PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

In 1953, 163,000 cases of syphilis and 252,000 cases of gonorrhea were reported. These figures indicate that the decline in the number of cases reported, which began in 1947, is continuing. With elimination of grant support for State control programs, it will be necessary to limit case finding and treatment activities to defense industrial, military, and other high prevalence areas.

1. Grants to States for general venereal disease control, case finding, and treatment.—No grant program is proposed for 1955.

2. Direct operations—(a) Clinical and laboratory research.—Research and evaluation activities are directed toward the development, standardization, and improvement of diagnostic tests; development and evaluation of more effective methods of therapy; study of immunity to venereal diseases; and analysis and evaluation of data pertaining to research and progress in venereal-disease control.

(b) Technical assistance to States.—Epidemiologic services are provided to localities where the problem is imposed by national interest in defense production, military, defense recreational or national-security areas, and in areas where transmission of venereal diseases across State and national borders is a problem beyond the resources and responsibility of any one of the jurisdictions involved. Consultation is furnished to States through the regional offices in determining problem areas and their sources and the techniques required to control venereal diseases in those areas. Scientific information and educational media are prepared and disseminated through State agencies.

(c) Administration.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

This program provides for the development of techniques for the prevention and suppression of communicable and preventable diseases other than tuberculosis and venereal diseases by means of field and laboratory investigations, demonstrations, consultative services, training facilities, and emergency aid in the prevention of diseases during epidemics and disasters. It supplements the activities of State and local health departments by discharging Federal responsibilities due to interstate problems created by Federal action, or are beyond the capacities of the State and local health departments.

1. General disease-prevention and control activities.—These activities include epidemiologic and laboratory services; medical and biologic investigations, consultation and demonstration services; vectorborne and airborne disease investigations; studies in the use of insecticides and rodenticides; training of public health workers and the production of training aids; and general operational functions. The estimates provide for a substantial reduction in investigations and demonstrations on the control of disease vectors, reduction of malaria prevention to surveillance level, curtailment in the production of public health training materials, and discontinuance of summer student training.

2. Specific disease-prevention and control activities.—Investigation and demonstration programs are conducted for the control of poliomyelitis, encephalitis, and other virus diseases; dysentery and other diarrheal diseases, including demonstrations and consultative services on fly control; plague and other ratborne diseases including demonstrations on rat control in urban areas; and investigations on typhus fever. These activities also include studies on the prevention and elimination of health hazards created by water development projects.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

This program supplements and supports the activities of States and localities in the control of the basic essentials of individual and community life: air, water, food, and shelter.

1. Industrial hygiene.—Assistance is provided Federal, State, and local agencies and industry in preventing and controlling occupational hazards and diseases, including research and investigation on injurious and objectionable chemical, physical, and biological agents.

2. Environmental research activities.—This includes the basic and applied research and investigations into environmental health problems carried on at the Environmental Health Center in Cincinnati, Ohio.

3. Water-supply and water-pollution control.—This consists of cooperation with States, interstate agencies, municipalities, and industry in the formulation and execution of their water pollution control programs. Programs include direct Federal enforcement activity on pollution of interstate waters and their tributaries, research on practical means of abating pollution caused by industrial waste and sewage, water supply, and water-pollution aspects of interagency river basin development programs.

4. Radiological health services.—These services include the development of public health techniques for con-

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The Federal Government provides financial assistance to States, local governments, and nonprofit agencies to defray part of the costs of constructing hospitals and public health centers. The Federal participation in a project varies from a minimum of one-third to a maximum of two-thirds. Funds totaling $150,000,000 are authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year up to and including 1957 for allocation to the States and Territories on the basis of population and economic need. Federal payments are made as construction proceeds.

Progress is summarized in the following table, with amounts shown cumulatively.

Fiscal year	Number of projects with final approval	Allocations to States	Appropriations for Federal payments	Federal payments

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Sixteen hospitals and 125 outpatient facilities are operated to furnish medical and dental care to legal beneficiaries of the Service. The major beneficiary groups are American seamen, Coast Guardsmen and their dependents, Bureau of Employees' Compensation cases, persons afflicted with leprosy, and narcotic addicts. Medical care is also provided to foreign seamen and beneficiaries of other Federal agencies on a reimbursable basis. A program is operated which provides for payments for the care and treatment of persons afflicted with leprosy in the Territory of Hawaii.

1. Operation of hospitals.—This activity consists of 12 general hospitals, 1 tuberculosis hospital, 2 neuropsychiatric hospitals which specialize in the treatment of narcotic addiction, and the National Leprosarium at Carville, La. Inpatient loads and outpatient visits are expected to decline from current levels, as shown in the table below:

Hospital outpatient visits	564,868	540,000	490,000

2. Operation of outpatient clinics and offices.—This activity consists of 25 full-time outpatient clinics and 100 outpatient offices. In outpatient visits, 527,179 were experienced in 1953, with 535,000 and 547,500 visits expected in 1954 and 1955, respectively.

3. Operation of health units.—The Service operates a health program for the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare and conducts programs for other Federal agencies on a reimbursable basis.

4. Coast Guard medical services.—Medical services are provided by the Service for Coast Guard personnel at shore stations and on vessels.

5. Development and coordination of nursing resources.—Ways are studied of increasing nursing service throughout the country, of securing better distribution of nursing personnel, and achieving better use of nurse time.

6. Personnel detailed to other agencies.—Medical and dental personnel are detailed to certain other Federal agencies on a reimbursable basis.

7. Payments to Hawaii.—Grants are made to the Territory of Hawaii to defray the cost of care and treatment of persons afflicted with leprosy. Average daily patient load is expected to increase from 331 in 1953 to 341 in 1955.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The seven research institutes of the National Institutes of Health are the National Cancer Institute, the National Institute of Mental Health, the National Heart Institute, the National Institute of Dental Research, the National Institute of Arthritis and Metabolic Diseases, the National Microbiological Institute, and the National Institute of Neurological Diseases and Blindness. Funds are provided by this appropriation and by separate appropriations for each of the above-named institutes.

Funds for the seven institute appropriations are pooled to finance all research services provided centrally, including those contained in the newly opened clinical research center building. One-third of the new center is devoted to research beds (500 capacity), of which an estimated 350 will be activated by June 30, 1954.

This appropriation also finances research in various basic problems in public health, medical, biological, and chemical research not related to a particular institute.

1. Grants for research and training.—These grants are made to medical schools and other institutions for research and to individuals for research training purposes. The 1955 funds will continue the 1954 level of approximately 475 research projects and 31 research fellowships.

2. Direct operations—(a) Research.—The research services provided centrally for all institutes' research programs are financed through this account by reimbursements from each individual institute's appropriation. The additional costs shown for 1955 over 1954 are all to meet increased service requirements relating to the expanded joint laboratory-clinical research programs to be conducted in connection with the new clinical research center building.

(b) Other direct operations—(1) Review and approval of research and training grants.—This subactivity covers complete administration of grants under this appropriation and those similar functions for the institutes which are best performed on a centralized basis. There is a small decrease in requirements for 1955. (2) Administration.—This subactivity is financed through reimbursements from the several institutes' appropriations. Overall program direction and central administrative services are provided in support of all research programs.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

1. Grants—(a) Grants for research and training.—These grants are made to medical and dental schools, other institutions, and to individuals for research projects and training. Funds for 1954 will support approximately 540 research projects, 168 research fellowships, 139 stipends to graduate physicians for specialized graduate training, and teaching grants to each of 85 4-year medical schools and to each of 46 dental and 2-year medical schools. The estimate reflects a decrease from 1954 in grants for research projects, fellowships, and teaching of medical subjects.

(b) Grants for detection, diagnosis, and other control services.—Funds are provided to States and Territories on a formula basis for strengthening State and local clinical and educational services.

(c) Grants for special control projects.—Grants are made to local health agencies, universities, hospitals, and nonprofit professional organizations to develop, initiate, or establish improved types of cancer control techniques and devices.

2. Direct operations—(a) Research.—Research is conducted in biology, biochemistry, biophysics, radiology, internal medicine and surgery, pathology, chemotherapy, epidemiology, and biometry. The increase in 1955 over 1954 is to operate a broader clinical research program through increased utilization of the Clinical Center research facilities.

(b) Other direct operations.—These operations include consultative services to States and other organizations, review of applications for research grants, fellowships, and teaching stipends, and general program direction and administration.

[1] Some of the obligations for grants for research projects were incurred several years in advance of actual program performance. By means of the adjustment line shown in this schedule, the amount for 1953 reflects the actual performance level for that year.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

1. Grants—(a) Grants for research and training.—These grants are made to medical schools, other institutions, and to individuals for research projects and training. The 1954 funds will support approximately 166 research grants, 42 research fellowships, and 295 training grants. In 1955, a reduced amount will be available for training grants.

(b) Grants for detection, diagnosis, and other preventive and control services.—These grants are made to the States and Territories for mental health programs.

2. Direct operations—(a) Research.—Laboratory and clinical research is conducted in neurophysiology, psychology, neurochemistry, neuropsychiatric studies, socio-environmental studies, neuropharmacology (including narcotics and barbiturate addiction), and neuroanatomical studies. The laboratory research program is conducted jointly with the National Institute of Neurology and Blindness. The increase in 1955 will provide expansion of the clinical research program through increased utilization of the Clinical Center research facilities.

(b) Other direct operations.—These operations include review of applications for grants; promotion of training; consultative services to States; demonstrations and field studies in developing preventive and outpatient services; and general program direction and administration.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

1. Grants—(a) Grants for research and training.—These grants are made to medical schools, other institutions, and to individuals for research projects and training. The 1954 program includes funds for approximately 560 research projects; 131 fellowships; teaching grants averaging $25,000 each to 85 four-year schools, and $15,000 each to 5 two-year medical schools; and 115 training stipends. The 1955 estimates reflect decreases in average amount for teaching grants, a return to the 1953 level in fellowships, and a small reduction in research grants.

(b) Grants for detection, diagnosis, and other control activities.—These grants are made to States to provide clinical and other services to heart disease patients; to furnish training and technical information to physicians, nurses, and public-health workers; and to conduct case-finding surveys and related activities.

2. Direct operations—(a) Research.—Research is conducted in new and improved therapeutic agents, arteriosclerosis, diagnostic instrumentation, and in clinical medicine made possible with the facilities provided by the Clinical Center on such problems as coronary artery disease, hypertension, congestive heart failure, and related problems. The increase in 1955 over 1954 is to utilize more fully the new Clinical Center research facility in the conduct of a broader clinical research program.

(b) Other direct operations.—These operations include review of applications for grants; consultative services to

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

1. Grants—(a) Grants for research and training.—These grants are made to dental schools, other institutions, and to individuals for research and training. Funds for 1955 will support approximately 24 research projects and 11 research fellowships.

2. Direct operations—(a) Research.—Research is conducted in the fields of periodontal diseases, growth and development, oral surgery, bacteriology, pathology, histology, oral and biological chemistry, epidemiology, and biometry. The increase in 1955 over 1954 provides for small increase of the research program, principally concerned with work on research patients.

(b) Other direct operations.—These operations include review of applications for grants and fellowships, consultative services to States, development and application of dental disease control procedures, development of clinical methods and facilities, and program direction and administration.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

1. Grants for research and training.—These grants are made to medical schools, other institutions, and to individuals for research and training. The 1954 program will provide support for approximately 336 research projects, 41 fellowships, and 75 traineeships. The 1955 estimates reflect small reductions below 1954 in research projects and fellowships.

2. Direct operations—(a) Research.—Laboratory research is conducted in the fields of biochemistry and nutrition, chemistry, pathology and pharmacology, physical biology, and toxicology. Clinical investigations are conducted on arthritis, rheumatism, metabolic disorders including diabetes and goiter, nutritional deficiencies, liver diseases and endocrine disorders. The increase in 1955 over 1954 is to utilize more fully the Clinical Center research facility in the conduct of a broader clinical research program.

(b) Other direct operations.—These operations include review of applications for grants and general program direction and administration.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

1. Public-health methods and reports.—This program is primarily concerned with studies of public health practice, economics, and health trends. It includes (a) interpretation of data which have been collected by the Service, by other Federal, State or local government agencies, or by nongovernment agencies, to identify and evaluate current and future health problems and needs, to measure the available facilities, health personnel, supplies and organizations against those needs, and to provide a factual foundation for public health programs; (b) translation of these data into forms which provide information needed in programs of the Public Health Service or other Federal, State and local government and nongovernment organizations; (c) development and testing of methods of measuring the incidence of illness and the costs of public health services and the provision of advisory service in these areas to other government and nongovernment organizations; and (d) publishing of Public Health Reports, the official technical journal of the Public Health Service.

2. Management and central services.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The old-age and survivors insurance program provides partial protection to workers, self-employed persons, and their families against the economic hazards of old age and death. Tax contributions from employers, employees, and self-employed persons are deposited in the Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund, out of which benefit payments and administrative costs are paid. The volume of work to be handled by the Bureau will continue to increase until the old-age and survivors insurance program matures. Public Law 286, approved August 15, 1953, which provides for reimbursements to the Post Office Department for penalty mail, increases the Bureau's requirements by $996,000. A request for funds to finance this additional cost in 1954 will be submitted in a supplemental estimate.

1. Maintenance of accounts of employee earnings.—Eligibility for insurance benefits and the amount of benefits are based on wages reported by employers for their employees and on earnings reported by self-employed individuals which are recorded by the Bureau in individual accounts. The volume of work depends upon economic conditions, especially the level of employment. The workload for this activity has become relatively stabilized, but it will continue to grow gradually each year as covered employment increases. Earnings items received in 1953 were 225,044,610 and are estimated to be 228,738,000 and 229,581,000 in 1954 and 1955.

2. Development, determination, and certification for payment of claims for insurance benefits.—Claims for insurance benefits are received in the field offices from prospective beneficiaries. When a claimant's rights to benefits have been established, the Treasury Department is authorized to pay the initial benefit. The claims workload reached an abnormally high level in 1953 as the result of the 1950 and 1952 amendments which liberalized eligibility requirements, extended coverage, increased benefits, relaxed the retirement test, and made other changes. The 1954 estimate reflects a return to a more normal level of work, while the 1955 estimate resumes the long-term upward trend in the number of insured persons reaching age 65. New claims received in 1953 were 1,877,030 and are estimated to be 1,753,000 and 1,763,000 in 1954 and 1955.

3. Recertification monthly of awarded claims.—The beneficiary roll requires constant revision so that benefit checks may be mailed promptly each month to beneficiaries whose entitlement continues. The number of beneficiaries on the rolls increased sharply in 1953 and will continue to grow for many years until the program reaches maturity. Beneficiaries on roll at end of year in 1953 were 5,928,379 and are estimated to be 6,692,000 and 7,387,000 in 1954 and 1955. Benefit payments to beneficiaries under the program continue to rise with the increasing number of persons on the roll and the higher average benefits. Benefit payments (in millions) in 1953 were $2,627 and are estimated to be $3,240 and $3,677 in 1954 and 1955.

4. Hearings and appeals.—Individuals whose claims for benefits are disallowed have the right to appeal. The number of appeals, while not large, is significant in protecting the individual's rights. Appeals cases processed in 1953 were 3,785 and are estimated to be 4,275 and 4,488 in 1954 and 1955.

5. Actuarial services.—Actuarial studies and estimates are prepared for long-range program planning.

6. Administration.

OBLIGATIONS BY ACTIVITIES

Purchase of land and preparation of plans and specifications—1954, $1,110,000; 1955, $390,000.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

This appropriation is to provide for the construction of a building to house the central establishment of the Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance. Space presently occupied, located in 6 scattered buildings in Baltimore, Md., and 2 buildings in Pennsylvania, is totally inadequate and restrictive to the extent that many costly operating practices have had to be adopted. This expenditure would conserve the assets of the trust fund, since the savings in rentals and operating costs to be secured through properly designed space would be substantially more than the amortized annual cost of the new building. This expenditure will not involve any charge against general revenues. Congress has authorized the expenditure of $1,500,000 from the Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund for the acquisition of land and preparation of plans and specifications for such a building. A site is being acquired. The architects are now preparing plans and specifications. It is expected that in early 1954, when a firm cost of the proposed building is available, an estimate will be submitted to the Congress to provide for the construction of this building.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Grants for old-age assistance, aid to dependent children, aid to the blind, and aid to the permanently and totally disabled are made to States that have plans for these programs approved by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. Fifty-three jurisdictions, including all the States, the District of Columbia, Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands, have approved plans for old-age assistance and aid to the blind; 52 jurisdictions have plans for aid to dependent children; and in 1954, 43 jurisdictions will have approved plans for aid to the permanently and totally disabled.

The Social Security Act amendments of 1952 will expire on September 30, 1954, and thus will be in effect for only 1 quarter of the fiscal year 1955. For the last 3 quarters of the fiscal year 1955, the maximums on individual assistance payments will drop from $55 to $50 per month in the adult categories; and for aid to dependent children, from $30 for the first child, $21 for each additional child, and $30 for a needy adult relative with whom any dependent child is living, to $27, $18, and $27, respectively, per month. The Federal share in the adult categories will drop from four-fifths of the first $25 of the average monthly assistance payments to three-fourths of the first $20, plus one-half the remainder within the Federal maximums on individual payments; and in aid to dependent children, from four-fifths of the first $15 of the average monthly assistance payment per recipient, including the needy relative, to three-fourths of the first $12, plus one-half the remainder within the Federal maximums on individual payments.

For 1955, the total amount of Federal, State, and local expenditures for assistance and administration is estimated at $2,306,604,000, of which $1,213,000,000 represents the Federal share. The appropriation request of $1,200,000,000 is $13 million less than the estimated Federal share, because the States will have available for expenditure $13 million representing the Federal share of collections and adjustments for prior years. Of the total Federal share, $816,900,000 is for old-age assistance, $287,400,000 for aid to dependent children, $32,400,000 for aid to the blind, and $76,300,000 for aid to the permanently and totally disabled.

Based on the most recent program trends, it is estimated that a supplemental appropriation of $58,000,000 will be required for 1954. The need arises because (1) $20,376,659 of the 1954 appropriation was used to meet some of the 1953 requirements; and (2) the number of recipients of old-age assistance and aid to dependent children has declined less rapidly than was anticipated. The payment figures used in the tables appearing under the activities below include the supplemental; however, the amounts shown in the activity schedule do not.

1. Payments to recipients—(a) Old-age assistance.—The average number of recipients per month for 1955 is estimated at 2.2 percent fewer than was estimated for 1954. The estimated average monthly payment is $2.77 less than the estimate for 1954.

2. State and local administration.—The grants to States include 50 percent of the administrative costs that are found by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare to be necessary for the proper and efficient administration of the State public-assistance programs. The Federal share is for the salaries and expenses of about 45,000 State and local personnel.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The Bureau of Public Assistance administers Federal grants to States for old-age assistance, aid to dependent children, aid to the blind, and aid to the permanently and totally disabled.

1. Develop and consult on program policies and standards.—Conditions are clarified under which States may use Federal funds for public assistance programs, and standards are formulated for the development of efficient administration of these programs. Consultation is provided to State agencies on specialized subjects.

2. Review and approve State plans and grants, evaluate and advise States on operations.—State plans and State and local operations are reviewed and consultative services are provided to the States with regard to operating problems and development of programs.

3. Collect and interpret statistical and other data.—These data are for the use of State agencies and for Federal purposes. Special statistical studies are conducted to evaluate the public assistance programs.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The Bureau investigates and reports on the welfare of children and child life, and administers grants to the States for extending and improving maternal and child health services, crippled children's services, and child welfare services.

1. Development of State and local health services for children.—Program policies and requirements related to State plans for maternal and child health and crippled children's services are developed; such plans are reviewed and approved; consultative services are given to State agencies, other public and private agencies and organizations, and educational institutions engaged in training professional personnel; and guides and recommendations are prepared on the provision of the essential child health services.

2. Development of State and local social services for children.—The same approach is used for the child welfare services as for the child health services.

3. Research in child life and services for children.—Studies dealing with child health and welfare, with particular reference to social and economic problems, are conducted, and the programs and services for children are evaluated. The results are interpreted to the lay and professional public through pamphlets and bulletins.

4. Dissemination of information for parents and others working with children.—Publications are prepared and distributed on child health and welfare services, and, upon request, assistance is given to States in interpreting their child health and welfare programs.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The States are required to match one-half of the amounts appropriated for maternal and child-health services and crippled children's services, and the remaining funds are distributed to the States in proportion to their financial need. The States are required by law to pay part of the cost of child welfare services, but the share is not specified.

1. Maternal and child-health services.—Grants are provided to States for the extension and improvement of health services for mothers and children, especially in rural areas.

2. Crippled children's services.—Grants are made to States to extend and improve services for crippled children, including medical, surgical, corrective, and other care, especially in rural areas.

3. Child welfare services.—Grants aid States to establish, extend, and strengthen, especially in rural areas and other areas of special need, child welfare services, for the protection and care of homeless, dependent, and neglected children, and children in danger of becoming delinquent, and for the return of runaway children to their homes in other States.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

This Office is responsible for the organization, integration, and evaluation of all field activities of the Department, for the direction and supervision of grant-in-aid audits, for the development of State merit systems, and for the supervision of the surplus property activities for the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

1. Field services.—The regional directors provide leadership, coordination, evaluation, and general administrative supervision of the field activities operating out of the regional offices. Field activities which do not operate out of a regional office are subject to review by the regional director, particularly with reference to public and intergovernmental relations.

2. Division of grant-in-aid audits.—This office audits the 25 grant-in-aid programs administered by the Department. Approximately 1,825 audits of State programs and school and hospital construction projects will be made in fiscal year 1955. An increase of $100,000 in 1955 is to reduce present large backlog of audits.

3. Division of State merit systems.—Assistance is furnished the State agencies to comply with merit system statutes under grant-in-aid programs.

SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION

Operating Fund, Bureau of Federal Credit Unions, Social Security Administration

[Operating fund, Bureau of Federal Credit Unions: For additional working capital for the fund established by section 5 of the Federal Credit Union Act (12 U. S. C. 1755), $250,000, to be available for the purposes of such fund without fiscal year limitation: Provided, That this amount shall be treated as a loan to such fund and shall bear interest, payable annually, at a rate determined by the Secretary of the Treasury after taking into consideration the average rate of interest payable upon all marketable interest-bearing obligations of the United States: Provided further, That beginning not later than July 1, 1955, such amount shall be paid from such fund into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts at an annual rate of not less than one-tenth of such amount.] (12 U. S. C. 1751–1772; Departments of Labor and Health, Education, and Welfare Appropriation Act, 1954.)

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Federal credit unions are cooperative associations organized for the purpose of promoting thrift and creating a source of credit for provident and productive purposes for their members. Beginning with fiscal year 1954, fees paid by Federal credit unions will defray operating costs of the program. In 1954, the Bureau converted to a business-type budget. Because the new supervision fee collected annually does not become available for operating expenses until the latter half of the fiscal year, Congress appropriated additional working capital in the form of a loan of $250,000 to be repaid with interest over a 10-year period beginning with fiscal year 1955. During this period the Bureau should also accumulate sufficient additional funds to enable it to be self-financing as well as self-supporting.

The Bureau carries on three major activities: (1) Investigating and chartering new Federal credit unions; (2) supervising and guiding both new and established Federal credit unions, including making periodic examinations of their financial condition and operating practices; and (3) giving administrative direction to the foregoing activities.

Statistics relating to activities are shown below:

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Farms and other industries operated at the Fort Worth, Tex., and Lexington, Ky., narcotic hospitals provide patients with occupational outlets as a part of their therapeutic rehabilitation. Useful products are made for sale to the hospitals and other Government institutions (42 U. S. C. 258). The principal of the fund amounting to $169,350 consists of $134,300 in appropriations and $35,050 in donated assets. Retained earnings were $270,318 on June 30, 1953, and are expected to increase to $273,918 as of June 30, 1955.

GENERAL PROVISIONS—DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH, EDUCATION, AND WELFARE

SEC. 202. Appropriations under this title available for salaries and expenses shall be available [for examination of estimates of appropriations in the field, and] for payment in advance for dues or fees for library membership in organizations whose publications are available to members only or to members at a price lower than to the general public.

SEC. 203. Appropriations under this title available for salaries and expenses shall be available for services as authorized by section 15 of the Act of August 2, 1946 (5 U. S. C. 55a).

SEC. 204. Appropriations under this title available for salaries and expenses shall be available for travel expenses and [not to exceed $75,000 of such funds shall be available] for expenses of attendance at meetings concerned with the functions or activities for which such appropriations are made[: Provided, That hereafter appropriations to the Public Health Service for salaries and expenses shall be available for reimbursement to commissioned officers of the Service for the use of taxicabs and other means of conveyance (including reimbursement for use of privately owned vehicles) within and around their designated posts of duty, such reimbursement to be on the same basis and subject to the same limitations as for civilian officers and employees, and subject to the approval of the Surgeon General or his authorized agent].

SEC. 205. None of the funds appropriated by this title to the Social Security Administration for grants in aid of State agencies to cover, in whole or in part, the cost of operation of said agencies including the salaries and expenses of officers and employees of said agencies, shall be withheld from the said agencies of any States which have established by legislative enactment and have in operation a merit system and classification and compensation plan covering the selection, tenure in office. and compensation of their employees, because of any disapproval of their personnel or the manner of their selection by the agencies of the said States, or the rates of pay of said officers or employees.

SEC. 206. The Secretary is authorized to make such transfers of motor vehicles, between bureaus and offices, without transfer of funds, as may be required in carrying out the operations of the Department.

SEC. 207. [Not to exceed 5 per centum of any appropriation from the general fund of the Treasury in this title available for salaries and expenses may be transferred to any other such appropriation for the purpose of paying annual leave of employees separated from the service as a result of reductions of appropriations provided herein, but the transfer authority provided herein shall not extend beyond December 31, 1953] In order to more effectively administer the programs of the Department, the Secretary is authorized to transfer not to exceed 5 per centum of any appropriation in this title available for salaries and expenses to any other such appropriation, but no such appropriation shall be thereby increased by more than 5 per centum: Provided, That no such transfers shall be used for the creation of new functions within the Department. (Department of Health, Education, and Welfare Appropriation Act, 1954.)

GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 701. PROPOSED FOR LATER TRANSMISSION

Payments to school districts, Office of Education (under existing legislation, 1954).—A supplemental request of $6,000,000 is anticipated for 1954 to provide for the increased payments because of certain liberalizing amendments to Public Law 246 which were enacted at the last session of Congress and made effective on July 1, 1953.

ANALYSIS OF EXPENDITURES

Proposed supplemental appropriation		$6,000,000
Unliquidated obligations, start of year			$6,000,000
Unliquidated obligations, end of year		6,000,000
Expenditures out of prior authorizations			6,000,000

Program to strengthen Office of Education (under proposed legislation, 1955).—Legislation will be proposed to establish an advisory committee on education to the Secretary for the purpose of conducting studies of fundamental problems of national concern in the field of education and to provide authority for the Office of Education to engage in cooperative research with State educational agencies, universities, and others. A supplemental 1955 appropriation of $300,000 is anticipated to finance these items.

ANALYSIS OF EXPENDITURES

Proposed supplemental appropriation			$300,000
Deduct unliquidated obligations, end of year			50,000
Expenditures out of current authorizations			250,000

White House Conference on Education (under proposed legislation, 1954).—Legislation will be proposed to authorize a White House Conference on Education and preliminary conferences in States to consider major educational problems. The preliminary conferences in States should be held as soon as possible. A 1954 supplemental estimate is anticipated to finance these conferences.

Payments to States (including Alaska, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico), Office of Vocational Rehabilitation (under proposed legislation, 1955).—A supplemental appropriation in the amount of $8,800,000 will be proposed to maintain 1954 program levels and to initiate the proposed program for rehabilitation of disabled old-age and survivors insurance insureds. The new program will provide rehabilitation services for 5,000 disabled persons in 1955 and lay the groundwork for future program expansion.

ANALYSIS OF EXPENDITURES

Proposed supplemental appropriation			$8,800,000
Deduct unliquidated obligations, end of year			1,000,000

Program to stimulate wider coverage and greater benefits from private health insurance (under proposed legislation, 1955).—Legislation will be proposed to reinsure, for a premium, private health insurance organizations against a portion of the above-normal losses arising out of increased benefits and wider coverage. An actuarial service would be provided to give advisory assistance and service to insurance carriers in developing improved insurance plans. There would also be provided authorization to guarantee, for a fee, a portion of loans made by lending institutions to nonprofit health insurance organizations to provide funds to establish new health insurance plans or to expand existing ones. The reinsurance and guarantee programs should be completely self-financing eventually, but an initial appropriation will be requested of not more than $25 million for working capital, to be repaid as sufficient receipts accumulate. A 1955 supplemental estimate of $1.2 million will also be transmitted to finance the administrative costs.

Proposed supplemental appropriation			$26,200,000
Unliquidated obligations, end of year			25,100,000
Expenditures out of current authorizations			1,100,000

Creation of a National Commission for Health Improvement (under proposed legislation, 1955).—Legislation will be proposed to create a voluntary private federally chartered organization supported by Federal and voluntary contributions. It would have as its purpose the mobilization of private and public resources to seek solutions to the Nation's health problems. A 1955 supplemental appropriation of $250,000 will be proposed to finance the Federal Government's contribution for the first-year operations.

ANALYSIS OF EXPENDITURES

Proposed supplemental appropriation			$250,000
Expenditures out of current authorizations			250,000

Grants to States for public assistance, Social Security Administration (under existing legislation, 1954).—A supplemental request of $58,000,000 is anticipated for 1954. These funds are necessary because caseloads have not declined as rapidly as was anticipated.

ANALYSIS OF EXPENDITURES

Proposed supplemental appropriation		$58,000,000
Expenditures out of current authorizations		58,000,000

Grants to States for public assistance, Social Security Administration (under proposed legislation, 1955).—Legislation will be proposed to extend temporarily the Social Security Act amendments of 1952 and to revise and improve the present public assistance legislation by more closely relating it to the old-age and survivors insurance program. A supplemental appropriation of $108 million will be proposed for this purpose.

ANALYSIS OF EXPENDITURES

Proposed supplemental appropriation			$108,000,000
Expenditures out of current authorizations			108,000,000

Salaries and expenses, Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance, Social Security Administration (trust account) (under existing legislation, 1954).—Payment of the costs of penalty mail under Public Law 286 will require an increase of $996,000 for 1954 in the limitation upon the amount which may be expended from the Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund.

Salaries and expenses, Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance, Social Security Administration (trust account) (under proposed legislation, 1955).—Proposals to expand coverage, increase benefit payments, eliminate inequities, modify the retirement test and otherwise improve this program will increase the workloads of the Bureau in nearly all phases of its operations in 1955 and subsequent years. A supplemental appropriation of $8 million for salaries and expenses is proposed for later transmission.

Proposed expansion of Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance programs (trust account) (under proposed legislation 1955).—Estimates have been included to cover proposed legislation expanding coverage, increasing benefit payments, eliminating inequities, modifying the retirement test and otherwise improving the program. This legislation will increase 1955 tax receipts by $0.1 billion and benefit payments by $0.4 billion.

2. Power marketing.—Power from Allatoona, Philpott, Center Hill, Dale Hollow, and Wolf Creek and part of the output of Clark Hill and John H. Kerr Dams is being marketed under existing agreements with private utility companies, preferred agencies, and the Tennessee Valley Authority. Provision is made for continued contract negotiations with cooperatives, public bodies, and private companies for arrangements to dispose of the power output from the Jim Woodruff Dam and the remaining output of Clark Hill and John H. Kerr Dams. In addition, this activity includes: (a) Engineering analysis of existing and potential transmission-line requirements and hydrologic studies in relation to Federal generation installation; (b) studies of power costs and development of wholesale power rates; and (c) preparation and collection of power bills. Revenues in fiscal 1953 were $4,948,588. During 1954 and 1955 revenues are estimated at $11,700,000 and $13,000,000, respectively.

3. Purchase of power and rental of facilities.—Provision is made for the rental of transmission facilities and for the purchase of firming power in connection with disposal of power from the John H. Kerr Dam under existing contracts with the Virginia Electric & Power Co. and preference customers.

4. Advance planning.—During the current year this work included investigation of the benefits of integration of existing and potential Federal power plants.

5. General administration.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The Administration markets power developed at multiple-purpose projects constructed by the Corps of Engineers. To perform this function the Administration (a) operates and maintains a system of high-voltage transmission lines and related facilities and (b) contracts for the use of transmission facilities and for the sale, purchase, and interchange of power with other systems in the area.

Revenues in fiscal year 1953 were $2,711,368 and are estimated at $4,000,000 and $7,000,000 for 1954 and 1955, respectively.

1. System operation and maintenance.—The Administration will operate and maintain a transmission system as shown in the following table:

Transmission lines, miles	1,004	1,004	1,004
Number of substations	7	13	13
Substation capacity, kilovolt-amperes	87,750	267,750	267,750
Number of customers	47	60	70

2. Power marketing.—This includes: (a) negotiations of new and revised power contracts; (b) development of wholesale power rates; and, (c) analysis of transmission facility requirements based on load forecasts and economic feasibility.

3. Purchase of power and rental of facilities.—Provision is made for the rental of transmission facilities of cooperatives and privately owned companies and for the purchase of power from utility companies. The program is based on contracts in existence or under negotiation between the Administration and owners of electric service facilities in the area. Prior to 1955 this activity was financed from the Administration's continuing fund.

4. General administration.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

A continuing fund of $300,000, maintained from power revenues, is used to defray expenses incurred under emergency conditions to insure continuity of service. In prior years this fund was also used to finance costs of purchase of power and rental of transmission facilities with an annual expenditure limitation.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The Administration has constructed transmission facilities from Federal generating facilities to load centers and to points of interconnection with other electric power systems in the southwestern area. These facilities are coordinated with the generation schedules of the Corps of Engineers through 1955 as follows:

Project	First generation (fiscal year)	Installed capacity (kilowatts)
		Current or first year	Ultimate
Denison	In operation	70,000	175,000
Norfork	do	70,000	140,000
Narrows	do	17,000	25,500

Tenkiller Ferry	1954	34,000	34,000
Blakely Mountain	1955	75,000	75,000

During the current year the Administration has scheduled completion of the Carthage-Springfield-Mansfield transmission line facilities and other related construction on the main system. The 1955 program provides for service facilities to connect new customers to the existing system and contemplates completion of the Administration's participation in the Arkansas-White and Red River Basins survey.

INTRODUCTORY STATEMENT

The Administration markets power generated at Federal multiple-purpose projects in the Pacific Northwest. Additional generating capacity was made available during the past year from the Hungry Horse Dam constructed by the Bureau of Reclamation. Initial generating capacity will be available during fiscal year 1954 from the McNary, Detroit, and Big Cliff Dams under construction by the Corps of Engineers. During 1955 additional capacity is scheduled from the McNary project along with new generation facilities at the Albeni Falls, Dexter, and Lookout Point projects of the Corps. The Bonneville program for 1955 provides for continued construction of transmission facilities needed to transmit power from generation facilities in operation and from new power installations now under construction, including the Corps of Engineers' Chief Joseph project for which initial generation is scheduled during fiscal year 1956.

Twenty-year contracts have been executed between the Bonneville Power Administration and privately owned utilities in the Pacific Northwest to insure that their customers, particularly the rural and domestic customers, will receive an equitable share of low-cost power from Government-owned dams in this area. The contracts preserve the privileges of all public bodies that are given a preference by law in the purchase of power from the Government system and preserves power supplies to existing heavy industries which are customers of the Administration.

Revenues in fiscal year 1953 totaled $38,949,448. During 1954 and 1955 revenues are estimated at $45,630,000 and $53,690,000, respectively. These estimates assume median water conditions, and if critical water conditions should prevail, revenues might decrease by as much as $4,000,000.

CONSTRUCTION

Construction, Bonneville Power Administration

For construction and acquisition of transmission lines, substations, and appurtenant facilities, as authorized by law, to remain available until expended, [$38,866,000] $30,200,000. (16 U. S. C. 832–832l; Executive Order 8526; 43 U. S. C. 593–A; 16 U. S. C. 825s; 59 Stat. 10, 21–22; Interior Department Appropriation Act, 1954.)

Appropriated 1954, $38,866,000 Estimate 1955, $30,200,000

NOTE.—$4,096,400 of the 1953 appropriation for this account is excluded from this schedule and is set forth below under the title "Construction (liquidation of contract authorization), Bonneville Power Administration."

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

During 1955 transmission facilities will be constructed to conform with generation schedules as follows:

Project	Jurisdiction	First generation (fiscal year)	Maximum capacity (kilowatts)
			Current or first year	Ultimate
Bonneville	Corps of Engineers	In operation	564,000	564,000
Grand Coulee	Bureau of Reclamation	do	2,172,000	2,172,000

Chief Joseph	Corps of Engineers	1956	294,000	1,178,000
The Dalles	do	1959	358,800	1,256,000

By January 1959 the maximum capacity of the Federal power system in the Pacific Northwest will be 5,570,000 kilowatts as compared with 3,311,000 kilowatts in January 1954. In addition to basic main grid requirements, the budget for fiscal year 1955 provides for additional service connections to the transmission grid system at appropriate delivery voltages.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

This program provides for the management of the Administration's regional network, and for commercial operations and administrative expenses in connection with the disposition of electric power at wholesale from Federal dams in the Pacific Northwest.

1. Maintenance of the transmission system.—Transmission facilities of the Administration are being expanded as increased generating capacity from Federal hydroelectric projects becomes available. Additional maintenance personnel will be required throughout the transmission area to maintain facilities at levels adequate to insure safe and continuous operation. Facilities maintained are as follows:

Transmission lines, structure mile years [1]	5,154	5,732	6,208
Number of substations	145	157	167
Substation capacity, kilovolt-ampere years [1]	5,260,242	5,774,609	6,927,926
Energy available in average water year (millions of kilowatt hours)	17,634	21,400	24,230

[1] A unit year means the operation of a piece of equipment for 1 year.

2. Operation of the transmission system.—Growth of the transmission system will continue in fiscal year 1955. It will be necessary to man newly energized substations, schedule and dispatch the increased power supply, transmit additional energy and provide service to additional customers and points of connection with customers which will be added as indicated in the following table:

Number of customers	115	118	120
Points of delivery	295	308	313

3. Power marketing.—The major objectives of this activity are: (a) To obtain the fullest utilization of generating capacity, streamflow and stored water; (b) to insure adequate service to customers at lowest cost; (c) to negotiate power sales contracts and to read meters and compute power bills; and (d) to determine the proper rate structure for repayment of the Government investment in power facilities.

4. General administration.

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT

INTRODUCTORY STATEMENT

The Bureau administers 737 million acres of public lands in the United States and Alaska in the interest of conserving forest, range, mineral and water resources.

The total receipts in fiscal year 1955 from revenue producing activities of the Bureau are estimated to be about $77 million. Of this amount, $27 million will be paid to the States and counties in accordance with law, and the remaining $50 million will be deposited in the Treasury.

MANAGEMENT OF LANDS AND RESOURCES

Management of Lands and Resources, Bureau of Land Management

For expenses necessary for protection, use, improvement, development, disposal, cadastral surveying, classification, and performance of other functions, as authorized by law, in the management of lands and their resources under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Land Management, [$11,483,000] including the classification and survey of other lands in the Missouri River Basin, $11,625,000: Provided, That this appropriation may be expended on a reimbursable basis for surveys of lands other than those under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Land Management: Provided further, That, for the purpose of surveying federally controlled or intermingled lands, contributions toward the cost thereof may be accepted. (5 U. S. C. 133a, 133y, 485; 16 U. S. C. 583, 594; 43 U. S. C. 1, 2, 54, 72, 129, 815; 50 Stat. 874; Interior Department Appropriation Act, 1954.)

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

1. Lease and disposal of mineral resources.—Applications for leasing of mineral resources, the greater number being for oil and gas, are received and acted upon. Field investigations are made to determine validity of claims and patents issued for valid claims upon application. The increase for 1955 is to handle the increase in the workload, including that arising under the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (67 Stat. 462).

Cases pending, start of year	13,378	18,300	16,076	15,100
New and reactivated cases	47,709	40,970	47,600	51,000
Cases closed	42,787	43,194	48,576	54,700
Cases pending, end of year	18,300	16,076	15,100	11,400

2. Land use and disposal.—Applications for all types of land use, except for minerals and for acquisition of public lands, are acted upon under this activity. Public lands are examined and classified to provide a basis for management and a sound selective land disposal policy. The increase for 1955 is to handle the increasing workload.

Cases pending, end of year	19,474	25,013	27,000	21,000

3. Management of grazing lands.—The use of 170 million acres of the Federal range by 30,000 livestock growers is supervised. Proper management of these lands increases the grazing capacity by reducing overuse or unseasonal use, trespass, and protects them against fire and erosion.

4. Forestry.—Over 5 million acres of commercial forest lands in the United States and 40 million acres in Alaska, plus 110 million acres of woodland, are managed. It is estimated that the 1955 program will permit marketing 707.5 million board-feet of timber having a stumpage value of $16,900,000. The 1955 program will also provide for increased costs of fire protection.

5. Cadastral surveys.—These surveys are an integral phase of the land management program and are required to locate and identify legal boundaries of lands under application for lease or disposal, for administering timber sales and the management of forest lands, and to provide legal descriptions necessary to the work of other Government agencies concerned with Federal lands. The recommended increase is primarily for surveys of lands granted to certain States at the time they entered the Union but for which they have not yet received patents.

6. Soil and moisture conservation.—The 1955 program plans treatment on 685,000 acres of public lands with measures to prevent runoff and erosion and to rehabilitate areas which are in critical condition. Emphasis will be placed on cooperative programs with other agencies in river basin areas.

7. Squaw Butte experiment station.—In cooperation with the Oregon State Agricultural College, studies are made of management problems on the western ranges.

8. Fire suppression.—Provision is made for fighting fire on or threatening public lands under the Bureau's jurisdiction.

9. Maintenance of physical facilities.—Provision is made for the care and preservation of the Bureau's equipment shelters and storehouses and for road maintenance.

10. Weed control.

11. General administration.—In addition to normal administrative services, provision is made for the collection and distribution of receipts estimated to total over $77 million in fiscal year 1955.

BUREAU OF INDIAN AFFAIRS

INTRODUCTORY STATEMENT

The responsibility of the United States toward the Indian people and the natives of Alaska includes protection and development of trust property and the furnishing of services not otherwise available to Indians and which are normally provided other citizens through Government and private agencies. Active programs are being aimed toward the integration of like services to Indians and non-Indians through the same sources and toward increased Indian participation in the management of Indian-owned resources. States and counties are participating at an increasing rate in the service programs usually with financing by the United States demanded because of the tax-exempt status of Indian lands. The ultimate goal of the entire program is to have the Indian people and the natives of Alaska take their proper place in the social and economic life of the Nation on the same basis as other citizens.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The Bureau furnishes health, education, welfare, and placement and relocation services to Indians in the continental United States and to the natives of Alaska.

1. Hospitals, disease preventive, and curative services.—In addition to the operation of 2,635 beds at 43 hospitals, sanatoriums, and medical centers, an estimated 1,400 beds are contracted for in non-Indian Service hospitals. Preventive and other curative health services are also provided.

