THE Nation's output of goods and services scored another large gain from the first to the second quarter of 1968. In a setting of strong demand, a tight labor market, and rising costs, prices again registered a substantial increase.

According to preliminary estimates, GNP rose $19½ billion—almost as much as in the first quarter—to reach a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $851 billion (revised basis). Of the 2½ percent gain in current dollars, about 1¼ percent represented a rise in physical volume and 1 percent, higher prices. These changes were not greatly different from those of the first quarter, but the two quarters were quite dissimilar in terms of final sales and inventory investment. Final sales rose $13½ billion in the second quarter after an unsustainable $26½ billion rise in the first, while inventory investment rose by more than $6 billion in the second after a comparable decline in the first quarter.

Considering the exceptionally large monthly gains in sales and income early in the year, it is not surprising that the rate of advance within the second quarter was less rapid than during the opening quarter of 1968. Retail sales, for example, were no higher in June than they were in March after an extraordinary gain in the previous 3 months. Personal income rose $13 billion from March to June following a rise of $17½ billion from December to March. Although this difference was due partly to special factors, such as the increase in minimum wages in February and in Social Security benefits in March, it also reflected smaller gains in employment. At the same time, the price rise in final markets continued without abatement, although in wholesale industrial markets there was some evidence of a slower rate of advance.

Taxes increased

Against a background of strong inflationary pressures and continued large deficits in the Federal budget and in the balance of payments, the President signed into law on June 28 the Revenue and Expenditure Control Act of 1968. The act provides for a 10 percent surcharge on individual and corporate incomes, a cut in Federal expenditures for fiscal 1969, an extension of excise taxes on autos and telephones, and an acceleration in the payment of corporate income taxes. For fiscal 1969, the surcharge is expected to yield $7.8 billion in individual and $3.8 billion in corporate taxes. The expenditure limitations provide that actual spending in fiscal 1969 not exceed $180 billion—$6 billion below the amount projected for fiscal 1969 by the President in the January 1968 Budget. There are four categories of exemptions from the limitation: Vietnam, national debt interest, veterans' benefits, and benefits paid from Social Security trust funds. Spending is expected to run above the $180 billion ceiling; the President has announced that expenditures for Vietnam alone will exceed by $2½ billion the 1969 figure projected in January.

Slowdown in sales growth

The less rapid growth in final sales in the second quarter was concentrated in consumption expenditures, which rose $7½ billion, or less than half as much as the unusual $17 billion gain in the first quarter. The slowdown was apparent in both durables and nondurables; services continued their steady uptrend. Purchases of durable goods, which had spurted in the first quarter following the strike-depressed fourth quarter of 1967, rose by a more modest $2 billion and reflected mainly increased sales of automobiles and parts. Dealers' sales of new domestic-type cars for the quarter rose to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 8.4 million units, an improvement of 0.2 million over the first quarter.

The big difference in the consumption gain was in nondurables, which advanced only $1½ billion after an $8 billion rise in the first quarter. The slowdown was fairly widespread except for food, which continued to increase at a rapid rate.

Nonresidential fixed investment declined by $1 billion in the second quarter following a $3.6 billion rise in the first. The OBE-SEC survey conducted in May, before the enactment of the tax increase, indicated a modest pickup in expenditures in the third quarter and again in the fourth. Housing expenditures, which are discussed in detail elsewhere in this issue, rose $1 billion in the second quarter, a little more than in the first.

On the basis of incomplete data, net exports, which early in the year had fallen to their lowest level since 1960, showed only a minor improvement in the spring months, reflecting mainly a recovery in exports after the New York dock strike in March. Imports of steel for strike-hedging purposes, already large in the first quarter, rose even more in the second.

The expansion in Federal purchases slowed down in the second quarter, primarily because of a smaller rise in non-defense outlays; defense purchases were up $2½ billion, somewhat more than in the first quarter. State and local purchases advanced about in line with their long-term trend.

Rise in inventory investment

During the first quarter of the year, sales rose so rapidly that businessmen were unable to build up their stocks as planned and inventory accumulation fell sharply from the fourth quarter. With the slower growth in final sales, the second quarter witnessed a reversal of the first quarter experience. According to estimates based on incomplete figures, inventory investment in the second quarter was at an $8½ billion annual rate, up $6 billion from the previous quarter and equal to the rate in the fourth quarter of 1967. Additions to manufacturers' stocks rose considerably over the first quarter rate, while trade stocks expanded after little change in the January-March period.

