestically grown cotton from the national stockpile to the Corporation for sale. Also, about 219,000 bales of cotton, both American-Egyptian and foreign grown, in the stockpile were made available to the Corporation for disposition under Public Law 87-548, approved July 25, 1962. The cotton is not recorded as a Corporation asset. Proceeds less costs incurred, including administrative expenses, are covered into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts from time to time. No interest is paid by CCC for the use of the money prior to covering.

(13) Loans for agricultural conservation.—Under section 391(c) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1391(c)), the Corporation advances funds to the Secretary in amounts not to exceed $50 million annually to purchase conservation materials and services. Repayments of the loans plus interest are made in the succeeding fiscal year from funds appropriated for the agricultural conservation program.

(14) Use of CCC facilities for Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service programs.—Under the respective enabling legislation, the services, facilities, and authorities of the Corporation are used to make payments to producers under various programs administered by the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

No disbursements are made unless funds have been received in advance from the applicable appropriation. Among these programs are: Soil bank, cropland conversion, agricultural conservation, cropland adjustment, Appalachia regional conservation, emergency conservation measures, and the Sugar Act program.

CCC sight drafts are issued by ASCS county offices for county operating expenses paid through local county committee bank accounts. The Corporation receives advances from the appropriation "Expenses, ASCS" to cover the sight drafts drawn.

(15) Export Credit Sales (short-term).—This program is described under Commodity Credit Corporation—Commodity Export Program on p. 153.

(16) Advance to Farmers Home Administration.—Under Public Law 90-328 (82 Stat. 169) CCC advanced $30 million to the Emergency Credit Revolving Fund (7 U.S.C. 1966). This advance plus interest is to be reimbursed out of appropriations to the fund for 1970.

FINANCING

Borrowing authority.—The Corporation has an authorized capital stock of $100 million held by the United States and authority to borrow up to $14.5 billion.

Funds are borrowed from Treasury and may also be borrowed from private lending agencies. In connection with loan guarantees, the Corporation reserves a sufficient amount of its borrowing authority to purchase at any time all notes and other obligations evidencing loans made or held by lending agencies or other financial institutions or certificates of interest issued in connection with the financing of price-support operations. All bonds, notes, debentures, and similar obligations issued by the Corporation are subject to approval by the Secretary of the Treasury as required by the act of March 8, 1938 (15 U.S.C. 713a-4).

Interest on borrowings from the Treasury (and on capital stock) is paid at a rate based upon the average interest rate of all outstanding marketable obligations (of comparable maturity date) of the United States as of the preceding month. Interest is also paid on certificates of interest and lending agency obligations for the period the agencies have their funds invested.

The Department of Agriculture and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1966, made provision for terminating interest after June 30, 1964, on the portion of the Corporation's borrowings from the Treasury equal to the unreimbursed realized losses recorded on the books of the Corporation after June 30 of the fiscal year in which such losses are realized.

The computation of the transfer from interest-bearing to non-interest-bearing capital is (in millions of dollars):

Realized deficit not previously reimbursed, start of year.	7,856	9,654	9,819
Less appropriations for year.....	1,400	3,188	6,216
Total non-interest-bearing, end of year.....	6,456	6,466	3,603

On the basis of the budgetary assumptions, the estimated requirements indicate no need for an increase in borrowing authority. Since there are so many uncontrollable factors involving crops which have not even been planted, it must be recognized that estimates are highly tentative.

Total statutory borrowing authority in use.....	12,941	14,198	11,473
Net statutory borrowing authority available.....	1,559	302	3,027

Note.—A sufficient amount of the borrowing authority is required to be reserved to cover obligations to purchase notes and certificates of interest held by financial institutions and accrued interest thereon. Such obligations, however, as well as accounts payable, accrued liabilities, and other outstanding obligations not reflected on this table, do not become charges against the statutory borrowing authority until they result in borrowings from the Treasury.

Contract authorization.—Price support and other programs required by statute may result in the Corporation incurring obligations in excess of available funds and borrowing authority. Such obligations are liquidated from subsequent appropriations and other funds which may become available to CCC. Any increase in obligations in excess of available fund resources is reported as a contract authorization in the year involved; a decrease is reported as the application of appropriations and other funds to liquidate the authorization. The budget reflects an increase of $1,006 million in 1968, a net increase of $1,714 million in 1969, and a decrease of $2,681 million in 1970.

Appropriations.—Under Public Law 87-155 (15 U.S.C. 713a-11, 12), annual appropriations are authorized for each fiscal year to reimburse the Commodity Credit Corporation for net realized losses incurred as of the close of each year.

The realized losses for the price support and related programs for 1968 were $3,198 million, and the cumulative losses not yet appropriated for were $9,654 million. It is estimated that an appropriation of $6,215.9 million including $1,057 million for the balance of the 1961 revaluation of inventory, would provide sufficient funds for the operations described for 1970. It would also leave a desirable operating margin to assure flexibility of operations in view of the volume of transactions handled.

The special activities are financed as indicated in the program description above. In addition to certain reimbursements for other agencies, appropriations are made for the National Wool Act (see above) and for foreign assistance and special export programs (see that heading on page 161).

Deficit.—The net realized losses of the Corporation have previously been reimbursed as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Such obligations, however, as well as accounts payable, accrued liabilities, and other outstanding obligations not reflected on this table, do not become charges against the statutory borrowing authority until they result in borrowings from the Treasury.

FOREIGN ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS AND SPECIAL EXPORT PROGRAMS

Facilities and funds of the Commodity Credit Corporation may by law be used in carrying out programs for exporting agricultural commodities. The laws also authorize appropriations to be made to cover costs of such programs. When funds become available, advances are made to the Corporation for estimated costs. If the amounts appropriated are greater than actual needs, the excess is used to reduce future appropriation requests. If the appropriations are less than actual needs, other Corporation funds may be used temporarily to finance the balance of authorized costs.

FOREIGN ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS

Included in this category are the following activities carried out under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, Public Law 480, 83d Congress, as amended by the Food for Peace Act of 1966 (Public Law 89-808, approved Nov. 11, 1966), and by Public Law 90-436, approved July 29, 1968: Sale of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies (title I); sale of agricultural commodities for dollars on credit terms (title I); and commodities disposed of and other costs incurred in connection with donations abroad (title II).

PUBLIC LAW 480—Continued

Sales of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies or for dollars on credit terms are made under title I of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 (Public Law 480), as amended by the Food for Peace Act of 1966 (Public Law 89-808 and Public Law 90-436).

The Commodity Credit Corporation finances all sales made pursuant to agreements concluded under title I. Sales are made to friendly countries—as defined in section 103(d) of the act—and must not displace expected commercial sales for cash dollars (103(n)).

No agreements may be entered into after December 31, 1970 (section 409, as amended). Agreements may not be made under title I in any calendar year which call for an appropriation to reimburse Commodity Credit Corporation in excess of $1.9 billion, plus unused prior years' authorizations.

Whenever practicable, terms of agreements must require payment at time of delivery of not less than 5% of the purchase price in dollars or in currencies convertible to dollars. These initial payments will apply against costs to reflect a reduction in appropriation requests. On credit agreements under title I, the President is authorized to require payment upon delivery in dollars or foreign currencies of amounts needed for payment of U.S. obligations and certain other purposes.

Factors determining availability of commodities for disposition under Public Law 480 are productive capacity, domestic requirements, farm and consumer price levels, anticipated commercial exports, and adequate carryover. No commodity is available for disposition if the disposition thereof would reduce the domestic supply below that needed to meet domestic requirements, adequate carryover, and anticipated exports for dollars.

The Commodity Credit Corporation may finance the total ocean freight charges on U.S.-flag vessels in the case of dollar credit sales and "Sec. 103(b) convertible foreign currency" sales. Only the differential between U.S.-flag rates and world rates may be financed in the case of regular foreign currency sales.

1. Sale of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies and for dollars on credit terms (title I). Sale of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies (title I).—Sales of agricultural commodities for foreign currencies are made to countries unable to expand commercial purchases because of a lack of dollar exchange. Foreign currencies received in payment are deposited to the account of the U.S. Treasury and can be used only as stated in section 104. The dollar value of such deposits through June 30, 1968, amounted to $11.9 billion.

Uses fall into two groups—those of benefit to the foreign country, mainly loans and grants to promote economic development and to support common defense, and those of benefit to the United States. The latter includes, among others, expenses of the U.S. Government abroad, agricultural market development, educational exchange, construction of military family housing, and sales of foreign currency to U.S. citizens and American tourists.

Foreign currencies for U.S. uses, certain foreign currency grants, and uses of foreign currency loan repayments are subject to the appropriation process. Sales agreements specify particular uses, and in those entered into after December 31, 1964, at least 20% of the foreign currencies are required to be subject to the appropriation process, with certain exceptions. Such uses reduce dollar outflow and the deficit in the balance of payments of the United States. The Corporation is reimbursed for the dollar value of currencies so used. Proceeds from sales of foreign currencies and from dollar repayments of foreign currency loans are applied as a reduction in appropriation requests.

Section 509 of Public Law 86-500, approved June 8, 1960 (7 U.S.C. 1704b note) provides that at least 75% of the total cost of foreign military housing projects (unless otherwise specified) shall be paid from foreign currencies acquired under title I. Pursuant to section 2681(b) of title 10, U.S.C., as amended, the estimates reflect transfer to the Corporation of $6 million each year to liquidate amounts due, including the French housing barter transaction discussed under Commodity Credit Corporation special activities. It is estimated that $4 million will be applied against amounts due with a balance of $42 million remaining unpaid as of June 30, 1970.

From inception through June 30, 1968, sales agreements have been signed with 53 countries. They cover sales of commodities at an export market value of over $11.9 billion. Major items are wheat, cotton, and fats and oils.

Sale of agricultural commodities for dollars on credit terms (title I).—Sales of U.S. agricultural commodities under long-term dollar credit terms are also authorized. The act provides for a progressive shift from foreign currency sales to dollar credit sales, to be completed by December 31, 1971.

Agreements are made with friendly countries or with United States and foreign private trade. They may provide for delivery in annual installments for not more than 10 years from the date of the agreement subject to the availability of the commodity.

Payments are in dollars with interest at rates not less than the minimum required by section 201 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, for loans made under that section. Payments are made in reasonable annual amounts over periods of not to exceed 20 years from the date of last delivery in each calendar year under the agreement, except that the first annual payment may be deferred for a period not later than 2 years after such date of last delivery. Interest is computed from the date of such last delivery. As payments are received each year, they are applied against current costs to reflect a reduction in the appropriation request. Private trade agreements must provide for projects to establish improved storage or marketing facilities or otherwise encourage private economic enterprise in friendly countries.

To the extent that transition from foreign currency sales to dollar credit sales is not possible, transition to convertible foreign currency credit sales is authorized on terms which permit conversion to dollars at the exchange rate applicable to the sales agreement. Credit terms are to be no less favorable to the United States than those for development loans made under section 201 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, which authorizes loans to be made on the basis of payment in 40 years with a 10-year grace period. Dollar payments, when received, will also be applied to reduce appropriation requests.

Total agreements made since inception to June 30, 1968, amount to $1,384.2 million cost value, including ocean freight for shipment on U.S. ships. Major commodities were wheat, cotton, and oils and oilseeds. Payments for the period amount to $155.2 million, of which $120.8 million was applied to principal and the rest to interest.

2. Commodities disposed of and other costs incurred in connection with donations abroad (title II).—Available agricultural commodities are furnished to meet famine or other urgent or emergency relief needs. Also, commodities are furnished to promote economic and community development in friendly developing countries, to combat malnutrition, and for needy people, nonprofit school lunch, and preschool feeding programs. They are furnished through friendly governments and private or public agencies, including intergovernmental organizations such as the world food program. The Food for Peace Act, in amending title II, expressed the sense of Congress that other advanced nations should be encouraged to make increased contributions for the purpose of combating world hunger and malnutrition, and that to achieve this objective the United States should work to expand the United Nations' world food program.

The Agency for International Development is responsible for administering title II programs. However, Commodity Credit Corporation makes available the commodities or products requested for disposition under title II. Such commodities or products are made available from the Corporation's stocks of commodities or products acquired under its price support program or are purchased at market prices when it is determined to be in the best interest of the Government.

The Commodity Credit Corporation is authorized to pay with respect to commodities made available the costs of acquisition, packaging, processing, enrichment, preservation, fortification, transportation, handling, and other incidental costs incurred up to the time of delivery to U.S. ports and ocean freight charges and general average contributions arising out of ocean transport.

Approximately $7½ million each year may be used to buy foreign currencies accruing under title I of this act to meet costs (other than personnel and administrative costs of cooperating sponsors, distributing agencies, and recipient agencies) directed to community and other self-help activities designed to alleviate the causes for the need for such aid.

Through December 31, 1968, appropriations totaling $4,300 million were authorized. No programs of assistance may be entered into after December 31, 1970, and none shall be undertaken under this title during any calendar year which call for an appropriation of more than $600 million to reimburse the Corporation for costs incurred, including its investment, plus any amount by which programs of assistance undertaken under this title in the preceding calendar year have called or will call for appropriations in amounts less than authorized during the preceding year. Any incidental sales proceeds and proceeds from loss, damage, and other claims are applied against Commodity Credit Corporation costs to reflect a reduction in appropriation requests.

Since inception through June 30, 1968, transfer authorizations under title II have been issued for $2,359 million worth of food, including ocean freight costs. Of this amount, $973 million (41%) was for disaster relief of victims of floods, earthquakes, droughts, and plagues; $217 million (9%) for refugee relief; $17 million (1%) for other emergency assistance; $272 million (12%) for child-feeding; $660 million (28%) for economic development; and $220 million (9%) for voluntary agency programs. Also, $475 million was authorized for ocean freight costs on commodities shipped through nonprofit voluntary organizations and $5 million for purchase of title I foreign currencies for self-help activities, making total authorizations of $2,839 million for the 14 years this program has been in effect.

In addition to the Foreign assistance programs described, the Commodity Credit Corporation conducts a special export program for bartered materials for the supplemental stockpile (7 U.S.C. 1856).

BARTERED MATERIALS FOR SUPPLEMENTAL STOCKPILE

For unrecovered prior years' costs related to strategic and other materials acquired as a result of barter or exchange of agricultural commodities or products and transferred to the supplemental stockpile pursuant to the Act of May 28, 1956, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1856), $1,500,000, to remain available until expended.

Under section 206 of the Agricultural Act of 1956 (7 U.S.C. 1856), the Commodity Credit Corporation transfers to the supplemental stockpile, which was established pursuant to section 104(b) of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, strategic and other materials acquired from the barter and exchange of agricultural commodities. This does not cover those acquired for the national stockpile or for other agencies on a reimbursable basis.

Appropriations are authorized for the value of the transfers based on the lower of cost to Commodity Credit Corporation or domestic market price. The estimates reflect the shift from stockpile procurement to reimbursable off-shore procurement through barter for other Government agencies and delivery of commodities under previously authorized contracts.

This program is a new initiative in agricultural assistance that will produce a rapid and sustained rate of growth in the agriculture of developing nations.

The approach rests on the premise that improved farm production can be achieved only through the detailed planning and adoption of a system that provides a continuous flow of technology to farmers and to related business in an environment that is conducive to adoption. An effective system will be established by developing the private and public institutions needed for research, extension, and agribusiness activity and by supplementing existing technological and managerial capacity so as to operate this effectively.

The success of this program depends upon substantial self-help and the full participation of the American land-grant universities with their overseas experience, and the U.S. agribusiness community with its managerial experience. Food produced on American farms will provide payment for much of the work performed in foreign countries.

This effort will be carried out in accordance with the foreign policies of the United States.

The Federal Crop Insurance Corporation, a wholly-owned Government Corporation, was created on February 16, 1938 (7 U.S.C. 1501-1519), to carry out the provisions of the Federal Crop Insurance Act. The purpose of this act is to promote the national welfare by improving the economic stability of agriculture through a sound system of crop insurance, and providing the means for the research and experience helpful in devising and establishing such insurance.

Crop insurance offered to agricultural producers by the Corporation provides protection from losses caused by natural hazards, such as insect and wildlife damage, plant diseases, fire, drought, flood, wind, and other weather conditions. It does not indemnify producers for losses resulting from negligence or failure to observe good farming practices.

The crop insurance programs are developed and analyzed in the Washington headquarters office and are administered in the field by four area offices and 24 State offices. Sales and servicing of contracts at the county level is performed by private agents under contractual agreements with the Corporation and by Corporation employees hired on a permanent, part-time or WAE (when actually employed) basis. Detailed administrative and program accounting and statistical functions are performed by the National Service Office in Kansas City, Mo.

Budget program.—The program for fiscal year 1970 will provide crop insurance protection to more farmers amounting to approximately $923 million on the following commodities: apples, barley, beans, citrus, combined crops, corn, cotton, flax, grain sorghum, grapes, oats, peaches, peanuts, peas, potatoes, raisins, rice, soybeans, sugarbeets, sugarcane, tobacco, tomatoes, tung nuts, and wheat. Also, the Corporation is reinsuring about 22% of the crop insurance written by the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico beginning with crop year 1968.

The following table indicates the scope of the insurance operations planned for 1969 and 1970, as compared with 1968. Amounts in the 1968 column are actual and pertain to the 1967 crop year. The 1969 column pertains to the 1968 crop year, and the 1970 column pertains to the 1969 crop year.

Financing.—Capital stock of $100 million is authorized to be subscribed by the United States. As of June 30, 1968, the Secretary of the Treasury held receipts for $40 million of the authorized stock, leaving $60 million unissued.

Funds from the issuance of capital stock provide working capital for the Corporation. Receipts which are for deposit to this fund come mainly from premiums paid by farmers for crop insurance. The principal payments from this fund are for: indemnities to insured farmers; the direct cost of adjusting crop losses; and a part of the administrative and operating expenses.

The annual appropriation for the major portion of the administrative and operating expenses of the Corporation is presented earlier in the budget.

No additional capital funds are being requested for fiscal year 1970 program operations based on the following assumptions: (1) The Corporation's gross income for the 1969 crop year will be approximately $50,700 thousand, and (2) Crop losses occurring in crop year 1968 and/or 1969 will not be unusually heavy. If heavy losses occur and additional funds are necessary, the Corporation will submit a request for additional capital funds.

Operating results and financial condition.—As of June 30, 1968, the Corporation reflected a deficit of $18.9 million which reduced the net capital to $21.1 million from $37.7 million reflected on June 30, 1967. Although premium income for crop year 1967 was higher than in the preceding year, indemnities for the 1967 crop year totaled $55.2 million, exceeding premiums by $11.7 million resulting in a loss ratio of 1.27 as compared with the 1966 loss ratio of 0.69.

Current estimates for crop year 1968 appear to be favorable. Premiums of $49 million are estimated to exceed indemnities by $4.9 million. For the crop years 1968 through 1967, premium income of $465.1 million exceeded indemnity costs of $445.9 million by $19.2 million. Premium income exceeded indemnity costs in 11 years of the 20-year period.