2. Educational assistance, facilities, and services.—Financial assistance is extended to public schools enrolling Indian children under State and district contracts. Where such facilities are inadequate or nonexistent, the Bureau operates boarding and day schools.

Foster home care	2,032	2,300	2,800
Total	8,697	8,555	8,300

4. Placement services.—Through the development of job opportunities for Indians, this program stimulates movement of Indians from reservations and other areas which are overpopulated in terms of available resources, thereby promoting the integration of Indians with the general population. Upon evaluation of their skills, Indians are encouraged to leave the reservation for employment elsewhere, they are given financial assistance to reach and to get settled at the new location, and they are assisted through use of community resources in adjusting to life in the new community. The facilities of the State and Federal employment services are used in actual job placement.

5. Maintaining law and order.—Police services and tribal court operations are financed on Indian reservations, and special officers direct enforcement of Federal law.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

This program promotes the economic advancement of the Indians through the utilization of their resources.

1. Forest and range lands.—This covers management, protection, and utilization of Indian forest, range, and wildlife resources on nearly 50 million acres.

Timber cut:
Million board-feet	543	550	550
Dollar value	$8,052,000	$8,100,000	$8,100,000
Number of cattle units grazed	975,000	975,000	975,000

2. Fire suppression.—This is to fight fires on or threatening Indian reservations.

3. Agricultural and industrial assistance.—Improved methods in farming, homemaking, and the use of credit for agricultural and small-business enterprises are taught Indians to enable them to improve their economic condition through their own efforts. Provision is also made for special work required for Indians and Indian reservations affected by work under the Missouri River Basin program.

4. Soil and moisture conservation.—Land-use practices based on land inventories and soil-conservation plans are introduced to control erosion and promote more effective utilization of soil and water resources. Approximately 31 million acres, or 55 percent of Indian-owned lands, are severely or critically eroded. The job of soil and moisture conservation is approximately 11 percent completed.

5. Operation, repair, and maintenance of Indian irrigation systems.—Approximately 300 irrigation systems serving about 840,000 acres of Indian and mixed-ownership lands are operated and maintained. About 70 percent of the cost is financed from collections from water users.

6. Repair and maintenance of roads and trails.—Over 19,000 miles of roads serving isolated Indian areas are maintained where local road maintenance usually does not exist.

7. Development of Indian arts and crafts.—Production and marketing of the products of Indian crafts are fostered through formation of production groups; establishing standards; and improving markets, design, and production methods.

8. Management of Indian trust property.—Banking services are provided for Indians; land is purchased, sold, exchanged and leased; estates are probated; and Indian property and money rights are safeguarded. The increase recommended will permit accelerating consolidation and disposal of fractionated land holdings especially in those areas where withdrawal of Federal supervision may soon be accomplished.

TRIBAL FUNDS

Indian Tribal Funds

(Trust account)

In addition to the tribal funds authorized to be expended by existing law, there is hereby appropriated [$3,040,000] $3,000,000 from tribal funds not otherwise available for expenditure for the benefit of Indians and Indian tribes, including pay and travel expenses of employees; care, tuition and other assistance to Indian children attending public and private schools (which may be paid in advance or from date of admission); purchase of land and improvements on land, title to which shall be taken in the name of the United States in trust for the tribe for which purchased; lease of lands and water rights; compensation and expenses of attorneys and other persons employed by Indian tribes under approved contracts; pay, travel and other expenses of tribal officers, councils, and committees thereof, or other tribal organizations, including mileage for use of privately owned automobiles and per diem in lieu of subsistence at rates established administratively but not to exceed those applicable to civilian employees of the Government; relief of Indians, without regard to section 7 of the Act of May 27, 1930 (46 Stat. 391), including cash grants; and employment of a recreational director for the Menominee Reservation and a curator for the Osage Museum, each of whom shall be appointed with the approval of the respective tribal councils and without regard to the classification laws: Provided, That in addition to the amount appropriated herein, tribal funds may be advanced to Indian tribes during the current fiscal year for such purposes as may be designated by the governing body of the particular tribe involved and approved by the Secretary: Provided, however, That no part of this appropriation or other tribal funds shall be used for the acquisition of land or water rights within the States of Nevada, Oregon, Washington, and Wyoming, either inside or outside the boundaries of existing Indian reservations, if such acquisition results in the property being exempted from local taxation. (25 U. S. C. 123; Interior Department Appropriation Act, 1954.)

BUREAU OF RECLAMATION

The Bureau plans, constructs, and operates facilities to irrigate lands, furnish domestic water supplies, and develop related hydroelectric power and flood control in the 17 Western States. Activities in Alaska include water resources investigations, as well as construction on the Eklutna power project.

Appropriations to the Bureau are made from the general fund and from three special funds. The special funds are (a) the reclamation fund, largely derived from certain irrigation and power revenues; receipts from the sale, lease, and rental of public lands; and certain oil and mineral revenues; (b) the Colorado River dam fund, derived from the revenues of the Boulder Canyon project; and (c) the Colorado River development fund, derived from transfers of money from the Colorado River dam fund. The estimates of appropriation for the budget year are summarized by source, as follows:

Annual appropriation title	Estimate of appropriation	General fund	Reclamation fund	Colorado River dam fund	Colorado River development fund
General investigations	$6,000,000	$100,000	$5,372,546		$527,454

Operation and maintenance	23,154,000	1,300,000	19,911,222	$1,942,778
General administrative expenses	4,300,000		4,300,000
Total	155,292,000	69,238,000	83,583,768	1,942,778	527,454

The total appropriation request amounts to $155,292,000. This represents an increase of $11,622,340 compared with the appropriation for current fiscal year, and a decrease of $51,155,991 compared with the preceding fiscal year.

For carrying out the functions of the Bureau of Reclamation as provided in the Federal reclamation laws (Act of June 17, 1902, 32 Stat. 388, and Acts amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto) and other Acts applicable to that Bureau, as follows:

GENERAL INVESTIGATIONS

General Investigations, Bureau of Reclamation

For engineering and economic investigations of proposed Federal reclamation projects and studies of water conservation and development plans; engineering and economic investigations, as a basis for legislation, and for reports thereon to Congress, relating to projects for the development and utilization of the water resources of Alaska; formulating plans and preparing designs and specifications for authorized Federal reclamation projects or parts thereof prior to initial allocation of appropriations for construction of such projects or parts; and activities preliminary to the reconstruction, rehabilitation and betterment, financial adjustment, or extension of existing projects; to remain available until expended; [$3,000,000] $6,000,000, of which [$2,400,000] $5,372,546 shall be derived from the reclamation fund and [$500,000] $527,454 shall be derived from the Colorado River development fund: Provided, That the expenditure of any sums from this appropriation for investigations of any nature requested by States, municipalities, or other interests shall be upon the basis of the State, municipality, or other interest advancing at least 50 per centum of the estimated cost of such investigations: Provided further, That, except as herein expressly provided with respect to investigations in Alaska, no part of this appropriation shall be expended in the conduct of activities which are not authorized by law. (Interior Department Appropriation Act, 1954.)

Appropriated 1954, $3,000,000 Estimate 1955, [a] $6,000,000

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Surveys and investigations are made to determine the feasibility of potential reclamation projects; detailed plans are developed for authorized projects prior to appropriation of construction funds; and investigations are made for rehabilitation of existing Federal reclamation projects. Total investigations scheduled, excluding a number of investigations for which stream gaging only is in progress, are as follows:

The appropriation request for this activity is $6,000,000, an increase of $3,000,000, which is primarily due to the inclusion of investigations in connection with the development of the Missouri River Basin, financed in prior years under the construction and rehabilitation appropriation.

1. Engineering and economic investigations.—These are made to plan the development of river basins; to make feasibility investigations of potential projects, prior to authorization; and to make general engineering and research studies of reclamation problems either independently or in cooperation with local, State, or other Federal agencies. Included in this activity is the continued participation in the cooperative Arkansas-White and Red River Basins survey.

2. Advance planning.—Detailed field data are collected, definite plans are prepared, and repayment plans are completed for authorized projects, prior to obtaining appropriations for construction.

3. Investigations of existing projects.—These are made to determine the need and make plans for rehabilitation, financial adjustments, or water conservation on existing Federal reclamation projects.

4. Alaskan investigations.—These are engineering and economic investigations relating to projects for the development and utilization of the water resources of Alaska.

CONSTRUCTION AND REHABILITATION

Construction and Rehabilitation, Bureau of Reclamation

For construction and rehabilitation of authorized reclamation projects or parts thereof (including power transmission facilities) and for other related activities, as authorized by law, including payments under the Act of August 15, 1953 (67 Stat. 592), to remain available until expended, [$116,269,660] $121,838,000, of which [$52,509,206] $54,000,000 shall be derived from the reclamation fund: Provided, [That not to exceed $268,000 shall be available toward the emergency rehabilitation of the Dalton Gardens Irrigation Project, Idaho, to be repaid in full under conditions satisfactory to the Secretary of the Interior: Provided further, That not to exceed $222,000 shall be available toward the emergency rehabilitation of the Avondale Irrigation Project, Idaho, to be repaid in full under conditions satisfactory to the Secretary of the Interior: Provided further, That the Bureau of Reclamation is authorized to expend not to exceed $300,000 for emergency flood protective work and minor completion work on the irrigation system of the Buford-Trenton Project of which the portion thereof found by the Secretary to be properly allocable to irrigation pursuant to allocations to be made under section 7 (b) of the Reclamation Project Act of 1939 shall be repaid under terms satisfactory to the Secretary and to the water users: Provided further, That not to exceed $1,000,000 of the amount appropriated herein for the Missouri River Basin Project shall be nonreimbursable representing that portion of the cost of Pactola Dam allocated to furnishing a water supply for Ellsworth Air Force Base: Provided further,] That no part of this appropriation shall be available for other than the completion of field engineering, survey work, and preliminary designs of the Southwest Contra Costa County Water District System and no repayment contract shall be executed or construction begun until plans have been submitted to and approved by the Congress through its legislative and appropriation procedures, after submission of a report to the Congress by the Secretary of the Interior (1) on the cost and feasibility of said project, including the necessary distribution system and (2) on the rates required to be charged to the ultimate consumers: Provided further, That no part of this appropriation shall be used to initiate the construction of transmission facilities within those areas covered by power wheeling service contracts which include provision for service to Federal establishments and preferred customers, except those transmission facilities for which construction funds have been heretofore appropriated, those facilities which are necessary to carry out the terms of such contracts or those facilities for which the Secretary of the Interior finds the wheeling agency is unable or unwilling to provide for the integration of Federal projects or for service to a Federal establishment or preferred customer: Provided further, That in order to promote agreement among the States of Nebraska, Wyoming, and Colorado, and to avoid any possible alteration of existing vested water rights, no part of this or of any prior appropriation shall be used for construction or for further commitment for construction of the Glendo unit or any feature thereof, until a definite plan report thereon has been completed, reviewed by the States of Nebraska, Wyoming, and Colorado, and approved by Congress: Provided further, That no part of this or any other appropriation shall be available for the initiation of construction under the terms of reclamation law of any dam or reservoir or water supply, or any tunnel, canal or conduit for water, or water distribution system related to such dam or reservoir until the Secretary shall certify to the Congress that an adequate soil survey and land classification has been made and that the lands to be irrigated are susceptible to the production of agricultural crops by means of irrigation or that the successful irrigability of those lands and their susceptibility to sustained production of agricultural crops by means of irrigation has been demonstrated in practice: Provided further, That no part of this or prior appropriations shall be used for construction, nor for further commitments to construction of Moorhead Dam and Reservoir, Montana, or any feature thereof until a definite plan report thereon has been completed, reviewed by the States of Wyoming and Montana, and approved by the Congress. (Interior Department Appropriation Act, 1954.)

Appropriated 1954, $116,269,660 Estimate 1955, [a] $121,838,000

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The work consists of preparation of designs and specifications subsequent to initial allocation for construction, award and servicing of construction contracts, construction of authorized projects, operation and maintenance during construction of completed features of projects and rehabilitation of existing facilities.

The appropriation requested for this program amounts to $121,838,000. This represents an increase of $5,568,340 compared with the current fiscal year and a decrease of $55,959,991 with the preceding fiscal year. The increase over the current fiscal year is due principally to additional requirements for work initiated in 1954, and initiation of work on 3 projects and 1 unit in 1955.

1–34. Construction.—In 1955 construction activities will be underway on 27 projects and 15 units in the Missouri River Basin to functionally complete 4 projects and 2 units in the Missouri River Basin. Work will be commenced on the reconstruction of the auxiliary division of the Yuma project, the spillway enlargement of the Alamogordo Dam of the Carlsbad project, construction of unit A of the North Side Pumping Division of the Minidoka project, and reconstruction of facilities of the Middle Rio Grande project on which some emergency channelization and construction of drains for water conservation has been underway. Drainage and minor completion activities will also be carried on for 11 projects and 5 Missouri River Basin units which are functionally complete but which require a relatively minor amount of cleanup work. Three other such entities will be inactive during the year. Provision is made to compensate the Shoshone and Arapahoe Indian Tribes for land ceded to the United States in connection with the Riverton project. (Act of Aug. 15, 1953, Public Law 284.)

Bureau operations during 1955 will provide facilities for 297,800 additional acres of irrigated land and 241,500 kilowatts of new power-generating capacity. This program is to be financed by $121,838,000 of new construction appropriation and $4,088,511 from prior year funds. Of the new appropriation, 59 percent will be used to finance the work on 5 major projects and 2 units in the Missouri River Basin in the construction stage as shown in the table below.

The first of the following informational schedules shows by projects the allocations of the new appropriations for 1954 and the estimates for 1955 including the application in 1955 of the unobligated portion of the 1954 appropriation. The second table shows by projects the unobligated balances of the funds available at the end of 1953, together with their application in 1954 and 1955.]

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Provision is made for operation and maintenance of (a) the power-generating and transmission facilities of completed projects (except the Fort Peck transmission system financed under a revolving fund), and the irrigation and water-supply facilities on certain projects; (b) the lower Colorado River front and levee system; and (c) Boulder City, Nev. Provision is also made for soil and moisture conservation operations on public lands under jurisdiction of the Bureau.

The Bureau operates and maintains the power-generation and transmission facilities, and generally the storage dams and reservoirs, of completed projects. Where necessary, the irrigation works are also operated and maintained until the water users are able to undertake the responsibilities. The power facilities of 16 projects, and irrigation and municipal and industrial water supply facilities of 32 projects, and 10 units in the Missouri River Basin will be operated and maintained in fiscal year 1955. Energy sales and revenues from power operations are as follows:

Fiscal year	Kilowatt-hours of energy (millions)	Revenue
1955	26,800	58,000,000

Commercial power is sold to wholesale customers such as municipalities, Rural Electrification Administration cooperatives, private utilities, and other Government agencies.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

This provides for the overall administrative functions of the Bureau, consisting of determination of policy and direction of the Bureau's programs, and general supervision and review of operations.

1. (a) Departmental and Denver offices.—These offices establish policy, and generally direct, coordinate, and review the entire reclamation program.

(b) Regional offices.—The seven regional offices administer and supervise activities on a regionwide basis as distinguished from project supervision.

SPECIAL FUNDS

Sums herein referred to as being derived from the reclamation fund, the Colorado River dam fund, or the Colorado River development fund, are appropriated from the special funds in the Treasury created by the Act of June 17, 1902 (43 U. S. C. 391), the Act of December 21, 1928 (43 U. S. C. 617a), and the Act of July 19, 1940 (43 U. S. C. 618a), respectively. Such sums shall be transferred, upon request of the Secretary, to be merged with and expended under the heads herein specified; and the unexpended balances of sums transferred for expenditure under the heads "Operation and Maintenance" and "General Administrative Expenses" shall revert and be credited to the special fund from which derived.

ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

Appropriations to the Bureau of Reclamation shall be available for purchase of one aircraft; payment of claims for damage to or loss of property, personal injury, or death arising out of activities of the Bureau of Reclamation; payment, except as otherwise provided for, of compensation and expense of persons on the rolls of the Bureau of Reclamation appointed as authorized by law to represent the United States in the negotiation and administration of interstate compacts without reimbursement or return under the reclamation laws; rewards for information or evidence concerning violations of law involving property under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Reclamation; performance of the functions specified under the head "Operation and Maintenance Administration", Bureau of Reclamation, in the Interior Department Appropriation Act, 1945; preparation and dissemination of useful information including recordings, photographs, and photographic prints; and studies of recreational uses of reservoir areas, and investigation and recovery of archeological and paleontological remains in such areas in the same manner as provided for in the Act of August 21, 1935 (16 U. S. C. 461–467): Provided, That no part of any appropriation made herein shall be available pursuant to the Act of April 19, 1945 (43 U. S. C. 377), for expenses other than those incurred on behalf of specific reclamation projects except "General Administrative Expenses" and amounts provided for reconnaissance, basin surveys, and general engineering and research under the head "General Investigations".

Allotments to the Missouri River Basin project from the [appropriation] appropriations under the head "Construction and Rehabilitation" [shall be available additionally for said project for those functions of the Bureau of Reclamation provided for under the head "General Investigations" (but this authorization shall not preclude use of the appropriation under said head within that area), and for the continuation of investigations by agencies of the Department on a general plan for the development of the Missouri River Basin. Such allotments] and "General Investigations" may be expended through or in cooperation with State and other Federal agencies, and advances to such agencies are hereby authorized.

Sums appropriated herein which are expended in the performance of reimbursable functions of the Bureau of Reclamation shall be returnable to the extent and in the manner provided by law.

No part of any appropriation for the Bureau of Reclamation, contained in this Act or in any prior Act, which represents amounts earned under the terms of a contract but remaining unpaid, shall be obligated for any other purpose, regardless of when such amounts are to be paid: Provided, That the incurring of any obligation prohibited by this paragraph shall be deemed a violation of section 665 of title 31 of the United States Code.

No funds appropriated to the Bureau of Reclamation for operation and maintenance, except those derived from advances by water users, shall be used for the particular benefit of lands (a) within the boundaries of an irrigation district, (b) of any member of a water users' organization, or (c) of any individual, when such

The program of the Geological Survey is designed to provide basic and scientific data concerning the water, land, and mineral resources of the Nation, and to supervise the leasing of minerals on Federal and Indian lands. The Survey conducts topographic and geologic surveys and mapping, explores and appraises our mineral and water resources, classifies the public lands for mineral and water-power potential, and supervises drilling and mining operations on Federal and Indian lands.

1. Topographic surveys and mapping.—Topographic maps portray the natural and man-made features of the earth's surface. They are an essential tool to all operations which require detailed terrain information, such as (a) geologic investigations, (b) engineering development, and (c) the national defense. These maps are extensively used by Government agencies, industry, and the general public. The long-range objective is to obtain adequate and complete topographic map coverage of the United States, its Territories and possessions. The immediate program provides topographic maps of the areas in which mineral and water investigations or engineering development and construction projects are most imminent, and the areas which the Department of Defense has assigned high priority for mapping due to military and civil defense requirements. In 1955, standard and small scale maps for an estimated 85,000 square miles of the United States and Alaska will be compiled, compared with 85,000 in 1953 and 98,000 in 1954.

2. Geologic and mineral resource surveys and mapping.—Investigations are directed toward (a) providing an accurate appraisal of the Nation's mineral and mineral fuel resources, (b) scientific exploration for additional sources of essential minerals, and (c) developing basic data on surface and subsurface geologic conditions for use in the planning, construction, and development of engineering projects. The program is accomplished by systematic geologic mapping aided by special investigations in supporting sciences, such as geophysics, geochemistry, petrology, and paleon-tology. Significant contributions have been made through the development of new techniques to aid in the search for additional mineral resources. The 1955 program will emphasize completion of some current studies and the initiation of several new ones in areas which promise to add to our known resources of strategic and critical minerals. Geologic mapping is now progressing at the rate of 20,000 square miles of territory annually.

3. Water resources investigations.—Surface and underground water supplies are investigated to provide information essential in planning water-supply projects for military, industrial, and domestic expansion, as well as irrigation, hydroelectric power, navigation, flood control, highway and bridge design, and land-use projects. The program includes determinations of the flow, stage, and sediment discharge of rivers; reservoir contents; locations and safe yields of underground waters; the chemical quality and temperature of waters; and the availability of water supplies as related to present and future demands. The program in 1955 will be highlighted by (a) investigations in areas of actual or potential water shortage, (b) studies of the inland saline water resources, (c) interpretation and recompilation of past water records which will increase their usability, and (d) derivation of new principles in the complicated field of ground-water hydrology and hydraulics.

4. Soil and moisture conservation.—Basic data and advice concerning hydrologic and geologic problems are provided to other bureaus for the improvement and maintenance of the productive values of the 282 million acres of Federal land under the stewardship of the Department of the Interior. Funds for 1955 will finance surveys of the rates and sources of erosion and sedimentation, investigations into the basic causes of these destructive processes, and exploration for range water supplies.

5. Classification of lands.—Federally owned and controlled lands are classified as to their mineral and water-power values. This classification provides the basic foundation for the system of public-land administration prescribed by the numerous mineral leasing and land disposal laws. Owing to the unprecedented rate of development of the Nation's oil and gas resources, increased demands are being made upon the Survey for mineral classification services.

6. Supervision of mining and oil and gas leases.—Prospecting, development, and production of minerals on leased Federal and Indian lands are regulated and supervised. In the current year, some 120,000 leased properties, oil wells, and mines in 32 States are expected to produce oil, gas, and other minerals valued at $480 million and render royalty returns of about $44 million. The States where the minerals are produced receive 37½ percent of the royalties; the Reclamation Fund, 52½ percent; and 10 percent is retained in the Treasury. In 1955, it is anticipated that the number of leased properties, mines, and wells requiring supervision will approximate 130,000 and the production and royalty values are estimated to reach $525 million and $48 million, respectively. Under the impetus of new legislation, approved August 7, 1953, development of the Outer Continental Shelf is now under the purview of the Interior Department, and it is expected to increase materially in fiscal 1955. At present approximately 350 oil and gas leases producing about two million barrels of oil per year are being supervised.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Provision is made for conserving, evaluating, and developing mineral resources.

1. Fuels.—(a) Coal.—Scientific research and engineering investigations and tests are carried out on the chemical and physical properties of coal and its mining, preparation, combustion, carbonization, and gasification. Coal samples are analyzed; a fuel economy service is performed for Government agencies; coking coal reserves are estimated; efficiency of coal-mining methods is evaluated; methods for improving the mechanized mining of anthracite are studied; and economic and statistical studies are performed.

(b) Petroleum and natural gas.—Seven projects are carried on: (1) Engineering research on problems connected with the development and production of petroleum and natural gas; (2) scientific and technologic research on secondary recovery methods in producing petroleum; (3) studies of transportation and storage problems; (4) studies involving the chemistry and refining of petroleum and natural gas; (5) fundamental research to determine the thermodynamic properties of hydrocarbons; (6) statistical and economic studies of petroleum and natural gas; and (7) maintenance of buildings and research facilities.

(c) Synthetic liquid fuels.—Laboratory research is conducted and demonstration plants are operated for the production of synthetic liquid fuels from coal, oil shale, and agricultural and forest products. The primary objective is to conserve and increase the liquid fuel resources of the Nation by the direct hydrogenation of coal, by the production and hydrogenation of synthesis gas from coal, by mining and retorting oil shale and refining shale oil, and by the underground gasification of coal.

(d) Helium.—Scientific and technologic research is carried on in resources, production, storage, and utilization of helium.

2. Minerals and metals.—Investigations and research are conducted to improve mining technology, examine ore deposits, discover metallurgical processes to make better use of low-grade ores, develop substitutes for scarce commodities, and statistical and economic information are analyzed and disseminated.

3. Control of fires in inactive coal deposits.—Fires in inactive or abandoned deposits on public lands or private property are controlled or extinguished.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

This appropriation supports operations designed to reduce health and safety hazards in mines and mineral-industry plants.

1. Investigation of accidents and rescue work.—The Bureau encourages accident prevention through education and safety organizations, exhibits, and demonstrations; gives instruction in accident prevention and first-aid and mine-rescue methods; investigates explosions, fires, and other serious accidents in mines and mineral-industry plants; investigates means to safeguard the health of mine workmen; investigates and develops safety devices for the mineral industries; conducts research on the support and control of mine roof; tests equipment for use in mines and plants where explosive atmospheres may be encountered; and performs field and laboratory studies of ventilation of mines, methods of allaying mineral dusts, prevention of dust accumulations, effective use of rock dust to prevent widespread coal-dust explosions, and blasting practices.

2. Mine inspections and investigations.—The objectives for the fiscal year 1955 are to carry out the provisions of Public Law 552, Eighty-second Congress, which requires this Bureau (a) to inspect, at least once annually, every active coal mine regularly employing more than 14 men underground, and to take action to require compliance with the mandatory provisions and make recommendations to gain compliance with the voluntary provisions of the law, and (b) to inspect annually, or as necessary,

Coal-mine inspections	2,100	1,666	245	4,011

3. Explosives and explosions testing and research.—Research is conducted to discover causes of explosions in coal mines and to improve methods of preventing explosions. Tests are conducted on explosives and blasting devices to determine their permissibility for use in coal mines or their suitability for use in other mining operations and the conditions under which they can be used safely.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

1. Management of park and other areas.—The 180 park and other areas comprise about 24 million acres located in 38 States, the District of Columbia, Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands. Actual and estimated visitors and revenue receipts are as follows:

	1952 actual	1953 actual	1954 estimate	1955 estimate
Visitors	42,299,836	45,800,000	47,500,000	50,000,000
Receipts	$3,568,094	$4,190,643	$4,200,000	$4,600,000

2. Forestry and fire control.—Forests, brushland, or grassland on over 11 million acres are protected from fire, destructive insects, diseases, and other preventable damage.

3. Soil and moisture conservation.—The 1955 program will permit corrective measures on 16 of 70 selected problem areas.

4. Park and recreation programs.—Studies are made of the park, parkway, and recreational potentialities of the United States and its Territories, frequently in cooperation with Federal, State, and local agencies; historic remains and archeological sites threatened with destruction are surveyed and important remains salvaged; and investigations are made to determine whether agencies receiving surplus Federal real property with a recreational potential are utilizing those properties in conformity with terms of the transfer agreements.

5. Concessions management.—There are 162 major concessionaires operating in parks and other areas. Contracts are negotiated, or permits issued; rates are established; services to be rendered are determined; and records are audited.

2. Roads and trails.—Exclusive of parkways, about 4,009 miles of roads need reconstruction or completion of construction, and 634 miles of additional roads and 1,980 miles of trails are needed to complete the road and trail systems. The 1955 program contemplates construction of 12.3 miles of roads and 2 miles of trails, and reconstructing, relocating, improving, and surfacing of 105.4 miles of roads.

3. Buildings, utilities, and other facilities.—The 1955 program is designed principally to meet increased public use needs.

4. Acquisition of lands and water rights.—Approximately 460,000 acres of privately owned lands standing in the way of logical developments and public use are located within the areas administered. Rights to water must be obtained, frequently by purchase, in many of the areas for use of visitors and employees, and for fire protection.

FISH AND WILDLIFE SERVICE

INTRODUCTORY STATEMENT

The Service conducts research, management, and demonstration programs to conserve and restore the fish and wildlife resources for both recreational and economical use.

MANAGEMENT OF RESOURCES

Management of Resources, Fish and Wildlife Service

For expenses necessary for conservation, management, protection, and utilization of fish and wildlife resources, and for the performance of other authorized functions related to such resources; operation of the industrial properties within the Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge (61 Stat. 770); maintenance of the herd of long-horned cattle on the Wichita Mountains Wildlife Refuge; purchase or rent of land, and functions related to wildlife management in California (16 U. S. PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

1. Administration of fish and game laws.—These laws apply to the fisheries and game of Alaska, the protection of migratory birds and certain game mammals, the interstate transportation of fish, and the enforcement of international agreements.

2. Propagation and distribution of food fishes.—Ninety-two fish-cultural stations are currently operated to produce fish and eggs for the propagation of commercial food and game fishes. Fish screens and other protective devices are maintained on Federal areas in the West. Management programs are developed for the fishing waters on public lands in cooperation with other Federal agencies. In the fiscal year 1955 it is proposed to discontinue operations at 5 fish hatcheries in 5 different States and to discontinue the mussel operations with headquarters at Carterville, Ill.

3. Mammal and bird reservations.—Two hundred and seventy-five refuges, consisting of more than 18 million acres, are operated for the conservation of migratory waterfowl and for the preservation and propagation of rare birds and mammals. In the fiscal year 1955 a greater portion of this activity will be financed from permanent funds.

4. River basin studies.—To insure that adequate measures are taken for the conservation and development of fish and wildlife, studies are made of proposed Federal power, navigation, irrigation and drainage projects.

5. Control of predatory animals and injurious rodents.—Such control is exercised on public lands. Technical information and correlation and supervision of cooperative programs are provided to protect livestock, game, poultry, forage, crops, forests, structures, foods, and feeds from destruction by harmful animals.

6. Soil and moisture conservation.—Nearly 5.5 million acres in 63 refuges within the continental United States are critically eroded or severely depleted. A long-range program for developing a conservation plan for each of these refuges has been initiated. Work is now being done on 24 refuges.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

1. Research on fish and fisheries.—Research is conducted (a) to learn more about variations in abundance of important food fishes and other aquatic animals; (b) to discover declining species and better measures for conserving, developing, and managing the fishery resources; and (c) to improve the cultivation of aquatic animals, including shellfish.

2. Exploration, development, and utilization of fishery resources.—Services of benefit to the commercial fishing industry include: (a) exploring for fish and improving fishing gear and methods; (b) developing and demonstrating more efficient means of handling, processing, storing, and marketing fishery products; (c) compiling and publishing commercial fishery statistics, including operation of seven market news offices; and (d) collecting and disseminating economic data on the industry, including business trends and foreign trade.

3. Research on birds and mammals.—Research is carried on in migratory wildlife and wildlife management and conservation practices. In addition, wildlife research units are maintained in cooperation with States and universities to give technical training in wildlife management, carry on research, and demonstrate improved management practices.

4. Research on fish migration over dams.—Investigations are conducted to acquire knowledge of the factors influencing the direction and rate of movement of anadromous fish over dams, so that these factors may be known in designing future dams.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands is administered under Executive Order 10265, as amended, in accordance with a trusteeship agreement between the United States and the United Nations approved by the President under authority granted by the Congress (61 Stat. 397). The Department of the Interior has proposed organic legislation to the Congress (H. R. 5381). Under the trusteeship agreement the United States exercises full administrative, judicial, and legislative authority over the territory and has undertaken obligations to promote the educational, economic, and political advancement of the people. The territory under the jurisdiction of the Department of the Interior extends over 3,000,000 square miles of ocean, and consists of 83 island units with a land area of 564 square miles. The population of about 50,000 is distributed among the five districts and the island of Rota as follows: Koror, 7,320; Yap, 4,870; Truk, 15,850; Ponape, 11,200; Marshalls, 11,100; Rota, 750. The Saipan District, excluding Rota, was transferred to the Navy pursuant to Executive Orders 10408 and 10470 of November 10, 1952 and July 17, 1953, respectively. The estimates for 1955 reflect this adjustment of administrative responsibilities.

1. High Commissioner's office.—Provision is made for the immediate office of the High Commissioner and his deputy.

2. Judiciary.—Provision is made for the High Court of the Trust Territory, the Court of Appeals, and the lesser courts of the territory.

3. Grants.—Grants are required in addition to local revenues for health, education, and other services as well as for the cost of maintaining and providing the necessary facilities of the government of the territory. The costs of government are distributed as follows:

(a) Health, education, and other services.—The government of the territory operates 5 hospitals with a total of 271 beds. There are 133 public elementary and 5 intermediate schools as well as a small central high school at Truk. Total public school enrollment for 1953 was approximately 6,000. The government is assisting in the development of island resources and encourages the people in their efforts in the direction of self-government and also provides for the public safety and other customary services.

(b) Operation and maintenance.—The physical plant of the government, such as power plants, docks, warehouses, quarters, trucks, and other equipment, requires abnormally costly maintenance which increases annually, because of their dilapidated condition resulting from long use in the tropical climate.

(c) Transportation services.—At present, two 4,800-ton, four 250-ton diesel-powered cargo vessels, two small sailing schooners, and four PBY-type airplanes are operated under contract to provide for the transportation of supplies, copra exports, trade goods, and passengers throughout the territory. By 1955, it is planned, as an economy measure, to substitute more efficient SA–16 aircraft for the PBY's, and to continue the substitution of schooners for the remaining 250-ton cargo vessels.

(d) Construction.—It is essential that the rapidly deteriorating temporary, advanced-base type plant installed by the Navy in the territory during and immediately following World War II be replaced as soon as possible. The 1955 estimate is the first step in a proposed 5-year program for the rehabilitation or construction of schools, hospitals, power plants, refrigeration plants, family quarters, docks, marine and other facilities.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The highway system of Alaska is being extended and constantly improved to meet military requirements and the increasing civilian needs.

1. Preparation of plans.—Surveys are conducted and designs prepared for new road and bridge construction projects and for the improvement of existing roads and structures in advance of congressional authorization.

2. Construction in progress.—The 1955 program consists of the following projects: (a) continuation of construction and improvement of the Taylor Highway which is now 85 percent complete; (b) asphalt surfacing of section G of the Richardson Highway; (c) continuation of asphalt surfacing of the Alaska Highway; (d) continuation of stage construction of the Denali Highway connecting McKinley National Park with the Richardson Highway; (e) further extension of access roads to new homestead and industrial areas; and (f) completion of construction of the Anchorage-Elmendorf alternate route.

3. Reconstruction.—Improvements will be continued on existing roads and bridges to raise them to accepted standards in order to meet conditions imposed by increasing traffic and to eliminate hazardous conditions.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

1. Construction of projects.—Congress in 1944 authorized a public works program to encourage the economic development of the Virgin Islands and in the act specified the order or priority of projects. At the end of fiscal 1954, the program's ninth year commitments totaling approximately $10,641,000 will have been made for 17 projects, with 15 of them completed. The status of the program as of the end of 1955 is indicated below:

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Under the Federal Aid in Fish Restoration Act of 1950 (64 Stat. 430), assistance is given the States, Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands by appropriation of funds equal to the revenue of the 10-percent excise tax on fishing rods, creels, reels, and artificial lures, baits, and flies.

1. Federal aid payments to States for fish restoration and management projects.—These payments also cover research into fish culture and management; formulation of restocking plans; and selection, acquisition, restoration, and improvement of areas adaptable as hatching, feeding, resting, or breeding places.

2. Administration of Federal aid to States for fish restoration and management.—State plans are examined, and audits of State expenditures and inspections of projects are made.

3. Research program.—Funds apportioned but not expended by the States within 2 fiscal years are used by the Service for research on fish of material value for sport and recreation.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Seventy-five percent of the net proceeds from the sale of wildlife-refuge products are appropriated for refuge maintenance and enforcement activities, the remainder being paid to the counties in which the refuges are located (16 U. S. C. 715s).

1. Refuge maintenance from refuge receipts.—This includes construction and improvement of buildings, roads, and other facilities of national wildlife refuges.

2. Enforcement activities from refuge receipts.—These activities deal with the enforcement of the Migratory Bird Treaty Act of 1918, as amended (16 U. S. C. 703–711).

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

This fund, established in 1936, is used to assist Indians in acquiring livestock, farm, and other equipment and in establishing tribal enterprises (25 U. S. C. 470, 471, 631). This fund and miscellaneous tribal funds provide the only source of loans for the great majority of Indians who cannot borrow from private sources because of their low economic status and lack of bankable security. The principal of the fund consists of appropriations from the United States Treasury and cattle settlements. Cattle settlements are payments made by the Indians for breeding stock furnished by the Government generally prior to establishment of this fund. As of June 30, 1954, the principal will consist of $13,799,600 in appropriations and an estimated $1,166,329 in cattle settlements for a total of $14,865,929.

Loans made in fiscal year 1953 totaled $1,075,754. It is expected that $1,000,000 will be loaned in 1954 and $1,500,000 in 1955. Funds provided by operations totaled $2,745,398 in 1953, and are estimated at $975,000 in 1955. Operations in 1955 will thus result in budgetary expenditures of $525,000.

The fund accumulated a deficit in the early years of operation when interest income was small. This deficit was $933,366 as of June 30, 1953, and is expected to be reduced to $646,866 by June 30, 1955.

BUREAU OF RECLAMATION

Continuing Fund for Emergency Expenses, Fort Peck Project, Montana

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

This fund is used to defray the operating expenses of the generation and transmission of power from Fort Peck project, Corps of Engineers, and to defray emergency expenses to insure continuous operation (16 U. S. C. 833). It receives revenues from the sale of electric energy. Receipts in excess of current operating needs may be retained so as to maintain a continuing emergency fund of $500,000. The balance is paid into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts to cover amortization and interest on the cost of the dam, reservoir, and powerplant allocated to power and of transmission. Such payments totaled $1,169,630 in 1953 and are estimated at $1,232,500 in 1954 and $1,368,800 in 1955.

The operation of the Fort Peck project power and transmission facilities are financed by this fund and capital outlays for transmission by the appropriation "Construction and rehabilitation, Bureau of Reclamation." Capital outlays for the dam, reservoir, and power plant are financed by Corps of Engineers appropriations. The following statements consolidate the financing from the "Continuing fund for emergency expenses, Fort Peck project, Montana" and "Construction and rehabilitation, Bureau of Reclamation."

BUSINESS-TYPE STATEMENTS

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

This fund is used for the production of helium, primarily for the Army, Navy, Air Force, and the Atomic Energy Commission, who reimburse the fund for products received. Sales are also made to non-Federal consumers for medical, scientific, and commercial use (50 U. S. C. 164). During 1953, $250,000 in earnings was repaid to Treasury. As of June 30, 1953, the net capital consisted of appropriations of $10,850,303 ($17,971,969 appropriated less $7,121,666 in write-offs and disposals) plus $40,142 in donated capital. It is expected that the deficit of $94,479 at June 30, 1953, will be eliminated, and that net retained earnings by June 30, 1955, will amount to $581,158.

BUSINESS-TYPE STATEMENTS

PURPOSE AND FINANCIAL ORGANIZATION

This revolving fund is derived from the earnings of the railroad and is used for operating expenses and maintenance charges as well as improvements and additions (48 U. S. C. 301–308).

The Government's investment in the railroad as of July 1, 1953, was $128,145,927 of which $19,312,408 was donations from other agencies. The investment consists of $112,811,759 for fixed assets and other assets including working capital, amounting to $15,334,168.

ANALYSIS OF BUDGET PROGRAMS

The operations of the railroad are set out in four groups:

1. Rail line operation.—This consists in the operation of the railroad in handling of freight and passenger traffic. Funds applied to expenses for 1955 are estimated to be $17,647,070, the same as for 1954. Based on present estimates, some construction traffic will decrease while coal shipments will increase.

Funds applied to acquisition of assets during 1955 are mainly for the reconstruction of the Seward-Portage line and construction of Seward dock, estimated at $13,172,960.

Appropriations are requested in 1955 for $2,900,000 to continue with construction of Seward dock started in 1954 and for reconstruction of the Seward-Portage line as follows:

Roadway and track	$6,240,000
Bridges, trestles, culverts, and tunnels	1,828,000
Roadway buildings	156,000
Shops and enginehouse facilities	712,000
Seward yard facilities	48,000
Communications	110,000

2. River boat operation.—This consists of handling freight traffic on the Tanana and Yukon Rivers by river boats and barge service. Funds applied to expenses for 1955 are estimated to be $299,700 and the same for 1954. Traffic on the rivers is expected to increase due to expanded activities.

3. Hotels and mess operation.—These include the hotels, messhouses and work crews' messes. Funds applied to expenses for 1955 are estimated to be $922,900 and $926,878 for 1954.

4. Commissary operation.—Hotel and mess operations are furnished supplies, and also section gangs and work crews where no other source is available. Funds applied to expenses for 1955 are estimated to be $1,012,000 and $1,004,277 for 1954.

FINANCING OPERATIONS

An appropriation of $11,994,000 is requested for 1955 for capital programs as indicated above under "Rail line operations."

OPERATING RESULTS AND RETAINED EARNINGS

A net operating loss of $42,046 occurred in 1953. A net operating income of $39,070 is estimated for 1954 and the same for 1955. The total deficit of $14,077,263 as of June 30, 1953, will decrease to $13,999,123 as of June 30, 1955.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The Puerto Rico Reconstruction Administration, established in 1935 to increase employment by useful projects, is financed from the Puerto Rico revolving fund, established by Congress in 1936, and derives its income largely from rentals, collections on loans and mortgages, and lease and purchase contracts (49 Stat. 1135).

Congress has directed the Secretary of the Interior to liquidate the Puerto Rico Reconstruction Administration by February 15, 1955 (Public Law 276). The 1955 program reflects liquidation costs as well as ordinary operating costs for approximately 8 months for the following activities:

1. Housing management.—This covers 4 urban developments with a total of 833 family units, 6,752 rural houses, and 3,342 small rural parcels without houses. Liquidation of these properties is moving forward, but complete liquidation cannot be accomplished by the end of the 1954 fiscal year.

2. Operation and maintenance, Castañer farm.—This project was established to promote a reconstruction program of the coffee industry by demonstrating that a large coffee plantation can be made self-sustaining by proper land utilization, soil conservation, and crop diversification. It is expected that this property will be disposed of by December 31, 1954.

3. Servicing of cooperatives.—Out of 8 cooperatives financed by Puerto Rico Reconstruction Administration 5 will have been liquidated by the end of fiscal year 1954 and remaining 3 will be liquidated during fiscal year 1955.

4. Repairs and replacements to buildings.

5. Dismantling and removal of office buildings.

6. Administration.

PURPOSE AND FINANCIAL ORGANIZATION

The Corporation was created by the act of June 30, 1949 (63 Stat. 350), to promote the economic development of the Virgin Islands. Appropriations not to exceed $9,000,000 were authorized to be made to a revolving fund in the Treasury, based upon annual budgets submitted by the Corporation. The appropriation of additional funds as grants to finance specific programs not primarily of a revenue-producing character and to reimburse the Corporation for operating losses is also authorized.

ANALYSIS OF BUDGET PROGRAMS

1. Loan program.—Loans are made (a) to aid farmers in agricultural diversification and to improve livestock production; (b) to aid business enterprises with any commercial or industrial undertaking or activity in the Virgin Islands when such loans are not available from other Federal or private sources. No appropriation is required for fiscal year 1955.

2. Sales and rentals program.—The main activity of the Corporation is the growing of sugarcane and the production and sale of sugar, including assistance to farmers in the form of rental of agricultural equipment and sale of seed, fertilizer, and other materials used in the cultivation of sugarcane. No appropriation is required for fiscal year 1955.

3. Power program.—No appropriation is required for 1955 fiscal year since sufficient generating and distribution facilities will be available. Emphasis during this period will be placed on increased consumption.

4. Non-revenue-producing activities.—These include continuation of water and soil conservation practices, promotion and development of tourism, and clearing land of underbrush for planting with mahogany and other tropical hardwoods.

5. Administrative expenses.—It is proposed that for 1955 the Corporation operate under a limitation for administrative expenses of $130,000.