Personal income up $15 billion

Personal income showed a large quarter-to-quarter gain of $15 billion, reaching a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $678 in the second quarter. All types of income contributed to the rise. Wages and salaries advanced $9 billion after an exceptionally large increase of $12 billion in the opening quarter of the year. As compared with the first quarter, employment gains this spring were smaller—about 360,000 vs. 730,000 in nonfarm establishments—hourly earnings rose a little less rapidly, but hours of work were about unchanged after a slight dip in the first quarter. Notwithstanding the smaller employment increase and a rise in the unemployment rate in June, the labor market in the second quarter continued to be tight. The overall unemployment rate, at 3.6 percent, was the same as the first quarter average.

With personal income up less, and with personal income taxes rising somewhat more in the second quarter than in the first, the rise in disposable income slowed down to $12 billion from $14.8 billion. The effect of the new 10 percent tax surcharge is not reflected in second quarter taxes but will begin to show up in the third. Since the surtax on calendar 1968 liabilities is 7½ percent for individuals and the 10 percent increase in withholdings does not start until July 15, the final settlements on 1968 liabilities that will be made in the first half of 1969 are expected to be large—about $1½ billion to $2 billion above those in the first half of 1968.

Consumption advanced much less than disposable income in the second quarter and the saving rate increased to 7¼ percent, an increase of about a half point over the first quarter. Last year the saving rate was approximately 7½ percent, considerably above the average of 6 percent for the 1964-66 period.

1961 Input-Output Tables

In the course of experimenting with alternative procedures for maintaining its input-output data on as current a basis as possible, the Office of Business Economics has produced an input-output table for the year 1961. This table was developed largely by the application of summary statistical adjustments to the 1958 input-output table, which continues to represent the most recent comprehensive benchmark available. Work is currently underway in OBE on a new benchmark table for 1963.

The basic data for 1961—value of transactions, direct requirements, and total requirements—are shown in the same detail as for 1958 and in both 1961 and 1958 prices. The 1961 data as well as explanatory notes may be obtained by writing to the National Economics Division, Office of Business Economics, U.S. Department of Commerce, Washington, D.C. 20230.

Residential Construction and Mortgage Markets—First Half 1968

RESIDENTIAL construction activity, after a precipitous drop during 1966, turned up in early 1967 and rose substantially throughout the year. Activity continued to advance but at a much slower pace in the first half of 1968.

The improvement in housing activity since the end of 1966 and the recent slowing are attributable mainly to the pronounced shifts in credit conditions that have occurred over this period. In 1967, generally easier credit conditions provided major mortgage-lending institutions with near-record inflows of funds, which substantially increased supplies of credit for homebuilding activity. Toward the end of 1967 and during the first half of 1968, financial conditions became increasingly less favorable—long-term interest rates reached new peaks, the rise in short-term rates accelerated, and monetary policy was shifted from expansion to restraint. Thus, after a year of strong recovery in residential construction, record high financing costs and the possibility of credit shortages were again threatening the supply of funds to mortgage markets and obscuring the near-term outlook for residential construction.

Investment in nonfarm housing in the first half of 1968 was at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $29.0 billion, up more than 40 percent from the low reached in the first quarter of 1967 and somewhat above the rate prevailing just before the 1966 downturn. Construction costs have continued to rise rapidly throughout this period, and real expenditures were still below the rate in early 1966.

Starts have improved considerably since the money squeeze of 1966. Starts had fallen from a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 1½ million units in the fourth quarter of 1965 to 917,000 units a year later. Most of this decline was recovered by the fourth quarter of 1967. In the first half of this year, private nonfarm starts averaged 1.43 million units at an annual rate, some 13 percent above the full-year figure for 1967. However, some softening became evident in the spring; after rising to a rate of better than 1½ million units in April, starts fell to a 1.3 million rate in both May and June. Permits, which generally lead starts by about 1 month, declined in each month of the second quarter.