The Administration conducts two capital investment programs: (a) the rural electrification program to provide electric service to farms and other rural establishments; and (b) the rural telephone program to furnish and improve telephone service in rural areas. Funds for making repayable loans are borrowed from the Secretary of the Treasury.

1. Rural electrification.—This capital investment program is financed through loans which bear 2% interest and must be repaid within a period not to exceed 35 years. Loans are also made for shorter periods at 2% interest to electrification borrowers to be reloaned to their consumers for the purpose of financing the wiring of premises and the acquisition and installation of electrical and plumbing appliances and equipment, including machinery.

The 1970 budget request anticipates that a private source of supplementary financing will be available to partially satisfy the capital requirements of the rural electric systems. Loans from the supplementary source will be available to finance the capital requirements of the more viable rural electric systems. Enough direct Federal loan funds will be available to meet the capital requirements of the less viable rural electric systems.

Rural water and waste disposal grants.—This program is authorized by subtitle A of the Consolidated Farmers Home Administration Act of 1961, as amended. It provides for planning grants to be made to public and private bodies with authority to prepare comprehensive plans for the development of water or sewer systems in rural areas which do not have funds available for such planning. In addition, development grants are made to associations including nonprofit corporations and public and quasi-public agencies to finance specific projects for the development, storage, treatment, purification, or distribution of water or the collection, treatment, or disposal of waste in rural areas. The amount of the grant may not exceed 50% of the development cost of the project.

Public Law 90-488, approved August 15, 1968, increased the annual authority for making planning grants from $5 million to $15 million and for making development grants from $50 million to $100 million.

Development grants to associations may be made in connection with direct or insured loans for water and sewer systems described under the Farmers Home Administration direct loan account.

Rural Renewal.—This program was authorized by section 102 of the Food and Agriculture Act of 1962. Loans are made to local public agencies and private nonprofit organizations for rural renewal development projects which are specifically related to conservation and land utilization. Each project will be an important component of the overall rural renewal plan previously developed to rebuild the economy of the designated area. To be eligible for designation as a rural renewal area, the locality must be one of chronic underemployment on farms and unemployment in the surrounding communities. The area must also be one in which agriculture or forestry contribute substantially to the economy. The 1970 request is to provide for continuation of program operations in designated project areas and make a beginning in about 5 additional areas.

Program operations include selection and designation of rural renewal areas, technical assistance to local public bodies or officials, or private nonprofit organizations in the preparation of an economic development plan, and counsel to local agencies and organizations for meeting legal requirements necessary for borrowing funds. The borrowing agency is designated by the State legislature or Governor to receive rural renewal loan funds and is vested with authority under State and local laws to borrow funds, buy and sell property, raise revenue, meet financial obligations and transact other necessary business functions.

Rural renewal loans are repayable in not more than 30 years with repayment of principal and interest deferred up to 5 years, if necessary. Loans bear interest at the average rate paid by the U.S. Treasury on obligations of similar maturity. The rate for 1969 is 3.256 percent.

Program administration.—The Farmers Home Administration has been assigned responsibility for the coordination, direction, and supervision of the rural renewal program. The principal administrative expenses are related to technical assistance, coordination of project plans and loan programs by the Farmers Home Administration. These expenses are estimated at $274 thousand in 1969 and $360 thousand in 1970. Administrative expenses allotted to the Economic Research Service will be $29 thousand for 1969 and $40 thousand for 1970.

Farmers Home Administration direct loan account.—This account was established on October 16, 1961, pursuant to section 338(c) of the Consolidated Farmers Home Administration Act of 1961. Real estate and operating loans are made under the authorities of subtitles A and B of the act to farmers and ranchers and to associations unable to obtain credit from other sources at reasonable rates. The appropriation acts for 1968 and 1969 provided for making watershed works of improvement loans, flood prevention loans, and resource conservation and development loans from funds available in the direct loan account. Under Public Law 90-488, farm ownership and operating loans may include funds for enterprises needed to supplement farm income and loans may be made to finance outdoor recreational enterprises or to convert to recreational uses existing farming or ranching operations. Loans made under these and similar prior authorities are reported and accounted for in this account.

In 1969, the total for direct loans reflected in the following schedules is $345.8 million. In 1970, the total for these loans is $337.1 million. It is proposed to carry out the estimated loan program through utilization of receipts to the direct loan account representing collections on loans outstanding and through a sale of assets in 1969 and prior years under the Participation Sales Act of 1966. No new borrowing authorization is estimated for 1970.

1. Real estate loans.—(a) Farm ownership loans.—Direct and insured loans are made to farmers and ranchers for acquiring, enlarging, or improving farms, including dwellings and farm buildings; for financing land and water development, use and conservation; for developing recreational or other nonfarm enterprises; for forestry development; for refinancing indebtedness; and for loan closing costs. Loans are confined to farms which are not larger than family farms and cannot exceed the normal value of the farm or $60 thousand whichever is the lesser. The loan limitation includes the unpaid indebtedness against the farm or other security.

Loans to associations also are made for shifts in land use including grazing, the development of recreational facilities, and for irrigation development. Direct land conservation and development loans to individuals are made in the Appalachian region to establish and carry out land stabilization, conservation, and erosion control practices. There is no limitation on the size of farms that may be improved with loans to individual farmers. For loans to individuals, a loan cannot exceed the normal value of the farm or $60 thousand whichever is the lesser. The loan limitation includes the unpaid indebtedness against the farm or other security. For loans to associations, the unpaid principal Insured loans are made through the Agricultural Credit Insurance fund with funds advanced by private lenders. Annual payments of principal and interest to lenders are fully guaranteed. The Administration services these insured loans, makes collections, and pays the lenders.

2. Operating loans.—Direct loans are made to farmers and ranchers for costs incident to reorganizing a farming system for more profitable operations; for a variety of essential farm expenses such as the purchase of livestock, farm equipment, feed, seed, fertilizer, and farm supplies; and other essential farm operating expenses, including cash rent, and costs incident to the production and harvesting of forestry products; for financing land and water development, use and conservation; for developing recreational or other nonfarm enterprises; for refinancing indebtedness; for other farm and home needs; and for loan closing costs. Loans are confined to operators of not-larger-than-family farms. The outstanding principal loan balance for operating loans to any individual is limited to $35 thousand. Loans bear interest at a rate based on the average rate paid by the U.S. Treasury on obligations with a similar maturity period. The rate for the 1969 fiscal year is 5½%. Loans may be made for periods up to 7 years, but may be renewed for not more than 5 additional years. Loans are secured by crop and chattel liens and, when necessary, by real estate mortgages.

Rural housing direct loan account.—This account was established in 1965 pursuant to section 518 of title V of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended. Rural housing direct loans are made on farms, in the open country, and in towns of not more than 5,500 population that are rural in character. In the case of applicants who are deficient in repayment ability, cosigners on promissory notes are permitted.

In addition to building loans to individuals, rural housing direct loans are also made to private nonprofit corporations and consumer cooperatives to provide modest cost rental or cooperative housing and related facilities.

Loans are made only to applicants unable to obtain housing credit from other sources upon terms and conditions which they reasonably could be expected to repay.

In addition to direct loans, building loans to individuals, farm labor housing loans, and rural rental housing loans, advanced by private lenders will be insured. Contingent liabilities for these insured loans are reflected in the rural housing insurance fund schedules.

1. Low-to-moderate income loans.—Loans of $1,000 or less are made at an interest rate of 5½% and are repayable in not more than 10 years when the loan cannot be made on an insured basis. Disaster loans without a limit as to amount are made at 3% interest to provide for repair or replacement of farm or rural dwellings, farm service buildings and related facilities damaged by a natural disaster. These loans are repayable in not more than 33 years and are made to farm owners, to owners of other real estate in rural areas, to long-term farm leaseholders and to other rural residents. Loans are made to construct, repair, or replace dwellings and essential farm service buildings and may include funds to buy a house, farm service buildings and a building site.

2. Very low-income housing repair loans.—Repair and improvement loans not in excess of $1,500 are made to very low-income families who are owners of farms or nonfarm rural property to repair or improve their dwellings in order to make them safe and sanitary and to remove health hazards to the families and the community. These loans are made at 1% interest and are repayable in not more than 10 years.

3. Rural rental housing loans.—Loans are made to private nonprofit corporations and consumer cooperatives to provide modest cost rental or cooperative housing and related facilities for elderly persons in rural areas with low or moderate incomes or other persons with low incomes in rural areas. These loans which bear 3% interest and are repayable in not more than 50 years are generally restricted to existing borrowers who need subsequent loans.

The publicly assisted housing direct and insured loan program recommendations shown above, together with publicly assisted housing recommendations for the Department of Housing and Urban Development, are designed to provide the 700,000 housing unit starts set forth in the President's 10-year housing program for fiscal year 1969 and fiscal year 1970. The Department of Agriculture programs will provide 174,280 housing unit starts and acquisitions during this 2-year period for low to moderate income rural families.

Particular emphasis will be given under Farmers Home Administration programs to provision of adequate housing for rural families with annual incomes of less than $3 thousand per year. These publicly assisted housing interest supplement loan programs will be administered by Farmers Home Administration through delegation by the Department of Housing and Urban Development under section 235 of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968, as well as under the basic authorities of the Farmers Home Administration. The interest supplement programs will be administered subject to the maximum allowable income limits as prescribed in the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968.

This fund was established in 1965 pursuant to section 517(e) of title V of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended by Public Law 89-117 and Public Law 89-754. This fund is used to insure rural housing loans, farm labor housing loans, and loans for rural rental housing. Initial capitalization of the fund at $100 million was provided by the Supplemental Appropriation Act, 1966, approved October 31, 1965.

If the borrowers are persons of low or moderate income, and if their need for necessary housing cannot be met with financial assistance from other sources, including assistance available under section 235 or 236 of the National Housing Act, the loans made by the Farmers Home Administration will bear interest at 5½% with provisions for interest credits up to 4% under certain circumstances. Loans to persons other than those of low or moderate income bear interest currently at a rate of 6¾% plus a ½ of 1% insurance charge.

This fund is authorized by subtitle C of the Consolidated Farmers Home Administration Act of 1961 to finance emergency loans in areas where agricultural credit is not readily available because of natural disasters. Loans are generally confined to areas designated as emergency areas. Loans may be made outside of such areas to eligible applicants who have suffered severe production losses not general to the area. Loans also may be made to previously indebted borrowers to permit orderly repayment of such indebtedness.

Loans.—(a) Emergency loans.—Emergency loans are made at 3% interest to eligible farmers, ranchers, or oyster planters and to domestic corporations or partnerships engaged primarily in farming, ranching, or oyster planting. Loans are made for any authorized purposes for which operating, farm ownership, or soil and water loans may be made by the Farmers Home Administration.

(b) Other loans.—Where necessary to protect the Government's investment, obligations are incurred in connection with outstanding loans to provide for payment of such costs as taxes and insurance. Such advances are charged to the borrowers' accounts.

Administrative expenses.—The principal administrative expenses are related to the loan programs of the Farmers Home Administration. These expenses are estimated at $6.2 million in 1969 and $6.3 million in 1970. Administrative expenses for the Office of the General Counsel are estimated at $36 thousand in fiscal years 1969 and 1970.

Financing the program.—Budget authority of $31.9 million is required in 1970 to repay $30 million loan, with interest, made to the Emergency Credit Revolving Fund from the Commodity Credit Corporation, pursuant to Public Law 90-328. A net loss of $6.6 million is estimated on an accrual basis. Receipts are estimated to exceed expenditures by $2.9 million on a cash basis.

Operating results and financial conditions.—Revenue for 1970, consisting principally of interest on loans, is estimated at $2.6 million, compared to expense of $9.2 million, resulting in an estimated loss of $6.6 million. A net loss of $1.8 million is estimated for 1969, and a net loss of $6.3 million resulted in 1968.

Loans receivable, after allowance for losses, are expected to amount to $85.2 million on June 30, 1970, as compared to $96.5 million on June 30, 1969 and $118.6 million on June 30, 1968.

The Government investment at June 30, 1970, is expected to be $143.7 million consisting of $267.8 million appropriated and donated, less a deficit of $124.1 million.

This fund is used to insure farm ownership, soil and water, and recreation loans to individuals and association loans as authorized by subtitle A of the Consolidated Farmers Home Administration Act of 1961, as amended. The insurance endorsement on each insured loan may include an agreement by the Government to purchase the loan after a specified initial period. The initial fund of $1 million may be supplemented by amounts retained by the Government out of interest collected from insured loan borrowers and by borrowing from the Secretary of the Treasury. From any amounts so retained, not to exceed one-half of 1% of the outstanding principal obligations must be deposited to the fund to cover losses. Any remainder of such charges may be used for administrative expenses. Loans may be made directly from the fund from available receipts or borrowings from the Treasury for the purpose of acquiring blocks of loans if there is reasonable assurance that the loans can be sold to investors without undue delay. With respect to new loans made from this fund, not more than $100 million may be held in the fund at any one time. Interest paid the Secretary of the Treasury on borrowings is based on the current average market yield of outstanding marketable obligations of the United States having maturities comparable to the notes issued for borrowings from the Treasury for operation of the fund.

Budget program.—Capital outlay is estimated at $790.4 million in 1970, an increase of $56.3 million over 1969 and an increase of $197.4 million over 1968. Included in capital outlay is $477.3 million in 1969 and $505.5 million in 1970 for making loans from the fund which will later be sold on an insured basis. The increase in 1969 and 1970 in sale of loans from the fund is based on all insured loans being made by the fund for later sale in order to permit a premium yield to investors. Insured loans outstanding which are contingent liabilities against the insurance fund are expected to increase from $1,451 million on June 30, 1968 to approximately $1,949 million at June 30, 1969 and $2,379 million by June 30, 1970.

Financing.—Net repayments to the Treasury are estimated at $95 million in 1969 and $8 million in 1970.

Operating results and retained earnings.—Total revenue, consisting of loan insurance charges and interest income on loans held by the fund, is estimated at $9.5 million in 1969 and 1970.

Net outstanding loans receivable of $55.3 million are estimated at June 30, 1970. Retained earnings, available to cover losses will be exhausted before the end of 1970. The deficit of $6.9 million when added to the $1 million appropriation and estimated borrowings of $65.7 million from the Treasury represent a $59.8 million Government investment.

These funds are administered by the Farmers Home Administration, under agreements with 36 individual States, for use in carrying out subtitles A and B of the Consolidated Farmers Home Administration Act of 1961. In these States, real-estate type loans are made from or purchased with these funds and insured under the Agricultural Credit Insurance Fund. In some States, operating-type loans are made at 5½% interest. The entire assets of the 36 State corporations are being administered by the Farmers Home Administration, with the exception of $15.7 million representing the partial return of cash or other assets, at face value, to 18 of these States for rural rehabilitation purposes agreed upon between each corporation and the Federal Government. The entire assets of six other State rural rehabilitation corporations have been returned to those States.

This program is aimed at assuring fair play in the marketing of livestock, meat, and poultry. Its principal purpose is to maintain effective competition for livestock, meats and poultry, so as to bring to farmers and ranchers the true market value of their livestock and poultry. Members of the livestock, poultry, and meat industries are also protected against unfair business practices of competitors. Consumers are also protected from unfair practices in the marketing of meats and poultry, and from restrictions on competition which could unduly increase meat and poultry prices.

The increase for 1970 would be used to expand the Department's activities in the areas of (1) packer meat merchandising, (2) effective competition, (3) poultry marketing practices, (4) financial protection, (5) check weighing scales, (6) rate proposals, (7) packer livestock procurement, and (8) livestock marketing practices.

The volume of work performed is indicated by the following examples:

The Office has responsibility for the information work of the entire Department. Its major objective is to report to farmers, agricultural, and closely related groups, and to the public the Department's research, action, regulatory, and other programs, using all information media. This work is carried on in close cooperation with the land-grant institutions and with private industries which serve agriculture. Workload depends upon Department program demands, direct requests, and legislative requirements.

1. Publications review and distribution.—The Department's printed publications are reviewed, published, and distributed. Processed publications are reviewed. Publications include farmers' bulletins, leaflets, periodicals, scientific, research, and marketing publications, and agricultural statistics.

2. Review and distribution of current agricultural information.—The Department's widespread activities require extensive preparation of information material for press, radio, and television use, as well as for specific agricultural outlets and the general public. Periodic crop, price, and market reports and press releases are issued. Digests, newsletters, special articles, and other editorial services are made available to press associations, farm and general publications, trade publications, daily newspapers, and encyclopedic annuals. Radio is used to reach farmers locally through single stations, and to broadcast nationally through the major networks. Films, television packages, and other services are prepared for the use of land-grant institutions, television farm broadcasters, and TV networks. Information campaigns involving activities of cross-agency interest are developed using all media. The Yearbook of Agriculture is published by the Office and distributed by the Members of Congress.

3. Review, preparation, and distribution of visual agricultural information.—Motion pictures for the Department and nonprofit organizations associated with agriculture, produced on a reimbursable basis under the Department's working capital fund, are distributed through cooperating State film libraries. Still photographs, illustrations, graphics, and exhibits are similarly produced for use in explaining and reporting on Department programs. News and general-type photographs of Department programs and activities are available to news media from a centralized library.

The National Agricultural Library, cooperating jointly with the two other national libraries—the Library of Congress and the National Library of Medicine—provides coverage and servicing of worldwide publications in the agricultural, chemical, and biological sciences. It serves the research, extension, regulatory, and other programs of the Department and State agricultural agencies. It contains more than 1.3 million volumes, one of the world's most extensive agricultural collections. Since the Library's primary purpose is to provide for research needs, substantive publications in the animal sciences, plant sciences, agricultural chemistry, agricultural engineering, soils, forestry, agricultural products, home economics, world sociology, agricultural economics and agricultural statistics are acquired and preserved. Publications are currently acquired from more than 150 governments and jurisdictional entities in some 50 different languages. In addition, printed information of agricultural societies, organizations, cooperatives, and general material in the field of agriculture are collected and made available for use.

Information contained in the agricultural literature is disseminated through bibliographies, reference services, loans and photocopies to agricultural colleges and universities, research institutions, Government agencies, agricultural associations, industry, individual scientists, farmers, and the general public in every part of the world.

During 1968, 217,173 separate issues of periodicals were added to the collection by purchase, gift, and exchange. During the same period 226,585 loans of books and periodicals were made and 111,217 reference questions answered.

The decrease for 1970 reflects the nonrecurring costs in 1969 for moving the Library to the new building in Beltsville, Md., offset in part by additional costs required for a full-year's maintenance of the new building.