FINANCING OPERATIONS

During 1953 fiscal year an appropriation of $111,000 was received covering operating losses for that period. The actual losses amounted to $390,924 for 1953 fiscal year. An appropriation of $522,000 to cover the remaining balance of 1953 deficit and estimated 1955 losses is requested. The amount of $930,000 was appropriated in 1954 for 1952 and 1954 operating losses.

An appropriation of $150,000 was received in 1954 to finance non-revenue-producing activities, and $160,000 is requested in 1955.

The revenue-producing operations of the Corporation are financed from the revolving fund, which is authorized at not to exceed $9,000,000. Through 1954 there has been appropriated to the revolving fund $6,388,000, of which $1,515,000 was for 1953 and $1,028,000 for 1954. No appropriation is requested in 1955 for the sales and rentals program, which mainly consists of the production and sales of sugar and assistance to farmers.

OPERATING RESULTS AND RETAINED EARNINGS

The Corporation operated at a net loss of $390,924 for 1953, and the losses for 1954 and 1955 are estimated at $400,000 and $242,076, respectively. The loss for 1953 was attributable mainly to (1) a lower average yield than was expected for the season; (2) an increase in the basic wage minimum of 33⅓ percent; and (3) a labor shortage resulting in 600 acres remaining unharvested. The estimated total deficit of $160,452 will not be covered by an appropriation request at this time.

[REDUCTIONS IN APPROPRIATIONS]

[Amounts available to the Department of the Interior from appropriations are hereby reduced in the sums hereinafter set forth, such sums to be carried to the surplus fund and covered into the Treasury immediately upon the approval of this Act:]

[OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY]

[BUREAU OF RECLAMATION]

GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 101. Notwithstanding any provision of law to the contrary, aliens may be employed during the current fiscal year in the field service of the Department for periods of not more than thirty days in cases of emergency caused by fire, flood, storm, act of God, or sabotage.

SEC. 102. Appropriations in this Act available for travel expenses shall be available, for expenses of attendance of officers and employees at meetings or conventions of members of societies or associations concerned with the work of the bureau or office for which the appropriation concerned is made.

SEC. 103. Appropriations made in this Act shall be available for expenditure or transfer (within each bureau or office), with the approval of the Secretary, for the emergency reconstruction, replacement or repair of buildings, utilities, or other facilities or equipment damaged or destroyed by fire, flood, storm, or other unavoidable causes: Provided, That no funds shall be made available under this authority until funds specifically made available to the Department of the Interior for emergencies shall have been exhausted.

SEC. 104. The Secretary may authorize the expenditure or transfer (within each bureau or office) of any appropriation in this Act, in addition to the amounts included in the budget programs of the several agencies, for the suppression or emergency prevention of forest or range fires on or threatening lands under jurisdiction of the Department of the Interior: Provided, That appropriations made in this Act for fire suppression purposes shall be available for the payment of obligations incurred during the preceding fiscal year.

SEC. 105. Appropriations made in this Act shall be available for operation of warehouses, garages, shops, and similar facilities, wherever consolidation of activities will contribute to efficiency or economy, and said appropriations shall be reimbursed for services rendered to any other activity in the same manner as authorized by the Act of June 30, 1932 (31 U. S. C. 686): Provided, That reimbursements for cost of supplies, materials and equipment, and for services rendered may be credited to the appropriation current at the time such reimbursements are received.

SEC. 106. Appropriations made in this Act shall be available for services as authorized by section 15 of the Act of August 2, 1946 (5 U. S. C. 55a), when authorized by the Secretary, at rates not to exceed $100 per diem for individuals, and in total amount not to exceed $250,000; maintenance and operation of aircraft; hire of passenger motor vehicles; purchase of reprints; examination of estimates of appropriations in the field; payment for telephone service in private residences in the field, when authorized under regulations approved by the Secretary; and the payment of dues, when authorized by the Secretary, for library membership in societies or associations which issue publications to members only or at a price to members lower than to subscribers who are not members.

SEC. 107. Funds appropriated in this title shall be available for the purchase of not to exceed [fifty] eight hundred passenger motor vehicles (including one at not to exceed $2,750) for replacement only; and the Secretary is authorized to make such transfers of motor vehicles, between bureaus and offices, without transfer of funds, as may be required in carrying out the operations of the Department.

SEC. 108. (a) Not to exceed $250,000 of the funds appropriated in this title shall be available to pay the compensation of all persons the budget estimates for personal services heretofore submitted to the Congress for the fiscal year [1954] 1955 contemplated would be employed by such department, agency, or corporation during such fiscal year in the performance of—

(1) function performed by a person designated as an information specialist, information and editorial specialist, publications and information coordinator, press relations officer or counsel, photographer, radio expert, television expert, motion picture expert, or publicity expert, or designated by any similar title, or

(2) functions performed by persons who assist persons performing the functions described in (1) in drafting, preparing, editing, typing, duplicating or disseminating public information, publications or releases, radio or television scripts, magazine articles, photographs, motion picture and similar material, shall be available to pay the compensation of persons performing the functions described in (1) or (2).

(b) This section shall not apply to the preparation for publication of reports and maps resulting from authorized scientific and engineering investigations and surveys, to photography incident to the compilation and reproduction of maps and reports, or publications of the National Park Service, or to photocopying of permanent records for preservation.

SEC. 401. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act, or of the funds available for expenditure by any corporation included in this Act, shall be used to pay the salary or wages of any person who engages in a strike against the Government of the United States or who is a member of an organization of Government employees that asserts the right to strike against the Government of the United States, or who advocates, or is a member of an organization that advocates, the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence: Provided, That for the purposes hereof an affidavit shall be considered prima facie evidence that the person making the affidavit has not contrary to the provisions of this section engaged in a strike against the Government of the United States, is not a member of an organization of Government employees that asserts the right to strike against the Government of the United States, or that such person does not advocate, and is not a member of an organization that advocates, the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence: Provided further, That any person who engages in a strike against the Government of the United States or who is a member of an organization of Government employees that asserts the right to strike against the Government of the United States, or who advocates, or who is a member of an organization that advocates, the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence, and accepts employment the salary or wages for which are paid from any appropriation or fund contained in this Act shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both: Provided further, That the above penalty clause shall be in addition to, and not in substitution for, any other provisions of existing law: Provided further, That in cases of emergency, caused by fire, flood, storm, act of God, or sabotage, persons may be employed for periods of not more than thirty days and be paid salaries and wages without the necessity of inquiring into their membership in any organization. (Interior Department Appropriation Act, 1954.)

PROPOSED FOR LATER TRANSMISSION

Construction, Bonneville Power Administration (under existing legislation, 1954).—A supplemental appropriation of $3,200,000 for 1954 will be required for additional transmission facilities necessary to serve the Harvey Machine Co.'s new aluminum reduction plant to be constructed in the vicinity of The Dalles, Oreg.

ANALYSIS OF EXPENDITURES

	1953 actual	1954 estimate	1955 estimate
Proposed supplemental appropriation		$3,200,000
Unliquidated obligations, start of year			$2,700,000
Unliquidated obligations, end of year		2,700,000	200,000
Expenditures are distributed as follows:
Out of current authorizations		500,000
Out of prior authorizations			2,500,000

Construction and rehabilitation, Bureau of Reclamation (under proposed legislation 1955).—It is proposed to initiate construction of the Washita project, Oklahoma, and the Santa Maria project, California, in fiscal year 1955, when authorized. The Washita project is needed to store water for municipal use and possible future irrigation development and for flood protection. The Santa Maria project is required for water conservation and flood control in the Santa Maria River Basin. An amount of $500,000 is included in the budget as an estimated 1955 supplemental appropriation for these projects. Also included is an amount of $5,000,000 to provide for Federal cooperation with States, local governments, or private groups in their water-resource developments. This will encourage these non-Federal organizations to undertake such works by providing for Federal financial participation which would be determined by the benefits accruing to the Nation from such works.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

These activities are those which are carried on by the Department's law offices, except the Antitrust Division, for which a separate appropriation is made. A decrease of $670,000 is proposed for 1955.

1. Conduct of Supreme Court proceedings and coordination of appellate matters.—This consists of supervising and controlling all appellate matters and representing the Government before the Supreme Court.

2. General tax matters.—Cases arising under the internal-revenue laws and other tax statutes are prosecuted or defended.

3. Criminal matters.—These cover all actions in criminal law except tax and antitrust matters.

4. Claims, customs, and general civil matters.—These cover the prosecution or defense of civil suits and claims of the Government except tax, land, and alien property matters.

5. Land matters.—These consist of all civil suits and matters relating to title, possession, and use of Federal lands and natural resources, and representation of the United States in all civil litigation pertaining to Indians and Indian affairs.

6. Legal opinions.—Opinions are prepared for the President and executive agencies, and proposed Executive orders and proclamations of the President are reviewed with respect to form and legality.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The Antitrust Division enforces the Antitrust and thirty other kindred acts. The Division receives complaints and, in cooperation with the Federal Bureau of Investigation, conducts investigations. Where appropriate, suits are filed to break up monopolies and restraint of interstate and foreign trade. Consent judgments relative to the suits are negotiated, reviewed, interpreted, and enforced by the Division. Similarly, investigations are also conducted on proposed mergers and interlocking directorships.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The Government is represented in each of the 94 judicial districts by a United States attorney and a United States marshal. The United States attorney is responsible for the Government's legal interests in his district. The marshal has custody of all Federal offenders until released by the courts or confined in prison. He also acts as agent of the court in the service of process.

Workload in both these offices has shown a steady increase over the past few years and there is no indication that this trend will be reversed.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The Federal Bureau of Investigation, as the investigative arm of the Department of Justice, obtains evidence for use in civil litigation and prosecution of violations of Federal law. By statute and Executive Order it is charged with primary responsibility for the Nation's internal security. As a service agency, the Federal Bureau of Investigation assists all law enforcement agencies in identification and technical matters.

The $78,282,000 appropriation requested for the fiscal year 1955 represents an increase of $1,282,000 compared with 1954. Major programs are identified with the following types of activities:

1. Security and criminal investigations.—Auxiliary to the discharge of its investigative responsibilities, the Bureau coordinates and supervises broad investigative programs, both in the general criminal and subversive fields. Interchange of information is carried on, particularly in operations affecting internal security. During the fiscal year 1953, 676,232 investigative matters were referred to the Bureau.

2. Identification by fingerprints.—The Federal Bureau of Investigation Identification Division provides a national repository of identification data based on fingerprint records. Criminal records, including fingerprints, are acquired, classified, preserved, and exchanged with other duly authorized law enforcement agencies. During fiscal year 1953 there were added 3,513,375 fingerprint records bringing the total on file to 127,977,547 as of June 30, 1953. The 1955 budget includes necessary amounts for servicing this collection and processing the expected acquisitions.

3. Operation of criminal and scientific laboratory.—The services of the laboratory are made available without charge to all regularly established police departments. Examinations conducted during the fiscal year 1953 totaled 121,064, of which approximately 19 percent were performed for other law enforcement agencies. In 1955, an increase of 9 percent over 1953 is anticipated.

4. Training schools and inspectional services.—The Bureau conducts instructional courses for its personnel and that of other law enforcement agencies. The instruction embodies a comprehensive program designed to improve all aspects of law enforcement activities, including management, administration, efficiency, and investigative techniques.

5. General administration.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The Service administers and enforces the laws relating to immigration, naturalization, and registration of aliens.

The proposed decrease of $3,250,000 is based upon (1) reducing authorized levels of employment by 8.6 percent, and (2) restricting costs of custody and expulsion of aliens to about 66 percent of the 1954 appropriation level.

1. Inspection for admission into the United States.—Control is maintained at border points, seaports, and airports over the entry of persons into the United States.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

1. Custody, care, and treatment of prisoners in Federal institutions.—The program for 1955 contemplates an average inmate population of 18,700, an increase of 900 over the number appropriated for in 1954. The increase in funds required is due to the larger workload and to bring the appropriated funds up to the level of actual costs in 1953. Funds required under this activity, exclusive of salaries, are in direct relation to the average inmate population and are based on the cost per inmate per day of 73.5 cents as experienced in 1953.

2. Maintenance and operation of institutions.—There are 25 regular institutions operated throughout the United States (6 penitentiaries, 3 reformatories, 1 institution for women, 1 medical center, 3 juvenile institutions, 7 correctional institutions, 1 jail, and 3 camps). In addition, 1 camp is being operated in standby status under the provisions of the Internal Security Act. The present normal capacity for the 25 institutions is 17,959. Deferred maintenance needs and increased costs are reflected in the estimates.

3. Support of United States prisoners in Alaska.—This covers maintenance and operation of Federal jails and support of prisoners in non-Federal jails in Alaska.

4. Medical services (allocation to Public Health Service).—Personnel detailed from the Public Health Service furnish medical care to prisoners.

5. General administration.

Purpose and Organization

The corporation is authorized to establish and operate industries in the penal and correctional institutions of the United States to give inmates employment and opportunities to learn a trade or occupation. The products and services of these industries are sold exclusively to agencies of the Federal Government.

The corporation started operations January 1, 1935, with net assets of $4.2 million taken over from the Industries Division of the Bureau of Prisons (18 U. S. C. 4121–4128). Earnings from operations have permitted payments of dividends of $24.5 million into the United States Treasury, and have increased net assets to $18.7 million as of June 30, 1953.

Analysis of Budget Programs

Twenty-eight different industries are carried on in 46 shops at 19 locations. Full-time employment is expected to be furnished to 3,753 inmates in 1955 and 3,743 in 1954, as compared with actual employment of 3,681 in 1953. Vocational training, which is conducted in conjunction with industrial operations, was given to 9,573 inmates during fiscal year 1953. This number is expected to increase to 9,800 in 1954 and to 11,000 in 1955.

Agriculture	49	1,024	548
Industry (on the job)	89	1,818	926
Occupational (on the job)	244	2,887	1,539
Trade	60	1,216	613
Special	71	2,628	1,410
Total	513	9,573	5,036

In order to accomplish the program under the Youth Corrections Act, at least two institutions will be designated as youth centers. To provide such a program at the centers, it is estimated that an additional $35,000 will be necessary for the employment of trade and shop instructors and for the necessary textbooks, instructional materials, and supplies.

Meritorious financial awards were made to 4,170 inmates during fiscal year 1953 and will be paid to approximately 4,680 inmates in 1954 and 1955. The cost of these awards was $177,609 in fiscal year 1953 and is expected to be $200,000 in each of the years 1954 and 1955.

Administrative expense exclusive of depreciation was $323,877 in fiscal year 1953, is limited to $377,000 in 1954; and has been included in the 1955 budget program for $377,000. Vocational expense exclusive of depreciation was $421,802 in fiscal year 1953; is limited to $438,000 in 1954, and is included in the 1955 budget program for $473,000.

With respect to capital expenditures, the 1955 budget program estimates $545,000 for buildings and improvements and $230,000 for machinery and equipment (see schedules A–1, A–2, and 85C).

Financing Operations

Profit from operations for 1953 resulted in a minus budgetary expenditure of $2,932,629, while it is expected that receipts will exceed expenditures by $2,450,634 for 1954 and $2,123,500 for 1955. Dividends of $4,100,000 were paid to the United States Treasury during 1953 and it is believed that $2,600,000 and $2,150,000 will be paid during 1954 and 1955, which will make total payments to the United States Treasury of $29,250,000 since the Corporation was organized.

Operating Results and Retained Earnings

Income.—Net income of $2,923,780 was realized during 1953 from sales of $21,472,563. It is expected that shoe factory production will be back to normal during 1954 which accounts for increased sales of $22,500,000 with a net profit of $2,816,000. Sales for budget year 1955 are expected to be $22,000,000 with net profit of $2,500,000.

Expenses.—Cost of sales, excluding depreciation, in 1953 amounted to $17,078,712, which is a decrease of $5,547,025 from 1952; however, the percentage of cost of sales to sales increased from 77.6 percent to 79.2 but is less than the 79.8 in 1951. Cost of sales, excluding depreciation, is estimated at $18,136,500 and $17,890,500 for years 1954 and 1955.

Retained earnings.—As of June 30, 1953, the corporation's cumulative earnings amounted to $38,261,734 from which amount dividends totaling $24,500,000 have been paid into the Treasury of the United States and the balance of $13,761,734 has been reinvested in the business in the form of working capital, plant, and equipment. It is expected that retained earnings will increase to $14,327,734 by June 30, 1955.

GENERAL PROVISIONS—DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

SEC. 202. [Not to exceed $1,000,000 in the aggregate from the appropriations made in this title for general administration, general legal activities and United States Attorneys and Marshals shall be available for increases in the compensation of United States Attorneys, Assistant United States Attorneys, special attorneys and special assistants to the Attorney General and to United States Attorneys without regard to the Classification Act of 1949 as amended: Provided, That in no event shall the annual salary of any United States Attorney be less than $10,000 or more than $15,000 and in no event shall the annual salary of any Assistant United States Attorney or any special attorney or special assistant be less than $6,000, if the official has been admitted to the practice of law for 3 years, or more than $12,000: Provided further, That the maximum of $12,000 shall only apply to the Chief Assistant United States Attorney in each office: Provided further, That reports be submitted to the Congress on the 1st of July and January showing the names of the persons employed under the foregoing limitation, the annual rate of compensation or amount of any fee paid to each, together with a description of their duties] The minimum annual salary of any United States Attorney, any Assistant United States Attorney, or any special attorney or special assistant, as set forth in section 202 of the Department of Justice Appropriation Act, 1954, shall not apply to any such official after June 30, 1954.

SEC. 203. None of the funds appropriated by this title may be used to pay the compensation of any person hereafter employed as an attorney (except foreign counsel employed in special cases) unless such person shall be duly licensed and authorized to practice as an attorney under the laws of a State, Territory, or the District of Columbia.

SEC. 204. Sixty per centum of the expenditures for the offices of the United States attorney and the United States marshal for the District of Columbia from all appropriations in this title shall be reimbursed to the United States from any funds in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the District of Columbia.

SEC. 205. Appropriations and authorizations made in this title which are available for expenses of attendance at meetings shall be expended for such purposes in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Attorney General.

SEC. 206. Appropriations and authorizations made in this title for salaries and expenses shall be available for services as authorized by section 15 of the Act of August 2, 1946 (5 U. S. C. 55a).

[SEC. 207. None of the funds appropriated by this title may be used in the preparation or prosecution of the suit in the United States District Court for the Southern District of California Southern Division, by the United States of America against Fallbrook Public Utility District, a public service corporation of the State of California, and others.]

SEC. [208] 207. Not to exceed 5 per centum of the appropriations for legal activities and general administration in this title shall be available interchangeably, with the approval of the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, but no appropriation shall be increased by more than 5 per centum and any interchange of appropriations hereunder shall be reported to the Congress in the annual budget. PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The Office of the Solicitor serves as legal counsel to the Department and examines the legal aspects of its program.

1. Litigation.—The enforcement through court action of regulatory labor laws, the more important of which are the Federal wage, hour, and child labor laws, come within the scope of this activity.

2. Interpretations and legal advisory services.—The legal interpretation of the various acts administered by the Department as well as legal services and advice to departmental officials in connection with the administration of these acts fall within this activity.

3. Wage determinations.—This activity applies to wages of laborers and mechanics on Federal public construction contracts and for several grant-in-aid construction programs; it is also concerned with efforts to coordinate the administration and enforcement of the labor standards provisions in the statutes relating to public construction.

4. Legislative advisory services.—Included in this activity are analyses and interpretations of existing legislation and preparation of drafts of proposed legislation in which the Department is interested.

5. Enforcement of regulatory labor laws (regional offices).—These services rendered at the regional level include interpretation and enforcement of regulatory labor laws, and legal advices to the bureaus of the Department and the public in response to inquiries.

6. Executive direction and management services.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The Bureau develops and encourages the adoption of sound labor standards by designing and promoting programs aimed at the reduction of industrial accidents, serves as a clearinghouse of information, and administers the union registration functions of the Labor-Management Relations Act of 1947. An increase is requested in 1955 to initiate a program and develop standards for improving the condition of migratory labor.

1. Development and promotion of sound labor laws and labor practices—(a) Legislative standards and State services.—Cooperative agreements are negotiated with States, and information and advice are given on labor laws and problems.

(b) Safe working conditions.—In cooperation with State labor departments, labor organizations, and other groups, training courses are conducted for State factory safety inspectors; State agencies are assisted in planning industry-wide safety programs in especially hazardous industries; service is provided for the President's Conference on Occupational Safety; and similar work is carried on under the Federal Employees' Compensation Act and the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act.

(c) Youth employment.—Child labor and youth employment research aims to meet the needs of young workers, and child labor regulations are developed under the Fair Labor Standards Act.

(d) International labor.—Work is done in preparation of reports by the Government to the International Labor Organization, and information is furnished to the States.

(e) Employment of physically handicapped.—Staff assistance is provided to the President's Committee on National-Employ-the-Physically-Handicapped Week, which stimulates cooperative public and private action to promote the employment of the physically handicapped.

2. Registration of labor union data.—These are financial and organizational data required to be filed as a condition of union use of the facilities of the National Labor Relations Board.

3. Executive direction and management services.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The Bureau of Employment Security carries out the Federal responsibilities of the public employment and unemployment insurance programs. Obligations for 1955 are estimated to be $4,760,000, a decrease of $513,400 from 1954 due to economies in the Veterans' Placement Service and in other activities.

1. Veterans' placement service.—This includes helping State local employment offices in rendering suitable counseling and placement services to veterans and promoting the interest of employers in employing veterans.

2. Farm placement service.—This service guides the interstate movement of migratory workers in cooperation with the farm placement activities of the States.

3. Collection and interpretation of labor market information.—Facts and figures are reported and analyzed on (a) the administrative operations of the unemployment insurance and employment service programs; (b) supply, demand, and utilization of labor by areas, industries, and occupations.

Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis

4. Assistance in maintaining public employment services.—Effective employment service is promoted by assistance to the States on (a) organization and management; (b) counseling and testing of veterans, handicapped workers, and others in the field of occupational adjustment; and (c) employer contact programs.

5. Unemployment insurance service.—State laws and interpretation are reviewed to assure conformity with the requirements of the Federal law. Proposals are developed and surveys made to improve the existing programs. The unemployment compensation program provided for veterans under title IV of the Veterans' Readjustment Act of 1952 is administered through the States.

6. Field guidance, financing, and auditing of State operations.—Technical assistance is provided to State agencies, and the administrative needs of the States are evaluated as a basis for making grants. Annual audits are made.

7. Executive direction and management.

8. Central administrative services.

Grants to States for Unemployment Compensation and Employment Service Administration, Bureau of Employment Security

Grants to States for unemployment compensation and employment service administration: For grants in accordance with the provisions of the Act of June 6, 1933, as amended (29 U. S. C. 49–49n), for carrying into effect section 602 of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, for grants to the States as authorized in title III of the Social Security Act, as amended (42 U. S. C. 501–503), including, upon the request of any State, the purchase of equipment, supplies and printing, and the payment of rental for space made available to such State in lieu of grants for such purpose, for necessary expenses in connection with the operation of employment office facilities and services in the District of Columbia, and for expenses not otherwise provided for, necessary for carrying out title IV of the Veterans' Readjustment Assistance Act of 1952 (66 Stat. 684), [$192,205,000] $216,400,000, of which $6,000,000 shall be available only to the extent that the Secretary finds necessary to meet increased costs of administration resulting from changes in a State law or increases in the numbers of claims filed and claims paid or salary costs resulting from changes in compensation plans over those upon which the State's basic grant (or the allocation for the District of Columbia) was based, which increased costs of administration cannot be provided for by normal budgetary adjustments: Provided, That notwithstanding any provision to the contrary in section 302 (a) of the Social Security Act, as amended, the Secretary of Labor shall from time to time certify to the Secretary of the Treasury for payment to each State found to be in compliance with the requirements of the Act of June 6, 1933, and, except in the case of Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, with the provisions of section 303 of the Social Security Act, as amended, such amounts as he determines to be necessary for the proper and efficient administration of its unemployment compensation law and of its public employment offices: Provided further, That such amounts as may be agreed upon by the Department of Labor and the Post Office Department shall be used for the payment, in such manner as said parties may jointly determine, of postage for the transmission of official mail matter in connection with the administration of unemployment compensation systems and employment services by States receiving grants herefrom.

In carrying out the provisions of said Act of June 6, 1933, the provisions of section 303 (a) (1) of the Social Security Act, as amended, relating to the establishment and maintenance of personnel standards on a merit basis, shall apply.

None of the funds appropriated by this title to the Bureau of Employment Security for grants-in-aid of State agencies to cover, in whole or in part, the cost of operation of said agencies including the salaries and expenses of officers and employees of said agencies, shall be withheld from the said agencies of any States which have established by legislative enactment and have in operation a merit system and classification and compensation plan covering the selection, tenure in office, and compensation of their employees, because of any disapproval of their personnel or the manner of their selection by the agencies of the said States, or the rates of pay of said officers or employees.

Grants to States, next succeeding fiscal year: For making, after May 31 of the current fiscal year, payments to States under title III of the Social Security Act, as amended, and under the Act of June 6, 1933, as amended, for the first quarter of the next succeeding fiscal year, such sums as may be necessary, the obligations incurred and the expenditures made thereunder for payments under such title and under such Act of June 6, 1933, to be charged to the appropriation therefor for that fiscal year. PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Grants are made to the States for administration of the unemployment compensation and employment service programs.

The increase of $24,195,000 in the appropriation requested is primarily due to increases in workloads expected to accompany the economic developments assumed for 1955, and increases in average annual State salary rates. The average annual State salary rate was $3,563 in 1953 and is expected to rise to $3,875 in 1955.

1. Unemployment compensation activities.—These consist of determining the tax liability of each employer, collecting the taxes, and auditing the employer's records; maintaining a record of each employee's wages; accepting initial claims for benefits; processing claims to determine eligibility and the amount and duration of benefits; taking continued claims and verifying the claimant's continuing eligibility; making benefit payments; and conducting hearings and making decisions on appeals. The 1954 workloads shown for continued claims and benefit payments made are based on biweekly claims taking for 9 months of the year, whereas the 1953 and 1955 workloads are based on weekly claims taking.

UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION WORKLOADS

Basic workload	1953 actual	1954 estimate	1955 estimate
			Number	Percent change from 1954

Appeals	224,000	225,000	250,000	11.1

2. Employment service activities.—These consist of registering persons seeking jobs; testing and counseling; making placements; and providing services to employers in staffing and job analysis.

EMPLOYMENT SERVICE WORKLOADS

Basic workload	1953 actual	1954 estimate	1955 estimate
			Number	Percent change from 1954
Applications for work taken	7,318,000	7,274,000	7,500,000	3.1

Placements, nonagricultural	6,850,000	6,931,000	7,000,000	1.0

3. State administration.—Provides leadership and planning for the unemployment compensation and employment service activities in the central and local offices as well as legal, fiscal, personnel, training and research activities.

4. Veterans' unemployment compensation.—These consist of administrative operations involved in accepting veterans initial claims for unemployment benefits; processing such claims to determine veteran status; taking continued claims and verifying claimant's continuing eligibility; paying benefits; conducting hearings and making decisions on appeals. The increase in workloads is primarily due to the increase in the number of veterans eligible for these benefits. The benefit payments are provided by the "Unemployment compensation for veterans" appropriation.

VETERANS' UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION WORKLOADS

Basic workload	1953 actual (8½ months)	1954 estimate	1955 estimate
			Number	Percent change from 1954
Initial claims taken	195,641	400,000	435,000	8.8
Continued claims taken	1,004,782	2,000,000	2,370,000	18.5
Claims processed	164,181	235,000	300,000	27.7
Benefit payments made	944,924	1,800,000	2,270,000	26.1
Appeals	5,590	8,400	9,000	7.1

5. Contingency fund.—This fund formerly was used to meet unforeseen increases in the number of claims filed, in State salary rates, and changes in State unemployment compensation laws. The 1954 appropriation language did not contain the authority for the payment of salary increases from this fund. The 1955 request recommends the use of the contingency fund for increases in salary costs resulting from changes in compensation plans which are beyond the control of the State agencies administering this program.

6. Adjustment of appropriation for prior and subsequent year.—Because of State legal requirements funds must be made available to the States before the start of the fiscal year. Up to now funds for 3 months were advanced from the subsequent fiscal year. However, during the fiscal year 1955 the amount advanced will be reduced to provide for about 1 month's operation. Thus $44,195,000 out of the 1955 appropriations will be made available in 1954, and only $17,000,000 will be made available in 1955 out of the 1956 appropriation. Therefore the effect of this change in 1955 is −$27,195,000.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Funds are allocated to each State entering into an agreement with the Federal Government for payment of unemployment compensation to veterans of service on or after June 27, 1950. The increase over 1954 of $17,100,000 in the appropriation requested is due primarily to the increase in the number of eligible veterans. A change in the 1954 appropriation language to enable granting 1955 funds to the States in advance of the fiscal year will be submitted later.

Salaries and Expenses, Mexican Farm Labor Program, Bureau of Employment Security—Continued

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Mexican agricultural labor is imported for use in areas having a shortage of domestic agricultural workers. An additional amount of $550,000 is proposed for later transmission to provide for operations during the latter part of 1954.

1. Determining foreign labor requirements.—The agricultural areas needing foreign workers and the number of workers required are determined.

2. Supplying foreign labor requirements.—Workers are recruited in Mexico and transported to centers in the United States where the employer contracts for their use.

3. Determining compliance with contract provisions.—Complaints of contract violations are investigated, and housing and other perquisites required by the contract are inspected.

4. Farm labor analysis.—A reporting system is maintained on employment of Mexican farm labor, and the States are assisted in the analysis of reports to insure conformance with contractual obligations.

5. Legal services.—Legal services for all activities of the program are provided.

6. Management and administrative services.

7. Field direction.—Regional supervision and coordination is given to the reception centers and compliance activities.

The Bureau administers the Federal Employees' Compensation Act, the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Act, the War Risk Hazards Act, certain provisions of the War Claims Act, and the District of Columbia Workmen's Compensation Act. The combined caseload of new injuries reported under these acts in 1953 was 224,901. It is estimated the caseload will be 210,100 for 1954 and 205,700 for 1955.

Administration of the District of Columbia Compensation Act is financed through a working fund advanced by the District of Columbia.

1. Disposition of compensation claims.—Workloads are related to the volume of covered employment and the servicing of cases originating in prior years.

(a) Federal employment is estimated at 2,200,000; cases from prior years number 47,840; the backlog in investigations is 378 cases.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The Bureau establishes standards and policies to promote women's opportunities for profitable employment, and investigates and reports on matters pertaining to the welfare of women workers, who constitute nearly one-third of the labor force of the United States.

1. Investigating and reporting on conditions affecting women workers.—About one-third of the Bureau's resources are devoted to continuous collection and analysis of basic economic data relating to women workers; planning and conducting studies on special problems affecting them; and preparation of reports.

2. Promotion of standards and policies.—Specialized knowledge is made available within and outside the Government to advance the welfare and effective utilization of women workers.

3. Advisory services on legislation affecting the welfare of women workers.—Technical and advisory services are furnished State and Federal agencies, the international bodies, women's organizations, civic groups, and individuals in the various fields of women's labor law and civil and political status, including preparation of replies to United Nations questionnaires for the Government on the legal status and treatment of women.

4. Executive direction and management services.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The Division administers the Fair Labor Standards Act and the Walsh-Healey Public Contracts Act to obtain compliance with minimum standards respecting wages, hours, and other employment conditions in industries engaged in interstate commerce or the production of goods for commerce and in establishments furnishing goods to the Government. The appropriation requested represents a decrease of $17,000 compared with the current fiscal year, and a decrease of $1,406,139 compared with the preceding fiscal year.

1. Promotion of compliance and enforcement.—Information media are used to minimize unintentional violations, and employing establishments are inspected on a selected basis in order to assist employers in meeting legal requirements and workers in recovering wages unlawfully withheld.

2. Wage standards and determinations.—Prevailing wage determinations are made, and regulations are formulated governing approval of subminimum wages for learners, apprentices, messengers, and handicapped workers.

3. Regulations and interpretations.—Regulations and interpretations are prepared to give effect in all respects to the Fair Labor Standards Act.

4. Executive direction and management.

5. Central administrative services.

BUREAU OF EMPLOYMENT SECURITY

Farm Labor Supply Revolving Fund, Bureau of Employment Security

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Fees for each worker contracted are paid by agricultural employers. These fees are used to meet transportation and subsistence costs involved in importing Mexican farm workers (65 Stat. 741). From July 12, 1951, through March 14, 1953, the fee for initially contracting a worker was $15 and the fee for obtaining workers upon the termination of a worker's contract with another employer was $7.50. Effective March 15, 1953, the fees were reduced to $11 and $5.50, respectively, and effective November 9, 1953, the fees were further reduced to $6 and $2, respectively.

The $1,000,000 appropriated in 1952 for working capital was returned to the Treasury in 1953.

The net effect on budget expenditures for the fiscal year 1955 is estimated at $785,100.

INTRODUCTORY STATEMENT

The Department delivers the mails and performs related services to the public, including provision of money orders and postal savings. Because postal business reflects general economic conditions, the upward trend in the national economy has brought with it a large increase in mail volume.

The operation of the postal service is financed from postal revenue. Any deficit is met by the Treasury. Specific authority to incur obligations for operation is contained in five appropriations: (1) Administration, (2) Operations, (3) Transportation, (4) Finance, and (5) Facilities.

Almost 94.38 percent of the total request is for the operation and transportation appropriations, and about 5.62 percent for the other three appropriations.

Summary statement of revenue, expenses, and volume of business:

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

This appropriation finances the overall direction and administration of the postal service. This includes the administration of personnel, legal services, audit and control functions and the Post Office Inspection Service.

The total appropriation request of $20,494,000, an increase of $2,480,000 over the current fiscal year, will provide for reorganization of the Bureau of the Controller and additional post office inspectors urgently needed in the execution of the new management improvement program.

1. Executive direction.—The immediate office of the Postmaster General, the advisory board, the office of the administrative assistant to the Postmaster General and the office of the chief industrial engineer comprise this activity. Four additional positions are proposed to augment the headquarters safety staff.

2. Personnel administration.—The position of assistant postmaster general for personnel was authorized by Public Law 140, approved July 20, 1953. The new bureau of personnel will give policy direction to all phases of personnel administration as it affects approximately 500,000 employees.

3. Legal service.—The solicitor is the legal adviser to the Postmaster General. His duties also involve the adjudication and approval for payment of damage claims and losses claimed in postmasters' accounts.

4. Audit and control.—Provision is made for modernization of the accounting system of the entire postal service, including field post offices and the regional accounting offices, and establishing a controllership function equivalent to that found in large private industrial corporations.

5. Inspection service.—Investigations or surveys are made of all phases of the postal service including methods and procedures; manpower use and needs; problems involving transportation, storage and handling of mail; accounts; buildings; the vehicle service; violations of postal laws; and complaints regarding personnel and service. The estimate for 1955 proposes 150 additional inspectors with necessary supporting personnel and related expenses.

offices is also under this activity. Salaries of postmasters and supervisory employees are determined in relation to receipts of their offices during the preceding calendar year. The estimate for 1955 reflects changes in salaries of these officials which are based on increased receipts in calendar year 1953.

CALENDAR YEAR POSTAL RECEIPTS AND POST OFFICES BY CLASSES

Postal receipts (preceding calendar year) in millions [1]	$1,764	$1,948	$2,092
Number of post offices on June 30:

Second-class	6,151	6,450	6,645
Third-class	13,076	13,260	13,500
Fourth-class	18,381	17,234	16,240
Total post offices, June 30	40,609	40,218	39,820

[1] Gross postal receipts on which salaries of postmasters are determined.

The estimate for 1955 provides for (a) added manpower to handle an anticipated increase in mail volume and (b) more adequate supervision to increase employee productivity.

2. Mail handling and window service.—This activity covers the handling of incoming and outgoing mail in post offices, window services to the public, and contract station service. Provision is made for increased volume of mail, later hours of window service, and night distribution incident to later collections.

Mail volume is estimated to increase 3.14 percent in 1955 over 1954.

COMPARISON OF AVERAGE EMPLOYMENT, PRODUCTIVE MAN-HOURS, AND WORKLOAD

	Average paid employment	Total productive man-hours (thousands)	Mail volume and special service transactions (millions)	Average units per man-hour
1953	213,893	385,934	53,350	138
1954 (estimate)	214,830	387,633	54,953	142
1955 (estimate)	210,806	381,394	56,660	149

3. Collection and delivery.—The collection and delivery of mail by city delivery carriers, special delivery messengers, rural carriers, and personnel who operate and maintain vehicles used in collection, transportation, and delivery of mails are included in this activity. The estimate provides additional employment due to mail volume increase, extension of service, and increased truck fleet.

COMPARISON OF PAID AND PRODUCTIVE EMPLOYMENT AND WORKLOAD

	Average paid employment	Productive man-hours (thousands)	Workload (millions) [1]	Average units per man-hour
1951	161,674	316,720	47,387	150
1952	168,885	324,896	50,377	155

1954 (estimate)	176,775	334,978	54,551	163
1955 (estimate)	179,684	341,104	56,255	165

[1] Workload consists of pieces of mail and the number of registered, insured, collect-on-delivery, and special delivery transactions.

4. Custodial service.—Provision is made for cleaning of Federal and leased quarters of the postal service and for 15 percent additional pay to postmasters at fourth-class offices to compensate them for the furnishing of space and utilities.

5. Financial service.—The expense of manufactured stamped envelopes previously carried under this appropriation title will be paid directly from revenues derived from the sale of such envelopes.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

This appropriation covers all items involving the transportation of mail by air, land, or water and the cost of administrative personnel in the Bureau of Transportation at Washington. Included are the costs of star route service, highway post offices, short-haul truck service, railroad and electric car service, and airmail service.

The estimate for airmail service, both domestic and foreign, covers service cost only. The cost of subsidy payments is borne by the Civil Aeronautics Board in accordance with the provisions of Reorganization Plan No. 10, which became effective October 1, 1953.

The appropriation request for 1955 is $703,219,000, a decrease of $16,897,350 compared with the current fiscal year. However, since the current year appropriation provides $20,163,750 in subsidy payments to airlines the increase is $3,266,400 on a comparative basis.

1. Administration of postal transportation.—In addition to the administrative headquarters office at Washington, provision is made for the United States share of the cost of maintaining the Universal Postal Union and the Postal Union of the Americas and Spain.

2. Mail handling in transit.—Mail is processed and distributed in terminal post offices, railway post offices, highway post office buses, at airmail fields, and at short-haul truck terminals.

3. Water transportation.—This covers the cost of transportation by powerboat and steamship, and the handling and stevedoring at ports in the United States and its Territories.

The increase requested for powerboat service is primarily for increases in volume of mail to Hawaii and Alaska incident to growth of population and of military activities in these territories.

The estimate for transportation of foreign mails by ocean vessels reflects transfer of military mails to Army and Navy during 1953, formerly carried on commercial vessels and financed by this appropriation.

[1] Excludes Detroit River service.

4. Truck transportation.—Star route service is provided to and between post offices not afforded other means of transportation, and for supplemental service for offices where there is not adequate mail supply. The increase requested will provide 127 additional routes, and renewal of contracts at higher rates to provide larger and more efficient equipment to handle increased mail volume.

DATA RELATING TO TRANSPORTATION BY STAR ROUTE

1955 estimate	12,075	45,573,000	3,774

Mobile highway post offices provide mail distribution in Government-owned or contract vehicles where adequate train service does not exist. The estimate provides 25 additional contract routes to offset discontinued railroad service, and the conversion of all routes from Government-operated to contract routes. It has been found that the cost per mile for operation of Government highway post offices is approximately 5 cents per mile higher than contract service.

Short-haul truck service is provided for transportation diverted from railroads because of lower rates or improved service resulting therefrom. The expansion of this service is the result of a long-range program to transport by the most economical and expeditious means.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

This appropriation, covering the operation of the Bureau of Facilities, includes the purchase, rental, and maintenance of vehicles for local transportation; operation of buildings; and procurement of supplies and equipment.

The requested increase of $12,515,000 over the current fiscal year is principally for additional rents and utility services to provide for increased mail volume, expansion of the light, color, and ventilation program, and for 2,278 new trucks to replace all over-age trucks.

1. Administration of postal facilities.—Provision is made for employees at the Washington headquarters, and at regional centers throughout the country. The estimate provides additional funds to meet the full year cost of reorganization of the Bureau and establishment of a regional organization during the current fiscal year.

2. Local transportation.—This provides for the purchase, rental, and maintenance of motor vehicles required for local delivery. The estimate provides for a decrease in hired vehicles due to better scheduling of vehicles; for the purchase of 500 light trucks for replacement, and 1,778 vehicles to continue the program of adding light vehicles in order to release heavier vehicles for other use.

3. Operation of buildings.—This covers the operation of all leased quarters and Federal buildings under the jurisdiction of the postal service. Included are telephone and telegraph service, rents, fuel and utility services, and supplies, equipment and maintenance for the buildings involved; and continuation of the light, color, and ventilation program in Federal buildings. The amount requested will increase occupancy of rented space by 3,256,229 square feet in 1955 to care for the increase in mail volume.

[1] Excludes allowances for space occupied by fourth-class offices.

4. General postal supply service.—This activity provides for the salaries of 25 traveling mechanicians, 3 examiners of supplies and equipment, the cost of operating the mail equipment shops in Washington, the cost of postal supplies, equipment, and printing for the field and departmental service, together with the cost of modern mechanical devices.

The amount requested will provide for increased production of mail bags and locks, and for purchase of conveyor equipment and other labor-saving devices.

GENERAL PROVISIONS

GENERAL PROVISIONS—POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT

[SEC. 202. Appropriations made in this title for general administration and for postal operations shall be available for examination of estimates of appropriations in the field.]

SEC. [203.] 202. Appropriations made in this title[, except those for payment of claims,] shall be available for expenditures in connection with accident prevention.

SEC. [204.] 203. Appropriations made in this title available for expenses of travel shall be available, under regulations prescribed by the Postmaster General, for expenses of attendance at meetings of technical, scientific, professional, or other similar organizations concerned with the function or activity for which the appropriation concerned is made.

SEC. 204. During the current fiscal year services may be procured for the Post Office Department as authorized by section 15 of the Act of August 2, 1946 (5 U. S. C. 55a): Provided, That such services may be continued for periods in excess of one year.

SEC. 205. During the current fiscal year, and under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Postmaster General, not to exceed an aggregate of $100,000 shall be available from any funds available to the Post Office Department, as may be determined by him, for expenses necessary to enable the Department to participate in Federal or non-Federal training programs and for necessary expenses of training officers and employees (both departmental and field postal services) in such subjects or courses of instruction in either Federal or non-Federal facilities as will contribute to the improved performance of their official duties: Provided, That not more than forty-five of such officers and employees may participate in any training program in a non-Federal facility which is of more than ninety days duration.

SEC. 206. Hereafter, the expense of manufacturing embossed stamped envelopes (printed or unprinted) shall be paid out of the revenue derived from the sale of such envelopes.

SEC. 207. Hereafter, indemnity for the loss of or damage to registered, insured, and collect-on-delivery mail shall be paid, respectively, from the revenues derived from the fees and charges therefor.

