Health, safety and mining technology.—This program focuses on long-term, high risk research designed to improve all aspects of the health and safety of miners, including prevention of occupational illnesses, accidents, and disasters. Research is being concentrated on new concepts that promise revolutionary improvements in health and safety, reduced environmental impacts, increased access to marginal mineral deposits, increasing the domestic mineral reserve base, and increased productivity, including major efforts in automation, robotics, and innovative mining systems.

Minerals and materials science.—This program conducts basic and precompetitive applied research for new generic extraction, synthesis, processing, waste reduction, and recycling technologies required to meet the demand for advanced and commodity materials. Research emphasizes conservation of natural resources, protection of the environment, and reduction of dependence on difficult to obtain raw materials.

Environmental technology.—Research is conducted to mitigate or eliminate adverse environmental impacts associated with mining and mineral processing. Problems addressed include subsidence, acid mine drainage, and neutralization of waste materials. The Bureau works closely with other bureaus and government agencies by providing expertise in hazardous waste cleanup and mitigation.

Mineral institutes.—The minerals institutes program was initiated in the 1970s to provide seed money to encourage the development of mineral-related university research and graduate education programs. The States and private industry have responded and such programs are now in place. Therefore, the program's goal has been accomplished, and there is no further need for direct Federal financial assistance to these institutes.

General administration.—The program supports executive direction, and financial and management services for the Bureau of Mines.

Contaminants are monitored and assessed. Activities are pursued to prevent species from becoming extinct, and return them to the point where they are neither threatened nor endangered.

Refuges and wildlife.—The Service maintains the National Wildlife Refuge System consisting of 498 units, with waterfowl production areas in 168 counties and 51 coordination areas, totaling about 91.3 million acres; directs and coordinates national migratory bird programs; and enforces Federal wildlife laws and regulations.

Fisheries.—The Service participates in development, management, and protection of interstate and international fishery resources, and provides technical assistance related to fish, wildlife and some marine mammals.

Research and development.—The Service conducts research to improve wildlife management capabilities, improve sport fish productivity, protect endangered or threatened species, assist recovery programs, and prevent or minimize adverse impacts on fish and wildlife.

General administration.—Provides policy formulation, direction, and administration for fish and wildlife programs.

Under the Natural Resource Damage Assessment and Restoration Fund, natural resource damage assessments will be performed in order to provide the basis for claims against responsible parties for the restoration of injured natural resources. Funds are appropriated to conduct damage assessments and for program management. In addition, funds will be received for the restoration of injured resources and other restitution activities and for natural resource damage assessments from responsible parties through negotiated settlements or other legal actions by the Department of the Interior. Restoration activities include the replacement and enhancement of affected resources, acquisition of equivalent resources and services, and long-term environmental monitoring and research programs directed to the prevention, containment, cleanup and amelioration of hazardous substances and oil spill sites. The Fund will allow the four Interior Bureaus with natural resource managment responsibilities (Fish and Wildlife Service, National Park Service, Bureau of Land Management, and Bureau of Indian Affairs) and the Office of Environmental Affairs, which coordinates the Department's overall natural resource damage assessment responsibilities, to implement coordinated damage assessments and restoration activities. Natural resource damage assessments and the restoration of injured natural resources are authorized by the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act, as amended (42 U.S.C. 9601 et seq.), Federal Water Pollution Control Act, as amended (33 U.S.C. 1251 et seq.), the Oil Pollution Act of 1990 (P.L. 101-380), and the Act of July 27, 1990 (P.L. 101-337). In FY 1992 and thereafter, amounts received by the United States from responsible parties for restoration or reimbursement in settlement of natural resource damages may be deposited in the Fund and shall accrue interest therein.

INFORMATION SCHEDULES ON EXXON VALDEZ; RESTORATION OF PRINCE WILLIAM SOUND AND THE GULF OF ALASKA

The budget fully incorporates the receipts and mandatory spending associated with the October 1991 Exxon Valdez settlement, the largest natural resource damage settlement ever. Receipts and spending for 1992-2001 are currently estimated to total over $400 million as the Federal part of the restoration program for Prince William Sound and surrounding areas. The State of Alaska will also receive in excess of $400 million for restoration. Should unforeseen injury information become available after 10 years an additional $100 million may be available to the Federal and State Trustees for further restoration.

Of the $125 million criminal fine and restitution payment levied against Exxon as part of the settlement, $12 million was deposited to the North American Wetlands Conservation Fund to be used to protect and restore the Nation's highest-priority wetlands, and $50 million will be used by each of the Federal and State Trustees for restoration projects within Alaska. In addition, $13 million was deposited into the Victims of Crimes Fund.

The civil part of the settlement provides approximately $900 million from Exxon, exclusive of interest earned by the Trustees. This money is provided over a period of 10 years to the Federal and State Trustees for joint management of natural resources restoration and for reimbursement of past costs. Based upon the assessment of damages, these funds are sufficient to complete the restoration of Prince William Sound and affected surrounding areas caused by the March 1989 oil spill.

Restoration activities were implemented in 1992, including establishment of an organizational structure, a public advisory group and the approval of funding for closeout of natural resource damage assessment studies, monitoring and restoration planning. In 1993, land acquisition was also initiated with the approval of funding of $7.5 million for the purchase of imminently threatened inholdings within Kachemak Bay State Park, by the State of Alaska. It is anticipated that such restoration projects will begin to increase substantially in 1994, since the release of, and public comment on, the Draft Restoration Plan for the affected area is expected in FY 1993. The plan is expected to be put in final form early in FY 1994.

Funds deposited into this account include direct appropriations and fines, penalties and forfeitures collected under the authority of the Migratory Bird Treaty Act (16 U.S.C. 707) and interest on obligations held in the Federal Aid to Wildlife Restoration Fund. The funding for the North American Wetlands Conservation Fund is authorized by the North American Wetlands Conservation Act, Public Law 101–233. The Act establishes the North American Wetlands Conservation Council which recommends wetlands conservation projects for the approval of the Migratory Bird Conservation Commission. These projects help fulfill the habitat protection, restoration and enhancement goals of the North American Waterfowl Management Plan, the Act and the Tripartite Agreement among Mexico, Canada and the United States; may involve partnerships with public agencies, and private entities, with non-Federal matching of Federal contributions of funding; and provide for the long-term conservation of habitat for migratory birds and other fish and wildlife, including species that are listed, or are candidates to be listed, under the Endangered Species Act (16 U.S.C. 1531). Wetlands conservation projects include the obtaining of a real property interest in lands or waters, including water rights; the restoration, management or enhancement of habitat; and training and development for conservation management in Mexico. Funding may be provided for assistance for wetlands conservation projects in Canada or Mexico.

The Refuge Revenue Sharing Act (16 U.S.C. 715s) authorizes revenues through the sale of products from Service lands, less expenses for producing revenue and activities related to revenue sharing. The Fish and Wildlife Service makes payments to counties in which Service lands are located. If the net revenues are insufficient to make full payments according to the formula contained in the Act, direct appropriations are authorized to make up the difference.

Since Fiscal Year 1992 the Sport Fish Restoration Fund has supported coastal wetlands grants pursuant to the Coastal Wetlands Planning, Protection and Restoration Act (P.L. 101-646). Additional revenue from small engine fuel taxes was provided under the Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 (P.L. 101-508). The Coastal Wetlands Planning, Protection and Restoration Act authorizes 18 percent of the total funding to be distributed as follows: 70 percent shall be available to the Corps of Engineers for priority project and conservation planning activities; 15 percent shall be available to the Fish and Wildlife Service for coastal wetlands conservation grants; and 15 percent to the Fish and Wildlife Service for wetlands conservation projects under Section 8 of the North American Wetlands Conservation Act (P.L. 101-233). The Clean Vessel Act of 1992 (P.L. 102-587, Sec. 5604) directs the Secretary of the Interior to make grants to states, in specified amounts, to carry out projects for the construction, renovation, operation, and maintenance of pumpout stations and waste reception facilities. Sec. 5604 also amends the Sport Fish Restoration Act to provide for the transfer of funds from the Sport Fish Restoration Account of the Aquatic Resources Trust Fund for use by the Secretary of the Interior to carry out the purposes of this Act and for use by the Secretary of Transportation for State recreational boating safety programs under section 13106(a)(1) of title 46, United States Code.

Assistance is provided to States, Puerto Rico, Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, the Northern Mariana Islands, and the District of Columbia and American Indian tribal organizations for up to 75 percent of the cost of approved projects including research into fisheries problems, surveys and inventories of fish populations, and acquisition and improvement of fish habitat and provision of access for public use.