FOREST SERVICE

The Service carries on three primary functions: (1) protection, development, and use of about 187 million acres of land in national forests and national grasslands in the United States and Puerto Rico; (2) forestry research for all public and private forest lands and related ranges to improve protection from fire, insects, and diseases; to increase production of timber, forage, water, and other products; to improve methods for developing and managing recreation resources; to develop better utilization and marketing of forest products; and to maintain a current inventory of forest resources through a nationwide forest survey; and (3) cooperation with States and private landowners to obtain better fire protection on approximately 517 million acres of forest land and nonforest watersheds; to provide technical advice and financial assistance to promote development, improvement, and expansion of forest pest detection and suppression programs; to improve forest practices on about 367 million acres of privately owned commercial timber lands; and to encourage reforestation and stimulate development and management of State, county, and community forests.

These primary functions include construction and maintenance of roads and trails, control of forest pests, protection against floods, land acquisition and exchange, and a number of cooperative projects.

1. Forest land management.—(a) National forest protection and management.—The 154 national forests and 19 units of national grasslands are managed under multiple use and sustained yield principles. The natural resources of outdoor recreation, range, timber, watershed, and wildlife are utilized in a planned combination that will best meet the needs of the Nation without impairing productivity of the land. These management and utilization principles were recognized in the Multiple Use-Sustained Yield Act of June 12, 1960 (74 Stat. 215). Work programs and budget estimates are related to the development program for the national forests, a plan to meet the increasing demands for specific national forest resource needs through 1972 and for long-term objectives to the year 2000. Increases are provided in the budget to further attainment of these program objectives. Construction funds of $19.8 million are budgeted for construction or rehabilitation of campground and picnic facilities and other recreation improvements, the construction of dwellings or barracks for employee housing, fire lookouts, service and storage buildings, communication facilities, and other improvements. Funds appropriated under cooperative range improvements are merged with this appropriation for obligational purposes.

(b) Water resource development related activities.—This activity provides for the development of recreational facilities and for other activities required by water resource projects of other agencies located within or adjacent to the national forests.

(c) Fighting forest fires.—This provides for employment of additional manpower and other facilities for forest fire emergencies which cannot be met by the fire control organization provided under national forest protection and management. Costs above the amounts estimated for the current and budget years are authorized to be met from advances from other Forest Service appropriations. In addition, a supplemental appropriation for fighting forest fires is anticipated for 1969 under Proposed for later transmission.

Forest fires controlled (number).....	11,771	10,000	10,000
Area burned (acres).....	204,106	215,000	220,000

(d) Insect and disease control.—Activities to suppress and control destructive insects and diseases that threaten timber areas include two types of work carried on jointly by Federal, State, and private agencies: (1) Surveys on forest lands to detect and evaluate infestations of forest insects and infections of tree diseases and determination of protective measures to be taken, and (2) control operations to suppress or eradicate forest insects and diseases, including white pine blister rust.

(e) Acquisition of lands.—Lands are purchased to protect the watersheds of navigable streams and to increase the production of timber with the approval of the National Forest Reservation Commission.

2. Forest research.—Research is conducted at eight regional forest experiment stations, the Forest Products Laboratory, and the Institute of Tropical Forestry.

(a) Forest and range management.—This research provides private and public land managers and owners with a sound basis for management of timber, forage, and watershed lands. Studies are conducted to maintain a sustained yield of products at the lowest possible costs; increase forage for domestic livestock and improve habitat for wildlife without damage to soil, watershed, or other values; assure maximum regular flow of usable water, and reduce floods and sedimentation; and improve methods for developing and managing recreation resources.

(b) Forest protection.—Research is conducted to develop sound measures for the protection of forests from damage by fire, insects, and diseases. Forest fire research provides improved methods of predicting fire danger, and preparing for and combating fire by combinations of ground and aerial methods. Insect and disease research develops direct controls, silvicultural measures, and biological agents to combat forest pests.

(c) Forest products and engineering.—Studies are conducted to develop new and improved forest products, reduction and utilization of waste, and use of low-quality wood and less-desirable species. They include studies to reduce costs of logging and wood utilization, and to develop basic knowledge of wood and disseminate this to forest owners, manufacturers, fabricators, and consumers. Research is also conducted to advance the mechanization and efficiency of forestry operations, and to develop and evaluate machines and similar equipment for such operations as logging, planting, timber-stand improvement, and protection of forests.

(d) Forest resource economics.—These investigations are conducted to inventory and appraise the condition of forest lands, volume and quality of standing timber, ownership of timber resources, annual growth and depletion, and the potential need for timber products. Studies of the economics of forest crop production and of marketing of forest products are also included.

3. State and private forestry cooperation.—These programs are carried on with the States, with other public agencies, and with private agencies and individuals. Their purposes are to improve forest management on private and non-Federal public lands, and improve the production of forest products and services. By so doing, the welfare of rural people will improve and an adequate supply of forest resources for the future will be assured. The privately owned forest lands that are involved comprise three-fourths of the Nation's commercial forest area and produce about 75% of all timber cut.

(a) Forest fire control.—Assistance is furnished 50 States in preventing and suppressing forest fires on private and State-owned lands by financial aid, training, procurement of equipment, and a nationwide fire prevention campaign. About 93% of the 517 million acres of non-Federal ownership planned for protection is now covered. During 1967 the acreage burned on protected areas was 0.40% as against an estimated 6.36% on unprotected lands. Of the total expenditures under this program, 84.2% is contributed by States and counties, 1.6% by private owners, and 14.2% by the Federal Government.

(b) Forest tree planting.—To encourage woodland owners to reforest unproductive portions of their holdings, and farmers to plant wind barriers around their fields and farmsteads—a total of more than 70 million acres altogether—the States provide planting stock at reasonable prices. The Federal Government shares the cost of producing the stock with the State and private landowners.

(c) Forest management and processing.—In cooperation with 49 States, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands, technical assistance is given to woodland owners in applying good multiple-use management to their forest holdings. Also, assistance is provided operators of small primary forest products manufacturing plants to improve their production and marketing. In 1968, 106,328 owners and 11,096 processors were assisted.

(d) General forestry assistance.—Technical forest management assistance is provided to State, community, private, and other Federal agencies, forest industries, colleges, and landowners.

Roads and trails are essential to protection and management of national forests and utilization of their resources.

The Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1966 provides authorization of $170 million each for 1968 and 1969. The Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1968 provides an additional authorization of $170 million each for 1970 and 1971. These authorizations are available for obligation a year in advance of the year for which authorized. The 1969 budget provided for utilization of $31.4 million of the $170 million 1969 authorization and $63 million of the unused portion of the 1968 authorization. This budget provides for utilization of the $103.7 million of the unused portion of the 1969 authorization.

The 1970 program will involve the construction and reconstruction of about 1,038 miles of general purpose and recreation roads and timber access roads to harvest national forest timber. This compares with 1,289 miles built in 1968 and 944 miles being built in 1969.

Of the revenues received annually from national forest activities, 10% is available under the permanent appropriation Roads and trails for States, for construction and maintenance within the State from which such proceeds are derived. Such amounts are merged with this appropriation for obligational purposes.

The Working capital fund was established by the act of August 3, 1956 (16 U.S.C. 579b), as amended by the act of October 23, 1962, 16 U.S.C. 579b. It is a self-sustaining revolving fund which provides services to national forests, experiment stations, and when necessary, to other Federal agencies, and as provided by law to State and private agencies and persons who cooperate with the Forest Service in fire control and other authorized programs.

The Working capital fund requires no cash appropriation. Initially, its assets were purchased by regular Forest Service appropriations and donated to the fund. Where expansion of Working capital fund operations is required it generally is financed pro rata by benefiting Forest Service appropriations and the resulting assets are donated to the fund. In some instances assets have been obtained without cost to Forest Service appropriations or the Working capital fund. In other instances, the expansion was financed by the Working capital fund.

The following services were provided by the Working capital fund in fiscal year 1968:

1. Equipment service.—This service owns, operates, maintains, and replaces approximately 13,000 pieces of common use motor driven and similar equipment. This equipment is rented to a total of 166 proclaimed national forests, experiment stations and other units, and in some cases, to other agencies, at rates which recover the cost of operation, repair and maintenance, management, and depreciation. The rates also include an increment which provides additional cash which when added to depreciation earnings and the residual value of equipment provides sufficient funds to replace the equipment. This service operates 90 repair shops.

2. Aircraft service.—This service operates and maintains 57 Forest Service owned aircraft used in fire surveillance and suppression and in other Forest Service programs. The aircraft are based at 11 locations and are rented to national forests, experiment stations, and in some cases, to other agencies, at rates which recover the cost of operation, maintenance, repair, and improvements in the airworthiness of the aircraft. Replacement costs and the costs of additional aircraft are financed pro rata by benefiting Forest Service appropriations. This service operates three aircraft maintenance shops.

3. Supply service.—This service operates the following common services:

Central supply.—This service is centralized at two locations for procurement, warehousing, and supply of common use items, such as work project tools, provisions, and supplies, which are issued and sold to national forests, experiment stations, and others at prices which recover cost.

Sign shop.—These include 13 small shops which manufacture and supply special signs for the national forests for use in regulating traffic and as information to the public and other users of the national forests. The signs are sold to national forests and experiment stations at cost.

Subsistence.—These are 30 facilities which prepare and serve meals at cost to Forest Service work crews working in remote areas where adequate public restaurant facilities are not available.

Cribbing.—This facility is located on the Angeles National Forest, Calif., to manufacture special concrete structural material used in embankments for erosion control purposes along access roads in the national forests. This material is sold to national forests at prices which recover costs.

4. Nursery service.—This service operates 14 forest tree nurseries and cold storage facilities for storage of tree and seed stock and one seed extractory. Tree seed is procured, cleaned, bagged, and stored in refrigerated facilities. Tree and seed stock are sold to national forests, States, and other Federal agencies at cost.

The Office of Business Economics contributes to the advancement of the economy through the preparation of facts and analyses essential to the formulation and execution of policies relating to the major economic problems that confront the Nation. The principal programs are:

1. Preparation of national income and product data.—Calculations are made of the gross national product, national income, personal income, and their components, providing an overall view of the state of the economy. Input-output accounts supplement the national income and product accounts by providing a closeup of the manner in which the various industries interact in the production of the national output. Regional accounts provide a profile of our economy by States and smaller subdivisions. During 1970, economic analyses necessary for planning the development of water and related land resources in the Souris-Red-Rainey and Great Lakes River Basin Commissions will be provided.

2. Analysis of business trends.—The business situation is assessed monthly, and the results of continuing analyses of the major factors underlying cyclical developments and long-range business trends are published regularly. Included are surveys that collect information on business investment plans, and the work on an econometric model which forecasts the future movement of the gross national product, its components, and other key elements in the national accounts. During 1970, the existing plant and equipment survey will be expanded (1) to include industries not now covered; and (2) to provide separate information on expenditures for plant and expenditures for equipment.

3. Computation of the balance of payments.—Balance-of-payments accounts provide yet another elaboration of the national income and product accounts by depicting in detail all economic transactions with foreign nations.

The Census Bureau is the largest general-purpose statistical agency of the Federal Government. The principal programs carried out under the appropriation salaries and expenses are:

1. Distribution and service.—Periodic sample surveys are conducted which provide estimates of retail sales (1) weekly for major kinds of business, and monthly for individual kinds of business for the total United States and (2) monthly for summary and selected kinds of business for regions, census geographic divisions, and selected large States and individual standard metropolitan statistical areas (SMSA's), and monthly sales of department stores for many SMSA's and counties. Also provided are end-of-month national estimates of retail inventories and accounts receivable balances by kind of business, annual national estimates of sales-inventory ratios by kind of business, and annual national measures on the merchandise line composition of retail sales. Surveys also provide (1) monthly national estimates of the receipts of selected service trades and (2) sales and inventories of merchant wholesalers for individual kinds of business on the national level, and for summary and selected kinds of business for major geographic regions. In 1969 the service trades survey will be extended to additional service areas. In addition, during the marketing season, estimates are made of canned food stocks held by distributors, and quarterly reports are prepared regarding green coffee roastings and inventories.

A county business patterns report, providing data on employment and payrolls by detailed kinds of business and by individual county, is prepared annually; this report covers nonfarm paid employment included in the social security program.

2. Construction.—Monthly reports are published for housing starts, residential and nonresidential construction authorized by building permits, and the value of new construction put in place. Annual reports are provided on expenditures for residential alterations and repairs, and annual price indexes are compiled for new single-family houses sold.

In 1970 quarterly national and annual regional price indexes will be developed for new single-family houses, and annual regional price indexes will be developed for multi-family dwellings. In addition, the nonresidential construction progress survey will be expanded to result in more detailed and accurate statistics.

3. Manufacturing.—Data are provided monthly on manufacturers' sales, orders, and inventories for total manufacturing and for about 35 industry breakdowns. In 1970 the inventory data for nonmanufacturing locations of manufacturing companies will be included. An annual survey of manufactures produces data on the important measures of factory operations such as employment, value added by manufactures, shipments in total and by class of products, inventories, and investment. Separate data are provided for the defense activities in defense-oriented industries. Monthly, quarterly, and annual surveys are conducted of production, shipments, orders, and materials consumed for important industries and products. Data are also developed to provide measures of the forces changing the location, structure, and growth of industry.

4. Foreign trade.—Monthly, quarterly, and annual reports are published on the quantity, shipping weight, dollar value of imports and exports, by mode of transportation, detailed commodity category, custom district, and country of origin or destination.

5. Transportation.—Methods are developed and tested for undertaking or improving periodic surveys in transportation areas as directed by statutory requirements.

6. State and local governments.—Reports are published annually regarding the revenue, expenditure, indebtedness and debt transactions, financial assets, employment, and payrolls of State and local governments. Quarterly information on the national level is furnished regarding State and local tax revenue by type of tax and governmental level. Technical consultation and assistance are provided to State and local government officials, and catalogs are published detailing the statistical publications and data available at the Census Bureau which would be of use to State and local governmental officials. Beginning 1969, monthly data regarding the construction expenditures of State and local governments will be provided.

7. Population.—This activity includes current estimates of the number of households, the farm population, school enrollment, personal income, population mobility, and other characteristics of the population, as well as data concerning purchases, stocks, and intentions to purchase. It also provides annual estimates of the population of the United States, of each of the States, and for a limited number of standard metropolitan statistical areas. A developmental program is underway to prepare local area estimates of population and income through the use of administrative records. Data from existing surveys are used to prepare statistical reports and analyses on poverty trends.

8. Housing.—National and regional quarterly estimates are provided for housing vacancy rates. The program is being expanded in 1969 to provide vacancy rates by broad classes of the rental and homeowner portions of the housing market and to produce selected characteristics of the occupied inventory. Also, technical assistance is available to local areas wishing to conduct vacancy surveys.

9. Agriculture.—Information on cotton ginnings and production, as required by statute, is compiled and published. Statistical services are provided regarding the information from the census of agriculture.

10. Statistical abstract and special reports.—The Statistical Abstract, issued annually, summarizes government and private statistics on the industrial, social, political, and economic activities of the United States. A comprehensive set of statistical indicators is published monthly in the Business Cycle Developments report; the principal time series on defense activity which influence short-term changes in the national economy are published monthly in Defense Indicators; and a report is published on Long-Term Economic Trends. Other general reports are published periodically.

In 1969 the Business Cycle Developments report will be expanded and improved and retitled Business Conditions Digest to reflect the broader range of the revised publication.

11. Research and development.—Research and development is conducted on survey methods and techniques, including sample survey methods and theory, questionnaire design, response errors, equipment design and utilization, computer editing, analytical techniques, including techniques of geographic analysis, and administrative operations for the purpose of increasing accuracy, output, and usefulness of statistical data per unit of cost.

The Nineteenth Decennial Census includes the censuses of population and housing and the census of agriculture (including irrigation and drainage).

1. Census of population and housing.—This census will provide complete counts of the population and housing units. Data from a sample of households will provide statistics regarding significant demographic characteristics of the country. The basic enumeration method will be mail-out/mail-back with followup, although the traditional enumerator canvass will be used for about 35 to 40% of the population.

Preparatory work and procurement of most materials will be completed. Plans will be formulated to reduce census undercoverage, provide additional statistical summaries for geographic divisions, and improve the usefulness of the statistics. The major element of work will be the collection of the data. Processing of the results will begin. Planning work will be initiated for a sample survey in the poverty area of major cities to follow the census and to collect information regarding unemployment, underemployment, and nonparticipation in the labor force.

2. Census of agriculture.—This census will provide a complete count of the number of farms, the characteristics of farms and farm operations, use of agricultural land, production and sales of farm products, farm credit and debt, and principal cash expenditures. A mail-out/mail-back with followup procedure will be used to collect the data.

Fiscal 1970 work includes completion of the preparatory work, collection of the data, and the beginning of data processing.

A census of governments is required "for the year 1957 and for every fifth year thereafter" by title 13, section 161 of the United States Code. The law specifies that "each such Census shall include, but shall not be limited to data on taxes and tax valuations, governmental receipts, expenditures, indebtedness, and employees of States, counties, cities, and other governmental units." In 1970, preparatory work for the 1972 census will begin by preparing specifications regarding the census content and collection and processing methods.

The Bureau of the Census undertakes work for governmental and other bodies to the extent that such work meets desirable public needs, can be performed without adversely affecting activities financed from funds appro-riated to the Bureau, and can be more appropriately or efficiently performed by the Bureau of the Census than by the sponsoring agency.

Significant work includes the collection of labor force data for the BLS, the Health Interview Survey for the National Center for Health Statistics, the Home Fallout Protection Survey for the Office of Civil Defense, statistical training of foreign nationals, and providing statistical assistance to underdeveloped countries. The latter two programs are financed by the AID.

Grants and loans for development facilities are made to improve the environmental essentials for the growth and expansion of private enterprise, so as to increase employment and raise income in areas where economic growth is lagging behind the rest of the Nation.

1. Redevelopment area assistance.—Development facilities funds are concentrated on projects in redevelopment areas which promise the greatest contribution to the development process of combining the investments of public agencies and private groups to achieve economic growth.

Basic grants of up to 50% of project cost are made which will directly or indirectly assist in the creation of additional long-term employment opportunities and benefit the long-term unemployed and members of low income families. Basic grants can be supplemented up to 80% of project cost depending upon the relative need of the area and nature of the project.

Construction grants by other agencies may also be supplemented up to 80% of project cost so that the areas can take advantage of other Federal programs which will make a significant contribution toward stimulating economic growth. Additional legislation is to be proposed for extending the authorization for these activities.

Long term, low interest loans may also be a part of development facilities project financing when financial assistance is not otherwise available from private lenders or Federal agencies on terms which would permit accomplishment of the project. The interest rate on 1969 loans is 4¾%.

Program volume for redevelopment area assistance is estimated as follows:

	Projects
	1968	1969	1970
New projects.....	482	622	770
Projects brought forward.....	379	209	250
Projects denied or withdrawn.....	259	242	239
Projects carried forward.....	209	250	513
Projects approved.....	393	339	268

2. Economic development districts and centers assistance.—This activity includes development facility funds for projects in economic development centers. Each district must include at least two redevelopment areas and have one or more designated economic development centers.

