2. Management of grazing lands.—The 185 million acres of Federal range used by 30,000 livestock growers are supervised. Proper management of these lands perpetuates forage resources thereon by reducing overuse, unseasonal use, and trespass, and provides protection from fire and erosion.

3. Forestry.—Forty-six million acres of commercial forest lands, of which 40 million acres are in Alaska, and 110 million acres of woodland-type lands, are managed. The 1961 program will permit selling 1,184 million board feet of timber having a stumpage value of $35.1 million.

4. Cadastral surveys.—These surveys are required to locate and identify legal boundaries of lands under application for lease or disposal, including submerged lands on the outer Continental Shelf; for administration of timber sales; for management of forest and range lands; to provide legal descriptions for the work of other Federal agencies and to permit States to obtain title to lands granted them by law.

5. Soil and moisture conservation.—The 1961 program will benefit 1,403,000 acres of public lands in critical condition from erosion. Cooperative programs with other agencies in river basin areas will continue.

6. Fire suppression.—Provision is made for fighting fires on or threatening lands under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Land Management. A supplemental appropriation for 1960 is anticipated under Proposed for later transmission.

7. Maintenance of physical facilities.—This activity provides for physical maintenance of storehouses, equipment shelters, fire crew barracks, and like buildings used by the Bureau of Land Management in its various activities.

9. Weed control.—This activity continues treatment of areas infested by halogeton and other poisonous and noxious weeds.

10. General administration.—Provision is made here for providing executive direction for the Bureau as well as furnishing such services as accounting, personnel administration, procurement, budget preparation, and internal auditing to the technical divisions of the Bureau.

BUREAU OF INDIAN AFFAIRS

The responsibility of the United States toward the Indian people includes protection and development of trust property and the furnishing of services not otherwise available to Indians and which are normally provided other citizens through Government and private agencies. Active programs are being aimed toward the integration of like services to Indians and non-Indians through the same sources and toward increased Indian participation in the management of Indian-owned resources. States and counties are participating at an increasing rate in the service programs, usually with financing by the United States demanded because of the tax-exempt status of Indian lands. The ultimate goal of the entire program is to have the Indian people take their proper place in the social and economic life of the Nation on the same basis as other citizens.

This program promotes the economic advancement of the Indians through the utilization of their resources.

1. Forest and range lands.—This activity covers management, protection, and utilization of the forest, range, and wildlife resources on nearly 50 million acres of Indian-owned lands.

2. Fire suppression.—Funds under this item provide for the payment of the cost of suppression and prevention of fires on or threatening Indian reservations. Approximately 60 million acres require protection. A supplemental appropriation is anticipated for 1960 under Proposed for later transmission.

3. Agricultural and industrial assistance.—Funds under this activity provide for improved methods in farming, homemaking, the management of a revolving loan credit program for small business enterprises, and formulation of plans for readjustment legislation pertaining to special trust relationships between Indian tribes and the Federal Government.

4. Soil and moisture conservation.—Land-use practices based on land inventories and soil conservation plans are introduced to control erosion and promote more effective utilization of soil and water resources. Approximately 24 million acres, or 42.5% of Indian-owned lands are severely or critically eroded. The construction phase of soil and moisture conservation is approximately 30.5% completed, an increase of 3.5% over 1958.

5. Maintenance of roads.—The Bureau of Indian Affairs road system which requires maintenance includes 16,866 miles of roads on Indian reservations.

6. Development of Indian arts and crafts.—Production and marketing of the products of Indian crafts are fostered through formation of production groups; establishing of standards; and improving of markets, design and production methods.

7. Management of Indian trust property.—Banking services are provided for Indians; land is purchased, sold, exchanged, and leased; and Indian property and money rights are safeguarded. Consolidation or disposal of fractionated landholdings, especially in those areas affected by readjustment legislation, is to be accomplished.

1. Buildings and utilities.—This consists of construction and additions to schools, dormitories, quarters, office, and other buildings; improvement to sewer systems and waterworks; major repairs and rehabilitation of existing buildings and utilities; preparation of plans; and engineering supervision and surveys. The 1961 program will include 14 school projects, 7 utility systems, and 3 municipal centers.

2. Irrigation systems.—This work consists of construction, extension, and rehabilitation of irrigation systems on Indian reservations for the utilization of irrigable lands.

3. Land acquisition.—Purchases are made to consolidate lands in heirship status. No program is planned for 1961.

5. Relation of costs to accrued expenditures.—This appropriation contains a limitation on accrued expenditures in accord with Public Law 85–759, approved August 25, 1958. Since this is the first year this type of limitation has been included, and since this estimate is being prepared so long in advance of the receipt of goods and services at the widely dispersed delivery points in the Bureau of Indian Affairs, some flexibility is being provided by setting the amount of the limitation 10% above the amount of accrued expenditures shown in the schedules.

The relationship between costs and accrued expenditures is derived from year-end balances of accrued resources as reflected in the following table:

This fund is used to assist Indians in acquiring livestock, farm, and other equipment and in establishing tribal business enterprises (25 U.S.C. 470, 471, 631). This fund and miscellaneous tribal funds provide the only source of loans for the great majority of Indians who cannot borrow from ordinary commercial credit sources because of their low economic status and lack of bankable security.

REVOLVING FUND FOR LOANS—Continued

Budget program.—As of June 30, 1959, the principal of the fund amounted to $16.5 million, consisting of $13.8 million appropriated, and $2.7 million cattle settlements. Cattle settlements are payments made by the Indians for breeding stock furnished by the Government generally prior to establishment of this fund.

Operating results.—The deficit is a result of expenses exceeding revenues and includes net writeoffs of loans receivable amounting to $182,439.53.

Relation of costs to obligations.—The relationship is derived from year-end balances of selected resources and applicable adjustment as reflected in the following table:

BUREAU OF RECLAMATION

The Bureau plans, constructs, and operates facilities to irrigate lands, furnish domestic water supplies, and develop related hydroelectric power and flood control in the 17 Western States and Alaska.

Appropriations to the Bureau are made from the general fund and special funds. The special funds are (a) the Reclamation fund, largely derived from certain irrigation and power revenue; receipts from the sale, lease, and rental of public lands; and certain oil and mineral revenue; (b) the Colorado River Dam fund, derived from the revenue of the Boulder Canyon project; (c) the Colorado River development fund, derived from transfers of money from the Colorado River Dam fund; (d) Disposal of Coulee Dam community, derived from sale of Federal property in the city of Coulee Dam and city of Grand Coulee; and (e) Boulder City municipal fund, derived from

Surveys and investigations are made to determine the feasibility of potential reclamation projects and the need for rehabilitation of existing Federal reclamation projects. Total investigations scheduled, excluding a number of investigations for which stream gaging only is in progress, are as follows:

Advance planning formerly financed from this appropriation is now funded under Construction and rehabilitation.

1. Engineering and economic investigations.—These are made to plan the development of river basins; to make feasibility investigations of potential projects prior to authorization; to investigate new and improved engineering methods including studies of reservoir evaporation control; and to make general engineering and research studies of reclamation problems either independently or in cooperation with local, State, or other Federal agencies.

2. Investigations of existing projects.—These studies are made to determine the need and to plan for rehabilitation, financial adjustments, or water conservation on existing Federal reclamation projects.

3. Alaskan investigations.—These engineering and economic investigations relate to projects for the development and utilization of the water resources of Alaska (48 U.S.C. 487–487b).

4. Fish and wildlife studies.—These funds are transferred to the Fish and Wildlife Service for studies of the fish and wildlife aspects of reclamation projects under construction or in the planning stage, exclusive of the Missouri River Basin.

5. Relation of costs to obligations.—The relationship is derived from year-end balances of selected resources as reflected in the following table:

General Investigations (Special Foreign Currency Program)

For purchase of foreign currencies which accrue under title I of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended (7 U.S.C. 1704), for the purposes authorized by section 104(k) of that Act, to remain available until expended, $4,957,000, of which not less than $4,522,000 shall be available to purchase currencies which the Treasury Department shall determine to be excess to the normal requirements of the United States: Provided, That this appropriation shall not be used for the purchase of currencies available in the Treasury for the purposes of section 104(f) of said Act unless such currencies are excess to the normal requirements of the United States.

A total amount of $4,957,000 is requested for research and related scientific activities under the foreign currency program. Of this amount it is estimated that $1,000,000 will be expended in 1961. The general fields in which studies will be conducted include fundamental properties of cement and concrete, hydraulics, soil mechanics, evaporation reduction, rock properties, soil stabilization and drainage, and weed controls. This research will complement the regular research work carried on in the domestic laboratories of the Bureau of Reclamation and other Government agencies.

In addition to travel and administrative costs to be funded with foreign currencies, it is estimated that $100,000 will be provided from other Bureau appropriations for these purposes, of which $50,000 will be expended in 1961.

2. Relation of costs to obligations.—Year-end balance of unpaid undelivered orders in 1961 is $3,957,000.

The advance planning activity consists of the preparation of preconstruction designs and specifications on authorized projects; in 1959 and 1960 it is shown as a comparative transfer from General investigations.

The program for the various projects consists of award and servicing of construction contracts, construction of authorized projects, operation and maintenance during construction of completed features of projects, and rehabilitation of existing facilities. Investigations and advance planning for units of the Missouri River Basin are included under that project.

The appropriation request of $174 million represents an increase of $28 million over 1959 and an increase of $41.5 million over 1960.

The administration has recommended legislation to provide for a more equitable sharing of the cost of flood control works between the Federal and local interests. Its adoption and application to new starts proposed herein would reduce the Federal cost of these projects by an estimated $3 million.

Work will be continued in 1961 on 46 projects started in prior years and construction will be initiated on 4 new projects with estimated total costs of $132 million. Five projects will be completed in 1961. The program also includes work on 10 rehabilitation and betterment projects. Construction during the year will provide facilities for 131,900 additional acres of irrigated land and 24,000 kilowatts of new power generating capacity.

The following workload table summarizes the program goals and accomplishments.

The Bureau operates and maintains the power-generation and transmission facilities, and generally the storage dams and reservoirs of completed projects. Where necessary, irrigation works are operated and maintained until the water users are able to undertake the responsibilities. In 1961 a total of 42 projects and 23 Missouri River Basin units and divisions will be operated and maintained for irrigation, power, municipal, and industrial water supplies. Of these, 20 projects and 5 Missouri River Basin units have power facilities. Energy sales from power operations, exclusive of Fort Peck project, are as follows:

	Kilowatt-hours of energy (millions)	Gross energy sales
Fiscal year:
1959	26,294	$69,968,106
1960	29,667	69,500,482
1961	31,321	73,741,809

Commercial power is sold to wholesale customers such as municipalities, Rural Electrification Administration-financed cooperatives, private utilities, and other Government agencies. These revenues are deposited in the reclamation fund, the Colorado River Dam fund, and the general fund.

Provision is also made for flood control operations on certain projects, soil and moisture conservation operations, and halogeton control on public lands under jurisdiction of the Bureau.

This fund defrays the expense of operating the power-generation and transmission facilities of the Fort Peck project, Rivers and harbors and flood control, Department of the Army, and emergency expense to insure continuous operation (16 U.S.C. 833).

Budget program.—Funded operating costs will be $88,000 over the current year. The decrease in capital outlay is related to the near completion of construction of the Fort Peck-Dawson County 230-kilovolt transmission line.

Relation of costs to obligations.—The relationship is derived from year-end balances of selected resources as reflected in the following table:

	1958 actual	1959 actual	1960 estimate	1961 estimate
Selected resources at end of year:
Supplies	$123,458	$127,020	$137,020	$147,020

Costs financed from obligations of other years, net (−)			−664,552
Obligations incurred for costs of other years, net		463,417		10,000

Financing.—The operation of the Fort Peck project power and transmission facilities is financed by this fund and capital outlays for transmission facilities by advances from the appropriation Construction and rehabilitation. The accompanying statements consolidate the financing from the Continuing fund for emergency expenses, Fort Peck project, Montana, and Construction and rehabilitation.

Operating results.—Net income is estimated at $1.9 million for 1961, an increase of $0.2 million over the 1960 estimate. Earnings in excess of current operating needs are retained so as to maintain a continuing emergency fund of $0.5 million. The balance is paid into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts toward amortizing with interest that part of the Government investment allocated to power generation and transmission. Such payments totaled $1.1 million in 1959 and are estimated at $1.9 million in 1960 and $2.2 million in 1961.

The fund defrays the cost of construction, operation, and maintenance of the Colorado River storage project and participating projects, a comprehensive basinwide development which will make possible the control and utilization of the water resources of the Upper Colorado River Basin (43 U.S.C. 620–620o). The storage project will regulate and conserve the flows of the Colorado River and its major tributaries through holdover storage in large reservoirs, thus making possible increased consumptive use in the upper basin, and will also produce hydroelectric power. Excess revenue from the sale of power will be applied to repayment of costs allocated to irrigation which are beyond the ability of the water users to repay. The participating projects consist of irrigation and municipal and industrial water supply developments.

Construction costs of the storage project and participating projects are, by law, financed through appropriations advanced to the fund. Project revenue will be credited to the fund and will cover costs of operation and maintenance. Revenue in excess of these costs will be utilized to repay to the Federal Government project costs allocated to power, municipal and industrial water supply, and irrigation.

Construction will be initiated in 1961 on one new unit and one participating project with estimated total costs of $55.4 million.

Budget program—1. Colorado River storage project—(a) Curecanti (Blue Mesa) unit.—Designs will be completed and work will be initiated on construction of the Blue Mesa Dam.

(b) Flaming Gorge unit.—Land acquisition and highway relocations will be completed. Concrete placement in the dam, reservoir clearing, and construction on the powerhouse and switchyard will be continued.

(c) Glen Canyon unit.—Concrete placement in the dam and construction of the powerplant will continue. Contracts for generators and other electrical equipment will be awarded and the preparation of designs and specifications and awarding of contract for protection of Rainbow Bridge National Monument will be completed.

(d) Navajo unit.—Construction will be continued on the dam and reservoir. The right-of-way program will be completed and work started on relocation of the Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroad, a county road, and other private enterprises in the project area.

(e) Transmission division.—Alinement studies and preconstruction investigations will be continued.

(f) Advance planning.—Detailed studies of one storage unit and five participating projects will be continued.

2. Participating projects—(a) Central Utah project, Vernal unit.—The Stanaker Dam and Reservoir, the Fort Thornburgh diversion dam, and the Stanaker feeder canal will be completed; work will continue on the Stanaker service canal and laterals.

(b) Florida project.—A prime contract for construction of the Lemon Dam and Reservoir will be awarded. Collection of design data and site exploration will also be initiated on the Florida farmers diversion dam and enlargement of the Florida farmers ditch and canal.

(c) Hammond project.—Construction will be initiated on the Hammond diversion dam and the Hammond pumping plant and continued on the main canal.

(d) Paonia project.—Work on the Paonia Dam and Reservoir and other phases of the project will be substantially completed in 1961.

(e) Seedskadee project.—Contracts will be awarded for the Fontenelle Dam and Reservoir, for relocation of the highway, and for reservoir clearing. Design and collection of data will be continued on the pumping plants and canals.

(f) Smith Fork project.—Work will continue on the Crawford Dam and Reservoir. Design and specifications will be completed and contracts awarded for the Smith Fork feeder canal, the diversion dam, and the Aspen Canal.

5. Relation of costs to obligations.—The relationship is derived from year-end balances of selected resources and applicable adjustment as reflected in the following table:

[1] Includes $4,852,158 of contract earnings included in project costs in 1958, but not obligated until 1959.

Financing.—The total of the authorized storage units and participating projects is estimated to be $1,058 million of which $190.6 million has been appropriated. The 1961 appropriation request of $71.6 million will leave a balance to complete the authorized work of $795.8 million.

Operating results.—During the construction period, only minor revenue is realized and expense is capitalized, so the fund will show neither revenue nor expense for 1961.

Budget expenditures will rise from $45 million in 1960 to $77 million in 1961.

The total investment of the Government in the fund is expected to reach $280.7 million by the end of 1961.

The Geological Survey provides basic scientific data concerning the water, land, and mineral resources of the Nation, supervises the development and production of minerals and mineral fuels on leased Federal and Indian lands, and enforces the provisions of the Connally Hot Oil Act.

1. Topographic surveys and mapping.—Topographic maps portray the elevation, shape, and position of the natural and manmade features of the earth's surface; provide engineering information for (a) mineral, water, and other natural resources investigations, (b) engineering and industrial development, and (c) military and civil defense. This program will provide maps for those areas where investigations and development are most imminent, and areas to which the Department of Defense has assigned a high priority. In 1961 an estimated 1,200 standard quadrangle maps of previously unmapped or inadequately mapped areas, and 210 revised maps will be published. This compares with 1,200 and 160 respectively in 1960, and 1,179 and 200 in 1959.

2. Geologic and mineral resource surveys and mapping.—These investigations (a) provide an accurate appraisal of the Nation's mineral resources, (b) provide data needed to classify the public lands and to explore for mineral raw materials, and (c) develop new concepts and techniques needed in the search for hidden deposits of useful minerals.

The work includes the collection and evaluation of data on geologic conditions for use in engineering construction and water development projects; and the preparation of large-scale geologic maps of the United States, its Territories and possessions. Geologic mapping and other research in geologic processes, in geochemistry, and in geophysics, are being carried on under the long-range minerals program.

3. Water resources investigations.—This program includes determinations of the flow, stage, and sediment discharge of rivers; reservoir contents; locations and safe yields of underground waters; the chemical quality and temperature of waters; and the availability of water supplies as related to present and future demands. These data are used to plan water-supply projects for military, industrial, and domestic purposes, as well as irrigation, hydroelectric power, navigation, flood control, highway and bridge design, and land-use projects. The 1961 program continues to emphasize studies which will develop a more thorough understanding of the principles and physical processes of water's occurrence and movement.

4. Soil and moisture conservation.—Basic data and advice concerning hydrologic and geologic problems are provided to other bureaus. The program includes surveys of rates of erosion, effects of soil and moisture treatment measures, and studies for improving the design of remedial measures.

5. Conservation of lands and minerals.—Prospecting, development, and production of minerals and mineral fuels on leased Federal, Indian, and Outer Continental Shelf lands are regulated. Federally owned and controlled lands are classified as to their mineral and water power values. The Federal Petroleum Board conducts investigations in support of State conservation laws to prevent the interstate shipment of contraband oil. In the current year approximately 198,000 leased properties, oil wells, and mines in 41 States are supervised. These leases are expected to produce oil, gas, and other minerals, valued at $1 billion, and render royalty returns of about $115 million. The States which produce the minerals receive 37½% of the royalties; the Reclamation fund, 52½%; and 10% is retained in the U.S. Treasury. In 1961 it is anticipated that the workload will aggregate 216,000 leases, wells, and mines, and the production and royalty values will reach $1.08 billion and $125 million, respectively. The classification functions provide the foundation for the system of public-land administration prescribed by mineral leasing and land disposal laws. Owing to the unprecedented rate of development of the Nation's oil and gas resources, increased demands are being made upon the Survey for mineral classification services. In 1961 it is expected that some 125,000 technical classification reports will be completed.

Reimbursable obligations.—Reimbursements from non-Federal sources are from States and municipalities for making cooperative topographic and geologic surveys and water resources investigations (43 U.S.C. 48), proceeds from sale to the public of copies of photographs and records (43 U.S.C. 45), proceeds from sale of personal property (40 U.S.C. 481(c)), and reimbursements from permittees and licensees of the Federal Power Commission (16 U.S.C. 797). Reimbursements from other Federal agencies (31 U.S.C. 686) are for special purpose mapping and investigations performed at the request of the financing agency, much of which contributes to the basic objectives of the Geological Survey.

The unobligated balance carried forward each year includes $400,000 cash advance to pay the expense of reimbursable work pending collection from cooperating agencies. This advance is not available for obligation.

Provision is made for conserving, evaluating, and developing mineral resources.

1. Bituminous coal.—Scientific research and engineering investigations are carried out on the chemical and physical properties of coal and its mining, preparation, combustion, carbonization, and gasification. Laboratory research is conducted to find feasible methods for converting coal to fluid fuels for better utilization in the Nation's machines. Coal samples are analyzed; efficiency of coal-mining methods is evaluated; and economic statistical studies are performed. Research is conducted to discover causes of explosions in coal mines and to improve methods of preventing explosions. Tests are conducted on explosives and blasting devices to determine their permissibility for use in mining operations.

2. Anthracite coal.—Research is conducted to develop new and improve present uses for anthracite; improved mining and preparation methods are developed; and basic economic data are prepared.

3. Petroleum, natural gas, and oil shale.—Research is conducted to conserve these resources by improving the processes of recovery and utilization. Research is coordinated with work done by other Government agencies, educational institutions, and industry. Economic and statistical information is analyzed to provide a factual basis for industry operations and Government policy. Research is conducted on oil shale and shale oil to determine the composition of the various products, to test the applicability of those products to different uses, and to determine the basic chemistry and physics of the refining processes.

4. Ferrous metals.—This includes (a) research on use of low-grade ores, conservation of raw materials, and improved methods for steelmaking; (b) investigation of manganese occurrences and use of low-grade manganiferous materials; (c) investigation of domestic chromite deposits; (d) studies to lower production costs of offgrade ores; (e) research on use of alloying metals to produce iron and steel products and high-temperature alloys; and (f) the dissemination of data on the production and distribution of these metals.

5. Nonferrous metals.—This includes (a) investigations and development of new sources of copper, lead, and zinc, recovery of tin and mercury from low-grade ore, and new uses for arsenic; (b) research in metallurgy to develop economic and efficient methods for processing complex low-grade and currently submarginal materials; (c) research on resources and utilization of light metals; (d) development of basic information on properties and uses of ores and metals for realization of potential military and civilian uses; (e) development of information on domestic reserves of rare and precious metals and materials; (f) research to improve the quality of rare metals and related products; (g) research to develop economic processes for the recovery of various rare and precious metals; and (h) economic and statistical studies on nonferrous metals.

6. Nonmetallic minerals.—The Bureau's program on nonmetallic minerals is primarily designed to develop adequate supplies of various minerals that are in short supply or must be imported and are therefore vulnerable in emergencies. These problems of nonmetallic mineral supply are attacked by (a) field investigations of mineral deposits; (b) laboratory research on the beneficiation of nonmetallic minerals; (c) research on the development of synthetic minerals as substitutes; and (d) research to develop more efficient methods of using our available nonmetallic minerals.

7. Foreign mineral activities.—The Bureau analyzes technical and economic data on foreign mineral resources, production, consumption, and international trade for Government use in coping with problems of mineral supply and to assist industry in planning domestic and foreign minerals ventures.

9. Relation of costs to obligations.—The relationship is derived from year-end balances of selected resources and applicable adjustment as reflected in the following table:

1. Inspections, investigations, and rescue work.—The objectives for 1961 are to: (a) inspect, at least once annually, every active coal mine regularly employing more than 14 men underground, to take action to bring about compliance with mandatory provisions, and make recommendations to gain compliance with its voluntary provisions of law; (b) inspect annually, or as necessary, underground coal mines regularly employing less than 15 men, and all strip mines, and report on observed hazards with appropriate corrective recommendations; (c) conduct investigations of serious accidents, make recommendations to reduce working hazards, and safeguard the health of workers; and (d) promote efficiency in the mineral industries. The Bureau encourages accident-prevention through education and safety organizations, exhibits, safety-film productions, demonstrations, instruction, and first-aid and mine-rescue methods. Research is conducted on the support of mine roof and control of overburden, and equipment is tested for use in mines and plants where explosive atmospheres may be encountered. The Bureau also conducts studies on ventilation of mines, methods of allaying coal and mineral dusts, and safe blasting practices.

DEVELOPMENT AND OPERATION OF HELIUM PROPERTIES—Con.

This fund provides for the conservation, development, production, and sale of helium. Production is primarily for the Department of Defense and the Atomic Energy Commission, who reimburse the fund for products received. Sales are also made to non-Federal consumers for medical, scientific, and commercial use (50 U.S.C. 164).

Budget program.—Operating costs are rising in keeping with the increase in production resulting from the completion in August 1959 of a new plant at Keyes, Okla., and the rehabilitation during 1960–61 of a plant at Exell, Tex.

The increase in capital outlay in 1960 and 1961 provides chiefly for the plant rehabilitation mentioned above, the improvement of production facilities at other plants, and the purchase of additional tank cars.

Operating results.—Retained earnings have been allowed to increase to meet the requirements of the above program which is expanding in response to the growing demands for helium and in anticipation of increased conservation of this vital natural resource for which the administration has recommended legislation.

Relationship of costs to obligations.—The relationship is derived from year-end balances of selected resources as reflected in the following table:

NATIONAL PARK SERVICE

The Service administers national parks and other areas of unusual historic, scenic, scientific, or recreational character in the interest of their preservation as well as their public use and makes studies of the recreation resources of the United States in cooperation with Federal, State, and local agencies.