The Operation of Indian Programs appropriation consists of a wide range of services and benefits provided to Indian tribes, Alaskan Native groups, and individual Native Americans.

Other Recurring Programs.—This activity includes those programs for which funds are (1) distributed by formula, such as school operations, Johnson O'Malley Educational Assistance, housing improvements and road maintenance; (2) based upon need, such as welfare grants and contract support; and (3) resource management activities that carry out specific laws or court-ordered settlements.

Non-Recurring Programs.—This activity includes programs that support Indian reservation and tribal projects of limited duration, such as economic development grants, noxious weed eradication, prairie dog control, cadastral surveys, and forest development.

Central Office Operations.—This activity supports the executive, program, and administrative management costs of Central Office organizations, most of which are located in Washington, DC, and Albuquerque, NM.

Area Office Operations.—The Bureau of Indian Affairs has 12 Area Offices located throughout the country. Area Directors have line authority over agency superintendents. Virtually all of the staff and related administrative support costs for area offices are included within this activity. Area Directors have flexibility in aligning their staff and resources to best meet the program requirements of the tribes within their area.

Special Programs and Pooled Overhead.—Most of the funds in this activity support bureau-wide expenses for items such as unemployment compensation, workers compensation, facilities rentals, FTS–2000, and data processing. In addition, funds that are contracted by tribes in urban areas or private organizations providing services to Indians are included. This activity also includes the Bureau's two post secondary schools.

Tribal Priority Allocations.—This activity includes the majority of the funds used to support ongoing programs at the local tribal level. Funding priorities for all of the programs included in Tribal Priority Allocations are determined in consultation with tribal officials. Although budget estimates include specific amounts for individual programs, funds may be shifted among programs within the total available for a tribe or a Bureau of Indian Affairs agency at the time of budget execution.

Under the terms of the 1947 Trusteeship Agreement between the United States and the Security Council of the United Nations, the United States exercises full jurisdiction over the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands and is obligated to promote the political, economic, and educational advancement of the inhabitants. These responsibilities are carried out through the Department of the Interior.

The Trusteeship Agreement is no longer in effect with respect to the Republic of the Marshall Islands and the Federated States of Micronesia. Their assistance is discussed in the "Compact of Free Association" account. The United States has approved a Compact with the Republic of Palau, but that Compact has not been ratified by Palau consistent with the requirements of the Palau constitution, and has, therefore, not been implemented. Funding included in the "Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands" account represents assistance for the Republic of Palau, and remaining transition responsibilities of the United States from the Trusteeship administration.

The peoples of the Marshall Islands and the Federated States of Micronesia approved Compacts of Free Association negotiated by the United States and their governments. The Compact of Free Association Act of 1985 (Public Law 99-239) constituted the necessary authorizing legislation to make annual payments to the Republic of the Marshall Islands and the Federated States of Micronesia, which began in fiscal year 1987 and will continue for fifteen years, totalling an estimated $2.3 billion, to aid in the development of these sovereign nations. Public Law 99-658 provided the necessary authorizing legislation for the Republic of Palau Compact. That Compact, when implemented, will provide annual payments that will total an estimated $450 million over a fifteen-year period.

Program direction and policy coordination.—The Attorney General of the United States is responsible for leading the Department of Justice in accomplishing its missions. The Attorney General is assisted by the Deputy Attorney General, Associate Attorney General, Department policy-level officials, and the Justice Management Division. The General Administration appropriation provides the resources for the programs and operations of the Attorney General, the Deputy Attorney General, the Associate Attorney General, and their Offices, the several Senior Policy Offices, and the Justice Management Division. The resources requested for General Administration in 1994 reflect Department of Justice-wide initiatives that, taken together, strengthen management and fiscal controls. Personnel services on behalf of General Administration, General Legal Services, U.S. Parole Commission, Community Relations Service, Antitrust Division, and Foreign Claims Settlement Commission will be handled by the WCF in 1994 and resources have been adjusted to reflect the shift in responsibility.

Administrative review and appeals.—This activity includes the Office of the Pardon Attorney and the Executive Office for Immigration Review (EOIR). The Pardon Attorney receives and reviews all petitions for clemency, i.e., commutation of sentences and pardons. A number of actions have been taken to reduce backlogs. The Executive Office for Immigration Review contains the Immigration Judge function, the Board of Immigration Appeals, the Office of the Chief Administrative Hearing Officer, and the Office of Management and Administration. EOIR was established January 1, 1983 to improve the immigration hearing and appeal process. Workload for the activity follows:

The United States Parole Commission makes decisions to grant or deny parole to Federal prisoners serving sentences of one year and a day or more, sets conditions of parole, supervises parolees and mandatory releasees, recommits parolees in the event of violations of the conditions of supervision, and determines the termination of supervision in accordance with the Parole Commission and Reorganization Act of 1976.

By 1997, this program will meet the statutory limitations by granting or denying parole within the legal time requirements to all Federal prisoners who are eligible for parole consideration. In addition to this basic function, the Commission will seek to improve the rehabilitation process by monitoring an effective parole supervision program through the U.S. probation officers. Finally, the Commission conducts ongoing research programs and administers its responsibilities under the labor and pension laws.

The Federal Government is represented in each of the 94 judicial districts by a U.S. Marshal. The primary mission of the U.S. Marshals Service is responsibility for the protection of the Federal judiciary, protection of witnesses, execution of warrants and court orders, management of seized assets, and custody and transportation of unsentenced prisoners. It is the principal support force in the Federal judicial system and an integral part of the Federal law enforcement community.

Reimbursable program.—Federal funds in 1994 are derived primarily from the U.S. Air Force for Intercontinental Ballistic Missile Program for transportation security services provided by the U.S. Marshals Service, as well as the Bureau of Prisons for the transportation of sentenced prisoners, the Department of State for security details at the United Nations, the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement appropriation for drug law enforcement and the Office of National Drug Control Policy for security services. Non-Federal funds are derived from State and local governments for witness protection and for the transportation of prisoners pursuant to State writs and from fees collected from service of civil process and sales associated with judicial orders.

This program is the payment of fees and expenses to witnesses who appear on behalf of the Government in litigation in which the United States is a party. Factors over which the Department of Justice has little control affect the costs incurred. The U.S. Attorneys, the U.S. Marshals, and the Department's six legal divisions are served by this appropriation.

Fees and expenses of witnesses.—Pays the fees and expenses associated with the preparation and presentation of testimony on behalf of the United States for fact witnesses, who testify as to events or facts about which they have personal knowledge, and for expert witnesses, who provide technical or scientific testimony. This program also pays the fees of physicians and psychiatrists who examine accused persons upon order of the court to determine their mental competency.

Protection of witnesses.—Pays subsistence costs to ensure the safety of Government witnesses whose testimony on behalf of the United States places them or their families in jeopardy.

Victim compensation fund.—Pays restitution to any victim of a crime committed by a protected witness who causes or threatens death or serious bodily injury.

Private counsel.—Pays private counsel retained to represent Government employees who are sued for actions taken while performing their official duties.

D.C. Informant Protection.—Pays for the short term protection and temporary relocation of informants for the DC Superior Court.

Reimbursable program.—Receives reimbursement from States and localities to cover the costs of maintaining those State and local organized crime witnesses and their families who have been accepted into the witness protection program.

The Civil Liberties Act of 1988 authorizes $20,000 payments to Japanese-Americans evacuated or relocated from their homes and interned during World War II. The Civil Liberties Act Amendments of 1992 (P.L. 102-371) increased the total authorization for this program to $1.65 billion. The Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1990, provides advance appropriations for these payments. Section 209 of that act provides that payments from the fund are entitlements for purposes of the Congressional Budget Act. The Civil Liberties Act limits annual expenditures from the fund to $500 million.

The 1994 program will include $100 million for redress payments and $5 million for educational activities pursuant to section 106(b) of the Civil Liberties Act.

United States trustee system fund.—The United States trustees supervise the administration of bankruptcy cases and private trustees in the Federal Bankruptcy Courts. The Bankruptcy Judges, U.S. Trustees and Family Farmer Bankruptcy Act of 1986 (Public Law 99–554), expanded the pilot trustee program to a twenty-one region nationwide program encompassing 88 judicial districts. The program is funded wholly by fees assessed against debtors and does not require any monies from the general fund of the Federal Government. Bankruptcy filings have increased by 92% from 1986 to 1992. In 1994, the trustees anticipate substantial increases in workload.