Nevertheless, there can be little doubt that the underlying demand for housing is quite strong. Even at the improved levels of early 1968, starts were running below the combined total required for new household formation plus estimated replacements. The annual increase in households—which averaged about 880,000 from 1960 to 1966—is now estimated at about 1 million and is projected to rise considerably in the years immediately ahead; dwellings are being removed from the housing stock at a rate of roughly two-thirds of 1 million units per year. This shortfall in residential building has led to a marked decline in rental and homeowner vacancy rates and to very low levels of unsold inventories of new single family homes. With demand strong in relation to the available supply, the rise in rents has accelerated perceptibly as have prices for new and existing homes.

Single family housing

Starts of single family homes, which fluctuated in a fairly narrow range of about 1 million units annually from 1960 through 1965, declined to 780,000 units in 1966 but recovered to nearly 850,000 units last year. By the first quarter of this year, starts had returned to the level prevailing just before the 1966 decline.

Sales of new single family homes erected by merchant builders—who account for about half of all single family housing starts—also experienced a sharp decline during the credit squeeze of 1966, but their recovery since then has been less than complete (chart 7). Sales of these houses were running at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of about 600,000 units in late 1965 and fell to less than 400,000 units a year later. A pronounced upturn brought sales to a rate of about 550,000 in the early fall of 1967, but since then, sales have shown some softening; in the first 5 months of 1968, sales were more than 15 percent below those of late 1965.

Given the rather full recovery in single family starts of all types, the reasons for the failure of sales (and starts) by merchant builders to regain earlier peaks are not entirely clear. It may be a result of high prices for new homes and the cost and terms at which credit is available to potential buyers; in addition, merchant builders may have experienced difficulties in obtaining financing from lenders. However, it may also be a consequence of an insufficient supply. Stocks of new houses available for sale declined steadily from mid-1964 to mid-1967, and the ratio of inventories to sales last fall was at its lowest point since at least 1963. Since

- Sales have recovered since 1966 but are below earlier highs last fall, the level of stocks and the ratio of stocks to sales have risen somewhat, but both still appear to be comparatively low.

Multifamily building

The 1966-67 decline and recovery in the construction of multifamily units, especially apartment houses with five or more units, were somewhat more pronounced than for single family homes (chart 8). Starts on apartment houses were running at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of over 500,000 units in the fourth quarter of 1965, a fairly sizable reduction from the peak levels 2 years earlier. They declined to a rate of about 280,000 units in the fourth quarter of 1966, but have since moved up to 530,000 units in the first quarter of this year and to an average of 590,000 in April and May.

Because new household formation has been concentrated in the age groups that typically rent rather than buy, the underlying demand for apartments has been very strong and has been bolstered by the backlog built up during the 1966 credit squeeze. In addition, some potential demand for single family homes may have shifted to apartments and other rental units. As a consequence, rental vacancy rates have fallen considerably despite the substantial recovery in apartment house starts. In the first quarter of 1968, the overall rental vacancy rate was down to 5.5 percent from 6.6 percent a year earlier. National vacancy rates averaged about 6.2 percent in 1967 and more than 7 percent in every year from 1960 to 1966.

Residential Mortgage Markets

Near-record inflows of funds to savings and loan associations and other major mortgage lenders led to a strong recovery in residential mortgage lending in 1967. Although the upturn in mortgage lending was moderate during the first half of last year, when mortgage lenders were replenishing depleted liquidity positions and when the homebuilding and real estate industries were recovering from the severe setbacks of 1966, it accelerated sharply after mid-year. By the fourth quarter, loans on

1- to 4-family nonfarm properties had reached a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $16 billion, which about equaled the peak rate of expansion for the full year 1965. The high rate of mortgage debt expansion continued into the first quarter of this year, and the available indications are that the pace of mortgage lending was at least maintained during the recent April-June period.

The patterns of mortgage lending of 1- to 4-family properties by major type of lender are presented in chart 9. The savings and loan associations, which suffered the most serious contraction in 1966, led the recent recovery. Commercial banks also stepped up their mortgage lending sharply as did the "other" group—which includes the substantially increased support operations of the Federal National Mortgage Association (FNMA). The mutual savings banks, on the other hand, maintained their relatively stable flow of funds to mortgage investments and used the bulk of last year's increase in savings deposits for the acquisition of corporate bonds. In a noteworthy development, life insurance companies have been reducing their investment in 1- to 4-family mortgage loans. The recent reductions are the first for life insurance companies since at least 1946.