SEC. 208. Hereafter, money orders more than one year old shall be paid from the proceeds from the sale of money orders.

SEC. 209. Appropriations in this title shall be available for payment to the General Services Administration of such additional sums as may be necessary for the repair, alteration, preservation, renovation, improvement, and equipment of federally owned property used for postal purposes, whenever the Postmaster General shall determine that expenditures for such purposes will result in improved efficiency and economy in the postal service. (Post Office Department Appropriation Act, 1954.)

TITLE III—GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 301. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall be used to pay the salary or wages of any person who engages in a strike against the Government of the United States or who is a member of an organization of Government employees that asserts the right to strike against the Government of the United States, or who advocates, or is a member of an organization that advocates, the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence: Provided, That for the purposes hereof an affidavit shall be considered prima facie evidence that the person making the affidavit has not contrary to the provisions of this section engaged in a strike against the Government of the United States, is not a member of an organization of Government employees that asserts the right to strike against the Government of the United States, or that such person does not advocate, and is not a member of an organization that advocates, the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence: Provided further, That any person who engages in a strike against the Government of the United States or who is a member of an organization of Government employees that asserts the right to strike against the Government of the United States, or who advocates, or who is a member of an organization that advocates, the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence and accepts employment the salary or wages for which are paid from any appropriation or fund contained in this Act shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both: Provided further, That the above penalty clause shall be in addition to, and not in substitution for, any other provisions of existing law. (Treasury and Post Office Departments Appropriation Act, 1954.)

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The appropriation for 1955 is $1,900,000 less than the total amount of $65,600,000 available for direct obligation in 1954. The $65,600,000 represents the fiscal year 1954 appropriation of $50,000,000 plus $15,600,000 of unobligated balances, from fiscal year 1953, made available to this appropriation pursuant to Public Law 195.

The activities described below include both the cost of programs directly chargeable to this appropriation and the cost of rendering services on a reimbursable basis to other appropriations and agencies, such as the United States Information Agency and the Foreign Operations Administration.

1. Executive direction and policy formulation.—The Secretary is assisted in formulation of policy and direction of the Department's activities by the Under Secretary; the Counselor; the Legal Adviser; the Deputy Under Secretary for policy matters; the Under Secretary for Administration; and by the offices for economic, intelligence, and congressional relations functions.

2. Conduct of diplomatic and consular relations with foreign countries.—This includes the representation of the United States and its citizens, political and economic negotiations and reporting, issuance of passports and visas, and other services.

3. Conduct of diplomatic relations with international organizations.—In collaboration with other Government agencies, United States policy is developed and coordinated on political and security issues and in such specialized fields as world health, education, labor, and refugee activities.

4. Domestic public information and liaison.—This provides for informing the American public on international policies and also keeping the Department informed on public opinion relative to foreign policy and issues.

5. Central program services.—These provide personnel and physical security measures, acquisition and management of United States property abroad, cryptographic media for insuring the security of messages transmitted to all parts of the world, translating and interpreting services, and coordination of governmental foreign reporting requirements.

6. Administrative and staff activities.—These relate largely to (1) central control of the worldwide organizational, management, personnel, budgetary, and fiscal operations of the Department; (2) administration of a global communications system for all civilian activities of the Government; and (3) purchase and distribution of administrative supplies and equipment.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Provision is made for carrying out the United States occupation, contractual, diplomatic, and educational exchange functions in Germany and Austria. The requested appropriation for 1955, represents a decrease of $4,336,101.

1. Conduct of relations with Germany.—The estimate assumes the ratification of the Contractual Agreements with the Federal Republic of Germany by the beginning of fiscal year 1955. Savings resulting from the elimination of occupation responsibilities in West Germany in 1955 will be partially offset by expenses of new functions arising under the Contractual Agreements, such as United States contributions to international boards and commissions. The three-power occupation of West Berlin will remain unaffected by the Contractual Agreements, requiring continuance of United States and multipartite occupation activities. Regular diplomatic, political, and economic reporting functions account for other requirements of the mission.

2. Statutory and technical consular, Germany.—Passport, visa, and protective services are provided.

3. Educational exchange, Germany.—Exchanges of students, teachers, research scholars, and national leaders are carried out between the United States and Germany.

4. Administration, Germany.—Management, budget, personnel, and administrative services are provided for the mission headquarters, the Berlin element, six American consulates, and the domestic offices of the department concerned with Germany.

5. Conduct of relations with Austria.—The United States High Commissioner, who is also the Ambassador to Austria, is working toward the adoption of a treaty designed to foster the reemergence of a free, independent, and democratic Austria.

6. Statutory and technical consular, Austria.—Passport, visa, and protective services are provided.

7. Educational exchange, Austria.—Exchanges of students, teachers, research scholars, and national leaders are carried out between the United States and Austria.

8. Administration, Austria.—This includes all administrative and security functions.

INTERNATIONAL CLAIMS COMMISSION

International Claims Commission, State

For expenses necessary to enable the Commission to settle certain claims of the Government of the United States on its own behalf and on behalf of American nationals against foreign governments as authorized by [Public Law 455, approved] the Act of March 10, 1950, as amended (22 U. S. C. 1621–1627), including expenses of attendance at meetings of organizations concerned with the purpose of this appropriation; hire of passenger motor vehicles for field use only; services as authorized by section 15 of the Act of August 2, 1946 (5 U. S. C. 55a); and employment of aliens; [$220,000] $144,950. (Supplemental Appropriation Act, 1954).

OBLIGATIONS BY ACTIVITIES

Adjudication of claims—1953, $168,353; 1954, $202,793; 1955, $144,950.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

This provides for the administrative expenses of the International Claims Commission. The Commission examines, adjudicates, and pays those claims of United States nationals which come under claims agreements between the United States and foreign governments with which the United States was not at war during World War II. The claims cover damages arising out of the nationalization or other taking of property by a foreign government, which pays a lump-sum settlement to the United States. A percentage deduction is made from each claim paid and deposited in the Treasury to cover administrative expenses incurred by the United States Government. Pursuant to claims agreements, the Government of Yugoslavia has deposited with the United States $17,000,000 to cover claims of this nature; and the Government of the Republic of Panama has similarly deposited $174,678.

This estimate is based on the Commission's winding up its affairs by December 31, 1954, as required by the International Claims Settlement Act of 1949, as amended.

OBLIGATIONS BY ACTIVITIES

Description	1953 actual	1954 estimate	1955 estimate
1. Rio Grande international dams program (Texas):
(a) Falcon Dam and powerplant	$11,451,191	$6,663,796
(b) Upper dams (Diablo Dam and reservoir)	135,808	299,387	$500,000
2. Lower Rio Grande flood-control project (Texas): (a) Anzalduas Dam and related works		500,000	1,426,264
3. Nogales sanitation project (Arizona)	14,619

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

This appropriation finances the construction activities of the United States section of the Commission.

1. Rio Grande dams.—Work on the Falcon Dam and powerplant will be substantially completed in 1954, providing facilities for storage of 4,085,000 acre-feet of water and 31,500 kilowatts of power-generating capacity. Funds currently available will be sufficient to complete the work. Plans will continue to be developed in connection with the Diablo Dam and reservoir.

2. Lower Rio Grande flood control.—It is expected that work will be commenced on Anzalduas Dam in 1954. Upon completion it will be possible to equitably divide floodwaters as between the United States and Mexico and to limit floods in the Brownsville and Matamoros area. Work to be performed in 1954 and 1955 will be financed from prior year funds that are available for this activity.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

This appropriation finances all costs of operating and maintaining completed projects. The American Dam and Canal, El Paso rectification, El Paso canalization projects, portions of Lower Rio Grande flood control, and Rio Grande bank protection have passed from construction to the operation and maintenance phase. Stream-gaging stations are operated and maintained on the international rivers and tributaries. Under an agreement entered into with the city of Douglas, Ariz., the Commission has also assumed primary responsibility for operation and maintenance of the Douglas-Agua Prieta sanitation project. Falcon Dam will be placed under operation and maintenance during the current year.

SEC. 104. Appropriations under this title available for expenses in connection with travel of personnel outside the continental United States, including travel of dependents and transportation of personal effects, household goods, or automobiles of such personnel shall be available for such expenses when any part of such travel or transportation begins in the current fiscal year pursuant to travel orders issued in that year, notwithstanding the fact that such travel or transportation may not be completed during the current fiscal year.

SEC. 105. Notwithstanding the provisions of section 16a of the Act of August 2, 1946 (5 U. S. C. 78 (a)), Government-owned vehicles may be used in foreign countries for transportation of United States Government employees from their residence to the office and return when public transportation facilities are unsafe or are not available: Provided, That each Chief of Mission shall have prior authority from the Secretary of State to approve such transportation.

[SEC. 106. During the current fiscal year and when purchases are made with foreign currencies, the Department of State is authorized to purchase for use abroad any passenger motor vehicle (exclusive of busses, ambulances, and station wagons), at a cost of not to exceed the equivalent of $2,200 for each such vehicle.]

SEC. [107] 106. Appropriations under this title for "Salaries and expenses", "International contingencies", and "Missions to international organizations" are available for reimbursement of the General Services Administration for security guard services for protection of confidential files.

SEC. [108] 107. The Secretary of State, with the approval of the Bureau of the Budget, shall prescribe the maximum rates (not to exceed $12 per day) of per diem in lieu of subsistence (or of similar allowances therefor) payable while away from their own countries to foreign participants in any exchange of persons program, or in any program of furnishing technical information and assistance, under the jurisdiction of any Government agency, and said rates may be fixed without regard to any provision of law in limitation thereof.

SEC. [109] 108. No part of any appropriation contained in this title shall be used to pay the salary or expenses of any person assigned to or serving in any office of any of the several States of the United States or any political subdivision thereof.

SEC. [110] 109. None of the funds appropriated in this title shall be used (1) to pay the United States contribution to any international organization which engages in the direct or indirect promotion of the principle or doctrine of one world government or one world citizenship; (2) for the promotion, direct or indirect, of the principle or doctrine of one world government or one world citizenship.

[SEC. 111. It is the sense of the Congress that the Communist Chinese Government should not be admitted to membership in the United Nations as the representative of China.] (Department of State Appropriation Act, 1954.)

PROPOSED FOR LATER TRANSMISSION

Contributions to voluntary international programs (under proposed legislation, 1955).—Additional appropriations totaling $135,000,000 will be required for United States contributions to the following voluntary international programs: United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees, United Nations Korean Reconstruction Agency, Multilateral Technical Cooperation, and the United Nations Children's Fund. Appropriations for these four programs were requested in the 1954 budget document under the heading, "Mutual security, funds appropriated to the President," and an explanation of these programs appears in the program and performance statement of that section of this document.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The Office of the Secretary aids the Secretary in the direction and administration of the Department.

The amount requested for 1955 is $50,900 less than the adjusted appropriation for fiscal year 1954.

1. Executive direction.—The Under Secretary, Deputy to the Secretary, Assistant Secretaries, and other staff assistants advise and assist the Secretary in carrying out his responsibilities in the direction and administration of the Department. This staff also provides leadership and coordination of Departmentwide programs.

2. Administration and coordination of legal services.—The General Counsel, as the chief law officer of the Department, administers and coordinates its legal services. This includes providing service for organizational units which do not maintain legal staffs, and supervising and coordinating the legal activities of the other bureaus.

3. General administrative services.—These services are performed for the staff offices of the Office of the Secretary and the departmental headquarters.

4. Operation and maintenance of Treasury buildings.—Services are provided for the main Treasury Building and its annex.

5. Emergency first-aid.—Three health units are operated for Treasury employees in Washington, D. C.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The amount requested for 1955 is $29,100 less than the adjusted appropriation for 1954.

1. Processing deposits of withheld tax payments.—Employers deposit withheld income and social security taxes to the credit of the Treasurer of the United States, monthly, with designated banks. They receive from the Federal Reserve banks, acting as fiscal agents of the Treasury, depositary receipts which the employers attach to their returns as evidence of payment of taxes. The proportionate share of the expense relating to the issuance and verification of these receipts is charged against the Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund. Effective July 1, 1953, the depositary receipt method was extended to include excise tax payments. The work volume is estimated at 6,350,000 depositary receipts in 1955, as compared with 6,240,000 in 1954 and 5,612,299 in 1953.

2. Financial reporting and maintenance of the Government's central accounts.—The central accounts include control accounts on appropriations, receipts, and expenditures and provide data for the Daily Treasury Statement. This activity also includes the preparation and publication of financial reports on the Government's fiscal operations, such as the annual Combined Statement of Receipts, Expenditures, and Balances; the Monthly Report of Appropriations, Expenditures, and Balances; the Secretary's Annual Report; the Treasury Bulletin; and the Digest of Appropriations. The volume of accounting items is estimated at 4,812,000 in 1954 and 1955 as compared with 4,950,884 in 1953.

3. Development and installation of accounting and reporting systems.—Technical advice and assistance in accounting is furnished all bureaus and offices of the Treasury. In addition, staff is assigned to participate in the Government-wide accounting improvement program.

4. Processing investments, loans, claims, collections, and surety bonds.—Investments in interest-bearing securities are processed for certain funds, such as the Federal old-age and survivors trust fund, the unemployment trust fund, the veterans insurance trust fund, and various Government retirement funds. The work includes purchase and disposal of securities, processing capital stock subscriptions of Government corporations, payment of international and other claims; and examination of the financial condition of companies issuing surety bonds in favor of the United States. The work volume expressed in number of transactions is estimated at 351,800 for 1955 and 352,500 for 1954 as compared with 348,012 for 1953.

5. Supervision of the Federal depositary system.—Banking facilities are provided for all agencies of the Government through the designation of selected institutions to act as official depositaries of the Government's funds. Workload is expected to increase in 1955 as follows:

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The Division of Disbursement, through its Washington and regional offices, makes payments; receives and deposits collections for civilian Federal agencies, except the Post Office Department and certain Government corporations; and issues savings bonds for Federal employees under the payroll savings plan.

Of the appropriation requested $5,000,000 or more than one-third represents reimbursements to the Post Office Department for the transmission of Government checks and bonds through the mail. The appropriation requests exclusive of penalty mail costs represents a decrease of $540,000 compared with 1954.

The funds required are determined by multiplying the volume of work or the number of units to be processed by the unit cost per item as shown in the following tables.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

This appropriation provides funds for the conduct of all public debt operations and the promotion of the sale of United States savings bonds and stamps. The amount requested for 1955 is $4,260,000 less than the adjusted appropriation for 1954.

1. Issuance, servicing, and retirement of savings bonds.—This consists of (1) the manufacture, receipt, custody, and distribution of bond stocks; (2) the issuance of bonds and maintenance of records relating thereto; (3) adjudicating claims for the replacement or payment of lost, stolen, or mutilated bonds; (4) handling reissues and other transactions incident to servicing outstanding bonds; (5) retiring bonds; and (6) semiannual payments of interest on series G, H, and K bonds. Sales emphasis in 1955 is to be concentrated on denominations of $50 or higher. Cash sales are therefore expected to continue their upward dollar trend, without corresponding increases in piece volume. Program savings are to be effected by discontinuing the Post Office Department as a sales outlet. Efforts will be made to have the majority of its sales diverted to issuing agents who will perform the work without charge to the Treasury. Further savings are to be made by reducing the fees paid to agents authorized to redeem series E savings bonds, and by revising the method of printing savings bonds.

3. Verification and destruction of unfit United States currency.—Prior to the fiscal year 1954 lower halves of United States currency unfit for further circulation were forwarded by the Federal Reserve Banks to the Bureau of the Public Debt for audit and destruction. Effective with the fiscal year 1954 redeemed United States currency will be verified and destroyed by the Banks on a reimbursable basis and effective with the fiscal year 1955, the reimbursements will become a responsibility of the Office of the Treasurer. Therefore, no amount is included in this estimate for such work, and this activity is being dropped from this appropriation.

4. Maintenance and audit of public debt accounts.—Control accounts are maintained over all transactions affecting the public debt. Provision is also made for the audit and verification of security stocks and the performance of other audit functions.

5. Promotion of the sale of savings bonds.—This consists of continuous sales promotion efforts using press, radio, other advertising media, and organized groups, augmented by concentrated sales campaigns, with strong emphasis on payroll-savings plans.

6. Executive direction.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

This office (a) receives, keeps, and disburses the moneys of the United States; (b) receives, stores, issues, transfers, and retires currency; (c) redeems Government securities; (d) maintains essential fiscal accounts; and (e) prepares related financial statements and reports. The amount requested for 1955 is $1,334,000 less than the adjusted appropriation for 1954.

1. Processing checks, deposits, and claims.—This consists of maintaining checking accounts of Government disbursing officers and Government-owned corporations; processing documents crediting Government accounts; directing the activities of Federal Reserve banks when they act as agents of the Treasurer in paying Government checks; and performing certain functions in connection with claims relating to lost, stolen, destroyed, and fraudulently negotiated checks. The increasing volume of Federal expenditures, particularly in the military and for social security payments, have resulted in a constant increase in workload.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The Bureau of Customs collects the duties and taxes on imported merchandise, inspects all international traffic, regulates certain marine and aircraft activities, combats smuggling, undervaluation, and frauds on the customs revenue, and performs related functions in connection with the importation and exportation of merchandise.

The amount requested for 1955 is $500,000 less than the appropriation for 1954.

1. Assessment and collection of duties, taxes, and fees.—The collectors of customs assess and collect the duties and taxes on imported merchandise, inspect international traffic, combat smuggling, perform certain marine activities relating to ownership and documentation of vessels of the United States and the movement of vessels in the foreign trade, and enforce the laws of other Government agencies affecting imports and exports.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The Internal Revenue Service determines, assesses and collects all internal-revenue taxes; interprets and enforces the internal-revenue laws; refunds any overpayment of tax or erroneous collections; prepares and distributes tax instructions, regulations, forms, and stamps; and performs other duties under statutes related to internal revenue.

1. Rulings, technical planning, and special technical services.—Statutory provisions are interpreted, rulings issued, and regulations and Treasury Decisions are prepared and continuing research on tax loopholes, inequities, and related problems is conducted. Special technical services are provided and tax treaties are negotiated with foreign governments.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Activities of the Bureau of the Mint include the manufacture of coins; the receipt of deposits of gold and silver bullion; the safeguarding of the Government's holdings of monetary metals; and the refining of gold and silver bullion.

The amount requested for 1955 is $200,000 less than appropriated for 1954.

1. Manufacture of coins (domestic).—Production of coins is the major activity of the Bureau of the Mint. It is estimated that 1.5 billion coins will be required in fiscal 1955. This estimate is based on the assumption that business activity will continue at a high level during that year.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The Coast Guard enforces maritime law, provides for limited security of ports and waterfront facilities, saves life and property, provides navigational aids to maritime commerce in navigable waters, promotes the efficiency and safety of the American Merchant Marine, and contributes to military readiness as a part of the Navy in time of war or national emergency.

1. Search, rescue, and law enforcement.—The Coast Guard maintains vessels, lifesaving stations, and aircraft at strategic points along the coast and inland waterways; operates an international ice patrol and ice observation service in the North Atlantic Ocean, performs ice breaking on inland lakes, rivers, and canals and in harbors on the Atlantic Coast; administers laws and issues regulations on inspection and safety equipment of merchant vessels, and licensing and certification of Merchant Marine officers and crews; reviews plans for construction or alteration of merchant vessels; investigates marine accidents; holds hearings on disciplinary cases; provides instruction in the principles and practices of safe navigation; and sponsors the Coast Guard Auxiliary, a voluntary organization of boat owners who assist in time of distress.

The cost of 15 major cutters is not included in the total for this activity, although the vessels involved are part of Coast Guard's search and rescue program. These ships will be treated as part of the 17 vessels required for the operation of 5% ocean stations for which a military requirement has been established, and for which the Department of Defense will provide reimbursement. The ocean station vessels will continue under the operational control and direction of the Coast Guard and thus serve a dual purpose in being available to assist the Coast Guard in the discharge of its basic search and rescue functions.

Expanded search and rescue coverage in the Pacific at Wake Island, Guam, Midway, Sangley Point, P. I., and Adak was discontinued by the Coast Guard in December 1953. As a result, Coast Guard requirements have been reduced by 11 aircraft and 5 vessels.

3. Port security.—Under this program, anchorage areas are controlled; loading and unloading dangerous cargoes are supervised; and merchant seamen and longshoremen are screened to keep subversive elements from merchant vessels and critical waterfront areas. Since the inauguration of the port security program in 1951 critical waterfront areas have been patrolled. However, beginning July 1, 1954, the shore side of this patrol is being discontinued except for spot inspection of waterfront facilities and checking personnel entrance to restricted areas. Also during 1955 supervision of loading and unloading of cargoes will be limited to explosive cargoes only.

4. Operation of ocean stations for meteorological and other services.—Ocean station vessels have been maintained and operated to obtain weather observations; to provide communication facilities for transmitting weather reports; and to serve as check points for aircraft flying transocean routes, as aids to navigation, and as rescue facilities. This program is being discontinued as a Coast Guard activity effective July 1, 1954. During fiscal year 1955, the Coast Guard will operate on a reimbursable basis 3⅞ ocean stations in the Atlantic and 2 stations in the Pacific as a military requirement of the Department of Defense. Expense for vessels to be laid up in 1955 is shown as a separate activity.

5. Layup program.—As a result of the discontinuance of three ocean stations in the Pacific and the expanded search and rescue program in the western Pacific, 11 DE-type vessels and one 83′ patrol boat are being laid up during 1954. Also, in connection with the latter program, Coast Guard requirements have been reduced by 11 aircraft. In addition, 1 DE and 3 WPG-type vessels will be laid up in 1955 in connection with ocean station program reductions in the Atlantic.

INTRODUCTORY STATEMENT

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation Liquidation Act (Public Law 163, 83d Cong.) provided for expiration of the Corporation's succession on June 30, 1954.

The Secretary of the Treasury is responsible for liquidation of (1) all lending functions terminated by the act, (2) certain World War II assets, and (3) the Smaller War Plants Corporation. The act also transferred to the Secretary responsibility for the lending program under section 409 of the Federal Civil Defense Act of 1950.

The net budget expenditures resulting from liquidation of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation programs are as follows:

LENDING PROGRAM

PROGRAM HIGHLIGHTS

[In millions]

Commitments	$93.7	$4.3
Disbursements	142.0	68.9	$29.7
Outstanding at end of year:
Loans	651.6	413.8	258.0
Commitments	131.2	50.4	14.8

Until September 28, 1953, when authority to make new loan commitments expired, the Corporation was engaged in lending for the purposes set forth in section 4 of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act. These lending activities were financed from (a) $100 million of capital stock issued to and held by the Secretary of the Treasury, (b) retained earnings to the extent of $250 million (after reasonable reserves for losses), and (c) borrowings from the Treasury as needed.

ANALYSIS OF BUDGET PROGRAM

On June 30, 1953, the assets related to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's lending program amounted to $651.6 million, including loans and securities in the following categories:

[In millions]

Business enterprises	$368.9
Railroads	76.6
Financial institutions	45.2
Public agencies	25.0
Disaster relief	16.4
Republic of the Philippines	51.0
Mortgages	68.5

In addition to the above, there was $131.2 million outstanding in loan commitments and agreements to purchase deferred participations in loans made by private financial institutions. Between June 30, 1953, and September 28, 1953, when the Corporation's authority to make new loan commitments expired, an additional $4.3 million was authorized.

During the balance of fiscal year 1954, the Corporation will carry on an intensified program to liquidate its remaining loans and investments. It is estimated that $204.1 million will be liquidated in fiscal year 1954, in addition to $83.1 million expected from scheduled repayments on loans and other investments.

It is estimated that about $408 million in assets will be transferred to the Treasury on June 30, 1954. During fiscal year 1955, the Secretary of the Treasury will continue to liquidate loans and investments in advance of maturity dates, and it is estimated that $112.2 million will be recovered. In addition, $67.2 million is expected from scheduled repayments on loans and other investments.

ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES

Administrative expenses were $10,857,725 in fiscal year 1953, and are estimated at $6,285,000 for fiscal year 1954, and at $3,500,000 for 1955.

FINANCING OPERATIONS

During fiscal year 1954, realizations upon assets will exceed the amounts required for disbursement on outstanding commitments and borrowings from the Treasury will be reduced accordingly by an estimated $122.8 million. Continued liquidation in fiscal year 1955 will realize sufficient funds to retire all borrowings from the Treasury. In addition, it is estimated that $7.5 million of 1954 income will be paid to the Treasury as a dividend in fiscal year 1955.

SMALLER WAR PLANTS CORPORATION

Under Executive Order 9665 the assets of the Smaller War Plants Corporation were transferred to Reconstruction Finance Corporation for collection or disposal. The $1,566,818 in unliquidated assets remaining on June 30, 1953, consisted of loans, notes and accounts receivable, and property acquired in liquidation of loan indebtedness.

It is expected that these assets will be reduced to $1,050,000 by June 30, 1954. The liquidation of the remaining assets will be continued by the Treasury during fiscal year 1955, and it is estimated that their value as of June 30, 1955, will be $800,000.

It is estimated that $1,500,000 in liquidation proceeds will be paid into the Treasury in fiscal year 1954 and $500,000 in fiscal year 1955.

INTRODUCTORY STATEMENT

In accordance with section 104 of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Liquidation Act, all of the functions of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation under section 409 of the Federal Civil Defense Act were transferred to the Secretary of the Treasury on September 28, 1953. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to purchase securities or make loans (including participations therein and guarantees thereof) to aid in financing projects for civil defense purposes upon certification by the Federal Civil Defense Administrator. Such investments are limited to a total of $250 million outstanding at any one time. The activities authorized are financed by borrowings from the Treasury.

ANALYSIS OF PROGRAM

At the close of fiscal year 1953, loans totaling $5,718,000 had been authorized. Of this, $1,168,000 had been disbursed and $5,000 had been repaid. All of the loans authorized have been to assist in financing the construction of hospitals.

It is anticipated that five loans each year will be authorized during fiscal years 1954 and 1955. Disbursements on outstanding loan authorizations are estimated to be $2,300,000 in fiscal year 1954 and $3,500,000 in fiscal year 1955. Loan repayments are estimated as $95,000 and $180,000 for fiscal years 1954 and 1955, respectively.

ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES

Administrative expenses are estimated at $50,000 for 1954 and for 1955.

FINANCING OPERATIONS

During fiscal year 1953, a total of $1,200,000 was borrowed from the Treasury. Additional borrowings of $2,250,000 and $3,250,000 are estimated for fiscal years 1954 and 1955, respectively. No repayments of borrowings are anticipated before fiscal year 1956.

OPERATING RESULTS

During fiscal year 1953, the program resulted in a loss of $41,500. With greater interest income in fiscal years 1954 and 1955, it is estimated that a net income of $13,000 and $95,500 will result for those years, respectively.

PURPOSE AND FINANCIAL ORGANIZATION

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing designs, engraves, and prints currency, bonds, stamps, commissions, certificates, and various other forms of engraved documents.

The Bureau operates under a working capital fund of $3,250,000 established in accordance with the provisions of Public Law 656, approved August 4, 1950. All work is performed on a reimbursable basis, and business-type accounting and budget procedures are employed.

ANALYSIS OF BUDGET PROGRAM

The anticipated work volume is based on estimates of requirements submitted by the agencies served. The program comprises the following activities:

1. Engraving and printing—(a) Currency.—It is expected that the level of production in 1955 will be substantially lower than that for 1953 and 1954.

(b) Stamps.—A slight increase is anticipated in 1955 as compared with 1954 due primarily to a request for 166,450,000 additional postage stamps.

(c) Paper checks, commissions, certificates, etc.—The total workload for 1955 is substantially the same as that for 1954.

(d) Securities.—The anticipated decrease in production in 1955 as compared with 1954 is due to a reduction in the requirements of the Bureau of the Public Debt for 3,743,000 savings bonds. This decrease is offset to some extent by requests from other agencies for an additional 55,000 miscellaneous bonds, debentures, etc.

2. Operation and maintenance of the incinerator and space utilized by other agencies.—Charges are made to other agencies, on an actual cost basis, for use of the incinerator and for the cost of maintenance services provided for the space which they occupy in the Bureau's buildings.

3. Purchase of card checks.—Because the Bureau is not equipped to manufacture punchcard check forms, purchases are made from a commercial source. Estimated procurement is based on estimates of requirements submitted by agencies served.

FINANCIAL RESULTS

The net surplus of $176,118 which accrued during the fiscal year 1953 will be returned to the general fund of the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts in accordance with the provisions of Public Law 656 of August 4, 1950.

Coast Guard Supply Fund

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

General stores material, uniform clothing, and commissary supplies are procured under this revolving fund which is reimbursed as issues are made (14 U. S. C. 650). During fiscal year 1953 a decrease of $200,448 resulted in the fund, due principally to loss from revaluation of inventories of uniform clothing. During 1954 it is estimated that the receipts from sales will be $15,000 less than cost of goods sold due principally to loss from revaluation of inventories of uniform clothing. During 1955 it is estimated that receipts from sales will be entirely offset by cost of goods sold.

EXPLANATORY STATEMENT

General Statement

The District of Columbia constitutes a political entity in which are exercised not only municipal but also county and State functions, such as public education, administration of justice, promotion of family welfare, care of the indigent, custody of mental defectives and delinquents, protection of the interests of labor, metropolitan area planning, etc.

Congress is empowered "to exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever" on behalf of the District of Columbia as the seat of government of the United States. Congress acts in municipal matters as a city council, and in dealing with the broader aspects of the local government, as a county board and a State legislature. In this connection, Congress enacts the measures to provide revenues from residents of the District and appropriates the money thus raised to carry on the government of the District of Columbia. District revenues from all sources are covered into the United States Treasury and credited either to the general fund, the highway fund, the water fund, the motor-vehicle parking fund, or a trust fund, and no expenditure can be made from any of these funds, other than trust funds, without specific appropriation by Congress.

Under the law the District estimates of appropriation are submitted to the Bureau of the Budget for incorporation in the Budget of the United States. The Bureau, however, does not examine the estimates of the District in minute detail, but confines its attention more to matters of policy which concern the Federal Government and present and proposed local revenue measures required to balance the District budget.

The detailed estimates for the fiscal year 1955 include partial requests for the first year of the proposed public works program. That construction will extend over a 10-year period and will provide increased water supply, sewers, highway and bridges, schools, hospitals, and other buildings. The method of financing the balance of the initial year's work under this program will be explained under the segment of this statement pertaining to proposed legislation for individual funds.

The revised appropriation structure in this chapter reflects the changes resulting from the basic completion of Reorganization Plan No. 5 of 1952. These consolidations, together with the combining of other appropriations, including proposals for later transmission, will reduce the number of appropriation items from 63 to 32. Furthermore, the revision provides for the grouping of each estimate under the heading of either operating expenses or capital outlay.

The estimates of revenues for the general, highway, water, the proposed sanitary sewage works, motor vehicle parking, and trust funds are found in supporting statement No. 1. Estimates of appropriations for the same funds are shown in supporting statement No. 2. Attention is also directed to the summary of operations table at the beginning of this chapter.

GENERAL FUND

Revenues accruing to the general fund of the District of Columbia are used to finance the administrative offices, retirement funds, schools, libraries, police, fire, health, recreation, welfare, corrections, sanitation, public buildings construction, and other activities. These revenues are realized from real, personal, and other property taxes; sales and gross receipts taxes on alcoholic beverages, cigarettes, insurance, motor vehicles, public utilities, gross sales, and other sources; licenses and permits; individual, unincorporated business, and corporation income taxes; inheritance and estate taxes; certain earnings and miscellaneous revenues; and the Federal payment. The largest item of revenue in the general fund comes from realty and personal property taxes, and amounts to approximately 45 percent of the total revenues from current legislation. The levy is based on an estimated assessed valuation of $2,355,400,000 taxed at the rate of $2.15 per $100 for realty and $2 per $100 for personal property. The estimated valuation is $73 million higher in 1955 than for the current year.

Out of current legislation.—The estimate of general-fund revenue availability on the present tax base for the fiscal year 1955, including the presently authorized Federal payment of $11 million and a surplus of $4,557.165 from 1954, totals $121,722,165, which amount is $4,230 greater than the estimated funds required for 1955.

General-fund estimates of appropriation for 1955, based on current legislation, are $116,787,935 and show an overall decrease from 1954 of $11,099,567 (approximately 9 percent). This decrease results from an increase in operating expenses of $4,611,133 and a decrease in capital outlay of $15,710,700. The increase in operating expenses, amounting to about 4 percent results largely from increases for wage scale employees, retirement funds, schools, health, and welfare. The only capital item included is for the completion of an incinerator now under construction.

Out of proposed legislation.—Because revenue availability permits only the foregoing estimates, the Commissioners propose to submit legislation to modify the present tax structure of the District of Columbia and to provide for other revenue increases. This proposal will provide for increased taxes on alcoholic beverages, beer, cigarettes, insurance, individual income taxes, and a sales tax on communications. The plan will abolish the present personal property tax on household articles and substitute a flat-fee type of automobile weight tax for the current registration fee and personal property tax on automobiles. It is estimated that these changes, together with other minor alterations to present legislation, will produce $3,915,000 in the fiscal year 1955, if effective before June 1, 1954. It is further proposed to request authorization to increase the Federal payment from $11 million to $20 million and to provide loan authority for the public works program. If these measures are enacted, as requested, a loan of $1,700,000 will be required to consummate the first year of the general-fund portion of the public works program.

Including the loan, the additional revenue availability under the recommendation will amount to $14,615,000. Subsequent to these authorizations, there is proposed for later transmission operating expense items amounting to $990,000, which will include funds for opening a new firehouse and an incinerator, additional school teachers, increases in the rates for medical charities, and other necessary items. However, proposed legislation provides for the establishment of a new sanitary sewage works fund. If this new fund is authorized, $1,051,000 for the operation of sanitary sewers, now included in the general fund, will be paid from the sanitary sewage works fund resulting in a net decrease of $61,000 in the operating expenses of the general fund.

Capital outlay items proposed for later transmission are estimated at $19,691,760. This is distributed between $17,844,760 for items included in the public works program and $1,847,000 for other items such as debt repayment, permanent improvements to school buildings, electrical construction, new restrooms at the National Zoological Park, and major improvements. The amount for the program, of which $6,650,000 will be financed in 1956, will provide schools, hospital buildings, a new branch library, welfare institutions, and stormwater sewers.

HIGHWAY FUND

Highway-fund revenues are realized from a gasoline tax, motor-vehicle fees of various types, paving assessments, and a part of the automotive registration and weight tax referred to under the general fund.

Out of current legislation.—The estimated revenues from current sources for the fiscal year 1955, plus available surpluses, total $12,675,000, which will be $366,246 in excess of the estimated obligations.

Out of proposed legislation.—The Commissioners propose to submit legislation to increase the gasoline tax from 5 cents to 6 cents per gallon and to transfer vault rentals from the general fund to the highway fund. These increases, together with a loan authorization of $3,357,000, will provide additional revenue availability of $4,357,000 and permit subsequent transmission of estimates to complete the first year's projects of the public works program for streets and bridges.

WATER FUND

Water-fund revenues are derived from the sale of water to residents of the District of Columbia and to Arlington County, Va.; from the Federal payment; and from miscellaneous receipts.

Out of current legislation.—The total revenue availability in the water fund, including the Federal payment and loans of $3,400,000 under the present authorization, amount to $9,578,000 which is sufficient to finance the first year of the public works program and leave a balance of $9,299.

Out of proposed legislation.—Although the present water loan authorization is $23 million, this amount is insufficient to finance the water works program in subsequent years. The Commissioners propose to increase the authorization to $35 million. They further intend to request authority to increase water rates by approximately 22 percent, increase water assessments, and enable the Federal Government to pay for the full value of water consumed. This additional income will increase the revenue of the water fund by $928,000 in 1955, but since the 1955 program will not be changed the loan requirement in that year can be reduced from $3,400,000 to $2,500,000 by passage of this legislation.

SANITARY SEWAGE WORKS FUND

Out of proposed legislation.—The Commissioners propose to request legislation to establish this new fund. Revenues will accrue from a charge based on the amount of water used by both private consumers and the Federal Government. There will also be an assessment for installation of new sanitary sewers and payments from the State of Maryland. A loan authorization of $5 million will be requested, of which $1,925,000 will be required in 1955.

This total revenue availability for 1955 will amount to $3,963,000. The operating expense cost for sanitary sewers of $1,051,000 will be transferred from the general fund to this proposed new fund, and $2,790,000 will be available for the first year of the public works program for sanitary sewers.

MOTOR-VEHICLE PARKING FUND

This fund is derived from parking meter receipts and no change is proposed for 1955. It will be used to pay the administrative expenses of that agency and in future years to provide for the acquisition, creation and operation of public off-street parking facilities. It is estimated that surplus at the end of 1955 will amount to $1,183,073.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

This department assists the Board of Commissioners in the discharge of its administrative and fiscal duties and other executive responsibilities. Provision is made in the estimates for 1955 for increases in staff to provide for more intensive enforcement of tax laws and review of the operating efficiency of departments with particular emphasis on accounting, housekeeping, internal auditing, management, and personnel functions.

1. Administration.—This covers direction of the department and overall supervision of the District's administrative and fiscal matters.

2. Administrative services.—Central facilities and guidance is provided the departments in such matters as mail, central files, space, property management, motor vehicle assignments, official travel, binding and reproduction, and other general housekeeping duties.

3. Budget.—Budgetary instructions, policies, and procedures are developed; review of department estimates is coordinated; and the budget document and reports on the execution of the budget are prepared.

4. Finance.—Central guidance is given the administration of tax laws, collection of revenues, and accounting for expenditures.

5. Internal auditing.—The comprehensive audit reviews and evaluates the internal control of program of the departments. In 1955 emphasis will be placed upon training of audit employees and improvement of methods of comprehensive audit.

6. Management.—Programs to improve departmental administration and organization are developed and coordinated.

7. Personnel.—Personnel policies are recommended and procedures formulated, and surveillance is maintained over operation of the District personnel regulations. Direct personnel services are rendered where functions have not been delegated to the departments. The District's employee disability compensation and safety programs are conducted.

8. Procurement.—Procurement operations are administered and coordinated with specific emphasis on centralized procurement service. Certain administrative functions are performed in regard to construction contracts such as maintenance of documents, centralized information service, etc.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

1. Control of alcoholic beverages.—Controls cover the manufacture, sale, storage, importation, exportation, and transportation of alcoholic beverages. During 1955 a more extensive investigation program is necessary to conform with Senate Report 1982, 82d Congress, dated September 1952, and Public Law 85, 83d Congress, dated June 29, 1953.

2. Administration of parole laws.—The policies and procedures to be utilized in the consideration of parole cases are prescribed, and prisoners released on parole and good-time release are supervised. Recommendations are made to the court for a reduction in the minimum sentence of a prisoner when appropriate.

3. Death investigations.—Investigations are made of all violent deaths and certain unattended natural deaths, and post-mortem examinations and inquests performed when necessary. An increase of 921 cases was experienced in 1953 and a slight increase in 1954 and 1955 is anticipated.

4. Administration of insurance laws.—Approximately 600 insurance companies and their representatives are licensed annually, resulting in the collection of approximately $2,000,000 per annum in premium taxes, fees, and penalties. Through the financial examination of companies, insurance rates are established and regulated.

5. Enforcement of wage and safety laws.—The Minimum Wage Law and Industrial Safety Law, and the Hours Law are enforced to protect workers in private industry. The estimate provides an expansion of the safety program in 1955.

6. Recording of deeds.—Instruments such as land titles, chattels, corporation papers, and automobile liens are recorded, arranged, cataloged and processed.

7. Investigation and regulation of public utilities.—Utility rates are regulated through investigations of operating costs and expenditures, security issues, costs of property, and depreciation rates. Inspections are made to assure adequacy of facilities and standards of service, accuracy of electric and gas meters, quality of gas, and adequacy of taxicab insurance.

8. Planning and zoning.—Studies and recommendations are made in connection with regulations on the size and use of buildings, structures, and land in the District; appeals to the board of zoning are handled; and information is provided the public on zoning classification and related regulations. The program for 1955 contemplates an increased workload in connection with the revision of regulations and map of the District of Columbia.

9. Administration of rent control laws.—Rent control legislation ended in the fiscal year 1954.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

1. Administration.—Provision is made for management and administration of the library system.

2. Processing.—The processing departments order, catalog, prepare, and maintain the books, magazines, films, records, documents, pamphlets, and other materials.

3. Public service.—This covers services to the public by the central library, 14 branches, and 1 bookmobile. The library system complements the school program by presenting the means for self-education; by giving service to college and graduate students; by providing materials for adult education; and by serving as an information center on all subjects of interest to a cosmopolitan community.

4. Maintenance and operation of buildings and grounds.—The library buildings, grounds, and motor vehicles are maintained.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

1. Administration.—Provision is made for the management, administrative, and business functions of the Department.

2. Planning and development.—Provision is made for the planning, development, and maintenance of recreation areas, and liaison with the service agency, National Capital Parks. It is contemplated that the demands made upon this activity will increase during the year.

3. Program.—A well-rounded program of public recreation activities is provided for the children and adults of the city. Last year leadership was provided on 147 areas throughout the District. This year leadership must be (1) provided on two new areas recently completed, (2) strengthened on others where program demands have increased, and (3) added to 5 new areas presently being developed. Facilities provided include playfields, playgrounds, shelter buildings and community houses, tennis courts, swimming pools, and the use of certain school facilities after school hours for indoor and outdoor recreation programs for children and adults. Programs include varied physical activities, creative, mental, service and social activities. Last year's attendance at all program activities for the entire department numbered over 14 million. Equal or greater attendance is expected this year and in fiscal 1955.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

1. Administration.—In addition to general supervision and administrative services, the telephone and radio communication facilities and the fire-alarm system are maintained.

2. Firefighting.—The present firefighting force of 30 engine companies, 16 truck companies, 2 rescue squads and 1 fireboat is rated class 1 by the National Board of Fire Underwriters. This highest rating is shared only by three other cities in the Nation.

3. Fire prevention.—A staff of 35 officers and inspectors enforce laws and regulations pertaining to fire protection through rigid inspections of buildings, structures, storage facilities, etc. Cause and origin of fires are investigated and appropriate records maintained. In 1953, fire loss dropped from $2.47 to $2.31 per capita which is well below the median of $3.42 for cities of comparable size.

4. Apparatus maintenance.—A small staff of officers, members and mechanics maintain and repair fire apparatus, and other vehicles, tools and appliances. Periodic tests of hose, tools and apparatus are conducted and supervised. Technical specifications for purchase of new fire apparatus are prepared.

5. Training.—A full-time staff of five instructors and members instructs new recruits in fire-fighting procedure, and all fire-fighting personnel in hydraulics, fire pump, and aerial ladder operation. It evaluates new firefighting appliances and techniques and makes appropriate recommendations for their consideration and adoption. It also conducts inservice training at company quarters of personnel assigned thereto.

6. Police and fire medical services.—Medical treatment is provided for personnel of the Metropolitan Police Department, White House and Park Police, and Fire Department. Such service is rendered at the clinic, patients' homes, hospitals, and scenes of emergency. Physical examinations are made of all civilian eligibles being considered for appointment to the District Government service.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

1. Administration.—The planning and functioning of Federal and District agencies, private enterprise, and the general public, in the local civil defense program is coordinated. The public is informed on means of personal survival, and stimulated to volunteer for participation in civil defense. Selected individuals are given intensive technical training to enable them to train others in civil defense procedures. Plans are constantly changed and improved, based on results of studies of development of new weapons and other factors.