The Comprehensive Crime Control Act of 1984 established the Assets Forfeiture Fund, into which forfeited cash and the proceeds of sales of forfeited property are deposited. Authorities of the fund have been amended by various public laws enacted since 1984. Under current law, authority to use the fund for investigative expenses shall be specified in annual appropriation acts. Expenses necessary to seize, detain, inventory, safeguard, maintain, advertise or sell property under seizure are funded through a permanent, indefinite appropriation. In addition, beginning in 1993, other general expenses of managing and operating the asset forfeiture program are paid from the permanent, indefinite portion of the fund. Once all expenses are covered, statutorily mandated transfers are accomplished, and necessary reserves are maintained, any remaining surplus funds are available to the Attorney General, without fiscal year limitation, to fund law enforcement, prosecution and correctional activities, and related training requirements of federal agencies. Beginning in 1994, the Department of the Treasury will manage its assets forfeiture program separately through the Treasury Assets Forfeiture Fund.

The Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force (OCDETF) Program consists of 13 regional task forces which consolidate the resources and expertise of 11 member Federal agencies, in cooperation with State and local investigators and prosecutors, to target and destroy major narcotic trafficking and money-laundering organizations. The task forces perform the following activities:

1. Law Enforcement.—This activity includes the resources for direct investigative and support activities of the task forces, focusing on the disruption of drug trafficking controlled by various organized crime enterprises. Organizations participating under the law enforcement function of the OCDETF Program are the Drug Enforcement Administration, Federal Bureau of Investigation, U.S. Customs Service, Internal Revenue Service, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, U.S. Coast Guard, U.S. Marshals Service, and the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

2. Drug Intelligence.—This activity includes the resources to establish Regional Drug Intelligence Squads (RDIS) in all thirteen OCDETF Core Cities. The squads will gather and disseminate raw data for strategic, operational and tactical intelligence purposes and respond to intelligence taskings from the National Drug Intelligence Center (NDIC) and member agencies' headquarters.

3. Prosecution.—This activity includes the resources for the prosecution of cases generated through the investigative efforts of task force agents. Litigation efforts are targeted selectively on the criminal leadership involved in drug trafficking and are intended to dissolve organized illicit enterprises. This includes activities designed to secure the seizure and forfeiture of the assets of these enterprises. Participating agencies are the U.S. Attorneys, Criminal Division and Tax Division.

4. Administrative Support.—This activity includes the resources for a Washington-based administrative staff which provides policy guidance, central coordination, and administrative support to the headquarters of the 11 member Federal agencies and the 13 regional task forces. The administrative staff is also responsible for financial management, records management, and maintenance of the OCDETF case management system.

In 1983 and 1984, the OCDETF Program operated as a single appropriation reimbursing participating agencies for their involvement. Beginning in 1985, and continuing through 1989, the resources were appropriated directly to the participating agencies. Pursuant to the provisions of the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988, a single appropriation for expenses relating to all Federal agencies participating in the OCDETF Program was established in 1990.

In 1991 and 1992, this appropriation included resources transferred from the Office of National Drug Control Policy for Federal drug control activities consistent with the approved strategy for each of the four Metropolitan High Intensity Drug Trafficking Areas. In 1993, funds have been transferred directly to the appropriations for the affected agencies.

The planned distribution of obligations for fiscal years 1993 and 1994 among the participating Federal agencies, as well as the actual distribution for fiscal year 1992, is as follows:

The overall objectives of the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) are to uphold the law—to investigate violations of Federal criminal law, to protect the United States from hostile intelligence efforts, to provide assistance to other Federal, State, and local law enforcement agencies and to perform these responsibilities in a manner that is faithful to the Constitution and the laws of the United States.

These objectives result in the FBI's being actively involved in a wide range of investigations, including traditional law enforcement investigations (bank robbery, kidnaping, fugitive, bank embezzlement, etc.), investigations involving more modern phenomena (organized crime, white-collar crime, drug investigations, gang violence, financial institution fraud, environmental crimes, civil rights violations, antitrust violations, etc.), and investigations of foreign intelligence activities within the United States. The FBI has concurrent jurisdiction with DEA over Federal drug violations.

The activities of the FBI are divided into the following general categories:

Criminal, security, and other investigations.—This activity includes all field investigations of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. These investigations are conducted by FBI Special Agents in 56 field offices and approximately 400 resident agencies located throughout the United States and Puerto Rico. National priority investigations include white-collar crime, drugs, organized crime, counterterrorism and foreign counterintelligence, and investigations relating to violent crimes and major offenders. Other investigative areas are civil rights, applicant, and other investigations.

The FBI is reimbursed by other Federal agencies for certain investigative activities such as pre-employment background inquiries, fingerprint and name checks. Another primary reimbursement is the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force program.

This activity also includes resources devoted to national program supervision, coordination, and management of FBI investigations and liaison with foreign police and security services through Legal Attaches.

The mission of the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) is to control abuse of narcotics and dangerous drugs by restricting the aggregate supply of those drugs. At the Federal level, DEA is the lead drug law enforcement agency. DEA accomplishes its objectives through coordination with State, local, and other Federal officials in drug enforcement activities, development and maintenance of drug intelligence systems, regulation of legitimate controlled substances activities, and enforcement coordination and intelligence-gathering activities with foreign government agencies.

Cooperation among Federal law enforcement agencies is extensive, especially within the 13 organized crime drug enforcement task forces (OCDETF). DEA's involvement is integral to this nationwide coordinated enforcement strategy. With the OCDETF program and the expansion of other agency cooperative efforts, overall drug enforcement capabilities have been significantly strengthened in recent years.

The activities of the DEA are divided into the following general categories:

ENFORCEMENT

Domestic enforcement.—This activity encompasses DEA's general efforts to eliminate or immobilize major drug trafficking organizations and thereby reduce the domestic supply of illicit drugs.

Special enforcement operations/programs.—This activity encompasses efforts to reduce the availability of illicit drugs by immobilizing targeted organizations that are substantially responsible for importation and distribution of drugs and by focusing enforcement operations on specific drug trafficking problems.

State and local task forces.—This activity encompasses efforts to reduce drug availability and immobilize major drug trafficking organizations through intergovernmental cooperation with State and local law enforcement agencies. There are currently 77 program-funded and 26 provisional State and Local Task Forces participating in the program.

The measures below reflect the level of activity performed by this program.

DEA/OCDE arrests	4,801	4,895	4,870
DEA-wide assets seized ($ thousands)	884,588	892,539	874,054

Foreign cooperative investigations.—This activity encompasses efforts to (1) disrupt, as close to the source as possible, production of opium, heroin, cocaine, marijuana, and illicitly produced and diverted legitimate dangerous drugs destined for the United States, and (2) collect and disseminate intelligence regarding narcotics production and trafficking. The measures below reflect the level of activity performed by this program.

Foreign cooperative arrests	1,856	1,847	1,809

Diversion control.—This activity seeks to reduce, to the maximum extent, the diversion of legitimately produced controlled substances including steroids and chemicals into illicit channels at all levels of distribution and to provide leadership and support to ensure that State and local agencies and the pharmaceutical and chemical industry establish and maintain programs and policies to control diversion. The majority of diversion control activities are funded from the DEA Diversion Control Fee Account.

The measures below reflect the level of activity performed by this program.

Public Law 102-395 established the Diversion Control Fee Account in 1993. Fees charged by the Drug Enforcement Administration under the Diversion Control Program are to be set at a level that ensures the recovery of the full costs of operating the various aspects of the program. The purpose of this program is to prevent, detect, and investigate the diversion of controlled substances from legitimate channels, while at the same time ensuring an adequate and uninterrupted supply of controlled substances required to meet legitimate needs.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service is responsible for administering laws relating to the admission, exclusion, deportation, and naturalization of aliens. Specifically, the Service inspects aliens to determine their admissibility into the United States; adjudicates requests of aliens for benefits under the law; prevents illegal entry into the United States; investigates, apprehends, and removes aliens in this country in violation of the law; and examines alien applicants wishing to become citizens.

Enforcement.—This activity contains resources for preventing illegal entry into the United States and facilitating the entry of qualified persons. This includes inspection of applicants for admission, patrol of the border, and the location of illegal aliens who are in the United States following illegal entry or violation of status after legal entry. Apprehensions are made through the inspection of places of employment, by the investigation of information about the location of undocumented aliens, and through investigative case work. Also included are the resources for the Service's nationwide antismuggling program and for the detention and deportation of illegal aliens. Resources for the intelligence program are included as enforcement activities in 1994 to reflect more accurately the functions and operations of this program.

Most reimbursements received by the Service are from the inspections, legalization, examination, and land border fee programs. Also included are reimbursements for retrofitting conveyances for drug law enforcement purposes and for managing and operating the vehicle seizure program. These resources are from the Department of Justice Assets Forfeiture Fund. Resources are also received for participation in the Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Program.