Flows of funds to lenders

The recovery in residential mortgage lending was related principally to the strong inflows of funds to financial institutions last year. The flow of savings-type deposits to major mortgage lenders reached near-record levels during the first three quarters of 1967, but slowed appreciably in the final quarter. After improving slightly in the first quarter of 1968, the flow of funds to financial intermediaries slackened again during the recent April-June period.

The pronounced slowing in the flow of funds to banks and thrift institutions over the past three quarters largely reflects the difficulty that financial intermediaries encounter in competing for and holding deposits in periods of high and rising interest rates. During such periods, market interest rates rise above interest rate ceilings, e.g., the 4¾ percent limits that thrift institutions can pay on their regular deposit and share accounts. Under these circumstances, savers find it to their advantage to shift funds away from banks and thrift institutions to acquire higher yielding open market securities—the process that has been termed "disintermediation." Although the rate ceilings are needed as protection for savings institutions—because increases in the rates paid on deposits would apply to all deposits while only the most recently acquired mortgage loans would earn at the higher rates—the ceilings nevertheless seriously impair the flow of funds to these institutions and thereby reduce their capacity for making mortgage loans.

While the savings and loan associations, the largest class of residential mortgage lenders, have experienced disintermediation this year, it has not been as serious a problem as it was 2 years ago. In the first 6 months of 1968, the associations had a net savings flow of $3.7 billion, which is much less than the $6 billion advance posted in the comparable period last year but considerably more than the $2.1 billion gain reported in the first 6 months of 1966.

The fact that the disintermediation experienced by savings and loan associations has been more moderate in the recent period than in 1966 indicates that the interest ceilings now applicable

Private Housing Starts

Data: Census
U.S. Department of Commerce, Office of Business Economics 68-7-8 to commercial banks as well as to thrift institutions have been successful in restraining the competition for deposits among the intermediaries—a competition that proved disadvantageous to the associations in 1966. Also, it suggests that the associations have achieved a degree of success in modifying deposit drains by the issuance of savings certificates that can carry higher rates than regular share accounts and that have maturities of 6 months and longer. Finally, the greater stability of net inflows lends support to the hypothesis that some of the highly interest-sensitive deposits that left these institutions 2 years ago never returned.

Mortgage rates and statutory ceilings

While all long-term rates advanced sharply in 1967, the rise in mortgage loan rates started later and proceeded more gradually than did the rise in most other long-term rates. So far this year, most capital market rates have fluctuated around their 1967 highs, showing little net change on balance, but mortgage rates have climbed steadily higher.

The secondary market yield on new FHA mortgages, after declining only about $\frac{1}{2}$ percent from its high in November 1966 to its recent April 1967 low, turned about and rose without interruption for the rest of the year. By December, it was back to its year-earlier high. After easing slightly in the January–February period of this year, this yield resumed its advance to a new record of 6.94 percent in April. With the market rate for mortgage loans rising steadily, the differential widened between the market rate and the statutory interest rate ceilings—those imposed by some States under usury laws and the 6 percent ceiling applicable to federally underwritten FHA and VA mortgages. When this differential emerges, the mortgage lender, if he does not withdraw from the market, will attempt to raise the effective yield on mortgage loans by charging premiums or “points”—i.e., a given percent of the principal amount involved in the mortgage contract. For example, in April, 7.9 points were needed to align the 6 percent ceiling rate with the 6.94 percent secondary market yield on new home FHA mortgages. Because FHA permits home buyers to be charged only one point, the burden of the additional points falls on the seller to the extent that he cannot raise the selling price of his house to compensate for the points he must pay. Consequently, his profits or capital gains will be lower or he will withhold his property from the market. The latter course is unfavorable for the buyer since it restricts the supply of salable houses. If, on the other hand, the seller can raise his price to compensate for points, the buyer may be unfavorably affected because he must make a larger downpayment and carry a larger mortgage.