2. Attack warning.—Air raid warnings received from air defense control centers of the Air Force are disseminated to the public of the District of Columbia and to civil defense authorities of 5 Maryland and 2 Virginia counties and the cities of Alexandria and Falls Church, Va. Communications necessary to control and direct civil defense forces following a disaster are installed and in operation. During fiscal year 1954 the warning system in the District of Columbia will be expanded to provide complete coverage.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

1. Juvenile Court.—The court has exclusive jurisdiction in matters involving dependent and delinquent children, and has concurrent jurisdiction with the United States District Court in matters of support of legitimate family members in destitute circumstances. During the last fiscal year there were 12,155 court hearings, an increase of approximately 2,200 over the previous year and 5,351 complaints involving 3,739 children, delinquent and dependent, were processed. Complaints in adult support cases numbered 2,495 and in paternity cases 755. Money collected and disbursed from support orders and fines amounted to $393,869.67 in 1953. Based on the last several years, it is probable that there will be an approximate 15 percent increase in volume in the coming year.

2. Municipal Court.—The court has original jurisdiction concurrently with the United States District Court with respect to violations of municipal ordinances, and crimes and offenses not punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary, except libel, conspiracy, and violations of the post office and pension laws of the United States. It has exclusive jurisdiction of civil actions, including counterclaims and cross-claims, in which the claimed value of personal property or the debt or damages claimed does not exceed $3,000. During the fiscal year 1953, there were 168,486 new cases filed in the court and the cash income from fees, fines and forfeitures amounted to $1,532,847. An increase in the number of cases is expected in 1954 and 1955.

3. Municipal Court of Appeals.—Appeals from the municipal and juvenile courts are heard and decided. Applications for allowance of appeal are considered from the small claims branch, and in criminal proceedings where the penalty is less than $50. The number of cases appealed ranges between 150 and 200 each year. It is expected that the 3 judges of this court will terminate approximately 170 appeals, during this fiscal year.

4. District of Columbia Tax Court.—Appeals from assessments made by the taxing authority of the District are heard and decided. The Court disposed of 97 appeals, of which 11 involved inheritance taxes, 22 franchise and income taxes, 18 excise taxes, 19 sales and use taxes, 20 real estate taxes and 8 personal property taxes. Refunds in the amount of $107,959.13 were ordered. A continued substantial increase is expected in the number of new tax cases to be filed by taxpayers during the fiscal year 1955.

5. United States courts.—Provision is made for payment of services rendered the District by the United States Courts (United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit and the United States District Court for the District of Columbia); the Department of Justice (offices of the United States attorney and the United States marshal for the District of Columbia). The General Services Administration is reimbursed for one-half of the cost of operation, maintenance, and repair of the Federal Courts Building.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

1. Executive direction.—This covers planning and broad control of institutions and services of the Department.

2. Custody and care of prisoners.—It is estimated that an average of 3,800 prisoners will be confined during 1955, an increase of 450 over 1954. Exclusive of employees' salaries for 1955, 74.6 cents is provided per day for each prisoner, the same as provided for 1954. Reimbursement is received for Federal prisoners maintained in institutions of the Department. During 1953, reimbursement in the amount of $280,946 was received for the support of an average daily number of 284 Federal prisoners. For 1955, reimbursement in the amount of $286,225 has been estimated for the support of approximately 290 prisoners.

3. Maintenance and operation of institutions.—This activity provides for the operation of four institutions, the jail division in Washington, the reformatory division for men, the reformatory division for women and the workhouse division for men. The present normal capacity of the institutions in 3,400. Plans to meet the additional needs of the increasing populations through expansion at one of the institutions is presented in the capital outlay estimates.

4. Support of District prisoners in Federal institutions.—This covers the cost of maintaining adult District prisoners in Federal correctional institutions. During 1953, a daily average of approximately 585 District prisoners were maintained at an average daily cost of $3.90. For 1955, it is estimated that the number will level off at slightly less than the 1953 average number.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

1. Administration.—This includes supervision of the department and administrative services.

2. Office of consultative services.—This operation includes the investigation of applicants for child placing agencies; promotion of inservice training programs; planning and coordinating social service programs; developing treatment standards; and coordinating research and statistical activities and volunteer services.

3. Public assistance division.—Assistance programs administered are aid to blind, aid to dependent children, aid to disabled, old age assistance, aid to unmarried mothers, and general public assistance. Provision is also made for the District's share of a federally operated program to rehabilitate vocationally the handicapped and disabled.

4. Child welfare division.—Protection and care are afforded homeless dependent and neglected children and children in danger of becoming delinquent; consultative services are given where advisable; and studies dealing with child health and welfare are conducted.

5. Home for aged and infirm.—Institutional care is given indigent aged and incapacitated residents. The 1955 increase over 1954 will complete the staffing and maintenance of a new 344-bed infirmary.

6. Receiving home for children.—Detention facilities are maintained for children under 18 years of age who have been charged with delinquent acts or are being held as witnesses, fugitives or otherwise.

7. Junior village.—Facilities are provided for the temporary custody, training, and care of dependent and neglected children of 6 months to 14 years of age.

8. Municipal lodging house.—Overnight care is provided to homeless indigent men.

9. Temporary home for soldiers and sailors.—Temporary lodging facilities are provided, including meals, to veterans who are without resources and are in this city with reference to claims or other activities connected with their military service.

10. Children's center.—The District training school provides facilities for the care and treatment of mentally ill beneficiaries of the District committed by the United States District Court, in an effort to prepare them for safe and useful community life within the limits of their capacity. The facilities include the operation of a farm wherein the inmates derive therapeutic benefits in addition to the produce value supplied to the institution. The increase for 1955 over 1954 will remodel kitchen facilities and convert the water supply facility. The industrial

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

This department administers the laws with respect to the control of construction, use, erection, maintenance, repair, inspection and removal of all buildings and their appurtances, within the District of Columbia, with the exception of public buildings or premises owned by the United States.

1. Administration.—In addition to administrative and management services, this covers the initiation and review of existing regulations and preparation of new or revised regulations governing the department's activities; the preparation of fee schedules; and the preparation of procedural manuals for licensing, permit issuance and inspection.

2. Inspection.—Applications and plans for new construction, alteration or repairs, and mechanical equipment and appurtenances installed in or on buildings are examined and approved and inspections are made to assure that performed work is in conformance with the applicable legal requirements. The standard weights and measures law is enforced and the municipal markets supervised and operated, including plant protection, police enforcements, repair and collections.

3. License and permit.—Licenses and permits are issued for the operation of businesses; building and certain other types of construction and alteration or repair; building use; and other miscellaneous matters requiring a license or permit. Central files are maintained for all divisions.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

1. Administration.—This covers administrative and management services.

2. Planning, design, and engineering.—Provision is made for design, engineering and landscaping services in connection with improvement programs and field surveys and traffic analysis for planning purposes.

3. Care of trees and parking.—This covers the propagation, planting and maintenance of trees and shrubs along highway facilities and the maintenance of horticultural features of grounds and public parkings.

4. Electrical.—The electrical facilities of the Highway Department are designed, constructed, and installed. Electrical engineering services are provided to other departments. Telephone, radio, telegraph, police patrol, fire alarm and air raid warning systems, electric traffic signals and parking meters are installed and maintained. Radio dispatching equipment and the District switchboard are operated. Electrical apparatus and installations on public space are inspected.

5. Construction and maintenance of streets.—Streets, sidewalks, and alleys are constructed and maintained. Analysis and tests of materials are performed and improved specifications for paving mixes developed. Assistance is provided in snow removal and street sanding operations. Contract and force account work in construction and maintenance of streets is inspected.

6. Construction and maintenance of bridges.—The construction of bridges, retaining walls, tunnels, culverts, viaducts, wharves, and railroad bridges is supervised and inspected. Municipally owned bridges and structures are maintained, guarded, operated, and inspected for safety and control of the maximum loads.

7. Mobile equipment.—The policies, procedures, and standards for the maintenance and repair of vehicular and construction equipment are established and repair shops are operated.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

1. Administration.—In addition to executive direction and administrative and management services, this covers representation of the District on the Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin.

2. Planning, design, and engineering.—Programs, drawings, specifications, cost estimates, and construction contracts for capital improvements of the District sanitary engineering facilities are prepared. Information is furnished to the public on sanitary engineering facilities and their availability.

3. Sanitation.—This covers cleaning of streets and alleys, including coordination of snow removal and the collection and disposal of ashes, garbage, and rubbish.

4. Equipment.—Four garages and a repair shop are maintained and operated. Programs and standards for the maintenance and repair of approximately 665 pieces of automotive and construction equipment are developed and administered.

5. Construction and repair.—Supervision is given the construction of sewerage and water distribution facilities, including mains, reservoirs, tanks, pumping stations, sewerage treatment plant additions, etc., and major repairs are made to the sewer and water systems of the District. Surveys are performed and detailed drawings made of finished work.

6. Sewer operations.—The sewerage system of the District is operated and maintained, including the main sewage pumping station, the sewage treatment plant, 4 auxiliary sewage pumping stations, and 5 automatic stations for highway underpasses.

7. Water operations.—Water processed by the Corps of Engineers, Department of the Army, is received and pumped to storage at proper elevations for distribution throughout the District and qualified adjacent areas.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The Washington Aqueduct, under the control of the Chief of Engineers, United States Army, provides purified water to the District of Columbia, Arlington County and Falls Church, Va., and for certain Federal establishments in the adjacent environs.

1. Administration.—This covers executive direction and administrative and management services.

2. Purification.—During 1953 there were processed, purified and fluoridated 60.36 billion gallons of water through two filtration plants, and 5,773 tons of alum sirup were manufactured. 8,816 tons of chemicals were applied, including 449 tons of sodium silicofluoride. Quality control was maintained, including laboratory examination for chemical, bacteriological and fluorine content of approximately 95,000 water samples collected from 135 sampling points.

3. Pumping.—Water is pumped from the Potomac River for processing through the Dalecarlia and McMillan filter plants, and to the distribution system. Total energy consumed in 1953 was 35,398,040 kilowatt-hours of which 3,640,000 kilowatt-hours were generated by the hydro station and 31,758,040 kilowatt-hours were purchased. Demand requirements were 63,526 kilowatts.

4. Transmission.—Approximately 10 miles of force mains transmit water to 5 underground water service reservoirs for storage and subsequent distribution in the District and Arlington County Systems.

5. Maintenance.—In 1953, 124,800 man-hours were used for normal operating repairs to plant and 27,040 man-hours for normal plant betterments. Twenty-three plant pumping units and 135 pieces of mobile equipment of various types were maintained.

6. Collection.—Intake of water at Great Falls, 14 miles from the city, is accomplished by the operation, including removal of ice and debris, of screens and gates by which the water enters the transmission system.

7. Construction.—The water supply system plant expansion program, period (1950–70), includes the force account and contract construction of capital outlay and miscellaneous betterment projects.

8. Engineering.—This activity prepares reports, designs, specifications and project cost estimates and supervises architect-engineer services, in conformance with increased water supply system expansion program contained in House Document 480 and furnishes like services as required for operating the existing plant.

Total obligations	6,718,749	12,951,043	1,365,000

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

1. Water distribution.—In fiscal 1953, 83,103 linear feet of water mains were laid to provide service for 1,634 new buildings and to reinforce and supplement the grid system in areas where demands for normal use and fire protection have outstripped existing facilities. During 1954 construction is proceeding at a slightly higher rate than 1953, and it is expected to continue at about the same rate for 1955.

2. Sewage disposal.—In fiscal 1953, 42,148 linear feet of sanitary sewers were laid to provide service for 1,634 new buildings. During 1954 construction is proceeding at about 50 percent higher rate than 1953. The general layout of plant additions for the sewage-treatment plant has been completed for all secondary treatment facilities, plans and specifications for the blower equipment have been completed, and those for the blower building, aeration tanks, final settling tanks, and connecting conduits are under preparation.

3. Storm drainage.—In fiscal 1953, 38,903 linear feet of storm-water sewers were laid, and 506 storm-water catch basins with 12,467 linear feet of connections were built. During 1954 construction is proceeding at approximately twice the 1953 rate. Long-range planning indicates a need for at least $160,000,000 expenditure to bring the system up to requirements.

4. Refuse and trash disposal.—Incinerator No. 3, now under construction on Mount Olivet Road NE. near West Virginia Avenue, will be continued in 1955. No further expansion is contemplated in the immediate future.

5. Acquisition of lands	4,956	----------	----------
Obligations incurred	488,070	14,834,415	5,970,000

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

1. Water collection.—The average discharge of the Potomac River at the intakes is 7,500 million gallons daily. Present plant maximum intake capacity is 216 million gallons daily from the Potomac River. The Little Falls pumping station, dam and tunnel will increase plant intake capacity initially by 450 million gallons daily and ultimately by 600 million gallons daily.

2. Water purification.—The filtration plant capacities at present are as follows: McMillan, 125 million gallons daily, and Dalecarlia, 109 million gallons daily. The new Dalecarlia Filter and Chemical Buildings will increase Dalecarlia by 56 million gallons daily, increasing total plant capacity from 234 million gallons daily to 290 million gallons daily.

3. Water storage.—Existing filtered water storage capacity is 80 million gallons which results in 48 million gallons daily working capacity. The completion of a 30-million-gallon reservoir at Dalecarlia and the Third High Reservoir at Reno (1st half) will increase the filtered water storage capacity to 130 million gallons and the working capacity to 70 million gallons daily.

4. Water transmission.—This activity includes the two main pumping stations at Dalecarlia and McMillan, the booster pumps at Dalecarlia, Georgetown, McMillan east shaft, and the hydroelectric plant. Also included is the transmission of potable water in force mains to the various service reservoirs in the District of Columbia and to Arlington County, Va., and the installation of meters to gage water consumption by the Federal Government.

5. Acquisition of lands.—The safeguarding of Washington Aqueduct facilities requires the acquisition of essential land parcels.

GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 2. Except as otherwise provided herein, all vouchers covering expenditures of appropriations contained in this Act shall be audited before payment by or under the jurisdiction only of the accounting officer for the District of Columbia and the vouchers as approved shall be paid by checks issued by the Disbursing Officer without countersignature.

SEC. 3. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall be used to pay the salary or wages of any person who engages in a strike against the Government of the United States or the government of the District of Columbia, or who is a member of an organization of Government employees that asserts the right to strike against the Government of the United States or the government of the District of Columbia, or who advocates, or is a member of an organization that advocates, the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence: Provided, That for the purposes hereof an affidavit shall be considered prima facie evidence that the person making the affidavit has not contrary to the provisions of this section engaged in a strike against the Government of the United States or the government of the District of Columbia, is not a member of an organization of Government employees that asserts the right to strike against the Government of the United States or the government of the District of Columbia, or that such person does not advocate, and is not a member of an organization that advocates, the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence: Provided further, That any person who engages in a strike against the Government of the United States or the government of the District of Columbia or who is a member of an organization of Government employees that asserts the right to strike against the Government of the United States or the government of the District of Columbia, or who advocates, or who is a member of an organization that advocates, the overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence, and accepts employment the salary or wages for which are paid from any appropriation contained in this Act shall be guilty of a felony and, upon conviction, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than one year, or both: Provided further, That the above penalty clause shall be in addition to, and not in substitution for, any other provisions of existing law.

SEC. 4. Whenever in this Act an amount is specified within an appropriation for particular purposes or object of expenditure, such amount, unless otherwise specified, shall be considered as the maximum amount which may be expended for said purpose or object rather than an amount set apart exclusively therefor.

SEC. 5. [Work] Hereafter work performed for repairs and improvements [under appropriations contained in this Act] may be by contract or otherwise, as determined by the Commissioners; and the Commissioners are authorized to establish a working fund for such purposes without fiscal year limitation, said fund to be reimbursed for repairs and improvements performed under that fund from [available appropriations contained in this Act] funds available for these purposes, and payments are authorized to be made to said fund in advance if required by the Director of [Construction] Buildings and Grounds, subject to subsequent adjustment, from [appropriations contained in this Act] funds available for repairs and improvements, and such working fund shall be available for necessary expenses including allowances for privately owned automobiles.

SEC. 6. Appropriations in this Act shall be available, when authorized or approved by the Commissioners, for allowances for privately owned automobiles used for the performance of official duties at 7 cents per mile but not to exceed $22 a month for each automobile, unless otherwise therein specifically provided: Provided, That the total expenditures for this purpose shall not exceed [$62,000] $58,000, excluding the automobile allowances for the deportation of nonresident insane[,] by the Department of Public Health and the transportation of indigent persons[,] and the placing of children by the [Board] Department of Public Welfare.

SEC. 7. Appropriations in this Act shall be available for the payment of dues and expenses of attendance at meetings of organizations concerned with the work of the District of Columbia government, when authorized by the Commissioners: Provided, That the total expenditures for this purpose shall not exceed [$20,000] $25,000.

SEC. 8. The Commissioners are hereby authorized in their discretion to invest and reinvest at any time in United States Government securities, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, any part of the general fund, highway fund, water fund, motor vehicle parking fund, or trust funds, of the District of Columbia, not needed to meet current expenses, to deposit the interest accruing from such investments to the credit of the fund from which the investment was made, and the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to sell or exchange such securities for other Government securities, and deposit the proceeds to the credit of the appropriate fund.

[SEC. 9. Appropriations in this Act shall be available for personal services and, when authorized by the Commissioners or by the purchasing officer and the accounting officer, acting for the Commissioners, printing and binding may be performed by the District of Columbia Division of Printing and Publications without reference to fiscal-year limitations.]

SEC. [10] 9. Appropriations in this Act shall be available, when authorized by the Commissioners, for services as authorized by section 15 of the Act of August 2, 1946 (5 U. S. C. 55a).

SEC. [11] 10. The disbursing officer of the District of Columbia is authorized to advance to officials upon requisitions previously approved by the accounting officer of the District of Columbia, not to exceed at any one time sums of money as follows:

Director of [Weights, Measures, and Markets] Licenses and Inspections, $400, to be used exclusively in connection with investigation of short weights and measures;

Librarian of the Public Library, $50 at the first of each month, for the purchase of certain books, pamphlets, periodicals, newspapers, or other printed materials;

Superintendent of recreation, $4,000, to be used for the expense of conducting activities of the Recreation Board under the trust fund created by the Act of April 29, 1942 (56 Stat. 261);

[Superintendent] Chief of Police, $5,000, to be used in the prevention and detection of crime;

Chief probation officer of the juvenile court, $50, upon requisition previously approved by the judge of the juvenile court, to be expended for travel expenses to secure the return of absconding probationers;

Director, Department of Corrections, $1,000, to be used only in returning escaped prisoners, conditional releasees, parolees, and for the payment of cash gratuities to prisoners on release;

Director of Public Health, $900, to be used for deportation of non-resident insane;

Director of Public Welfare, [$2,000] $1,100, to be used for placing and visiting children, returning parolees and wards of the [Board] Department of Public Welfare, and deportation of non-resident [insane and] indigent persons including maintenance pending transportation;

Superintendent of Schools, $1,000, which shall be used in connection with the central food services.

SEC. [12] 11. Appropriations in this Act shall not be used for or in connection with the preparation, issuance, publication, or enforcement of any regulation or order of the Public Utilities Commission requiring the installation of meters in taxicabs, or for or in connection with the licensing of any vehicle to be operated as a taxicab except for operation in accordance with such system of uniform zones and rates and regulations applicable thereto as shall have been prescribed by the Public Utilities Commission.

SEC. [13] 12. Appropriations in this Act shall not be available for the payment of rates for electric street lighting in excess of those authorized to be paid in the fiscal year 1927, and payment for electric current for new forms of street lighting shall not exceed 2 cents per kilowatt-hour for current consumed.

SEC. [14] 13. All motor-propelled passenger-carrying vehicles (including watercraft) owned by the District of Columbia shall be operated and utilized in conformity with section 16 of the Act of August 2, 1946 (5 U. S. C. 77, 78), and shall be under the direction and control of the Commissioners, who may from time to time alter or change the assignment for use thereof, or direct the alteration or interchangeable use of any of the same by officers and employees of the District, except as otherwise provided in this Act. "Official purposes" shall not apply to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia or in cases of officers and employees the character of whose duties makes such transportation necessary, but only as to such latter cases when the same is approved by the Commissioners. No motor vehicles shall be transferred from the police or fire departments to any other branch of the government of the District of Columbia.

SEC. [15] 14. Appropriations contained in this Act for [highways, sewers, Division of Sanitation, and the Water Division] the Department of Highways and the Department of Sanitary Engineering shall be available for snow [removal] and ice control work when ordered by the Commissioners in writing.

[SEC. 16. The authority of the Commissioners to establish agencies and offices in the government of the District of Columbia pursuant to section 4 of Reorganization Plan No. 5 of 1952, and to effect transfers of unexpended balances of appropriations, allocations, and other funds pursuant to section 5 of said Plan, shall not extend beyond June 30, 1954.]

SEC. [17] 15. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to consolidate under appropriate current account titles the unexpended balances of such unexpired District of Columbia capital outlay appropriations of prior years as may be requested by the Commissioners.

[SEC. 18. The balances of all general-fund and water-fund contract authorizations heretofore granted to the Commissioners which remain unobligated on June 30, 1954, are rescinded.]

[SEC. 19. Operating expenses of the Department of Sanitary Engineering properly chargeable to two or more appropriations available to that Department may be charged initially to an appropriate fiscal year account which is hereby authorized to be established. Advances shall be made to this account in such amounts as determined necessary by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia from appropriations available to the Department of Sanitary Engineering. All charges to this account shall be distributed at least monthly to the applicable appropriations.]

SEC. 16. The Commissioners are authorized to establish a working fund without fiscal-year limitation for the purpose of printing, duplicating, and photographing; and the unexpended balances in the miscellaneous trust fund accounts "Operating Account, Printing" and "Operating Account, Blueprinting" shall be deposited to said working fund; and the fund shall be reimbursed for all services performed thereunder.

INTRODUCTION TO PART III

Part III of the budget contains summary tables on trust and deposit funds, detailed schedules and explanatory statements on the various trust funds, and memorandum information on consolidated working funds.

TRUST AND DEPOSIT FUNDS DISTINGUISHED

The funds which are covered in the summary tables in this part of the budget are of two types, as follows:

Trust funds are those funds which are established to account for receipts which are held in trust by the Government for use in carrying out specific purposes and programs in accordance with a trust agreement or a statute. Within the category of trust funds, there is a small subcategory of trust revolving funds, which are trust funds used to carry on a cycle of business-type operations.

Deposit funds are those funds which are established to account for collections that are either (a) held in suspense temporarily and later refunded or paid into some other fund of the Government, or (b) held by the Government as banker or agent for others, being paid out in lump-sums at the direction of the owner. Such funds are not available for paying salaries, expenses, grants, or other expenditures of the Government.

While the transactions in these groups of funds are a part of the financial program of the Government, the trust and deposit funds are not owned by the Government; hence these transactions are excluded from the budget totals.

TRUST FUND RECEIPTS, AUTHORIZATIONS, AND EXPENDITURES

Basis of stating trust receipts.—Table 10 summarizes trust fund receipts, and table 11 gives figures by agency and account. Such receipts include all money paid into the Treasury to the credit of the trust funds, including contributions to the trust funds from the general fund. Sales and redemptions of investments are excluded (at par value) from receipts, and are listed in Special Analysis I of part IV.

Trust authorizations.—Trust fund receipts must be appropriated before they can be spent. These appropriations are summarized in table 10 and listed in table 12.

Most trust funds are appropriated by permanent law, not requiring further action by Congress. Usually the appropriations equal the receipts of the year. In a few cases receipts of trust funds can be spent only in accordance with appropriations enacted by Congress from year to year. Examples are funds of the Soldiers' Home and the municipal revenues of the District of Columbia. In a few other cases trust fund receipts are permanently appropriated for benefit payments, but limitations on administrative expenses payable out of the trust funds are imposed by annual action of the Congress.

Basis of stating trust expenditures.—Table 10 summarizes the trust fund expenditures, and table 12 gives figures by agency and account. These expenditures are stated on a checks-issued basis, less refunds collected. Net investments in United States Government securities are excluded (at par value) from the figures, and are listed in Special Analysis I of part IV.

Trust revolving funds.—The small group of funds which constitute trust revolving funds constitute an exception to the basis stated immediately above. The collections of trust revolving funds, instead of being taken into the tables as receipts and authorizations, are deducted from expenditures; thus the expenditures of such funds are stated on a net basis.

DEPOSIT FUND EXPENDITURES

Tables 10 and 12 include a figure on deposit fund expenditures. The expenditures of such funds are on a net basis; that is, the collections are deducted from checks issued, and the resulting figure is shown as an expenditure. Checks issued include those written to move money into other funds, as well as those written for refunds and the return of money to depositors. When the collections are larger than the checks issued, the amount shown as an expenditure is a negative item.

NET ACCUMULATION IN TRUST AND DEPOSIT FUNDS

Table 10 shows the net accumulation in all the trust and deposit funds. This represents the result obtained when the trust and deposit fund expenditures are subtracted from the trust receipts of the year. Since trust and deposit funds, as well as Federal funds, affect the total cash balance of the Treasury and the total public debt, the final figures on table 10 are carried forward into table 3 of part I.

DETAIL OF TRUST FUND ESTIMATES

The detailed material following table 12 covers the trust funds which do not require annual action by Congress (those requiring annual authorizations or limitations are in part II). The material here follows the general format of the similar material in part II. However, no appropriation language appears here, and the narrative statement of "Program and performance" usually consists only of an explanation of the source of money for the fund, the purposes for which it is authorized to be spent, and the legal citations.

CONSOLIDATED WORKING FUND ESTIMATES

Consolidated working funds are used to account for advances of moneys from one agency to another, where the advances are for the purpose of providing interagency services of a current nature, usually within the fiscal year in which advanced.

For informational purposes, the details on the consolidated working funds appear at the end of part III of the budget. These schedules are printed to make the budget complete regarding the personal services, other obligations, and work of the various agencies. The breakdown of the obligations of the performing agency is shown here according to the actual object involved—personal services, travel, supplies, etc.

In the appropriation schedules for the agencies purchasing the services (in part II) the total obligation therefor is included in the single object class which reflects the nature of the transaction to that agency, usually "07 Other contractual services." In the portion of part II which relates to the performing agency, a brief schedule shows the computation of net expenditures of all the consolidated working funds of that agency.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Contributed funds are used by the Librarian in the interest of the Library, its collections, or its services for the purposes specified in each case (2 U. S. C. 160; 31 U. S. C. 725s). The three principal purposes are additions to the collections, organization of the collections, and providing reader and reference services.

1. Acquisition of library materials.—During 1953, this included the procurement of rare books and music manuscripts for the Library of Congress, and assistance to Japanese and German libraries in selecting and procuring books for their collections.

2. Organization of the collections.—During 1953, the preparation of the quinquennial of the Author Catalog was financed, other libraries were assisted by providing decimal classification symbols for newly cataloged materials, and the Ben Lindsey and Cordell Hull manuscript collections were organized for use.

3. Reader and reference services.—These services during 1953 included the preparation of bibliographies, indexes, digests, checklists, lectures, surveys of bibliographic services, musical concerts, and recording and furtherance of musical research, composition, performance, and appreciation.

During 1953, receipts for photoduplication services and from sales of sound recordings and obligations against such receipts formerly carried under the Library of Congress gift fund were set up under a separate fund for service fees.

NATIONAL CAPITAL HOUSING AUTHORITY

Operation and Maintenance, Properties Aided By or Leased From Public Housing Administration, National Capital Housing Authority

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Administration.—Under title II of the District of Columbia Alley Dwelling Act, the Authority operates 7,027 dwelling units.

Development.—An additional 3,652 low-rent housing units are being developed. Sale of temporary loan notes in 1955 to finance these units is estimated at $34.5 million.

Operating results.—Net income from the operation of leased low-rent properties, war-housing properties, and veterans' re-use barracks, is paid to the Public Housing Administration. It is planned to dispose of war housing properties and veterans re-use barracks in the near future. As tenants move out, these units are being left vacant with an attendant decrease in income. Corresponding reductions in expense are also being made. Net income from the operation of locally owned low-rent properties constructed under the United States Housing Act, Defense Amendment, and under the United States Housing Act of 1949 is retained by the Authority to meet debt service. Locally owned properties constructed under the United States Housing Act of 1937 will operate at a deficit with Public Housing Administration contributions meeting the difference between income and expense in order to maintain the low-rent characteristics of these properties.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Under the railroad retirement system, workers and their employers make contributions in the form of taxes on wages toward the benefits which will be payable when the worker reaches 65, becomes disabled, or when he dies. These contributions are appropriated to this trust fund and invested in Government securities carrying an interest rate of at least 3 percent. Annuity and benefit payments are paid from this account and annual administrative expenses are derived therefrom. The excess of income over outgo and the annual interest on invested funds are accumulated to provide for the future annuities and benefits being currently earned by workers. When the system reaches maturity, some years hence, the interest on the accumulated investments in the trust fund, together with contributions, should be sufficient to pay the annual cost of earned benefits and the annual administrative cost of operating the system.

The Railroad Retirement Act, as amended by Public Law 234, October 30, 1951, requires a determination by January 1, 1954, of the amount which would place the Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund in the same position in which it would have been on June 30, 1952, if railroad employment after 1936 had been under social security coverage. When the amount is determined a reserve will be established in the railroad retirement account, and beginning in fiscal year 1954 interest for the prior year will be transferred annually to the trust fund. The act also requires financial adjustments between the two funds for railroad service rendered after the fiscal year 1952. These adjustments will likewise be made annually starting in fiscal year 1954.

The present status of the fund is as follows:

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

In addition to the railroad retirement program the Railroad Retirement Board administers an unemployment and sickness insurance system paying unemployment, sickness, and maternity benefits to qualified railroad workers, and operates an employment service program for the purpose of finding jobs for unemployment benefit claimants and of assisting railroads to fill their manpower needs. The administrative costs of this system are provided through a permanent appropriation of 0.2 percent of taxable payroll to this fund. As of June 30 of each year, any sum in this fund in excess of $6,000,000 is transferred to the railroad unemployment insurance account in the unemployment trust fund (45 U. S. C. 361).

1. Maintenance of accounts of employee earnings.—The amounts of insurance payments for unemployment, sickness, and maternity are based upon individual records of earnings. The principal workload is the processing of compensation items which is carried on simultaneously with a like requirement under the retirement program, the costs being shared proportionately between the two programs.

2. Processing and certification for payment of unemployment insurance claims.—This embraces the work of paying unemployment benefits to unemployed railroad workers. Individual claims for unemployment compensation are filed locally and certified for payment through the several regional offices of the Board. The number of claims for unemployment compensation fluctuates widely due to economic changes affecting the railroad industry.

3. Processing and certification for payment of sickness and maternity claims.—Unlike unemployment claims, these claims are filed by mail and certified for payment through the regional offices of the Board. The volume of claims for sickness is relatively stable.

4. Employment service activities.—These are operated by the Board for the purpose of finding jobs for unemployment benefit claimants and of assisting railroads to fill their manpower needs.

5. General administration.—Except for certain basic activities solely supported and concerned only with this program, general administration costs are shared between this program and the retirement program on a measured basis.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The fund, established by appropriation from the general fund of the Treasury, is used to pay adjusted-service certificates issued to veterans of World War I upon maturity or upon demand. The principal of the fund is invested in United States securities and interest income therefrom is also available to make payments. Only a small portion of the certificates remain unpaid (38 U. S. C. 646–647). Of the capital of the fund $500,000 was repaid to the Treasury during fiscal year 1954.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

All premiums paid for national service life insurance and the earned interest are deposited to the credit of the national service life insurance fund. This fund bears the liabilities under insurance outstanding including payment of dividends and refunds of unearned premiums to the policyholders. Payments are made to the fund from the national service life insurance appropriation for (a) payments on death or disability claims which are traceable to the extra hazards of military or naval service, and (b) payments on death and disability claims occurring while waiver of national service life insurance premiums was in effect under provisions of the Servicemen's Indemnity and Insurance Act of 1951. The fund is operated on a commercial basis to the greatest possible extent consistent with special provisions of law. No administrative expenses are charged to the fund. The Secretary of the Treasury invests any amounts not needed in current operations (38 U. S. C. 801–818, 805a). Financial statements for the 1952 calendar year follow:

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Premiums paid for insurance issued under provisions of the War Risk Insurance Act, as amended, and earned interest are deposited to the credit of this fund and are available for payment of losses, dividends, refunds, and other benefits provided by the act.

The military and naval insurance appropriation pays the fund for (a) losses suffered by reason of the extra hazard of military or naval service, and (b) the net amount of risk on all United States Government life insurance death and total permanent disability claims occurring while the insured was under waiver of premium provisions of the Servicemen's Indemnity and Insurance Act of 1951.

The fund is operated on a commercial basis to the greatest extent possible consistent with special provisions of law. No administrative expenses are charged to the fund. The Secretary of the Treasury invests amounts not needed in current operations (38 U. S. C. 443, 511–558, 805a). Financial statements for the 1952 calendar year follow:

FARMERS' HOME ADMINISTRATION

State Rural Rehabilitation Funds, Farmers' Home Administration

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

These funds are being administered by the Department, through the Farmers' Home Administration, under agreements with individual States for use in carrying out the purposes of titles I and II of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act, as amended. State rural rehabilitation corporations were originally established in 43 States through grants by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration. Subsequently, trust agreements were entered into between the individual State corporations and the Secretary for administration by the Secretary. Under Public Law 499 approved May 3, 1950 (40 U. S. C. 440–444), States were required to apply for their assets within a 3-year period which ended May 3, 1953. After the return of the assets, the States had the option of entering into new agreements with the Secretary for administration. As of June 30, 1953, agreements for administration had been completed in all States but Oregon in which case the assets were returned to the State without the negotiation of an agreement.

In States where new agreements have been executed, production and subsistence type loans are made at 5 percent interest. Also, farm ownership type loans are made from these funds, and insured under the regular Farmers' Home Administration insured loan program at 3 percent interest, plus a 1 percent insurance charge. Such loans are held only until they can be sold in blocks to private lenders. The entire assets of the 42 States which have signed new agreements are being administered with the exception of $2,412,591 which was returned to and held by several States for use in rural rehabilitation.

Payments in Lieu of Taxes and Operation and Maintenance Costs, Water Conservation and Utilization Projects

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Under authority of the Bankhead-Black Act, receipts from leasing of project lands owned by the United States are used for payments in lieu of taxes to local Government taxing units and for some operation and maintenance costs of the resettlement features of the projects, until land development for irrigation is completed and farm units are returned to private ownership. Funds not needed for expenses or payments in lieu of taxes are paid into miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury (40 U. S. C. 431–434).

FEDERAL PRISON SYSTEM

Commissary Funds, Federal Prisons

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Commissaries in the Federal prisons sell such articles as cigarettes, tobaccos, candies, toiletries, magazines, and certain hobby-craft materials to prisoners. Total sales for fiscal year 1953 were $1,265,000. From 1931 through 1953, net profits were $744,000. Of that amount, $228,000 has been distributed for benefits to prisoners in the form of certain equipment and expansion of recreational program facilities. The commissary loan program was inaugurated in April 1953 (18 U. S. C. 4284), to assist prisoners in their rehabilitation.

Alien Property Fund, Philippines, World War II

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The Philippine Alien Property Administration was established to vest, manage, and administer enemy-owned property in the Territory of the Philippines and later the Republic of the Philippines. Executive Order 10254, dated June 15, 1951, abolished the Administration and transferred the functions and custody of the vested properties to the Office of Alien Property to take effect at the close of business June 29, 1951. The Office of Alien Property administers this fund in the same manner as it administers the funds for World War I and World War II properties.

Funds returned to the Republic of the Philippines during 1953 amounted to $153,577 and it is anticipated that $500,000 will be transferred in 1954 and $200,000 in 1955. The following statements include the United States dollar equivalent of local currencies of the Philippines which become available without dollar purchase.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Under the Federal old-age and survivors insurance system, workers and their employers make annual contributions in the form of taxes on wages toward the benefits which will be payable when the worker reaches 65 or when he dies. An amount equal to the annual contributions, including interest and penalties, is appropriated to this trust fund for benefit payments and administrative expenses. The excess of income over outgo and annual interest on invested funds are invested in Government securities (42 U. S. C. 401).

INTRODUCTION TO PART IV

Part IV of the budget contains special analyses of budget data and Federal programs. These analyses supplement material appearing in other parts of the budget. Most of the analyses include explanatory material which expands and elaborates these introductory notes.

RECEIPTS FROM AND PAYMENTS TO THE PUBLIC

Special Analysis A presents information on the flow of money between the public and the Government as a whole, including both Federal funds and trust (and deposit) funds. For the purposes of the analysis the Government is defined to include certain quasi-governmental corporations, the transactions of which are otherwise excluded from the budget (such as the Federal Home Loan Banks and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation). The public is defined to include individuals, partnerships, banks, private corporations, the Federal Reserve System, the Postal Savings System, State and local governments, foreign governments, and international organizations. Excluded from the table are interfund transactions, such as payments from Federal funds to trust funds. The few items of Government expenditures which are made in the form of additions to the public debt (such as interest accruing on savings bonds) are reported here only at the time the cash payments are subsequently made, in contrast to the rest of the budget document, where such items are reported as a budget expenditure at the time the increase in the public debt occurs. Noncash receipts from the exercise of the Government's monetary authority (such as seigniorage on silver) are also eliminated.

ANALYSIS OF THE BUDGET BY FUNCTION AND AGENCY

Special Analysis B gives the details for the functional breakdown of authorizations and expenditures which appear in table 1 of part I. It is compiled by regrouping the figures found in the chapter summaries of part II. The code numbers used in the chapter summaries are the key to the grouping found in this analysis.

DETAILS AND EXPLANATION OF BUDGET RECEIPTS

Special Analysis C presents details on the budget receipts summarized in table 1. It includes a statement explaining the receipt estimates, together with a table giving a classification of receipts by source. The figures include receipts of both the general fund and the special funds. The text pertaining to taxes, customs, and refunds is prepared by the Treasury Department.

CHARACTER ANALYSIS OF BUDGET EXPENDITURES

Special Analysis D analyzes budget expenditures in terms of the duration and nature of the benefits derived. Expenditures of an investment type are shown in two major categories—one for acquisition or improvement of Federal assets, and the other for developmental purposes such as additions to State, local, and private assets, and expenditures for research, education, and health. Expenditures yielding current benefits are also grouped in two major categories—one for aids and services to special groups and the other for the remaining current expenditures. Receipts of public enterprise funds are classified according to the same categories as the corresponding expenditures. The analysis is based on gross budget expenditures and receipts of public enterprise funds in each fiscal year. No adjustments are made for depreciation, obsolescence, allowances for potential losses on loans, and other items not reflected in current expenditure data.

Special Analysis E gives detailed information on the major Federal programs involving direct loans, loan insurance, and loan guarantees. It provides data on commitment authority, commitments, expenditures, repayments, and outstanding loans, guarantees, and insurance.

Special Analysis F provides an analysis of the construction activities of the Federal Government. It presents detailed information on direct Federal public works and Federal grants and loans for public works. It gives summary information on Federal financial assistance for certain international public works, semipublic works, and construction by private business and individuals.

Special Analysis G brings together information on those items in the budget which are for Federal aid to State and local governments. It includes grants-in-aid, shared revenues, and loans (including repayable advances).

Special Analysis H shows the amounts devoted to research and development purposes. It includes both basic and applied research and the construction of research facilities.

SELECTED INVESTMENT AND INTERFUND TRANSACTIONS

Special Analysis I sets forth certain investment and interfund transactions which are not reflected in the expenditures or receipts shown elsewhere in the budget. The first two groups of these are the investments by revolving and trust funds in United States Government securities and the net borrowing or repayment of debt to the public by wholly owned corporations. The totals of these transactions, while not a part of budget expenditures or receipts, affect the financing requirements of the Government as a whole, and therefore are carried forward from this analysis to table 3 in part I. The other group of transactions included in this table constitutes the payments by the revolving funds to the general fund, representing the return of capital or the distribution of earnings; such payments are excluded from budget expenditures and budget receipts in parts I and II of the budget in order to avoid inflating both sides of the budget. They are set forth here to make the record complete.

HISTORICAL COMPARISON OF BUDGET FIGURES

Special Analysis J presents a 10-year comparison of budget receipts and expenditures. The receipts are classified by source and the expenditures by function. Technical notes set forth the changes in concepts and classifications since the 1954 budget. As in Special Analysis B, the code numbers appearing in the chapter summaries of part II are the key to the grouping of items in the expenditure section of this analysis.

NOTE.—Detail does not necessarily add to totals because of rounding.

As described on page 1098, this analysis presents information on the flow of money between the public and the Federal Government as a whole. The above statement of Receipts From and Payments to the Public has also been called the "consolidated cash budget" and "cash income and outgo of the United States Treasury."

A detailed explanation of the concepts used in the above table and their relation to the budget totals has been published in preceding budget documents, most recently in the 1953 budget, page 1142. Supporting tables, showing the complete detail of the individual adjustments made to derive the figures in this analysis, can be obtained upon request from the Bureau of the Budget.

In effect, the table of Receipts From and Payments to the Public is a consolidated cash statement of Federal nonborrowing transactions with the public. This is illustrated in the following table which summarizes the adjustments made in deriving the figures for the fiscal year 1953.

Special Analysis B

ANALYSIS OF BUDGET BY FUNCTION AND AGENCY

This special analysis supplies data on new obligational authority by function, and provides supporting detail for the expenditures included in the budget message tables and in tables 1 and 9 of part I.

For each function and subfunction, data are listed by agencies. In order to find the appropriation items which make up the amounts shown for the agency, it is necessary to look in the chapter summary for that agency. Each entry in the chapter summary is coded to indicate the subfunction in which it is classified.

The functional classification used in this Budget summarizes authorizations and expenditures according to the major purposes of the Government. Each function brings together programs which are related to a broad purpose, regardless of the agency responsible. Each major function is divided into several subfunctions which are groups of programs directed to a selected field within the broader category. Changes made in the classification this year are specified in a note in Special Analysis J.

For purposes of this classification each appropriation account and each special fund, revolving fund, and management fund is treated as a unit. Exceptions are made, and accounts are split into two or more categories, in only nine cases. This necessarily involves some close decisions in borderline cases, and it means that programs with secondary significance for some major functions will be included in another category because another purpose predominates in the particular appropriation. Thus, to secure a comprehensive total of all Government programs related to education, or to finance, commerce, and industry, for example, it would be necessary to provide a special tabulation, counting in this category some appropriations which might also be relevant to other categories.

For each major function and subfunction, expenditures are shown on a gross basis, with a deduction for receipts of public enterprise funds to arrive at net budget expenditures for the function or subfunction.

Whereas this special analysis presents both authorizations and expenditures for major functions, subfunctions and agencies over a 3-year period, Special Analysis J shows expenditures for the major functions and subfunctions over a 10-year period. Special Analysis A shows payments to the public, classified by major function. The functional categories are also used in the analyses summarizing Federal activities in public works and other construction, and Federal aid to State and local governments.