1961 will be the fifth year of the 10-year program, mission 66, to provide personnel and facilities needed to serve the ever-increasing number of visitors to park areas, and at the same time preserve park values. Visitation to parks is expected to increase from 62 million in 1959 to over 80 million in 1966.

Current authorizations:

1. Management of park and other areas.—The estimate contemplates the administration of 191 park and other areas comprising about 24 million acres located in 42 States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands. The increase proposed is to provide for (a) administration of 5 new areas for which funds are not now provided and supplemental funds for 6 new areas partially provided for in the 1960 appropriation; (b) leasing commercial communication facilities; (c) operation of newly constructed facilities; (d) operating costs brought on by increased visitor use and extension of visitor seasons; (e) more adequate coordination of protection functions; and (f) strengthening the U.S. Park Police force. Actual and estimated visitors and revenue receipts follow:

2. Forestry and fire control.—Forests, brushland, and grassland on over 11 million acres are protected from fire, destructive insects, diseases, and other preventable damage. The increase proposed is to provide for (a) leasing commercial communication facilities; (b) operation of newly constructed facilities; and (c) strengthening existing organizations and facilities. A supplemental appropriation for 1960 is anticipated under Proposed for later transmission.

3. Soil and moisture conservation.—The 1961 program will permit corrective measures on 30 of the most critical problem areas.

4. Park and recreation programs.—Studies are made of the park, parkway, and recreation potentialities of the United States and its Territories, frequently in cooperation with Federal, State, and local agencies; technical and scientific services and guidance essential to management, protection, and public use of the park areas are provided in the fields of biology, geology, history, and archeology. Surveys are made of historic American buildings and sites for the purpose of acquiring and preserving data relative thereto. Investigations are made to determine whether State and local agencies receiving surplus Federal real property for recreational use are utilizing those properties in conformity with terms of the transfer agreements. Studies and investigations are carried out leading to establishment and acquisition of rights to sources of water supply. The increase is required to bring the water resource investigations and studies work up to a level commensurate with the expanded construction programs.

5. Concessions management.—There are approximately 160 major concessioners operating in the parks and other areas. Contracts are negotiated or permits issued; rates are established; services to be rendered are determined; and records are audited. The increase will provide for management supervision in the region 2 office, and more adequate travel funds for the audit staff operating servicewide.

6. Relation of costs to obligations.—The relationship is derived from year-end balances of selected resources and applicable adjustment as reflected in the following table:

1. Buildings, utilities, and other facilities.—The 1961 program is the fifth year of a 10-year program to provide essential facilities to meet all visitor requirements by 1966. A summary of the program by major type of construction follows:

	1959 actual	1960 estimate	1961 estimate
Camping and picnicking facilities	$2,645,200	$4,292,200	$2,039,200
Public service and administrative units	7,600,400	3,201,900	4,158,900
Utilities	3,186,100	1,878,000	2,259,800
Employee housing	3,046,100	838,200	1,986,700

Total	18,406,800	11,670,000	13,680,000

2. Acquisition of lands and water rights.—Approximately 520,000 acres of privately owned lands are located within the areas administered and should be acquired to facilitate public use of these areas. Status of land acquisition present and projected is as follows:

[Acres]

	1959	1960	1961
Private lands, beginning of year	620,000	540,000	520,000
Acquired during year	80,000	20,000	25,000
Private lands, end of year	540,000	520,000	495,000

Rights to water must be obtained, frequently by purchase, in many of the areas for use of visitors and employees, and for fire protection.

3 and 4. Parkways and roads and trails.—The obligations for these programs are against carryover balance of prior appropriations for programs authorized by the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1952. Programs authorized by the Federal-Aid Highway Acts of 1956 and 1958 are obligated against the contract authority provided by those acts and are shown under the appropriation Construction (liquidation of contract authorization), National Park Service.

5. Undistributed costs.—These costs represent end-of-year variations in clearing accounts involving operations such as automotive shops, corrals, and facilitating services. The costs are distributed to the various activities served based on predetermined rates. Such rates are studied and adjusted at least once annually to provide for adequate operations.

6. Relation of costs to obligations.—The relationship is derived from year-end balances of selected resources as reflected in the following table:

1. Management of fishery resources.—A total of 92 fish-cultural stations are operated for the propagation of food and game fishes. This activity also covers administration of the Black Bass Act encompassing shipments of all fishes across State boundaries.

2. Extension and training.—This activity covers (a) technical assistance to Federal, State, and other public or private entities in the management of sport fishing and fish propagation; and (b) cooperative development, with the States, of fish-stocking programs for major public streams and lakes.

3. Fishery research.—This activity covers studies of nutrition and diseases of salmon, trout, and warm water fish; improved methods of fish husbandry; scientific management of public water areas for fishing; and effects of environment and pesticides on fish. Direct appropriations for this activity are supplemented by funds of the permanent account Federal aid in fish restoration and management. In 1959, these supplementary funds totaled $104,977. The 1960 estimate is $105,000 and the 1961 estimate is $105,850.

4. Administration of wildlife resources.—This activity covers: (a) The operation and maintenance of 274 wildlife refuges, consisting of more than 17 million acres, for the conservation of migratory waterfowl and the preservation and propagation of rare birds and mammals. Of the total, 3.5 million acres are primarily for waterfowl. Direct appropriations for this subactivity are supplemented by funds of the permanent accounts Management of national wildlife refuges and Migratory bird conservation account (the latter through 1960). In 1959, these supplementary funds totaled $3,244,205. The 1960 estimate is $3,232,500 and the 1961 estimate is $1,002,860. (b) Enforcement of the Migratory Bird Treaty and Lacey Acts for the protection of migratory birds and regulation of interstate and foreign shipments of game; and migratory game bird surveys. Direct appropriations for the enforcement function are supplemented by funds of the permanent accounts Management of national wildlife refuges and Migratory bird conservation account (the latter through 1960). In 1959, these supplementary funds totaled $1,163,088. The 1960 estimate is $1,107,300 and the 1961 estimate is $361,190. Direct appropriations for migratory game bird surveys are supplemented by funds of the permanent accounts Migratory bird conservation account (through 1960) and Federal aid in wildlife restoration. In 1959, these funds totaled $409,695. The 1960 estimate is $224,550. No supplementary financing is proposed in 1961. (c) Administration of Alaska game law which will be eliminated in 1961 because of transfer of certain functions to the State of Alaska, effective January 1, 1960, and a shift of financing of continuing Federal functions to other Bureau activities.

5. Control of predatory animals and injurious rodents.—Predatory animals and injurious rodents are controlled on public lands. Technical information and supervision of cooperative programs are provided to protect livestock, game, poultry, forage crops, forests, structures, foods, and feeds from destruction by harmful animals.

6. Wildlife research.—Research is conducted on migratory birds and in wildlife management and conservation practices. Wildlife research units are also maintained in cooperation with Wildlife Management Institute and land-grant colleges at 16 locations to give technical training in wildlife management, conduct research, and demonstrate improved management practices. Direct appropriations for this activity are supplemented by funds of the permanent accounts Federal aid in wildlife restoration and Migratory bird conservation account (the latter through 1960). In 1959, these supplementary funds totaled $531,204. The 1960 estimate is $806,950 and the 1961 estimate is $50,240.

7. Soil and moisture conservation.—This activity covers long-range work on 63 national wildlife refuges in combating erosion and depletion of nearly 5.5 million acres of soil.

8. River basin studies.—This activity covers studies of the effects on fish and wildlife resources of power, navigation, irrigation, drainage and other water-use projects of Federal agencies and licensees under the Federal Power Act. Recommendations are made for measures to protect and improve these resources. Direct appropriations for this activity are supplemented by funds of the Migratory bird conservation account (through 1960). In 1959, these supplementary funds totaled $195,180. The 1960 estimate is $217,900.

This fund is used for making loans to segments of the fishing industry unable to obtain commercial loans on reasonable terms for financing and refinancing operations, maintenance, replacement, repair, and equipment of fishing gear and vessels, and for research into basic problems of fisheries. Loans bear interest of 5% annually and will mature in not more than 10 years. Loan commitments are made on approval of the Secretary of the Interior, and referred to the Small Business Administration for closing in the field and rendering loan servicing functions required, including actual obligation of the funds (70 Stat. 1119).

Budget program—Loan commitments.—It is estimated that this program can be carried through 1961 without additional financing. As of August 31, 1959, a total of 615 applications amounting to $19.9 million had been received. Of these 331 loans totaling $7.9 million had been approved and 155 applications amounting to $4.4 million had been declined.

Administrative expenses.—These expenses include processing of loan applications, closing of loans, and collection of repayment and interest.

Financing.—An appropriation of $10 million was made in 1957 to provide initial capital for the fund. An additional $3 million was appropriated for 1960. Additional financing is provided from repayments and interest on outstanding loans.

Operating results.—The existing deficit is expected to be eliminated by future interest earnings.

The territory encompasses some 3 million square miles of ocean over which are scattered 2,141 islands with a land area of 687 square miles. The population exclusive of Saipan and Tinian is approximately 60,000. The Department of the Interior is responsible for administration of all the territory except the islands of Saipan and the Tinian group which are under Navy jurisdiction as critical defense areas.

This fund is derived from the earnings of the Railroad and used for operating and maintenance expenses as well as improvements and additions (48 U.S.C. 301–308).

Budget program—1. Rail line operation.—The railroad main line extends 470.3 miles from Seward to Fairbanks and 12.4 from Whittier to Portage Junction. Branch lines, passing tracks, spurs, and yards total 194.8 miles. Operating expense is estimated to increase from $12.9 million in 1959 to $14.3 million in 1960 and 1961, respectively. The increase represents additional operating costs of producing projected revenue. Revenue is expected to increase from $13.2 million in 1959 to $14.7 million in 1960 and 1961, respectively, by reason of increases in tonnage due to new military construction projects and economic growth of Alaska.

Capital outlay totaled $4.2 million in 1959 and is estimated at $4.1 million in 1960 and $2.7 million in 1961, principally for track maintenance and repairs and for purchase of rolling stock equipment.

2. Other programs.—These consist of costs of sale for excess property and rental of properties.

Operating results and financial conditions.—A decrease in the volume of traffic in 1959 was due to a drop in local military tonnage, although freight handled by Railroad from other than local sources showed a gradual increase. The Alaska Railroad received for performing these freight and passenger services and other nonoperating programs an income totaling $13.5 million, an increase of 1.5% over the sum realized in 1958.

Retained earnings at 1961 year-end are estimated to be $2,335,361 which is substantially lower than earlier forecasts and is principally attributable to adjustments made in connection with restatement of investment accounts and other transactions extraneous to normal operations. Earnings are retained to meet future needs.

Loans are made to local trading companies for purchase of Micronesian products for resale in the world market, purchase of trade goods for resale in Micronesia, and purchase of vessels (55 Stat. 151).

The 1956 appropriation language for the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands made available for 1 year $500,000 of the proceeds from liquidation of the Island Trading Company of Micronesia for establishment of this fund. This amount was later reduced to $300,000 and $200,000 no longer required was returned to Treasury.

Operating fund.—The Virgin Islands Corporation promotes the economic development of the U.S. Virgin Islands. Appropriations not to exceed $11 million are authorized to be made to a revolving fund based on annual budgets submitted by the Corporation. An appropriation of additional funds as grants to finance non-revenue-producing activities and to reimburse the Corporation for operating losses is also authorized (48 U.S.C. 1407).

Budget program—1. Loan program.—Loans are made to aid farmers in agricultural diversification and to improve livestock production; provided such loans are not available from other Federal or private sources.

2. Sugar program.—The principal business of the Corporation is the growing of sugarcane, and the production and sale of raw sugar. Statistics and costs are as follows (costs include depreciation and interest):

Sugarcane production:

Income per ton of sugar	139.81	133.65	133.44
Loss (−) per ton	−10.78	−10.72	−10.82

3. Power program.—Electric generating plants are operated by the Corporation to supply each of the islands of St. Croix, St. Thomas, and St. John with electric power. Program statistics are as follows:

	1959 actual	1960 estimate	1961 estimate
Generating capacity (kilowatts)	7,230	10,695	13,195
Miles of distribution lines	488.28	513	538

Average income per kilowatt hour (cents)	4.24	3.97	3.96
Average cost per kilowatt hour (cents)	4.74	3.72	3.61
Profit or loss (−) per kilowatt hour (cents)	−.50	.25	.35

4. Miscellaneous revenue-producing activities.—These consist of (a) certain Navy properties transferred to the Department of the Interior under a revocable permit and managed by the Corporation; (b) leases and rentals of property; and (c) miscellaneous sales of supplies and materials.

5. Non-revenue-producing activities.—These include water and soil conservation programs, particularly the construction of dams and land clearance, and forest development program.

Capital outlay totaled $1.2 million in 1959 and is estimated at $0.7 million in 1960 and $2.9 million in 1961, principally for power and water distillation facilities.

Financing.—In addition to the receipts from operations, appropriations are made for the Corporation as follows:

	1959 actual	1960 estimate	1961 estimate
Grants for non-revenue-producing activities	$130,000	$130,000	$130,000
Grants to restore impairment of capital			561,000
Total appropriation	130,000	130,000	691,000

The sum of $11 million has been authorized to a revolving fund for the Corporation, of which $6,513,000 has been appropriated. Through 1959, a total of $6,513,000 was withdrawn from these appropriations. There was also made available $125,000 for the water distillation project. The budget program for 1961 calls for authorizations as follows: Sugar program, $298,000; power program, $2,240,000; and water distillation, $1,235,000.

Operating results.—The net loss for 1959 amounted to $238,347. This amount is made up of a loss on sugarcane and sugar operations of $130,683; on power, $106,832; and $832 on other activities. The loss in the sugar operations is attributed in part to a disastrous mill engine explosion which reduced the efficiency of sugar extraction and also increased the cost of operation. The loss experienced in the power operations was due primarily to a series of breakdowns of available generating equipment, and the lack of firm power with resultant outages. The maintenance difficulties were magnified by the tight operation schedule which had to be maintained. The loss of fuel oil through a broken pipe which emptied into the sea accounted for about one-third the total power losses.

The 1957 profit of $215,544 was retained for application against 1958 loss of $538,681. An appropriation of $561,000 is requested to cover the remaining balance and the 1959 loss.

9. Relation of costs to cover obligations.—The relationship is derived from year-end balances of selected resources as reflected in the following table:

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

New obligational authority requested for the Department of Justice for 1961 totals $281 million. The increase of $14.5 million over 1960 is accounted for by increased workloads in all bureaus and the construction of a new prison. The same factors are reflected in the estimated rise of $12 million in total expenditures of the Department to $271 million for 1961.

New obligational authority and expenditures by function are shown below:

The Federal Bureau of Investigation is the investigative branch of the Department of Justice and obtains evidence for use in civil litigation and prosecution of criminal violations of Federal law. It has primary responsibility for the internal security of the Nation. It assists all law enforcement agencies in identification and technical matters.

The appropriation request for 1961 totals $118 million. This will provide for an additional 137 employees (all clerks) when compared with the number allowed under the approved appropriation for the current year. These 137 additional employees are to be utilized exclusively in connection with essential projects designed to improve and increase substantially the efficiency and productivity of the Federal Bureau of Investigation identification division fingerprint operations.

There continues to be an urgent and critical need for a sufficiently adequate field staff to discharge investigative commitments related to major security and to handle intelligence operations as well as vastly increased activities in the criminal field. The Bureau will endeavor to absorb this growing volume of work with its present staff.

Normal workload volumes concerned with fingerprints, name checks, and the technical services of the Bureau laboratory are also expected to increase, but the Bureau will again endeavor to absorb this additional work with its present staff.

1. Security and criminal investigations.—This activity includes the Bureau's investigative responsibilities, the coordination and maintenance of the data gathered, and the maintenance of the Bureau's communications system. Data is disseminated to other Government agencies having an official interest in it. During 1959 the Bureau received 1,542,309 names for search through its files. An increase in name searches is anticipated.

Caseload:
Investigative matters received	478,220	513,855	519,000	530,000

2. Identification by fingerprints.—The identification division is the national repository of identification data based on fingerprint records. Fingerprints are acquired, classified, preserved, and exchanged with other duly authorized law enforcement agencies and 4,987,362 sets of fingerprints were received for handling during 1959. The volume of fingerprint work is expected to increase. Sets of fingerprints on file on July 1, 1959, totaled 152,594,022.

3. Criminal and scientific laboratory.—The laboratory provides technical and scientific assistance to the Federal Bureau of Investigation and all duly constituted law enforcement agencies and other Federal agencies which desire to avail themselves of the service. During 1959, scientific examinations totaled 184,993, a new alltime high. This is an increase of 12% over the record volume of the prior year, and the upward trend is expected to continue.

4. Training schools and inspectional services.—A bureau-wide inspectional service and a personnel training program are provided. The Bureau assists upon request in providing various types of training to local law enforcement agencies.

6. Relation of costs to obligations.—The relationship is derived from year-end balances of selected resources as reflected in the following table:

This appropriation will provide for the custody and care of an average of 23,100 prisoners and the maintenance and operation of 2 jails and 1 camp in Alaska and 31 institutions in the other States. It is expected that the Alaskan institutions will continue to be operated by the Bureau of Prisons until the State is prepared to operate its own jail system. An average of 4,910 persons will be employed with the funds in this appropriation. Full medical services are provided by the U.S. Public Health Service.

1. Custody, care, and treatment of prisoners in Federal institutions.—This covers the cost of the direct care of prisoners in the penal institutions of the Federal Prison System. It includes the cost of all food, clothing, education, custodial requirements, welfare services, transportation expenses upon release, and related personal services. The funds required, exclusive of salary costs, are in direct relation to the estimated average number of prisoners expected to be maintained in 1961 which is 23,100 at an estimated cost per day of $0.79. The average daily population for 1959 was 21,891 as compared to 20,877 in 1958.

The Bureau of Prisons contracts with suitable State and local jails for boarding Federal prisoners for short periods of time. Such periods occur before and during trials, while prisoners are awaiting transfers to Federal institutions following convictions, and during commitments for short sentences. On the average, 3,132 prisoners were boarded at a cost of $2.62 per day in 1959.

Intragovernmental funds:

FEDERAL PRISON INDUSTRIES, INCORPORATED

The following corporation is hereby authorized to make such expenditures, within the limits of funds and borrowing authority available to such corporation, and in accord with the law, and to make such contracts and commitments without regard to fiscal year limitations as provided by section 104 of the Government Corporation Control Act, as amended, as may be necessary in carrying out the program set forth in the budget for the fiscal year [1960] 1961 for such corporation, except as hereinafter provided: (Department of Justice Appropriation Act, 1960.)

PRISON INDUSTRIES FUND

This is a wholly owned Government corporation under the Attorney General. A board of six directors appointed by the President controls its policies. Supervision is by the Director of the Bureau of Prisons who has jurisdiction over all industrial enterprises and vocational training programs in all Federal penal and correctional institutions. Earnings, in excess of operating requirements, are paid as dividends into the Treasury.

The corporation is authorized to establish and operate industries in Federal penal and correctional institutions and disciplinary barracks under jurisdiction of the Department of Defense (18 U.S.C. 4121–4128). Its purposes are to provide employment for physically fit inmates; provide maximum vocational training for qualified inmates in connection with regular institutional and industrial activities; and to operate a placement service to assist released inmates to secure jobs. Products manufactured by the inmates are sold only to other Government agencies and the penal institutions. Earnings from the sale of these products pay expenses of the corporation and have permitted payment of $40 million in dividends into the Treasury since January 1, 1935.

Budget program.—During 1959 the corporation operated 54 shops and factories at 23 locations. During the year 6 shops were either discontinued or transferred. The closing of industrial operations at Mill Point, W. Va., eliminated a sawmill, logging and millwork operations. The laundry was closed at Alcatraz Island, Calif., as was the cannery at McNeil Island, Wash. A furniture refinishing activity was transferred from Texarkana, Tex., to Tallahassee, Fla. Offsetting the closures, new shops were started last year, or will be in operation this year: An electronics shop at McNeil Island; a rubber industry, chiefly tank treads, at Texarkana; a canvas specialty shop at Tallahassee; a metal furniture factory at Terminal Island, Calif.; and a mail-equipment repair shop at Terre Haute, Ind. It is expected that in 1961 a new industry will be started at Sandstone, Minn., which will give the corporation 55 shops and factories at 24 locations.

The vocational training expense limitation was approved for $793,000 in 1960 while $915,000 is estimated for 1961. This increase of $122,000 consists of $65,000 for a complete new training program at the former U.S. Army disciplinary barracks at Lompoc, Calif., and $57,000 to improve the training program at a number of locations.

The central office, located in the District of Columbia, is responsible for planning, production, procurement, inmate training, and personnel for all industrial activities. It is responsible for research work in industrial lines and product design in connection with the installation for new industries, and the operation and conversion of existing industries. The central office prepares and keeps up to date the Schedule of Products Manufactured and determines selling prices. It also contacts other Government agencies with reference to the use of its products and all orders from other Government agencies are received and controlled by the central office.

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

This budget includes new obligational authority of $555 million for the Department of Labor for the fiscal year 1961, an increase of $5 million over the current year. Fifty-nine percent of the total is for grants to States for administration of the Federal-State employment security system. An additional 32% is for the cost of unemployment compensation and workmen's compensation benefits for Federal employees. The remaining 9% is for the regular operating budgets of the various units of the Department, such as the Wage and Hour Division, the Bureau of Labor Statistics, and the new Bureau of Labor-Management Reports.

Expenditures in the fiscal year 1961 are estimated to be $540 million, which is $5 million less than in 1960. The major reason for the decline is the termination on January 31, 1960, of the program of unemployment compensation for Korean conflict veterans. The decrease of $477 million in the estimated 1961 expenditures as compared with 1959 reflects primarily the expiration in 1959 of the temporary unemployment compensation program enacted during the 1958 recession which provided for additional periods of compensation.

New obligational authority and expenditures by function are shown below:

1. Improving State labor legislation.—This is accomplished by assisting and advising States on labor law administration and the enactment of appropriate labor legislation and by negotiating Federal-State agreements to eliminate duplicating in inspection. Assistance was provided to 49 States and the District of Columbia in 1959 in response to 938 requests.

2. Improving conditions of migratory workers.—Cooperation is maintained with Federal and State agencies and voluntary organizations to improve the working and living conditions of migratory workers; a secretariat is provided for the President's Committee on Migratory Labor. Services were given to 39 States on migratory labor matters and assistance given 20 State committees in 1959.

3. Reducing industrial accidents.—This involves providing engineering consultation, technical advice, educational and promotional assistance in all phases of occupational accident prevention to States, labor unions, maritime, and special industries, and Federal agencies. During 1959 146 training courses were conducted for 4,077 trainees. The request for 1960 includes funds for a comparison of State safety codes with standards recommended by the American Standards Association.

4. Protecting young workers and advancing their employment opportunities.—Includes research activities, serving as a center of information and advisory service in this field; promoting annual back-to-school campaign; and developing standards for child-labor regulations under the Fair Labor Standards Act.

5. Promoting employment of the physically handicapped.—A continuing program of public information and education is conducted through the President's committee to advance the employment of handicapped citizens; cooperation is maintained with all national groups interested in the field, including the governors' committees in the States and 1,500 local committees. The magnitude of the problem was indicated in September 1959 when the Public Health Service reported that 17 million non-institutionalized Americans have disabilities which limit their normal activities.

7. Registration and disclosure of welfare and pension plan data.—Administrators of welfare and pension benefit plans, with some exceptions, are required to file plan descriptions and annual reports with the Secretary of Labor. The Bureau of Employment Security supervises the administration of the Federal-State system of employment security consisting of 53 State agencies and about 1,800 local offices providing unemployment compensation to individuals and assisting them in securing employment. An increase of $318,500 is requested primarily for better utilization and protection of U.S. farm labor and improved supervision and management of the national and regional offices.

1. Veterans' placement service.—This service helps State local employment offices in giving suitable counseling and placement services to veterans and promotes the interest of employers in employing veterans.

2. Farm placement service.—In cooperation with the State farm placement offices, this service develops and uses special recruitment and placement programs to meet agriculture's need for year-round and seasonal workers.

3. Collection and interpretation of labor market information.—Information is analyzed on the administrative operations of the unemployment insurance and employment service programs and on the supply, demand, and utilization of labor by areas, industries, and occupations.

4. Assistance in maintaining public employment services.—States are assisted in (a) recruitment and placement of workers in all occupations; (b) interstate recruitment of workers in shortage occupations; and (c) counseling and testing of youth, veterans, handicapped, and older workers. In 1961 emphasis will be placed on placement, and occupational information services in a growing technological economy characterized by more occupational shortages and surpluses.