A center may be outside a redevelopment area if it is so economically related that its economic growth can be expected to alleviate economic distress in the district. Additionally, title I grant projects in redevelopment areas of districts may, under certain conditions, be increased by up to 10% of project cost. Loans may also be made for projects in development centers.

Additional funds for this activity will enhance the growth potential of underdeveloped multicounty districts and provide an alternative to the present migration patterns of the unemployed.

3. Regional development assistance.—The Secretary of Commerce is authorized to provide supplemental grant funds to each of the Federal Cochairmen of the Regional Action Planning Commissions, for the purpose of increasing the Federal contribution to Federal grant-in-aid programs assisting the acquisition of land and equipment and the construction of facilities. The amount of the supplement is determined by the Commissions, but the total Federal contribution is limited to 80% of total project costs. Additional legislation is to be proposed for extending the authorization for this activity.

The 1970 program will assist in funding such priority projects as airports, vocational education, tourism, industrial parks, and water and health facilities.

Long-term, low-interest loans and working capital loan guarantees are made to encourage industrial development. The objective is to increase employment opportunities and family income in areas which lag behind the rest of the Nation economically.

1. Redevelopment area assistance.—Commercial and industrial loans are made in qualified areas for a maximum of 65% of project cost with repayment periods up to 25 years. The interest rate for 1969 loans is 5¼%. Financial assistance must be otherwise unavailable from private lenders or Federal agencies on terms which would permit accomplishment of the project. Working capital loans made by private lenders in connection with Economic Development Administration projects are guaranteed for up to 90% of the outstanding balance.

2. Economic development districts and centers assistance.—This activity includes loans and working capital loan guarantee projects in economic development centers. This is an incentive to encourage the formation of larger, economically viable planning units called districts. Each district must include at least two redevelopment areas, and one or more cities designated as economic development centers which may be outside a redevelopment area.

The 1970 program level will enhance industrial and commercial growth in economic development centers to provide jobs for the rural unemployed who might otherwise migrate to the large cities.

3. Collateral protection.—The employment potential and Government investment of projects in temporary difficulty are frequently protected by the purchase of senior liens in order to prevent the premature liquidation of projects by other secured creditors.

This program covers collateral protection costs in connection with loans made under both the Area Redevelopment Act and the Public Works and Economic Development Act. Program volume is estimated as follows:

1. Redevelopment and other area assistance aids communities in their economic development through:

Technical assistance contracts and grants.—These provide informational, advisory, and institutional technical assistance on diverse problems and projects. The 1970 program increases are directed toward financing development corporations which will identify opportunities for business expansion and secure investment capital and management assistance at the local level.

Planning grants to States and areas.—These grants, not to exceed 75% of total costs, are made to assist and develop comprehensive economic planning and overall economic development plans. The 1970 program will fund 26 more area planning organizations outside of development districts.

Program volume is estimated as follows (dollars are obligations in thousands):

	1968		1969		1970
	Number	Amount	Number	Amount	Number	Amount

Research.—A continuing program of research, training, and education is performed through contracts and grants. This permits the use of the best talent available in universities, other governmental agencies, and private institutions to help determine the causes and cures of unemployment, underemployment, and low incomes. This information is then made available for use of government and community leaders.

The 1969 and 1970 planned program is as follows (dollars are obligations in thousands):

2. Economic development districts and centers assistance is provided by administrative expense grants for multi-county economic development districts. These planning grants fund 75% of the total district cost of salaries and associated expenses required to hire full-time professional staffs for planning and implementing district development programs.

The 1970 program will fund 25 more districts bringing the total funded districts to 115.

3. Regional planning and technical assistance is provided through direct grants to the Regional Action Planning Commissions and through general research supporting the programs of the Commissions. Subactivity functions are discussed in (a) through (c) below:

(a) Expenses of regional action planning commissions are financed by grants to the Commissions. The Commissions formulate basic strategy and implement specific programs for the economic development of the regions. In 1970 State members will match the Federal contribution to the expenses of three Commissions which will have received 2 Federal fiscal years of full support from the Economic Development Administration. The State contribution is estimated at $1,420 thousand.

Administrative grant support is estimated as follows (dollars are obligations in thousands):

(c) Other planning and technical assistance.—The Commissions conduct their own programs of region-specific technical assistance and research, and support State investment planning activities through direct grants from the Federal Government. The Economic Development Administration carries out research on broader problems of regional economic development. In 1970 three Commissions will devote additional resources to intensive investigation of regional problems and specific program development, based on findings of earlier studies.

International activities of the Department are designed to stimulate the expansion of U.S. foreign commerce. This assists in the growth of the national economy by creating new jobs, increasing industry profits, reducing the balance-of-payments deficit, and maintaining U.S. leadership among world trading nations. Free market forces are encouraged to play the maximum possible role in the conduct of international business, and assistance is available to U.S. firms to more effectively conduct their international business.

1. International trade promotions.—The sale of American-made goods overseas is promoted by providing facilities for the exhibition of American products in international trade fairs, trade centers, sample display services, and through mobile trade fairs, America-week promotions, and joint Government-industry export programs.

The effectiveness of this activity is indicated by the dollar volume of immediate and projected first-year export sales by exhibitors, and their overseas sales agency relationships established as a result of these promotions.

Actual and projected results of major ongoing trade promotion programs are as follows:

Trade and industrial exhibitions.—At 18 commercial exhibitions in 1968 immediate and projected 12-month export sales totaled $55.9 million and 262 new agencies were established. Based on operating experience, expected results from 26 commercial exhibitions planned for 1970 are projected at about $100 million in sales and the establishment of over 400 new agencies.

Trade centers.—Immediate and projected 12-month export sales made at 46 shows held at six trade centers in 1968 totaled $46 million and 229 new agencies were established. Expected results from 55 shows planned for 1970 are projected at $55 million in sales and the establishment of about 350 new agencies. Use of trade center facilities by individual firms between regularly scheduled shows in 1968 resulted in additional sales of $6.3 million. Between-show promotions in 1970 are expected to result in about $9 million in export sales.

America weeks.—Eight America-week promotions were held in 1968 with initial sales of $2.5 million. Initial sales in 1970 are projected at $4.9 million.

Joint Government-industry export program.—This new program involves contractual relations with private U.S. trade organizations for the development of export markets. The program is aimed particularly at increasing the U.S. share of developed markets and gaining a foothold for U.S. products in developing markets.

In 1970, provision is made for an increase in the number of trade and industrial exhibitions held abroad, and increases in both the America-week promotions and the joint Government-industry export programs.

2. Promotion of international investment.—U.S. policy and business interests are advanced by stimulating investment and licensing by foreign firms in the United States and by facilitating investment in developing countries by U.S. firms.

3. Commercial information.—Business and Government agencies are provided information on economic and commercial developments abroad. Assistance is rendered to American exporters in identifying overseas sales opportunities, and in selecting and establishing profitable relationships with overseas representatives and manufacturers through such media as Trade Lists, World Trade Directory Reports and Trade Contact Surveys, and the American International Traders Index. In addition, counseling is provided to U.S. firms, primarily small and medium-sized business, that are unfamiliar with the techniques of international trade and the facilities for export promotion.

4. International trade and investment policy development.—Efforts are made to remove barriers to, improve the climate for, and otherwise advance and protect the interests of American business operating abroad. Such efforts include (1) the development of policies and programs in connection with international trade, finance and export credit, resources, business practices, and exporter service industries; (2) the conduct of international commercial and financial negotiations in major international forums (such as GATT, OECD, UN); and (3) the representation of American interests in obtaining equitable treatment in foreign countries.

5. Commercial/economic officers program support.—The Commerce Department participates in the recruitment, assignment, career management, and promotion of commercial/economic officers in the Foreign Service who represent U.S. commercial interests overseas.

6. Export strategy planning.—The purpose of this activity is to develop, with the support of private industry and other agencies, an overall national export strategy to assist U.S. exporters in opening up new markets overseas. This strategy planning staff has responsibility for: (1) formulation and recommendation of new export expansion measures; (2) continuing identification and analysis of major issues affecting U.S. international trade; (3) setting of advance "export targets" for individual categories of U.S. manufactures; (4) development of new informational data systems on U.S. overseas trade; and (5) forward, long-range evaluation and coordination of balance-of-payments and export expansion activities.

The use of excess foreign currencies to support commercial trade exhibitions in developing countries helps to improve our balance of payments position and assists in strengthening the U.S. economy by stimulating and expanding our foreign commerce. At commercial trade exhibitions in developing countries where the United States holds an excess of foreign currency, the use of such currencies assists in providing displays to bring American products to the attention of foreign buyers, and promotes U.S. foreign policy objectives by presenting a favorable image of the United States in the developing countries.

Export controls required by the Act of 1949, as amended, are necessary to safeguard the national security by regulating exports of strategic commodities, to protect the domestic economy from excessive drain of scarce commodities, and to implement U.S. foreign policy and aid in the fulfillment of international responsibilities. The continuing threat to the security and welfare of the United States from some countries makes necessary the continuation and, as necessary, the extension of controls in order to prevent transshipment to unauthorized destinations. In addition, implementation of United Nations resolutions and international agreements require further controls over exports to certain countries or for certain end uses. The Bureau of Customs has the responsibility of policing shipments at points of export. The 1970 program anticipates a licensing application workload of about 540 per day. While this represents a net decrease in the daily workload rate, it is anticipated that the Eastern European caseload will increase. As these types of licenses require more intensive individual processing, no actual reduction in the workload rate is foreseen.

The United States Travel Service develops, plans and carries out a program to stimulate and encourage travel to the United States by residents of foreign countries. The principal program activities are carried out by a marketing division which supervises (1) the creation and placement of trade and consumer travel advertising in conjunction with the advertising and sales campaigns of industry, State, and local government units, (2) production and distribution of sales promotion in support of the activities of the sellers of travel to the United States, and (3) solicitation and writing of timely articles for placement in the foreign press. A visitor services division works with the domestic travel industry and with U.S. communities for improving the reception, service, and hospitality given to foreign visitors. An Office of Research and Analysis conducts research programs in the support of promotional activities and evaluates the plans and programs of the Travel Service.

In 1970, seven overseas travel information offices will serve as centers for answering public and trade inquiries on U.S. travel and as headquarters for sales calls and other promotional activities. The estimate includes funds for increased emphasis on the production of a wider range and quantity of promotional materials. The request will also permit a strengthening of USTS headquarters support and more intensive market research in present and new country markets.

Receipts from foreign tourists represent a sector of the economy growing in importance and complexity and demanding additional supportive services from the U.S. Government if there is to be maintained real progress in achieving a favorable rate of growth in our national receipts from foreign tourism. In 1967, receipts from foreign tourists represented $1.9 billion, 6.1% of total dollar exports. This share has been steadily increasing since 1963 when it represented 5.0% of the total. Further evidence of the growth and importance of this sector can be seen when comparing average annual growth rates: U.S. exports have increased approximately 6% on the average since 1963, while foreign travel receipts have increased approximately 11%.

The special foreign currency program utilizes foreign currencies, which are excess to the normal requirements of the United States, to supplement domestic research and development activities and to encourage greater international cooperation in environmental research and allied sciences. The program consists essentially of a succession of individual projects which fluctuate from year to year. These are conducted under contract by foreign government agencies, universities, and other research organizations, to support current Environmental Science Services Administration requirements. The program planned for 1970, which will be supported by carryover funds, includes:

1. Weather forecasts and warnings.—Study of agricultural potential of arid areas where rainfall amounts are marginal and studies of techniques for regional analysis and prediction of marine environmental factors.

2. River and flood forecasts and warnings.—Studies of meteorological characteristics of watersheds and river basins for use in developing hydrologic models and improving river forecasting techniques.

3. Earth description, mapping, and charting.—Studies of the earth's magnetic field and its secular changes, and studies of energy dissipated along fault lines as compared with the latent energy which is built up in other areas.

4. Marine description, mapping, and charting.—Studies leading to a better understanding of the large scale motions of the ocean system and its interaction with the atmosphere.

5. Telecommunications and space services.—Studies of the influence of water vapor, irregular terrain, climate, and weather on radio wave propagation.

6. Environmental satellite.—Utilization of satellite data in studies of meteorology, geomagnetism, ionospheric physics, and radio propagation.

This account provides for capital outlay items, such as construction related to magnetic, seismological, meteorological, and oceanographic facilities, including ships, and purchase and installation of equipment and instrumentation required in support of operational and research programs and services.

1. Weather forecasts and warnings.—Operational programs under this activity are concerned with observing, gathering, processing, and transmitting meteorological data to the general public in the form of timely forecasts, warnings, and advisories. The 1970 request is for the purchase of low-level sounding equipment necessary to gather air pollution data; for the upgrading of the upper-air network; construction and rehabilitation of facilities in Alaska; and the replacement and upgrading of instrumentation aboard an aircraft used in hurricane and tornado research.

2. River and flood forecasts and warnings.—Provides for the equipment needed to operate the river and flood forecasts and warnings network and for effective water resources management. No new budget authority is requested in 1970 under this activity.

3. Earth description, mapping, and charting.—The 1970 request is for replacement of a shipboard magnetometer and the purchase of a five-color press to meet the demands of modern charting programs.

4. Marine description, mapping, and charting.—The 1970 request will provide for shipboard data processing equipment and automated marine charting hardware.

5. Telecommunications and space services.—No new budget authority is requested in 1970 under this activity.

It is estimated that an unobligated balance of $2,877 thousand under this no-year appropriation will be brought forward from 1969 and $700 thousand will be carried forward to 1971. These balances are required to complete the long leadtime construction, procurement, and installation actions inherent in the activities financed under the facilities, equipment, and construction appropriation.

This appropriation provides for the establishment and operation of a national satellite system to meet operational requirements for environmental data, especially meteorological. The system is based on plans for the National Operational Meteorological Satellite System (NOMSS), established to observe worldwide weather conditions and to process, analyze, and archive the data for use in environmental services and research. The satellite system is administered by the National Environmental Satellite Center (NESC) at Suitland, Md.

The first element of NOMSS, the Tiros Operational Satellite (TOS) system, became operational in 1966. Improved TOS (ITOS) spacecraft, which adds a night-time observational capability to the system, will be launched beginning in 1969. The 1970 estimate provides principally for continued operation of the TOS/ITOS system and implementation of a Geostationary Operational Environmental Satellite (GOES) system. This system is designed to provide nearly continuous observations of the earth and its environment, initially of the Western Hemisphere, in response to requirements placed on the NOMSS in 1961. (Funds for a synchronous meteorological satellite (SMS), the prototype spacecraft to implement GOES, are contained in the NASA request for 1970. In future years, ESSA will be responsible for subsequent spacecraft and launching to sustain the system.)

1. Spacecraft and launching.—Covers the design, construction, and launching of operational satellites. Obligation requirements in 1970 will be met by funds appropriated in prior years.

2. Command and data acquisition.—Covers the establishment and operation of ground facilities to command the spacecraft, acquire the observational data, and transmit the data to the processing and analysis center. The 1970 estimate provides for around-the-clock operation and maintenance of these facilities and procurement of unique ground equipment for the new ITOS F and GOES satellites.

3. Data processing, analysis, and archiving.—Converts satellite signals to forms suitable for immediate operational use in forecasting and service programs, and subsequent use for research and climatological purposes. The 1970 estimate covers continued operation and maintenance of the data processing facility and the Washington-Moscow communications link.

4. Technical management.—Technical management and support for the satellite program is provided by the National Environmental Satellite Center, and by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration on a reimbursable basis.

The Office administers laws governing the granting of patents for invention and the registration of trademarks.

In 1968, patent application disposals totaled 101,512, for a productivity gain of 5% over the 96,811 disposed of in 1967. It is expected that levels of 104,000 and 106,000 will be attained in 1969 and 1970, respectively. The 1970 estimate provides for increased patent printing requirements and mechanized search functions with staff strengthening of each to obtain greater efficiency of operations.

Receipts from fees were $24.5 million in 1968. In 1969 and 1970, receipts from fees are estimated to be $25 million and $26 million, respectively.

1. Examination and issuance of patents.—Applications are examined to determine the patentability of claimed inventions; and quasi-judicial functions are performed in appeal and interference proceedings within the Office. Specifications and drawings of successful applications are printed and the issuance of patents is regularly published. In addition, this activity includes preparation and issuance of patent grants, furnishing copies of records, maintenance of public search room and scientific library facilities, and recording instruments conveying ownership of patent and trademark rights.

2. Examination and registration of trademarks.—Applications are examined to determine the registrability of trademarks, and quasi-judicial functions are performed in appeal or adversary proceedings within the Office. Specifications and drawings of successful applications are printed and the issuance of registrations is regularly published.

The proposed increase will strengthen the Bureau's program, principally with regard to the central core of the physical measurement system, materials measurements and standards, including the Standard Reference Data System, technological measurements and standards, including particularly fire research and safety and research into the flammability of fabrics, and automatic data processing research. It will provide also the first major budget increment needed to implement the Metric System Study Act.

1. (a) Basic measurements and standards.—This includes research, development, analysis or specifications relating to standards for physical measurement; method of precise measurement of physical quantities; and precise values of fundamental physical constants suitable for tying measurement systems together. Most of the work in this sub-activity deals with a basic core of 50 physical quantities such as length, electric current, temperature, sound pressure, etc., which are fundamental to all physical measurements and for which a standard representing unit magnitude is maintained. Each quantity must be measured over a very wide range from very large to very small magnitudes, and at each magnitude it must be measurable as accurately as the current state of technology requires.

The increase budgeted will be applied to help meet the increasing demands of our technologically oriented society to extend the range and improve the accuracy of the measurement of many of these basic quantities. The greatest emphasis is planned for measurements of length, frequency, pressure, temperature, and for electrical and magnetic quantities in the higher frequency ranges.

Approximately $1 million is budgeted to implement the Metric System Study Act, Public Law 90-472, which authorized a study to determine the advantages and disadvantages of increased use of the metric system in the United States.

(b) Reference materials.—This includes (1) description and development of methods of description of the essential features of composition and structure of selected materials which govern their behavior in technologically important environments, (2) preparation and development of methods to prepare materials of precisely known composition and structure, (3) preparation of reproducible, stable sample materials for use as measurement standards and as specimens in the measurement of behavioral characteristics under given conditions.

The increase in 1970 will be used to prepare and characterize research or reference materials including samples of polymers, pure crystals, and alloys containing known trace amounts of impurities, and reference samples of biologically important compounds.

(c) Standard reference data.—This includes programs arising as a result of the Bureau's responsibility for developing a Standard Reference Data System and other programs concerned with standard reference data. Work is directed toward systematically obtaining from the scientific and technical literature and evaluating critically numerical data in the physical sciences needed by scientists and engineers. These data are the numbers that describe the properties of nature, the strengths of high temperature materials, the masses of atoms, the rates of chemical reactions, the wavelengths of light in emission spectra, and many others. Programs involve analysis of needs, acquisition of data from all available sources, critical evaluation, and compilation of data for dissemination.