Congress recently suspended the statutory limits on federally underwritten mortgage programs until October 1, 1969. At the same time, the rates on FHA and VA mortgages were raised from 6 to 6 $\frac{1}{4}$ percent by administrative actions. The effect of these changes was a reduction in the “points” charged by lenders; however, since market yields on these mortgages remain above 6 $\frac{1}{4}$ percent, the “points” have not been eliminated.

Outlook

The general tightening in credit apparent so far this year is likely to have an adverse effect on housing starts and activity in the months immediately ahead. The reduced inflows of funds to lending institutions have already led to some leveling in mortgage credit expansion, which in turn has evidently had a depressing influence on housing permits and starts this spring. However, in view of the underlying strength in housing demand, the recently enacted program of fiscal restraint is likely to make possible an easing of monetary restrictions, and thus should lead to an improvement in homebuilding by late 1968–early 1969.

State Personal Income, First Quarter 1968

PERSONAL income in the 50 States rose $16 billion, or 2½ percent, in the opening quarter of 1968—the largest advance since the third quarter of 1965. In all eight regions and in 44 States, income was higher in early 1968 than in the final quarter of 1967. Regional gains ranged from a high of 3½ percent in the Great Lakes and Southeast to a little less than 1 percent in the Rocky Mountain area.

The pace of the first quarter income advance was above the national average and sharply higher than in the previous quarter in the Great Lakes, Southeast, Southwest, and Mideast regions. In contrast, the percentage rise was below the national average and less than the percentage increase experienced in the previous quarter in the New England, Far West, Plains, and Rocky Mountain regions. (See text table.)

Regional patterns

The differences between the fourth and first quarter patterns of regional personal income change are explained primarily by developments in manufacturing and farming. Three factors contributed to a rapid advance in factory payrolls: a general quickening in final demand as 1968 opened, the rapid recovery from the auto strikes of late 1967, and the building of steel inventories as a strike-hedge. Each of these developments pushed up factory payrolls, especially in the Great Lakes. Here, factory payrolls spurted by more than 5 percent, nearly double the nationwide advance of 2½ percent. In the fourth quarter, factory payrolls in the Great Lakes had declined about one-half of 1 percent as compared with a national increase of about 2 percent.

Changes in farm income were also very important in explaining regional changes in total income in the first quarter of 1968, even though on a nationwide basis farm income continued to expand slowly (1½ percent). Large increases in farm earnings played a key role in the income change in the Southeast and lesser roles in the Mideast and in New England. In the previous quarter, farm income had risen slightly in the Southeast and fallen sharply in the other two regions. In the Plains and Rocky Mountain regions, on the other hand, first quarter declines in farm income, following substantial increases in the previous quarter, held back the gains in overall personal income.

State patterns

Like the regions, those States that, because of temporary factors, had shown the smallest income changes in the previous quarter received the largest first quarter income gains; similarly, States with the smallest income advances (or declines) in the first quarter of this year were those with large income gains in the final quarter of 1967.

The largest income gains—4 percent or more—were scored in nine States: Arkansas, South Dakota, South Carolina, Kentucky, Michigan, Alabama, Oklahoma, Tennessee, and Vermont; most of these gains reflected strong advances in farm income. The gain in Michigan reflected increased activity in the auto and steel industries. Here, income spurted by nearly 5 percent during the opening quarter of 1968, as compared with a decline of almost 1 percent in the previous quarter.

In contrast, income was about unchanged in Oregon and Iowa, and declined by 1½ to 3½ percent in the District of Columbia, Hawaii, Idaho, Nebraska, Montana, and North Dakota. A strike and a more than seasonal fall-off in construction held back income in the District of Columbia. Elsewhere, the weakness reflected primarily declines in agriculture. In addition, the continuing copper strike (which was not settled until March) dampened the income gain in Montana and other mining States.

NOTE.—Quarterly totals for the State personal income series will not agree with the personal income measure carried in the national income and product accounts for two reasons. The State numbers are based on the unrevised national totals of personal income, first published in May 1968. In addition, the State series excludes and the national series includes the income disbursed to Government personnel stationed abroad. Revised State quarterly estimates will be published in the October SURVEY.

HISTORICAL DATA

Historical national income and product data are available from the following sources:

1964-67: July 1968 SURVEY OF CURRENT BUSINESS.