5. Unemployment insurance service.—State laws and interpretations are reviewed to assure conformity with the Federal law requirements. Surveys are made to assist States in improving administrative procedures. The Bureau directs State and Federal agencies in the administration of Federal benefits to unemployed Federal employees and ex-servicemen. In 1961, emphasis will be placed on (a) developing working tools and training materials for State use in improving the accounting and collection aspects of their tax functions and the benefit determination and payment aspects of their benefit functions, and (b) research on the adequacy of unemployment insurance for workers now covered by the program and the problems of extending coverage to excluded groups.

6. Field guidance, financing, and auditing of State operations.—The 53 State employment security agencies are assisted in improving their programs, organization, and management. Agencies are audited annually.

An increase of $10,000,000 is requested primarily for increased tax and auditing workloads and increases in the average annual salary rate. The average annual salary rate of State employees is expected to be $4,641 in 1960 and $4,775 in 1961. Average State employment was 54,038 in 1959 and is estimated at 48,484 in 1960 and 48,713 in 1961.

2. Payments to ex-servicemen are made in accordance with the State unemployment compensation laws. It is expected that servicemen will be discharged at the same rate in 1961 as in 1960 and that benefits will remain at $66 million. This program became effective October 28, 1958, and workload shown below for 1959 reflects 8 months' experience.

Mexican agricultural labor is imported for use in areas having a shortage of domestic agricultural workers. All costs, except compliance activities, are paid from the Farm labor supply revolving fund and in 1959 these costs averaged $11.16 per worker. The estimated average cost in 1960 and 1961 is $11.26.

1. Determining Mexican labor requirements.—The agricultural areas needing Mexican workers and the number of workers required are determined. A total of 410 requests from 110 areas will be considered for approval in 1960. Farm labor reports are developed, controlled, and analyzed to evaluate the Mexican labor program. Technical assistance is provided the States in the preparation of these reports.

2. Supplying Mexican labor.—Workers are recruited in Mexico and transported to centers in the United States where employers contract for their use. In 1959, a total of 447,759 workers were contracted. An estimated 440,000 workers will be contracted in 1960 and 425,000 in 1961.

1. Temporary unemployment compensation payments.—Individuals who exhausted all rights to unemployment compensation under State unemployment compensation laws, the unemployment compensation for Federal employees program, and the unemployment compensation for veterans and ex-servicemen's programs, received benefits for an additional period under this temporary Federal program. Before the program expired on June 30, 1959, a total of approximately 2.1 million initial claims for benefits were filed.

2. State administration.—The State employment security agencies administered this program as agents of the Federal Government through 1,800 local employment security offices. These agencies were reimbursed for the costs they incurred by the Federal Government.

3. Federal administration.—The Bureau of Employment Security provided national supervision and control of the program and made its resources available to the States for assistance in administering it. While the program expired on June 30, 1959, provision for Federal supervision continued until September 30, 1959, so that the program could be terminated in an orderly manner and assistance would be available to the States for handling appeals which were still in the process of adjudication when the program terminated.

This fund covers transportation and other costs directly involved in importing Mexican farmworkers (7 U.S.C. 1461–1468). Public Law 85–779, approved August 27, 1958, extends the authority until June 30, 1961.

Budget program.—The program involves the recruitment, selection, and importation of Mexican workers for agricultural work on farms in the continental United States. Mexican workers recruited and selected by the Mexican Government are sent to three migratory stations in Mexico where they are examined for ability to do farmwork, screened for subversive activities, vaccinated, and transported to five reception centers in the United States where they are X-rayed, examined and treated for disease, and contracted to employers. This requires the establishment and operation of reception centers to provide housing, subsistence, and medical care. An estimated 440,000 Mexican farmworkers will be imported in 1960 and 425,000 in 1961 as compared to 447,759 in 1959.

Relation of costs to obligations.—The relationship is derived from year-end balances of selected resources as reflected in the following table:

Selected resources at end of year:
Unpaid undelivered orders	$146,821	$40,824	$32,000	$32,000

Costs financed from obligations of other years, net (−)			−5,644
Obligations incurred for costs of other years, net		99,985

Financing.—The costs of operating this program are met by fees charged the employer for each worker contracted. On January 15, 1959, the fee for initially contracting a worker was established at $12 per worker,

Digitized for FRASER

Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis

reduced from $15. The fee for recontracting a worker was set at $6, a reduction of $1.50. In January 1960, it is anticipated that the rates will be reduced to $10 for contracting workers and $5 for recontracting workers. Revenue is estimated to decrease from $6,605,699 in 1959 to $4,586,800 in 1960 due to the lowering of fees explained above and the conversion to an accrual basis for reporting revenue. Resulting revenue will provide for the cost of importing workers; for the serological testing administered by the Public Health Service; and some direct costs previously financed from the Mexican farm labor appropriation.

Operating results and financial condition.—During 1959, the accounting operations were converted from an obligation to an accrual basis, necessitating adjustments to fixed assets and retained earnings. Revenue from operations is estimated to exceed expenses in both 1960 and 1961. After allowing for transfers of $1,336,700 in 1960 and $1,347,300 in 1961 to the Salaries and expenses, Mexican farm labor program, retained earnings as of June 30, 1961, are estimated to be $1,826,225. Earnings are retained to meet future requirements.

1. Manpower and employment.—The level and trend of nonagricultural employment, hours, earnings, and labor turnover are analyzed. Hawaii will be added to these programs in 1961. The Bureau also analyzes and publishes the Monthly Report on the Labor Force, and in 1961 Hawaii and Alaska will be added. Publications include the Occupational Outlook Handbook, estimates of manpower requirements and supply, and reviews of long-range employment and labor-force trends.

2. Prices and cost of living.—The Consumer Price Index is published, covering the urban wage earner and salaried clerical workers' families of the United States, for the Nation (based on 46 cities) and for 20 selected large cities. Trends of primary market prices are published for 2,000 industrial and agricultural products. The Consumer Price Index is incorporated in many labor-management contracts for wage-determining purposes, and indexes of primary market prices are used in escalating costs for commercial contracts. Attention will continue to be given to providing price information necessary for improving the national economic accounts.

3. Wages and industrial relations.—Information is provided on wages by occupation for 80 major industrial centers, and for about 20 selected major industries; monthly developments in industrial relations and wages; and provisions of labor-management contracts and work stoppages. Data on current wage developments and work stoppages will be added for Hawaii in 1961. Annual reports are issued on employer expenditures on fringe benefits.

4. Housing and public construction.—This function was transferred to the Department of Commerce at the end of 1959.

5. Measurement of productivity.—Annual indexes of output per man-hour are prepared, together with an analysis of productivity trends, and studies of automation and other technological developments. Recent emphasis is on the development of productivity indexes in greater industrial detail. Studies are issued for labor requirements for selected types of construction.

6. Industrial hazards.—Quarterly and annual data are published on industrial injuries, together with analyses of the causes of injuries for selected industries. These constitute comprehensive and reliable basic data for industrial safety programs, both public and private. Special emphasis is placed on the development of a more extensive State-Federal program of injury statistics.

7. Foreign labor conditions.—Summary information on labor in foreign countries is made available, including data on employment, wages, labor law, living costs, and current labor developments generally. In 1961 the labor aspects of world markets will be studied.

8. Program staff services.—Bureau policies are established for the maintenance of statistical standards and improvement of statistical methodology. Special economic reports are prepared for the Commissioner, the Secretary, the Council of Economic Advisers, and other Government agencies. Research and reports are coordinated and publications are planned and edited.

The Consumer Price Index measures average changes in the retail prices of selected goods, rents, and services, weighted by quantities bought by moderate income families. A revision of the index based on current patterns of consumer expenditures is underway which will modernize the index to meet the demands for its use in present day domestic, economic, and industrial planning. The revision will extend over a 5-year period.

1. Preliminary planning and analysis.—The planning phase of the revision program began early in 1960 and will continue throughout the year. Questionnaires for use in the surveys of consumer expenditures are being prepared and a pilot survey will be conducted in Cincinnati, Ohio, during the last half of the year.

2. Consumer expenditure and price surveys.—Expenditure and price surveys will be conducted in a representative sample of cities in 1961 and will continue through 1962. Surveys of dwelling units will precede the expenditure surveys so that a sample of households can be established.

In 1961, cooperating with other bureaus of the Department and outside organizations, the Bureau will prepare occupational statements on employment opportunities for women in 14 selected occupations; review and report on opportunities for women as science and engineering technicians; analyze the employment opportunities for women in the manufacture of electronics equipment; study the overtime provisions in law and union contracts affecting women; study equal pay practices in selected industries; extend its program of assistance to voluntary organizations on migratory labor activities in selected communities; provide technical advice and information to States and other interested parties on minimum-wage laws and orders, implementation of the equal pay principle and laws affecting women's civil and political status; revise the U.S. Summary of the Legal Status of Women; cooperate with other interested agencies and communities in programs designed to increase the employment opportunities of older women; and to alleviate specific shortages of nurses, teachers, and clerical workers.

The Division obtains compliance with minimum standards respecting wages, hours, and other employment conditions in industries engaged in interstate commerce and in establishments furnishing goods to the Government.

1. Enforcement.—Information media are used to inform employers and employees of their rights and responsibilities under the law. Investigations are made to correct violations and to assist employers in meeting legal requirements and workers in recovering wages due. During 1959, a total of 54,916 establishments were investigated and 177,908 employees were found to be due wages in the amount of $22,403,116 of which employers have agreed to pay $12,885,921. The investigation program will continue at about the same level in 1960 and 1961.

2. Wage determinations.—During 1960 and 1961 a total of five industry committees will be convened each year to recommend minimum wage rates under the Fair Labor Standards Act in Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and American Samoa to review all minimum wage rates on these islands biennially. Regulations governing subminimum wages for learners, apprentices, messengers, and handicapped workers are being constantly reexamined. It is estimated that 1,800 applications for subminimum wage certificates will be received in 1960 and 1961, as compared to 2,100 in 1959. Wage determinations under the Walsh-Healey Act will be conducted at a level of six determinations in 1961.

3. Regulations and research.—Regulations and interpretations are prepared to give effect to the Fair Labor Standards Act. Emphasis will be directed to development and revision of issuances affected by amendments to the act and changes in industry practices. Economic research and analysis and development of statistical data, necessary in the consideration of administrative problems and legislative proposals, is provided. The report of studies of effects of the $1 minimum wage, required by law to evaluate the present minimum wage and to determine the ability of employers to absorb wage increases, was completed in 1959. Further studies will be conducted in 1960 and 1961 to provide current data for reports to the Congress.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT

In conformance with the Postal Policy Act of 1958 (title I, Public Law 85–426, approved May 27, 1958), this budget provides for financing out of postal revenue all obligations of the postal service in 1961, except those for public services. Legislative proposals to increase postal rates to the extent necessary to cover an estimated deficiency of $554 million will be submitted to the Congress during the present session. The 1961 estimates include the revenue anticipated to be received under these proposals.

The Postal Policy Act also provides that the postal fund be reimbursed from general funds of the Treasury for losses on public service activities. The appropriation into postal revenue of $49 million recommended for 1961 covers the estimate of such losses.

Mail volume.—It is estimated that mail volume will total 66.4 billion pieces in 1961. This is an increase of 5.2% over the 63.1 billion pieces which was the basis for the 1960 appropriations approved by the Congress. Trends in recent months suggest the possibility that actual volume in 1960 might exceed this figure.

The 1961 forecast includes 35.6 billion first class letters and cards, 1.3 billion airmail items, 7.2 billion magazines and newspapers, 1 billion parcels, 18.5 billion pieces of advertising and circular matter, and 2.8 billion pieces in all other categories of mail.

Postal obligations.—Obligations for 1961 are estimated to be $4,053 million, compared with $3,866 million for 1960 and $3,640 million for 1959. The estimate for 1961 includes $39 million for the Department's first year contribution to the employee health benefits program authorized in 1959 (Public Law 86–382). The remaining increase of $148 million arises mainly from the higher workload accompanying the Nation's economic growth. Obligations for capital and research activities, including $80 million specifically planned for the modernization program, have been held at the 1960 enacted appropriation level. The average operating cost per million pieces of mail, exclusive of capital and health insurance costs, is estimated to be $58,173 in 1961 compared with $58,863 in 1960, an overall reduction in unit cost of 1.2%.

Postal revenue.—Net postal revenue for 1961 is estimated at $4,053 million, compared to $3,247 million for 1960 and $3,035 million for 1959. The largest single factor in the estimated increase over 1960 consists of the $554 million to be raised by the proposed increases in postal rates. The remainder of the increase, totaling $252 million, arises primarily from (a) the higher mail volume anticipated, (b) certain additional increases in rates to be realized under Public Law 85–426, and (c) additional revenue expected from the increase in parcel post rates approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission, which is to become effective on February 1, 1960.

Postal deficit and budget expenditures.—The postal deficit is the difference between postal obligations and postal revenue. Commencing in 1960, postal revenue includes reimbursement from the Treasury for public service losses. Thus, a postal deficit would be the measure of the extent to which postal revenue fails to cover all other requirements of the postal service.

Net expenditures from the postal fund represent the difference between checks actually issued and cash received. To this is added Treasury payments to the postal fund for public services to arrive at the budget expenditures for the Post Office Department. The following table shows the principal elements in the postal deficit and budget expenditures for 1959 to 1961:

PAYMENT FOR PUBLIC SERVICES

For payment into the postal revenues for public services, in accordance with section 104 of the Postal Policy Act of 1958 [(72 Stat. 136, 137), $37,400,000] *(39 U.S.C. 270b), for the loss resulting from the transmission of matter in the mails free of postage or at reduced rates, and for the additional cost of transporting mail by foreign air carriers, $49,000,000. The Postal Policy Act of 1958 (title I of Public Law 85–426, approved May 27, 1958), identifies as "public services" certain types of services traditionally rendered by the Post Office Department and provides that the loss thereon may not hereafter be considered a charge against users of the mail. The Congress is requested to appropriate an amount to cover these losses to be paid into postal revenue out of the general fund of the Treasury. This appropriation does not augment the Department's obligating authority.

In developing estimates for public service loss for 1961 the Post Office Department has followed the interpretation of the law used by the Congress last year in making the 1960 appropriation for this purpose. Thus funds now being requested cover (a) the revenue loss from rate concessions on free and reduced-rate mail and (b) excess rates paid to foreign air carriers as a matter of public policy.

Revenue from mail and other services of the Post Office Department are placed in the postal fund, which was established as a revolving fund in 1950 (39 U.S.C. 794a). The fund is available for obligation and expenditure by the Post Office Department primarily in accordance with limitations established in appropriation accounts (often referred to as appropriations out of the postal fund). The fund may also be used without annual action by Congress for purchase of stamp-embossed envelopes and for payment of certain indemnities, claims, and judgments.

In accordance with the Postal Policy Act of 1958, appropriations from the general fund of the Treasury are requested for public services, and payments from such appropriations into the fund will be accounted for as postal revenue. The postal revenue also includes, without distinction, receipts from various Federal agencies for the handling of official mail; in addition, certain agencies reimburse the Post Office Department for special services rendered them.

The aggregate of postal revenue has, in the past, been insufficient to cover the expense authorized for payment from the postal fund. An indefinite appropriation is made from the general fund of the Treasury to make up the difference. Legislation to be proposed for rate increases, as described above, if effective by the beginning of the fiscal year, should reduce to zero the obligations chargeable to this indefinite appropriation in 1961.

This appropriation covers the operation of post offices, the motor vehicle service, the handling of mail in transit, contract stations, and contract vehicles. The amount requested is $3,135,300,000, an increase of $141,300,000 over 1960, due primarily to the estimated increase in mail volume, the expansion of delivery services required to keep pace with the growth in population and suburban areas, and to the additional cost of $38,100,000 for the Federal employees health benefits program.

1. Administration of postal installations.—This activity is for the local management and supervision of post offices, their stations and branches, railway mail terminals, airmail transfer offices, and truck terminals. The employees included in this activity are postmasters, assistant postmasters, and supervisors and technical personnel. The postmasters and their assistants are primarily responsible for the overall direction and supervision of mails, finance, buildings, personnel, and related postal services in main post offices and stations and branches. The supervisors provide direct supervision over the processing of incoming and outgoing mail, financial and related postal services, and the operation of stations and branches of the main post office and terminals. Also included under this head are technical personnel such as chief accountants, station examiners, personnel, safety and medical officers, and head nurses.

It also includes the rendering of window service to the public, the operation of contract stations, and the reimbursement to Federal Reserve banks for the processing of paid money orders and postmasters' deposits. The employees included in this activity are post office, terminal, and mobile clerks and mail handlers. The effects of improved management and modernization of facilities and equipment will continue to result in improved efficiency in 1961 as a 5.2% increase in mail volume is processed with a 4.2% increase in man-years of employment.

This appropriation covers the transportation of mail by air, land, and water. The request is $550,400,000, an increase of $19,400,000 over the obligations for 1960, primarily because of increased mail volume.

1. Water transportation.—This includes transportation of mail by powerboat within the United States and by steamship to foreign countries.

Powerboat service is utilized for the transportation of mail on the inland and coastal waterways at per annum contract rates ($816,000 in 1961) and at pound rates ($3,328,000 in 1961). Of the increase in 1960, the amount of $540,000 is due to assuming the obligation of transporting military mail to Alaska and Hawaii which, prior to 1960, had been transported by the armed services.

This appropriation provides for expense of building occupancy (other than personal services); for supplies and certain types of contractual services required by the postal service; for the acquisition of sites for resale under the commercial leasing program; and for the regular capital program. The amount requested is $213,600,000, an increase of $24,265,000 over 1960.

1. Building occupancy.—This activity provides for rental of real estate; utilities, fuel, and communications costs; and the acquisition and resale of land under the commercial leasing program. The recoveries from the resale of such land are shown under Advances and reimbursements and are available for the lease program. Increased rental costs will result from (a) the acquisition of additional postal space, (b) increased rental rates, and (c) replacement of presently occupied substandard space. The 1961 estimate includes rental of buildings and equipment at Project Turnkey, the Department's experimental mechanized post office at Providence, R.I., to be occupied on September 1, 1960.

3. Regular capital program.—This activity covers the procurement necessary for the replacement of unserviceable plant and equipment on a normal basis with some provision for expansion. It includes the replacement of standard mail handling, counterline, and similar postal equipment with modern new equipment; the replacement of wornout vehicles; normal expansion of the vehicle fleet for new services and service extensions; a continuation of the mailster procurement program for carrier mechanization, and the repair and alteration of postal space in Federal buildings. Such repairs and alterations include the replacement of heating apparatus, driveway and platform extensions, the creation of additional workroom floor space, and restroom facilities.

As in 1960, funds are requested in this appropriation for some modernization of postal facilities as part of the normal continuing capital program. Funds for the accelerated program to bring all facilities up to date in the next few years, authorized by the Congress in 1958, are again included in the Postal modernization appropriation as in 1960. The aggregate amounts requested for capital procurement and research in both appropriations are equal to the amounts appropriated for 1960. It is intended that some 150 Federal buildings will be completely modernized and rehabilitated and 20 urgently needed large postal establishments completely mechanized with the latest mail processing equipment in 1961. Developments in letter and parcel processing equipment will eliminate the need for further mail flow installations. Future planning includes the merging of mechanized mail processing equipment into existing mail flow systems.

The appropriation of $80 million requested under this heading will permit continuation of the program which began in 1960 for full-scale modernization of postal plant and equipment authorized by title III of Public Law 85–426, approved May 27, 1958. The program envisions the eventual expenditure of more than $500 million to replace obsolete and outgrown postal facilities. The improved facilities will be modern, functionally designed, and strategically located mail-processing plants. Major installations will be equipped with up-to-date mechanical and electronic mail-handling devices that will move the Nation's ever-growing volume of mail quickly and economically.

The program will also accelerate some of the regular research and capital projects financed under the appropriations, Administration, regional operation, and research, and Facilities.

1. Contract research, development, and engineering.—This activity covers the contract and engineering work and prototype equipment required under the modernization program. As in the case of the regular research program, it includes the design, development, and testing of improved postal equipment and materials, and recommending the location, functional design, building modifications, developing layouts, and mechanization requirements of postal facilities. The work, however, is at the accelerated rate contemplated by the modernization program.

2. Building and equipment improvement.—This activity, which constitutes the principal phase of the modernization program, consists of the major projects for improvement of large postal installations. It is planned to equip 19 new buildings and 1 existing facility with the most modern mechanical and automatic mail sorting and distributing machinery. This phase of the long-range program to remodel and rehabilitate existing Federal buildings is in addition to the normal work of this type carried on under the Facilities appropriation.

3. Engineering and technical services.—This provides for the additional personnel needed to carry out the modernization program. In 1961, such staff will be utilized primarily in the fields of space acquisition and utilization, vehicle utilization, construction engineering, and procurement.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE

New obligational authority of $299 million is recommended for the Department of State in 1961, compared with $267 million in 1960. The 1960 estimate includes $36 million in appropriations requested in this document to use foreign currencies acquired from the sale abroad of surplus agricultural commodities for educational exchange. The recommended increase of $32 million in new obligational authority for 1961 over 1960 is the net result of a requested appropriation for 1961 of $49 million to settle Philippine war damage claims, a reduction of $24 million in appropriations to use foreign currencies, and a net increase of $7 million for all other programs.

Expenditures for 1961 are estimated at $292 million, compared with $238 in 1960. Of the increase of $54 million, $49 million is for the Philippine claims. Increases in expenditures for other programs are largely offset by a sharp reduction in expenditures for the new State Department building, which will be completed in 1961.

New obligational authority and expenditures for the Department of State are shown by function in the following table:

The program described below is financed by this appropriation and by reimbursements from other agencies, which are provided with most of their administrative services overseas by the Department of State, and from non-Federal sources, as follows:

	1959 actual	1960 estimate	1961 estimate
United States Information Agency	$12,738,770	$12,822,000	$13,321,000

Total reimbursable obligations	60,340,467	63,750,000	66,700,000

1. Executive direction and policy formulation.—Increases are requested mainly to intensify efforts in the fields of disarmament and nuclear test suspension in order to develop and urge new approaches to armaments control.

2. Conduct of diplomatic and consular relations with foreign countries.—This includes representation of the United States and its citizens abroad, political and economic negotiations and reporting, consular operations, and overseas administrative services (including services for other agencies on a reimbursable basis). The estimates provide for increasing mandatory costs such as prices and local employee wages overseas, expanding area and "hard" language training, and establishing new posts and elevating consulates to embassy status in Africa, the Near East, South Asia, and Latin America. Increases in staff are requested for overseas political, economic, consular, and supporting activities.

Increases in domestic personnel are requested chiefly for dealing with western Africa, international cultural relations, and the continuance of the rise in travel abroad, as reflected in the following annual figures on passport applications in the United States:

1958 actual	1959 actual	1960 estimate	1961 estimate
653,074	702,021	798,000	880,000

3. Conduct of diplomatic relations with international organizations.—In collaboration with other Government agencies, U.S. policy is developed and coordinated on political and security issues and in such specialized fields as world health, education, labor, and refugee activities.

4. Domestic public information and liaison.—This program provides for informing the American public on international policies and also keeping the Department informed on American attitudes relative to foreign policy and issues.

5. Central program services.—These provide personnel and physical security measures, translating and interpreting services, and the coordination of governmental foreign reporting requirements. The major increase for 1961 is for the purchase of additional security equipment.

6. Administrative and staff activities.—This includes normal domestic administrative activities and the administration of a global communications system for all civilian activities of the Government, the costs incurred for other

The object of the foreign buildings program is to provide consolidated office space for the Foreign Service and other Government agencies abroad, and living quarters for American employees in localities where suitable facilities are not available. Through this program the Department has acquired real property valued in excess of $175 million, consisting of some 215 office buildings, 145 principal officer residences, 244 residences for senior officers and attachés, and 2,224 staff living units. Since 1946, the program has been financed primarily through the purchase of foreign currency credits held by the Treasury Department resulting from lend-lease settlements, sale of surplus war property, and other sources. This program also finances property leases of 10 years or more (shorter term leases are included in Salaries and expenses, above), procurement of initial furniture and furnishings, and repair, maintenance, and operating costs of these facilities.

The purpose of the program for acquisition and construction is generally to replace outmoded or otherwise unsatisfactory Government-owned or leased office space. Such space is replaced with structures that are designed specifically to meet the particular needs of the Foreign Service and other overseas Government operations from the standpoint of conducting efficient operations and of providing adequate security protection. In addition, housing is provided American employees in localities where housing either is not available or is substandard in relation to American living standards.

The Department has previously presented to the Congress a 10-year building program estimated to require approximately $100 million for acquiring new office and housing facilities. The status of the program is as follows:

Of the requested appropriation for 1961, $6,649,000 is subject to authorization by the Congress.

Included for the first time is the Colombo Plan Council for Technical Cooperation which was financed from mutual security appropriations in 1959 and savings in other parts of the Contributions appropriation in 1960.