The increase will be applied principally to automating the use of data files and to filling the gaps in six of the seven technical areas which comprise the program.

(d) Data on properties of matter and materials.—Data concerning the behavioral characteristics of matter and materials is generated in areas of technology where urgently needed and not readily attainable elsewhere. This program is a major resource for research scientists and design engineers in areas such as electronics, polymers, metallurgy, ceramics, communications, defense, and nuclear energy. The program supports and contributes to the Basic Measurement System, the Standard Reference Data System and Standard Reference Materials Program.

The increase will be applied to the acquisition of data in fields where the need is most critical with particular attention to infrared wavelengths as potential frequency standards, mechanical characteristics of glass and polymer composites, and measurements of the heat released in reactions involving very small amounts of materials.

(e) Technological standards.—This includes research and development of test methods and standards of performance which serve as a basis for specifications, standards and codes pertaining to materials, products, and systems used in industry and commerce; participation in technical committees for standardizing bodies such as the United States of America Standards Institute; administration of procedures for voluntary industrial standardization; participation in international standardization activities; and provision of information services pertaining to standardizing activities.

The increase will be used to implement the provisions of the Fire Research and Safety Act of 1968, and for research on flammability of fabrics pursuant to Public Law 90-189, building technology, and research on methods of analysis of technical problems.

2. (a) Computer science and technology.—This includes technical activities of the National Bureau of Standards aimed at improving the effective utilization by Government of automatic data processing equipment and computer-based data processing and information-handling systems. It includes, but is not limited to, investigation, design, and evaluation of complete systems, and the rendering of advice, consultation, and technical assistance to agencies of the Federal Government in connection with the design, selection, acquisition, and utilization of such systems. Closely connected with these technical activities are the following: providing technical leadership for and monitoring the Federal Government's participation in the development, measurement, and testing of voluntary commercial automatic data processing standards in a manner consonant with Government requirements for a compatible complex of equipments, languages, and practices; determining the need for and recommending establishment of uniform Federal standards where necessary to supplement voluntary commercial standards; and maintaining a specialized information service in support of all of the foregoing activities.

The increase will be devoted to development of standards for automatic data processing in the Federal Government and to research supporting standards development.

(b) Federal clearinghouse.—The Clearinghouse for Federal Scientific and Technical Information provides the following services: Collection of all technical reports generated by the Federal Government except those withheld for reasons of military security; indexing, reproducing, abstracting, announcing, and distributing these reports; analyzing, evaluating, and digesting contents of these reports and providing for special dissemination to regional centers and industries; and maintaining a clearinghouse for foreign technical translations. Costs of acquiring and storage are borne by this appropriation; costs of reproduction and distribution are paid by the customers. No increase is budgeted for this activity.

(c) Invention and innovation.—This includes programs related to the Bureau's broad mission which serve either to encourage invention and innovation or to encourage the greater use of technology by Government and industry. No increase is budgeted for this activity.

The research program financed by this appropriation provides a capability and competence for many services performed by the National Bureau of Standards for the Government, science, industry, and commerce, including for example, publication of scientific information; calibration of measuring instruments; tests of materials, products or systems; production and sale of standard reference materials; consultation and advice on scientific or technical problems; and specialized research on specific technical problems of other Federal agencies. Generally, when a customer from outside the Bureau receives a unique benefit from any of these services he pays the cost of the service furnished. Selected workload data roughly indicative of the magnitude of these services are as follows:

Number of calibrations and tests performed.....	39,400	40,000	41,000

RESEARCH AND TECHNICAL SERVICES (SPECIAL FOREIGN CURRENCY PROGRAM)

For payments in foreign currencies which the Treasury Department determines to be excess to the normal requirements of the United States, for necessary expenses of the National Bureau of Standards, as authorized by law, $500,000, to remain available until expended: Provided, That this appropriation shall be available, in addition to other appropriations to the Bureau, for payments in the foregoing currencies. (7 U.S.C. 1701, 1704; 15 U.S.C. 271-278e; 5 U.S.C. 1514; Public Law 90-396; Department of Commerce Appropriation Act, 1969; additional authorizing legislation to be proposed for $150,000.)

The responsibilities of the National Bureau of Standards for basic and applied research, improvement of standards, collection and dissemination of standard reference data, and the certification and distribution of standard reference materials are of sufficient breadth to encourage utilization of research capabilities in other countries. The foreign currency program supplements the Bureau's existing program, allows an acceleration of research effort in selected areas, and permits economies to the Bureau's regular appropriations over the long term.

The 1970 request represents no increase in the size of the program. Foreign currencies determined by the Treasury Department to be excess to normal requirements of the United States will be used in non-Soviet bloc countries where scientific talent is available to augment the in-house capabilities of the Bureau in the areas of standard reference materials, standard reference data, and technological standards.

This will provide for construction and improvements to the plant and facilities of the National Bureau of Standards and procurement of major special facilities. The Bureau has nearly completed the process of moving from its Washington site to the new Gaithersburg facilities. The Bureau also has a large laboratory on a 217-acre site at Boulder, Colo. and two small radio field stations.

Capital outlay.—1. Improvements and modifications.—The budget includes $200 thousand for minor capital improvements of a general nature required by the Bureau's laboratories and field stations. Other minor improvements, when of a special project-related character, are charged to the appropriation for Research and technical services. Noncapital alterations are charged to the operating costs of this appropriation.

2. General construction.—This activity includes improvements and construction items costing more than $40 thousand except for construction associated with the Bureau's relocation at Gaithersburg. The budget includes $100,000 for design of a high-purity materials facility. Anticipated costs in 1970 include $100 thousand for the budget year project and $595 thousand for the neutron physics addition to the radiation physics laboratory financed in a prior year.

3. Special facilities.—(a) NBS facilities.—This subactivity includes the acquisition of large equipment and any associated building construction or acquisition. The budget includes $600 thousand for the second and final increment for the relocation of standard time and frequency broadcast station WWVH located in Maui, Hawaii. Anticipated costs in 1970 include $250 thousand for budget year projects and $1,269 thousand for projects financed in prior years.

(b) Weights and measures standards for the States.—This subactivity finances the acquisition of basic reference standards of weight and measure for distribution to the States. Such action will help to insure uniformity of weights and measures standards throughout the Nation and to provide the physical tools necessary for precise measurement in business, industry, science, and education. The budget estimate of $100 thousand provides for the fifth and final segment of the program. It will provide sets of standards to the District of Columbia, the Virgin Islands, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico in addition to the 50 States at a total cost of $1.7 million. Anticipated costs in 1970 are $237 thousand from previous appropriations and $75 thousand of budget year funds.

The Working capital fund finances all operations of the National Bureau of Standards, except major construction projects, from advances and reimbursements. The principal of the fund, as of June 30, 1968, consisted of $5 million in appropriations, $8.3 million in capital provided by appropriations of the Bureau, and $154.1 million in net donated assets. The Government investment is estimated to grow through donation of cash and other assets financed by National Bureau of Standards' appropriations to $169.4 million by June 30, 1970.

Operating costs.—1. Technical program.—Research and technical services are conducted upon request of other Government agencies and the public, as well as in support of the Bureau's own research program. The program conducted on contract with other agencies constitutes about one-third of the technical work of the Bureau, and it is expected to continue at this level.

2. Plant improvement and special equipment.—This activity includes the costs of the Working capital fund which are reimbursed from the Bureau's capital outlay appropriations. The plant improvements and special equipment procured are donated to the fund upon completion and carried as assets of the fund at cost.

Capital outlay.—Working capital of the fund is invested in equipment which is subject to depreciation charges. Some of the equipment for the new laboratories of the Bureau is being purchased as an investment of the fund, the additional capital being provided by payments from the appropriation for construction of facilities. All other equipment and facilities financed by Bureau appropriations are shown as donated assets of the fund.

The 1970 request together with unobligated balances available from prior years provides for construction-differential subsidy and national defense allowances for the construction of 8-10 new, highly productive vessels. The number and types of vessels which will be included in the 1970 program will be determined by the Maritime Subsidy Board after evaluation and analysis of benefits to be derived from specific proposals submitted by ship operators. The 1970 program also provides for the acquisition of three vessels to be traded in during that year.

This appropriation provides for payments of subsidy to ship operators in order to maintain a U.S. merchant fleet in support of U.S. foreign commerce and capable of serving as a naval auxiliary in event of a national emergency. The program is designed to pay the difference between the fair and reasonable cost of certain expenses (wages and subsistence of crew, insurance, vessel maintenance and repair) and the estimated cost of the same items if the ships were operated under foreign registry. To be eligible for subsidy, an operator must provide regular berth services on an essential trade route, show that Government aid is necessary to place the operation on a parity with its foreign competition, and employ vessels constructed in the United States and manned by U.S. citizens.

During calendar year 1967, 14 operators had operating-subsidy contracts with the Maritime Administration and provided service on 30 essential trade routes, consisting of 27 foreign trade routes and three trade areas into the Great Lakes. These operators carried approximately 11.3 million deadweight tons of cargo, a slight decrease of 0.87% over calendar year 1966. This decrease was due to a reduction in inbound cargo carryings.

The total of vessel operating expenses for subsidized operators in calendar year 1967 was $885 million, of which $361 million represented subsidizable items of expense.

The operations for which subsidy support is projected are detailed in the following table.

Passenger and freight services.—Fourteen operators using an average of 289 ships conducted and terminated 1,679 voyages from U.S. ports on the Atlantic, Gulf, Pacific, and Great Lakes areas to foreign ports in all of the major coastal areas in the world during calendar year 1967.

Recapture of excess profits.—All contracts for operating subsidy provide that 50% of the net profits earned from the contractors' subsidized operations and services which over a 10-year period exceed 10% of capital necessarily employed shall be withheld from payments made by the Government. This recapture is calculated annually based upon cumulative profits earned since the beginning of the recapture period. The estimate for the current and budget years shown in the programming and financial schedule assumes that the first quarter of calendar year 1968 profit experience of each operator will continue.

Status of unfunded contract authorization.—The computation and approval of final subsidy rates and audit of annual accountings will make it possible to make payments of 100% of subsidy payable on account of operations prior to December 31, 1961. The $182.8 million unpaid subsidy as of June 30, 1970, represents a backlog consisting of prior-year payments withheld pending final rate and audit determinations for operations subsequent to calendar year 1961; plus estimated amounts earned in the final quarter of 1970 for which vouchers will not be presented or paid during that year.

RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

For expenses necessary for research, development, fabrication, and test operation of experimental facilities and equipment; collection and dissemination of maritime technical and engineering information; studies to improve water transportation systems; [$6,700,000] $7,700,000 to remain available until expended [of which $3,400,000 shall be for operation of the N.S. Savannah: Provided, That none of the funds appropriated herein are to be used for a layup of the N.S. Savannah: Provided further, That transfers may be made to the appropriations for the current fiscal year for "Salaries and expenses" for administrative expenses (not to exceed $931,000) and any such transfers shall be without regard to the limitation under that appropriation on the amount available for such expenses: Provided further, That transfers may be made from this appropriation to the "Vessel operations revolving fund" for losses resulting from expenses of experimental ship operations]. The 1970 program calls for an expansion of the previous activity level to improve the competitive position of the U.S. merchant marine and maritime industries. This Government-industry cooperative program will concentrate on advanced shipping systems, development of intermodal transportation, modernization of cargo handling methods and similar technological advancements.

1. Advanced shipping systems.—This activity provides for long-range research directed at the conceptual system approach to cargo movement, and will provide new and more competitive shipping concepts, tools and systems.

3. Technological development.—Research under this activity is aimed at resolving maritime problems affecting the development and operation of ships, ports, feeders and their interfaces.

4. Technology support.—This activity is directed at increasing the basic knowledge of marine science disciplines, improving industry's understanding of existing and ongoing maritime related research and resolving the attendant economic problems involved in ship operation.

Public Law 415, 84th Congress (46 U.S.C. 1126), established the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy at Kings Point, N.Y., to train cadets for service as officers in the U.S. Merchant Marine. A 4-year course is provided, including 1 year of sea duty, designed to qualify graduates for licenses as deck or engine officers. About 190 cadets are expected to graduate in 1970.

The Academy provides subsistence, quarters, tuition, uniform and textbook allowances, and medical and dental care for the cadets in attendance at the Academy. A small cadet training liaison group in Washington, D.C., provides staff assistance to the Maritime Administrator on training matters, and assists in the selection and appointment of cadets.

The States of California, Maine, Massachusetts, New York, and Texas maintain schools for the training of merchant marine officers with Federal assistance given in the form of (a) direct grants of $75 thousand, if matched by State appropriations and if out-of-State students are enrolled; (b) allowance to cadets for uniforms, textbooks, and subsistence; and (c) repairs to Federal training vessels on loan to the schools.

The Maritime Academy Act of 1958 (72 Stat. 622) provides contract authority for the Secretary of Commerce to enter into agreements with States to provide the grants and allowances over a 4-year period. This Act provides contract authority without limit as to the amount or fiscal year. The new budget authority includes the estimated obligations to be incurred under this authority. Maintenance and repair of training vessels are accomplished through annual appropriations. The schools are expected to graduate approximately 413 cadets in 1970.

A supplemental appropriation for 1969 is anticipated to provide funds for the continuation of the $600 level of annual payments to cadets at the State marine schools. The required funds are proposed for transfer from the administrative expense limitation included within the 1969 Ship construction appropriation.

Under the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, the Maritime Administration received authority to insure construction loans and mortgages with aggregate outstanding balances of up to $1 billion, on vessels engaged in the foreign and domestic commerce of the United States. $20 million of authority has been transferred to the Department of the Interior to insure construction loans and mortgages of fishing vessels.

Budget program.—The fund reflects the complete payment of Treasury and "Vessel operations revolving fund" borrowings by June 30, 1969. There are no anticipated mortgage defaults and advances in 1969 and 1970.

Financing.—The redemption of defaulted loans or mortgages is financed from insurance premiums and fees, interest earned on U.S. Government securities and mortgages held, together with such amounts as may be necessary by borrowings from the Treasury Department, pursuant to Public Law 85-520 (46 U.S.C. 1275(b)).

Operating results and financial condition.—As of June 30, 1968, balances outstanding plus commitments for additional ship mortgages total $651.6 million. The outstanding balances for loans and mortgages at the end of 1969 and 1970 are projected at $716 million and $802.5 million, respectively. Premium and interest receipts are retained to meet contingencies, including payment of insurance claims. The fund reflects the repayment in 1969 of $3.5 million to "Vessel operations revolving fund." It is anticipated that the fund will purchase Treasury securities in the amount of $2.3 million in 1969 and $6.4 million in 1970.

This fund finances operation, reactivation, deactivation, and charter of Government-owned or controlled cargo-type vessels. It is also used for financing the operation of Government-owned experimental vessels (46 U.S.C. 1205).

Budget program.—1. Vessel operations expense.—Cargo vessels are operated by private operators as agents of the Maritime Administration to carry shipments for the Military Sea Transportation Service and other agencies. In addition, agents operate ships under Government control as a consequence of defaults under title XI guaranteed loans and mortgages.

2. Experimental ship operation.—In August 1968, the NS Savannah completed 3 years of experimental commercial operation under a bareboat charter. The level of funding anticipates that the NS Savannah will be operated in 1970 at basically the same operating level as 1969.

Financing.—Expenses are financed by revenue from private operators and reimbursements from Military Sea Transportation Service, other agencies and appropriations, in accordance with 69 Stat. 59.

Operating results and financial condition.—1. Vessel operations.—Charges are made to the Military Sea Transportation Service and other agencies for full costs arising under general agency agreements for ship operations.

2. Experimental ship operation—NS Savannah.—The $2 million represents the costs to the Government of operating the NS Savannah during 1970, which costs are reimbursable in full from the Salaries and expenses appropriation.

The Maritime Administration is authorized by 46 U.S.C. 1281-1294, as amended, to insure against loss or damage by marine war risks when it is found commercial insurance cannot be obtained on reasonable terms and conditions. Authority to underwrite insurance has been authorized to September 1970, having been extended at 5-year intervals since 1950.

Budget program.—As of June 30, 1968, the number of outstanding binders issued for the types of insurance covered by this fund were: 1,467 for hulls, 1,341 for protection and indemnity, and 1,140 for insurance of crew life and personal effects. These binders which become effective as a result of the outbreak of war, cover approximately $15 billion of insurance exposure. During 1968 War risk builders risk insurance was provided on 12 vessels built in U.S. yards.

In addition, Second seamen's war risk insurance was continued in effect at the request of the Navy, without premium, but on a reimbursable basis as required by 46 U.S.C. 1285, on 30 vessels for the Military Sea Transportation Service. It is estimated that this service from program inception has provided a savings of $557 thousand through 1968, measured by the difference between the estimated cost of commercial premiums and claims paid. Effective in 1969 the Maritime Administration will also provide Second seamen's war risk insurance for more than 210 vessels under charter to MSTs, which is expected to result in additional savings of $550 thousand for the year, thereby increasing cumulative savings in excess of $1.1 million by the end of 1969.

Financing.—46 U.S.C. 1288(a) provides authority for the Secretary of Commerce to transfer up to $10 million from the Vessel operations revolving fund to the War risk insurance revolving fund in order to place insurance coverage into effect. Revenue in the fund is received from fees paid for the issuance of interim binders, premiums paid for builder's risk insurance, interest from investments, and reimbursable charges from the Navy.

Payment for services furnished by the Military Sea Transportation Service and Military Airlift Command for transportation to and from overseas of military personnel, their dependents, household goods, and automobiles is also included.

6. Other military personnel costs.—This provides for expenses of apprehension of deserters and escaped military prisoners, payment of interest on money deposited as savings by military personnel stationed in foreign countries, payment of the Government's share of the cost of group life insurance, and payment of death gratuities to beneficiaries of military personnel.

RESERVE FORCES

The following narrative statement covers the appropriations for the National Guard and Reserve components of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force.

National Guard and Reserve personnel.—This program provides funds for training members of the Ready Reserve required for early mobilization needs of the Active Forces. Most of the paid National Guard and Reserve components personnel perform 48 or 24 drills and attend 2 weeks of active duty for training each year. Other personnel not requiring as intensive training receive only a period of active duty for training (usually 2 weeks) during the year. Active duty for basic training is provided for personnel enlisting in a National Guard or Reserve component who have not previously received military training. Service schools and special tours of active duty training provide additional training for limited numbers of the Ready Reserve.

The numbers of National Guard and Reserve component personnel estimated to participate in the paid training programs are summarized in the following table.

Reserve officer candidates.—The Reserve Officers' Training Corps program provides training for reserve and regular officer candidates who have enrolled in the course while attending a collegiate institution at which an ROTC unit has been established. College graduates who satisfactorily complete the advanced course of the program are commissioned and are ordinarily ordered to active duty for a minimum period of 2 years.