1929-63: The National Income and Product Accounts of the United States, 1929-65, Statistical Tables (available from any U.S. Department of Commerce Field Office or from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402, price $1.00 per copy).

U.S. National Income and Product Accounts, 1964-67

THE complete set of national income and product tables for the 1964-67 period is presented on pages 19-51. As is usually the practice each July, estimates for the 3 most recent years have been revised on the basis of new information. The estimates for 1964 have not been changed. Quarterly and annual data for all years prior to 1964 may be found in the SURVEY Supplement The National Income and Product Accounts of the United States, 1929-1965, Statistical Tables.

The series published in this issue update the previous estimates for 1965-67 by incorporating a wide range of new and revised statistics from various Government agencies and other organizations. The most important of the new data are: Internal Revenue Service statistics, which provide the basis for estimating business profits for 1965 and 1966; State unemployment insurance payroll statistics, which provide new information for the wage and salary estimates for 1967; the 1966 Annual Survey of Manufactures, which has been used mainly in deriving the estimates of producers' durable equipment; new Census data on business inventories, which constitute the principal source of the estimates of book value change in nonfarm business inventories for 1965-67; the fiscal 1969 budget and other Federal Government financial reports, which affect the Federal Government components of the national accounts; and Census statistics on the finances of local governments for fiscal year 1966 and of State governments for fiscal year 1967, which provide basic data for the State and local government components of the national accounts.

The revised quarterly estimates reflect changes resulting from the new annual totals, more comprehensive quarterly source data, and the updating of seasonal adjustments. All table numbers and titles are the same in this report as in the statistical supplement that carries the historical series.

Size of revisions

Although the impact of the revisions has been to raise the national income and product aggregates slightly, the broad economic pattern portrayed by the new figures is essentially the same as that depicted by the earlier estimates. The revised figures for GNP are higher than the previous estimates by one-tenth of 1 percent for 1965 and by about one-half of 1 percent for 1966 and 1967, with similar changes for GNP in constant (1958) dollars. National income and personal income were revised upward by about one-quarter of 1 percent for 1965 and by approximately one-half of 1 percent for 1966 and 1967. The accompanying table summarizes the differences between the revised and the previously published estimates.

New features in this revision

A few specific items concerning the income and product tables may be noted. First, tables providing data on gross product by major industry group in current and constant dollars appear in this issue (tables 1.21 and 1.22). Last year, similar tables were published in the October SURVEY; preliminary 1967 figures on gross product by industry appeared in the April 1968 issue. Second, annual data back to 1929 appear on page 52 for the principal aggregates and components of the accounts. This will simplify reference to these data for many users. Third, there has been a significant improvement in the price indexes used for recent years to obtain nonfarm residential structures in constant dollars. The price indexes used for 1965, 1966, and 1967 are based upon actual selling prices of houses obtained from a Census Bureau survey. A detailed explanation of the new price series appears in the Census Bureau publication CB 68-53, "Price Index For New One-Family Houses Sold, 1963-1967" (May 27, 1968). Finally, table 5.7, which is prepared by the Securities and Exchange Commission, has been modified so that data shown in The National Income and Product Accounts of the United States, 1929-1965, Statistical Tables for 1963 and earlier years is not completely comparable. A historical table with consistent figures will be available later this year.

THE NATIONAL INCOME AND PRODUCT ACCOUNTS - 1967

Relation of the Four Major Measures of Production and Income Flows

- GROSS NATIONAL PRODUCT is the market value of the output of goods and services produced by the Nation's economy
- NATIONAL INCOME is the total earnings of labor and property from the production of goods and services
- PERSONAL INCOME is the total income received by persons from all sources
- DISPOSABLE PERSONAL INCOME is the income remaining to persons after payment of personal taxes

NOTE.—Employee compensation includes wages, salaries, and supplements. Net interest is the net interest component of national income. Capital consumption allowances consist of depreciation and accidental damage to fixed business property. Indirect business taxes include indirect business tax and nontax liability and business transfer payments. Profit-type income consists of corporate profits after inventory valuation adjustment, proprietors' income, rental income of persons, and surplus of government enterprises less subsidies. Capital consumption allowances and profits by industry may differ from figures published in other tables because these two items have been reallocated by industry from a company to an establishment basis.