The growing role of international organizations in world affairs is accompanied by added responsibilities. Along with the costs of new responsibilities, there are higher operating costs.

The major contribution increases are for: (a) the World Health Organization for increased international health programs, particularly research, (b) the Pan American Health Organization for stepped-up technical assistance and eradication programs, and (c) the Organization of American States mainly for additional programs recommended by the Inter-American Committee of Presidential Representatives.

A supplemental appropriation is anticipated for 1960 under Proposed for later transmission.

A survey is being completed by the International Joint Commission as to the economic feasibility of a tidal power project at Passamaquoddy Bay, situated between Maine and New Brunswick Province, Canada. The purpose of the survey is to determine (a) the cost of construction, (b) whether or not such cost would allow hydroelectric power to be produced at a reasonable price, and (c) what contribution the project would make to the national economy and defense.

Three U.S. Government agencies are participating. The Corps of Engineers has completed an investigation of powerplant construction and location requirements. The Federal Power Commission, together with the Corps of Engineers, has studied the potential power market and transmission problems. The Fish and Wildlife Service, in cooperation with the Government of Canada, has studied the potential effect on fisheries in the area. Reports on these phases of the survey have been submitted, except for certain appendixes, to the International Joint Commission. During 1960, the International Joint Commission will consider these reports and prepare its final recommendations to the Governments of Canada and the United States. Carryover funds are being used to complete the survey.

Assistance is provided also to American-sponsored schools abroad and to some private exchange projects.

In addition to the dollars appropriated for this program a portion of the foreign currencies derived from sales abroad of surplus agricultural commodities is made available to finance educational exchanges. The total obligations for this program are shown in the following table:

NOTE.—The gross foreign currency authorization in 1960 is $1,750,407. The schedule above covers foreign currency authorizations for 1959 and 1960. The appropriation recommended for 1960 is equal to the unexpended balance of previous foreign currency authorizations as of June 30, 1960. All transactions in 1961 relate to appropriations.

Foreign currencies derived from the sales of agricultural commodities under title I of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 (68 Stat. 454) are available to the U.S. Government for certain international educational and cultural activities as stipulated in sections 104(h), 104(j), 104(k), 104(o), and 104(p) of that act.

Beginning in 1961, these currencies will be subject to the regular appropriation process when used for programs authorized under these sections. A dollar appropriation of $6,960,610, to remain available until expended, is therefore requested for 1961 for the purchase of such currencies. In addition, it is requested that a dollar appropriation for 1960 be made in an amount sufficient to provide for the purchase of the unexpended balance of currencies as of June 30, 1960, which had previously been made available to the Department of State without appropriation, such appropriation to be merged with the appropriation for 1961 previously mentioned.

Programs financed from these appropriations will provide for: (a) aid to American-sponsored schools abroad; (b) the interchange of persons as authorized under title II of the United States Information and Educational Exchange Act of 1948 (22 U.S.C. 1446); (c) special educational development programs between American and foreign universities; and (d) the establishment and support of workshops and university chairs of American studies abroad. The latter three of these programs will be undertaken for the first time in 1961. Dollar support for these latter three programs is planned to be obtained principally from private sources. The regular international exchange dollar appropriation includes $275,000 for aid to American-sponsored schools. Totals presented in the program narrative of that appropriation summarize the total educational exchange program of the Department of State.

(Indefinite)—Continued

Section 104(h) of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 (68 Stat. 454) makes available foreign currencies derived from sales of agricultural commodities or the repayment of loans under title I of that act for academic exchange programs authorized by the Fulbright amendment to the Surplus Property Act of 1944 (60 Stat. 754). Section 104(h) gives the Secretary of State authority to determine the amounts to be set aside for these exchange programs up to $1 million per year in any one country for a period of not more than 5 years. Secretarial determinations through 1960 will amount to $26,570,000.

Beginning on July 1, 1960, it is requested that currencies in amounts determined by the Secretary of State for this program be made available by a permanent, indefinite dollar appropriation for the purchase of such currencies and to remain available until expended. In addition, it is requested that a dollar appropriation for 1960 be made in an amount sufficient to provide for the purchase of the unexpended balance of currencies as of June 30, 1960, which had previously been made available to the Department of State without appropriation, such appropriation to be merged with any permanent, indefinite appropriation subsequently made for this program.

Increased Fulbright academic exchanges are planned in 1961. The regular international educational exchange dollar appropriation contains dollar support for these exchanges as well as those financed directly from that appropriation. Tables presented in the program narrative of the regular dollar appropriation above summarize the total educational exchange program of the Department of State.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT

The 1961 recommendations for new obligational authority for the Treasury Department total $10.5 billion. Of this amount, 92% is for interest payments, 5% for Federal financial management, and most of the remainder for the Coast Guard.

The total new obligational authority proposed for 1961 is $7 million lower than for 1960. A decrease of $280 million for the nonrecurring 1960 subscription to the new Inter-American Development Bank is almost offset by a number of increases; the major increases estimated are for interest on the public debt ($200 million), the start of a program of the Internal Revenue Service to improve the collection of taxes ($29 million), the Coast Guard ($27 million), and the payment to the unemployment trust fund ($15 million).

Budget expenditures for the Treasury Department in 1961 are estimated to be $10.5 billion, which is $168 million more than estimated for 1960. The largest item of increase is interest on the public debt.

In line with the President's policy to reduce the burden on the general taxpayer for services which give special benefits to identifiable individuals or groups, legislation has been proposed to amend or repeal provisions of customs, Coast Guard, and internal revenue laws which either prohibit the collection of fees or fix charges at rates which do not permit the full recovery of costs incurred.

Public Law 86–147, approved August 7, 1959, provided for membership of the United States in the Inter-American Development Bank, and authorized an appropriation of $450 million to cover the U.S. subscription to the Bank. The Bank is an institution sponsored by the 21 nations of the Organization of American States and is designed to accelerate the economic development of the American republics by providing capital and technical assistance and by encouraging private investment in development projects.

The U.S. subscription falls into three categories. The first is a subscription of $150 million for paid-in shares of capital stock, payable in three installments. The first installment of $30 million must be paid no later than September 30, 1960. The second and third installments of $60 million each are to be paid not sooner than September 30, 1961, and September 30, 1962, respectively. The second category is $200 million of callable capital stock which can be called only to meet obligations of the Bank on securities which it has issued in the private financial market or on loans which it has guaranteed. The third category is a subscription quota of $100 million in the fund for special operations of the Bank. Fifty million dollars must be paid not later than September 30, 1960, and $50 million must be paid in such installments as the Bank may provide but not later than the date fixed for the payment of the third installment of the paid-in capital stock.

The 1960 appropriation will be used as follows: $450,000 for payment of one-tenth of 1% of the total U.S. subscription which is due when the United States deposits its instrument of acceptance of membership; $29,550,000 for paid-in capital; $50 million for the initial payment to the fund for special operations; and $200 million for callable capital stock, which will be available as a contingent liability to meet the Bank's obligations.

Under the provisions of Reorganization Plan No. 1 of 1957, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation was abolished as a corporate entity, and its remaining assets liabilities, and obligations were transferred to the Administrator of Small Business, the Housing and Home Finance Administrator, the Administrator of General Services, and the Secretary of the Treasury. After giving effect to these transfers, the Secretary of the Treasury is responsible for completing the liquidation of business loans and securities with individual balances of $250,000 or more as of June 30, 1957, securities of and loans to railroads, and securities of financial institutions, and for the windup of corporate affairs.

Budget program.—Liquidation transactions in 1959 produced net budget receipts of $11.4 million and it is estimated that transactions in 1960 and 1961 will produce net budget receipts of $8.6 and $8.3 million, respectively.

The progress made and anticipated in the liquidation of loans, securities, and loan obligations transferred to Treasury is summarized in the following table:

[In millions]

	July 1, 1957	1959 actual	1960 estimate	1961 estimate
Outstanding at end of year:
Financial institutions	$4.8	----	----	----
Railroads	8.5	$6.1	$5.9	$5.5
Other business enterprises:
Loans	36.9	24.7	17.8	10.8
Undisbursed authorizations	.8	.8	.8	.8
Deferred participation commitments	4.5	2.4	2.0	.4
Total	55.5	34.0	26.5	17.5

A limitation is placed on administrative expenses. The reduction of $10,000 from 1960 to 1961 is attributable to a declining workload.

Operating results.—Excess proceeds of liquidation are paid into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts. During 1959 these receipts amounted to $12.4 million and it is estimated that $9.2 million and $10 million will be paid in 1960 and 1961, respectively.

Relation of costs to obligations.—The relationship is derived from year-end balances of selected resources and applicable adjustments as reflected in the following table:

The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to purchase securities or make loans (including participations therein and guarantees thereof) to aid in financing projects for civil-defense purposes upon certification by the Director, Office of Civil and Defense Mobilization (50 U.S.C. App. 2261, and sec. 104, Reconstruction Finance Corporation Liquidation Act). Investments under the program are limited to a total of $250 million outstanding at any one time.

Budget program.—The sole program cost continues to be the payment of interest on borrowings from Treasury. As of June 30, 1959, there were outstanding $1,008,920 in loans and $2,436,727 in commitments to participate in loans made by banks wherein disbursement of Treasury funds is deferred. It is estimated by the close of 1961 that the loans will be reduced to $802,000 and the deferred participation commitments to $2,070,000.

No new loans were authorized in 1959 and it is anticipated that there will be no additional loans authorized during 1960 and 1961. During 1959 an increase of $135,000 was authorized for a deferred participation commitment executed in a prior year.

Financing.—Program activities are financed from borrowings from Treasury. The unobligated balance of such authority at the end of 1961 is estimated to increase slightly to $247.5 million.

The Bureau maintains the central revenue, appropriation, and expenditure accounts; prepares the central financial reports of the Government; and performs other fiscal functions.

1. Processing deposits of withheld tax payments.—Employers and certain business enterprises deposit monthly, with designated banks, excise, withheld income, railroad retirement, and withheld social security taxes, to the credit of the Treasurer of the United States. The Federal Reserve banks, acting as fiscal agents of the Treasury, issue depositary receipts which the employers attach to their returns as evidence of payment of taxes. Of the $1,360,798 obligations estimated for 1961, $640,000 will be recovered and credited to miscellaneous receipts by charges against the Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund and the Federal disability insurance trust fund. The work volume is estimated at 10,000,000 depositary receipts in 1960 and 10,500,000 in 1961 as compared with 9,577,446 in 1959.

2. Financial reporting and maintenance of the Government's central accounts.—This activity includes the maintenance of central accounts of appropriations, receipts and expenditures which provide data for financial statements. It also includes the preparation and publication of financial reports on the Government's fiscal operations, such as the annual Combined Statement of Receipts, Expenditures, and Balances; the Monthly Treasury

Statement; the Secretary's Annual Report; the Treasury Bulletin; and reports on foreign currencies acquired without payment of dollars. The volume of accounting items is estimated at 4,590,000 in 1960 and 4,540,000 in 1961 as compared with 4,569,947 in 1959.

3. Accounting and reporting development and internal audit.—This activity includes furnishing technical accounting advice and assistance to all bureaus and offices of the Treasury, participating in the governmentwide accounting improvement program, performing internal audit in the Bureau, and coordinating Treasury fiscal internal audit.

4. Processing investments, loans, claims, collections, and surety bonds.—Investments in interest-bearing securities are processed for certain funds, such as the Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund, the unemployment trust fund, the veterans insurance trust fund, and various Government retirement funds. The work includes accounting for purchases, sales and redemptions of securities, processing of capital stock subscriptions of Government corporations, payment of international and other claims, and examination of the financial condition of companies issuing surety bonds in favor of the United States. The number of transactions is estimated at 296,120 for 1961, as compared with 297,810 in 1960 and 289,094 in 1959.

5. Supervision of the Federal Depositary System.—Banking facilities are provided for all agencies of the Government through the designation of selected institutions to act as official depositaries of the Government's funds. Workload is expected to increase in 1961 as follows:

The increase in 1961 is due to additional work volume (involving 14.3 million payments) and increases in program activities.

The funds required are determined by multiplying the volume of work or the number of units to be processed by the unit cost per item as shown in the following tables:

At the end of each year, the Secretary of the Treasury estimates the excess of Federal unemployment tax receipts for the year over expenditures for unemployment compensation and employment service administration. This appropriation transfers the estimated excess into the Unemployment trust fund, where a portion is allocated to the Federal unemployment account to bring the balance of that account to $200 million and the remainder is allocated to the trust accounts of the various States (68 Stat. 668). This payment is determined as follows:

This revolving fund was created as self-insurance to cover losses in shipment of Government property such as coin, currency, securities, certain losses incurred by the Post Office Department, and losses in connection with the redemption of savings bonds (5 U.S.C. 134). Since these claims are only partially offset by recoveries, the net losses have gradually increased to $864,549 as of June 30, 1959, and are expected to increase to $904,549 by June 30, 1960. It is estimated that the creation of this fund has resulted in a savings of over $80 million of insurance premiums on shipments of Government property.

This office (a) receives, keeps, and disburses the moneys of the United States; (b) processes claims for the proceeds of Government checks; (c) receives, stores, issues, transfers, and retires currency; (d) issues and redeems Government securities; (e) maintains fiscal accounts; and (f) prepares financial statements and reports.

1. Check payment and reconciliation.—This activity consists of maintaining checking accounts of Government disbursing officers and Government-owned corporations; processing documents crediting Government disbursing accounts; performing centralized payment functions for all checks drawn on the Treasurer of the United States; reconciling deposits claimed and checks issued as reported by disbursing officers with the deposits credited and checks paid by the Treasurer; and determining the outstanding checks in each disbursing account.

Including the reimbursable work performed by this activity, approximately 398 million checks were paid and reconciled in 1959 by the Treasurer in Washington through the use of electronic equipment. Based on estimates furnished by the various Government agencies, a check volume of 411 million is expected in 1960 and 424 million in 1961.

2. Processing check claims.—This consists of the processing of all claims for the proceeds of Government checks, including the allowance or disallowance of claims against the United States and enforcing of claims of the United States against banks, endorsers, principals, and sureties or other parties having liability due to the fraudulent or otherwise improper negotiation of checks.

The Bureau of Customs controls the importation of merchandise and collects the duties, taxes, and fees thereon. Gross collections amounted to $1.3 billion in 1959.

The unobligated balance of $300,000 is a special fund available to this account when necessary to help pay the expense of reimbursable customs work pending the collection of receivables from private interests.

A supplemental appropriation for 1960 is anticipated under Proposed for later transmission.

1. Assessment and collection of duties, taxes, and fees.—The collectors of customs assess and collect the duties and taxes on imported merchandise, inspect international traffic, combat smuggling, perform certain marine activities relating to ownership and documentation of vessels of the United States and the movement of vessels in the foreign trade, and enforce the laws of other Government agencies affecting imports and exports.

The Internal Revenue Service is the primary revenue collecting agency of the Federal Government. Gross collections of the Internal Revenue Service amounted to $80 billion in 1959.

The number of tax returns filed has increased over the past 5 years from 88.6 million to 92.8 million. While greater efficiency and the introduction of automatic equipment have enabled the Service to process this larger workload, it has not been possible to increase the more time-consuming enforcement work accordingly. As a start in correcting this situation and to recover part of the present annual revenue loss to the Government, the 1961 recommendation provides funds for an increase in enforcement personnel and the initiation of an electronic computer system designed to maintain a consolidated master-file of taxpayer accounts. These funds, which will allow significant increases in work accomplishment as indicated in the following workload tables (particularly in the collection and audit activities), constitute the first step in a long-range plan to improve the enforcement of our tax laws.

1. Rulings, technical planning, and special technical services.—The Service interprets statutory provisions, issues rulings, and prepares regulations and Treasury decisions. It conducts continuing research on tax loopholes, inequities, and related problems; provides special technical services; and negotiates tax treaties with foreign governments.

The Bureau of the Mint manufactures coins, receives deposits of gold and silver bullion, safeguards the Government's holdings of monetary metals, and refines gold and silver bullion (see miscellaneous permanent appropriations).

1. Manufacture of coins.—Production of coins is the major Mint activity. Funds requested for 1961 will permit production of approximately 2 billion coins. In addition, Mint facilities are utilized from time to time for production of foreign coins on a reimbursable basis.

High silver receipts in 1959 reflect the return of lend-lease silver by foreign governments and in 1961 required intermint transfer to provide bullion for coinage purposes.

BUREAU OF ENGRAVING AND PRINTING

Intragovernmental funds:

BUREAU OF ENGRAVING AND PRINTING FUND

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing designs, manufactures and supplies all major evidences of a financial character issued by the United States. It is the sole source of U.S. currency and Federal Reserve notes, certificates of indebtedness, as well as most of the minor evidences of a financial character issued by the United States, such as postage, internal revenue, customs, and savings stamps. In addition, the Bureau prints bonds, commissions, certificates, permits, warrants, etc. The Bureau also prints bonds, postage, and internal revenue stamps for the governments of insular possessions.

The Bureau finances its operations out of reimbursements received from other agencies for all direct and indirect costs, including administrative expenses (31 U.S.C. 181–181e).

Budget program.—The anticipated work volume is based on estimates of requirements submitted by agencies served. The program comprises the following activities:

1. Engraving and printing—(a) Currency.—The anticipated deliveries reflect a decrease of 1.3% in 1960 and 7.1% in 1961 as compared with deliveries made in 1959. Due to the need for establishing different levels of inventory to cope with changing delivery programs and at the same time maintain stabilization in manpower requirements, it is anticipated that the Bureau will increase its currency inventory of finished goods by approximately 90 million notes during 1960 and decrease its work in process by a like amount.

(b) Stamps.—This program encompasses primarily the production of postage and internal revenue stamps. The substantial decrease of 44.3% in 1960 and 41.5% in 1961 below that for 1959 is due to the decision of the Treasury Department to discontinue the use of certain internal revenue stamps in connection with tax collections for cigarettes and other tobacco items.

(c) Commissions, certificates, etc.—Estimates for certificates, commissions, etc., indicate an increase of 86.3% in 1960 and 84% in 1961 as compared with 1959 due primarily to the increase in the quantities of identification cards and certificates required by the defense agencies. Although this represents a substantial increase in the volume requirements, the total production cost for all of these items represents only slightly more than 1% of the overall engraving and printing program.

(d) Securities.—The estimated increase of 10.2% in 1960 and 9.7% in 1961 over deliveries in 1959 for this type work reflects an increase in the requirements of the Bureau of the Public Debt for various issues of Treasury bonds.

2. Purchase of card checks.—Purchases of all Government checks in punched card form are made by the Bureau based on estimated requirements submitted by the agencies served. The purchases are made under a contract awarded to a commercial firm based on bids received in accordance with the Government's competitive bid procedure.

3. Operation and maintenance of the incinerator and space utilized by other agencies.—Charges are made to other agencies on an actual cost basis for use of the incinerator and maintenance services provided for the space they occupy in the Bureau's buildings.

4. Other direct charges for miscellaneous services.—Charges for a wide variety of miscellaneous services performed by Bureau personnel are made to the agencies concerned on an actual cost basis.

Operating results and financial condition.—The Bureau sustained a loss of $9,147 as a result of operations during 1959. This loss, together with a deficit of $54,921 brought forward from prior years, will be recovered from any profits accruing in subsequent years in accordance with provisions of 31 U.S.C. 181–181e. Budget expenditures are expected to exceed receipts in the amount of $1,094,857 in 1960 and estimated to be $631,021 below receipts in 1961.

The capital of the fund is expected to remain at $25.3 million represented by an appropriation of $3.3 million and donated assets of $22 million.

The Coast Guard enforces maritime law, provides limited security of ports and waterfront facilities, saves life and property, provides navigational aids to maritime commerce in navigable waters, promotes the safety of the American merchant marine, and maintains a state of military readiness to serve as a part of the Navy in time of war or national emergency.

Direct program by activities—1. Vessel operations.—Multifunctional vessels are strategically stationed along the coast and inland waterways for search and rescue; tending aids to navigation; operating an international ice observation and patrol service in the North Atlantic Ocean; performing limited icebreaking in navigable lakes, rivers, canals, and harbors; and for law enforcement.

2. Aviation operations.—Aircraft are maintained at air stations and detachments for search and rescue; Federal law enforcement; aerial reconnaissance for the international ice patrol; and logistic support in isolated areas.

Logistics missions, Coast Guard	8,009	8,500	9,000

3. Shore stations and aids operations.—Bases, moorings and lifeboat stations are strategically situated for search, rescue and law enforcement and for maintaining aids to navigation. Port security units patrol major harbor entrances; control anchorage areas; supervise the loading and unloading of dangerous cargoes; and screen merchant seamen and longshoremen to bar subversive elements from merchant vessels and critical waterfront areas.

Buoys, lighthouses, lightships, fog signal stations, light attendant stations, radiobeacons, and Loran stations are maintained as navigational aids in the waters of the United States, its possessions and military bases overseas. There will be a net addition of 1,373 unmanned aids operated in 1961. Radio stations provide rapid communication incident to all Coast Guard operations and maintain a guard on the international maritime distress frequencies. Marine inspection offices and detachments administer laws and issue regulations on safety equipment and inspection of merchant vessels, and on licensing and certification of merchant marine officers and crews. They review plans for construction or alteration of merchant vessels, investigate marine accidents, and handle disciplinary cases. These offices will also administer the small boat safety program when inaugurated. Estimates for this program are included in this budget.

The increasing number of oil rigs being erected on the Continental Shelf of the Gulf of Mexico and the corresponding increase in the number of small commercial craft servicing these rigs have all contributed to a serious backlog in the examination and inspection programs. Additional marine inspection personnel are needed to keep pace with the demands of industry.

Costs for the operation of eight additional loran and three additional monitor stations (one of which is a subunit) are included in the Coast Guard budget for 1961. These facilities are being constructed overseas in 1960 with funds provided by the Department of Defense.

4. Repair and supply facilities.—Thirteen repair and eleven supply facilities are maintained at strategic points for support of Coast Guard operating units. Also, two facilities are maintained for testing, developing and adapting material for safer and more effective Coast Guard use.

5. Training and recruiting facilities.—This activity includes the Coast Guard Academy for the training of cadets, recruiting stations, training units for recruits and petty officers, and outside training programs.

Training and recruiting facilities:	1959 actual	1960 estimate	1961 estimate
Cadets	581	550	600
Recruits trained	5,552	6,100	6,800
Other personnel in training	4,459	5,000	5,300

6. Administration and operational control.—This activity provides for administrative services performed by headquarters at Washington, D.C., district and area offices, regional inspection offices and liaison activities with other agencies. On April 1, 1960, the Coast Guard will commence numbering an estimated 1,250,000 additional motorboats made subject to this type of registration by the provisions of the Federal Boating Act of 1958.

7. Other military personnel expense.—This activity provides for certain military personnel expenses such as social security, the pay of personnel in hospitals and in transit; expense of permanent changes of stations, including travel of dependents and transportation of household effects; and expense of military separation, recreation, death gratuities and burial.

8. Supporting programs.—This activity consists of procurement of ammunition and maintenance of ordnance; replacement of vehicles, boats and electronic equipment; transportation of materials; and printing. These programs have such general applicability that they cannot properly be charged to specific units.

10. Relation of costs to accrued expenditures.—This appropriation contains a limitation on accrued expenditures in accordance with Public Law 85–759, approved August 25, 1958. Since this is the first year this type of limitation will be imposed, and because it will be necessary to extend the control system, the amount of the limitation exceeds the amount of accrued expenditures shown in the schedules by a small contingency factor. This will allow for the development of a system to provide the necessary control of the receipt of goods and services at the widely dispersed delivery points in the Coast Guard with a minimum of additional cost.

The relationship between direct costs and direct accrued expenditures is derived from year-end balances of accrued resources as reflected in the following table:

11. Reimbursable program by activities—Operation of ocean stations.—The operation of six ocean stations (four in the Atlantic and two in the Pacific), on the basis of three cutters per station, is financed by the Department of Defense as a defense requirement. These vessels perform the dual function of ocean station duty and search and rescue.

12. Miscellaneous services to other accounts.—Various activities of the Coast Guard are financed by other agencies. They include, in part, operation of one vessel for United States Information Agency; installation and maintenance of aids to navigation for the Saint Lawrence Seaway Corporation; and operation of one special project, Loran-C, for the Department of Defense.

13. Relation of costs to accrued expenditures.—The relationship between reimbursable costs and reimbursable accrued expenditures is derived from year-end balances of accrued resources as reflected in the following table:

This appropriation provides for the acquisition, construction, rebuilding, and improvement of vessels, aircraft, shore stations, and aids to navigation.

Direct program by activities—1. Vessels.—This activity provides for the replacement of certain vessels of the Coast Guard fleet. Continuing the 82-footer program for replacement of patrol boats begun in 1960, an additional 18 boats will be constructed in 1961 to replace the least serviceable of the remaining 83-foot, wooden hull, craft built during World War II. The program for 1961 also provides for construction of replacements for six tugs and five buoy boats; and for development of plans and characteristics of a replacement vessel for major cutters now in service.