In addition, it provides a capability to scientifically examine and analyze documents to assist in the identification, investigation and prosecution of major conspiracies which provide fraudulent documents and smuggled aliens.

The Immigration Emergency Fund, established by the Immigration Reform and Control Act and funded by Public Law 101–162, provides funds for possible increases in border patrol and other enforcement activities, and for reimbursement to States and localities for assistance in meeting an immigration emergency. The Immigration Act of 1990, however, amended these provisions and allows for reimbursement to States and localities at the discretion of the Attorney General, in the event that asylum applications in a district exceed a certain amount during a given quarter, or if lives, property, safety or welfare of the residents of a State or locality are endangered, or in other circumstances as determined by the Attorney General.

The Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986, title II, section 201(a), amends section 245(c) of the Immigration and Nationality Act by permitting the Attorney General to provide for a schedule of fees to be charged for filing legalization applications and further allows for the depositing of payments received in a separate account with the amounts to be available without fiscal year limitation to cover administrative and other expenses incurred in connection with the review of legalization applications. The 1994 request reflects a phase-down of this program.

The appropriation also finances the boarding of sentenced Federal prisoners in State and local jails and therapeutic, community residential and other facilities for short periods of time. An average of over 10,775 sentenced prisoners will be in contract facilities in 1994.

The Bureau receives reimbursements for daily care and maintenance of State and local offenders, for utilities produced by Federal Prison Industries, Inc., and for meals provided to Bureau staff at institutions.

In 1994, resources are requested to provide for a projected increase in the inmate population and to activate three new prisons. In total, the new institutions will add about 4,600 new beds. The request also includes additional resources for a Joint Bureau of Prisons/Immigration and Naturalization Service Contract Facility.

The National Institute of Corrections (NIC) was established by the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974 to provide leadership in improving correctional programs and practices, especially in State and local organizations. The NIC awards contracts and grants to provide technical assistance to requesting correctional organizations; to maintain an information service to provide information on the latest developments, research results, et cetera, in the field of corrections; to provide training to the correctional community to improve systems and skills; and to conduct limited research and evaluation of correctional activities.

The NIC Jail Center will continue to improve the knowledge and skills of sheriffs and jail administrators, enabling them to upgrade services and practices within their jail operations.

The National Academy of Corrections will offer training to local correctional personnel working in prisons, community corrections, and jails. In 1994, the Academy will train 1,400 students in the areas of management theory, current issues affecting jails, institutions, probation and parole, standards implementation, and inmate services and programs.

The dissemination of relevant correctional policies, programs, practices and resource documents will continue through the clearinghouse activity of NIC.

Federal Prison Industries, Inc., was created by Congress in 1934 and is a wholly-owned Government corporation. Its mission is to employ and train Federal inmates through a diversified program providing products and services to other Federal agencies. These operations are conducted in such a manner as to offer a minimum of competition to private industry and labor. Employment provides inmates with work, occupational knowledge and skills, plus money for personal expenses and family assistance.

The Corporation has been expanding its operations to provide additional industrial employment opportunities at existing and planned institutions.

Budget program.—Federal Prison Industries, Inc., is entirely self-sustaining. No appropriations are required. The amounts used by the Corporation for administrative expenses are subject to a congressional limitation. Information regarding this limitation is provided separately following this account.

Financing program.—Revenues are derived entirely from the sale of products and services to other Federal agencies. Operating expenses are applied against these revenues, resulting in operating income or loss. Earnings surplus to the needs of the manufacturing operations, capital improvements and cash reserves are used to pay accident compensation.

Operating results.—To date, Federal Prison Industries, Inc., has returned to the Treasury a total of $82 million of retained income excess to the Corporation's needs. No contributions from budget authority have been made to offset deficits for non-revenue producing outlays since the inception of the fund.

The Office of Justice Programs carries out policy coordination and general management responsibilities for the Bureau of Justice Assistance, Bureau of Justice Statistics, National Institute of Justice, Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention and the Office for Victims of Crime, which administer the following programs and activities.

Research, evaluation, and demonstration programs.—Funds provide for and encourage the development of basic and applied research for the improvement of Federal, State, and local criminal, civil, and juvenile justice systems; new methods for the prevention and reduction of crime and the detection, apprehension, and rehabilitation of criminals; and the dissemination of the results of such research efforts.

Criminal justice statistical programs.—Funds provide for the collection and analysis of statistical information concerning crime, victims, offenders, criminal justice processes, juvenile delinquency, and civil disputes in support of public and private policy and decisionmaking about society's response to crime; planning, coordination, implementation and provision of technical assistance to States to initiate innovative applications of communications and information systems technology for State and local criminal justice systems; and assurance of conformance with privacy and security regulations.

Emergency assistance.—Funds are used to provide emergency assistance to a State or locality after the Attorney General has determined that a law enforcement emergency exists. A law enforcement emergency is a situation where the capacity of local resources has been exceeded. No funds are requested for 1994.

Juvenile justice programs.—Funds under this activity provide assistance to States and localities to aid in the prevention, reduction and treatment of juvenile crime and delinquency and to improve the administration of juvenile justice. Funds are also used to assist in the development of more effective education, training, research, prevention, treatment, and rehabilitation programs in the area of juvenile delinquency.

Missing children.—Funds for this program will be used to reduce the incidence of crimes against children, particularly kidnaping and sexual exploitation, by assisting families, citizen groups, law enforcement agencies and government institutions in a national effort to insure the safety and protection of children.

Mariel Cubans.—This is a reimbursement to certain States for part of the cost of incarcerating Mariel Cubans who had originally been paroled by the Federal Government. No new budget authority is requested for 1994.

Crime control programs.—This activity provides for expenditures from programs that were authorized by preceding legislative authority but are not continued under existing legislation.

Regional information sharing system.—This is a program to aid State and local law enforcement agencies in the exchange of intelligence information.

Anti-drug abuse program.—Funds for this program have been appropriated since 1987 to assist State and local governments in the war against drugs.

Child abuse investigation and prosecution.—This activity is a program to improve the investigation and prosecution of child abuse nationwide.

Judicial child abuse training.—The goal of this program is to improve the juvenile and family courts' handling of child abuse and neglect cases and to design model programs to improve State court systems.

Management and administration.—Funds provide for executive direction and control, program operation, and administrative support of the above activities.

This account provides for a flexible, decentralized system of Federal and local programs of training and other services for the economically disadvantaged designed to lead to permanent gains in employment. Such programs are currently authorized by the Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA). The account is forward funded on a July to June cycle.

Grants to States.—Includes (1) grants to provide financial assistance to States and territories to design and operate separate training programs to meet training and employment needs of youth and adults; (2) grants to operate a summer youth employment and training program; and (3) services for displaced workers under JTPA Title III.

Federally administered programs.—Provides program support for JTPA activities and training assistance through nationally administered programs for segments of the population that have special disadvantages in the labor market. Among groups to be served are Indians and other native Americans, migrant and seasonal farmworkers, and veterans. This activity also includes the Job Corps, which is a national network of residential centers designed to provide training in basic and vocational skills for youth aged 14–21 who have severe educational and economic disadvantages. Also included in this activity is training for the homeless, as authorized by the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act. The new youth fair chance program will provide comprehensive services to youth living in high poverty areas.

Trade adjustment assistance.—Adjustment assistance, including cash weekly benefits, training, job search and relocation allowances, is paid to workers as authorized by the Trade Act of 1974, as amended. It is proposed to extend the authorization for this program. Legislation will be proposed to extend the Trade Adjustment Assistance (TAA) program only through June 30, 1994. After termination of this proposed extension, workers affected by imports will receive adjustment assistance under a comprehensive worker adjustment program.

Unemployment assistance and payments under other Federal unemployment programs.—Benefits are paid to workers under Public Law 95–250, which expanded the Redwood National Park. Reimbursements from the Federal Emergency Management Agency provide Federal disaster unemployment assistance.

This account reflects the reduction in spending for Trade Adjustment Assistance (TAA) caused by individuals receiving benefits under the extension of the Emergency Unemployment Compensation Act (Public Law 103–6) in lieu of receiving trade cash benefits.

After passage of legislation to terminate TAA, workers who lose their jobs due to imports will be eligible for assistance under a new comprehensive dislocated worker adjustment program.

Note.—State integrity and contingency obligations for 1992 are included in State operations.