*Less than $50 million.

CURRENT BUSINESS STATISTICS

THE STATISTICS here update series published in the 1967 edition of BUSINESS STATISTICS, biennial statistical supplement to the SURVEY OF CURRENT BUSINESS. That volume (price $2.50) provides a description of each series, references to sources of earlier figures, and historical data as follows: For all series, monthly or quarterly, 1963 through 1966 (1956-66 for major quarterly series), annually, 1939-66; for selected series, monthly or quarterly, 1947-66 (where available). Series added or significantly revised after the 1967 BUSINESS STATISTICS went to press are indicated by an asterisk (*) and a dagger (†), respectively; certain revisions for 1966 issued too late for inclusion in the 1967 volume appear in the monthly SURVEY beginning with the September 1967 issue. Also, unless otherwise noted, revised monthly data for periods not shown herein corresponding to revised annual data are available upon request.

Statistics originating in Government agencies are not copyrighted and may be reprinted freely. Data from private sources are provided through the courtesy of the compilers, and are subject to their copyrights.

⁴ Includes data not shown separately.

⁵ Number of bonds represented fluctuates; the change in the number does not affect the continuity of the series.

⁶ Prices are derived from average yields on basis of an assumed 3 percent 20-year bond.

⁷ For bonds due or callable in 10 years or more.

Δ Revised. Δ Preliminary. Δ Annual total; monthly revisions are not available.
 2 Total for 11 months. 3 Less than 50 tons. 4 Reported yearend stocks. See BUSINESS STATISTICS note. 5 Jan.-Aug. average.
 6 Effective 1966, estimates are derived from a new sample and are not directly comparable with earlier data; see note in Feb. 1967 SURVEY.

Δ Data reflect sales from the Government stockpile.
 Δ Consumers' and secondary smelters' lead stocks in refinery shapes and in copper-base scrap.
 Δ Producers' stocks elsewhere, end of June 1968, 10,300 tons. Δ Corrected.

¹ Revised. ² Revised total; monthly revisions are not available. ³ Total for 11 months.
⁴ Reported year-end stocks. See BUSINESS STATISTICS. ⁵ Data cover 5 weeks; other periods, 4 weeks. ⁶ Excludes orders for motors 1-20 hp.; domestic sales of this class in 1967 totaled $110.5 mil.; May 1968, $9.6 mil.
⁷ Effective 1st quarter 1967, total shipments and shovel loaders include types not previously covered and off-highway wheel tractors exclude types previously covered; also, the wheel tractors for 3d quarter 1967 omit one type (usually included) to avoid disclosure of individual operations.

[†] Data (back to Jan. 1965) reflect revisions and new seasonal adjustment factors.
[‡] Revised series. Monthly data for 1958-66 are on pp. 35 ff. of the Mar. 1968 SURVEY.
[⊙] Revised to include combination washer-driers. [⊙] Total includes data not shown separately.
[⊙] Radio production comprises table, portable battery, auto, and clock models; television sets cover monochrome and color units.

* Revised.

¹ Annual total reflects revisions not distributed to the monthly data. ² See note "¶" for this page. ³ Less than 50 thousand barrels.

¶ Beginning Jan. 1968, data are not comparable with those for earlier periods; natural gas liquids are shown as "unfinished oils, natural gasoline, plant condensate, and isopentane," while refined products become "finished products" (both include stocks at refineries, natural gas processing plants, terminals, and bulk plants). Also, as a result of increased coverage in certain bulk terminals

THE NATIONAL INCOME AND PRODUCT ACCOUNTS OF THE UNITED STATES, 1929-1965 Statistical Tables

THIS VOLUME contains the complete set of national income and product tables that resulted from the comprehensive benchmark revisions connected with the incorporation of the 1958 economic censuses into the national income and product estimates. Summary results of these revisions, with explanations, were first published in the August 1965 Survey of Current Business.

Estimates for 1964 and 1965 in the report have since been revised. The latest figures—along with new data for 1966—are separately available in the July 1967 issue of the Survey.

81 TABLES—ANNUAL, QUARTERLY, MONTHLY—COVERING 165 PAGES.