EXPLANATION OF THE ESTIMATES OF RECEIPTS

The estimates of receipts from taxes and customs for the current and ensuing fiscal years are prepared in December of each year by the Treasury Department. In general, the estimates of miscellaneous receipts are prepared by the agency depositing the receipts in the Treasury. Estimates in the following discussion are based on existing legislation in accordance with standard budget practice. The estimates assume that business activity, personal income, and corporate profits will continue at substantially their present high levels.

BUDGET RECEIPTS

Actual budget receipts amounted to $64,593 million in the fiscal year 1953. Receipts are expected to increase by $2,846 million in the fiscal year 1954 because of the higher levels of income reflected in receipts for that fiscal year. However, a very sharp decline is estimated for the fiscal year 1955 as tax rate reductions already effective become more fully reflected and because of the effect of additional tax reductions scheduled under present law. Estimated receipts of $61,470 million in the fiscal year 1955 are $5,970 million less than the estimate for 1954 and $3,123 million less than the level of actual receipts in 1953.

The details of the estimated and actual receipts are shown on pages 1114–1117.

Actual receipts in the fiscal year 1953 and estimated receipts in the fiscal year 1954 are compared by major sources in the following table:

Budget receipts (by source)

[In millions of dollars]

Source	1953 actual	1954 estimate	Increase (+) or decrease (−) 1954 over 1953
Individual income tax	32,478.3	33,433.0	+954.7
Corporation income and excess profits taxes	21,594.5	22,809.0	+1,214.5
Excise taxes	9,942.7	10,038.3	+95.6
Employment taxes	4,998.2	5,530.0	+531.8
Estate and gift taxes	891.3	955.0	+63.7
Customs	612.6	590.0	−22.6
Internal revenue not otherwise classified	49.0		−49.0
Miscellaneous receipts	1,828.3	2,312.6	+484.3
Total receipts	72,394.9	75,667.9	+3,273.0
Deduct:
(a) Appropriation to Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund	4,086.3	4,600.0	+513.7
(b) Appropriation to Railroad Retirement account	625.1	640.0	+14.9
(c) Refunds of receipts	3,119.8	2,988.2	−131.6
Adjustment to daily Treasury statement basis	+29.5		−29.5
Budget receipts	64,593.3	67,439.7	+2,846.4

Budget receipts in the fiscal year 1954 are estimated to reach an all-time high despite the part-year effects of reduced tax rates affecting receipts, particularly the individual income tax and several excise taxes. All major sources of receipts with the exception of customs are expected to contribute to the increase.

Individual income tax.—The yield of the individual income tax is shown in the following table:

Source	1953 actual	1954 estimate	Increase (+) or decrease (−) 1954 over 1953
Individual income tax:
Withheld	21,171.8	22,284.0	+1,112.2
Not withheld	11,306.5	11,149.0	−157.5
Total individual income tax	32,478.3	33,433.0	+954.7

Receipts from the income tax withheld are estimated to increase in the fiscal year 1954 since the higher levels of salaries and wages subject to withholding are expected to more than offset the lower withholding rates beginning January 1, 1954. Individual income taxes not withheld are estimated to decline slightly as a result of the effect of the lower tax rates applicable to calendar year 1954 incomes on quarterly declaration payments.

Corporation income and excess profits taxes.—Revenue from corporate income and excess profits taxes amounted to $21,595 million in fiscal year 1953. Collections from this source are expected to increase to $22,809 million in fiscal year 1954. A major portion of the estimated rise of $1,215 million is due to the higher level of profits in calendar year 1953 as compared with calendar year 1952.

Corporate income tax receipts in fiscal year 1954 reflect incomes in calendar years 1953 and 1952, while receipts in fiscal year 1953 reflected incomes in calendar years 1952 and 1951. In each instance, the nearer calendar year is the more important in determining the fiscal year receipts because of accelerated corporate tax payments.

Excise taxes.—Receipts from this source by major groups are listed in the table below:

Source	1953 actual	1954 estimate	Increase (+) or decrease (−) 1954 over 1953
Alcohol taxes	2,780.9	2,795.0	+14.1
Tobacco taxes	1,654.9	1,568.0	−86.9
Stamp taxes	90.3	91.0	+.7
Manufacturers' excise taxes	2,859.4	2,955.8	+96.4
Retailers' excise taxes	495.9	513.0	+17.1
Miscellaneous excise taxes	2,061.2	2,115.5	+54.3
Total excise taxes	9,942.7	10,038.3	+95.6

Although the rates of certain excise taxes, principally in the alcohol, tobacco, and manufacturers' excise tax groups, are scheduled to be reduced as of April 1, 1954, total excise tax receipts are estimated to increase in 1954, reflecting the higher expenditure levels for taxable goods and services in fiscal year 1954.

Collections from the tobacco excise taxes are expected to decline because of the scheduled termination of the tax increase made by the Revenue Act of 1951, and reduced cigarette sales. The alcohol and tobacco taxes affected by the scheduled rate decreases are paid by stamp, and collections in 1954 will immediately reflect the April 1, 1954, reduction. Collections from the manufacturers' excise taxes and miscellaneous excise taxes are estimated to increase, although certain of the tax rates in these categories will also be reduced. Because of the timing of payment of the tax liabilities, the effect on collections will lag behind the April 1 effective date of the tax reduction.

Employment taxes.—The yields of the employment taxes are shown in the table below:

Source	1953 actual	1954 estimate	Increase (+) or decrease (−) 1954 over 1953
Federal Insurance Contributions Act	4,086.3	4,600.0	+513.7

Railroad Retirement Tax Act	626.0	640.0	+14.0
Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act	10.0	(1)	−10.0
Total employment taxes	4,998.2	5,530.0	+531.8
Deduct::
(a) Appropriation to Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund	4,086.3	4,600.0	+513.7
(b) Appropriation to Railroad Retirement account	625.1	640.0	+14.9
Net employment taxes	286.8	290.0	+3.2

[1] Commencing in fiscal year 1954, collections under the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act will be treated as trust fund receipts.

Employment taxes are estimated to increase in fiscal year 1954 principally as a result of the increased rates under the Federal Insurance Contributions Act effective January 1, 1954. Other taxes show relatively minor changes.

Estate and gift taxes.—Receipts from estate and gift taxes are estimated to increase from $891 million in fiscal year 1953 to $955 million in fiscal year 1954.

Customs.—Customs receipts are estimated to be $590 million in fiscal year 1954, a decrease of $23 million from actual receipts of $613 million in fiscal year 1953.

Miscellaneous receipts.—Miscellaneous receipts are estimated to amount to $2,313 million in fiscal year 1954, an increase of $484 million over actual receipts of $1,828 million in fiscal year 1953. This increase arises from a change in accounting for expenditures for foreign currencies which in 1954 are treated as budget items and affect both receipts and expenditures in equivalent amounts.

Refunds of receipts.—Refunds of receipts are estimated to be $2,988 million in fiscal year 1954, a decrease of $132 million from the actual refunds of $3,120 million in fiscal year 1953.

FISCAL YEAR 1955

Estimated receipts in the fiscal years 1954 and 1955 are compared by major sources in the following table:

Budget receipts (by source)

Source	1954 estimate	1955 estimate	Increase (+) or decrease (−) 1955 over 1954
Individual income tax	33,433.0	30,908.0	−2,525.0
Corporation income and excess profits taxes	22,809.0	19,694.0	−3,115.0
Excise taxes	10,038.3	9,221.3	−817.0
Employment taxes	5,530.0	6,301.0	+771.0
Estate and gift taxes	955.0	955.0
Customs	590.0	590.0
Miscellaneous receipts	2,312.6	2,453.0	+140.4
Total receipts	75,667.9	70,122.4	−5,545.5
Deduct:
(a) Appropriation to Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund	4,600.0	5,369.0	+769.0
(b) Appropriation to Railroad Retirement account	640.0	640.0
(c) Refunds of receipts	2,988.2	2,643.6	−344.6
Budget receipts	67,439.7	61,469.8	−5,969.9

Budget receipts in the fiscal year 1955 are estimated to decline sharply. The decline results primarily from the full year effects of tax rate reductions already operative and the additional impact of further reductions scheduled under present law.

Individual income tax.—The yield of the individual income tax is shown in the following table:

Source	1954 estimate	1955 estimate	Increase (+) or decrease (−) 1955 over 1954
Individual income tax:
Withheld	22,284.0	20,750.0	−1,534.0

Receipts from income tax withheld are estimated to decline in fiscal year 1955 principally as a result of the full year effect of the lower withholding rates effective January 1, 1954. Receipts from income tax not withheld will also decline as a result of the lower tax rates applicable to 1954 incomes.

Corporation income and excess profits taxes.—Revenue from corporate income taxation is estimated to amount to $19,694 million in fiscal year 1955, decreasing $3,115 million in comparison with receipts in fiscal year 1954. The principal causes of this decline are provisions of existing law which provide for the termination of excess profits taxation on December 31, 1953, and a reduction in the corporate normal tax rate effective April 1, 1954.

Excise taxes.—Receipts from this source by major groups are listed in the following table:

Source	1954 estimate	1955 estimate	Increase (+) or decrease (−) 1955 over 1954
Alcohol taxes	2,795.0	2,697.0	−98.0
Tobacco taxes	1,568.0	1,464.0	−104.0
Stamp taxes	91.0	91.0
Manufacturers' excise taxes	2,955.8	2,318.3	−637.5
Retailers' excise taxes	513.0	521.0	+8.0
Total excise taxes	10,038.3	9,221.3	−817.0

Excise tax receipts are expected to decrease substantially in fiscal year 1955 as a result of reductions in tax rates scheduled under present law. In particular, the alcohol, tobacco, and manufacturers' excise tax receipts decline markedly as a result of tax rate decreases. The other major excise tax categories show either no change or slight increases.

Employment taxes.—The details of the yields of the employment taxes are shown in the table below:

Source	1954 estimate	1955 estimate	Increase (+) or decrease (−) 1955 over 1954
Federal Insurance Contributions Act	4,600.0	5,369.0	+769.0
Federal Unemployment Tax Act	290.0	292.0	+2.0
Railroad Retirement Tax Act	640.0	640.0
Total employment taxes	5,530.0	6,301.0	+771.0
Deduct:
(a) Appropriation to Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund	4,600.0	5,369.0	+769.0
(b) Appropriation to Railroad Retirement account	640.0	640.0
Net employment taxes	290.0	292.0	+2.0

Employment taxes are estimated to increase in fiscal year 1955 principally as a result of the full year effect of the rate increases under the Federal Insurance Contributions Act effective January 1, 1954. Other employment taxes are relatively unchanged.

Estate and gift taxes.—Receipts from estate and gift taxes are estimated to be $955 million in fiscal year 1955, the same as in fiscal year 1954.

Customs.—Customs receipts are estimated to be $590 million in fiscal year 1955, unchanged from fiscal year 1954.

Miscellaneous receipts.—Miscellaneous receipts are estimated to amount to $2,453 million in fiscal year 1955, an increase of $140 million over fiscal year 1954 receipts.

Refunds of receipts.—Refunds of receipts are estimated to be $2,644 million in fiscal year 1955. The decrease of $345 million from fiscal year 1954 results principally from the lower individual income tax withholding rates effective January 1, 1954.

The effects of recommendations for both tax reform and the maintenance of the existing corporate income tax rate and the total revenue from excise taxation are shown separately for individual income, corporation income, and excise taxes. The recommended tax reforms are estimated to involve a loss of $585 million in revenue from individual income taxes in fiscal 1955. The combined effect of reform and continuation of the tax rate on corporations is estimated to involve a net gain of $570 million in fiscal 1955 over the amount which would be received in the absence of both reform and rate maintenance. The rescission of the April 1 reductions in excise taxes, as recommended in the tax program, is estimated to involve a gain of $189 million in fiscal 1954 and $1,018 million in fiscal 1955.

Special Analysis D

INVESTMENT, OPERATING, AND OTHER BUDGET EXPENDITURES

This analysis appraises Government expenditures in terms of the extent to which those made in a given fiscal year will yield major benefits over a period of years. It distinguishes expenditures for assets and other developmental purposes, which yield benefits beyond the current fiscal year, from expenditures, which in the main, yield benefits within the current year. Like the functional classification in special analysis B and the agency classification in part II of the budget it is designed to contribute to a general understanding of the budget and of budgetary objectives and problems.

Expenditures of an investment type, that is, those yielding benefits over a period of years, are shown in two major categories—one for the acquisition and improvement of assets by the Federal Government and the other for other broad developmental purposes such as additions to State, local, and private assets and expenditures for research, education, and health, which contribute to the physical productivity of the economy or increase the technical skills and knowledge of individuals. Expenditures which yield benefits currently are also grouped in two major categories—one for aids and services to special groups and the other for current operating expenses.

This analysis is not a capital budget. Such a budget as prepared by some foreign governments and State and local governmental units usually requires separate financing for major capital outlays, and they may be excluded or amortized over a period of years in considering the balancing of the budget. In the Federal budget, investment items are usually financed in the same way as the rest of the budget and they are not treated separately in deriving the budget surplus or deficit.

A capital budget would also require allowance for depreciation and obsolescence on existing physical assets, allowance for anticipated losses on loan programs, recognition of any assets given away, and reporting of any sales of assets at a figure different from their book value in order to determine the net addition or reduction in Federal assets. This analysis makes no provision for such depreciation. Hence, it does not indicate the extent to which increases in investment are offset by depreciation.

On the basis of private accounting practices, investment expenditures would be confined to increases in claims or assets owned by the Federal Government but would cover all such assets including office equipment and motor vehicles. With respect to investments in Federal assets this analysis is limited to major equipment purchases such as military aircraft and ships. On the other hand, this analysis is broader than private accounting practice since expenditures are classified in terms of their effect on the economy as a whole; hence, it includes also as the second major type of investment expenditures, additions to State, local, or private assets or other Federal expenditures whose major objective is to improve the productivity of the Nation.

The great bulk of Federal expenditures for loans, for investment in commodity inventories, and for construction of powerplants are ultimately returned to the Treasury. Many additional collections arise from licenses and fees charged for various special services. Part of the operating expenditures of certain programs is financed by the appropriation of special receipts from these programs. In the main, however, Federal expenditures for investment-type programs, other than loans, are not expected to be recovered by specific types of future Treasury revenues. Developmental expenditures are expected, by increasing the wealth and income of the Nation, to expand indirectly Federal tax revenues over a long period of years.

In addition to the classifications of expenditures already mentioned, this analysis breaks down expenditures, where appropriate, between outlays for national security (as defined in special analysis B) and civil expenditures. Since expenditures for national security represent such a large proportion of total budget outlays, such a distinction helps to appraise the relative significance of outlays in each category. For example, expenditures for fixed military assets and other developmental purposes are not usually intended to achieve the same broad economic objectives as civil outlays for the same purposes.

Separate classifications are also shown, where appropriate, for expenditures for direct Federal programs, grants-in-aid or loans to State and local governments, and payments to trust funds. Special analysis G gives details on Federal aid to State and local governments and contains a table summarizing these aids according to the major categories of this analysis.

In previous budgets, expenditures of public enterprise funds shown in this analysis were for the most part on a net basis, i. e., gross expenditures less receipts from current operations of public enterprises. This year, for the first time, the analysis presents expenditures of these funds on a gross basis as well, in order to indicate the full scope of their operations. The receipts totals indicated in the analysis are only those which are deposited in the revolving funds of such enterprises. They do not reflect the receipts arising out of programs not financed on a revolving fund basis.

SUMMARY

Expenditures for the major categories of this analysis are summarized in table 1, which shows gross expenditures and receipts for both the national security and civil components. About $24.2 billion of estimated net budget expenditures for the fiscal year 1955 represent outlays for the acquisition and improvement of assets and for other developmental purposes. Most of these net outlays, $20.5 billion, are for national-security purposes. Current expenses for aids and special services, most of which are for civil programs, are estimated at $12.5 billion, net, for fiscal year 1955. The remainder, $28.9 billion, represents expenditures for other services and for current operating expenses, mostly for programs related to national security.

[1] Gross expenditures and applicable receipts both include acquisition of collateral on Commodity Credit Corporation loans amounting to $891 in 1953, $1,214 in 1954, and $1,357 in 1955, not shown in table 1 or special analysis B. They exclude private bank loans guaranteed by the Commodity Credit Corporation and Export-Import Bank amounting to $344 in 1953, $1,646 in 1954, and $462 in 1955, shown in table 1 and special analysis B. None of these transactions affect net budget expenditures.

The estimated reduction of $5.3 billion in net budget expenditures from 1954 to 1955 results entirely from the following:

1. A reduction of $1.2 billion in investment-type expenditures for civil programs, largely as a result of decreases in loans and commodity inventories.

2. A reduction of $2.8 billion in investment-type expenditures for national security purposes—predominantly for purchases of major equipment.

3. A net decrease of $0.5 billion in current expenses for aids.

4. A net increase of $0.2 billion in other current expenses for civil programs—about equal to the estimated rise in interest payments.

5. A net decrease of $1.2 billion in current operating expenditures for national security purposes, reflecting for the most part decreases in expenditures for national security operations and administration.

The major categories of the special analysis are explained in the following sections:

ADDITIONS TO FEDERAL ASSETS

Expenditures in this category represent direct investment by the Federal Government in loans and federally owned physical assets.

Net expenditures for additions to assets are estimated to total $21.0 billion in the fiscal year 1955, $3.8 billion below 1954. About 90 percent of total net expenditures for assets are for national security purposes, mostly for military equipment.

Loans.—Direct loans of Federal agencies consist mainly of loans to farmers and home owners, to public and private agencies serving these two groups, and to private business and foreign governments. The Congress has provided that most loan programs operate on a revolving basis. However, the loans of the Rural Electrification Administration and the Farmers' Home Administration and a few inactive or smaller loan programs are by law on a nonrevolving basis, with collections on outstanding loans going directly to miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury. In table 2 loans made through revolving funds are included on both a gross and a net basis. Since net loans reflect only a fraction of total Government-loan activity, gross disbursements more accurately measure the total loan operations of the Government.

In the fiscal year 1955, gross disbursements for loans are estimated to increase by $34 million from 1954. Repayments and other receipts from loans are estimated to increase by $237 million. As a result net budget expenditures for loans are estimated to decline by $203 million between the fiscal years 1954 and 1955.

Net loans for agriculture and agricultural resources, primarily price support and grain storage loans, are estimated to be $244 million higher than in 1954. Net loans to foreign countries and housing loans to private borrowers, however, are estimated to decline by $273 and $209 million, respectively. Most other major loan programs show small declines in net expenditures from 1954. A detailed summary of loans is contained in special analysis E on Federal credit programs. In that analysis loan expenditures are shown net of all receipts including collections going directly into miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury.

Public works—sites and direct construction.—This includes all Federal expenditures for sites and federally constructed civil public works projects, military installations, and other national security facilities which are owned by the United States, including those outside the continental United States. A detailed summary of these and related programs is given in special analysis F.

Total estimated expenditures for public works of $4.0 billion in 1955 represent a decrease of $234 million from the 1954 total. About 72 percent of these expenditures for 1955 will be direct public works for national security purposes. Expenditures for construction of atomic energy facilities for production of fissionable material and atomic weapons and Air Force construction are estimated to decline slightly. Major civil public works expenditures, mainly for water resources and related developments and veterans' hospitals, are estimated to decrease from $1,291 million in 1954 to $1,132 million in 1955.

Major commodity inventories.—Gross purchases of commodities held for resale or in stockpiles are expected to total $2,950 million in fiscal year 1955, exceeding sales by $1,534 million. Total purchases include transportation costs, administrative expenses, and storage costs where these are normally included in costs of goods sold.

Net expenditures for stockpiling strategic and critical materials are estimated at $537 million in fiscal year 1955. By June 30, 1955, the stockpile inventory will reach an estimated $5.5 billion in June 30, 1953, prices. Net acquisition of farm commodities by the Commodity Credit Corporation under its farm price-support program is estimated at $927 million in fiscal year 1955. The value of the Corporation's inventory of commodities as of June 30, 1955, is estimated to total $4.2 billion.

Major equipment.—Expenditures for major equipment are expected to decline from $17.4 billion in 1954 to $14.6 billion in 1955. These expenditures represent predominantly purchases of aircraft, naval vessels, tanks, and other major equipment needs of the military services, as well as construction of merchant ships. Routine purchases of office equipment, automobiles, furniture and fixtures, etc., are classified as current operating expenses.

Other physical assets—acquisition and improvement.—Expenditures for other physical assets will continue to rise in 1955, mainly because of the expansion in assets (other than research and development plant) of the Atomic Energy Commission. This subcategory also includes reforestation and range improvements and real property purchased or acquired as collateral on defaulted loans. In 1955, increased receipts are anticipated from disposition of war housing built during World War II and other public housing.

EXPENDITURES FOR OTHER DEVELOPMENTAL PURPOSES

This category includes Federal expenditures which add to the physical productivity of the economy over a period of years but which do not directly add to Federal assets. Programs which yield the bulk of their benefits immediately are excluded, even though they may also contribute to the longer run economic development of the Nation.

TABLE 3.—Expenditures for other developmental purposes

State and local physical assets.—In fiscal year 1955, the Federal Government will spend an estimated $708 million to help pay for physical assets to be acquired by State and local governments. These outlays, mostly for grants-in-aid, such as the Federal aid highway program and the school construction program for defense affected areas, are $50 million lower than in the preceding year.

Private physical assets.—Federal expenditures which directly add to privately owned physical assets consist predominantly of payments for conservation and improvement of private farms and grants to States for private hospitals. Expenditures for conservation and improvement of private farms are estimated to decline moderately, while grants to States for private hospitals are expected to rise slightly.

Education, training, and health.—These consist of Federal expenditures to promote the knowledge, skills, longevity and physical vigor of the population, mostly through grants to State and local governments. Included are school-operating aid to school districts especially affected by the defense effort, and grants to States for programs of vocational education, vocational rehabilitation, maternal and child welfare, public health, and agricultural extension work. Closely related are several major items classified in other categories—principally the veterans' education program, which is classified as aids and special services for veterans; the operating expenses of hospital services and medical care programs; and the training of military personnel or other persons in Government service.

For fiscal year 1955, expenditures for these purposes are estimated at $310 million, slightly below fiscal year 1954.

Research and development.—The Federal Government contributes, in part, to technological and economic progress through its varied programs of research and development. Net expenditures for such programs in the fiscal year 1955 are estimated at $1,825 million, $48 million below 1954. About 86 percent of this total is for military research and development, including the work of the Department of Defense and the Atomic Energy Commission.

Definitions of research and development, in this analysis, are those used in special analysis H on page 1157, and agree generally with those adopted by the National Science Foundation for its summaries of Federal Government activities in this general area.

Engineering and natural resource surveys.—Several Federal agencies make relatively small expenditures for investigations and surveys for public works programs, topographic mapping, land classification, forest investigations, and other basic surveys. The largest programs of this type are administered by the Geological Survey, the Bureau of Reclamation, and the Coast and Geodetic Survey.

CURRENT EXPENSES FOR AIDS AND SPECIAL SERVICES

This category covers current expenditures for programs which primarily provide aids or special services to one or more specific groups. It also includes administrative expenses, and other operating expenses and operating receipts, of loan programs and of investments in physical assets which benefit specific groups, as well as maintenance of any physical assets providing aids and special services. It excludes investment-type expenditures (included in the preceding categories) which provide substantial benefits to various economic groups, e. g., loans, public works, and research programs. These various groups also receive benefits from special Federal tax provisions and other nonexpenditure aids, which, of course, are not included in this analysis.

Most expenditures in this category are for civil programs which are estimated at $8.2 billion, net, for the fiscal year 1955, $0.5 billion below fiscal year 1954.

Agriculture.—Current expenses predominantly for the benefit of farmers consist chiefly of losses realized on the price support program, expenses of the International Wheat Agreement, Sugar Act payments, payments for removal of surplus commodities, and administrative expenses of loan programs and other aids to farmers. Other major expenditures for aids to farmers classified elsewhere in this analysis are provided through loans, conservation payments, reclamation aids and other developmental aids. Farmers also benefit indirectly from the school lunch program, international aids, and other expenditures which are intended primarily to benefit other groups.

In fiscal year 1955, current expenses for programs benefiting farmers are estimated at $549 million, net, $60 million below 1954.

Business.—The major types of current Federal expenditures benefiting private business are the postal deficit, which arises from second-, third-, and fourth-class mail; maritime operating subsidies and navigation and other aids to the shipping industry; various aids to air navigation; and the losses accruing on defense production aids. Largely as a result of the reduction in the postal deficit, net expenditures for these purposes in the fiscal year 1955 are expected to decline to $609 million, $309 million below fiscal year 1954.

Labor.—The largest current Federal expenditure benefiting labor is for the Federal-State program of unemployment insurance and public employment offices, in which the Federal Department of Labor makes grants to the States to cover the full cost of administering these services. Also in this category are the mine safety work of the Bureau of Mines, and some administrative expenses of the Department of Labor. These expenditures for fiscal year 1955 are expected to remain at virtually the same level as in the preceding 2 fiscal years.

Homeowners and tenants.—Since loans and other financial aids to homeowners and tenants are classified in this analysis as investment-type expenditures, current expenditures consist chiefly of grants to local authorities for low-rent public housing and for slum clearance and redevelopment. These are increasing, as the local agencies complete the projects and become eligible for the grants. However, receipts from insurance of mortgages and savings and loan share accounts, as well as from mortgage purchase and other housing loan programs, exceed gross expenditures for housing in all 3 years.

Veterans.—Current net expenditures for aids to veterans in the fiscal year 1955 are estimated at $4.1 billion, slightly above 1954. Compensation and pension benefits account for more than half of the total estimated for fiscal year 1955. The monthly compensation payments are to veterans with service-connected disabilities and to the families of deceased veterans. Pensions are paid in non-service-connected cases. Hospital and medical care is provided for veterans in a Government-operated system of hospitals, through contracts with other institutions, and through outpatient services.

Other important current aids to veterans are readjustment benefits for veterans of World War II and the Korean conflict, most of which are for educational purposes. Included are outlays for education and training of veterans who enroll in schools and colleges, or vocational training on the job or farm; losses under the loan-guarantee programs; and veterans unemployment allowances.

International aids.—In fiscal year 1955, $4,275 million, or 79 percent of total expenditures for international aids is for the mutual military program. Virtually all expenditures under the mutual military program will be to furnish military equipment and training to friendly nations. Most of the remainder of expenditures for international aids is for economic and technical assistance, $946 million; assistance to the Republic of Korea, $100 million; and contributions to voluntary international programs, $70 million.

Other aids and special services.—Many other Federal programs involve current expenditures for aids and special services providing major benefits for more than one of the above groups or for other groups. The most important of such expenditures is grants to help provide public assistance to those in need, including the aged, the blind, the permanently and totally disabled, and dependent children. Other major programs include grants to help finance low-priced school lunches, hospital operation and medical care by the Public Health Service, and increasing expenditures for various aids to Indians. These expenditures in the fiscal year 1955 are expected to decline slightly from 1954.

OTHER SERVICES AND CURRENT OPERATING EXPENSES

All other expenditures for Government services or for current operations are included in this major category. In the main, the activities are the traditional Government operations of protecting against foreign aggression, conducting foreign affairs, making and enforcing laws, collecting taxes, managing and paying interest on the public debt, providing for recruitment and retirement of civilian employees, and operating the postal service.

Current expenditures for national security, mostly for operation and maintenance of military facilities, and pay and subsistence of military personnel, dominate this category. The largest component of civil expenditures is for interest. All other current civil expenses in 1955 will total about $1.8 billion, net, or about 3 percent below 1954.

Repair, maintenance, and operation of physical assets excluding special services.—Expenditures to repair, maintain, and operate physical assets include chiefly maintenance and operation of atomic energy facilities and military structures, equipment, and facilities; general-purpose public buildings; as well as operation of certain public assets such as flood-control reservoirs, irrigation works, power facilities, public lands, and national forests.

Net expenditures for civil repair, maintenance and operation are estimated at $206 million in the fiscal year 1955, slightly below fiscal year 1954.

Outlays for the operation and maintenance of military structures, equipment and facilities of the Department of Defense and the Atomic Energy Commission are estimated at $8.8 billion, two-tenths billion dollars below 1954.

Regulation and control.—Most of the major departments and agencies and many smaller agencies have regulatory or law-enforcement responsibilities. These include not only the normal law-enforcement responsibilities of the Department of Justice, the Treasury, and the Judiciary but also the operations of the regulatory agencies. Expenditures for regulation and control are estimated to decline to $395 million in 1955, $19 million lower than in 1954, primarily because of the removal of emergency controls over business.

Operation and maintenance of the postal system.—Since the postal deficit is included under current expenses for aids and special services, this category includes all remaining expenditures and receipts, amounting to $2,686 million in 1955.

Operation and administration of other civil activities.—All other governmentwide or multiple-purpose expenditures for civil programs will decrease from $1,210 million in 1954 to $1,193 million in 1955. These consist of expenditures (other than international aids) for the conduct of foreign affairs; expenditures for tax collection, borrowing, and other financing activities; expenditures for consideration and enactment of legislation, central procurement, record-keeping, payment of claims, and various other miscellaneous direct Federal programs not elsewhere classified. In addition, Government payments for retirement of Federal employees and miscellaneous shared revenues and grants-in-aid are included in this category.

Other national security operation and administration.—Expenditures in this category are expected to drop from the 1954 level of $12.2 billion to $11.3 billion in fiscal year 1955. They represent predominantly pay and subsistence for military personnel together with smaller but substantial expenditures for civilian components, industrial mobilization, and various departmentwide activities.

Interest.—These expenditures include interest on the public debt as well as interest on refunds of receipts and on uninvested trust accounts. Because of a somewhat higher public debt and higher average interest rates expenditures for interest will be $275 million higher in fiscal year 1955 than in 1954.

Special Analysis E

FEDERAL CREDIT PROGRAMS

Introduction

Federal credit programs are an important method for the achievement of public policy objectives. For example, as part of the Federal programs for improvement of housing and encouragement of home ownership, Federal agencies currently insure or guarantee about 40 percent of all outstanding home-mortgage loans. Similarly, financial assistance in the form of credit is an important part of the Federal program of encouraging efficient family-size farm units. Loans to help restore international economic stability and promote the economic development of underdeveloped areas have been a significant part of the Government's international aid program in recent years. Federal loans to business are primarily to help meet defense needs and to assist small businesses to obtain financing; they account, however, for only a very small part of business credit. Apart from influences in these specific areas, Federal credit programs exert a powerful influence on the general level of economic activity.

The impact of Federal credit programs on the Federal budget is relatively small when compared with the large amount of credit extended or guaranteed. The most important reason for this is the predominance of Federal insurance and guarantees of private loans in recent years, discussed more fully later in this analysis. Such programs normally involve little or no budget expenditures except in cases when defaults require the guaranteeing or insuring agencies to take over private loans. Secondly, a substantial share of new commitments, both for insurance and guarantees and for direct loans, are canceled or expire without being used by the lending institution or the borrower. Finally, collections on loans in most cases directly offset disbursements on new loans, with the result that net expenditures are much less than gross expenditures; often net receipts occur.

Federal credit programs are intended to supplement rather than to substitute for private credit. They have expanded greatly in the postwar period. Direct loans outstanding increased from about $5 billion in 1945 to $16 billion on June 30, 1953. However, this amount was only 5 percent of the estimated private debt of $307 billion outstanding on that date. Private loans partly or wholly guaranteed by Federal agencies have increased nearly sixfold since 1945 to $35 billion, comprising an additional 11 percent of total private debt.

Coverage of Special Analysis

This special analysis presents a broad picture both of direct Federal loans and investments, and of Federal loan insurance and loan guarantee programs. It summarizes new commitments, expenditures, loans outstanding and guarantees in force, new commitment authority, and status of credit authority of 19 major Federal credit programs. In addition to the programs included in the special analysis in the 1953 budget document, this analysis includes the loan program of the Small Business Administration, established in July 1953, and the expanded disaster loans by the Department of Agriculture. The programs included account for nearly all new commitments of Federal agencies in the fiscal year 1955.

The analysis covers major credit programs of wholly owned Government enterprises, whether corporate or noncorporate. Included also are major credit operations of other departments and agencies, not primarily engaged in lending activities, such as the Treasury Department loan to the United Kingdom in 1947. Loan programs of important quasi-public agencies are excluded from the tables but are discussed separately.

The analysis excludes interagency credit, such as borrowing from the Treasury by other Government agencies, whether for loan or other programs. Credit extended in connection with sales by the Federal Government, such as credit to finance sales of war surplus goods, is also in general excluded.

Summary

Total new commitments for major Federal credit programs for the fiscal year 1955 are estimated at $12.5 billion (table 1). Of this total, credit aids for housing and related programs, including housing loans and guarantees by the Veterans Administration, account for $7.4 billion, or about 60 percent; those for agricultural programs account for $4.5 billion, or 36 percent.

Total commitments in 1955 are expected to be substantially below both the 1953 and 1954 levels. As indicated in detail in table 3 below, expenditures and receipts of major credit programs will be roughly in balance in 1954 and 1955, in sharp contrast to the substantial excess of expenditures in 1953. The lower levels of new commitments and net expenditures reflect mainly shifts in activities by the Commodity Credit Corporation and the Federal National Mortgage Association.

New Commitments

New commitments provide the best single measure of the trends in most Federal credit programs. They also provide the best indication of trends in the economic impact of these programs, since changes in the magnitude of new commitments usually lead to corresponding changes in the volume of loans disbursed either by public agencies or private lenders.

In this study, commitments are defined as approvals by Federal agencies of direct loans or of insurance or guarantees of private loans. They are shown on a gross basis, without deductions for commitments which do not result in an actual credit extension. The amounts shown are the principal amounts of the loans; for several guarantee and insurance programs these exceed the Government's contingent liability, since the unguaranteed or uninsured portions are also included.

As table 2 indicates, commitments for Federal guarantees and insurance of private loans account for 70 percent of total new commitments. This high proportion arises from the policy of making direct loans only where private credit, even with Government guarantee or insurance, is not available on reasonable terms, e. g., direct loans for defense production, or where risks are regarded as unusually great, as in the international area. Many of the direct loans and investments also add to private lending, for example, purchases of mortgages from private financial institutions and discounts of short-term farm credit extended by private lenders.

Direct loans and investments.—New commitments of $3.8 billion for direct loans and investments in the fiscal year 1955 are expected to be 24 percent below the 1954 level, and almost 30 percent below 1953. Expiration on June 30, 1954, of the major advance commitment authority of the Federal National Mortgage Association and the Association's restricted policy on over-the-counter purchases accounts for about half of the decline. The reduction also reflects achievement of major defense production expansion goals, lower commitments by the Commodity Credit Corporation for agricultural price supports, and a shift of emphasis by the Export-Import Bank from direct loans to guarantees of private loans. The decline in these commitments is a major factor in the reversal in overall trend from net expenditures to net receipts, and it implies a continued excess of receipts in later years.

Guarantees and insurance.—New commitments for Federal guarantees and insurance of private loans are estimated at $8.8 billion in the fiscal year 1955, compared to $9.8 billion in 1954 and $9.5 billion in 1953.

The decline from the 1954 level is accounted for by reduced operations of the Commodity Credit Corporation in guaranteeing commodity loans. The reduction from the 1953 level reflects primarily the decline in insurance of housing mortgages including those in critical defense areas and military reservations.

Overlap in commitments.—Total commitments may overstate by as much as 1 to 2 billion dollars the net amount of credit assistance by the Federal Government, especially for housing credit. This is because two or more types of Federal assistance are sometimes provided for the same borrower or the same property at different stages in the financing process. No adjustment is made for this overlap, since the amount in any single year is difficult to estimate.

A substantial share of the housing initially constructed with the aid of mortgage insurance by the Federal Housing Administration is ultimately sold to veterans who finance their purchases with mortgages guaranteed by the Veterans Administration. The Federal National Mortgage Association is authorized to purchase mortgages previously insured by the Federal Housing Administration or guaranteed by the Veterans Administration.

Similarly, local housing authorities normally finance most or all of the construction of low-rent units with temporary loans made or directly guaranteed by the Public Housing Administration. These temporary obligations, however, are refinanced by sale of long-term obligations to private investors on the security of Federal annual contribution contracts. This refinancing accounts for the increase in commitments by the Public Housing Administration.

DISBURSEMENTS AND REPAYMENTS

Direct loans and investments have a significant impact on the Federal budget, since the difference between their disbursement and repayment represents Federal expenditures or receipts. Federal guarantees and insurance of private loans, on the other hand, do not significantly affect Federal expenditures, since they result primarily in expenditures by private financial institutions. Only if they have been taken over by Federal agencies as a result of defaults or otherwise are they reflected in budget expenditures. Net expenditures for Federal credit assistance give, therefore, only a partial picture of the economic impact of these programs.

Net expenditures of all Government lending programs—with the exception of loans from trust funds or by quasi-public agencies—are included in the budget totals. In most cases, collections are offset directly against expenditures; in a few major programs, however, they go directly to miscellaneous receipts and, therefore, do not affect budget expenditures.

Expenditures of most loan programs are shown in most budget tables on a net basis, i. e., they reflect loan disbursements less repayments of old loans. In table 1 of this analysis, expenditures for loans are shown on a net basis. However, to indicate more clearly the total volume of loans, table 3 shows both gross loan disbursements and repayments (including those going directly to miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury). The difference between these two columns represents the net addition to or reduction in Federal loan assets (excluding chargeoffs and recoveries) for the major credit programs during the fiscal year. To bring total expenditures for loans into line with budget expenditures, net expenditures of minor Federal programs and an adjustment for repayments going directly to miscellaneous receipts are shown.

Losses actually incurred and written off are treated as repayments, but no allowance is made for possible future losses or recoveries. Consistent with the general definition of budget expenditures, investments in United States Government securities are excluded.

In the fiscal year 1955 gross loan disbursements of major Federal credit programs are estimated at $6.6 billion and repayments at $6.9 billion. Thus the gross level of activity will be nearly 50 times as high as the net receipts of $283 million. Of the total repayments, $273 million will go directly to miscellaneous receipts, chiefly repayments of loans by the Farmers Home Administration, the Rural Electrification, and the Treasury loan to the United Kingdom. Allowing for this adjustment, together with net receipts of $6 million for relatively minor credit programs, net budget receipts for loans will amount to an estimated $16 million.

In 1954 and 1955, repayments will be $1.5 billion and $1.8 billion, respectively, above the 1953 level. Primarily as a result of this, receipts of all major credit programs will for the first time in many years exceed gross expenditures and thus contribute materially to the reduction in total net budget expenditures. This substantial change reflects primarily increased repayments to the Commodity Credit Corporation (including commodities acquired in satisfaction of loans) and increased sales of mortgages by the Federal National Mortgage Association.

Measured in terms of both disbursements and repayments, the Federal Intermediate Credit Banks represent the most active direct lending program. This reflects primarily the short-term nature of their advances which are frequently renewed. Net expenditures of the banks in 1954 will be only about 2 percent of gross disbursements. On the other hand, current levels of repayments are small when compared with current disbursements in the case of relatively new programs, such as college housing and the Small Business Administration, as well as for programs with predominantly long-term loans such as the Rural Electrification Administration or loans for expansion of defense capacity.

Neither current repayments nor net expenditures provide any measure of the ultimate recoverability of the loans made. As indicated in the detailed statements on individual programs, interest or premiums cover expenses and losses for most programs. In some, the legislative mandates make losses probable from time to time, such as the nonrecourse loans of the Commodity Credit Corporation and the loan-guarantee programs of the Veterans' Administration.

LOANS OUTSTANDING AND GUARANTEES IN FORCE

The best index of the level of Federal credit programs over a period of years is provided by the total of their outstanding loans, guarantees, and insurance in force.

Outstanding loans and investments by the end of the fiscal year 1955 are estimated at $16.2 billion (table 4). Nearly half of this represents loans to foreign borrowers, including the outstanding loan of $3.6 billion to the United Kingdom, loans of $2.6 billion by the Export-Import Bank, and $1.6 billion by the Foreign Operations Administration. The amount of loans outstanding is expected to decline slightly in both 1954 and 1955.

Guarantees and insurance in force are estimated to increase to $44.3 billion by the end of the fiscal year 1955. The increase of $9.3 billion over loans outstanding at the end of 1953 reflects primarily increased guarantees and insurance of mortgage loans by the Veterans Administration and the Federal Housing Administration. These two programs—almost exactly equal in size—account for nearly 90 percent of all outstanding guarantees and insurance.

The amounts shown include both the guaranteed and unguaranteed portion of outstanding loans in order to give a clearer picture of the economic impact of these programs and to tie in better with banking statistics. They do not, however, indicate the estimated contingent liability of the Federal Government, which is shown in table 6. The major program on which the contingent liability differs materially from the principal amount of the loan is the veterans' loan guarantee program. By the end of the fiscal year 1955, the outstanding amount of such loans will be more than $9 billion higher than the Government liability.

The probability that the Government will be called upon to take over any substantial part of the guranteed or insured portion of outstanding loans is small, except in a national financial emergency. Sizable assets are available to minimize any potential losses. Moreover, in the case of mortgage insurance programs, the premium income in the past has been sufficient not only to cover expenses and current losses, but also to build up substantial reserves.

New Commitment Authority

New commitment authority includes any additional authority made available or recommended. There are several kinds of new commitment authority. Budget authorizations are those included in budget totals of new obligational authority; they consist either of appropriations or of authorizations to expend from public debt receipts. Other authorizations, which do not normally give rise to budget expenditures, consist of insurance and guarantee authorizations and conditional authorizations which become available only under specified conditions.

Table 5 summarizes new commitment authority of the 14 major credit programs which will receive additional authority during the period. New commitment authority for the fiscal year 1955 is estimated at $4.9 billion compared to $6.5 billion in 1954. The sharp reduction from 1954 results primarily from reduced net requirements of the Federal Housing Administration. More than two-thirds of the new authority is accounted for by Veterans Administration loan guarantees and insurance, primarily for the construction and purchase of houses by veterans, and by the price support program of the Commodity Credit Corporation.

New commitment authority for most credit programs is provided by Congress in the basic legislation rather than in appropriation acts. For example, the lending authority of the Export-Import Bank and the Small Business Administration, the borrowing authority of the Commodity Credit Corporation and the Public Housing Administration, and the various mortgage insurance authorizations of the Federal Housing Administration are all prescribed in the statutes governing these programs. Since new commitments can generally be financed out of uncommitted balances of prior authorizations, or out of funds made available by collections on outstanding loans, requests for new commitment authority in any one year are limited to relatively few credit programs. For example, in the fiscal year 1955, new commitment authority is requested for only four of the major programs—the Commodity Credit Corporation, the Rural Electrification Administration, the Farmers Home Administration, and the Federal Housing Administration. In several other programs, however, authority will become available in 1955 without additional action by the Congress.

In several important cases, the authority provided by the basic statute is indefinite. The most important examples are guarantees and insurance of loans by the Veterans Administration, guarantees of defense production loans under section 301 of the Defense Production Act, and indirect guarantees of local housing authority obligations issued on the security of annual contribution contracts of the Public Housing Administration. In these cases, the tabulations show new authorizations equal to the net amount of the guaranteed or insured portion of new commitments.