Unemployment compensation.—State operations amounts provide administrative grants to State agencies which pay unemployment compensation to eligible workers and collect State unemployment taxes from employers. These agencies also pay unemployment benefits to former Federal personnel as well as trade adjustment assistance to eligible individuals. State integrity activities provide administrative grants to State agencies to improve the integrity and financial stability of the unemployment compensation program through a quality control program and related activities designed to assess and reduce errors and prevent fraud, waste, and abuse in the payment of unemployment compensation benefits and the collection of unemployment taxes. National activities relating to the Federal-State unemployment insurance programs are conducted through contracts or agreements with the State agencies. Contingency funds are available only to meet increases in the costs of administration resulting from changes in State law, or increases in the number of claims filed and claims paid.

Employment service.—The public employment service is a nationwide system providing no-fee employment services to individuals who are seeking employment and employers who are seeking workers. State employment service activities are financed by allotment to States distributed under a demographically based funding formula established under the Wagner-Peyser Act, as amended. Employment service allotments are funded on a program year basis running from July 1 through June 30 of the following year.

Employment service activities serving national needs, including interstate job listings and labor certification of aliens, are conducted through specific reimbursable agreements between the States and the Federal Government under the Wagner-Peyser Act, as amended. Funding is also provided in 1994 for amortization payments for States which had independent retirement plans prior to 1980 in their State employment service agencies.

This account provides advances to several other accounts to pay unemployment compensation to eligible individuals under various Federal and State unemployment compensation laws whenever the balances in the funds prove insufficient or reimbursements to certain accounts, as allowed by law, are to be made. Advances made to the Extended unemployment compensation account under the financing provisions of the Emergency Unemployment Act of 1991 and section 5 of Public Law 103–6, the Federal employees compensation account in the Unemployment trust fund and to the Federal unemployment benefits and allowances account are nonrepayable. All other advances made to the Federal unemployment account and to the Extended unemployment compensation account (both in the Unemployment trust fund) are repaid, with interest, to the general fund of the Treasury.

This account also provides repayable advances to the Black Lung Disability Trust Fund for making payments from that fund whenever its balances prove insufficient.

The financial transactions of the Federal-State and railroad unemployment insurance systems are made through the Unemployment Trust Fund. All State and Federal unemployment tax receipts are deposited in the trust fund and invested in Government securities until needed for benefit payments or administrative costs. States may receive repayable advances from the fund when their balances in the fund are insufficient to pay benefits. The fund may receive repayable advances from the general fund when it has insufficient balances to make advances to States or to pay the Federal share of extended benefits.

State payroll taxes pay for all regular State benefits. During periods of high State unemployment, extended benefits, financed one-half by State payroll taxes and one-half by the Federal unemployment payroll tax, are also paid. The Federal tax pays the costs of Federal and State administration of unemployment insurance and veterans employment services and 97% of the costs of the employment service.

The Federal employees compensation account provides funds to States for unemployment compensation benefits paid to eligible former Federal civilian personnel, Postal Service employees, and ex-servicemembers. Benefits paid are reimbursed to the Federal employees compensation account by the various Federal agencies. Any additional resources necessary to assure that the account can make the required payments to States will be provided from the Advances to the Unemployment Trust Fund and other funds account.

Both the benefit payments and administrative expenses of the separate unemployment insurance program for railroad employees are paid from the unemployment trust fund and receipts from the tax on railroad payrolls are deposited in the fund to meet expenses.

This wholly owned government corporation administers programs of mandatory insurance to prevent loss of pension benefits under covered private, defined-benefit pension plans if single-employer plans terminate or if multiemployer plans are unable to pay benefits. Terminated plans are taken over by the Corporation. The Corporation assumes control of their assets, administers them in a trust fund held in a private bank, and takes responsibility for paying benefits. The Corporation also provides repayable assistance to insolvent multiemployer plans when necessary to pay benefits and to forestall termination and subsequent Corporation responsibility to pay benefits.

Services related to terminations.—Provides for needed but unpredictable costs related to benefits administration services, actuarial services, investment management, and a share of other administrative costs arising from pension plan terminations.

Benefit payments.—Checks are issued when due to pay plan participants and other beneficiaries in plans which have terminated.

Financial assistance.—If multiemployer-sponsored plans become insolvent, the Corporation gives repayable loans to enable the plans to continue paying benefits. Financial assistance to an insolvent plan is made only after the plan takes a series of prescribed steps to place the plan on a sound financial basis.

Financing.—The primary source of financing is a per capita annual premium paid by sponsors of ongoing covered plans, which varies according to the plans' funding level. Other sources of financing include assets from terminated plans, investment income, and amounts due the Corporation from the sponsors of terminating plans. Also, the Corporation is authorized to borrow up to $100 million from the U.S. Treasury.

Enforcement of wage and hour standards.—The Wage and Hour Division works to obtain compliance with the minimum wage, overtime, child labor, and other employment standards under the Fair Labor Standards Act, Migrant and Seasonal Agricultural Worker Protection Act, certain provisions of the Immigration Reform and Control Act and the Immigration and Nationality Act, and the wage garnishment provisions in title III of the Consumer Credit Protection Act. Prevailing wages are determined and employment standards enforced under various Government contract wage standards, including helper classifications and rates. In 1994, approximately 348,200 persons are expected to be aided under the Fair Labor Standards Act through securing agreements with firms to pay back wages owed to their workers. Through the special minimum wage program, an estimated 390,000 persons will be aided by certificates issued and employment authorized. In Government contract compliance actions, about 39,400 persons will be aided through securing agreements to pay wages owed to workers. Under the Migrant and Seasonal Agricultural Worker Protection Act program, approximately 142,000 persons will be aided through enforcement of employment standards for migrant and seasonal agricultural workers. In the course of all on-site investigations, investigators will routinely check for employer compliance with the eligibility recordkeeping requirements of the Immigration Reform and Control Act. About 900 investigations will be conducted to ensure compliance with homeworker employment restrictions. The Wage and Hour Division will continue to provide enforcement of the Employee Polygraph Protection Act of 1988, Immigration Nursing Relief Act of 1989, and certain provisions of the Immigration Act of 1990, and the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993.

race, sex, religion, color and national origin by Federal contractors and subcontractors. It also conducts compliance activities to assure that Federal contractors and subcontractors take affirmative action in the hiring and advancement of minorities and women under the authority of Executive Orders 11246 and 11375. It also enforces the affirmative action and nondiscrimination provisions of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 and, in coordination with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990, relating to the hiring, promotion, and all other terms and conditions of employment for individuals with physical and mental disabilities. Also included is the administration of the Vietnam Era Veterans Readjustment Assistance Act providing for affirmative action by Federal contractors to employ, and advance in employment disabled veterans and veterans of the Vietnam era. In 1994, about 4,600 compliance reviews and 1,000 complaint investigations will be conducted. During these reviews and investigations, employer compliance with the Immigration Reform and Control Act will also be checked regarding hiring only legally authorized workers. A total of 5,000 other compliance actions will also be conducted with respect to contractor employment practices.

Federal programs for workers' compensation.—Under this income maintenance activity, the Employment Standards Administration administers the Federal Employees' Compensation Act, the Longshore and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act, and the benefit provisions of the Federal Mine Safety and Health Act of 1977. These programs insure that eligible disabled and injured workers or their survivors receive compensation and medical benefits and a range of services including rehabilitation, supervision of medical care, and technical and advisory counseling to which they are entitled. Monitoring and advisory services are provided with respect to State workers' compensation laws.

Program direction and support.—This activity includes planning, personnel management, financial management, and Federal/State liaison programs, management systems implementation, and data processing operations. Major goals in 1994 will include implementing financial management initiatives; continued efforts to eliminate internal fraud, waste, and mismanagement; the improvement of management information, automated data processing, and program and fiscal accountability; and legislative and regulatory improvements.

all benefits are paid by the program since the first 45 days of disability are usually covered by keeping injured workers in pay status with their employing agencies. In 1994, 174 thousand injured federal workers or their survivors will file claims; sixty-two thousand will receive long-term wage replacement benefits for job-related injuries, diseases, or deaths. Most of the costs of this account are charged back to the employing agencies of beneficiaries.

The trust funds consist of amounts received from employers for the death of an employee where no person is entitled to compensation for such death, for fines and penalty payments, and pursuant to an annual assessment of the industry, for the general expenses of the fund under the Longshore and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act, as amended.

These trust funds are available for payments of additional compensation for second injuries. When a second injury is combined with a previous disability and results in increased permanent partial disability, permanent total disability, or death, the employer's liability for benefits is limited to a specified period of compensation payments after which the fund provides continuing compensation benefits. In addition, the fund pays one-half of the increased benefits provided under the Longshore and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act, as amended, for persons on the rolls prior to 1972. Maintenance payments are made to disabled employees undergoing vocational rehabilitation to enable them to return to remunerative occupations, and the costs of necessary rehabilitation services not otherwise available to disabled workers are defrayed. Payments are made in cases where other circumstances preclude payment by an employer and to provide medical, surgical, and other treatment in disability cases where there has been a default by the insolvency of an uninsured employer.