2. Aviation facilities.—This activity covers part of the program for replacement of overage aircraft recommended in a joint report submitted to the Congress by the Secretary of the Treasury and the Commandant. Orderly replacement of these aircraft as they become overage is essential to safe and effective conduct of Coast Guard missions. The 1961 program includes the procurement of three SC–130B's and six HUS's as replacement aircraft, and procurement of 5-year spares for two UF–2G aircraft. In addition, at one air station, necessary runway improvements will be made.

3. Shore stations and navigational aids.—This activity provides for the establishment of aids to navigation in waterways improved and developed by the Corps of Engineers and for the installation and replacement of other aids made necessary by the natural shifting of channels and the changing needs of marine commerce. It also includes construction of two moorings to meet increased law enforcement, boating safety, and search and rescue needs resulting from extensive boating activity; and construction of a new primary radio station at New Orleans, La. In addition, two lightships will be replaced with fixed structures; the wharf at moorings, Juneau, Alaska, will be repaired; and facilities at lifeboat station, Charlevoix, Mich., will be replaced.

4. Repair and supply facilities.—The 1961 program under this activity provides for construction of a depot at Keokuk, Iowa, to support aids to navigation facilities; relocation of depot at Memphis, Tenn., and replacement of depot facilities at Southwest Harbor, Maine. It also provides for extension of wharf at depot, Corpus Christi, Tex.; and repairing of bulkheads, docks, and buoy slab at base, Portsmouth, Va.

5. Training and recruiting facilities.—The 1961 program for this activity provides for extension of classroom space, construction of maintenance shop building, and survey of facility requirements at the Coast Guard Academy; and construction of an operating force barracks at receiving center, Cape May, N.J.

8. Relation of costs to accrued expenditures.—The relationship between direct costs and direct accrued expenditures is derived from year-end balances of accrued resources as reflected in the following table:

Direct program:	1958 actual	1959 actual	1960 estimate	1961 estimate
Accrued resources at end of year:
Advances (payments for goods and services on order not yet received)	$4,535,511	$1,496,433	$7,461,022	----------
Work in process	827,832	1,856,533	----------	----------
Total accrued resources at end of year	5,363,343	3,352,966	7,461,022	----------
Accrued resources at start of year (−)	−5,363,343	−3,352,966	−$7,461,022
Costs financed from accrued expenditures of other years net (−)		−2,010,377	----------	−7,461,022
Expenditures accrued for costs of other years, net		----------	4,108,056	----------

Total advances and work-in-process vary with the projects authorized and their rate of completion. Orders are placed with the Coast Guard yard for vessel construction and with the Navy for procurement of aircraft with delivery generally scheduled in subsequent years.

Reimbursable program—6. Loran to meet Department of Defense requirements.—Funds have been provided in 1960 by the Department of Defense for construction of 8 Loran stations with support facilities. The construction program contemplates 11 additional stations in 1961.

8. Relation of costs to accrued expenditures.—The relationship between reimbursable costs and reimbursable accrued expenditures is derived from year-end balances of accrued resources.

The Reserve training program is designed to provide a trained force of 39,600 officer and enlisted personnel in the Ready Reserve available for active duty in time of war or national emergency and at such other times as the national security requires to fill the needs of the Coast Guard. The Armed Forces Reserve Act of 1952, as amended, provides the Coast Guard with the necessary authority to successfully carry out a program of training personnel to meet the foregoing objectives. The program outlined will provide 33,250 officer and enlisted personnel in the Ready Reserve by the end of 1961.

Direct program by activities—1. Trainee expense.—The program for 1960 provides for an increase from 12,795 to 16,187 in the number of reservists to receive training of the types set forth by the Armed Forces Reserve Act of 1952, as amended. 1961 provides for a further increase from 16,187 to 16,777 in the number to receive the same types of training. This build-up results from an increase of 50 in the number of trainees to receive 6 months' active duty training, a decrease of 375 to perform 15 days active duty training with pay, an increase of 995 trainees to receive paid training in organized training units, and normal attrition.

2. Operations of training facilities.—The same training stations, vessels, and minor shore units and organized training units that were utilized to provide training to Reservists in 1960 will be utilized in 1961. The Reserve Training Center, Yorktown, Va., which was placed in operation in 1960, will provide facilities for an expanded Officer Candidate School program and a specialized 2-week annual active-duty-for-training program for both officer and enlisted personnel. Utilization of this facility will not only improve the quality of training by providing a more adequate training environment, but will reduce adverse workload requirements of shore facilities of the regular Coast Guard where this training was conducted in the past. Stationkeepers at organized training units will be reduced from 133 to 101 in 1961 in order to provide funds for trainee programs.

3. Construction of training facilities.—In order to provide maximum funds for the training of personnel, there will be no construction, activation or improvements projects undertaken in 1961.

4. Administration.—This activity encompasses all administrative costs at both headquarters and district offices associated with the management of the Reserve training program, recruitment of personnel, and the "in training and ineffectives" billets for personnel at school, in transit, etc. Recruiting personnel will be reduced by 20 in 1961 since the recruitment requirement in support of the trainee program will be less. "Training and ineffective" billets will be reduced by eight in consonance with the reduction in recruiters and stationkeepers.

5. Relation of costs to obligations.—The relationship is derived from year-end balances of selected resources and applicable adjustment as reflected in the following table.

Reimbursable program by activities—6. Operation of Officer Indoctrination School.—This school is conducted at the Reserve Training Center, Yorktown, Va. In 1960 funds will be provided from the appropriation Operating expenses for those operational costs at Yorktown (including one training vessel) associated with requirements of the regular service.

In 1961 the entire cost of the school will be funded under Operating expenses with Reserve training reimbursing the former appropriation for its equitable share of the cost. This change is in consonance with the language change proposed at this time.

COAST GUARD SUPPLY FUND

The Coast Guard supply fund, in accordance with 14 U.S.C. 650, finances the procurement of commissary provisions, general stores, technical materials, and uniform clothing. The fund is financed by reimbursements from Coast Guard appropriations for goods issued.

Costs of approximately $15.7 million to be incurred under this fund in 1961 are divided 67% for commissary provisions, 20% for general stores and technical materials, and 13% for uniform clothing.

Sales are expected to decrease $0.9 million in 1960 compared with 1959 due principally to reductions in the number of recruits and value of uniform clothing allowances. The 1961 increase of $1.8 million in sales is due to the

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

The Federal Government makes loans and payments to the District of Columbia in recognition of problems arising from its unique situation as the Nation's Capital.

New obligational authority for 1961 requested for these loans and payments totals $53.2 million, a decrease of $8.3 million from 1960. Proposed program levels represent reductions of $15.6 million in authorizations for loans for public building construction and for other public works. These reductions, however, are partially offset by a recommendation for the appropriation of the full amount of the authorized Federal payment—$32 million. This will be an increase of $7 million over 1960. The 1961 budget also includes appropriations of $2.5 million (an increase of $0.3 million) to pay for water and sewage services rendered by the District to the Federal Government.

The estimated rise from 1960 to 1961 of $14 million in Federal expenditures results from the higher Federal payment requested and from increased loan outlays for construction financed from appropriations made in prior years.

The Congress serves as the legislative body for the District of Columbia and enacts the District's total budget, authorizing expenditures from funds available to the District from its own revenue and from payments made to it by the Federal Government. Detailed estimates for the District as a whole, including the Federal payments and loans to the District, estimates of appropriation from District revenue, and information regarding allocations to various Federal agencies for services rendered to the District, are printed in a separate volume of the budget. This volume of the budget contains detail only for the Federal payments and loans to the District.

New obligational authority and expenditures by function are shown below:

PART III

ESTIMATES FOR TRUST FUNDS

Table 10. Trust Receipts and Expenditures
Detailed Estimates

Digitized for FRASER
http://fraser.stlouisfed.org/
Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis

INTRODUCTION TO PART III

Part III of the budget contains a summary table on trust and deposit funds, and detailed schedules and explanatory statements on the various trust funds. It excludes the detail on trust fund programs which require annual action by Congress (shown in part II) and the detail on the District of Columbia municipal government funds (contained in a separate budget volume).

TRUST AND DEPOSIT FUNDS DISTINGUISHED

The funds which are covered in this part of the budget are of two types, as follows:

Trust funds are those funds established to account for receipts which are held in trust by the Government for use in carrying out specific purposes and programs in accordance with a trust agreement or a statute. Within the category of trust funds, there is a subcategory of trust revolving funds, which are trust funds used to carry on a cycle of business-type operations, including certain corporations which are partly owned by the Government and partly by private interests.

Deposit funds are those funds established to account for collections that are either (a) held in suspense temporarily and later refunded or paid into some other fund of the Government, or (b) held by the Government as banker or agent for others, being paid out in lump sums at the direction of the owner. Such funds are not available for paying salaries, expenses, grants, or other expenditures of the Government.

While the transactions in these groups of funds are a part of the financial program of the Government, trust and deposit funds are not fully owned by the Government; hence these transactions are excluded from budget totals.

TRUST FUND RECEIPTS AND EXPENDITURES

Receipts.—Like budget receipts, trust fund receipts are based upon collections received and deposited, including U.S. Government securities received in lieu of cash and contributions to the trust funds from the general fund. The conversion of U.S. Government securities on hand into cash is excluded from receipts, but such sales and redemptions are listed in special analysis F of part IV on a net basis.

Expenditures.—Like budget expenditures, trust fund expenditures are stated on a checks-issued basis, less refunds collected. Net investments in U.S. Government securities are excluded from the figures, and are listed in special analysis F of part IV.

Trust revolving funds.—The small group of funds which constitute trust revolving funds are reported on a net expenditure basis. The collections of trust revolving funds, instead of being taken into the tables as receipts, are deducted from expenditures. The gross figures are shown in a supplementary summary table and in the detailed schedules.

OBLIGATIONAL AUTHORITY FOR TRUST FUNDS

Trust fund receipts must be appropriated before they can be obligated or spent, with the exception of those few cases where the law grants contract authorization in advance (for example, the highway trust fund).

Most trust funds are appropriated by permanent law, not requiring further action by Congress. Usually the appropriations equal the receipts of the year. In a few cases receipts of trust funds can be spent only in accordance with appropriations enacted by Congress from year to year. Examples are the highway trust fund, funds of the United States Soldiers' Home, and the municipal revenues of the District of Columbia (which are accounted for as trust funds by the Federal Government). In a few other cases, trust fund receipts are permanently appropriated for benefit payments, but limitations on administrative expenses payable out of the trust funds are imposed by annual action of the Congress.

DEPOSIT FUND EXPENDITURES

Table 10 includes deposit fund expenditures by department or agency. These expenditures are on a net basis; that is, the collections are deducted from checks issued, and the resulting figure is shown as an expenditure. Checks issued include those written to move money into other funds, as well as those written for refunds and the return of money to depositors. When the collections are larger than the checks issued, the amount shown as an expenditure is a negative item.

NET ACCUMULATION IN TRUST AND DEPOSIT FUNDS

Table 10 shows the net accumulation during each year in all the trust and deposit funds. This represents the result obtained when the trust and deposit fund expenditures are subtracted from the trust receipts of the year. Since trust and deposit funds, as well as Federal funds, affect the total cash balance of the Treasury and the total public debt, the final figures in table 10 are carried forward into table 4 of part I. Data on the unexpended balances of the largest trust funds are appended to the table.

DETAIL OF TRUST FUND ESTIMATES

The detailed material in part III covers the trust funds which do not require annual action by Congress. Consolidated schedules are used for the smaller trust funds of each bureau or independent agency.

The material here follows the general format of the similar material in part II, with the principal exception that these schedules show receipts in place of showing appropriations. In cases where the receipts are not permanently appropriated as the money is collected, the schedules identify the portion of the unobligated balances on hand which is appropriated and the portion which is unappropriated. Also, no appropriation language appears here, and the narrative statement of program and performance usually consists only of an explanation of the sources of money for the fund, the purposes for which it is authorized to be spent, and the legal citations.

TRUST FUNDS

In 1961, total receipts of the trust funds are estimated at $22,547 million and expenditures at $21,278 million, with a resulting net accumulation of $1,269 million. In each of the major trust funds receipts are expected to exceed expenditures, with the single exception of the Federal National Mortgage Association secondary market operations.

The net accumulation estimated for 1961 compares with an estimated net excess of expenditures over receipts of $813 million for 1960. This change in the total reflects mainly a shift in three trust funds, Federal old-age and survivors insurance, highway, and unemployment. In 1960 the disbursements of each of these trust funds are estimated to exceed receipts, while the reverse is true in 1961.

TOTAL TRUST FUND TRANSACTIONS

[In millions]

	1959 actual	1960 estimate	1961 estimate

Expenditures	18,597	21,510	21,278
Net accumulation	−1,513	−813	1,269

While trust fund transactions are excluded from the budget receipts and expenditures, they nevertheless are a significant part of the program of the Government. For some functions—labor and welfare or commerce and housing—trust fund expenditures represent a larger part of the Government's program than do budget expenditures. Table 5 of part I of this budget shows budget expenditures, trust expenditures, and total Federal payments to the public for 1961.

At the end of this statement is a table showing actual trust and deposit fund expenditures by major function for 10 years, 1950 through 1959, and the estimates for 1960 and 1961.

While there are many separate trust and deposit funds, the bulk of the transactions and the largest amounts of money are in the following trust funds:

Social security insurance and staff retirement programs for retirement, disability, or death.—The first four major trust funds listed provide insurance against the loss of income due to retirement, disability, or death. Payments are made primarily from moneys derived from payroll contributions of employers, employees, and the self-employed. The portion of these receipts not immediately needed for benefit outlays is invested in securities of the Federal Government and earns interest. The first two trust funds are authorized by the Social Security Act of 1935, as amended, and comprise the Federal old-age, survivors, and disability insurance (OASDI) program. An increase in the employer and employee payroll tax rates from 2½% to 3%, which became effective on January 1, 1960, will enable the Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund to resume building up reserves.

The railroad retirement system, also established in 1935, is closely coordinated with old-age, survivors, and disability insurance, and serves as a combined social insurance and staff retirement system for workers in the railroad industry. In May 1959 legislation was enacted increasing benefits under the railroad retirement system by approximately 10%. The legislation also provided for an increase in the employer and employee payroll tax rates from 6¼% to 6¾%; this increase will largely eliminate the actuarial deficit under which the system has been operating. Receipts of the Railroad retirement account are abnormally high in 1960 because of a double financial interchange payment from the Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund, for both 1959 and 1960.

With the exception of some temporary employees covered under old-age, survivors, and disability insurance or special retirement systems, Federal civilian workers are covered under either the Civil Service Retirement Act or the Foreign Service Retirement Act. Beginning in 1957, Armed Forces personnel have been covered under old-age, survivors, and disability insurance on a contributory basis, as well as under the military retirement system which is financed directly from appropriations from budget funds.

The following table indicates the number of individuals receiving monthly benefits from the trust funds at the end of each year:

Unemployment trust fund.—Unemployment insurance was also authorized by the Social Security Act of 1935, as amended. Payroll taxes paid by employers under State laws and the Federal Unemployment Tax Act or under the Railroad Unemployment Act are deposited in the unemployment trust fund. The States and the Railroad

Retirement Board draw upon this fund to pay weekly benefits to eligible unemployed workers. Commencing in 1959, the Railroad Retirement Board is also drawing upon the Unemployment trust fund for its unemployment insurance administrative expenses and the portion of the taxes earmarked for this purpose is being deposited in the fund. Prior to 1959, a separate trust fund was maintained for this purpose.

Benefits paid by the States and the Railroad Retirement Board are expected to be at a lower level in 1961 than in 1960. In 1960, benefit payments were increased as a result of the secondary effects of the steel strike.

At present, under the Federal Unemployment Tax Act an employment tax of 0.3% is used chiefly for grants to States for administering unemployment compensation benefits as well as employment services. The receipts from this tax and the expenditures for the grants are included in budget funds. Legislation has been proposed to convert these transactions entirely to a trust fund operation, so that the administration of the regular State unemployment compensation program will be financed similarly to the old-age, survivors, and disability insurance and the railroad retirement and railroad unemployment compensation programs. This proposed change would affect both budget receipts and expenditures equally. This trust fund also includes the Federal unemployment account from which loans can be made to State reserve funds under specified conditions, but does not include the temporary unemployment compensation program which expired June 30, 1959; benefits under this program were financed from the general fund.

Veterans life insurance.—The National service life insurance fund and the United States Government life insurance fund, operated largely on a commercial basis, provide life insurance held primarily by veterans of the two World Wars. Receipts comprise premiums, interest on investments, and transfers from Federal Government budget funds to cover losses resulting from war hazards. Expenditures include payments of dividends, of death and disability claims, and of equities in policies in force. In 1961, an estimated $256 million in dividend payments will be made on 5.5 million policies in force, and $467 million will be paid for death and disability claims and for cash surrenders and matured endowments.

The foregoing does not include reference to two additional insurance funds, the Service-disabled veterans insurance fund and the Veterans special term insurance fund, which are classified as public enterprise rather than trust funds.

Highway trust fund.—Receipts from certain excise taxes on motor fuels, tires, and trucks are used to finance expenditures (primarily grants to the States) for Federal-aid highways.

The Highway Act of 1959 increased motor fuel taxes deposited in the trust fund by 1 cent per gallon, to 4 cents per gallon, for the period October 1, 1959, through June 30, 1961. In addition, effective July 1, 1961, and extending through June 30, 1964, half of the present excise tax on passenger automobiles and five-eighths of the present excise tax on parts and accessories are scheduled for diversion from the general fund to the trust fund. The additional 1 cent tax is estimated to yield approximately $590 million in 1961; the diversion would yield about $850 million on a full-year basis.

In order to permit highway construction for the Interstate System to proceed at a higher level, the budget message recommends a further increase of one-half cent per gallon in the highway fuel tax until at least June 30, 1964. Repeal of the provisions diverting excise taxes from the general fund is also requested.

Federal National Mortgage Association secondary market operations.—In the secondary market part of its operations, the Association buys and sells federally insured or guaranteed mortgages at prices prevailing in the market. These operations are self-supporting in accordance with statutory objectives. Funds required for mortgage purchases in 1961 will be obtained: (a) from private sources through the sale of the Association's debentures; (b) through mortgage sales and repayments; (c) through the purchases of common stock which are required of all mortgage sellers; and (d) by purchases of preferred stock by the Treasury in accordance with the statutory requirement that the Association maintain a minimum ratio of capital to debt of 1 to 10. Net trust expenditures, which are estimated to increase substantially to $980 million in 1960 reflecting increased mortgage purchase activity, are expected to decline in 1961 to $800 million.

3. Organization of the collections.—During 1959, the preparation of the 17th edition of Dewey classification was started, lists of East European accessions were prepared and distributed, and experiments were conducted in cataloging materials prior to publication to permit inclusion of the entry in the publication.

4. Information service on copyright materials.—Depositors were supplied with preliminary information relating to copyright materials in selected subject fields.

This fund is used to pay annuities to eligible widows and dependent children of deceased judges of the United States, to make refunds to former judges who have elected to come under the Judicial Survivors Annuity System but who have left the service, and to pay claims of survivors of member judges for any unpaid amounts credited to the individual accounts of such judges (28 U.S.C. 376).

On June 30, 1959, there were 338 judges participating in the system and 130 survivor annuitants. Due to an increased number of circuit and district judgeship vacancies, judicial participation remained at approximately the same level as in 1958. The number of annuitants did not increase in 1959, however, payments to annuitants increased due to more recent awards being larger in amount. It is expected that judicial participation and the number of annuitants will increase in 1960 and 1961.

1. Advances, Mutual Security Act.—Payments are received from foreign nations for military supplies, equipment, and services which the U.S. military departments transfer from their stocks or procure under contract. In most cases, cash payments are made before delivery. However, when determined by the President to be in the best interests of the United States, payments for deliveries of materiel from stock may be made within a reasonable time after delivery, not to exceed 3 years. Normally, this period is limited to 120 days. In the case of new procurement, the foreign governments must advance sufficient funds to meet required contract payments and, in addition, must provide the United States with a dependable undertaking to assure that no loss will accrue to the United States in case of contract cancellation or termination (Mutual Security Act of 1954, as amended, 22 U.S.C. 1816).

2. Advances for economic assistance.—By agreement with certain governments, the International Cooperation Administration acts as an agent, utilizing dollar advances by them to arrange transportation services for commodities purchased by those countries (Mutual Security Act of 1954, as amended, 22 U.S.C. 1795(b)).

3. Philippine assistance.—By agreement with the Philippine Government, the International Cooperation Administration acts as its agent, utilizing dollars advanced by the Philippines to procure commodities for them (Mutual Security Act of 1954, as amended, 22 U.S.C. 1795(b)).

4. Technical assistance, U.S. dollars advanced from foreign governments.—Funds advanced by foreign countries are used to pay some local costs of technical cooperation programs in those countries in accordance with bilateral agreements (Mutual Security Act of 1954, as amended, 22 U.S.C. 1795(b)).

EMPLOYEES HEALTH BENEFITS FUND

This fund finances the payment to approved carriers of the costs of health benefits protection as provided by the Federal Employees Health Benefits Act of 1959 (Public Law 86–382, 73 Stat. 713), together with expenses incurred by the Civil Service Commission in administration of the act.

Budget program.—Although expenses necessary for administering the health benefits program are authorized commencing in 1960, health benefits protection is not effective until after July 1, 1960. In the first year of operation it is estimated that 1,800,000 employee participants in this country and overseas, or approximately 90% of those eligible, in addition to some 70,000 annuitant and survivor participants will be enrolled in the program. It is estimated that during 1961, $246,250,000 in contributions will become available to the Employees health benefits fund, approximately $126,000,000 of which will be paid by covered employees, $2,750,000 by enrolled annuitants and survivors, and $117,500,000 by the Government. On the basis of these forecasts, $236,400,000 will be paid from the fund to approved health benefit plans. Amounts not to exceed 3% of the total contributions toward each plan will be set aside in the fund to provide a contingency reserve which will be used to defray increases in future rates, or to reduce contributions, or to provide increased benefits. An amount not to exceed 1% of all contributions will be set aside in the fund for any expenses incurred by the Civil Service Commission in the administration of this act.

Financing.—The fund will be financed by contributions from participants and the Government. Advances from the Employees life insurance fund are authorized for administrative expenses in 1960 and 1961. It is estimated that $800,000 will be advanced during 1960, that an additional $843,000 will be advanced during 1961, and that the total will be repaid with interest prior to the end of 1961.

Operating results.—Earnings will be retained to meet the cost of administration and future benefits after all borrowings have been repaid.

EMPLOYEES LIFE INSURANCE FUND

This fund finances the payment of group life insurance premiums to private insurance companies under the Federal Employees' Group Life Insurance Act of 1954 (5 U.S.C. 2091–2103) and any expenses incurred by the Civil Service Commission in administration of this act as annually authorized by Congress.

Budget program.—Through June 30, 1959, a total of $335 million was withheld from the salaries of covered employees and $167.5 million was contributed by the Government to the fund. It is estimated that, in 1961, a sum of $80 million will be paid into the fund by employees and $40 million by the Government. As of June 30, 1959, a total of $284.3 million had been paid by the insurer in benefits and approximately $13 million in accrued benefits awaited filing of claims. An estimated $79 million in benefits will be paid in 1961.

Most of the difference between receipts and benefit payments is held by the insurer as a contingency reserve. Upon completion of the annual policy accounting at the end of each policy year this reserve is reduced to $100 million by refunding the excess for redeposit in the Treasury of the United States for credit to the insurance fund. As of June 30, 1959, such refunds amounted to $71.9 million which represented the accumulated excess computed through the fourth policy year ended November 29, 1958. The estimated returns of $38.5 million in 1960 and $37 million in 1961 netted against expense account for the substantial increase in retained earnings which will be used to meet the cost of future benefits.

A summary statement of the operations of the contingency reserve for each of the 4 policy years, 1955 through 1958, follows:

Pursuant to Public Law 84–356, approved August 11, 1955, the Civil Service Commission in 1959 completed the assumption of life insurance assets and liabilities of 27 nonprofit associations of Federal employees.

Financing.—Premium costs are met by withholding from the salaries of employees 25 cents biweekly for each $1,000 of life insurance, contributions by the Government, and direct premium payments from beneficial association members.

Operating results.—Earnings are retained to meet the cost of future benefits.

FARM CREDIT ADMINISTRATION

Operating Fund, Federal Intermediate Credit Banks

The Federal intermediate credit banks serve as banks of discount for agriculture, discounting agricultural and livestock paper for local financing institutions, such as production credit associations, agricultural credit corporations, livestock loan companies, and commercial banks, and making loans to them on the security of such paper, and providing the production credit associations with necessary supervision and services. The banks were originally wholly owned Government corporations set up to serve exclusively as banks of discount; however, pursuant to the act of 1956 the banks became mixed-ownership corporations and were made responsible for supervising and assisting the production credit associations to enable them to make sound credit available to farmers.