A second type of new authority indefinite in amount exists in the case of loan programs where the authority can also be used for grants, purchase commitments, or other nonlending purposes. Major examples are expansion of production under the Defense Production Act, and the programs of the Commodity Credit Corporation and the Foreign Operations Administration. In these programs, all the new obligational authority provided could legally be used for loans, but is not likely to be so used. Loans by the Foreign Operations Administration in 1954 and 1955 account for only a minor part of the total assistance program, so that it would be misleading to include the total amount of the foreign aid program as new obligational authority for loan assistance. The data, therefore, show amounts for new authority adequate to finance estimated new commitments. Loans by the Commodity Credit Corporation and under the Defense Production Act, however, account for a substantial part of these programs. Their total new obligational authority is, therefore, included, even though in both instances some of it will be used for nonlending purposes.

Status of Credit Authority

Unlike most other Government programs, commitment authority for the major credit programs is not normally provided for a single year, but remains available in most instances until utilized or until the statutory authority for the program expires. Hence, with only a few exceptions, the existing authority represents the cumulative total of amounts made available in prior years.

Cumulative net authority.—Three major types of commitment authority have been provided for Federal credit programs. A majority of the major programs operate on a revolving-fund basis, that is, collections on outstanding loans and expirations of insurance commitments permit reuse of the original authority. Limitations on such programs are ordinarily in terms of maximum amounts of loans outstanding, maximum borrowings from the Treasury, or maximum amounts of insurance or guarantee liability. Leading examples include almost all lending programs of Government corporations and the mutual mortgage insurance program of the Federal Housing Administration.

In the case of several noncorporate loan and loan insurance programs a maximum limitation is placed upon the total volume of loans and loan insurance commitments. Funds collected on such loans and expirations of such insurance are not available for reuse. Typical examples are the direct loan program of the Rural Electrification Administration and the Farmers' Home Administration and military and defense housing mortgage insurance programs of the Federal Housing Administration.

A few programs are not governed by any specific dollar limitations. These are limited only indirectly by the provisions of the statute or of the agency's regulations governing eligibility for Federal credit assistance. The amount committed depends primarily on the number of applications. The most important example is the loan guarantee and insurance program of the Veterans Administration. The loan guarantees authorized under section 301 of the Defense Production Act are also not specifically limited.

In the case of both the Commodity Credit Corporation and lending programs under the Defense Production Act, loans are financed from obligational authority which also finances nonlending programs. For the purposes of this analysis, the net authority available at the beginning of the year for these loan programs is set equal to the total available authority after deducting authority committed for nonlending programs. An exception is made for the Foreign Operations Administration, because its loans account for only a very small and indefinite fraction of the total economic assistance given under the foreign aid program in 1954 and 1955. Its authority at the beginning of the year is, therefore, shown as equal to loans outstanding and undisbursed commitments at the beginning of the year.

Credit authority available at the beginning of the fiscal year 1955 is estimated at $60.4 billion (table 6). New commitment authority of $4.9 billion is estimated to become available during the year. On the other hand, estimated expirations, certain repayments, and other reductions in outstanding authority amount to $3.1 billion. The net authority available at the end of the fiscal year 1955 is, therefore, estimated at $62.1 billion.

Charges against authority.—In addition to the $51.0 billion of outstanding loans and guarantees (shown in detail in table 4 but excluding here the portion of private loans not guaranteed or insured by the Federal Government), charges against the available authority include undisbursed commitments. These are expected to total $4.3 billion on June 30, 1955.

Uncommitted authority.—For major Federal credit programs as a whole, commitment authority at the end of the fiscal year 1955 is estimated to exceed charges against the authority by $6.8 billion. Of this unused lending authority, $1.9 billion is accounted for by the Commodity Credit Corporation, $1.1 billion by the Federal National Mortgage Association, and $1.0 billion by the Export-Import Bank.

Since the indefinite authority of loan guarantee programs not subject to specific limitations is shown as equal to charges against the authority, the total uncommitted authority in table 6 does not reflect the fact that these guarantee programs could be expanded substantially under presently available authority. However, about 70 percent of the cumulative authority is subject to definite limitations.

Since this analysis is limited to major active or liquidating credit programs, substantial amounts of uncommitted standby authority of other programs are excluded. The most important examples are the $3 billion borrowing authority for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, $1 billion for the Federal home loan banks, and $750 million for the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation. These are unlikely to be used unless a national financial emergency occurs.

QUASI-PUBLIC CREDIT PROGRAMS

The Federal Government also has a measure of responsibility for the credit programs of certain mixed-ownership corporations and other public agencies operating in whole or in part with private funds. The most important are the banks for cooperatives, the Federal land banks, the Federal home loan banks, and the Federal Reserve banks.

The 12 regional banks for cooperatives make loans to agricultural cooperatives. Most of the stock in the banks is still owned by the Federal Government and the banks are supervised by the Farm Credit Administration. Loans outstanding at the end of the fiscal year 1953 were $319 million, compared to $342 million in 1952.

The 12 Federal land banks are now privately owned, but are sponsored by the Government and operate under the supervision of the Farm Credit Administration. These banks provide mortgage credit to farmers at relatively low interest rates through individual national farm loan associations. The amount of loans outstanding at the end of 1953 was $1,136 million, compared with $1,046 million a year earlier.

The 11 Federal home-loan banks are also now privately owned, but are supervised by the Home Loan Bank Board and have authority to borrow $1 billion from the Treasury, if necessary. These banks make both short-term and long-term advances to member savings and loan associations on the security of home mortgages or Treasury obligations, as well as unsecured short-term loans. Advances outstanding on June 30, 1953, were $718 million.

All of the stock in the 12 Federal Reserve banks is provided by the member banks, but the policies of the Federal Reserve System are controlled by the Board of Governors. Moreover, the Reserve banks pay 90 percent of their profits, after prescribed maximum dividends, to the Treasury, and their entire surplus reverts to the Treasury in the event of liquidation. As part of their normal central banking functions, the Reserve banks stand ready to make short-term discounts and advances for member institutions and also have a small program of direct loans to industry. The amount of discounts, advances, and industrial loans outstanding on June 30, 1953, was $67 million with discounts and advances seasonally low on that date. One month later, they were $647 million.

Major Agencies or Programs

HOUSING AND HOME FINANCE AGENCY

Five major credit programs of the Housing and Home Finance Agency are included in this analysis. In addition, there are a number of minor programs—most of which are in liquidation—which are administered in the agency.

Federal National Mortgage Association.—The Federal National Mortgage Association provides a secondary market for certain mortgages insured by the Federal Housing Administration or guaranteed by the Veterans' Administration. The Association purchases mortgages over the counter and, under limited statutory authority, through commitments made in advance of construction. New commitments are expected to drop sharply from $559 million in 1954 to $85 million in 1955. This downward trend reflects the expiration of major advance commitment authority at the end of the current fiscal year, including authority for military and defense housing mortgages and the one-for-one authority. Under the latter, the Association, in selling mortgages from its portfolio, agrees to purchase subsequently mortgages in the same amount from the buyer. These expiring authorities account for most of the new commitments estimated for 1954. Over-the-counter purchases (except for certain military and defense housing mortgages) were suspended last spring shortly before the increase in maximum interest rates on Government insured and guaranteed mortgages. Since such purchases may be resumed in 1955, an estimated $75 million is included in the budget for that purpose.

Mortgage sales and repayments are estimated at $550 million during 1955, reflecting an accelerated sales program. A loss of approximately $30 million will be realized on sales of mortgages involving 4 percent interest which, in the present market, are worth less than face value. Total earnings will, however, be sufficient to cover these losses and other expenses, and return an estimated net income of $11 million for 1955.

Slum clearance and urban redevelopment.—Under the Housing Act of 1949, the Housing and Home Finance Administrator is authorized to make loans and grants to local public agencies for the planning and execution of slum clearance and urban redevelopment projects. Loans are made to cover the cost of project planning and to finance temporarily development costs. In addition, private temporary loans may be guaranteed through the pledge by the local agency of the Federal loan commitment. The act authorized a borrowing authority of $1 billion for these purposes.

At the end of 1953, only 43 projects were in actual development, although programs had been initiated by 169 communities. With the completion of planning and other preliminary operations in a rapidly increasing number of communities, a substantial increase in the level of development operations is expected during 1954 and 1955. New loan commitments—chiefly for temporary development financing—are expected to reach $125 million in 1955, compared with $44 million in 1953. Net loan expenditures in 1955 are, however, estimated at only $9 million as a result of both the short-term nature of most of the loans and their early repayment, and the increasing use of guaranteed private financing expected in lieu of direct Federal loans.

The current interest rate on these loans is 2⅞ percent; it reflects the cost of money to the Federal Government as measured by current market yields on long-term United States securities. Administrative expenses are financed from a separate appropriation.

College housing loans.—The Housing Act of 1950 authorized loans to colleges and universities for the construction of student dormitories and faculty homes. The President has thus far released $150 million of the available commitment authority of $300 million, and the Budget assumes the release of an additional $25 million in 1955. Disbursements during 1955 will reach $59 million, and loans outstanding at the end of the year are estimated at $109 million.

Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis

Most loans made under this authority are repayable over a 40-year period with substantially equal annual debt service payments. As a result, repayments of principal during early years are relatively small. Interest rates on new loans are now 3.5 percent. They are expected to be adequate to cover the cost of money to the Federal Government (as measured by current market yields on long-term United States securities), administrative expenses and probable losses.

Federal Housing Administration.—The Federal Housing Administration is authorized to insure a wide variety of residential mortgages and home improvement loans. Since the beginning of the program in 1935, approximately 30 percent of all new homes have been financed with insured mortgages. In addition, a substantial proportion of mortgages on existing housing and of home improvement loans have been insured by the Administration.

New mortgage insurance commitments during 1954 and 1955 will fall below the 1953 level because of some decline in new housing construction generally as well as the reduced programs for housing in critical defense areas and on military reservations. Under present law the special mortgage insurance authorities for these programs expire at the end of the current fiscal year.

Insurance premiums and other income will be adequate to cover all current expenses and to add to the reserves against future losses. In addition, during 1954, pursuant to Public Laws 5 and 94, Eighty-third Congress, the Administration will repay to the Treasury, with interest, $65 million representing the total amount of capital advanced.

Public Housing Administration.—Under the Housing Act of 1949, the Public Housing Administration makes loans and grants to assist local authorities in the construction of low-rent public housing. These loans and grants are extended under annual contribution contracts between the Administration and local authorities. The annual contribution contracts provide for (1) loan commitments by the Administration not to exceed 90 percent of project development costs, and (2) the payment of annual Federal contributions over a 40-year period to cover debt service on the bonds used to finance the project permanently.

Commitments under annual contribution contracts are either disbursed as direct Federal advances or used to guarantee private temporary loans. Most frequently, a direct Federal advance is made initially and later refunded with guaranteed financing. The Administration's borrowing authority for these purposes is $1.5 billion. The overall volume of temporary financing, including both public and private loans, will decline during 1954 and 1955 because of the reduction in the number of housing units under construction. However, as a result of efforts to shift from Government to private lending, the outstanding volume of private temporary financing is expected to increase during this period.

Prior to the completion of construction, the projects are permanently financed by the local housing authorities and the temporary loans repaid. Currently, about 67 percent of the permanent financing is obtained through the sale of 30-year serial bonds to private investors. The remainder is supplied by the Administration through the purchase of permanent notes maturing over the last 10 years of the 40-year amortization period; most of these permanent notes are refinanced with private temporary loans. Although local housing authority bonds are not directly guaranteed by the Federal Government, the Government contract to pay annual contributions makes them equivalent to guaranteed obligations and they are treated as such in this analysis. Sales of these bonds in 1954 and 1955 will substantially exceed the amount for any earlier period, and the amount outstanding will be more than doubled in the 2 years. This reflects chiefly the completion and permanent financing of a large number of units started in earlier years. Refinancing and sale of bonds held by the Administration on projects constructed under an earlier public housing program accounts for $210 million in receipts (including $100 million from private temporary loans).

The interest rate of 2⅞ percent charged local authorities on loans under new contracts is based upon current market yields of United States securities. Part of administrative expenses and all of the annual contributions are financed from separate appropriations.

VETERANS ADMINISTRATION

This analysis includes the loan guarantee and insurance program and the direct housing loan program authorized under the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended. It excludes minor lending activities of the Veterans Administration, such as the policy loans made by the veterans' life insurance funds and a few very small inactive programs.

Loan guarantees and insurance.—The Administrator of Veterans' Affairs guarantees housing, business, and farm loans made by private lenders to World War II and Korean veterans. By June 30, 1953, nearly 3,400,000 loans of all types had been guaranteed of which 92 percent were for homes, 6 percent for business, and 2 percent for farms. In both the fiscal years 1954 and 1955 an estimated 335,000 loans will be guaranteed, compared with 320,000 in 1953. There is no statutory limit on the total amount of the loans. In May 1953 the maximum interest rate on guaranteed or insured loans was increased from 4 percent to 4.5 percent.

Under existing legislation, the Government is liable for all losses up to 60 percent of the principal amount, or $7,500, whichever is less. No charge is made by the Government for its guarantee. Administrative expenses are paid from the general appropriation for operating expenses of the Veterans Administration and claims are paid from a general appropriation for veterans' readjustment benefits. Net losses on claims paid up to June 30, 1953, amounted to about $25 million.

Direct housing loans.—In areas where the guarantee program is ineffective because of lack of private loans at 4.5 percent interest, the Veterans' Administrator may make loans directly to veterans for the purchase or construction of homes (including farm housing) at 4.5 percent interest. The interest rate was increased from 4 percent on July 1, 1953. It is estimated that by June 30, 1954, about 58,000 direct loans will have been made. Under the present law, the program expires at that time.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

Four major credit programs of the Department of Agriculture are included in this analysis.

Rural Electrification Administration.—Since 1935, the Rural Electrification Administration has been making loans with 35-year maturities, chiefly to cooperatives, to finance construction of electrical distribution, transmission, and generating facilities to serve rural areas without central-station service. Since 1950, similar loans have been made to finance construction and improvements of rural telephone systems.

New obligational authority is provided annually in the Budget to finance these programs. Because of carryovers of uncommitted authority from prior years, new commitments of $175 million in 1955 will be $10 million higher than the new authority recommended. Reductions in commitments anticipated for 1955 will be in the rural electrification program; new commitments for the telephone program are practically unchanged from 1954. In addition to the budget authorization, each year a contingent authorization for electrification loans is provided which becomes available for commitments to the extent that the Secretary of Agriculture certifies it is needed to meet loan demands.

Interest rates are set by statute at 2 percent, considerably below the present cost of long-term money to the Treasury. Administrative expenses are financed by a separate appropriation. Collections of principal and interest are deposited in miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury. Out of a total of about $2.4 billion of loans made so far, losses have been less than $50,000.

Farmers Home Administration.—The Farmers Home Administration makes loans to farmers unable to obtain credit from other sources for farm operating expenses and crop production, farm ownership and improvement, improvement of water facilities in arid and semiarid areas, and for farm housing. Loans are intended to strengthen the family-type farm and encourage better farming methods. These loan programs are financed by annual authorizations. New loan commitments of $146 million in 1955 will be substantially below the 1954 level because of the elimination of a nonrecurring authorization provided in 1954 for emergency loans to farmers in drought areas and the expiration of authority for farm housing loans. The Administration also may insure a maximum of $100 million a year in long-term mortgage loans to finance the purchase of farms. New commitments under this mortgage-insurance program are dependent primarily on the amount of private credit available to finance the purchase of farms at 4 percent interest and under certain prescribed criteria. The current level of such commitments ($11 million) is expected to continue in 1955.

Interest rates charged on most of the direct loans are 5 percent. Administrative expenses are covered by separate appropriations. Collections of principal and interest go into miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury.

Commodity Credit Corporation.—In carrying out the Government's program of supporting prices of agricultural commodities, the Commodity Credit Corporation makes direct loans to farmers and guarantees loans made by private lending agencies. These loans and guarantees enable farmers to market their commodities in an orderly manner and secure prices for such commodities in line with the standards set forth in law. All loans are backed by commodities and borrowers may discharge their obligations without personal liability by turning over pledged commodities to the Corporation. These forfeitures of collateral are treated as repayments of loans in this analysis. The Corporation also makes loans for the construction or improvement of farm-storage facilities.

Present indications are that because of heavy loans and purchases, the Corporation's borrowing authority of $6,750 million will not be adequate to meet its obligations in the fiscal year 1955. The Congress will therefore be requested to increase the authority to $8.5 billion. In addition, it is anticipated that in fiscal 1954 the Congress will be requested to restore $775 million of the Corporation's borrowing authority by cancellation of notes in this amount payable to the Secretary of the Treasury. This amount represents (1) impairment of the Corporation's capital resulting from 1953 operations, and (2) advances made by the Corporation to finance the 1953 programs for the International Wheat Agreement and eradication of foot and mouth disease. New commitments in the fiscal year 1955 are estimated at nearly $2 billion, as compared with over $3 billion in 1954. Repayments of direct loans in 1955 are estimated at $2,227 million, or $121 million in excess of estimated disbursements.

During the current year, the Corporation is changing its financing methods to put increased emphasis on loans by private financial institutions rather than on direct loans by the Corporation. This will not affect the Corporation's use of borrowing authority but will result in reduced direct expenditures, at least in the short run.

In order to encourage banks to hold a larger share of the loans that they make on commodities, the Corporation raised interest rates on 1953 crop loans to 4 percent, and the lender's share in the case of indirect loans has been increased from 2 to 2.5 percent.

Disaster loans.—The Secretary of Agriculture has at his disposal a revolving fund administered through the Farmers' Home Administration from which emergency loans may be made to farmers and stockmen suffering from production disasters and unable to obtain credit from other sources. As a part of the emergency drought assistance program of the current fiscal year, the Congress made available an additional $90 million for disaster loans at 3 percent interest, and for special livestock loans at 5 percent interest. New commitments for disaster loans in 1954 will be about 3½ times the 1953 level.

FARM CREDIT ADMINISTRATION

The Farm Credit Administration, formerly in the Department of Agriculture, became a separate and independent agency on December 4, 1953, supervising the Federal intermediate credit banks, production credit corporations, and the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation (in liquidation), the banks for cooperatives and the Federal land banks. All except the Federal intermediate credit banks are either quasi-public agencies or relatively inactive in extending credit.

Federal intermediate credit banks.—The 12 Federal intermediate credit banks extend credit to production credit associations and privately capitalized farm-lending institutions by discounting short-term notes to help finance the production needs of farmers. To finance their operations, the banks sell short-term debentures to the public. The banks may have obligations outstanding of not more than 10 times their capital and surplus. The capital and surplus also can be increased by additional subscriptions from a revolving fund in the Treasury. The total obligational authority of $1,594 million available on June 30, 1953, includes these potential increases in the banks' funds.

To finance expanding farm production and to meet higher production costs, new commitments have increased steadily in recent years. In 1955 they are expected to be more than 10 percent higher than in 1953. Repayments, however, will nearly cover disbursements, with net expenditures estimated at $47 million.

Interest rates charged vary with the costs of funds to the individual banks. They are set high enough to cover all expenses. One-quarter of the net income of the banks is paid to the Treasury as a statutory franchise tax and the rest is added to their surplus and reserves, which on June 30, 1953 amounted to $51 million.

EXPANSION OF DEFENSE PRODUCTION

Under the Defense Production Act, the President is authorized to make loans or advances or to guarantee loans for expansion of defense production. Numerous agencies participate in these programs.

Loan guarantees.—Under section 301 of the Defense Production Act, the Departments of the Army, the Navy, the Air Force, Commerce, the Interior, and Agriculture, the Atomic Energy Commission, and the General Services Administration are authorized to guarantee loans by public or private financing institutions to defense contractors and subcontractors. The Federal Reserve banks act as fiscal agents for the guarantees of private loans, and the procedure is governed by the Federal Reserve Board's regulation V. No specific limitation is placed on the amount of loan guarantees.

From the beginning of the program in September 1950 to the end of December 1953, about 1,300 V-loans, totaling $2.4 billion, have been authorized by the procurement agencies. About 90 percent of the guarantees have been authorized by the Departments of the Air Force, the Army, and the Navy, primarily to speed the production of aircraft and aircraft parts, electronics and communication equipment, tanks, weapons, and ammunition. Guarantees by the General Services Administration to expand production of aluminum and other basic minerals and metals account for nearly all of the remainder. The volume of new commitments will continue to decline in 1955 as expansion goals are being reached.

To cover administrative expenses and possible losses, charges are made for guarantees, depending upon the proportion of the loan guaranteed. This proportion has averaged about 75 percent. The guaranteed portion of loans must be purchased by the procurement agency upon request of the lender. So far, only about 26 guarantees have been converted into purchased loans, and income has substantially exceeded expenses.

Loans and advances.—Under section 302 of the Defense Production Act, the President is authorized to make direct loans or to participate in private loans for the expansion of industrial capacity, development of technological processes, or production of essential materials. The President has delegated this authority to the Treasury Department since the liquidation of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and to the Export-Import Bank. The authority is available for borrowers upon certification by the appropriate defense agency as to essentiality to the defense effort. Certifications of loans to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation totaled about $300 million on June 30, 1953, of which more than two-thirds was to assist in expanding the production of copper, steel, and other basic minerals and metals. Loans by the Export-Import Bank account for only a relatively small part of the total. New commitments will be relatively low, since most of the planned expansion is already under way.

Under section 303 of the same act, the General Services Administration makes advances on purchase commitments for strategic minerals and metals and industrial equipment. Most of the advances estimated for 1954 and 1955 will be for the expansion of titanium production.

Interest rates charged on both loans and advances are generally 5 percent. No net ultimate cost is expected.

SMALL BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION

The Small Business Administration was created July 30, 1953 and since the expiration of the lending authority of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation on September 29, 1953 has been authorized to make loans to small business and to victims of disasters.

Loans to small business are authorized up to a total of $150 million outstanding at any one time. The maximum loan to any one borrower is $150,000, and maximum maturity generally 10 years. Loans may be made only if financial assistance is not otherwise available on reasonable terms and if there is reasonable assurance of repayment. Moreover, direct loans are made only where the extension of credit jointly with private banks is not possible. The current interest rate is 6 percent.

The Administrator has broad authority to make loans to victims of floods or other disasters. His policy is to designate disaster areas, residents of which are eligible for special financial assistance. There is no limit on the amount that may be loaned to each borrower, but the aggregate outstanding at any one time may not exceed $25 million. Loans for housing may have maturities up to 20 years, but other loans are limited to 10 years. Current interest rates are 3 percent for disaster housing loans, and 5 percent for other disaster loans.

An appropriation of $55 million was made in 1954 to finance both the small business and disaster loan programs. Assuming continuance of present economic activity, this amount is expected to be sufficient to finance loans through the fiscal year 1955.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT

The only credit programs administered by the Treasury Department and included in this analysis are the liquidation of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the 1947 loan to the United Kingdom. The Treasury Department also makes a small amount of civil defense loans.

Reconstruction Finance Corporation.—The Reconstruction Finance Corporation Liquidation Act terminated the authority of the Corporation to make new loan commitments on September 28, 1953, and provided for complete termination of the Corporation on June 30, 1954. During 1954, the Corporation will be engaged in an intensive effort to liquidate outstanding loans and investments. The Secretary of the Treasury will continue the liquidation thereafter. Over half the portfolio should be liquidated by June 30, 1955.

Outstanding loans, loan guarantees, and commitments by type of loan, June 30, 1953

Loan to United Kingdom.—A loan of $3,750 million was made to the United Kingdom in 1947 and 1948. It is a 50-year loan at 2-percent interest. Repayments of principal have been made on schedule, beginning in 1951. They are deposited directly in miscellaneous receipts and are not available for new loans.

EXPORT-IMPORT BANK OF WASHINGTON

The Export-Import Bank is the principal foreign lending agency of the Government, with total lending and insurance authority of $4.5 billion. Its major function is the promotion of trade between the United States and foreign countries. It extends loans to finance American exports and imports, to develop foreign sources of strategic materials, and to promote the economic development of underdeveloped countries. The Bank also acts as an agent for the Foreign Operations Administration in administering loans and makes a limited number of loans under authority of the Defense Production Act. In 1953 the Bank was authorized to use up to $100 million of its lending authority to insure American exporters against certain risks of expropriation and confiscation.

In general, the Bank's loans supplement or encourage private investment, rather than compete with it. Increased emphasis is being placed by the Bank on guaranteeing private loans, rather than making loans directly. Loan maturities vary from several months on export credits to a number of years on developmental loans. Interest rates vary with the type of loan and are directly related to prevailing yields on United States Government securities; they are lower on loans made to or guaranteed by a foreign government. Present rates range from 3.5 percent on short-term export credits to 6 percent on certain long-term unguaranteed loans. Losses have been extremely small and income is more than adequate to cover costs; reserves amounting to $297 million on June 30, 1953, have been set aside for future contingencies. Annual dividends have been paid to the Treasury since 1952 at the rate of 2 percent on capital stock.

FOREIGN OPERATIONS ADMINISTRATION

As part of its broad program to assist in the restoration of international economic stability and to promote the economic development of underdeveloped areas, the Foreign Operations Administration makes loans to foreign governments. In the fiscal year 1953 loans for special purposes were made to Spain, India, Pakistan, and Afghanistan, and loans for the development of strategic materials to several other countries. The only new loans anticipated for 1954 are for basic materials development.

As successor to the Mutual Security Agency and the Technical Cooperation Administration, the agency also administers loans previously made, including the $62.5 million loan to Spain and the $190 million loan to India under the India Emergency Food Act. More than half of the loans outstanding were advanced during 1949, shortly after passage of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1948.

Interest charges on most outstanding loans are 2.5 percent. However, interest on loans for the development of basic materials have been from 4.5 to 5 percent. Costs of administering the loans are financed from funds available for the general administration of the agency. No significant repayments are scheduled till after June 30, 1955.

Special Analysis F

FEDERAL ACTIVITIES IN PUBLIC WORKS AND OTHER CONSTRUCTION

Public works and other construction activities are necessary for accomplishing many of the functions of the Federal Government. This analysis presents a summary of the authorizations and expenditures for the various Federal construction activities. Detailed information on these activities is presented in part II of the budget under the agency responsible for the activity.

Federal construction activities represent a significant portion of the total construction activities of the Nation. In recent years direct Federal construction has averaged about 12 percent of total construction. In addition, substantial amounts of other public and private construction have resulted from Federal financial assistance.

The volume and types of Federal construction vary from year to year as national needs and objectives change. Economic and fiscal policies, the level of construction prices, and the magnitude of State and local and private construction also influence the Federal program. Because they create demands for materials, equipment, and labor, Federal public works have an important bearing on the level of economic activity throughout the Nation, as well as a direct effect on the total volume of construction. For these reasons an overall analysis of the volume and types of Federal construction activities is useful in the economic appraisal of this aspect of the Federal Government's programs.

The various functions of the Federal Government require a wide variety of public works and structures. These range from small buildings costing less than $25,000 to large river basin developments or military installations costing several hundreds of millions of dollars. The provision of some of the needed facilities is accomplished directly by the Federal Government as civil or military public works. In other cases the Government aids in the construction of public works in which there is a national interest through loans and grants to States and local governments. Most of the foregoing work is carried on by the private construction industry under contract with Federal, State, or local agencies. In addition, the Federal Government accomplishes some of its objectives by encouraging construction by private industry and individuals through incentives, such as loan guarantees for housing and tax concessions for defense plant expansion.

Some of the public works activities of the Federal Government are concentrated in a few areas of the country, as in the case of the atomic energy plants. Others, such as river and harbor projects and veterans' hospitals, are located throughout the country. Federal-aid highways are under construction in each of the States. Some facilities are constructed outside the United States.

The expenditures shown for public works and other construction in this analysis are budget expenditures rather than the value of work put in place during the year. Although budget expenditures correspond generally to the value of work put in place during the year on federally owned projects, they include only the Federal portion of the cost of the State and local public works aided. Also, Federal expenditures do not reflect the volume of private construction resulting from Federal incentives to industry and individuals.

The total Federal public works expenditures are estimated at $4.5 billion for the fiscal year 1955. This amount includes $1.6 billion for civil public works and $2.9 billion for national security and other defense construction. This total compares with estimated expenditures of $4.9 billion in 1954 and actual expenditures of $5.2 billion in 1953. The decrease reflects the substantial decline from 1953 levels in new authority for civil public works in 1954 and the further reduction proposed for 1955. National security construction expenditures are estimated at slightly less than 1954 levels. Throughout this budget expenditures for atomic energy construction are classified in the national security category.

Type	Expenditures
	1953 actual	1954 estimate	1955 estimate
Civil public works, including loans and grants	$2.2	$1.9	$1.6
National security public works	3.0	3.0	2.9
Total	5.2	4.9	4.5

In addition to expenditures for civil and national security public works, an estimated $350 million will be spent in 1955 for Federal assistance to construction activities of various semipublic bodies and private nonprofit groups, as well as some international agencies. Certain other Federal programs will stimulate public housing construction and private construction by home owners, farmers, and private businesses—largely through loan guarantees, tax concessions, and procurement contracts.

Authorizations and expenditures for the various Federal public works programs are shown in the detailed table on pages 1147 to 1151. At the end of this table there is shown a reconciliation of the public works expenditures according to the major categories of "Special Analysis D, Investment, operating, and other budget expenditures."

Civil Public Works

Most of the expenditures for Federal civil public works in the fiscal year 1955 will be for projects started in earlier years. After World War II a number of large river basin projects were undertaken, a veterans' hospital program was started, and, following the attack on Korea, an expansion took place in several civil works programs supporting defense. While defense-related construction will continue in 1955 at about the same level as in 1954, the veterans' hospital program and some of the large postwar multiple-purpose projects are now nearing completion.

The recommendations for public works in this budget are based on the policy that as long as national income and employment remain high, public works expenditures should be held to a minimum, consistent with sound provisions for meeting the responsibilities of the Federal Government. This is in line with the administration's policy of encouraging non-Federal interests to formulate plans and undertake developments on their own initiative and responsibility. While, therefore, provision has been made for the starting of some new projects to meet urgent needs, the civil public works program as a whole is largely for continuation of work underway at a minimum economic rate. Some desirable projects have been postponed, but these will be available for starting later, consistent with sound fiscal and economic policy.

Timing of public works expenditures is one of the means by which Government activities may be used to offset a decline in private construction. To be effective as an anticyclical measure, however, needed public works projects must be planned well in advance so as to be available for undertaking when economic conditions dictate. This budget provides funds for the advance planning of additional Federal projects. It also provides, under proposed legislation, $10 million to institute a program of loans to State and local governments for the advance planning of their public works.

Table 2 shows expenditures for civil public works by agency and major type of activity. The 1955 total includes $1,131 million for additions to Federal physical assets through construction of direct Federal projects and $697 million for additions to State and local assets through Federal grants for highways, airports, schools, hospitals, and other facilities. Loans of $881 million for State and local public works and repayments of $1,069 million result in net receipts of $189 million.

CONTINUING WORK AND NEW PROJECTS

Table 3 classifies the civil public works programs of the Federal agencies as new or continuing, and as direct Federal construction or as loans or grants to non-Federal public agencies for construction. New projects, or features, and new commitments include (a) those direct Federal projects or project features on which construction will be started with appropriations or other types of authorizations recommended for the fiscal year 1955, and (b) the new commitments recommended for the fiscal year 1955 for loan and grant programs.

To carry on projects and programs now underway will require estimated expenditures of $1.8 billion in 1955, offset in part by net receipts of $198 million from loan programs. Expenditures of $6.2 billion will be necessary in later years to complete these projects. The estimated amount required after the fiscal year 1955 is based largely on current construction prices. Should these costs change before the projects are completed, expenditures would differ accordingly.

The budget recommends starting of work on 6 irrigation and water supply projects, 8 local flood-prevention projects, and 8 navigation projects, 1 of which is recommended for starting in the fiscal year 1954 with supplemental funds. In addition, it provides for resumption of work on 2 flood control reservoirs and 2 river and harbor improvements. These new projects and resumptions are estimated to cost a total of $184 million, with expenditures of $20 million scheduled for the fiscal year 1955. Together with the St. Lawrence Seaway, recommended under proposed legislation, this totals to 23 new projects and 4 resumptions in the budget in the water resources programs.

New projects to be started by the Bureau of Reclamation in 1955 include the Middle Rio Grande in New Mexico; the Alamogordo Dam Spillway Enlargement, Carlsbad, N. Mex.; and the Yuma Auxiliary in Arizona. All three of these projects are authorized. Under proposed legislation, construction of the Washita project in Oklahoma and the Santa Maria project in California is also recommended. Starting of work on a new unit of the North Side pumping division of the Minidoka project, Idaho, is also proposed. These are small or intermediate-sized developments. In their selection, consideration has been given to the benefits of supplemental irrigation for established farming areas, to more intensive beneficial use of existing water supplies, and to the ability of the water users to make a reasonable repayment of the investment.

The new flood prevention projects, to be constructed by the Corps of Engineers, are relatively small projects and can be completed within 3 years. The detailed plans preliminary to construction have been completed. Each of the projects has a favorable ratio of benefits to costs and provides for a reasonable degree of financial cooperation by local interests. The eight new starts include flood prevention works at Beardstown, Ill.; Barbourville, Ky.; Anacostia River, Md.; Adams, Mass.; Batavia, N. Y.; Johnsonburg, Pa.; Little Missouri River below Murfreesburo, Ark.; and Kawainui Swamp, Hawaii. Resumption of work is proposed on two flood control reservoirs—Coralville Reservoir in Iowa, and Dillon Reservoir in Ohio, in order to protect and obtain benefits from the Government's earlier investment.

The Corps of Engineers will also start work on six channel and harbor projects—Redwood City Harbor, Calif.; Housatonic River, Conn.; Portland Harbor, Maine; Duluth-Superior Harbor, Minn.-Wis.; Fairfield, N. C.; Missouri River from Omaha, Nebr., to Sioux City, Iowa; and on two lock and dam projects—the Warrior River lock and dam in Alabama and the Green River lock and dam in Kentucky. The latter is proposed for starting in fiscal 1954 with a supplemental appropriation. Also, work will be resumed in 1955 on the Calumet Harbor and River project in Illinois and Indiana; and the Port Aransas-Corpus Christi project in Texas. These projects have been selected to assure expeditious movement of traffic in existing harbors or waterways serving important requirements of commerce or national security. Emphasis has been given to small or intermediate-sized projects for which detailed engineering plans have been completed. Not only do the benefits of these projects exceed their costs but, except for four high-priority projects of national interest, local beneficiaries will make a reasonable financial contribution.

Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis

In line with the administration's policy of encouraging State and local undertakings of water resources projects, $10 million is recommended under proposed legislation to permit the Federal Government to share in the costs of such projects when national benefits warrant.

Among the other new project starts are two veterans' hospitals, some transmission lines for the Bonneville Power Administration, and additional facilities for the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics. Most of these involve relatively small expenditures.

BASIC DATA, PRELIMINARY INVESTIGATIONS, AND DETAILED PLANS

Construction expenditures in this analysis do not include costs of basic data collection and preliminary surveys. These are essential, however, to the efficient and economical design and construction of projects.

Basic data.—A total of $39 million is recommended in the fiscal year 1955 for general coverage data collection, including geodetic surveys and topographic mapping, geologic and soil surveys, and for assembly of hydrologic and climatologic data. These programs, designed to meet a wide variety of nationally important needs, provide data for use in the preliminary planning and investigation of Federal and other construction projects, and reduce the cost of specific project investigations and surveys.

Preliminary surveys.—Careful preliminary investigation to determine engineering and economic feasibility is required to produce well-conceived construction projects. Inadequate examination of all the problems involved in project formulation, before authorization, may result in approval of projects having questionable justification or in increased costs. Appropriations and allotments totaling $15.4 million are recommended for the fiscal year 1955 for preliminary investigations of river-basin and other construction programs under consideration.

This budget includes funds for completion by June 30, 1955, of the comprehensive interagency surveys of the Arkansas-White and Red River Basins and the New England-New York area authorized by the 1950 Flood Control Act.

Detailed planning.—Detailed project planning costs are included in construction costs in this analysis. Preparation of these plans well in advance of construction provides for orderly programing of project construction and prevents expensive changes in project designs during the construction period. Such planning also provides an opportunity to verify the economic feasibility and the relative merits of projects as well as the estimated costs, before construction is started. Funds for advance preparation of plans in fiscal 1955 are estimated at $9.5 million. This total includes $4.3 million to enable the Corps of Engineers and the Bureau of Reclamation to plan a limited number of high-priority projects already authorized by the Congress. In addition, a substantial amount of planning is carried on as construction progresses on large water resource projects.

RESERVE OF PUBLIC WORKS PROJECTS

Authorized work.—In addition to the commitments to complete work now underway or work to be started in 1955, agency reports indicate that, on the basis of present prices, $12 billion of construction work has been authorized, either by general or specific legislation. This work is available for undertaking at such time as economic conditions warrant and when funds are provided. About $9 billion of this authorized work is included in the river-basin programs of the Corps of Engineers, the Bureau of Reclamation, and the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Planned projects.—By the end of the current fiscal year, Federal agencies will have an estimated $1.2 billion of authorized projects planned to a stage where construction could be started, and advance planning in various stages of completion on an additional $3.5 billion. Comparable totals for 1955 are estimated at $1.7 billion and $3.1 billion, respectively. Most of this planned reserve consists of water resources projects. By the end of 1955, the Corps of Engineers will have completed planning on about $1 billion of work, and the Bureau of Reclamation about $400 million. In addition, the Corps of Engineers will have planning in process on another $1 billion of work, and the Bureau of Reclamation will have planning underway on $800 million of work.

PROGRAMS BY MAJOR FUNCTION AND TYPE OF FACILITY

Civil public works expenditures are classified in table 5, following, according to the major functions to which they relate. Nearly all of the functions of the Federal Government require some public works of one type or another. However, almost 95 percent of the civil public works expenditures in 1955 will be for two major functions—the development of natural resources and the provision of transportation facilities. The remaining expenditures are spread over the other functions of the Government.

In some cases, public works expenditures represent only a small part of the total cost of the programs carried out under that function. For example, in the agriculture and agricultural resources function, expenditures for construction are estimated to be $10 million out of a total for the function of $2.4 billion in 1955. On the other hand, about three-quarters of the expenditures for the natural resources function are outlays for works and structures of various types.

The type and amount of financial assistance to non-Federal interests also varies among functions. Most of the works previously undertaken in the area of resources development have been Federal projects, with the exception of the upstream flood prevention program of the Department of Agriculture. Non-Federal interests have usually borne only a minor share of the costs. This is also true of the general government function, under which administrative buildings of the Federal Government are classified. In contrast, the national interest in some fields of transportation is furthered by grants to State and local governments for such non-Federal programs as highway construction. In the field of housing, Federal assistance takes the form of loans or loan guarantees.

Natural resources.—Expenditures for natural resources make up 52 percent of the total outlays for civil public works in the fiscal year 1955 and about 47 percent in 1954. Multiple-purpose development of river basins for flood control, irrigation and water supply, hydroelectric power, and related purposes account for 95 percent of these expenditures. Construction expenditures in 1955 for the conservation and development of forest, mineral, park, fish and wildlife resources, and the resources of Indian lands will amount to $46.6 million.

Completion of the facilities underway or recommended in 1955 will necessitate a relatively high level of expenditures under this function for several years. Major river basin development projects, costing in some cases $200 million to $300 million, require from 3 to 10 years for completion, with substantial outlays in peak construction years.

Transportation and communication.—Transportation facilities also account for a large share, about one-third, of the expenditures for civil public works in 1955. Largest expenditures are for the Federal-aid highway program. An authorization of $575 million is currently available under the Federal Aid Highway Act of 1952 for grants to States under this program. The budget includes, under proposed legislation, new authorizations for the Federal aid and forest highway programs for the fiscal year 1955. Under proposed legislation, funds are recommended for the United States section of the St. Lawrence Seaway. This is estimated to cost in total $105 million. Most of the remaining expenditures are for construction of forest highways, Alaska roads, the Alaska Railroad, Federal and Federal-aid airports, and air and water navigation aids and facilities.

Construction expenditures by the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics for research facilities will decrease from $41 million in 1954 to $24.5 million in 1955 because a major portion of the construction and modernization programs begun in previous years will be approaching completion. The new projects to be undertaken in 1955 amount to $5 million, and include special facilities for research on rocket engines and high-speed seaplanes and a number of important modifications to increase the usefulness of existing wind tunnels and engine test facilities.

Veterans' services and benefits.—During the fiscal year 1954, work will continue on the construction program for Veterans Administration hospitals, authorized in 1947, consisting of 77 hospital projects to provide 37,740 beds, 2 new regional offices on existing hospital sites, and the major alteration and renovation of existing hospitals and homes. All but 4 of the 77 hospitals in this program will be under contract by the end of 1954, and 2 of these 4 are expected to be placed under contract in 1955. They will be located in San Francisco, Calif., and Topeka, Kans.

The 1955 budget also makes provision for carrying on construction work in 14 United States military cemeteries on foreign battlegrounds, as well as the construction of drainage lines, structures and buildings, fences, and drives in cemeteries in this country.

International security and foreign relations.—Public works activities under this function provide for the construction of office buildings for the United States Government abroad, for living quarters where necessary, and for completion of certain facilities in the overseas radio network of the "Voice of America."

Social security, welfare, and health.—The Federal Government shares in the cost of construction of hospitals and public-health centers through grants to public agencies and nonprofit institutions. In the fiscal year 1955, approval is anticipated on 200 projects, and a total of $657 million will have been made available by the end of the year. The fiscal year 1957 is the last year for which allocations are authorized. Under proposed legislation this program will be broadened in scope to include other facilities such as chronic disease hospitals, nursing homes and diagnostic centers. Grants for State surveys of needs in these areas are also to be provided. Only the grants made to public agencies are included in the public-works total; those for private nonprofit hospitals are shown in table 8. Research facilities for public health, water and sewage plants, and other community facilities needed for public health in defense areas as well as buildings and improvements at Federal prisons are also included under this function.

Housing and community development.—The Federal Government encourages the construction of low-rent public housing units through loans to local housing authorities. The 1955 budget provides construction of 35,000 units, as compared with 20,000 units provided for by the Congress in 1954 and the annual average of 135,000 units a year for 6 years authorized in the Housing Act of 1949. Other expenditures under this function consist largely of grants and loans for community facilities, including water and sewage systems, and for the provision of public works in Alaska.

Education and general research.—Federal grants are made for school construction in defense areas and in districts burdened by Federal activities. These grants constitute the major part of public works expenditures for education. Under existing legislation no additional projects are eligible after 1954 and no appropriations are to be made after 1955. This budget provides $39.5 million to complete payments to the most urgent cases.