Safety and health standards.—New and revised standards are proposed and promulgated to protect the safety and health of workers. All new standards, except emergency temporary standards, are promulgated under procedures providing opportunity for public comment. Before any standard is proposed or promulgated, a determination is made that: (1) a significant risk of serious employee injury or health impairment exists; (2) the standard will reduce this risk; (3) the standard is economically and technologically sound; and (4) the standard is cost-effective when compared with alternative regulatory proposals providing equal levels of protection.

Enforcement.—The Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 provides for enforcement of Federal standards in States declining to assert jurisdiction, and for grants to assist States in administering and enforcing State standards. Compliance with occupational safety and health standards is gained in part by the physical inspection of plants and facilities, and by encouraging the voluntary protection efforts of employers and employees. Programs are targeted to the investigation of claims of imminent danger and employee complaints, the investigation of fatal and catastrophic accidents, programmed inspections of firms with injury-illness rates that are above the national average, and special emphasis inspections for serious health and safety hazards. OSHA's enforcement strategy includes a selective targeting of inspections and related compliance activities to specific high hazard industries.

Technical support.—Technical assistance is provided on all aspects of standards setting, variances, compliance assistance, and enforcement programs. Laboratory support is provided to compliance officers. Comprehensive scientific and technical information services are made available. The economic and environmental impacts of proposed standards are analyzed.

Compliance assistance.—This activity contributes to the balanced use of the authority provided by the Act through a variety of employer and employee assistance activities. Under cooperative agreements, State agencies are reimbursed for 90 percent of the costs of providing free onsite consultation to employers upon request. Grants are awarded to nonprofit organizations to provide employee and employer training programs, targeted to address specific industry needs for safety and health education. This activity also encourages employers to establish voluntary employee protection programs, and assists Federal agencies in implementing job safety and health programs for their workers. Professional training for compliance personnel and others with related workplace safety and health responsibilities is conducted at the OSHA Training Institute.

Statistics.—This activity provides management information and statistical support for OSHA's programs and field operations through an integrated data network and statistical analysis and review. The national injury and illness recordkeeping system and forms are undergoing revision in conjunction with the Bureau of Labor Statistics' redesign of its occupational safety and health statistics program.

Executive direction and administration.—These activities include executive direction, planning and evaluation, management support, legislative liaison, interagency affairs, and administrative services.

Enforcement.—Enforcement of the Federal Mine Safety and Health Act of 1977 includes inspection of mines, the development and promulgation of health and safety standards, assistance in mine rescue operations, investigations of serious accidents in mines, recommendations to reduce working hazards, and on-site education and training assistance. The estimates will support all inspections specified in the Act of mines expected to be operating throughout 1993 and 1994. In addition to these regular health and safety inspections, the program statistics below include additional inspections and investigations that are conducted as needed to ensure the safety and health of miners.

Assessments.—This activity assesses and collects civil monetary penalties for violations of safety and health standards.

Educational policy and development.—This activity develops and coordinates MSHA's mine safety and health education and training policies, and provides classroom instruction at the National Academy for MSHA personnel, other governmental personnel, and the mining industry. States provide mine health and safety training materials, and provide technical assistance through the State Grants program.

Technical support.—This activity provides technical services and advice to field managers, mine inspectors, State program employees, and industry management to assist enforcement or improve mining practices. It also collects and analyzes data relative to the cause, frequency, and circumstances of accidents.

Program administration.—This activity provides for general administrative functions.

Information management.—This activity identifies resources necessary for the effective and efficient creation, collection, processing, transmission, dissemination, use, storage, and disposition of information required for the formulation and execution of foreign policy and for the conduct of daily business. Components of the information management activity include: telecommunications; classified information handling; unclassified data and word processing; pouch, mail, and publishing services; administration of an electronic and archival records management program; document classification and declassification; information security; and provision of information management services, as appropriate, to all branches of the Government and to the public. In all of these programs, responsibilities range from policy setting to planning and design, implementation, operation, and maintenance. The Department manages large computer and communications centers to provide administrative, consular, economic, and political information. The computer systems support worldwide consular applications, financial management systems, management of building programs, and intelligence research systems.

Security.—This activity identifies resources necessary in meeting security and counter-terrorism responsibilities, both foreign and domestic. Covered in this activity are: security operations; engineering services, which relate to the technical defense of Foreign Service personnel and establishments against electronics and physical attack; investigations, such as malfeasance and passport fraud; protection of dignitaries; and physical security operations.

When necessary to support diplomatic initiatives, properties are acquired in foreign countries by purchase, lease, lease-purchase, exchange, or construction. The Foreign Buildings Operations program functions include: initiating and developing long-range maintenance, rehabilitation, and safety programs; establishing worldwide priorities for acquisition, disposal, and maintenance of properties; and determining the design, construction, acquisition, and sale of real properties and the reinvestment of proceeds of sale to support its programs. The program provides guidance on overseas building matters to overseas posts, regional bureaus and other foreign affairs agencies; establishes standards and policies for all overseas government-owned and leased properties; provides for the security of facilities under construction or renovation; and maintains statistical, financial, and visual records of overseas properties.

The current appropriation finances, by 30 equal annual installments, any unfunded liability created by new or liberalized benefits, new groups of beneficiaries, and salary increases. In addition, the current appropriation finances the annual balance of the Foreign Service normal cost not met by employee and employer contributions.

The permanent appropriation provides payments to the fund for the interest on the unfunded liability and disbursements attributable to military and naval services—a full 100 percent in each year. In addition, the permanent appropriation finances the supplemental liability of the Foreign Service pension system—amortized over a thirty-year period.

As a member of the above listed organizations, the United States contributes an assessed share of the budgets of those organizations net of certain withholdings. Some 1994 estimates reflect approved budgets of these organizations. The 1994 request also includes $97.7 million to pay towards prior year arrearages with a final $163 million arrearage payment requested for fiscal year 1995. These funds would be directed toward special activities that are mutually agreed upon by the United States and the respective international organizations, and their payment would be conditional upon such agreements.

The Federal-Aid Highways (FAH) budget authority consists of several programs designed to aid in the construction, rehabilitation, traffic management and safety of our nation's highways. This program is funded by contract authority found in substantive legislation currently provided by the six-year (1992-1997) Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991 (P.L. 102-240), (ISTEA).

All programs included within FAH are financed from the Highway Trust Fund and distributed via apportionments and allocations to States. Liquidating cash appropriations are subsequently requested to fund outlays resulting from obligations incurred under contract authority.

National highway program.—The ISTEA establishes a National Highway Program to provide funding for a designated National Highway System of about 150,000 miles (plus or minus 15 percent), which is of primary Federal interest. The system, to be selected by the States and approved by the Secretary, would essentially replace the current Interstate 4R program, and a major portion of the primary program. The National Highway System would consist of the current Interstate, other rural principal arterials, urban freeways and connecting urban principal arterials, and facilities on the Defense Department's designated Strategic Highway Network.

Surface Transportation Program (STP).—The ISTEA establishes a new block grant-type program that may be used by States and localities for any roads that are not classified as local or rural minor collector roads. The ISTEA authorized a total of $23.9 billion for the STP over six years. The authority may be augmented by transfers of authority from other programs and by the apportionment adjustments authorized by section 1015 of ISTEA and minimum allocation funds which may be used as if they were STP funds.

Bridge replacement and rehabilitation.—The ISTEA continues the bridge program to enable States to respond to the problem of unsafe and inadequate bridges. The funds will be available for use on all bridges, both on and off the National Highway System, including those on roads functionally classified as rural minor collectors and as local.

Interstate completion.—The ISTEA authorized a total of $7.2 billion through FY 1995 for completion of the Interstate Highway System. Currently, 22 States have completed their Interstate construction programs. Nationwide, as of December 31, 1990, some 42,692 miles (99.8 percent) of the 42,796 mile system is open to traffic. All States except Massachusetts will receive yearly apportionments based on each State's proportionate share of the remaining needs in the 1991 Interstate Cost Estimate (based on costs inflated through 1994), excluding Massachusetts' cost to complete. Massachusetts will receive a specified yearly allocation of Interstate Construction funds (also based on the 1991 Interstate Cost Estimate) that approximates its construction schedule.

Interstate substitution.—The ISTEA authorized a total of $960 million for substitute highway projects through FY 1995. The funds are distributed to 32 areas (in 21 States) that have withdrawn Interstate routes in accordance with the provisions of Section 103(e)(4) of Title 23 of the United States Code. As of December 31, 1992 a total of $13.9 billion had been obligated on substitute projects from the $14.9 billion made available to the 32 areas as the result of Interstate route withdrawals.