OPERATING FUND, FEDERAL INTERMEDIATE CREDIT BANKS—Con.

All of the capital stock of the Federal intermediate credit banks from organization in 1923 to December 31, 1956, was held by the U.S. Government. The 1956 act provided a long-range plan for the acquisition of credit bank stock by production credit associations and the gradual retirement of the Government's investment in the banks. However, in the last few years the banks have been called upon to provide associations with substantially more funds to finance the short-term needs of farmers and it has been necessary for the Federal Government to invest additional capital in the banks in order to keep the debt-to-capital ratios within the 10 to 1 maximum permitted by law. These funds have been obtained from the Federal intermediate credit banks investment fund which was authorized in the 1956 act.

Net cash transactions of the operating fund of the Federal intermediate credit banks were transferred to a deposit fund of Treasury on January 1, 1959.

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION

International Telecommunication Settlements (Trust Revolving Fund)

This fund serves as a clearinghouse for payments by U.S. communications companies and other telecommunications users, including the Federal Government, to foreign governments for receiving and relaying radiotelephone and radiotelegraph messages. The charges of foreign governments against U.S. users are received by the Commission and billed to the users. The Commission then consolidates and disburses all telecommunications payments to a particular government.

Under the railroad retirement system, workers and employers contribute toward their retirement by taxes on wages. Benefits are payable when workers reach 65, become disabled, or die. These contributions are deposited in this trust fund and invested in Government securities bearing interest of at least 3%.

The 1959 amendments increased the tax rate 6¼% to 6¾% on both the employers and the employees and the taxable compensation base from $350 per month to $400, effective June 1, 1959. Also, benefits were increased by approximately 10% the same effective date.

The status of the trust fund is as follows:

Income.—The income of the Railroad retirement account consists of taxes paid by railroad employers and employees; interest on investments; and payments from the Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund. The railroad retirement system has a reinsurance arrangement of financial interchanges with the social security system.

Budget program—1. Retirement and survivor benefit payments.—Payment estimates reflect the benefit rate increase provided by the 1959 amendments and the maturing of the system.

2. Administrative expenses.—Such expenses are subject to annual limitations in appropriation acts (see Limitation on salaries and expenses, Railroad Retirement Board, in part II of the budget).

3. Payment to Federal disability insurance trust fund.—Payments are made between this account and the Federal disability insurance trust fund and the Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund so as to place these funds in the same position in which they would have been if railroad employment had been included in social security coverage. Under current conditions, this account receives payments from the Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund and makes payments to the Federal disability trust fund (65 Stat. 687; 70 Stat. 837).

4. Loan to Railroad unemployment insurance account.—The Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act provides that when the balance in the Railroad unemployment insurance account is insufficient to pay benefits due under that act, necessary amounts are to be borrowed from the Railroad retirement account. When the balance in the Railroad unemployment insurance account permits, borrowed amounts are to be repaid to the Railroad retirement account, with interest at 3% per annum.

The Board administers an unemployment and sickness insurance system and an employment service to find jobs for unemployed railroad workers. The administrative expenses are shown as a separate account in the Unemployment trust fund and are financed through a permanent appropriation of 0.2% of taxable payroll. As of each June 30, the unobligated balance in this fund in excess of $6 million is transferred as shown in the following table to the Railroad unemployment insurance account in the Unemployment trust fund (45 U.S.C. 361).

The 1958 amendments to the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act (Public Law 85–927) placed the Railroad unemployment administration fund in the Unemployment trust fund so that unexpended balances in the administration fund could earn interest from the parent account. The 1959 amendments to the act (Public Law 86–28) provided larger benefits to unemployed and sick railroad workers; increased the tax contribution rate and compensation base; and made various other changes in the law. The benefit provisions were retroactive to July 1, 1958, for normal unemployment and sickness benefits and to January 1, 1958, for extended benefit periods. The retroactive increase in benefits made it necessary to reopen approximately 520,000 previously adjudicated cases. Most of this nonrecurring amendment work carried over into 1960.

1. Maintenance of earnings accounts.—The amounts of insurance payments for unemployment, sickness, and maternity benefits are based upon individual records of earnings and daily wage rates. This workload fluctuates with the level of employment in the railroad industry, rates of turnover, and similar factors. The costs are shared on a measured basis with the retirement program. Compensation items were 1,893,039 in 1959 and are estimated to be 1,893,000 in 1960 and 1,929,000 in 1961.

2. Processing of unemployment insurance claims.—This involves paying benefits to unemployed railroad workers. Claims for unemployment compensation are filed locally and certified for payment through regional offices; the number fluctuates when economic changes affect the railroad industry. Regular unemployment claims were 2,769,204 in 1959 and are estimated at 1,850,000 in 1960 and 1,500,000 in 1961.

3. Processing of sickness and maternity claims.—These claims are filed by mail and certified for payment through the regional offices of the Board. The volume of sickness claims is relatively stable being 875,742 in 1959 and estimated at 886,000 in 1960 and 1961.

4. Claimant placement services.—The Board conducts an employment service for unemployed benefit claimants and to assist railroads in filling their manpower needs. This resulted in savings in benefit payments of more than $3 million in 1959 as 45,700 placements were made. Approximately the same level of placements is forecast for 1960 and 1961.

5. Administration.—This activity includes executive direction and general administrative and housekeeping services. The costs of administration are shared between this and the retirement program on a measured basis.

This fund was established in 1940 as the financing mechanism for the World War II servicemen's and veterans' insurance program authorized by the National Service Life Insurance Act of 1940. Over 22 million policies were issued under this program of which about 5.3 million, totaling approximately $35 billion, remain in force. Because issuance of new policies was ended in 1951 the insurance in force will continue to decline. The general decline in the activity of the fund is indicated in the following table:

[Dollars in millions]

	June 30, 1958	June 30, 1959	June 30, 1960	June 30, 1961

Amount of insurance in force	$35,477	$35,069	$34,876	$34,252

The assets of the fund, which are largely invested in special Treasury interest-bearing securities and in policy loans are expected to increase from $6,024 million as of June 30, 1959, to $6,302 million as of June 30, 1961. The current actuarial estimate of policy obligations totals $5,522 million, leaving a balance of $502 million for contingency reserves.

The income of the fund derives from premium receipts, interest on investments, and payments which are made to the fund from the appropriation Veterans insurance and indemnities, for claims (a) resulting from extra hazards of the veteran's service, and (b) arising on certain policies held by personnel on active duty. Administrative expenses are charged to the appropriation General operating expenses.

The fund is operated on a commercial basis to the greatest possible extent consistent with law. In the program and financing statement above, the noncash transactions, which are offset by other claims of the fund, are subtracted from program costs in order to show obligations of the fund. The following business-type statements of income and expense and financial condition include these noncash transactions relating to the status of insurance policy accounts.

This fund was established in 1919 to receive premiums and pay claims on insurance issued under the provisions of the War Risk Insurance Act. Approximately 339,000 policies of U.S. Government life insurance, providing coverage of almost $1.5 billion, remain in force. The general decline in the activity of the fund is indicated in the following table:

[Dollars in millions]

	June 30, 1958	June 30, 1959	June 30, 1960	June 30, 1961

Insurance in force	$1,545	$1,486	$1,436	$1,362

The assets of the fund, which are largely invested in interest-bearing securities and policy loans, are estimated to decline from $1,247 million as of June 30, 1959, to $1,205 million as of June 30, 1961, as an increasing number of policies mature through death or disability. The current actuarial evaluation of policy obligations totals $1,147 million, leaving a balance of $100 million for contingency reserves.

The income of the fund derives from premium receipts, interest on investments, and payments which are made to the fund from the appropriation Veterans insurance and indemnities, for claims (a) resulting from the extra hazards of the veteran's service, and (b) arising on certain policies held by personnel on active military duty. Administrative expenses are charged to the appropriation General operating expenses.

The fund is operated on a commercial basis to the greatest possible extent consistent with law. In the program and financing statement above, the noncash transactions, which are offset by other claims of the fund, are subtracted from program costs in order to show the obligations of the fund. The following business-type statements of income and expense and financial condition include these noncash transactions relating to the status of insurance policy accounts.

The secondary market operations of the Federal National Mortgage Association were authorized by the Housing Act of 1954 to provide limited liquidity for Government insured and guaranteed mortgages and to improve the distribution of investment capital available for home mortgage financing. Mortgage purchases under these operations are financed by the proceeds from (a) the sale of debentures to private investors, or to the Secretary of the Treasury (the Secretary of the Treasury may hold not more than $2.25 billion of such debentures), (b) subscriptions by the Secretary of the Treasury to Federal National Mortgage Association preferred stock ($92.8 million was subscribed in 1955, $50 million in 1957, and will be increased in 1961 by $50 million to a total of $192.8 million), (c) mandatory subscription by mortgage sellers to the Association's common stock, (d) the sale of mortgages to the investing public, (e) repayments and prepayments of mortgage principal, and (f) income from operations. Government management is intended to be transitional, to be succeeded by private operations when the Government's investment is retired. The present interim program, financed by private as well as Government investment, is treated as a trust fund. Operations are discussed in part I of the budget in connection with the program's general fund financing and effect on budget expenditures.

FARMERS HOME ADMINISTRATION

State Rural Rehabilitation Funds

These funds are administered by the Farmers Home Administration, under agreements with 40 individual States, for use in carrying out titles I and II of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act. In these States, operating type loans are made at 5% interest. In some States, farm ownership type loans are made from these funds and insured under the regular Farmers Home Administration insured loan program at 5% of which 1% represents an insurance charge that is retained by the Government. The entire assets of the 40 State corporations are being administered by the Farmers Home Administration, with the exception of $7,298,513 in cash and other assets returned to States for rural rehabilitation purposes agreed upon between each corporation and the Federal Government.

Declining activity is expected in 1960 and 1961 as a result of further return of assets to State corporations. Actual and estimated loan operations for 1958, 1959, 1960, and 1961 are as follows:

	Operating	Farm ownership

When loans and mortgages for construction, reconstruction, and reconditioning of vessels, insured by the United States under the provisions of title XI of the Merchant Marine Act of 1936, are financed by sale of bonds to the general public, the Secretary of Commerce is authorized by section 1111 of the act to accept deposits in escrow of the proceeds from the bond sale, together with interest thereon for the period of the escrow agreement. The purpose of the escrow deposit is to assure that funds shall be available (a) to make progress payments becoming due on the construction of the vessel, (b) for interest on the loan or mortgage, and (c) payment on account of principal in case of default. Investments on the fund may be made in U.S. obligations. Any income realized through investment of escrow funds is paid to the mortgagor.

It is anticipated that by 1960 approximately $67 million will have been deposited covering the construction of 10 vessels. The 1961 estimate reflects additional deposits of $78 million covering 13 vessels.

ALIEN PROPERTY FUND, WORLD WAR II (TRUST REVOLVING FUND)

Seized property in the United States, of the governments or nationals of Germany and Japan, vested in the name of the Attorney General, is prepared for liquidation as soon as practicable (50 U.S.C. App.). During 1959 a transfer of $3,750,000 was made to the War Claims Fund. The total transferred to date now amounts to $228.7 million. In 1959, a total of $3.4 million in claims and settlements was paid from such property operations and it is anticipated that $3 million will be paid in 1960 and $2 million in 1961. Interest in vested property is estimated to be $185.8 million at June 30, 1961, decreasing $4.8 million from 1960 and $11.7 million from 1959.

These trust funds consist of amounts received from employers for the death of an employee where no person is entitled to compensation for such death and for fines and penalty payments. In 1959 receipts were $10,000 and interest was $23,004 (33 U.S.C. 908, 944; 31 U.S.C. 725). Receipts are used to pay additional compensation for second injuries resulting in permanent total disability and to provide maintenance for employees undergoing vocational rehabilitation. In addition, under the subactivity Administration of rehabilitation, provision is made for the costs of necessary rehabilitation services not otherwise available to disabled longshoremen and harbor workers.

Under the Federal old-age and survivors insurance system, workers, employers and self-employed individuals make annual contributions in the form of taxes on earnings toward the benefits which will be payable when the worker retires or when he dies. These contributions were increased by one-half of 1% to a combined total paid by employer and employee of 4½% on January 1, 1959, and by another 1% January 1, 1960. An amount equal to the annual contributions is deposited in this trust fund for benefit payments and administrative expenses, part of which is being used for construction of a building to house the Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance. Any excess of income over outgo together with annual interest is invested in Government securities (42 U.S.C. 401).

Payments are made between this trust fund and the railroad retirement account so as to place this fund in the same position in which it would have been if railroad employment after 1936 had been included in social security coverage (45 U.S.C. 228E).

The status of the fund is as follows:

Under the Social Security Act all moneys deposited by a State agency from a State unemployment fund or by the Railroad Retirement Board to the credit of the Railroad unemployment insurance account as well as transfers to the Federal unemployment account, are held in the Unemployment trust fund. Under the provisions of 72 Stat. 1783 the Secretary of the Treasury established and maintains within the Unemployment trust fund an account known as the Railroad unemployment insurance administration fund. Amounts in the fund which are not required to meet current withdrawals are invested in Government securities (42 U.S.C. 1104).

The June 30, 1959, balance of $6,716,153,433 is distributed as follows:

State unemployment trust accounts	$6,682,173,389
Railroad unemployment insurance account:
Benefits and refunds	26,867,598
Administrative expense account	5,915,442
Federal unemployment account	1,197,004
Total	6,716,153,433

The Federal unemployment account is maintained at $200 million in order to make loans to States whenever benefit payments made by any State seriously deplete the balance in its unemployment trust account. Interest and repayments may increase the balance above $200 million. The Federal unemployment account's financial activity for 1959 showed:

Prior to July 1, 1959, advances were made by the insular government of Puerto Rico to pay expenses incurred on that island in connection with the enforcement of internal revenue laws relating to industrial alcohol. (26 U.S.C. 3123; 72 Stat. 1376 (a–4)). Public Law 85–859 amended this procedure to provide that starting July 1, 1959, such expenses shall be charged to the operating appropriation which incurs them, which appropriation shall be reimbursed out of taxes collected for Puerto Rico. The estimates for 1960 and 1961 are therefore included under Advances and reimbursements, Internal Revenue Service, Treasury Department, which account is shown in part II of this document.

The law continues to provide for the handling of similar expenses incurred in behalf of the Virgin Islands through this trust fund. However, no expenses have been incurred to date, and none are anticipated.

INTRODUCTION TO PART IV

Part IV of the budget contains a limited number of special analyses of budget data, which supplement material appearing in other parts of the budget. Most of the analyses include explanatory material which expands and elaborates these introductory notes.

In addition to the special analyses appearing in this part of the budget document, the analyses listed below are being published separately and single copies of each may be obtained, upon request, from the Bureau of the Budget. The first two on the list are currently available; the others are expected to be available in about 10 days.

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT RECEIPTS FROM AND PAYMENTS TO THE PUBLIC

Special analysis A presents information on the flow of money between the public and the Federal Government as a whole, including both Federal funds and trust (and deposit) funds. In addition, certain transactions of five Government-sponsored enterprises are included. Major intragovernmental and noncash transactions are excluded in this consolidation. This analysis also presents a reconciliation with Treasury cash deposits and withdrawals as reported in the Daily Statement of the U.S. Treasury. The information here provides one measure of the impact of Government activities on the economy, and it serves as the basis for table 5 of part I, which summarizes the data for fiscal year 1961 only.

ANALYSIS OF BUDGET RECEIPTS

Special analysis B presents details on the budget receipts summarized in table 1 of part I. It includes a statement explaining the receipt estimates, together with a table giving a classification of receipts by source. Data for all 3 years is presented on the basis of a revised classification adopted in July 1959. The figures include receipts of both the general fund and the special funds. The text pertaining to taxes, customs, and refunds is prepared by the Treasury Department.

ANALYSIS OF THE BUDGET BY FUNCTION AND AGENCY

Special analysis C gives the details for the functional classification of new obligational authority and expenditures used in the budget message and in certain tables of part I. It is compiled by regrouping the figures found in the chapter summaries of part II. The code numbers listed in the chapter summaries are the key to the grouping found in this analysis.

CHARACTER ANALYSIS OF BUDGET EXPENDITURES

Special analysis D analyzes budget expenditures in terms of the duration and nature of the benefits derived. Expenditures of an investment type are shown in two major categories—one for acquisition and improvement of Federal assets, and the other for developmental purposes such as additions to State, local, and private assets, and expenditures for research, education, and health. Expenditures yielding current benefits are also grouped in two major categories—one for aids and special services to various groups, and the other for the remaining current operating expenses. No adjustments are made for depreciation, obsolescence, allowances for potential losses on loans, and other items not reflected in current expenditure data.

FOREIGN CURRENCY AVAILABILITIES AND USES

Special analysis E presents information on the foreign currencies accruing to the United States without purchase with dollars, and the disposition of such currencies. It covers currencies both for "country uses" (grants to and loans in the country from which the currencies are obtained) and for "U.S. uses." For 1959 and 1960 currencies were in many cases made available to various agencies for U.S. uses without being reflected in the budget accounts; for 1961, it is proposed to adopt a system of budget control which will also automatically bring the transactions into the budget accounts. The special analysis coordinates and supplements the information presented elsewhere in the budget on this subject.

SELECTED INVESTMENTS AND INTERFUND TRANSACTIONS

Special analysis F sets forth certain investments and interfund transactions which are not reflected in the expenditures or receipts shown elsewhere in the budget. The first two groups of these are the investments by revolving and trust funds in U.S. Government securities (both Treasury issues and the securities of wholly owned Government enterprises), and the net borrowing or repayment of debt by wholly owned enterprises (other than their debt to the Treasury). The totals of these transactions, while not a part of budget expenditures or receipts, affect the financing requirements of the Government as a whole, and therefore are included in computations shown in table 4 of part I. The other group of transactions included in this table constitutes transfers by the revolving funds to the general fund, representing the return of capital and the distribution of earnings; such transfers are excluded from budget expenditures and budget receipts.

HISTORICAL COMPARISON OF BUDGET RECEIPTS AND EXPENDITURES

Special analysis G presents a 10-year comparison of budget receipts and expenditures. The receipts are classified by source and the expenditures by function. A technical note sets forth the change in classifications since the 1960 budget. As in special analysis C, the code numbers appearing in the chapter summaries of part II are the key to the grouping of items in the expenditure section of this analysis.

Special Analysis A

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT RECEIPTS FROM AND PAYMENTS TO THE PUBLIC

The transactions of the Federal Government on a consolidated cash basis are expected to result in an excess of Federal receipts from the public of $5.9 billion in the fiscal year 1961 as compared with an excess of payments of $0.5 billion in the current year. This concept of Federal income and outgo is described in detail on pages 899–900 of this analysis. In general, in addition to consolidating budget, trust fund, and other transactions, it eliminates certain intragovernmental payments and transactions which do not represent cash flows between the Federal Government and the public.

The shift to an excess of receipts between 1960 and 1961 is explained primarily by the improved budget outlook, and also by the change to a net accumulation of trust fund receipts of $1.3 billion in 1961, from an estimated excess of payments of $0.8 billion in 1960. (For trust fund receipts and expenditures, see part III of this document, especially pp. 843–844.

Receipts from the public are expected to rise to $102.2 billion in 1961, which is $7.4 billion higher than in the current fiscal year. Payments are estimated at $96.3 billion, an increase of $0.9 billion above the current fiscal year.

Federal receipts from the public by major source and payments to the public by major function: 1948–61.—Since 1948, receipts from and payments to the public have both increased at a faster rate than budget receipts and expenditures, with the growth of existing trust fund programs accompanied by employment tax increases (particularly old-age and survivors insurance) and the creation of new trust funds (principally the Highway trust fund). Both receipts from and payments to the public in 1961 will be more than double the comparable amount in any of the years 1948–50.

Income taxes have provided most of the increase in receipts from the public, and have more than doubled since 1948. Individual income taxes in 1961 will have risen by $24.4 billion and corporate income taxes by $13.8 billion during this period. Employment tax receipts are estimated to be $12.7 billion in 1961, over 5 times the 1948 level. This growth is accounted for by (1) increases in both the rates and income bases of these taxes, (2) the wider extension of social security coverage, and (3) generally higher incomes.

Total payments	96,257	79,816	16,441
Excess of receipts	5,921	4,184	1,737

With two exceptions, payments for each major governmental function will be higher in 1961 than in 1948. The exceptions are international affairs and finance, and veterans services and benefits; and in both of these cases expenditures in 1948 were very high because of special post-World War II conditions. In absolute amounts, the largest increases since 1948 are $32.9 billion for major national security, and $17.1 billion for labor and welfare. The largest relative changes since 1948 are for commerce and housing programs and for agriculture and agricultural resources. Outlays for commerce and housing programs (including highways) in 1961 are estimated to be 12 times the 1948 total, while payments for agriculture will have increased 10 times from the exceptionally low 1948 amount.

Comparison with the budget.—The estimated excess of receipts from the public in 1961 exceeds the budget surplus primarily because trust fund receipts exceed trust fund expenditures. A much smaller contributing factor will be the expected unpaid interest accruals on savings bonds, which are included in budget expenditures but not in cash payments. As in the budget, income taxes provide the largest portion of receipts from the public, and payments to the public for major national security exceed payments for any other function.

Federal payments to the public for commerce and housing exceed comparable budget totals considerably, primarily because of the expenditures from the Highway trust fund. Payments for labor and welfare also exceed budget totals substantially, because of the benefit payments of the social security trust funds. On the other hand, cash payments to the public for interest are considerably smaller than budget outlays, mainly because a large amount of interest on the public debt is paid by the Treasury to trust funds on their holdings of public debt securities, and does not go to the public directly.

Federal net cash borrowing from the public.—The amount of Federal net cash borrowing from the public (or net repayment of such borrowing) is determined primarily by the excess of payments to (or receipts from) the public, and also varies with changes made in the Treasury's cash balances. Receipts from the exercise of monetary authority, not included in receipts from the public, provide a relatively small additional amount of available revenue.

The figures shown in the preceding table for net cash borrowing from the public include not only the change in the amount of publicly held U.S. Government securities issued by the Treasury, but also the change in securities of various kinds issued to the public by other Government agencies and by Government-sponsored enterprises. Changes in the public debt that do not represent direct cash borrowing or repayment of borrowing from the public are excluded. Major examples of such noncash debt transactions are the issuance of U.S. Government notes and securities to the International Monetary Fund and Coverage.—This analysis presents information on the flow of money between the public and the Federal Government as a whole, representing, in effect, a consolidated cash statement of Federal transactions—other than borrowing—with the public. For purposes of this analysis, the public is defined to include individuals, banks, other private corporations and associations, unincorporated businesses, the Federal Reserve System, the Postal Savings System, State and local governments, foreign governments, and international organizations. Included in consolidated cash receipts and expenditures are the transactions of trust and deposit funds (which are not fully owned by the Federal Government), and net expenditures of Government-sponsored enterprises, as well as the Federal funds included in budget receipts and expenditures. (For a description of the differences between budget, trust, and other types of funds, see the introductions to part I and part III, pp. 1 and 841.) In consolidating these funds, major intragovernmental transactions which are reported as both expenditures and receipts are eliminated. Transactions so eliminated are: (1) Payments between Federal funds, such as interest paid to the general fund by the Commodity Credit Corporation on its borrowing from the Treasury; (2) payments between Federal funds and trust funds, such as interest paid to the Unemployment trust fund by the general fund on its holdings of public debt securities; and (3) payments between trust funds, such as payments by the Old-age and survivors insurance fund to the Railroad retirement account.

Receipts of the Government from the exercise of monetary authority (mainly seigniorage) do not represent cash received from the public and are therefore deducted in making this consolidation. The bulk of these receipts represent the difference between acquisition cost to the Treasury and the monetary value of silver and other metals minted into coins.

[2] From table 10 in part III of this document.

This analysis also includes on a net basis the estimated expenditures of five Government-sponsored enterprises which are exempt from the budgeting requirements of the Government Corporation Control Act of 1945, as amended—The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation; the Federal home loan banks; the Federal land banks; the banks for cooperatives; and since January 1, 1959, the Federal intermediate credit banks. The expenditures of these enterprises are estimated from their security transactions in the following manner: both net investment by an enterprise in U.S. securities and net redemption by the enterprise of its own obligations are used as a measure of net receipts from operations; net cashing by the enterprise of U.S. securities and net sales of its own obligations are used as a measure of net expenditures. Also included on a net basis in this analysis, but as part of trust fund expenditures, are the transactions of the Federal National Mortgage Association secondary market operations (a mixed-ownership enterprise).