Agriculture and agricultural resources.—Construction of a laboratory for research on foot-and-mouth disease is expected to begin in the fiscal year 1954 and to continue in 1955. Upstream conservation and flood-prevention work, including diversion ditches, floodways, and floodwater-retarding structures, will be continued in 1955 in 11 watershed areas, authorized under the 1936 Flood Control Act, and in a number of small experimental watershed treatment areas under a program started in 1954. In addition, funds are provided under proposed legislation to permit the Department of Agriculture to cooperate with States and local groups, in building small water control and utilization structures in upstream areas. Expenditures in succeeding years may be expected to increase as this work progresses.

Finance, commerce and industry.—The synthetic rubber facilities operated by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation are being offered for sale, and transfer of the facilities to private operation is anticipated near the end of 1955. Capital expenditures estimated for 1954 and 1955 include only amounts necessary for the replacement of worn-out or obsolete facilities.

The national industrial reserve includes nickel-producing and other defense production facilities which have been placed in operation as part of the defense effort. The more recent modifications of plant facilities have been financed under the borrowing authority provided in the Defense Production Act.

General government.—Public works classified under this function include the administrative buildings required to carry on the Government's business. There is at present no general public-buildings construction program underway; this type of construction has been deferred since the start of World War II. A few projects of an urgent character were undertaken, however, and work on these will continue. Grants are recommended for construction of some public works in Samoa and the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands. Loans to the District of Columbia will partially finance the District's public works program.

Types of facilities.—The foregoing discussion of the public works expenditures according to major functions indicates that the Federal Government requires a wide diversity of facilities to carry out its responsibilities. Also, as is shown in table 5, the same general type of facility is sometimes needed in carrying out several major functions. A summary of Federal public works according to type of facility would be useful in various analyses. Budget classifications and expenditure estimates, however, do not permit a complete analysis on this basis.

A major group of related types of facilities includes those required for water resources development, such as levees, floodwalls, locks, dams, reservoirs, canals, pumping plants, power generation and transmission facilities, and various other facilities. These are discussed in some detail in the analysis of water resources development following.

A number of agencies construct highways, roads, and bridges. Most of these activities are classified under the transportation and communication function, where an estimated $545 million will be spent in 1955 on the Federal-aid primary, secondary, urban, and interstate highway systems. These systems now have a combined mileage of about 695,000 miles. Other highway and road expenditures in 1954 and 1955 will provide for construction and improvement of some 760 miles of forest highways, and in 1955, about 120 miles of roads and trails in national parks, progress on 4 parkways, construction and improvement of Alaska roads, as well as construction of roads on Indian lands and development roads for access to timber in the national forests and public-domain lands. The construction of large dams and reservoirs frequently requires relocation of highways and new road construction. Details shown in the budget, however, do not provide the basis for segregating these expenditures from the costs of the reservoirs.

Other types of facilities which are constructed under several major functions include hospitals, schools, research facilities, and housing and community facilities. In addition to expenditures of $58 million for veterans' hospitals in 1955, $8 million will be spent for hospitals in the District of Columbia and $48 million for Federal grants to States for public hospital construction. Grants for nonpublic hospitals, shown in table 8, are estimated at $40 million.

Most of the expenditure for housing and community development are classified under that function, although some construction of these types occurs under other functions. Employees' quarters will be under construction by the Panama Canal Company and a few by other agencies.

Research facilities are needed to carry on the Government's activities in a number of fields. Construction of these facilities will require about $35 million in 1955.

The estimated expenditures for the various types of facilities discussed above would be much larger if they included the amounts for construction for national security. These programs are discussed on page 1145 and shown in the table on page 1151.

WATER RESOURCES AND RELATED DEVELOPMENT

The civil works programs of the Federal Government are classified in the budget according to the major functions which they serve, as shown in table 5. However, some activities cut across several of the functional categories. An important example of this is the Federal Government's overall program for water resources and related developments. While the major part of this work is classified under natural resources, other water resource developments are carried out under programs for agriculture and agricultural resources and transportation and communication. Expenditures for all of these water resources and related developments are estimated at $848 million in the fiscal year 1955 as compared to $869 million in the year 1954.

Flood control.—The flood control work of the Federal Government is carried on principally through the programs of the Corps of Engineers and the Tennessee Valley Authority. The programs of the Department of Agriculture and the Bureau of Reclamation also include flood control or flood prevention. The flood control program of the Corps of Engineers is nationwide in scope except for the Tennessee Valley area. It involves the construction of storage reservoirs for flood control, hydroelectric power and related purposes; the construction of protecting levees and flood walls; and the improvement of channels. In 1955, emphasis will continue on protective works in the Mississippi River and its principal tributaries, particularly the Missouri. Large flood control projects are also underway in the Los Angeles and Central Valley areas of California and in central and southern Florida. Nine flood control projects and four multiple-purpose projects with flood control benefits will be substantially completed in 1955. In 1953 work was accomplished on 160 predominantly flood control projects as well as on 25 multiple-purpose projects with flood control benefits. Eight new local flood prevention projects are included in this budget, and resumption of work is proposed on two flood control reservoirs previously deferred. Work of the Tennessee Valley Authority is generally similar to that of the Corps of Engineers but is confined to the Tennessee Valley.

Navigation.—Navigation facilities are provided primarily through the rivers and harbors program of the Corps of Engineers, except in the Tennessee Valley where such facilities are constructed by the Tennessee Valley Authority. Some of the multiple-purpose projects of the Bureau of Reclamation also produce navigation benefits through regulation of low-water river flows and prevention of sedimentation. Navigation projects of the Corps of Engineers include improvement of channels and harbors, construction of locks, dams and canals, and shore protection work, as well as multiple-purpose projects with navigation benefits in addition to power and other features. Tennessee Valley Authority projects are generally similar except that no shore protection work is done. Five channel and harbor projects, 1 lock and dam, and 1 multiple-purpose project with navigation features will be substantially completed by the Corps of Engineers in 1955. In 1953 work was accomplished on 39 navigation projects as well as on 7 multiple-purpose projects with navigation features. In 1955 construction will be initiated or resumed on 8 channel and harbor projects and on 1 lock and dam, and will be continued on 1 lock and dam project scheduled for initiation in 1954 with supplemental appropriations. These projects are exclusive of the St. Lawrence seaway.

Irrigation.—The Federal program of land reclamation by irrigation is limited to the 17 Western States and is carried on principally by the Bureau of Reclamation. Some additional works are constructed by the Bureau of Indian Affairs on Indian lands. Irrigation benefits also result from some multiple-purpose projects of the Corps of Engineers.

The Bureau of Reclamation program consists primarily of continuation of construction on 58 irrigation and power projects, including the Eklutna project in Alaska and 20 units in the Missouri River Basin. Approximately 59 percent of the recommended appropriation will be for seven major developments, as follows: The Central Valley and Solano projects in California, Columbia Basin in Washington, Palisades in Idaho, Weber Basin in Utah, Lower Marias unit in Montana, and Webster unit in Kansas.

The Bureau of Reclamation will start construction of five new irrigation and water supply projects and a new unit of an existing irrigation project.

Bureau of Reclamation facilities scheduled for completion in 1955 will provide a full water supply for 128,100 new acres and a supplemental water supply for 169,700 acres of presently irrigated land.

Summary of Federal electric power activities.—Much of the Federal water resource development program includes provision for the generation of electric power. This power is produced at hydroelectric facilities included in multiple-purpose reservoir projects such as those constructed by the Bureau of Reclamation, the Corps of Engineers, and the Tennessee Valley Authority, and at steam electric plants constructed by the Tennessee Valley Authority to meet increased regional and Atomic Energy Commission demands for electric power.

Generating capacity installed by Federal power agencies now amounts to 11.9 million kilowatts, or about 13 percent of total United States capacity and, when projects now underway are completed, will total 22.8 million kilowatts. Six million kilowatts of capacity is scheduled for completion by the end of 1955, which will bring the total to 17.9 million kilowatts by that date.

Corps of Engineers	2.2	8.1
Bureau of Reclamation	4.6	5.2
Tennessee Valley Authority	5.1	9.4
International Boundary and Water Commission		.1
Total	11.9	22.8

Marketing of the power from Federal facilities will require the addition of 1,405 miles of transmission lines in 1955 and will bring the total mileage in operation by the end of 1955 up to about 26,100 miles.

NATIONAL SECURITY CONSTRUCTION

Expenditures for major direct Federal military and other national security construction are shown on page 1151 of the detailed table. The amounts shown do not reflect the large volume of private construction stimulated by the military procurement program for aircraft and similar equipment.

Department of Defense, military public works.—Military public works include both overseas and domestic installations of operational, tactical, logistical, training, and testing facilities for the Air Force, Army, and Navy. Some additional facilities are being constructed for the civilian components reserves and the National Guard. Construction of housing and operational buildings for the Alaska communications system is continuing. The second barrel to the Navy's San Diego aqueduct is expected to be completed during the fiscal year 1956. Expenditures for these purposes, estimated at $1.65 billion in 1955, will be slightly below the 1954 level.

Other national security construction.—This category describes construction activities of agencies other than the Department of Defense which are directly related to the national security program.

Construction expenditures of the Atomic Energy Commission in 1955 will be chiefly for continued work on the expansion program for which funds were appropriated in the fiscal year 1953. This program includes large additions to the production facilities at Hanford, Wash.; Oak Ridge, Tenn.; and Paducah, Ky.; and a new plant at Portsmouth, Ohio. Work will continue at the Savannah River site. Work will go forward on an atomic power reactor, a large particle accelerator and other research and development machines and facilities. New projects proposed for 1955 total considerably less than those for 1954 and include uranium ore processing plants, some weapons plant additions, and certain research and development facilities necessary to the reactor development, physical research and weapons programs.

Construction of tank capacity and covered warehouse space needed to store the stockpile of strategic and critical materials will be completed in 1955.

OTHER FEDERAL ACTIVITIES IN CONSTRUCTION

In addition to civil and national security public works, there are other types of Federal activities, involving loans, loan guarantees, grants, or direct Federal expenditures, which affect or involve construction. The distinguishing feature of these expenditures is that they contribute principally to the physical assets of international public bodies, of semipublic and private groups, or of individuals, whereas public works are limited both in the foregoing sections of this analysis and in the "Character analysis of budget expenditures" (Analysis D) to additions to Federal, State, and local governmental physical assets.

INTERNATIONAL AND SEMIPUBLIC WORKS

One important group of these programs consists of Federal aid for international public works and semipublic works programs, shown in table 8.

As part of our international responsibilities, the United States is helping to construct inter-American highways in Costa Rica and Nicaragua and to build hospitals in the Philippines for the veterans. Table 8 does not indicate the assistance given under the NATO and mutual security programs for the construction of facilities needed in the common defense.

The largest of the semipublic works programs is that of the Rural Electrification Administration. This agency makes loans primarily to rural cooperatives to finance electrification facilities to serve rural areas. The program was initiated in 1935 when less than 11 percent of the farms in the United States had electricity, as compared to 91 percent at present. Loans through calendar year 1953 total $2.8 billion. The agency also makes loans to provide and improve rural telephone facilities, a program initiated in 1950, when only 38 percent of farms had telephones.

To achieve better balance between upstream and downstream activities in flood control and conservation, the existing upstream watershed protection and flood prevention program of the Department of Agriculture will be supplemented through the provision, under proposed legislation, of $3 million for small water control and utilization developments.

Grants for hospital construction are made to States for both public and private hospitals. The grants for public hospitals are classified as public works. Grants for private hospitals, most of them nonprofit hospitals, represent about 46 percent of the total hospital grants. (See Special Analysis G, Federal aid to State and local governments.)

Construction of a preclinical medical building at Howard University and a library-classroom building at the Columbia Institution for the Deaf will also be undertaken in 1955.

AIDS FOR PRIVATE CONSTRUCTION

Another group of Federal programs consists of loans, loan guarantees, tax concessions, and occasionally grants, direct aid, and other incentives. These programs stimulate construction by farmers, homeowners, and business. This construction adds up to an important segment of the Nation's total construction and, with special reference to the national security program, has helped to provide the large volume of essential industrial expansion.

The Farmers' Home Administration makes various types of loans for farmhouses, buildings, and water facilities. A part of the Department of Agriculture programs for flood prevention activities includes direct construction of control structures on farmers' lands. The Commodity Credit Corporation makes loans for the construction or expansion of grain-storage facilities and provides storage-use guarantees to encourage the construction of commercial storage facilities.

In the field of housing, the Federal Housing Administration and the Veterans Administration operate programs for the insurance or guarantee of mortgages on private homes.

Under the Defense Production Act and related legislation, incentives are provided to encourage construction of plants needed for national security. Certificates of necessity have been issued to permit rapid tax amortization of facilities whose total value is about $29 billion. Many of the substantial expansions in the steel, aluminum, petroleum refining, electric power, and similar industries have received this type of assistance. Under the $2.1 billion borrowing authority in the Defense Production Act, loans, advances against production, guaranteed prices, and purchase contracts at higher than ceiling prices are also provided. Most of the desired expansion activities under these programs, required to achieve mobilization objectives, have already been initiated.

The loans and loan guarantee programs, including those having a major impact on private construction activities, are discussed in Special Analysis E, relating to Federal credit programs.

Special Analysis G

FEDERAL AID TO STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS

This analysis summarizes the estimates of expenditures for Federal aid to State and local governments which appear in various agency chapters in part II of this budget. Federal aid in the fiscal year 1955 is estimated at $2,749 million, 4 percent of all Federal budget expenditures. This includes an estimated $168 million under proposed legislation. The detailed table which follows this explanatory statement identifies individual programs.

Federal-aid expenditures over an 8-year period and their relative budgetary importance for the Federal Government and for the State and local governments are shown in table 1.

Table 1.—Federal-aid expenditures in relation to total Federal budget expenditures and total State-local revenues

Under Public Law 109 of the 83d Congress, approved July 10, 1953, a Commission on Intergovernmental Relations is at present studying the proper role of the Federal Government in relation to State and local governments. It is giving particular attention to Federal grants-in-aid and other aids to States and their subdivisions, as well as tax sources, governmental functions, and intergovernmental tax immunities. It is expected to report shortly on certain aspects of its assignment.

Categories and definitions.—"Federal aid to State and local governments," as the concept is used here, includes (a) grants-in-aid, (b) revenues shared with States, and (c) loans and repayable advances. In addition to financial assistance, it includes grants made in the form of commodities, structures, or services to the extent that these grants-in-kind can be identified in the budget. Aid to the governments of United States Territories and to their political subdivisions, is also included. Federal administrative expenses incurred in providing the aid are excluded.

In general, Federal aid is employed as a device of intergovernmental cooperation through which the Federal Government participates in selected State and local programs of national interest. Thus, in the case of grants-in-aid, the Federal financial participation is not based on a particular service rendered specifically for the Federal Government by the State or local government, but rather is in support of a State or locally administered program of governmental service to the public. In most programs, the distribution among the States is determined by a formula specified in the basic law.

Budget expenditures for grants-in-aid, estimated to total $2,873 million in the fiscal year 1955, exceed the estimate for all Federal-aid expenditures because collections on account of loans and repayable advances are expected to exceed the payments for such purposes. The budget expenditure total of $2,749 million for Federal aid therefore consists of $2,873 million of grants-in-aid and $53 million of revenue shared with States, less $177 million of net receipts for loans and repayable advances.

The laws governing grant-in-aid programs contain provisions restricting the Federal expenditures to specified purposes. States or local governments seeking to qualify for grants are usually required to meet certain conditions and standards relating to such matters as State or local financial participation, approval of State plans, the designation of an administering agency, a merit system of personnel selection, reporting systems, and audits. In their details these conditions and standards vary considerably among programs.

Legislation governing a few grant-in-aid programs permits aid to private nonprofit agencies or institutions. The hospital construction program of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare is an illustration. It is estimated that 45 percent of Federal expenditures for this purpose in the fiscal year 1955 will be used for nonpublic hospitals. The program, nevertheless, is one in which the States have a central role through the preparation of statewide programs, the approval of individual projects, and the channeling of the Federal payments. Therefore the entire amount authorized and spent for the program is included as Federal aid in this table, but the amount going to private institutions is also indicated separately. Payments for privately owned hospital facilities in the District of Columbia are also included as Federal aid; they are part of a general local hospital program roughly analogous to the federally aided programs in the States. In this instance, half of the Federal expenditures is an advance to be repaid by the District government.

On the other hand, certain Federal programs may incidentally involve grants to particular State or local governmental agencies, even though they are not primarily programs of grants-in-aid or loans to State or local governments. For example, the Public Health Service and National Science Foundation make research grants to colleges and universities, including some State and local institutions. These payments are not included in the tabulation.

The payment of unemployment allowances to military veterans of the Korean campaign is considered a direct Federal program. The States, as a service to the Federal Government, actually make the benefit payments through their unemployment compensation offices, and the expenses of administration are paid by the Federal Government as part of its general grant-in-aid for unemployment compensation and employment service administration. These administrative costs are not separately identifiable and are therefore included in the Federal-aid total even though the benefit payments are excluded.

Shared revenues are payments of a portion of the proceeds from the sale of certain Federal Government property, products, and services, usually in connection with the management of public lands. Usually, the Federal law requires that the State or local shares be used for schools or for schools and roads in the county where the Federal lands are located. Shared revenues comprise less than 2 percent of Federal expenditures for aid to State and local governments.

Loans are made to State or local governmental bodies by several Federal agencies for specified types of public improvements. The largest loan programs are those of the Housing and Home Finance Agency for low-rent public housing and for slum clearance and redevelopment. Advances are made by the Housing and Home Finance Agency for advance planning of non-Federal public works and slum-clearance planning; these are repayable if the planned projects are carried out. Advances are also made by the Federal Civil Defense Administration in the operation of its supply procurement fund, which represents a central purchasing operation for State and local civil defense stocks. Part of the Alaska public works expenditures, like the District of Columbia hospital program, represents Federal advances to be repaid by the government of the Territory.

Budget expenditures for loans and repayable advances are net amounts, representing for any year the gross amount of loans and advances less credits for certain collections during the year. As estimated for the fiscal year 1955 gross disbursements for this purpose are estimated at $941 million, collections at more than $1,118 million. The net excess of collections is estimated at $177 million.

Major programs.—In the budget estimates for the fiscal year 1955, grants to State and local governments account for three-quarters of all the expenditures estimated for social security, welfare, and health; labor; and education and general research. More than one-third of the budget expenditures for transportation and communication will be for grants-in-aid.

The largest single program of grants is for public assistance, estimated at $1,293 million, 47 percent of budget expenditures for Federal aid to State and local governments in 1955. The temporary increase in the Federal matching share, enacted in 1952, will expire automatically on September 30, 1954, under present law. The recommendations for proposed legislation would extend these amendments for two quarters, then substitute a new formula providing for a Federal matching share that would vary according to the per capita income of each State. The formula would also provide for a gradual reduction in the Federal share of old-age assistance as the number of aged recipients of old-age insurance increases. It is also recommended that old-age and survivors insurance benefits be increased—a measure that would bring about some reduction in supplementary assistance payments. The net result of these legislative proposals would be to offset, in part, the sharp drop that would otherwise take place in public assistance grants by reason of the expiration of the existing temporary increase.

Several major grants are for construction programs—highways, airports, schools in areas burdened by Federal activities, and hospitals. Proposed legislation broadening the hospital construction program will increase expenditures for this purpose in 1955.

Major nonconstruction programs include aid for the operation of schools in areas burdened by Federal activities, the administrative costs of unemployment compensation and labor placement services, school lunches, public health, and vocational rehabilitation. Proposed legislation extending and improving the program will increase vocational rehabilitation expenditures in 1955.

Expenditures reported under the national school lunch program for 1955 represent cash grants to the States. In 1954 and preceding years, expenditures shown for this program included provision for the purchase of some commodities. The $68 million estimated for the fiscal year 1955 will maintain cash payments to the States at the same level as in 1954. In addition, the grant-in-aid expenditures for "Removal of surplus agricultural commodities," reported under Agriculture and Agricultural Resources, represents the donation of commodities to schools for the national school lunch program. As a result, the total Federal aid for the school lunch program is estimated at $218 million for the fiscal year 1955, compared with $206 million in 1954.

Factors affecting aid expenditures and allocations.—The amounts expended for most programs of Federal aid are subject to two kinds of limitation: The establishment of maximum amounts in the basic authorizing laws and the necessity for annual appropriations by the Congress. However, in the public assistance program the Federal payment is a reimbursement to the States of a portion of their expenditures. The amount paid to each State is determined by a statutory formula applied to actual case loads and individual benefit rates established by the State. Consequently, the amount appropriated in advance does not necessarily limit the total of Federal payments for a given year. Congress customarily provides a deficiency appropriation if this is necessary to match the claims submitted by the States.

Most Federal grant-in-aid statutes provide for the allocation of money among the States according to formulas containing specified measures of need, such as population, per capita income, the incidence of certain diseases, area, or road mileage. These formulas vary considerably from one program to another, depending on the nature of the activity or services for which the aid is given. A few grants are allocated to States as a percentage of State expenditures within specified statutory limitations. Other grants are distributed as an equal amount to each State. Some allocation formulas are statutory while others are established by the administering Federal agency on the basis of criteria listed in the laws.

Citations to the basic laws are included in the pertinent appropriation language in part II of the budget. Summary information about the formulas, as well as the statutory citations for grants-in-aid and shared revenues, will be published by the Treasury Department in tabular form in the Report of the Secretary of the Treasury on the State of the Finances, for the Fiscal Year 1953.

Relationship to other budget figures.—All the amounts shown in this special analysis represent budget expenditures, as defined in the introduction to part I. Expenditures for grants or loans are made in some instances from an appropriation which also finances direct Federal operations or Federal administrative expenses. In such cases, the amounts tabulated here ordinarily represent an estimate of only that part of the expenditure which is paid out as aid to State and local governments. In most instances, the figures in the tabulation represent all of the expenditures from an appropriation. (The appropriations from which the table is compiled are listed in part II of the budget, and the program titles used in this analysis generally follow the appropriation account titles listed in the tables at the beginning of the several chapters in part II.)

The detailed tabulation of Federal expenditures for aid to State and local governments is arranged according to the functional classification used in the budget message. In order that this analysis may be related readily to the analysis of investment, operating, and other budget expenditures presented in special analysis D, that tabulation shows separately in each category the amounts of Federal

In most programs involving Federal aid to State and local governments, the expenditures in a given fiscal year correspond closely to the amount of the appropriation or other new obligational authority made available for that year. (The amount of new obligational authority enacted or recommended for each appropriation account is shown in part II of this budget.) There are some instances, as indicated above, where the appropriation or other obligational authority is available for direct Federal operations as well as Federal aid, and consequently only part of the expenditures is shown in this tabulation. Also, there are certain programs—chiefly construction—where there are substantial differences between new obligational authority for any year and expenditures in that year, arising from the fact that construction projects cannot generally be completed and paid for within a single fiscal year. In 1955, for example, the hospital construction and school construction programs of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare show substantial differences between appropriations and expenditure estimates.

Other financial relationships.—Apart from grants-in-aid, loans, and shared revenues, many other Federal expenditures and policies affect the finances of State and local governments. Types of transactions not covered in the tabulation of aids include the following:

(a) Reimbursements for various specific services, such as payments to public educational institutions for tuition of veterans and of students from the Armed Forces and payments to local governments for care of Federal prisoners in local institutions.

(c) The value of surplus educational and hospital supplies, materials, and equipment, and of housing donated or sold at substantial discount to State and local agencies.

(d) The payments of property taxes, or payments in lieu of property taxes, made upon Federal property under the provisions of nearly a score of laws. When such payments are based upon a percentage of revenues, however, as in the case of the Tennessee Valley Authority, they are included in the shared-revenue section of the table.

Also, the table does not reflect various indirect financial benefits accruing to State and local governments such as the lower interest rates which those governments may enjoy because of exemption from Federal income tax of interest paid on State and local debt; the indirect Federal guarantee of municipal obligations issued for low-rent housing and slum clearance; deductions of State and local income, property, and other taxes from personal and corporate incomes in computing Federal income tax; services which may be rendered to other governmental units by Federal agencies in the ordinary course of their operations; and some programs administered cooperatively for the purpose of both the State and Federal Governments, such as agricultural crop reporting or the National Guard.

Some of these financial benefits, of course, have counterparts in the form of services rendered or occasional payments made to the Federal Government by the States or their subdivisions.

Special Analysis H

RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

Research and development expenditures by the Federal Government reflect a wide range of scientific activities and agency responsibilities, arising in large measure from the needs of our national security programs.

These expenditures in the fiscal year 1955 are estimated at $2,014 million, a decrease of $113 million from 1954 and a decrease of $94 million from 1953.

A decline in expenditures for construction of research facilities accounts for most of the changes in 1955, but expenditures for conduct of research and development decrease also, as the following summary shows.

[In millions]

	1953 actual	1954 estimate	1955 estimate
Conduct of research and development	$1,846.4	$1,874.2	$1,824.0
Increase of research and development plant	261.5	252.9	190.2
Total	2,107.9	2,127.1	2,014.2

Federal expenditures for research and development increased substantially during World War II, declined thereafter and increased to an even higher peak during the Korean conflict. The total is expected to decline in the fiscal year 1955, as the following table shows. These substantial variations reflect, of course, the changes in funds used for military and related research. The remainder of the Government's research program has been relatively constant.

Federal expenditures for research and development

1941	152	222
1942	227	290
1943	534	610
1944	1,304	1,383
1945	1,511	1,606
1946	845	935
1947	807	916
1948	736	865
1949	938	1,097
1950	926	1,143
1951	1,125	1,342
1952	1,632	1,839
1953	1,908	2,108
1955 (estimated)	1,788	2,014

Current annual expenditures in the Nation for research and development are estimated between $3.5 and $4 billion in total, of which approximately $2 billion are expenditures of the Federal Government. Industry provides most of the remainder, with educational institutions and other sources financing a relatively small amount.

Almost two-thirds of the Federal Government research and development funds are expended through contracts with industry. About one-third or less is expended in federally operated laboratories. A small percentage is expended through grants and contracts with educational and nonprofit institutions.

Of the total funds expended currently by the Federal Government, basic scientific research accounts for a relatively small fraction. More than 90 percent of the expenditures are for development, applied research, and new facilities. Detailed data on this distribution of funds will be prepared and published by the National Science Foundation.

A wide range of formal and informal methods is employed to correlate research plans among agencies of the Federal Government. The National Science Foundation will furnish general coordination with regard to basic scientific research. The Foundation likewise is engaged in a comprehensive study of national science policy.

Expenditures included in this analysis comprise broadly the costs of the actual conduct of research and development and also necessary indirect or incidental costs. Generally excluded are routine testing, mapping and surveys, experimental production, and information and training activities. Expenditures for increase of research and development plant are for physical facilities for research, such as land, buildings, or equipment, regardless of whether the plant is to be used by the Government or a private organization, and regardless of where title to the property may rest.

Two-thirds of the Federal Government research and development expenditures, as estimated for the fiscal year 1955, are made by the Department of Defense. Another 13 percent of the funds are from the Atomic Energy Commission. The National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics and the Departments of Agriculture and Health, Education, and Welfare together supply 11 percent. The remaining 10 percent is financed by 18 other departments and agencies. The scope and the purposes of the research and development program of individual Federal agencies are indicated below, in the order of their size in 1955.

Department of Defense—Military Functions

The objectives of the military research and development programs of the Department of Defense are to provide the Armed Forces with new and improved weapons of performance superior to those of any possible enemy, to correct deficiencies and inadequacies in existing weapons and equipment, to increase the effectiveness of the Armed Forces by applying scientific knowledge and techniques to military problems, and to foster scientific and technological advances that are likely to be of military significance in the years to come. In accomplishing these objectives, one of the major purposes of the research and development programs is to reduce the overall costs of military preparedness and military operations, in dollars, in critical materials, in manpower, and in casualties.

The many discoveries and advances in basic science that have been made in recent years are in an important sense the foundation on which the military development program is based, and a strong continuing national basic research effort is essential for future application to military needs. However, the major problem with which the research and development programs of the Department of Defense are concerned is the applied research and engineering effort required to translate scientific knowledge and possibilities into producible and workable articles which will actually contribute to military strength. A small percentage of Department of Defense research and development funds is expended for basic research of military significance.

Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis

The Department of Defense has the major responsibility within the Government for military research and development, but in certain technical areas other agencies also have direct and important responsibilities. The Atomic Energy Commission is responsible for the research and development in the field of atomic weapons and in other applications of atomic energy to military purposes. The National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics is responsible for basic and applied research in aeronautics and for testing specific models of aircraft, missiles, and powerplants in its wind tunnels and test facilities when necessary in connection with the military development programs. The activities of these agencies and of others which contribute to military research and development are carefully coordinated with the programs of the Department of Defense and with military requirements and priorities as determined by the Department of Defense, through statutory top-level committees and technical committees and liaison at the working levels.

CONDUCT OF RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

The estimates for conduct of research and development by the Department of Defense in this special analysis represent the costs covered in the research and development category of the Department's budget. This includes the funds for research and development contracts with industry and nonprofit institutions, and for the research and development conducted in and the maintenance and operation of the laboratories and research, development and test stations of the Department of Defense. While it gives, therefore, a fair measure of overall trends in the Department's research and development effort, it excludes very substantial costs associated with research and development carried in other budget categories, such as pay and allowances of military personnel engaged in research and development, the procurement of standard equipment and operating supplies used in research, development, and test activities, and, in many fields, the production of costly prototypes of new weapons and equipment for test and evaluation in the research and development programs. The construction of research and development facilities is included in the military public works category and is discussed separately below.

Expenditures for conduct of research and development

[Fiscal years. In millions]

	1953 actual	1954 estimate	1955 estimate
Army	$382.7	$395.0	$370.0
Navy	499.4	475.0	440.0
Air Force	530.2	530.0	510.0
Office of the Secretary of Defense		25.0	30.0
Total	1,412.3	1,425.0	1,350.0

Expenditures for conduct of research and development by the Department of Defense are estimated to decline somewhat in fiscal year 1955 as projects undertaken in prior years are completed and the continuing program is revised and adjusted to reflect current requirements. Although total expenditures for the Department of Defense will be reduced by almost 10 percent in 1955, the reduction for conduct of research and development is only approximately 5 percent.

Within the Department of Defense, the research and development programs are administered by the three military departments under the general direction, control, and coordination of the Secretary of Defense. In each case, research and development is integrated with the organization and other operations of the military departments. The tables that follow indicate the major budget breakdowns of the research and development programs of each department, in terms of the new obligational authority recommended for 1955 and the comparable obligation programs for 1953 and 1954. Expenditure data are not available in the detail necessary to show the distribution among the programs.

INCREASE OF RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT PLANT

The estimates in this special analysis for increase of Department of Defense research and development plant cover public works construction at laboratories and installations which have research, development or testing as their principal mission. Expenditures estimated for fiscal years 1954 and 1955 represent primarily completion or continuation of projects authorized in previous years. Minor increases to research and development plant are included in the conduct of research and development category discussed above.

Expenditures for increase of research and development plant

Navy	36.3	20.0	10.0
Air Force	88.2	75.0	70.0
Total	155.6	125.0	100.0

Atomic Energy Commission

The Atomic Energy Commission engages in research and development for improved weapons, more efficient production of fissionable materials, generation of electrical and propulsive power from atomic energy, and protection of military and civilian personnel against hazards from atomic-energy operations. In addition, the Commission conducts a broad research program in nuclear science which helps to insure continued progress in scientific understanding. Attainment of these objectives is accomplished through research in the fields of physics, chemistry, metallurgy, mathematics, biology, medicine, and biophysics. Vigorous programs of both basic and applied research are going forward in these fields at facilities owned by the Commission and operated by private contractors, and in universities and similar institutions.

While of necessity much of the Commission's research effort is oriented toward military needs, a significant portion is directed toward peacetime applications of atomic energy; moreover, research oriented toward military needs often yields information with important peacetime uses.

The Commission's program of research in the physical sciences contributes important basic data for use in weapons and reactor development and in the solution of problems related to the production of source and fissionable materials. Its primary effort is to develop a fundamental understanding of atomic structure and forces as well as of the chemical, physical, and metallurgical properties of materials used in the Commission's program. This program includes both basic and applied research, thus extending the frontiers of basic knowledge in the physical sciences and yielding applications beyond those related to the Commission's program.

In the field of reactor development, considerable emphasis is being given to the development of reactors which will generate electrical energy on a large scale and at unit costs comparable to conventional generation. The cooperation of Government and industry in power reactor development is expected to speed the achievement of this objective. Development of submarine and aircraft propulsion reactors continues in response to military needs; this development also provides valuable information for nonmilitary application, particularly with respect to power reactors. Supplementing the work in specific reactor designs is the advanced engineering and development on reactor materials, components, heat transfer systems, etc., which is applicable to many reactor designs.

The program of research in biology and medicine is primarily related to the protection of personnel against hazards arising from atomic energy operations. It includes research directed to a full understanding of the effects of radiation on living organisms and measures for dealing with such effects; development of methods of using radiation for human betterment; specific investigations of cancer causation and treatment; studies of genetic changes induced by radiation; and the use of radio-isotopes in biological research.

National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics

The National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics conducts basic and applied research in aeronautics to obtain scientific and engineering data for improving the design and performance of military aircraft, guided missiles, and propulsion systems. The research is carried on mainly at the laboratories and auxiliary flight research stations operated by the NACA, supplemented to a limited degree by research sponsored at scientific and educational institutions and other Government agencies.

The research program of the NACA falls into four major fields—aerodynamics, powerplants, aircraft structures, and aircraft operating problems. While the program is oriented almost entirely to present and future military requirements, much of the work will eventually also contribute to improving the performance and safety of commercial aviation.

An extensive program of construction and modernization of NACA's research facilities has been necessary in recent years to make it possible to simulate the high speeds and other conditions under which military aircraft and missiles must operate. During 1955 the three large supersonic wind tunnels authorized by the Unitary Wind Tunnel Plan Act of 1949 will go into operation, and together with other construction now under way and recommended, will make it possible for research in future years to cope with the problems now apparent or anticipated.

Department of Agriculture

The Department of Agriculture conducts fundamental and applied research and demonstrations relating to the production, storage, distribution, and utilization of agricultural products—food, feed, fiber, forest products, and specialty items—and to human nutrition and home economics. Much of this work is in cooperation with State agricultural experiment stations and other agencies. This research is grouped into seven major categories as follows: (1) Crops research, (2) farm and land management research, (3) livestock research, (4) human nutrition and home economics research, (5) utilization research, (6) marketing research, and (7) forest research.

In crop research, the emphasis is on the development of improved varieties and production practices, the control of diseases and harmful insects, and the development and testing of chemicals for the control of crop pests.

The principal purposes of farm and land management research are to improve fertilizers and soil management, irrigation, and conservation practices; determine the relation of soils to plant, animal, and human nutrition; to apply engineering principals to agriculture; and to contribute to the solution of problems relating to the economics of production.

Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis

In livestock research, studies are made on livestock, poultry, and domestic fur animals to improve strains and to develop improved management methods and production practices.

In human nutrition and home economics research, studies are made on nutritional requirements and the composition, nutritive value, preparation, and preservation of foods. Studies are also made of the practices and problems of families in buying, utilization, and management of food, clothing, and household facilities, and the kind of living achieved by various groups.

Utilization research comprises studies made in the field of chemistry and related sciences to develop new and improved foods, feeds, drugs, fabrics, industrial chemicals, and other products from agricultural commodities; to devise better methods of processing; to increase the use of byproducts; and to solve waste-disposal problems.

Marketing research is aimed at maintaining and improving quality, reducing costs, and expanding outlets in the marketing of agricultural products.

Forest research has four main purposes: (1) To provide landowners and managers with a sound basis for protection and management of timber, range, and watershed lands; (2) to develop measures for the protection of forests from damage by fires, insects, and diseases; (3) to improve forest products and prevent their waste; and (4) to develop more efficient harvesting and utilization practices.

Department of Health, Education, and Welfare

Most of the research and development expenditures of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare are by the Public Health Service.

The Public Health Service conducts a wide range of research investigations and studies in the fields of biology, medicine, and sanitation in Government laboratories and through cooperative projects with private institutions and State and local government.

Grants are made to support research initiated by scientists in educational and other nonprofit institutions in their efforts to obtain more knowledge as to the causes, prevention, and better diagnosis and treatment of the diseases of man.

About two-thirds of the Public Health Service research funds support applied research and development encompassing investigations in virtually all branches of the medical sciences, including the development of new and more effective methods of therapy and extended field studies in the epidemiology of communicable and chronic diseases. Most of the applied and development work relates directly to the causes, treatment, and control of specific diseases, such as cancer, heart disease, arthritis and metabolic disturbances, mental diseases, dental diseases, and diseases of the sensory organs and of the nervous system.

Linked to, and supplementing, the applied research and development are studies aimed at expanding knowledge of life processes and functions as a means of uncovering the basic causes of disease. Most of this basic research is carried on through federally aided investigations initiated and conducted by educational and other nonprofit institutions.

The Food and Drug Administration's research funds are used to develop improved techniques for testing food, drugs, cosmetics and therapeutic devices. This helps assure the application of significant and consistent standards in determining the purity and safety of such products.

The Office of Education research program is mainly the collection and analysis of general purpose statistics in the field of education. The Social Security Administration does research in social science fields, to determine the programs' effectiveness, for actuarial appraisals of the insurance trust fund, and for other purposes.

Department of the Interior

The research funds of the Department of the Interior are expended mostly by the Bureau of Mines. This Bureau conducts scientific research and engineering investigations on the chemical and physical characteristics of coal, petroleum, natural gas, helium, and minerals. One of the primary purposes is to develop substitutes for scarce materials. In addition, studies are made with a view to the discovery of new techniques and the improvement of existing extraction and production methods. The Bureau also does research to improve the health and safety of mines and mine workers.

The principal objective of the research program of the Geological Survey is to assist in the determination and appraisal of the Nation's mineral, mineral fuels, and water resources. Additional research is directed toward the discovery and development of new principles and techniques to aid in the search, recovery, and conservation of the Nation's mineral and water resources. The Fish and Wildlife Service conducts basic research on the life history of all species of fish and wildlife inhabiting the United States, its Territories and possessions, and surrounding waters, with a view toward furthering our knowledge of the extent and nature of these resources. In addition, research on producing, processing, and marketing various products is carried on to promote and encourage the development and proper utilization of the Nation's fish and wildlife resources.

Department of Commerce

In the Department of Commerce research is conducted chiefly by the Bureau of the Census, the National Bureau of Standards, and the Civil Aeronautics Administration.

The Bureau of the Census is the principal fact-finding and statistical agency of the Federal Government. It is responsible for taking the major censuses of population, housing, agriculture, governmental units, manufactures, mineral industries, the distributive trades, service establishments, and transportation. Current statistics on many of the subjects covered by these major censuses, and on foreign trade, are prepared and published on the basis of data from sample and other surveys.

The National Bureau of Standards serves as a national laboratory for problems relating to fundamental standards of measurement in the physical sciences, the determination of physical constants, properties of materials, and the development of methods and instruments for precise measurement in physics, mathematics, chemistry, metallurgy, and engineering. In developing and making available basic data and techniques of measurement, this Bureau provides services which are essential to the research and technical programs of private laboratories, industries, and other Government agencies.

Under the Civil Aeronautics Administration, the Air Navigation Development Board, a Joint Commerce and Defense Board, conducts research and development work on the civil-military system of air navigation and traffic control, with major emphasis in the field of electronics. In addition, the Civil Aeronautics Administration develops and evaluates aeronautical devices and instruments, and does research work on human problems affecting aircraft operation.

National Science Foundation

The National Science Foundation supports basic research through educational and other nonprofit institutions. Its work covers the entire range of basic science, including the mathematical, physical, and engineering sciences and the biological and medical sciences. To date only limited support has been furnished the social science area. The Foundation is expected to become increasingly responsible for the support of general purpose basic research by the Government, giving due consideration to the requirements of other Federal agencies for basic research closely related to their operating responsibilities. A large part of the recommended increase in its appropriation for basic research in the budget for the fiscal year 1955 represents a transfer of the responsibility for the support of certain basic research programs from the Department of Defense to the Foundation.

Department of Labor

Within the Department of Labor the Bureau of Labor Statistics is responsible for collecting general purpose data on various trends in the labor field. These include wages, hours, prices, working conditions, employment, industrial relations, and others.

Reconstruction Finance Corporation

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation carries on basic research in synthetic rubber through contracts with colleges and universities. Research and development in connection with the application of the results of the basic research is primarily performed by private industry. A project involving the experimental testing of soil for the cultivation of abaca seedlings is also carried on under the abaca fiber program. The research program of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation will be transferred to another agency before June 30, 1954, as provided in Reconstruction Finance Corporation Liquidation Act.

Veterans Administration

The Veterans Administration research program is conducted in its hospitals and is directly related to the care and treatment of patients. In addition to general medical research, programs and projects are also carried on in special neuropsychiatric and tuberculosis research laboratories in these hospitals and in dental research and radio-isotope laboratories. A prosthetic research and development program is directed toward improvement of prosthetic and orthopedic appliances and sensory aids, exclusive of dental prostheses.

Tennessee Valley Authority

The greater part of the expenditures of the Tennessee Valley Authority for scientific research and development is devoted to applied research in the life sciences, including basic agronomic research, farm test demonstrations, watershed and forest resource development, fish, game, and stream sanitation, and appraisal of malaria control methods. Applied research in the physical sciences includes work on fertilizers and munitions products and processes.

Other Agencies

Some research is conducted by the Post Office Department, Department of State, Department of the Treasury, Federal Civil Defense Administration, Federal Communications Commission, Interstate Commerce Commission, Smithsonian Institution, Tariff Commission, and the Advisory Committee on Weather Control. In these agencies the purpose of the research is generally to improve the operating and production methods by which the statutory purposes of these agencies are served. For example, the Post Office Department is conducting research intended to develop electronic mechanical equipment to face, cancel, and sort mail. The research in these agencies is in various fields of science, and is of all types, from basic research through development.

Special Analysis J

FISCAL YEARS 1946 THROUGH 1955

Based on existing and proposed legislation

NOTE.—This table is generally comparable to Special Analysis I of the 1954 budget, except for the following changes:

A. A new receipt classification "Estate and gift taxes" has been added. Amounts shown on this line were included in previous budgets under "Direct taxes on individuals."

B. Payments to the railroad retirement account in amounts equal to taxes under the Railroad Retirement Act, formerly included in budget expenditures (subfunction 201), are treated as a deduction from budget receipts for all years of this table. This treatment reduces both budget receipts and expenditures by an equal amount (as shown in the deduct entry under budget receipts), and hence does not change the budget surplus or deficit.

C. Subfunctions 051–058, 151–153, 406, 454, and 556 and the titles of 2 functional categories reflect changes as shown in the chart at the end of the table. Expenditures for the Office of Defense Mobilization, formerly included in category 506, are now included in category 603. These changes have been made for all years shown in the table.

D. The "Railroad unemployment insurance administration fund" has been reclassified as a trust fund and is therefore not included in budget receipts or budget expenditures of this table after the fiscal year 1952.

E. Changes in appropriation structure sometimes result in changes in classification (for example, expenditures from a new appropriation to Civil Aeronautics Board for "Payments to air carriers" are included in subfunction 454, whereas such payments in prior years were made from the Post Office Department appropriation for "Contributions to postal revenues" (included in subfunction 457). Such changes are not generally carried back for other years in the table.