Emergency relief.—The Emergency Relief (ER) program provides funds for the repair or reconstruction of Federal-aid highways and Federally-owned roads which have suffered serious damage as the result of natural disasters or catastrophic failures. The ER program supplements the commitment of resources by States, their political subdivisions, or Federal agencies to help pay for unusually heavy expenses resulting from extraordinary conditions.

Federal lands.—This category includes the Public Lands Highways, Park Roads and Parkways, and Indian Reservation Roads programs. Roads funded under this program are open to public travel. State and local roads (25,000 miles) that provide important access to and within the National Forest System are designated Forest Highways. These roads should not be confused with the Forest Development Roads which are under the jurisdiction of the Forest Service. Park roads and Parkways (8,000 miles) are owned by the National Park Service and provide access to and within the National Park System. Indian Reservation Roads program consists of the Bureau of Indian Affairs (20,000 miles) and State and local roads (25,000 miles) that provide access to, and within, Indian lands.

Miscellaneous.—This category consists of previously authorized programs and includes: Interstate 4R, Primary, Secondary/Urban, Safety Construction, Strategic Highway Research Program, Section 149 Demonstrations and other miscellaneous activities.

Program direction and coordination.—Provides overall management of the highway transportation program.

General program support.—Recognizing the importance of research as an investment in the efficiency of future transportation, the 1994 budget includes $104.5 million for highway research and technology of which $30.8 million is requested for development of intelligent vehicle/highway systems. For 1994, GSA Rent is requested under this heading.

Highway programs.—Provides engineering guidance to Federal and State agencies and to foreign governments, and conducts a program to encourage use of modern traffic engineering procedures to increase the vehicle-carrying capacity of existing highways and urban streets; and finances construction skill training programs for disadvantaged workers hired by contractors on federally aided highway projects.

Field operations.—Provides staff advisory and support services in field offices of the Federal Highway Administration; and provides program and engineering supervision through 9 regional and 52 division offices.

The Motor Carrier Safety Grant program provides grants to States to enforce Federal and compatible State standards applicable to commercial motor vehicle safety. Uniform safety standards both enhance the coordination of enforcement activities and simplify the safety requirements of interstate trucking parties. The purpose of the grant program is to raise the level of enforcement, not to substitute Federal funds for State and local dollars.

The Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1968 authorized $300 million for the establishment of a right-of-way revolving fund. This fund is used to make cash advances to States for the purpose of purchasing right-of-way parcels in advance of highway construction and thereby preventing the inflation of land prices from significantly increasing construction costs.

States are required to reimburse the fund, generally within ten years from the advance. A loan limitation of $42,500,000 is proposed for FY 1994.

BUREAU OF TRANSPORTATION STATISTICS

The Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act (ISTEA) of 1991, section 6006, (49 U.S.C. 111), established in the Department of Transportation a new Bureau of Transportation Statistics. Its Director is appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate to a four-year term.

The work of the Bureau consists of: compiling transportation statistics, implementing a long-term data collection program, issuing guidelines for information collection, coordination of information collection, making statistics accessible, and identifying information needs.

Financing of the Bureau's operations is authorized as contract authority out of the Highway Trust Fund at $5 million for 1992, $10 million for 1993, $15 million for 1994 and 1995, $20 million for 1996, and $25 million for 1997. The contract authority is included in the Federal-Aid Highways program and subject to the obligation limitation applicable to that program. Funds are transferred to the Bureau from Federal-Aid Highways, where all obligations, outlays, and staff are counted.

Obligations are estimated at $6.8 million in 1993 and $15 million in 1994. Staffing is estimated at 12 FTE in 1993 and 1994. Obligations incurred under allocations from other accounts are included in the schedules of the parent appropriation as follows: Department of Transportation, Federal Highway Administration, Federal-Aid Highways.

NATIONAL HIGHWAY TRAFFIC SAFETY ADMINISTRATION

The programs administered by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) are authorized by four separate laws: The National Traffic and Motor Vehicle Safety Act, the Highway Safety Act, the Motor Vehicle Information and Cost Savings Act and the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration Authorization Act of 1991. The following table shows the funding for NHTSA programs.

Programs funded under the Operations and Research appropriation are described below. Funding levels vary between activities to reflect current priorities.

Rulemaking Programs.—Provides for rulemaking activity relative to the promulgation of Federal motor vehicle safety standards for new and used motor vehicles, tires, and equipment; automotive fuel economy standards required by the Energy Policy and Conservation Act; international harmonization of standards; theft prevention; regulatory reform; and information on motor vehicle safety required by the Motor Vehicle Information and Cost Savings Act.

Enforcement Programs.—Provides for the enforcement of programs described under the rulemaking activity, including manufacturer compliance with motor vehicle safety and automotive fuel economy standards, investigation of safety-related motor vehicle defects (and institution of recalls when warranted), surveillance of odometer tampering and enforcement of theft protection.

Research and Analysis.—Provides motor vehicle safety and highway safety research and development in support of all NHTSA programs, including the collection and analysis of data to identify safety problems, develop alternative solutions, and assess costs, benefits and effectiveness. Research will continue to concentrate on improving vehicle crashworthiness and crash avoidance, occupant protection usage, and alcohol and other drug countermeasures. The FY 1994 budget includes funds to continue a national crash data collection program to improve problem identification, regulatory reform and program evaluation activities. Continued funding is provided for the development of an advanced driver simulator and support of Intelligent Vehicle-Highway Systems (IVHS).

This account represents the portion of the operations and research appropriation authorized under 23 U.S.C. 403, as well as the Drug Recognition Expert Training Program, financed from the Highway Trust Fund for the following activities:

Highway safety programs.—Provides for headquarters and field staff to assist the States in the conduct of their highway safety and demonstration programs, and to develop and implement a National Occupant Protection Program. Alcohol and drug safety efforts will continue in FY 1994 including detection of impaired drivers and processing higher court caseloads. Programs to improve emergency medical services and trauma care systems will be conducted to reduce highway fatalities and injuries. This effort will be conducted through more effective police enforcement countermeasures, and through special Drug Evaluation and Classification (DEC) measures that train police to detect driver impairment.

Research and analysis.—Provides for highway safety research in support of NHTSA programs, including the collection and analysis of data to determine the relationship between driver performance characteristics and crashes causing death or personal injury. Research is also undertaken to identify ways to improve safety belt usage and to prevent alcohol- and drug-impaired driving. The FY 1994 budget includes funding to continue a national accident data collection program to improve problem identification, regulatory reform, and program evaluation activities.

Safety formula grants.—Grant allocations are determined on the basis of a statutory formula established under 23 U.S.C. 402. States use this funding for reducing traffic crashes, fatalities, and injuries. The grants are used to support State highway safety programs. The States may choose to use the grants to implement programs to reduce deaths and injuries from exceeding posted speed limits; encourage proper use of occupant protection devices; reduce alcohol and drug-impaired driving; reduce crashes between motorcycles and other vehicles; reduce school bus crashes; improve police traffic services; improve emergency medical services; increase pedestrian and bicyclist safety; and improve traffic record systems. The grants also provide additional support for State data collection and reporting of traffic deaths and injuries.

Section 408 incentive grants.—The purpose of the Section 408 program is to contribute to highway safety by reducing the number of accidents caused by drivers impaired by alcohol or drugs. The program does this by providing incentive grants to States that adopt tough measures specified in the legislation to deter drunk and drugged driving. These measures include State laws that deem drivers to be drunk when their blood alcohol concentration exceeds 0.10 percent, prompt license suspension for first offenders, mandatory sentencing (jail or community service) for repeat offenders, and increased enforcement of drunk driving laws.

Section 153 incentive grants.—Grants are issued to States with laws requiring use of safety belts and motorcycle helmets. These States may receive additional grants for achievement of specific belt and helmet usage rates in the following two years. These grants are authorized for use in State programs to educate the public about safety belts, child seat and motorcycle helmets, to support police enforcement of usage laws and to monitor public compliance with these laws.

National Driver Register.—NDR program funding is provided to improve traffic safety by assisting State motor vehicle administrators in communicating effectively and efficiently with other States to identify problem drivers, e.g. drivers whose licenses were suspended or revoked for certain serious traffic offenses including vehicle operation under alcohol or other drug impairment. States are converting to a new electronic inquiry system developed pursuant to the National Driver Register Act of 1982. The new communication system will make information communicated between States more rapid and accurate and thus facilitate important State driver license decisions.