The Reserve Officers' Training Corps Vitalization Act of 1964 authorizes a limited number of scholarships for 4-year ROTC students on a competitive basis. Successful candidates for the scholarships are required to serve a minimum period of 4 years on active duty upon graduation and appointment as a commissioned officer. The Army and Air Force each awarded about 4,000 scholarships in 1969 and about 4,750 will be awarded by each of these services in 1970. Approximately 5,300 members of the Navy program will receive scholarships in 1970.

The Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force provide training for students who elect to enroll in ROTC training at the secondary level of education. The Army's high school level ROTC program is expected to increase to 640 schools by the end of 1970. The Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force initiated Junior ROTC programs in 1967 and are programed to have 78, 21, and 200 schools, respectively, in operation in 1970.

The numbers of candidates commissioned from these programs are summarized below:

This estimate includes funds for the pay of all military personnel on the retired lists of the Department of Defense. The estimate represents the consolidated requirements of the military departments for (a) payments to retired officers and enlisted personnel of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force; (b) the retainer pay of regular enlisted personnel of the Fleet Reserve of the Navy and Fleet Marine Corps Reserve; and (c) survivors' benefits. The substantial gains to the retired rolls can be directly attributed to the greater number of individuals attaining eligibility for retirement after 20 or more years of active military service. The following tabulation shows the average number of personnel on the rolls during 1968 compared with the estimated numbers for 1969 and 1970.

A supplemental appropriation for 1969 is anticipated for separate transmittal to provide funds for the additional retirement costs resulting from the increase in the pay of military personnel effective July 1, 1968, under the provisions of Public Law 90-207. An additional supplemental is anticipated to provide for the cost-of-living increase in retired pay effective April 1, 1968, and an additional increase to become effective February 1, 1969, under the provisions of Public Law 90-207.

Under the provisions of the retired serviceman's family protection plan, retired service personnel who elect to receive reduced amounts of retired pay are able to provide for monthly payments to be continued to their survivors. The reductions are determined on a basis designed to establish an actuarially sound system. Current appropriations provide only for the net payments to be made each year and the liability for future payments of survivor benefits is unfunded. Administrative expenses of this family protection plan are provided as operation and maintenance costs of the military services. The accumulated difference between reductions in retired pay and actual payments of survivor benefits is indicated in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE

The operation and maintenance appropriations of the Department of Defense provide funds for the day-to-day cost of operating and maintaining the Armed Forces, including the Reserve Forces, and related support activities of the Department of Defense. Financial requirements for these appropriations are influenced by a variety of factors, the principal of which are force levels, such as the number of aircraft squadrons or Army or Marine Corps divisions, military strength, rates of operational activity, numbers of installations, and quantity and complexity of major equipment (aircraft, ships, missiles, tanks, etc.) in operation. Modern technology is producing more sophisticated and complicated equipment and facilities as part of our weapons systems. These equipments result in improved effectiveness and greater capability, but their use results in additional costs. In comparison with the equipments they replace or supersede, they require more resources to operate, and to maintain, including more people and more repair parts. Personnel require additional specialized training to properly use the new items.

Operating forces.—These are: (a) the strategic offensive and defensive aircraft and missile forces, based in the United States and at sea; (b) the general purpose forces of the several military services operating under the control of the various unified and specified commands. The latter include forces deployed in all parts of the world, such as the troops engaged in Vietnam combat operations; the forces deployed to Europe in keeping with our NATO commitments; the fleets operating in the Pacific, the Atlantic and the Mediterranean; and the backup contingency forces in the United States; and (c) forces providing global airlift and sealift capability. The principal costs involved are the operation of the installations at which these units are based and the operation and maintenance of the equipment they use. Changes in financial requirements are related to military strength, deployment plans, rates of activity, and unit training exercises and maneuvers.

Logistics support.—The supply activities of the various military services and the Defense Supply Agency procure, store, distribute, and compute requirements for military materiel. These functions are conducted at supply depots and centers, shipyards, inventory control points, procurement offices, and other logistical installations throughout the world. Also included are the depot level maintenance and repair of combat equipment accomplished at service-operated repair facilities, such as shipyards, aircraft repair facilities and depots, and through commercial contractors. Workload is primarily related to the quantity of materiel in use and in inventory.

Training support.—The military services provide individual training of officers and enlisted men including recruit training, career training, and specialized training in many skills, such as pilot training. Training requirements are influenced by the number of new men entering the services, the total strength of the services, and by the introduction of new equipment. The 1970 estimates include funds to train 14,500 new pilots, as contrasted with 13,651 in 1969, reflecting the continuing loss of skilled pilots. The majority of individual training is conducted through resident courses of instruction at the various training bases, service schools, and colleges, although some educational facilities of civilian institutions are used. The operation of the three service academies is also included.

Medical support.—Medical care for active and retired military personnel and their dependents is provided by hospitals and clinics operated by the military departments, by other Federal agencies, and by civilian medical facilities.

Service-wide support.—This relates to administrative, communications, and intelligence activities. Administrative activities include headquarters operations, personnel, fiscal, and records management functions conducted on a service-wide basis. Communications support relates primarily to leased circuits, equipments, and facilities. Improvements in two defense-wide automatic switching systems for voice (AUTOVON) and record (AUTODIN) traffic will permit the elimination or reduction of others, realize savings in operating costs, and accommodate new requirements at minimum cost.

Reserve forces.—Each of the military services trains reserve units and operates and maintains facilities, such as training centers, airbases, and active duty field training sites for the use of such units. They also conduct reserve officer training programs.

Supplemental appropriations for 1969 are anticipated for separate transmittal to provide funds for the additional costs resulting from the increase in the pay of civilian personnel effective July 1, 1968, under the provisions of Public Law 90-206, and for personnel benefits authorized by Public Law 90-486, the National Guard Technicians Act. Additional supplementals are being requested to finance the cost of support of operations in Southeast Asia.

This budget includes appropriations for Army, Navy, and Marine Corps to liquidate certain obligations incurred during 1966 under the authority of section 3732, Revised Statutes (41 U.S.C. 11), because of the force buildup related to operations in Southeast Asia.

This appropriation provides the resources to maintain the current combat readiness of naval forces, which include attack carriers, submarines, amphibious forces, plus antisubmarine and anti-air warfare forces. The composition of the active fleet in 1969 and 1970 will include additional nuclear-powered attack submarines, some new destroyer escorts which will replace World War II ships, and continued deployment of POLARIS submarines. Navy and Marine Corps tactical air capability will be enhanced by continued replacement of older aircraft with F-4J "Phantom" fighters, A-6A "Intruder" all-weather attack aircraft, and A-7E CORSAIR II light attack aircraft. Also, greater resources will be used for support of new oceanographic vessels.

The Marine Corps trains and maintains the Fleet Marine Forces in a high state of combat readiness for service with the fleet in amphibious operations and other duties. The Fleet Marine Forces, composed of Marine division-air wing teams and related support units, are assigned to the Atlantic and Pacific Naval Fleets.

This appropriation principally supports the ground elements of the Fleet Marine Forces. Other units supported by this appropriation include Marine detachments aboard naval vessels, landing force training units, Marine Reserve ground forces, and the security forces that guard naval bases, U.S. embassies, and certain classified facilities.

<sup>1</sup> Reimbursements from non-Federal sources are principally from nonappropriated fund activities; sales to foreign governments and international operations; and sales to commercial enterprises and individuals of goods and services, including subsistence of hospital patients, surcharges on commissary sales, and unofficial telephone services (10 U.S.C. 9621, 9625, 9626, 9627; 22 U.S.C. 2315, 2316).

This appropriation provides resources to maintain the combat capability of the Air Force. Financial requirements continue to be heavily influenced by the level of activity in Southeast Asia. Several force structure adjustments are also being made. Major changes in the strategic forces in 1970 include the introduction of the FB-111—a new strategic bomber, and reflect the continued phaseout of the older model B-52 bombers. The strategic defensive force structure continues to be adjusted to reflect the balanced defense concept. The enhancement of tactical forces continues as more F-111 fighter aircraft enter the operational inventory during 1970.

For the first time in 1969 this appropriation financed selected materials with a unit cost of less than $1 thousand previously financed from several major procurement appropriations. Equipment with a unit cost of $1 thousand or more, previously financed from this appropriation, have become the responsibility of the major procurement appropriations. The net effect of these actions resulted in an increase of approximately $0.7 billion in 1969 in the Operation and maintenance appropriation.

ALLOCATIONS RECEIVED FROM OTHER ACCOUNTS

Note.—Obligations incurred under allocations from other accounts are shown in the schedules of the parent appropriations, as follows:
Funds appropriated to the President: "Military assistance."
Atomic Energy Commission: "Plant and capital equipment."

PROCUREMENT

The procurement appropriations of the Department of Defense finance the acquisition of capital equipment, such as aircraft, missiles, ships, combat vehicles, weapons, munitions, and communications; major items for support of the capital equipment when it is in use; the industrial facilities necessary to produce that equipment; and major modification of equipment in inventory where modernization can be achieved without buying new equipment. The capital equipment financed by these appropriations is principally procured from private contractors or produced in Government arsenals, shipyards, and plants.

The 1970 program continues the production of modern equipment and weapons in support of United States and allied forces operations in Southeast Asia. The equipment inventories necessary to support conventional as well as strategic warfare missions of armed services will continue to be augmented and modernized. The improving military capability to cope with war threats of any kind anywhere is supported by continuing programs to increase the mobility and firepower of ground forces, strengthen the support capabilities of the tactical air forces, modernize airlift

The appropriations for procurement of aircraft, missiles, ships, and tracked combat vehicles are dependent upon the enactment of authorizing legislation.

This appropriation provides major items of combat and support equipment for approved Army forces in performing their assigned mission to meet successfully both nuclear and conventional war requirements. It also provides for the procurement of spares and repair parts not covered in the Army stock fund as well as production engineering, tooling, and facilities in support of current procurement.

In 1970 the Army's direct budget plan totals $6,333 million, as compared to $6,556 million and $6,888 million (including $727.8 million supplemental request) for 1968 and 1969, respectively. This plan will be financed from new appropriations, recoupments from previous appropriations, transfers from other accounts and anticipated reimbursements.

The 1970 program is directed toward providing combat and support equipment and ammunition for U. S. Army and Free World Military Assistance Forces in Southeast Asia, replacing training consumption, and adding to combat essential equipment allowances for Active and Reserve Army Forces. The program also provides inventories of conventional munitions and equipment for sustained combat operations. Increased capabilities will be attainable through the introduction of improved weapons, equipment, and munitions.

1. Aircraft.—The 1970 program contains aircraft which are essential to the combat operation of field forces. To meet the Army's need for battlefield observation, troop movement, medical evacuation, and rapid logistical and tactical support for combat engaged forces, the 1970 program continues production to provide additional helicopters and fixed-wing aircraft. The 1970 aircraft procurement program continues procurement of the Cheyenne armed helicopter.

3. Missiles.—This program includes surface-to-air and surface-to-surface missiles. In the former category, continued procurement of Redeye and Chaparral missiles in 1970 will provide frontline combat units with an effective defense against low altitude enemy aircraft. Initial procurement of the Sentinel antiballistic missile defense system, as well as procurement of improved Hawk missiles and modifications to the Nike-Hercules systems are planned for 1970 to provide more effective air defense of continental U.S. and oversea theaters. The 1970 program funds the continued procurement of Shillelagh and TOW antitank missile systems to further improve the armor defeating capability of Army combat elements. For the Pershing missile system, the 1970 program completes procurement of the improved ground equipment and continues a modification program to provide improved performance of the system in its combat role.

5. Tracked combat vehicles.—This program covers the procurement of tracked combat vehicles, including related repair parts and support materiel and production base support. The 1970 program replaces forecast Southeast Asia losses and continues procurement of the General Sheridan armored reconnaissance vehicle, the M60A1 medium tank, and armored personnel carrier family of vehicles.

6. Weapons and other combat vehicles.—This activity covers all weapons and combat vehicles except tracked combat vehicles. The 1970 program will provide materiel to replace losses in Southeast Asia, training consumption wearout, and obsolescence and will improve inventories of machine guns, grenade launchers, and rifles.

7. Tactical and support vehicles.—Included in this activity are the unarmored wheeled vehicles which provide surface mobility to the field forces and the worldwide logistical system.

8. Communications and electronics equipment.—This program provides reliable, rugged and mobile tactical communication equipment to achieve command control over dispersed forces and weapons systems. Also included are funds for strategic communications equipment required for the worldwide Defense Communication system.

9. Other support equipment.—This program includes combat support, construction, generators, floating and materials handling equipment of Army combat forces in the field.

10. Ammunition.—This activity finances the procurement of ammunition for all Army weapons except missiles.

11. Production-base support.—This activity provides industrial facilities needed for production of end items and components and for production engineering in advance of procurement. It also provides for the layaway of Government-owned plants and equipment at the time production is completed and where it has been established that the facilities will be required in the event of mobilization.

This appropriation finances the procurement of aircraft, missiles and associated support equipment for Navy forces and Marine Air Wings. It also provides funds for in-service aircraft and missile modification necessary to eliminate safety hazards and enhance operational effectiveness. Drones and major flight and maintenance trainers are also included, as well as repairable spare and repair parts for all end items procured under this appropriation. In addition, funds are included to finance procurement of items in support of the planned subsequent year program. These equipments must be procured in advance due to production leadtime considerations.

1. Combat aircraft.—The 1970 program finances the procurement of attack, fighter, reconnaissance, electronic warfare, tanker, and antisubmarine patrol aircraft, and helicopters for Marine vertical assault and Navy fleet support and combat support missions.

2. Airlift aircraft.—The 1970 program provides for carrier-on-board-delivery (COD) aircraft necessary for transporting critical technical personnel and equipment between shore stations and aircraft carriers.

3. Trainer aircraft.—The 1970 program provides for the procurement of basic and advanced jet trainer aircraft to fulfill training requirements for future Navy/Marine Corps/Coast Guard pilots and for the Navy Test Pilot School.

4. Other aircraft.—The 1970 program provides for the procurement of a special mission aircraft to augment the Navy's capability to collect and evaluate oceanographic data.

5. Modification of aircraft.—This activity finances the cost of modifying currently operational aircraft to increase their capability, to extend their useful life, or to improve flight safety.

6. Aircraft spares and repair parts.—This activity finances the procurement of aircraft spares and repair parts required for initial outfitting and the replenishment of reparable items. Consumable items for replenishment requirements are funded by the Navy Stock Fund.

7. Aircraft support equipment and facilities.—This activity provides for modernization and maintenance of Government-owned aircraft industrial facilities, component improvement, and miscellaneous support and production costs.

8. Ballistic missiles.—This activity funds the procurement of fleet ballistic missiles and related support equipment.

9. Other missiles.—The 1970 program provides for the continued procurement of missiles required for air-to-air, air-to-surface and antisubmarine warfare missions. Aerial targets, including drones, for training and the testing of weapon systems are also financed under this activity.

10. Modification of missiles.—This activity finances the modification of missiles in inventory to assure their maximum effectiveness consistent with current technology.

11. Missile spares and repair parts.—This activity finances the procurement of spares and repair parts for missiles and aerial targets budgeted under activities 8 and 9.

12. Missile support equipment and facilities.—This activity includes funds for the modernization and maintenance of Government-owned missile industrial facilities and for the procurement and support of a navigational satellite.

<sup>1</sup> Reimbursements from non-Federal sources are derived principally from deductions from carriers, on account of loss or damage to materials in transit (31 U.S.C. 489(a)) and proceeds from the sale of personal property being replaced (40 U.S.C. 481(c)).

This appropriation finances the construction of new ships and the conversion of existing ships, including all hull, mechanical and electrical equipment, electronics, guns, torpedo and missile launching systems, and communications systems. It also finances procurement of long leadtime items for ships for which authorization will be requested in the 1971 program.

The 1970 program continues the Navy's long range modernization and replacement program designed to provide the fleet with modern balanced forces which can effectively respond to a wide variety of challenges in supporting our national policies.

1. Fleet ballistic missile ships.—Conversion and modernization of six ballistic missile submarines in the 1970 program to a POSEIDON missile capability will improve our sea-based ballistic missile weapons system. Long leadtime items will also be procured for additional submarine conversions.

2. Other warships.—Funds in the 1970 program provide for the new construction of one nuclear attack aircraft carrier with capabilities for extended military operations in cold, limited, and general war situation and long range assignment.

One nuclear powered, guided missile frigate (DXGN), designed to operate offensively, independently or with nuclear or conventional strike forces, will be procured with 1970 funds. Advance funding is also provided for additional frigates. Five DX type destroyers will be constructed as part of a new program which over several years will replace older World War II destroyer types. These new design destroyers will stress standardization, automation, improved reliability and maintainability to minimize life cycle costs. Additional financing provides for long leadtime procurement for eight DX program ships for which authorization will be requested in 1971.

Funds are requested in 1970 for three new design, high performance, high speed submarines which will provide a significant increase in the capability of the submarine force. Advance funds are also requested for procurement of long leadtime components for four more ships for which authorization will be requested in 1971. Modernization of three guided missile frigates will increase fleet anti-air warfare capabilities.

3. Amphibious ships.—Two more of the new design, general purpose assault ships will be constructed to improve our amphibious assault capabilities. Additional long leadtime funding for the 1971 program is provided.

4. Mine warfare and patrol ships.—Ten additional ocean minesweepers will be converted in the program to improve mine warfare capabilities along with provision of long lead funding for the 1971 program. Two motor gunboats and a submarine chaser (under a cost-sharing agreement) will be built to support free world forces in Southeast Asia.

5. Auxiliaries and craft.—Three fast deployment logistics ships, the first of a new design, will be constructed to provide modern, flexible military sealift forces capable of rapid deployment of tactical unit equipment and supplies.

Two salvage tugs will provide salvage, towing, repair diving, and rescue services to the fleet.

Various kinds of service and landing craft will be procured. These include harbor tugs, patrol craft, lighters, oil and gasoline barges, etc. Included in this budget activity are funds for outfitting and correction of deficiencies which become known prior to completion of acceptance trials.

This appropriation finances the procurement of major weapons and equipment other than aircraft, missiles, and ships. Such equipments range from the latest electronic sensors and weapons to update our naval forces, to trucks, training equipment and spare parts. Also included is the cost associated with the installation of ship and shore equipment. Substantial quantities of expendable items, such as air- and ship-launched ordnance, are programed under this appropriation in support of Southeast Asia operations.

1. Ships support equipment.—This activity finances the procurement and installation of necessary shipboard components, including replacement of nuclear cores, to support active fleet ship maintenance, replacement and modernization, and the ship alteration and improvement program.

2. Communications and electronics equipment.—This activity funds communications and electronics equipment for ships and shore-based activities.

3. Aviation support equipment.—This activity funds the procurement of air-dropped ordnance, air electronic control and aircraft ground support equipment. Southeast Asia support represents approximately 50% of the procurement in this activity.