Budget expenditures are for the most part on a "checks issued" basis but also include a few noncash transactions of three types, as described later in this paragraph. In calculating total Federal payments to the public, these noncash items are excluded. On the other hand, actual cash outlays are included in payments to the public even though they are not part of budget expenditures for the year in question. The three main transactions of this type are: (1) U.S. securities issued in payment of obligations and the redemption of these securities for cash at a later date. This is the case with the U.S. Treasury notes used to pay the U.S. subscription to the International Monetary Fund in 1959—notes which will be redeemed in later years as the International Monetary Fund needs the money; (2) interest on savings bonds, which is a budget expenditure at the time of accrual and a payment to the public when the bonds are redeemed; and (3) net changes in the clearing accounts for outstanding checks and similar items. In any given year the aggregate of the accruals may be larger or smaller than total disbursements for previously accrued items.

Use and limitations.—Because the totals of Federal Government receipts from and payments to the public are more comprehensive than the budget totals, they are of particular importance in evaluating the impact of Federal transactions on the economy. For example, Federal receipts from the public classified by source indicate the sectors of the economy or the kinds of transactions other than borrowing which provide funds for the Government. Federal payments to the public by function indicate the relative importance of the major Government programs in terms of total cash outlays. The excess of receipts from the public or payments to the public tends to reflect the net impact of Federal financial transactions on the income of the public as a whole.

Federal receipts from and payments to the public tend to understate the scope of Federal transactions, because the totals include only the net expenditures of wholly owned and of Government-sponsored enterprises. Receipts from operations of these enterprises, such as postal receipts or interest on and repayment of loans, are deducted from disbursements, such as postal expenditures or new loans, in measuring net expenditures. Since this netting reduces receipts and payments by equal amounts, the excess of Federal receipts from or payments to the public is not affected.

This measure of Federal transactions differs from the national income account treatment in two major respects—coverage and timing. With respect to coverage, capital (financing) transactions, such as loans and loan repayments and sales and purchases of existing assets, are excluded from receipts and expenditures on national income and product account but are included in the consolidated cash statement. With respect to timing, the national account treatment records many transactions on an accrual basis, while in cash receipts from and payments to the public an effort is made to record only cash transactions.

Users of the data in this analysis should recognize that no single measure can describe completely the economic impact of the Federal Government. Since the various receipt and expenditure transactions have different economic effects, a given aggregate will have an economic impact which depends on the composition of the total. In addition, many Government activities besides receipts and expenditures have a bearing on the economy. For example, a rapid expansion in new appropriations and in Government orders could stimulate a rise in business activity long before the authorized funds were paid to the public. Likewise, the enactment of a tax measure or even the expectation of a change in tax rates may affect business planning or activity well before the cash flows between the Federal Government and the public occur. Federal guarantees and insurance of private loans may also affect activity in the economy, even though they normally entail relatively small Government expenditures. Aside from the significance of interest payments to the public, the management of the public debt is a further important factor which has particular impact in the money and credit markets of the economy.

Reconciliation with Treasury cash deposits and withdrawals.—The daily statement of the Treasury presents a consolidated cash statement of Treasury operating transactions similar in general concept to Federal receipts from and payments to the public. However, it is limited in coverage to those transactions affecting the accounts of the Treasurer of the United States.

[1] Represents increase (−) or decrease in Government agencies' balances outside Treasury.

[2] Includes only net sales by Government agencies and trust funds which were not reflected in the accounts of the Treasurer of the United States.

Receipts from exercise of monetary authority, since they constitute funds available to the Treasurer, are included in Treasury cash deposits.

The adjustment "net difference in actual year due to reporting method," which appears in both preceding reconciliation tables, is necessary because of the method used by the Treasury in reconciling its accounts for checks being cleared and the corresponding adjustment made in the preparation of the receipts from and payments to the public data. This adjustment is applied to payments instead of adjusting receipts and payments separately, and is used to change the Treasury "checks issued" data to a "checks paid" basis.

A further adjustment is necessary in the reconciliation of "payments" with "withdrawals" since the concept of payments to the public is more inclusive than Treasury cash withdrawals and includes payments by Government agencies from their own cash balances or from accounts in commercial banks. These payments are measured by net changes in cash held outside the Treasury and by net proceeds realized by Government agencies and trust funds from sales of securities in the open market that were not reflected in the Treasurer's account.

NOTE.—A detailed reconciliation of the differences between the budget totals, Federal Government receipts from and payments to the public, and Treasury cash deposits and withdrawals is available on request from the Bureau of the Budget.

Special Analysis B

ANALYSIS OF BUDGET RECEIPTS

Estimates based on existing and proposed legislation

This special analysis provides supporting detail for the figures on budget receipts by source which are included in the tables of the budget message and in table 1 of part I.

The estimates of receipts from taxes and customs for the current and coming fiscal years are prepared by the Treasury Department. In general, the estimates of miscellaneous receipts are prepared by the agencies depositing these receipts in the Treasury.

The estimates are based on the assumption of a continued rise in the level of economic activity through the period underlying fiscal year 1961 receipts. The revenue estimates are consistent with an increase in the gross national product from about $480 billion in calendar year 1959 to about $510 billion in calendar year 1960. It is also assumed for fiscal year 1961 that legislation will be enacted extending present corporation income and excise tax rates for a year beyond June 30, 1960; that aviation gas taxes will be increased and a new tax imposed on jet fuels, and both credited to the general fund; and that adequate fees and charges will be established for special services or benefits, as recommended by the President.

Detailed estimates of budget receipts under both existing and proposed legislation are contained on pages 904 to 906.

BUDGET RECEIPTS

Receipts in the fiscal year 1959 were adversely affected by the 1957–58 recession. The recovery and growth in business activity and profits which commenced in the middle of calendar year 1958 are expected to result in an increase of $10.3 billion in receipts in the fiscal year 1960 as compared to 1959 and a further rise in receipts of $5.4 billion for 1961. The amounts estimated for 1960 and 1961—$78.6 billion and $84 billion, respectively—are substantially higher than the level attained in any past year.

RECEIPTS BY MAJOR SOURCES

Actual receipts for 1959 and estimated receipts for 1960 and 1961 are compared by major sources in the following table. The amount shown for each receipt source is the net amount after deduction of refunds and transfers to trust funds.

Net budget receipts

Miscellaneous receipts	3,155	4,010	3,930	−80
Net budget receipts	68,270	78,600	84,000	+5,400

The individual income tax is estimated to remain, by far, the most important tax source in 1960 and 1961. Revenues from individual income taxes are about double the corporation income tax; together, the two income taxes are estimated to account for 80% of receipts in 1961.

Substantial increases are estimated for all major tax sources for the fiscal year 1961, with the largest share of the increase provided by the individual income tax. Another significant increase is provided by the corporation income tax.

Individual income taxes.—Individual income tax receipts are estimated to increase by $3.4 billion in fiscal year 1961. The rise of $7 billion in receipts from this source since 1959 reflects the growth in personal income which was resumed in mid-1958 and is estimated to continue through the fiscal year 1961.

Corporation income taxes.—Receipts from corporation income taxes in each fiscal year are determined primarily by corporate profits of the calendar year ending in the fiscal year. Thus, receipts in fiscal year 1960 largely reflect calendar year 1959 profits and receipts in fiscal year 1961, calendar year 1960 profits. Substantial gains have been reported for profits following the depressed first half of calendar year 1958. Although restrained somewhat by the steel strike in the fall, profits for calendar year 1959 will average substantially above those for calendar year 1958. As a result, corporation income tax receipts are estimated to rise from $17.3 billion in 1959 to $22.2 billion in 1960. It is expected that profits will show a further rise for calendar year 1960 as compared with calendar year 1959 and will result in a rise of $1.3 billion in corporation income taxes to a total of $23.5 billion for 1961.

Comparisons of receipts in these years are affected by (1) the completion with fiscal year 1960 of the accelerated schedule of corporation income tax payments, and (2) the postponement from June to September 1959 of the payment of a substantial portion of life insurance liabilities for calendar year 1958 as a result of the Life Insurance Company Income Tax Act of 1959.

Excise tax receipts

Gross excise tax receipts are estimated to increase $1,051 million in 1960 and to rise further by $746 million in 1961. However, receipts transferred to the Highway trust fund are estimated to increase by $456 million in 1960 and by $323 million in 1961. Consequently, the increase in net excise taxes remaining as general fund receipts is reduced to $596 million in 1960 and $423 million in 1961.

Receipts transferred to the Highway trust fund will be augmented in 1960 and 1961 by an estimated increase in sales of taxable products, but the major reason for the much higher transfers is the increase of 1 cent per gallon in the tax rates on gasoline and diesel fuel effective October 1, 1959, and continuing until June 30, 1961. The increase in rates affects year-to-year comparisons since it is only partly effective in 1960 but fully operative in 1961. The amount transferred in 1961 is reduced by the retention in general fund receipts of the revenue from the tax on aviation gasoline under proposed legislation.

Net excise tax receipts in 1960 and 1961 are expected to increase because of the much higher volume of sales of taxable goods and services estimated to accompany higher consumer incomes. The increase is much larger for 1960 than for 1961 primarily because of the difference in the rate of increase in receipts from the tax on passenger automobiles. Receipts from this tax in 1960 are estimated to increase $346 million because of the sharp rise in production from the reduced level in the calendar year 1958. In 1961, a much more moderate increase of $65 million in receipts from this tax is estimated. However, increases in 1960 are generally greater than in 1961 because receipts in 1959 were adversely affected by the leveling off of personal incomes which lasted for about 1 year until the middle of the calendar year 1958.

Part of the rise in sales of excise receipts which is estimated to occur in 1960 because of the rise in taxable goods and services is offset by the effect of the repeal of taxes on the transportation of property and oil by pipeline.

The estimate for excise tax receipts in 1961 includes the effect of the proposed legislation for aviation fuels. Under this proposal receipts from the tax on aviation gasoline will be credited to the general fund, the net rate will be increased from 2 to 4½ cents per gallon, and a new tax at the 4½-cent rate will be imposed on jet fuel.

Employment taxes.—Receipts from the Federal Insurance Contributions Act and the Self-Employment Contributions Act are estimated to increase by $2,088 million in 1960 and $1,573 million in 1961. These increases are expected to occur partly because of growing levels of taxable wages, but principally because of changes in law effective January 1, 1959, and January 1, 1960. The January 1, 1959, changes consisted of an increase of one-fourth of 1% each in the tax rate on employers and employees and an increase in the maximum amount taxable from $4,200 to $4,800. These changes were partially reflected, therefore, in fiscal year 1959 receipts but fully reflected in fiscal year 1960 receipts. A further increase of one-half of 1% each on employers and employees was effective on January 1, 1960, partially affecting 1960 receipts but wholly effective in fiscal year 1961.

Increases in fiscal years 1960 and 1961 are also estimated for receipts from the Railroad Retirement Tax Act and the Federal Unemployment Tax Act.

Employment tax receipts

Federal disability insurance trust fund	847	928	972	+44
Railroad retirement account	525	630	660	+30
Net employment taxes	321	333	340	+7

Estate and gift taxes.—Receipts from the estate and gift taxes are expected to increase by about the same amounts in fiscal years 1960 and 1961. Because of the length of time after date of death permitted in the filing of estate tax returns, and because estate taxes represent the bulk of these receipts, the income from this source does not immediately reflect changes in security and other asset values.

Customs.—Customs receipts are estimated to increase appreciably in both 1960 and 1961 as taxable imports rise with expanded business activity.

Miscellaneous receipts.—The estimated increase of $855 million in 1960 is attributable for the most part to larger collections of interest on loans and of dividends and other earnings. Because of the nonrecurring nature of some of the collections in 1960, a small decrease is forecast for 1961. The 1961 estimate includes amounts under proposed legislation to increase charges for government services which provide special benefits to identifiable individuals or groups.

Special Analysis C

ANALYSIS OF BUDGET BY FUNCTION AND AGENCY

This special analysis gives the details for the functional breakdown of new obligational authority and budget expenditures used in the budget message and in some of the tables of part I.

For each function and subfunction, data are listed by agencies. In order to find the appropriation items which make up the amounts shown for the agency, it is necessary to look in the chapter summary for that agency. Each entry in the chapter summary is coded to indicate the subfunction in which it is classified.

For purposes of this classification each appropriation account and each revolving and management fund is treated as a unit. Exceptions are made, and accounts are split into two or more categories, in only selected cases. This necessarily involves some close decisions in borderline cases, and it means that programs with secondary significance for some major functions will be included in another category because another objective predominates in the particular appropriation. Thus, to secure a comprehensive total of all Government programs related to education, for example, it would be necessary to provide a special tabulation, counting in this category some appropriations which might also be relevant to other categories.

Whereas this special analysis presents both authorizations and expenditures for major functions, subfunctions, and agencies over a 3-year period, special analysis G shows expenditures for the major functions and subfunctions over a 10-year period. Special analysis A shows Federal Government payments to the public, classified by major function.

The allowance for contingencies constitutes an additional entry in the tabulations for the years 1960 and 1961.

Special Analysis D

INVESTMENT, OPERATING, AND OTHER BUDGET EXPENDITURES

INTRODUCTION

This special analysis is designed to contribute to a general understanding of the Federal budget by dividing Government expenditures into two major categories: (1) expenditures yielding benefits primarily in the current year and (2) expenditures yielding benefits primarily beyond the year in which they are made.

Expenditures yielding benefits over a period of years, that is, those of an investment type, are shown in two main classes—the first for acquisition of assets by the Federal Government, and the second for other broad developmental purposes. Additions to Federal assets include loans, outlays for public works, additions to major commodity inventories, expenditures for major equipment such as military missiles, ships, and aircraft, and expenditures for other physical assets. Expenditures for other developmental purposes are defined as those which add to State, local, and private assets or otherwise contribute to the general productivity of the economy. Included in this category are outlays for research and development, education and health, and other programs which add to the Nation's fund of knowledge and technical skills.

Expenditures which yield mainly current benefits are also grouped in two main classes—the first for aids and services to specific groups, and the second for current operating expenses of a more general nature.

In each category of this analysis, major national security expenditures are reported separately from those for all other (civil) programs. Such a distinction is especially helpful in appraising Federal expenditures for assets and other developmental purposes, since military outlays generally have different objectives from civil outlays in comparable categories. Similarly, expenditures for direct Federal programs are separated from grants-in-aid or loans to States and local governments.

Comparison with a capital budget.—The present analysis is not intended to be a capital budget. A capital budget as prepared by some foreign governments and some State and local governments usually provides separate financing for major capital outlays. Capital outlays of these governments may be entirely excluded from the current budget or they may be amortized over a period of years by annual charges to the budget. In the United States Federal Budget, however, investment items are ordinarily treated in the same way as outlays for other purposes; both types are considered as expenditures in determining the budget surplus or deficit.

A capital budget would also call for annual allowances for depreciation and obsolescence on existing physical assets, allowances for anticipated losses on loan programs, recognition of assets received as gifts or donated to others, and cognizance of profit or loss on sales of assets at figures different from their book values. This analysis makes no such provision for depreciation or other changes in the value of assets. Hence, it does not indicate the extent to which annual new investment is offset by changes in the value of existing assets.

Recovery of certain types of expenditures.—Certain expenditures for assets are offset in whole or in part by receipts to the Treasury in the form of sales, specific charges, or recoveries. This is the case with respect to many loans, investment in commodity inventories, construction of powerplants, and outlays for range and forest improvements on the public domain. Where such activities are accounted for on a revolving fund basis, receipts are credited directly against the expenditures, and the expenditure amounts in the budget and in special analysis D are net of receipts. In other cases, the receipts are counted as miscellaneous receipts to the Treasury rather than as offsets to expenditures.

Federal expenditures for most investment type programs are not generally expected to be recovered by specific revenues. Nonetheless, these and other developmental expenditures increase the wealth and income of the Nation, both directly and indirectly, thus expanding potential Federal revenues over a period of years.

SUMMARY

Expenditures for the acquisition of assets and for other developmental purposes are estimated to be $30 billion in 1961, compared to $29.3 billion in 1960. Current expenses for aids, services, and operations will total about $49.6 billion, compared to $49 billion for 1960.

ADDITIONS TO FEDERAL ASSETS

Expenditures representing direct investment by the Federal Government in loans and federally owned physical assets are expected to amount to $20 billion in 1961, compared to $19.7 billion in 1960. As in other recent years, the bulk of the total (77% in 1961) is for major national security programs, mostly for military equipment. Public works account for under half ($2.1 billion) of estimated additions to civil assets in 1961; the remainder consists mostly of civil loans ($1.5 billion) and additions to inventories of farm commodities ($0.9 billion).

Loans.—Direct loans by Federal agencies consist primarily of loans to farmers and homeowners, to public and private agencies serving these two groups, and to foreign governments and private businesses. Although a few loan programs are on a nonrevolving basis, such as the Rural Electrification Administration and the Farmers Home Administration, most direct loan programs in the budget and in this special analysis are financed on a revolving fund basis so that net expenditures for loans as reported in this analysis reflect only a fraction of total direct Government lending activity. Although the 1961 budget proposes that some additional lending programs be placed on a revolving fund basis, the budget estimates for these programs are presented on the basis of existing law.

Net budget expenditures for loans in 1961 are estimated to be $1.4 billion, compared to $630 million in 1960. The largest single change by far reflects decreased loan repayments to the Commodity Credit Corporation. Loan repayments to this Corporation are expected to exceed disbursements by $1 billion in 1960, but by only $208 million in 1961. CCC loans are secured by agricultural commodities. Forfeitures of such collateral are regarded as loan repayments, but result in additions to CCC inventories shown elsewhere in this special analysis. Housing loans by the Veterans Administration are scheduled to decline sharply from net disbursements of $253 million in 1960 to $13 million in 1961, reflecting the end of the direct loan program on July 25, 1960. Other loans for housing programs, including mortgage purchases, will increase in 1961. Loans to foreign borrowers by the Export-Import Bank will increase by $53 million and by the mutual security program by $122 million in 1961. The Treasury, which paid $1.4 billion in 1959 to increase the U.S. subscription to the International Monetary Fund, will pay $80 million in 1960 for the first installment on the U.S. investment in the Inter-American Bank. These expenditures are nonrecurring.

Loans are classified in this special analysis as "additions to assets" because they are expected to result in receipts or recoveries to the Federal Government in future years. For the Nation as a whole, however, Government loan activities may represent either current or future benefits depending on the character and purpose of the loan.

Public works—sites and direct construction.—Included in this category are Federal expenditures for sites, for Federal civil public works projects, and for military installations and other national security facilities, including those outside the continental United States. Estimated expenditures in 1961 for direct Federal public works are $3.8 billion, about the same as in 1960. Civil public works expenditures will be about $2.1 billion, which is $257 million higher than in 1960, reflecting mainly increases for water resources projects, civilian space research facilities, Federal aviation facilities, and construction of office buildings for several executive agencies and the House of Representatives. Expenditures for water resources and related projects in 1961 will amount to approximately $1.2 billion. Total outlays will be mostly for work already underway; starts on proposed new projects will entail estimated expenditures of $258 million in 1961.

Major national security construction, which accounts for 43% of 1961 Federal public works, will decrease by $279 million. Payments for airfield construction will decline by more than enough to offset increases for atomic energy construction, underground missile bases, and other military construction.

Major commodity inventories.—Net expenditures for major purchases of commodities held for resale or in stockpiles are expected to be $1 billion in 1961, about $310 million less than in 1960. Net additions to the inventory of farm commodities held by the Commodity Credit Corporation under its farm price-support program are estimated to amount to $895 million, compared to $1.1 billion in 1960. Expenditures for the stockpiling of strategic and critical materials (other than fissionable) and for purchases of defense materials are expected to decline from $192 million in 1960 to $110 million in 1961.

Major equipment.—Expenditures for major equipment are estimated at over $12 billion in both 1960 and 1961. These expenditures are almost entirely for aircraft, missiles, ships, and other major national security equipment. Although expenditures for aircraft procurement will decline from the 1960 level, expenditures for tanks, vehicles, guns, and electronics devices will increase. Shipbuilding and missile procurement will call for about the same amount of expenditures as in 1960. While military missiles have many of the characteristics of expendable supplies such as ammunition, their acquisition cost is included in this analysis under "additions to assets" because they are in many cases replacing aircraft or other durable assets.

Expenditures for civilian space research equipment will increase by $10 million in 1961. Purchases of office equipment, furniture, fixtures, automobiles, and similar items are not included in this category, but are treated as current operating expenses.

Other physical assets—acquisition and improvement.—Expenditures for other physical assets are estimated to be $1.6 billion in 1961, about the same as in 1960. Of this amount, the major national security portion, which provides for the procurement of uranium concentrates and production of special nuclear materials and weapons by the Atomic Energy Commission, will decline. Civil expenditures in this category, which include reforestation and range improvements on Federal lands and real property acquired as collateral on defaulted loans, will increase.

EXPENDITURES FOR OTHER DEVELOPMENTAL PURPOSES

This category includes Federal expenditures which add to the productivity of the economy over a period of years but which do not directly augment Federal physical and financial assets. Disbursements which appear to yield the bulk of their benefits in the current year are excluded, even though they may also contribute to the longer run economic development of the Nation.

Table 3.—Expenditures for other developmental purposes

[In millions]

Engineering and natural resource surveys	50	54	60
Total expenditures for other developmental purposes	8,039	9,540	10,025

State and local physical assets.—In 1961 the Federal Government will spend an estimated $331 million for additions to physical assets of State and local governments, primarily through grants-in-aid for the construction of schools in federally affected areas, hospitals, airports, waste-treatment works, watershed protection projects, and other facilities. This amount excludes grants of $2.7 billion in 1961 for the Federal-aid highway system, which are to be made from the separately financed Highway trust fund rather than from the budget.

Private physical assets.—Federal expenditures which directly augment privately owned physical assets consist predominantly of (1) payments and technical assistance for conservation and improvement of private farms, including cost sharing payments under the conservation reserve program and the agricultural conservation program; (2) grants to States for the building of private hospitals and other health facilities; and (3) construction subsidies for merchant ships. Total outlays in this category are estimated at $914 million in 1961, compared to $825 million in 1960.

Education, training, and health.—In 1961 an estimated $844 million of budget expenditures will be devoted to education, training, and health. Most of these programs are conducted through grants to State and local governments. These include school operating aid to local school districts affected by the presence of Federal Government installations, grants under the National Defense Education Act of 1958, and grants to States for public health, vocational education, maternal and child welfare, and agricultural extension work. A number of programs classified elsewhere in this special analysis also have developmental aspects which are, however, secondary to their principal purposes. Examples are the veterans educational activities, the operating expenses of hospital services and medical care programs, and the training of military and civilian personnel in Government service.

Research and development.—The Federal Government also contributes to technological progress through the conduct of varied programs of research and development. Expenditures for these programs are estimated at $7.9 billion in 1961, $394 million more than in 1960, not including expenditures for research and development equipment and facilities shown elsewhere in this special analysis. Most of the 1961 total will be devoted to the research and development activities of the Department of Defense and the Atomic Energy Commission, where the emphasis will be on missiles, nuclear propulsion systems, and civilian electric power reactors. The support of nonmilitary space projects carried on by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration will require estimated expenditures of $503 million in 1961, nearly double the 1960 amount. Other research and development programs include—but are not limited to—health research, research in new uses of farm products, basic research in agriculture and science, and research on production and utilization of mineral products.

Engineering and natural resource surveys.—An estimated $60 million of expenditures in 1961 will be devoted to investigations and surveys for public works programs, topographic mapping, geologic and mineral resource surveys, land classification, forest investigations, and other basic surveys. The largest programs of these types are administered by the Geological Survey, the Bureau of Reclamation, the Coast and Geodetic Survey, and the Corps of Engineers.

CURRENT EXPENSES FOR AIDS AND SPECIAL SERVICES

Included in this category are expenditures which provide aids or special services to specific economic groups primarily in the current year, including administrative and other operating expenses attributable to the investment-type programs discussed previously and the costs of maintaining the related physical assets. Benefits accruing to various groups through tax provisions or other Government aids which do not call for expenditures are not included in this analysis.

Significant amounts of expenditures from certain of the trust funds might also be considered as yielding current aid to specific economic groups. For example, trust fund payments in 1961 are expected to include $11.1 billion in old-age and survivors insurance benefits, $576 million in disability insurance benefits, $970 million in railroad retirement benefits, and $1.8 billion in withdrawals by States to pay unemployment benefits. (See part III, especially pages 842–844, for a more complete treatment of trust fund transactions.) However, these amounts are excluded from special analysis D, which is confined to an analysis of budget expenditures. Budget expenditures for aids and special services are estimated at $15.4 billion in 1961, compared to $15.8 billion in 1960.

INVESTMENT, OPERATING, AND OTHER BUDGET EXPENDITURES—Continued

Agriculture.—Budget expenditures for current aids and services to farmers are estimated at $3.4 billion in 1961, compared to $3.6 billion in 1960. These expenditures consist chiefly of costs and losses stemming from the price support program and the sale of surplus commodities for foreign currencies.

