

TABLE V.—Disposable personal income, population, and consumers' price index, 1929-47

Period	Disposable personal income (billions of dollars) ¹	Population (thousands) ²	Consumers' price index (1944=100)	Per capita disposable personal income
				Current dollars	1944 dollars ³
1929.....	82.5	121,770	97.6	673	695
1930.....	73.7	123,077	95.1	599	630
1931.....	63.0	124,040	86.6	508	587
1932.....	47.8	124,840	77.8	383	492
1933.....	45.2	125,579	73.6	360	489
1934.....	51.6	126,374	76.3	408	535
1935.....	58.0	127,250	78.2	456	583
1936.....	68.3	128,053	79.0	533	675
1937.....	71.1	128,825	81.8	552	675
1938.....	65.5	129,825	80.3	505	629
1939.....	70.2	130,880	79.2	536	677
1940.....	75.7	131,970	79.8	574	719
1941.....	92.0	133,203	83.8	691	825
1942.....	116.2	134,665	92.8	863	930
1943.....	131.6	136,497	98.5	964	979
1944.....	146.0	138,083	100.0	1,057	1,057
1945.....	150.7	139,586	102.3	1,080	1,056
1946.....	158.4	141,229	111.0	1,122	1,011
	Seasonally adjusted annual rates		Not adjusted for seasonal ⁴	Seasonally adjusted annual rates
1946:
I.....	150.9	⁵ 140,549	103.5	1,074	1,038
II.....	153.8	⁵ 140,985	105.2	1,091	1,037
III.....	160.4	⁵ 141,547	114.5	1,133	990
IV.....	168.0	⁵ 142,288	120.6	1,181	979
1947:
First half ⁶	169.6	143,338	123.7	1,183	956

¹ Based on the revised series on national income and product of the Department of Commerce. For explanation of revisions see the Department of Commerce supplement to the July 1947 Survey of Current Business entitled, "National Income and Product Statistics of the United States, 1929-46."

² Estimated population of continental United States, including armed forces overseas; annual data as of July 1 and quarterly data as of middle of quarter.

³ Current dollars divided by the consumers' price index on 1944=100 base to give a rough measure of changes in buying power of disposable income.

⁴ A small part of the increase may be seasonal.

⁵ Interpolated from published data.

⁶ Estimates based on incomplete data.

Sources: Department of Commerce (disposable income and population) and Department of Labor (consumers' price index).