4. Ordnance support equipment.—This activity funds the procurement of ship-launched ordnance, antisubmarine warfare ordnance, and Polaris ground support and training equipment. The principal changes in funding involve the first major procurement of the new submarine-launched torpedo and a reduction in ship gun ammunition requirements in support of Southeast Asia, which still represents 25% of the total activity.

5. Civil engineering support equipment.—This activity finances the procurement of construction, weight handling, and transportation equipment primarily in support of Navy general purpose forces.

6. Supply support equipment.—Procurement of self-propelled materials handling equipment and automated materials handling systems, required in support of the Navy supply system, are financed within this activity.

7. Personnel and command support equipment.—This activity finances procurement of training equipment, devices and aids, and procurement of industrial shop, photographic, printing, and oceanographic equipment for activities supported by the Chief of Naval Operations, as well as equipment for the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery and fleet headquarters commands.

This appropriation provides the Marine Corps with weapons, ammunition, and related equipments, most of which are programed for use by Marine general purpose forces such as Marine divisions, and tank and amphibious tractor battalions. These equipments provide the military hardware and munitions for defense of advanced naval bases, limited war landing operations, and general land warfare. The chief aim in the past few years has been to fund the conduct of the Marine Corps mission in Southeast Asia, while maintaining the readiness posture of the remainder of Marine forces. The 1970 program continues this philosophy, with 61% of the 1970 program consisting of ammunition primarily for Southeast Asia consumption.

RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST, AND EVALUATION

The programs funded in this title provide the Department of Defense with scientific and technological capabilities for the development, test, evaluation, and improvement of weapon systems and related equipment and techniques. Many investigative and engineering activities are performed, including scientific research of defense interest, design and fabrication of weapons and equipment for the future, and testing of these items to evaluate their military utility. This work is performed by Government laboratories, universities, industrial contractors, and nonprofit organizations.

Appropriations in this title support the research, development, test, and evaluation activities of the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Defense Agencies. Funds required for the research and development related to civil defense responsibilities of the Department of Defense are carried in the separate title, Civil Defense, in this chapter.

Since both uncertainty and risk are involved in pursuing and applying new technology, research and development programs are usually funded so that each year's resources support about one year's increment of the total program cost. Development of a new weapon system from initial definition to completion of testing and introduction into the operating forces may require 5 or more years.

The total 1970 budget plan for Defense research, development, test, and evaluation appropriations includes a $532 million increase over the current 1969 plan, reaching a total of $8,179 million. Included in this total are development programs slated to add significantly to the capabilities of the military forces. The Nation's strategic forces are being enhanced by continued development and improvement of the Air Force's Minuteman and the Navy's Poseidon ballistic missile systems and the Army's Sentinel antiballistic missile system. Other major strategic programs include the advanced manned strategic aircraft (AMSA) which enters design competition in 1970, and several air-to-surface missiles which reach full-scale development. An airborne warning and control system, designed to improve continental air defense, begins engineering development in 1970.

Some of the major development efforts contributing to future general purpose and tactical warfare forces include the Navy F-14 fleet air defense fighter/interceptor, the Air Force F-15 tactical air superiority fighter and the VSX antisubmarine warfare aircraft. The advanced surface missile system to enhance fleet air defense enters engineering development. Design of a new guided missile frigate is proposed, as is design of a new submarine. Other developments in 1970 will substantially increase interdiction, air mobility, counterinsurgency, antisubmarine warfare, and land air defense capabilities.

Systems nearing completion of development in 1970 include the C-5A transport aircraft, the Cheyenne armed helicopter, and the Dragon antitank and Standard anti-radiation missiles.

Vigorous support of important applied sciences, such as biomedicine, materials, and social and behavioral research, continues in 1970. The Themis program, aimed at providing sound research in support of Defense needs and establishing new centers of research excellence at the Nation's universities, will expand at the same rate as approved for 1969.

Increased use of industrial funds for in-house research and development installations by the services and restructuring of the Navy exploratory development program result in some comparative adjustments among the budget activities over previous years. In particular, this results in some reductions to military science and programwide management and support and small increases in the other budget activities.

The budget plans and estimated obligations under appropriations in this title for the Army, Navy, Air Force, Defense Agencies, and the emergency fund are summarized below (in thousands of dollars):

1. Military sciences.—This activity supports research in the physical, mathematical, environmental, engineering biomedical, behavioral, and social sciences, adding to the store of fundamental scientific knowledge and leading to applications of potential military significance. The research tasks selected are derived from an analysis of basic missions and corresponding technological requirements, as well as from a review of technical opportunities potentially related to national security. Examples of phenomena of special interest include deep submergence biomedicine, boundary layer turbulence, propulsion and explosive chemistry, superconductivity, electro-optics, acoustics, and information processing.

The principal support for such organizations as the Naval Research Laboratory, the Air Force Cambridge Research Laboratory, and some of the Federal contract research centers, is also provided here. In addition to the amounts directly provided for in this activity, basic and applied research is also performed by industrial contractors supported by certain allowable indirect costs which may be allowed under contracts funded by both the research, development, test, and evaluation and procurement appropriations.

2. Aircraft and related equipment.—This activity funds research, development, test, and evaluation related to airframes, engines, and other installed equipment. Major programs in 1970 include continuing full-scale development of an initial and follow-on versions of the Navy F-14 fleet air defense fighter/interceptor, the Air Force F-15 advanced tactical air superiority fighter, the VSX anti-submarine warfare aircraft, and the completion of development of the F-111A strike aircraft, the C-5A transport, and the Cheyenne armed helicopter. The advanced manned strategic aircraft, the utility tactical transport aircraft system and a new heavy lift helicopter are entering initial stages of development in 1970.

In addition, the program supports development of components and subsystems to improve existing aircraft, demonstrator engines, V/STOL technology, better avionics equipment, improved airborne ASW detection capability and applied research in flight dynamics and advanced aircraft propulsion systems. Research and development centers, such as the laboratories located at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base and the Naval Air Development Center at Johnsville, Pa., are funded here.

3. Missiles and related equipment.—This activity provides for research, development, test, and evaluation of missile systems of all types. The strategic ballistic missile systems, Poseidon and Minuteman, remain highpriority programs. Development of both the Sentinel antiballistic missile system as well as other antiballistic missile system concepts and subsystems will be pursued to assure maximum effectiveness of both retaliatory and defensive systems. Tactical interdiction missile systems, such as the Maverick air-to-surface missile, continue in development, as does exploration of concepts leading toward advanced strike weapons. Also under continuing development are tactical air defense missile systems for protection of both land-based and sea-based forces, with increased emphasis being placed on the problems of defending ships against cruise missiles.

In addition to funding contracts with industry in the missile research and development program, this activity is a major source of financial support for the operation of certain test and evaluation facilities, such as the Eastern and Western Test Ranges, the White Sands Missile Range, the Naval Weapons Center at China Lake, and the research and development programs at the Army's Redstone Arsenal.

4. Military astronautics and related equipment.—This activity provides for programs directed toward the improvement of space technology for military purposes and investigations and development of specific military applications of space vehicles. Major programs include the manned orbiting laboratory (MOL), military communications satellite systems, ballistic missiles early warning, and the Titan III launch vehicle. Support of flight experiment programs and ground based applied research and technology development programs in such areas as bioastronautics, secondary power sources, navigation, guidance, sensor, reentry, and propulsion systems will continue. Both contractual and in-house efforts relating to space technology are funded from this activity.

5. Ships, small craft, and related equipment.—This activity provides for design of new types of ships and for development of shipboard equipment. Funds are requested in 1970 for contract definition of a new guided missile frigate ship and design of a new class of submarines. Antisubmarine warfare is receiving increased emphasis, with the development of new and improvement of existing sensors in this activity along with mission related aircraft, weapons, and communications equipment under other activities. Development of improved ship antimissile defense systems, exploration of advanced surface craft concepts, development of command and control equipment and improvement of nuclear and nonnuclear propulsion plants, are also included. A significant portion of the effort at the Naval Ships Research and Development Center is funded under this activity.

6. Ordnance, combat vehicles, and related equipment.—This activity provides for the development, test, and evaluation of improved artillery, guns, rocket launchers, mortars, small arms, mines, grenades, torpedoes, depth charges, conventional air-launched weapons, combat vehicles, and landing craft, as well as exploration and evaluation of new fuzes, propellants, explosives, detonators, dispensers, and armor. Systems contributing to increased mobility, improved firepower, and counterinfiltration in limited and unconventional warfare in remote areas continue to receive major attention. The principal support for research and development activities at several Army arsenals and for the Naval Ordnance Laboratory at White Oak, Md., is funded here.

7. Other equipment.—This activity provides for research, development, test, and evaluation of equipment not separately provided for under other activities. Examples of the types of equipment developed for the three services are as follows: deep submergence systems for personnel rescue and underwater research, chemical and biological agent detection and protective devices, combat clothing, night vision and imaging devices, tactical data processing systems, communications and electronic warfare equipment, improved logistics and materiel handling, mapping and geodetic systems, and improved oceanographic instrumentation. Major programs supported by this activity include the airborne warning and control system and the Mallard communication system. Much of the support for the research and development effort at the Army Electronic Research and Development Laboratories, the Mitre Corporation, and the Lincoln Laboratories is provided under this activity.

8. Programwide management and support.—For the Army and the Navy, this activity provides for those costs of operation, management, and maintenance of research, development, and test facilities which are not distributed directly to other budget activities. For the Air Force it provides for certain costs of central administration such as the Air Force Systems Command headquarters and divisions as well as several large research, development, test, and evaluation centers.

9. Emergency fund.—The emergency fund enables the Secretary of Defense to support the exploitation of new scientific developments and technological breakthroughs and to provide for other unforeseen contingencies in the research, development, test, and evaluation programs.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION

The direct military construction programs for the Armed Forces, both Regular and Reserve, shown in the individual schedules of this title are summarized in the following table:

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION PROGRAM

	1968 actual	1969 estimate	1970 estimate
Regular Forces	1,560,014	1,201,597	1,823,026
Reserve Forces	33,240	35,980	53,100
Interservice activities	19,802	94,716	74,500
Total	1,613,056	1,332,293	1,950,626

Most of the appropriations required for the military construction accounts are dependent upon the enactment of authorizing legislation. The details of this legislation have been completed and are being submitted to the Congress for early consideration.

1. Major construction.—This category provides for the acquisition of land and for construction of military projects as authorized in currently effective military construction acts and the new authorization referred to above. These authorizations include construction projects as defined in Department of Defense Directive 7040.2 where the estimated cost of such construction generally exceeds $25 thousand per project. Under this category the major program elements proposed for 1970 are as follows:

Strategic forces.—Provision has been made for a substantial portion of the facilities required to deploy the Sentinel antiballistic missile system. In addition, provision has been made for facilities which will insure safe and continued operation of strategic warfare systems.

General purpose forces.—Projects in this category support general combat forces including their command organizations, the logistics organizations organic to these forces, and the related support units which are deployed or deployable as constituent parts of military forces and field organizations. A portion of the program provides facilities which will reduce the vulnerability of aircraft at various overseas locations.

Specialized activities.—Funds are provided to support specialized activities primarily relating to the intelligence and security areas. Provision is made for the U.S. share in support of the joint defense effort by the members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Airlift and sealfift.—Additional operational and maintenance facilities are provided for increased effectiveness of the C-5A transport aircraft assigned to the Military Airlift Command.

Reserve Forces.—The facilities required for the training of the Reserve Forces include armories, training centers and summer camps, nonarmory facilities such as maintenance shops and warehouses, and aviation facilities such as airfield pavements, maintenance shops and training buildings.

Research and development.—A major portion of the Navy's research construction effort provides for support of the underwater environmental research and the deep oceanographic program. Air Force construction provides facilities for continued support of the missile and space program. The Army program provides facilities for medical research and further refinement of weapon systems research.

Logistics.—Funds are included to provide for the maintenance, overhaul, and repair facility requirements generated by the newer weapon systems. Another increment of the modernization program is provided for shipyard capability and aircraft rework facilities.

Personnel support.—Funds are provided for recruit and pilot training facilities, hospital and medical facilities, and service schools. Provision is made for troop housing and bachelor officer quarters utilizing new space criteria for military living accommodations.

2. Minor construction.—Provision is made for construction of permanent and temporary projects that are not otherwise authorized by law but which are determined to be urgently required and do not exceed $200 thousand per project for the Regular Forces, and $50 thousand per project for the Reserve component projects as defined in Department of Defense Directives 7040.2 and 1225.5, respectively. Projects may be accomplished with use of operation and maintenance funds where the estimated cost of such construction is $25 thousand or less per project.

3. Planning.—This provides for necessary planning of military construction projects, including design, standards, criteria, studies, appraisals, and other related activities.

4. Supporting activities.—Provision is made for activities such as the defense access road program and minor land acquisitions.

FAMILY HOUSING

The Department of Defense family housing management account (76 Stat. 237) finances all expenses of the military family housing program. Funds provided in annual military construction appropriation acts under the title "Family housing, Defense" are transferred to this account for obligation and expenditure. This appropriation is dependent on the enactment of authorizing legislation, the details of which have been completed and are being submitted to the Congress for early consideration. An appropriation of $694.4 million is requested for 1970, of which $130.7 million is for construction of new housing, improvement of existing housing, and related projects, and $563.7 million is for the operation and maintenance of family housing and related facilities, for leasing of family housing, for payments required on the indebtedness assumed to acquire Capehart and Wherry housing and to build surplus commodity housing in foreign countries, for authorized payments of servicemen's mortgage insurance premiums, and for continuance of an offbase housing referral service.

<sup>1</sup> Reimbursements from non-Federal sources are derived from collection of rentals from occupants of certain military housing units and the sale of homes at excess military installations (69 Stat. 652 and 70 Stat. 1105).

1. Construction.—(a) Construction of new housing.—The construction of 4,800 new permanent units and the relocation of 444 “relocatable” units to new sites at an estimated cost of $113.9 million is proposed in furtherance of the continuing effort to provide adequate family housing for eligible personnel. These units are distributed by service as follows: Army—1,426, Navy and Marine Corps—1,950, and Air Force—1,868.

(c) Construction improvements.—Funding in the amount of $15.7 million is proposed to correct deficiencies in existing family housing facilities of which $1.2 million provides for the unforeseen and urgently required projects to be accomplished under the authority of 10 U.S.C. 2674 in 1970.

(d) Planning.—Funds are included in the construction of new housing budget activity to design the 5,244 housing units in the 1970 program. Costs to be incurred for planning future year housing projects and for projects which will not go forward to completion are estimated at $1 million.

(e) Rental guarantee.—The last of the rental guarantee agreements entered into under the original authority (66

2. Operation, maintenance, and interest payment.—

(a) Operation.—$193.3 million is required in 1970 for the operation of an estimated 364,480 family housing units (excluding leased units) and $23.7 million is required in 1970 to lease 9,669 units in both the United States and in foreign countries as part of the program to provide adequate family housing for eligible personnel.

(b) Maintenance of real property.—The cost of maintenance and repair of the 1970 family housing inventory is estimated at $184.2 million. Minor alterations, not to exceed an average of $50 per unit, are funded in this subactivity.

(c) Interest payment.—A total of $73 million is required in 1970 to defray interest charges on the indebtedness assumed to acquire Capehart and Wherry housing and for related expenses. In addition, appropriation of $86.6 million is required in 1970 for reduction of agency indebtedness that was assumed with the acquisition of the Capehart, Wherry, and surplus commodity housing indebtedness.

(d) Mortgage insurance premiums.—Premium payments are required on mortgage insurance provided by the Federal Housing Administration: (1) through the General insurance fund on mortgages assumed by Defense to acquire Capehart and Wherry housing; and (2) on mortgages assumed by active military personnel for housing purchased under the provisions of section 124, Public Law 83-560.

Intragovernmental funds:

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE STOCK FUNDS

The Department of Defense stock funds finance the acquisition of inventories of material and supplies for resale and mobilization (10 U.S.C. 2208). These inventories are stocked and sold at designated defense activities worldwide.

Budget program.—As part of the continuing program to improve management of inventories, the stock funds, in 1969, capitalized inventories of expense-type items previously financed by appropriated funds and decapitalized inventories of investment type items. In 1970, the Air Force will extend its stock fund to cover inventories held at bases in the Pacific area. As a result, inventories are estimated to increase over 1968 by $1,012 million in 1970, as indicated below (in millions of dollars):

Financing the budget program.—Funds for financing the budget program are usually derived from sales to customers. During 1969, sale of inventory capitalized without cost and reduction to inventory levels generated an excess working capital balance of $1,530 million proposed for transfer to other appropriations. In 1970, an additional $400 million is generated and also proposed for transfer. Sales in 1970 are projected to increase by $858 million over 1969. Expenditures in 1970 to replenish stocks increase by $1,978 over 1969 reflecting replacement of sales of inventory capitalized without cost (in millions of dollars):

	Gross expenditures
	1968 actual	1969 estimate	1970 estimate
Army stock fund.....	4,146	3,845	3,950
Navy stock fund.....	1,849	1,968	2,767

Defense stock fund.....	3,865	3,396	3,624
Total.....	12,088	12,165	14,143

DOD stock funds are authorized to incur obligations in anticipation of future year business (10 U.S.C. 2210(b)). This is necessary because the procurement leadtime on material is greater than the time required to fill and collect for customer orders. Pursuant to this authority, contract authorization of $1,664 million was available at the end of 1968 which decreases to $1,516 million in 1970.

Operating results and financial condition.—Net losses of $323 million and $35 million are forecast for 1969 and 1970, respectively. These losses result largely from disposal and donation of excess and surplus inventory.

Investment (equity) of the U.S. Government at the end of 1970 is estimated at $9,677 million, including $19,638 million in inventory and other assets capitalized less $4,795 million in working capital transferred out, and a cumulative operating deficit of $5,166 million.

INDUSTRIAL FUNDS

Department of Defense industrial funds finance industrial and commercial type activities on a reimbursable basis (10 U.S.C. 2208). These programs are supported by orders citing the customers' appropriations. Costs are initially financed by the industrial funds' working capital and subsequently billed to customers' appropriations. Industrial fund activities are reimbursed on a progress payment basis for production costs incurred pursuant to specific orders and for the cost of material inventories which are allocated to specific orders and held in reserve for those orders. Government investment as of June 30, 1970, is estimated at $378 million.

Gross expenditures are projected to increase by $94.2 million in 1970 over 1969, as indicated below (in millions of dollars):

Gross expenditures

	1968 actual	1969 estimate	1970 estimate
Army industrial fund.....	1,094.0	1,501.6	1,473.2
Navy industrial fund.....	3,780.0	4,044.3	4,019.8
Marine Corps industrial fund.....		24.8	24.9
Air Force industrial fund.....	1,125.6	2,508.4	2,607.3
Defense industrial fund.....	289.7	315.9	364.0
Total.....	6,289.3	8,395.0	8,489.2

The Army Industrial Fund is currently used to finance 30 activities engaged in research, development, test, engineering, transportation and traffic management, and limited quantity production and major overhaul of weapons, munitions, missiles, and other military equipment.