Farmers also derive particular benefits from major expenditures classified elsewhere in this analysis, such as expenditures for loans, conservation payments, water development projects, the school lunch program, and various international and other programs not designed primarily for the support of agriculture.

Business.—Expenditures primarily benefiting private business are estimated at $864 million in 1961 and $1.4 billion in 1960. The decrease reflects mainly the proposed increase in postal rates designed to eliminate the postal service deficit now covered by budgetary expenditures. The major expenditures in this category are for aids to air and sea navigation and for maritime operating subsidies.

Labor.—The largest current Federal expenditure benefiting labor in 1961 is for the Federal-State program of unemployment insurance and public employment offices. The Federal Government, through the Department of Labor, makes grants to the States to cover the full cost of administering these services; in 1961 these grants are estimated at $303 million, which is 90% of the total estimated expenditures of $337 million benefiting labor. Other expenses for aids and special services to labor include the mine safety work of the Bureau of Mines and certain administrative expenses of the Department of Labor.

Homeowners and tenants.—Loans and mortgage purchases for the benefit of homeowners and tenants are classified in this analysis as additions to Federal assets; expenditures classified as yielding current benefits to these groups consist chiefly of (1) annual contributions to local authorities for low-rent public housing projects; (2) grants for the capital losses of slum clearance and urban renewal projects; and (3) administrative expenses for all housing programs. Receipts from the insurance of mortgages and saving and loan share accounts and the earnings from holdings of mortgages and other housing loans offset most current expenditures for housing in both 1960 and 1961.

Veterans.—Expenditures for current aids and services to veterans are estimated at $5.2 billion in 1961, an increase of $300 million over 1960; practically all the increase results from higher pension payments. Compensation and pension benefits combined account for more than 70% of estimated total expenditures in this category in 1961. Compensation payments made for disabilities or deaths resulting from service will be at about the same level in 1961 as in 1960; expenditures for non-service-connected pensions will increase by $438 million.

Other aids to veterans include hospital and medical care for veterans of all wars and readjustment benefits, which in 1961 will be mainly for those who served in the Korean conflict. The readjustment benefits include education and training for veterans who enroll in schools and colleges, vocational training on the job or farm, and veterans loan-guarantee programs.

International.—Almost all the estimated expenditures in this category in 1961 will be for grants under the mutual security program. Expenditures of $1.7 billion are estimated in 1961 for the military assistance portion of the program, under which military equipment and training is furnished to friendly nations. Expenditures of $1.3 billion are expected in 1961 for the economic portion of the program, under which friendly nations are helped to develop their economies so as to maintain political and economic stability and meet the economic burdens imposed by the maintenance of adequate defense forces. The amounts in the present category are in addition to loans to foreign countries, which were included above as additions to Federal assets.

Other aids and special services.—Many other Federal programs involve budget expenditures for current aids and special services for more than one of the above groups or for other groups. The bulk of these expenditures consists of grants to help provide public assistance to the needy, including the aged, the blind, the permanently and totally disabled, and dependent children. Other major programs include grants to States to help finance low-priced school lunches, hospital operation and medical care by the Public Health Service, and various aids to Indians. Expenditures in this category are expected to amount to $2.4 billion in 1961, about the same as in 1960.

OTHER SERVICES AND CURRENT OPERATING EXPENSES

Expenses for operation and maintenance of military facilities and for pay and subsistence of military personnel comprise about 65% of the total spending estimated for this category in 1961. By far the largest component of civil expenditures is interest, which accounts for about 30% of the total.

Repair, maintenance, and operation of physical assets.—Expenditures to repair, maintain, and operate physical assets are predominantly for the national military establishment and for general purpose public buildings. Also included in this category are expenses for operating and maintaining atomic energy facilities, flood control reservoirs, irrigation works, power facilities, public lands, and national forests. Total outlays for these purposes are estimated at $9.9 billion in 1960 and $10.3 billion in 1961. and maintenance outlays are not included in the present category but as "aids and special services" discussed above.

Regulation and control.—Most of the major departments and agencies and many smaller agencies have regulatory or law-enforcement responsibilities. These include the law-enforcement activities of the Department of Justice, the Treasury Department, and the judiciary, as well as the operations of the independent regulatory agencies. Expenditures for regulation and control are estimated to total $622 million in 1961, compared to $588 million in 1960.

Operation and administration of other civil activities.—All other governmentwide or multipurpose expenditures for civil programs are estimated to total $1.5 billion in 1960 and $1.7 billion in 1961. These cover expenditures for the legislative branch; the conduct of foreign affairs; tax collection, public debt management, and other financing activities; central procurement and recordkeeping; accident and unemployment compensation payments for Federal employees; and various other direct Federal programs not elsewhere classified. Federal Government contributions as employer to the Civil service retirement and disability fund, formerly included in this category, are now allocated along with other employee compensation costs among the various disbursing agencies and programs. Such payments total an estimated $0.8 billion in 1961.

Other major national security operation and administration.—These expenditures are estimated to increase from $11.8 billion in 1960 to $12 billion in 1961. They represent mainly pay and subsistence for military personnel together with smaller but substantial expenditures for civilian reserve components, industrial mobilization, and various departmentwide activities of the Department of Defense.

Interest.—Interest expenditures consist almost entirely of interest payments on the public debt. A minor proportion is for interest on refunds of receipts and on certain uninvested funds deposited with the Treasury. Because of the higher interest rates on new securities issued to refund maturing obligations, expenditures for interest are expected to rise from $9.4 billion in 1960 to $9.6 billion in 1961.

Special Analysis E

FOREIGN CURRENCY AVAILABILITIES AND USES

Many agencies of the Government are engaged in activities throughout the world which may be financed with foreign currencies. From some governmental activities, particularly the sale on concessional terms of surplus agricultural commodities, foreign currencies accrue to the Government without purchase with dollars. In many instances these currencies are restricted in their use by the terms of international agreements. This analysis presents in summary form data on foreign currency availabilities and uses, with special emphasis on those under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954, as amended (Public Law 480), the largest source of currencies with the most complex provisions for their use.

Need for foreign currencies.—The U.S. Government carries on extensive activities abroad, involving almost every country in the world. In the normal course of these worldwide operations, it has need for and it acquires large amounts of currencies of many countries. Some of these currencies are acquired through Government agencies' activities; others must be purchased.

Recent estimates indicate that Government agencies will require about $2.3 billion of foreign currencies in 1961 to perform their regular operations abroad, as indicated in table 1. The approximate supply of currencies available in the Treasury for sale to agencies in 1961 to meet these regular needs is estimated to approximate $474 million. However, only about $130 million of this amount can be used to meet 1961 needs because the availability of currencies of individual countries does not match the needs for the currencies of those countries. This leaves a total of over $2.1 billion of foreign currencies which will need to be purchased commercially by our disbursing officers.

In 66 of the 83 countries listed in table 1 the approximate supply of currencies available in 1961 is less than our anticipated needs for regular operations, with the result that the United States will have to purchase the currencies of these 66 countries. With respect to total value, over four-fifths of the U.S. agency requirements are concentrated in five countries in which the United States receives foreign currencies in much smaller amounts; namely, Germany, Canada, Japan, France, and the United Kingdom. The preponderance of currencies available to the Treasury for sale to agencies for regular operations is in countries such as India, Israel, Pakistan, Poland, Spain, and Yugoslavia, where our needs are much less.

Sources of foreign currencies without purchase with dollars.—Within the limits established by title I of Public Law 480, any agricultural commodity found by the Secretary of Agriculture to be in surplus supply may be sold for foreign currencies, so long as precautions are taken that such sales do not displace normal trade (i.e., regular sales for dollars) or unduly disrupt world market prices. Such sales are covered by intergovernmental agreements which govern the terms of sale including the value of commodities to be purchased, the exchange rate at which payment will be made, the amounts of the sales proceeds which will be reinvested in the purchasing country on a loan or grant basis for economic or common defense purposes, and the amounts which the U.S. Government may use in the country, or possibly elsewhere, for other purposes. The shipment of the commodities is financed by the Commodity Credit Corporation as an extension of its agricultural price support operations. Any dollars received through sale of the currencies to agencies for programs covered by appropriations return to the CCC and reduce the size of the appropriation needed to cover its costs for the commodities shipped.

The Mutual Security Act of 1954, as amended, also includes several provisions under which foreign currencies accrue to the credit of the United States. Section 402 of that act specifies that a certain amount of the mutual security appropriations shall be used only to purchase surplus agricultural commodities for sale to foreign countries for their currencies. Section 505(a) of the act authorizes the sale of any commodities or services for foreign currencies, and section 103(c) of the act authorizes the sale of military equipment, materials, and services for foreign currencies. These sales are also covered by intergovernmental agreements. However, since the commodities or services sold are supplied as part of the mutual security program and financed by that appropriation, the currency proceeds may be used only for the purposes of that program. These are generally economic development or common defense in the purchasing country, or sometimes in a different, aid recipient country when the purchasing country agrees and can supply needed exports.

The Mutual Security Act also requires a country receiving aid to deposit in a special account an amount of its currency equal to either the local sales value of the nonmilitary commodity aid it receives or to the commensurate value of our dollar aid expenditures. These deposits are called counterpart. Generally, a share of this counterpart, which is usually 10% or less, must be transferred to U.S. Treasury accounts and is available for general United States use. The remaining 90% portion of counterpart funds is owned by the foreign country and remains in its custody for use only for mutual security purposes agreed to by the United States. None of these country-owned currencies is included in the tables herein.

Section 142(a)(9) of the Mutual Security Act also authorizes the receipt of currencies contributed by the foreign government for the local expenses of U.S. military assistance advisory groups abroad.

Other collections of foreign currencies arise from various governmental activities. Under an intergovernmental defense agreement, Japan has agreed to bear a part of the cost of our forces defending that country by contributing yen to assist in meeting some local costs. Sales of U.S. Government surplus property and settlement of World War II lend-lease debts for foreign currencies are authorized under several laws and international agreements. Under the Information and Educational Exchange Act of 1948 (Public Law 402), the U.S. Government (informational media guarantee fund) contracts with American exporters of books, periodicals, and motion pictures to exchange for dollars certain foreign currencies received from sale of such materials. Other currencies are also received in payment for consular services, interest on deposits of currencies in foreign banks, etc.

In addition to the above, some foreign currencies are acquired as loan repayments. Beginning in 1955, for example, the Mutual Security Act authorized repayment of mutual security loans in foreign currencies. Interest and principal repayments are now also beginning on economic development loans made to foreign countries and on loans to private enterprises under Public Law 480. Development Loan Fund loans and interest often may be repaid in the currency of the borrowing country.

In summary, most currencies accruing to the credit of the United States result from past or current international agreements authorized under several laws. In most cases, these international agreements reflect either sales arrangements, wherein commodities (usually surplus agricultural commodities) are sold to a foreign purchaser for currencies, or they reflect loan agreements, wherein dollars or foreign currencies themselves are lent to foreign borrowers and may be repaid in the currency of the borrower. Currencies also become available in much smaller amounts under special international agreements and the normal operations of the U.S. Government abroad.

Table 2 summarizes for 1959, 1960, and 1961 the collections, expenditures, and balances of foreign currencies.

This table reflects the inflow and outflow of all U.S.-owned foreign currencies. (It excludes foreign currencies held in trust, of which $35.9 million were on hand at the end of 1959, and currencies obtained by dollar purchase.)

The cash balances carried forward at the end of 1961 are estimated to total $2.2 billion. Of this amount, approximately $1.1 billion is estimated to be available for U.S. agency purposes—either for special programs or for general United States use. The remainder is expected to be available under international agreement or under law only for loans and grants in foreign countries.

Table 3 by contrast is not on a cash basis. It indicates amounts owed to the United States at the beginning and end of each of the 3 years 1959–61, which are payable in foreign currencies, even though the payment may not be due until some future year. Loan agreements, for example, provide for repayment over periods up to 40 years. As shown in the table, uncollected balances totaled $2.1 billion at the end of 1959, and are estimated to rise to $2.9 billion by the end of 1960 and further to $3.8 billion by June 30, 1961. The estimated increase reflects largely the effects of loans and other agreements under Public Law 480, and the expanding loan activity of the Development Loan Fund.

Limits on uses of foreign currencies.—The amount of foreign currencies accruing to the credit of the United States is large and is increasing, as tables 2 and 3 illustrate. However, international agreements, and in many cases the nature of the economy on which they are a claim, restrict the use of the greater part of these currencies.

First, sales of agricultural commodities, through which most of the currencies are acquired, are often largely concessional. In these transactions the purchasing country seeks to minimize the real cost of the sales to itself in terms of export of its resources. This practice comes about in part because the sales are generally over and above the amount of exports the United States could sell in the international market on commercial terms (for dollars), and in part because U.S. foreign policy usually has the objective of aiding the economic development of the country involved. As a result, large amounts of currencies acquired by the United States from the sale of farm commodities are restricted by the purchase agreement so they can only be loaned or granted back to the buying country for its economic development. This is true of most of the currency received under the Mutual Security Act and Public Law 480, the two largest sources.

Second, virtually all of the currencies are inconvertible under the laws and regulations of the purchasing country. This means they cannot be freely used to buy goods in third countries. Neither can they be exchanged for another currency which we may be able to use. Similarly, a country which limits convertibility of its currency is usually unwilling to accept its own currency in payment, in any large amount, for exports, which represent a net drain on the country. Indeed the largest amounts of currency accrue in less developed countries where the use of large amounts of local currency for programs which are not of mutual interest might significantly drain scarce resources and result in pressure for increased U.S. aid.

Third, various provisions of law authorize the use of some of these currencies for special U.S. programs without charge to agency appropriations. During the negotiation of international sales agreements, these special uses for U.S. programs sometimes have been indicated to the foreign government, resulting in an informal understanding about their use. Some of the currencies collected must therefore be husbanded and then allocated for these specially authorized programs. In many countries this results in a reduction in currencies that might otherwise have been available to sell to agencies to meet their regular local expenses. This in turn means the United States foregoes Treasury receipts, and in currency shortage countries has the same effect on the Treasury as spending dollars for these specially authorized programs. Wherever possible such restrictions will not be included in future sales agreements.

In large part because of these limitations, the greater part of currency use is not reflected in the budget totals. These transactions, most of which are loans and grants in the foreign country, are summarized in table 4.

Almost all the extra-budgetary expenditures for 1961 projected in table 4 are for loans and grants in foreign countries. Of this amount $100 million equivalent is for loans by the Export-Import Bank to American enterprises and certain foreign firms for the expansion of private enterprise overseas. These loans derive from the sale of surplus agricultural commodities under title I of Public Law 480, as do $650 million equivalent of the loans and grants for economic development and the common defense administered by the ICA. In addition, the ICA will use, for similar purposes, $175 million equivalent derived mainly from the sale of surplus agricultural commodities financed by the mutual security appropriation.

In this regard, it should be pointed out that granting or lending a country its own currency under Public Law 480 and the Mutual Security Act does not provide it with additional external resources as dollar payments do. No labor, capital equipment, and materials are provided which the country did not have before. Additional economic resources from outside a country's borders can only be furnished in the form of goods or dollars or other convertible currencies to be used for the purchase of goods. Thus, a country's own currencies are not a substitute for dollars in the mutual security or other assistance program for that country.

As indicated below, it is proposed that U.S. agency foreign currency programs be covered by appropriations, starting in 1961. However, $34.9 million equivalent of the estimated expenditures for 1961 indicated in table 4 for U.S. agency programs outside appropriations derive from funds allocated in 1960 and previous years under permanent authority for such use without further congressional action for mutual security exports and military family housing.

Informational tables on currency uses which are not reflected in the budget totals are included in the budget document accompanying the information on related programs.

Congressional review of foreign currency uses.—Currencies received by the United States in the course of its operations are available for general sale by the Treasury to Federal agencies for meeting any foreign currency costs of agency programs, unless there is a specific provision of law or international agreement prohibiting or limiting the use of the currencies. Normally, when an agency requires foreign currencies to carry out its activities, it must, by Treasury regulation, seek to buy such currencies from the Treasury Department. If that Department has the specifically requested currencies available, it sells them to the agency by charging the agency's appropriations accordingly. If the particular foreign currencies required are not available, they must be purchased through banking channels.

The currencies sold by the Treasury come from many sources including the U.S. share of mutual security counterpart funds and of Public Law 480 sales proceeds, contributions of foreign governments to the administrative expenses of the military advisory assistance groups, the receipts of the informational media guarantee fund derived from the sale of U.S. publications abroad, interest on deposits of currency funds, the disposal of surplus property, and similar operations.

All currencies purchased by agencies from the Treasury with their regular dollar appropriations or with special appropriations provided to purchase the currencies are reflected in the budget as dollar receipts and expenditures. The dollar proceeds from Treasury sales are either credited to the miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury, or to various revolving funds or appropriations as authorized by law. Public Law 480 requires the dollar proceeds from sale of Public Law 480 currencies to be credited to the Commodity Credit Corporation. Sales of currencies received from the operations of the informational media guarantee fund are credited to that fund, and currencies obtained through the sale of military equipment under the Mutual Security Act are credited to the military assistance appropriation.

Prior to July 1953, except for a relatively small amount in the custody of the Treasury Department, most currencies were held by the Federal agencies administering the intergovernmental agreements under which the currencies were obtained. These currencies generally were not subject to the same fiscal and budgetary controls which govern the dollar funds of the Government, i.e., use of the currencies was not subject to regular appropriation processes and there was some doubt as to the applicability of the usual rules for accountability.

The Congress recognized the need for a better system of control over the foreign currencies. This led to the enactment of section 1415 of the Supplemental Appropriation Act of 1953, which provides that "foreign credits owed to or owned by the U.S. Treasury will not be available for expenditure after June 30, 1953, except as may be provided for annually in appropriation acts." A general appropriation act provision, which has been annually enacted since 1954, states that U.S.-owned currencies may be used for program purposes carried on by an appropriation if such use is charged to the appropriation. Under this provision, expenditure of foreign currencies has been controlled by including in the regular dollar appropriations of Federal agencies sums sufficient for the purchase from Treasury of foreign currencies needed for their programs.

Major exceptions to section 1415 have been authorized by the Congress in recent years. Most of the currencies derived from the sale of surplus agricultural commodities abroad have been made available by statute for expenditure for particular purposes without reimbursement to the Treasury from agency dollar appropriations. This is the situation with respect to those currencies received under section 402 of the Mutual Security Act and most of those received under title I of Public Law 480. In addition, currencies obtained under sections 505(a) and 103(c) of the Mutual Security Act of 1954 may be used for mutual security purposes.

Repayments of Development Loan Fund loans in foreign currencies are available for relending by the Development Loan Fund. Public Law 480 loan repayments may be used for educational exchange programs and agricultural market development abroad. Amounts not so used may be made available to sell to agencies to meet their regular program needs in accordance with section 1415.

There is always a cost to the American taxpayer of specially authorized programs which tends to be hidden by extra budgetary authorizations. In the relatively few countries where currencies are available considerably in excess of regular program needs, the cost to the United States is no more than the value of the goods and services for which the currencies were obtained. This may also be true where the use of the currencies has been restricted by international agreement, e.g., proceeds from the sale of surplus farm commodities available only for loans, grants, or other specified purposes. In currency shortage countries, the disbursing officer must purchase currencies to meet regular agency needs. To the extent that specially authorized uses of these same currencies drain off amounts otherwise available to reduce the requirement for commercial purchases these uses cost dollars.

Also, so long as specially authorized currency programs remain outside the budget, the agency's program is expanded without any apparent increase in its budget and the Commodity Credit Corporation or other agency which financed the source of the currencies remains charged with the cost of another agency's program supplementation.

Recommendations for 1961.—It is proposed that beginning in 1961 all currency uses for U.S. agency operations be covered by appropriations. These would generally be unrestricted dollar appropriations under which needed currencies could be purchased from the Treasury if available, from outside sources if not. This is now the case for the salaries and expenses of regular departmental programs overseas which use currencies. For those situations where currencies are available in the Treasury in excess of amounts needed for regular operations, or where the use of currencies is restricted by international agreement or understanding, special appropriations are proposed for foreign currency programs. These special appropriations are limited to the purchase of excess or restricted currencies. It is expected in future years, as restrictions in international agreements are avoided on U.S. uses of foreign currencies, that these special foreign currency programs will generally be limited to the few countries where excess currencies are available.

It is also proposed that unexpended balances of previous authorizations to spend foreign currencies for U.S. programs for which new authorizations are recommended in 1961 be converted to appropriations as of June 30, 1960, except for military family housing. It is estimated that these balances will total $68.1 million, of which $33.2 million represents balances of previous allocations and determinations by the Secretary of State for educational exchange.

No change is recommended in the authorizations for use without regard to section 1415 of currencies committed by international agreement to loans or grants in the country. These uses do not add to the resources of the country and do not substitute for dollars in any sense. They are similar to the country-owned counterpart funds not covered by this analysis.

Table 5 shows by country the proposed new appropriations for special foreign currency programs for 1961. $39.3 million are proposed for use of excess currencies in India, Israel, Pakistan, Poland, the United Arab Republic (Egypt), and Yugoslavia. $33.6 million are proposed for use of restricted currencies in 23 other countries.

All of these currencies are proceeds of the sale of surplus agricultural commodities under Public Law 480.

It is generally difficult to predict the size and the location of future sales of surplus agricultural commodities covering these currencies, as well as the share of the proceeds to be available for U.S. uses, due to the uncertainties of agricultural production, both here and abroad, and the often unforeseeable results of sales negotiations. Therefore, it is not feasible to develop programs on the basis of a forecast of future sales agreements.

The programs proposed, as shown in table 5, have been developed on the basis of the actual and anticipated proceeds of sales agreements signed or approved for negotiation through September 15, 1959. Generally, the early deposits under a sales agreement are made available for U.S. uses. Thus, it is anticipated that sales proceeds will be on hand under these sales agreements in sufficient amount to cover these proposed programs prior to the time the obligations need to be made.

All of the amounts shown on table 5 and subsequent tables are the dollar equivalents of actual and anticipated foreign currency sums. In table 5, the dollar equivalents are computed at the June 30, 1959, exchange rates at which the Treasury was selling foreign currencies to agencies for their use abroad. These rates are generally the most advantageous rates at which the currencies may be legally obtained, and thus provide a valuation which is on a comparable basis with dollar expenditures for U.S. programs in the country. The sales agreements, however, provide for the payment of foreign currencies at a rate specified in the agreement (usually based on rates applicable to that country's imports). The total payment is equal to the dollar value at world market prices of the agricultural commodities and ocean freight involved. The dollar equivalents for the value of the sales agreements and for the past uses are included in tables 6, 7, 8, and 9 at the exchange rates indicated in the agreements. The necessary adjustment between these two sets of exchange rates for the balances which are available for programing purposes ($102 million equivalent) is indicated on table 6. Table 7 shows the balances by country at both rates.

In arriving at the amounts shown in table 5, the share of sales proceeds which could be used for the payment of U.S. obligations abroad was identified. Generally this was the maximum amount which could be used for this purpose under the sales agreements and the informal understandings accompanying them. These amounts, together with agreement commitments for loans and grants and past allocations, were then subtracted from agreement totals, as indicated in table 6. Eligible agencies were then notified of the remaining amounts of foreign currencies to be available in each country, and were requested to prepare budget submissions indicating the currencies that could advantageously be used for authorized programs. These submissions were reviewed in a manner similar to the review of regular agency dollar budgets. The recommendations developed are indicated in table 5. The country amounts are based on the best information currently available. While some modifications may become necessary, it is not expected that the availability of currencies will permit carrying out programs in countries other than those indicated. The proposed amounts for agricultural market development which are undistributed by country are in anticipation of amounts to be derived from future sales agreements which may be used in third countries.

Availability of Public Law 480 currencies.—As indicated in table 6, sales agreements from the inception of title I (Public Law 480) through September 15, 1959, totaled

[1] At Treasury selling rates, the dollar equivalent of these currencies is equal to the 1959 appropriation of $5.1 million.

$4 billion, adjusted in several cases for shortfalls in deliveries of the commodities. Commitments of $2.8 billion for loans and grants under these agreements and authorizations for other uses, including Treasury sales, have reduced the amount available for 1961 programs to the equivalent of $324 million at the exchange rate specified in the sales agreements, or $222 million at Treasury selling rates.

The tables which follow are designed to provide greater detail on the activities in various countries involving the use of foreign currencies under Public Law 480. Tables 7 and 8 show by country the value of the sales agreements signed or approved for negotiation through September 15, 1959, the amounts allocated to the Treasury for sale to appropriations and funds for the payment of U.S. obligations and the amounts committed for loans and grants. Table 9 shows by country the amounts allocated, or to be allocated, to other agencies for authorized programs.