The Navy Industrial Fund finances nine shipyards, 34 printing plants, six ordnance plants, seven aircraft overhaul and repair facilities, nine public works centers, four research activities, ten naval weapons facilities and ammunition depots, two Polaris missile facilities, and the Military Sea Transportation Service. The cost of goods and services produced in 1970 is expected to remain at about the same level as in 1969, reflecting a generally level workload.

The Marine Corps Industrial Fund was established effective July 1, 1968, and two depot maintenance activities were chartered under it as of that date. The cost of goods and services produced under the Marine Corps Industrial Fund is expected to be $25 million in 1969 and 1970.

The Air Force Industrial Fund currently finances nine printing plants, 33 laundries, the Alaska Communication Service, the Military Airlift Command, and the six Air Force depot activities and the Arnold Engineering Development Center which were placed under industrial fund operations on July 1, 1968. The Alaska Communication Service will continue to be financed under the industrial fund until it is disposed of. Depot maintenance cost increases account for 1970 program expansion.

The Defense Industrial Fund finances the Defense Clothing and Textile Supply Center and leased communication services procured by the Defense Commercial Communications Office. Cost increases in 1969 and 1970 are due to tariff increases and further expansion of the automatic switching networks.

1. Surveys.—Navigation and flood control studies are made to determine the need and economic justification for proposed water and related land resource developments. Beach erosion control studies are undertaken to determine the need for shore protection and remedial measures at specific localities. Funds are provided in 1970 to continue 95 navigation, 178 flood control, and 12 beach erosion surveys. A total of 10 navigation, 16 flood control, and 3 beach erosion surveys will be initiated.

Comprehensive river basin studies provide for broad consideration of water and related land resource needs of river basins. They are coordinated with the related river basin planning efforts of the Departments of the Interior and of Agriculture and other concerned agencies. Nineteen studies will be carried forward in the following basins:

1. California Region.
2. Columbia-North Pacific Region.
3. Connecticut River Basin.
4. Great Basin Region.
5. Great Lakes Region.
6. Kanawha River Basin.
7. Lower Colorado Region.
8. Missouri River Basin.
9. North Atlantic Region.
10. Pascagoula River Basin.<sup>1</sup>
11. Red River below Denison Dam.<sup>1</sup>
12. Sabine River Basin.<sup>1</sup>
13. Souris-Red Region.
14. Susquehanna River Basin.
15. Upper Colorado Region.
16. Upper Mississippi River Basin.
17. Wabash River Basin.
18. White River Basin.<sup>1</sup>
19. Willamette River Basin.

Special studies are made to resolve unique or especially complex water resources problems. Funds are requested to continue seven special studies and to initiate a National Shoreline Study.

Surveys are made in coordination with Federal, State, and local agencies and interests. They give appropriate consideration to present and future requirements for all beneficial uses of water and related land resources, including navigation, flood control, water supply, irrigation, water quality control, power, recreation, and fish and wildlife conservation.

2. Collection and study of basic data.—Funds are transferred to the Geological Survey for installation, operation, and maintenance of stream gaging stations; to the Weather Bureau for hydrometeorological studies and precipitation stations; and to the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife for preauthorization studies of the effects of proposed projects upon fish and wildlife. The Corps of Engineers participates on a number of engineering and control boards that study and control international streams mutually affecting the United States and Canada. Information about the flood hazard, advice, and assistance are furnished to the States and local governmental agencies, upon their request, and to other Federal agencies for guidance in the management of flood plain areas to assure the best and safest use of such areas.

3. Research and development.—Coastal engineering research and development studies deal with physical phenomena, techniques, basic principles, and remedial or control measures related to shore protection and improvement. The results of these studies are disseminated to interested Federal, State, and local agencies and individuals.

Hydrologic studies include investigations of storms, rainfall, streamflow, sedimentation, and other phenomena to provide basic data used in the design, construction, and operation of water control structures.

Civil works investigations are made to improve procedures for analysis of hydrologic and engineering data, refine design methods, develop better materials and practices for the construction and maintenance of hydraulic structures, and improve procedures used in formulating plans for water resources development. Scientific and technical information centers will acquire published and unpublished literature, prepare and distribute abstracts, technical reviews, and evaluations and answer inquiries for information from scientists and engineers to maintain their knowledge of new developments in their fields.

The Mississippi River Basin model is being utilized to improve operation of the reservoir system in the basin and to study potential flood levels on the lower river. Funds requested will be used for maintenance of the model and completion of the reports on comprehensive model tests.

Nuclear explosives studies for civil construction are carried out as part of a joint research program with the Atomic Energy Commission. The objective is to develop an engineering capability to use nuclear explosives in construction of public works projects. The Corps of Engineers has primary responsibility for chemical explosive experiments and development of engineering, construction, and cost data.

The International Hydrological Decade (1965–74) is a joint effort by some 100 countries to advance scientific knowledge of water to meet the growing demands for this resource more effectively. The Corps of Engineers component of the U.S. effort will be largely devoted to preparing for and conducting studies relative to the International Field Year on the Great Lakes in cooperation with Canada.

The requested appropriation of $769 million plus $44 million retained in budgetary reserve for use in 1970 provides a total program of $813 million. The appropriation requested is a decrease of $96 million compared with the amount appropriated for 1969, and a decrease of $198 million compared with 1968. About 62% of the requested program will be applied to 45 major projects in amounts of $5 million or more each.

1. Advance engineering and design.—Design studies establish project features and cost estimates required for preparation of contract plans. The funds requested will bring designs and plans for a number of high priority projects to the stage where they will be ready for construction, and will permit continuation or initiation of planning on other needed projects.

2. Navigation projects.—This activity includes construction of locks, dams, and canals, and improvement of channels and harbors by dredging and by construction of breakwaters, jetties, and dikes. Provision also is made for the construction of small navigation projects not requiring specific congressional authority.

With the funds requested, work will be continued in 1970 on 36 channel and harbor projects, of which six will be completed; and on 14 lock, dam, and canal projects, of which one will be completed. One new channel and harbor project—San Francisco Bay to Stockton, Calif., and one new lock and dam project—Smithland locks and dam, Illinois, Indiana, and Kentucky, will be initiated in 1970.

3. Beach erosion control projects.—The Federal Government assists in the construction of works for the restoration and protection against erosion by waves and currents of the shores of the United States and its possessions. Existing law provides for Federal payment of 50% of the cost of beach erosion control works for the protection of non-Federal publicly owned or publicly used shores, and up to 70% of the cost of protection of State and other publicly owned shore parks and conservation areas that meet certain criteria.

Funds are requested for one continuing beach erosion control project in 1970. Reimbursements will be made to compensate local interests on six other continuing projects. Provision is made for a limited number of small beach erosion control projects not requiring specific congressional authority.

4. Flood control projects.—This activity includes local protection projects and reservoirs for flood control and other purposes, such as water supply, but without power installations. Local protection projects consist of channel improvements, levees, and floodwalls. Provision is made for snagging and clearing work on navigable streams and tributaries when such work is necessary, for emergency bank protection, and for construction of small flood control projects not requiring specific congressional authority.

With the funds requested, work will be continued on 65 local protection projects of which 10 will be completed, and on 66 reservoir projects, of which six will be completed with 1970 funds. Three new local protection projects and six new reservoir projects will be initiated as follows:

LOCAL PROTECTION PROJECTS

- 1. Kansas City, Kans.
- 2. Morgan City and vicinity, La.
- 3. El Paso, Tex.

RESERVOIR PROJECTS

- 1. Santa Rosa Wash, Arizona.
- 2. Bloomington Reservoir, Maryland and West Virginia.
- 3. Little Blue River Reservoirs, Mo. (land acquisition).
- 4. Alum Creek Reservoir, Ohio.
- 5. Wauriha Reservoir, Oklahoma.
- 6. Belton Reservoir, Texas.

5. Multiple-purpose projects, including power.—Work will be continued on 31 multiple-purpose projects with power installations, three of which will be completed with 1970 funds. Construction will be initiated on one multiple-purpose power project—Bonneville lock and dam, Oregon and Washington.

6. Recreation on completed projects.—Additional public use facilities will be provided at completed projects to accommodate a rapidly increasing number of visitors.

7. Small authorized projects.—Activities in 1970 will be financed from funds appropriated in prior years.

8. Coordination Act studies (Fish and Wildlife Service).—This program provides for detailed studies and reports by the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife to determine the effects on fish and wildlife resources of water-control projects of the Corps of Engineers.

9. Rehabilitation.—Rehabilitation work will be undertaken on existing projects that have deteriorated to the extent that their usefulness has been impaired. Repair of breakwaters, revetments, and piers will be carried out on four navigation projects and one multiple-purpose project including power.

10. Aquatic plant control.—This program is for the control and progressive eradication of water hyacinths, alligatorweed, Eurasian watermilfoil, and other obnoxious aquatic plant growths from navigable waters, tributaries, connecting channels, and other allied waters of the United States, in the interest of navigation, flood control, drainage, agriculture, fish and wildlife conservation, public health, and related purposes. The authority includes research to develop the most effective and economic control measures.

The Corps of Engineers—Civil is responsible for the flood control program for the lower Mississippi Valley from Cape Girardeau, Mo., to the Gulf of Mexico, including the main alluvial stream, the basins of the St. Francis and White, lower Arkansas, Yazoo, Tensas, and Atchafalaya Rivers, and Bayou Lafourche, and the alluvial lands around Lake Pontchartrain. The adopted plan calls for raising and strengthening about 1,600 miles of existing levees along the main river, for enlarging or constructing some 1,700 miles of levees on tributaries and in side basins, for channel improvement by bank stabilization from Head of Passes, La., to Cairo, Ill., for dredging a navigation channel 12 feet deep and 300 feet wide from Baton Rouge, La., to Cairo, Ill., and for five flood-detention reservoirs on minor tributaries.

1. General investigations.—Twelve studies will be continued, of which two will be completed in 1970. Basic data subsequently used in planning and designing projects are collected.

2. Advance engineering and design.—Funds are requested to continue planning on four features, of which one will be completed in 1970 and to initiate planning on one other feature.

3. Construction.—The total cost of flood control and related improvements in the lower Mississippi River and its alluvial valley is estimated at $2,607 million, of which $1,586 million has been appropriated through 1969. The funds requested will be applied to continuation of nine features.

4. Maintenance.—Provision is made for operation and maintenance of major features of the project.

The fund provides for the acquisition, operation, and maintenance of floating and land-based plant and equipment used in civil works functions; for temporary financing of services finally chargeable to civil works appropriations and for the furnishing of facilities and services for the military functions of the Department of the Army and other governmental agencies and private persons (67 Stat. 199).

Budget program.—Operating costs.—Operating costs are expected to remain at about the same level in 1969 and 1970.

Capital outlay.—Land and structures includes replacement costs of buildings, facilities, and related land. Dredges and other floating plant includes replacement and improvement costs for dredges and dredging equipment and other vessels such as tugs, tenders, and towboats. Land-based equipment includes replacement and improvement costs of transportation equipment, construction equipment, and fixed land equipment such as shop tools and fixed power-driven equipment. Major items for replacement and plant expansion are noted in the following narrative.

Land and structures.—The 1970 program includes $0.2 million for replacement of shop and yard facilities in Vicksburg, Miss.; $2.6 million for construction of facilities for the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors and the Coastal Engineering Research Center; $1.1 million for construction of the North Atlantic Division Materials Testing Laboratory at New York, N.Y.; and $0.5 million for design and construction of a wind tunnel at the Waterways Experiment Station at Vicksburg, Miss.

Dredges.—The 1970 program includes: $0.2 million for completion of rehabilitation of cutterhead dredge Wahkiakum; $1.9 million for replacement of cutterhead dredge St. Genevieve; $5.4 million for construction of hopper dredge Hayward; $1.2 million for completion of design and initiation of construction of a shallow draft hopper dredge; and $0.4 million for rehabilitation of pipeline dredge Collins.

Other.—Other floating plant includes: $0.3 million for completion of construction of the towboat/snagboat Ros; $0.4 million for construction of derrick boat Nicolet for use in North Central Division; and $0.7 million for initiation of construction of a drift collector vessel for use in New York harbor. Tools, office furniture, and equipment includes $1.9 million for procurement of automatic data processing equipment. Remaining capital outlays relate to a variety of relatively small items of floating plant, land-based equipment and tools, office furniture, and equipment.

Financing.—Reimbursements or advances from appropriations or individuals utilizing the services or facilities cover all operating costs and the capital outlay program reflected in the revolving fund schedules. Sales prices include an extra charge to help fund replacement of fixed assets at higher prices than original cost. Sums so obtained are applied to replacements as needed.

Operating results and financial condition.—Unreserved earnings in 1968 were $2 million more than expenses, thereby increasing these earnings to $3.4 million. Unreserved earnings are expected to increase to about $5.4 million in 1970.

Initial capital of the fund was provided by assumption of the assets, liabilities, and obligations of the plant accounts as carried on the records of the Corps of Engineers—Civil at June 30, 1953, and by an appropriation from the general fund of $100. Capital (Government equity) of the fund amounted to $154.7 million at June 30, 1968, and is limited to $172 million by the Public Works for Water and Power Resources Development and Atomic Energy Commission Appropriation Act, 1969 (Public Law 90-479). In 1968, capital was increased by net earnings of $9.5 million. Increases in 1969 and 1970 are principally due to earnings reserved for plant replacement which are wholly invested in assets. Capital of the fund is expected to reach $162.6 million at the end of 1969 and $172.6 million at the end of 1970. To permit operation at program levels for those years and into 1971, an increase in authorized capital to $180 million is required.

Consolidated summary of personnel.—The revolving fund is used to initially finance all payrolls of the Corps of Engineers—Civil.

The table which follows shows the distribution of personnel and salary costs to appropriations of the Corps of Engineers and to other accounts.

This appropriation supports the objective of the act of July 12, 1960, as amended, to provide for the promotion of economic and social development in the Ryukyu Islands, and finances the administration of these islands by the United States, which exercises jurisdiction pursuant to the treaty of peace with Japan. Executive Order 10713, June 5, 1957, as amended, establishes under the Secretary of Defense a Civil Administration of the Ryukyu Islands to execute the administrative, legislative, and jurisdictional powers reposed in the United States. The U.S. contribution to the development of the Ryukyuan economy, and to the improvement of the health, education, and welfare of the Ryukyuan people, helps ensure the free and effective use of its important bases in the islands.

1. Administration.—The program will provide for the general operating expenses of the Office of the High Commissioner and for the staff necessary to plan and execute the aid program, and to assist the Government of the Ryukyu Islands in its responsibilities for administration. In addition it provides for the U.S. share of the cost of the advisory committee to the High Commissioner which first met in March 1968.

2. Aid to the Ryukyuan economy.—The principal elements of the program are summarized in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

	1967 actual	1968 actual	1969 estimate	1970 estimate
Reimbursement to the Government of the Ryukyu Islands for the cost of public safety and public health operations required because of the presence of U.S. forces.....	1,200	1,200	1,500	1,500
Contribution to the Government of the Ryukyu Islands to stimulate a higher level of teachers' salaries.....	1,000	1,000	4,153	6,000
Scholarships and other aids to technical training and development.....	1,930	1,862	2,420	2,345
Contributions to education, social welfare, public health, public safety, and public works programs.....	7,862	7,886	7,580	7,655
Total.....	11,992	11,948	15,653	17,500

The general fund of the civil administration is also available for assisting the economic and social development of the islands. It receives income from three wholly owned corporations, from the purchase and resale of petroleum products, and from investments in financial institutions. The corporations retain their earnings to provide for necessary growth. Receipts from the sale of petroleum products were distributed in part directly to the Government of the Ryukyu Islands in lieu of taxes until 1968. Since a sales tax on such products has been enacted, all receipts will be retained for investment in the corporations or for contributions to specific social and economic development programs for the islands. A cash balance is maintained to meet emergency requirements. A statement of financial condition and a summary financial program follow (in thousands of dollars):

Expansion of the fixed assets of the corporations is planned as indicated in the obligation program summarized below (in thousands of dollars):

Ryukyu Electric Power Corporation (REPC).....	7,950	30,591	4,506
Ryukyu Domestic Water Corporation (RDWC).....	5,023	3,770	9,470
Ryukyu Development Loan Corporation (RDLC).....	-----	20	-----

The REPC contracted for the construction of a 170-mw. powerplant in 1969, to be completed in August 1970, at a cost of approximately $22 million. About $4 million will be paid by REPC from accumulated and current earnings during the construction of the plant, and the remaining $18 million will be funded from future earnings. The construction contractor was required to finance 80 percent of the cost on 10-year credit terms. In January of 1969, the REPC will contract for the conversion of the transmission system from 69 to 138 kilovolts at a cost of $4.2 million. Except for initial design and real estate costs which are funded in 1969, this project will be funded in the amount of $4 million from corporate earnings during the period from 1969 to 1973. The contractor is expected to extend 5-year credit terms for 80% of the construction cost. Other obligations are principally for the expansion of the transmission and distribution systems.

The RDWC is continuing the system expansion and water development program begun in 1963 with a total cost of about $54 million. $24.8 million had been obligated at the end of 1968. One of the major projects in the development program is the Fukuji Dam and reservoir with a storage capacity of almost 10 billion gallons to be constructed in northern Okinawa. Total costs are estimated at $10.8 million. Of this amount, $2 million has already been funded for design and phase I construction costs in the 1968 and 1969 programs. It is planned to finance the balance of $8.7 million from future earnings of the general fund and the water corporation during the construction period from 1970 to 1971.

In 1968 the RDLC sold $2 million of its authorized $10 million bond issue. It was planned to sell an additional $5 million in 1969 and $3 million in 1970. It now appears that the local banks, in view of the existing monetary stringency, will purchase only $6 million in those years. The demand for capital loan funds, however, continues unabated. The RDLC estimates current demand at $23 million. It is therefore planned to contribute $750 thousand from the general fund during 1969 to augment the RDLC capital to assist it in its primary purpose of stimulating economic development.

In 1968, $1.58 million was contributed from the general fund for other economic development and public works projects. $4.55 million is being programmed for this purpose in 1969, and $3.75 million is proposed for 1970. These funds are primarily for the construction of roads and airfields.

Additional economic aid is furnished by the United States through other programs. One of these is the free distribution of foodstuffs under the Food for Freedom program. A second is the provision of long-term credit for purchase of surplus commodities under the same program.

The total amount of external funds being made available for Ryukyuan economic and social development by the United States and Japan is summarized in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

The Government of the Ryukyu Islands was created by the U.S. Civil Administration on April 1, 1952. In addition to local revenue derived primarily from income and excise taxes, this government receives grants from the U.S. Government and the Government of Japan. Grants from the United States are related to extraordinary services provided for U.S. forces and for assistance in development of public facilities and services.