The objective of the Railroad Research and Development (R&D) program is to provide science and technology support for rail safety rulemaking and enforcement and to stimulate technological advances in conventional railroads and new high-speed guided ground transportation technology, including magnetic levitation (maglev). This activity is conducted with the cooperation and some cost-sharing from private sector organizations.

Equipment, operations and hazardous materials research.—Provides for research in safety and performance improvements to freight and passenger equipment, operating practices and hazardous materials.

Track, structures and train control.—Provides for research in safety and performance improvements to track structure, track components, railroad bridge and tunnel structures, signal and train control, and track-vehicle interaction.

Safety of high-speed ground transportation.—Provides for research in the development of safety performance standards and the conduct of projects accompanying safety and environmental assessments for new high-speed ground transportation systems.

R&D facilities.—Provides support for the Transportation Test Center (TTC) near Pueblo, Colorado which is a government-owned, contractor-operated facility. Under FRA ownership, the Association of American Railroads (AAR) is the private operator under a contract for Care, Custody and Control.

Administration.—Provides support for the Deputy Associate Administrator for Technology Development and the salaries and related administrative expenses of the Office of Research and Development.

FEDERAL TRANSIT ADMINISTRATION

For 1994, it is proposed that $4.6 billion in Federal funds be made available to assist local operators of public mass transit services; $2.96 billion will be from trust funds and $1.64 billion from general funds. This will provide a stable resource for needed capital investment at transit systems of all sizes, and for operating assistance. In addition, assistance will be provided for such vital functions as transportation planning and research whose aim is to improve the efficiency and productivity of American mass transit.

This budget for the Federal mass transportation assistance program emphasizes increased bus and rail capital investment, which is consistent with the Administration's long-term goals to invest in the nation's infrastructure.

The $4.6 billion proposed will assist in the replacement of over-age transit vehicles, allow investments to be made in maintenance garages and other necessary support facilities, and also permit the operators of rail transit systems to continue to upgrade and modernize their systems. In addition, this budget will allow mass transit operators to implement transit related provisions of the Americans With Disabilities Act and the Clean Air Act.

Of the $4.6 billion sought, the largest single category is the formula grant program of $2.5 billion. This includes $131 million for rural transit assistance. The second largest budget category, at $1.8 billion, is the Section 3 discretionary grant program. Of this amount, $760 million will be used for fixed guideway modernization. In addition, $657 million will be used to fund construction of new fixed guideway transit systems consistent with the section 3(j) report on new starts allocations to be submitted to Congress. Remaining funds will be used to assist bus transit systems with their long term capital needs.

Other items included in this budget request are $85 million for transit planning and research, $45 million for the Interstate Transfer Grants/Transit program, $6 million for the University Transportation Centers program and $200 million to continue construction of the "Metrorail" rapid transit system in the Washington (DC) metropolitan area. Finally, $39 million is sought in necessary administrative expenses to allow the Federal Transit Administration (FTA) to carry out its responsibilities.

For 1994, a program level of $39 million is requested to fund the personnel and other support costs associated with managing and directing FTA program responsibilities including executive direction, policy, budget, financial management, civil rights, public affairs, legal, grants delivery and management, technical assistance and research and demonstration support. The proposed funding implements the Administration's initiatives to control the deficit and improve productivity in the Federal government by reducing staffing and administrative expenses.

Through 1992, this appropriation was funded solely from general funds. Under the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991, Administrative Expenses can be funded from a combination of trust funds from the Mass Transit Account of the Highway Trust Fund as well as from general funds. Effective in 1993, the trust funds are made available under the account heading of Trust Fund Share of Transit Programs and then paid to this account where they are administered with the general funds.

For 1994, $45 million in general funds is requested to fund transit capital projects substituted for previously withdrawn segments of the Interstate Highway System. This would leave a total funding level of $38 million needed in the future to complete the Federal funding commitment for this program. Funding will be apportioned according to the cost to complete transit substitute projects as follows: New York—54 percent, Baltimore, Maryland—23 percent, Portland, Oregon—7 percent, and all others—16 percent.

The National Capital Transportation Amendments of 1979 (Stark-Harris), authorized $1.7 billion in Federal funds to support the construction of the Washington Metrorail system. In addition, the National Capital Transportation Amendments of 1990 authorized another $1.3 billion in Federal capital assistance to complete construction of the planned 103-mile system.

For 1994, $200 million is requested under the 1990 authorization to continue funding the 103-mile system under Federal Transit Administration's Full Funding Grant Agreement with Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority. These funds will be used to initiate or continue construction of the Franconia/Springfield and Glenmont lines, and to provide for management and consultants, real estate acquisition, and other expenses such as contingencies and insurance.

In 1994, a total of $2.5 billion is requested for Formula Grants, which includes $699 million in funds contained in the Administration's investment proposal for Formula Grants. These funds may be used for a wide variety of mass transit purposes including planning, construction of facilities, purchase of buses and railcars, and in some cases for operating assistance. Activities funded under this account are:

Urban Formula Grants (Sections 9 and 9B).—$2.2 billion will be apportioned by legislative formula for use in urbanized areas with populations of more than 50,000. Not to exceed $802 million of that amount will be available for operating assistance in urbanized areas. Most urban formula grants funds not available for operating assistance may be transferred to the Federal Highway Administration for use on highway projects at State and local discretion.

Nonurban Formula Grants (Section 18).—$131 million will be apportioned according to a legislative formula based on each State's nonurban population to areas with populations of less than 50,000.

Elderly and Disabled.—$59 million will be apportioned for the Elderly and Disabled program to each State according to a legislatively required formula to assist in providing transportation to the elderly and persons with disabilities. Funds may be made available to private nonprofit organizations and to public bodies when certain requirements are met.

Metropolitan Planning Grants (Section 8).—$21.2 million will be apportioned to States by existing statutory formula for the purposes of metropolitan planning activities. This amount is in addition to funds provided under Transit Planning and Research for this purpose.

For 1994, $6 million is requested for the University Transportation Centers program which will be combined with funding from the Federal Highway Administration to support research, education and technology transfer activities aimed at addressing regional and national transportation problems.

The Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act of 1991 allows this account to be funded from a combination of trust funds from the Mass Transit Account of the Highway Trust Fund as well as from general funds. The trust funds are made available under the account heading of Trust Fund Share of Transit Programs and then paid to this account where they are administered with the general funds.

Funding of $85 million is requested for the Transit Planning and Research (TPR) Program to fund a wide variety of activities. Under the Intermodal Surface Transportation Efficiency Act (ISTEA) of 1991, 45 percent of the TPR funding must be apportioned to States for Metropolitan Planning (Section 8), 5 percent for the Rural Transit Assistance Program (Section 18(h)), 10 percent for the Transit Cooperative Research Program, 10 percent for the State TPR Program, and 30 percent for the National TPR Program. Section 8 Metropolitan Planning grants are also proposed to receive an additional $21.2 million under the Formula Grant appropriation.

Under the national component of the program, the FTA is a catalyst in the research, development and deployment of transportation methods and technologies addressing such issues as accessibility for the disabled, air quality, traffic congestion and service and operational improvements. Funds for the State and local component of the program improve the State and local planning process and allow them to participate in research efforts.

The ISTEA allows the account to be funded from a combination of trust funds from the Mass Transit Account of the Highway Trust Fund as well as from general funds. The trust funds are made available under the account heading of Trust Fund Share of Transit Programs and then paid to this account where they are administered with the general funds.

This account supports the operation and maintenance of a safe national aviation system. It finances the personnel and support costs of operating and maintaining the air traffic control system and ensuring the safety and security of aircraft, flight procedures, navigation aids, and airports through periodic inspections. It also supports overall policy direction and guidance.

For 1994, the budget proposes to streamline costs and staffing while maintaining adequate levels of safety work forces to ensure the continued safe operation of the airways. Overall, staffing will be brought in line with recent past and projected future air traffic activity and other workload measures. This includes a 1994 controller workforce of 17,871.

The Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (26 U.S.C. 9502), as amended by the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 (Public Law 101–508), provides for the receipts received in the Treasury from the 10-percent passenger ticket tax and certain other taxes paid by airport and airway users to be transferred from the general fund of the Treasury to the Airport and Airway Trust Fund. In turn, appropriations are authorized from this fund to meet obligations for airport improvement grants, facilities and equipment, research, and a portion of operations.

In 1994, legislation will be proposed to increase registration fees for general aviation aircraft. FAA studies show that operators of these aircraft account for about 26 percent of FAA costs, but pay fees covering only 7 percent of these costs. This results in an annual subsidy to these operators of about $2 billion. The proposed fee would collect $18 million in 1994.

Note.—Line 00.04, Mission Support, has an estimated contingent liability of $86 million (present value) associated with the FAA's long-term lease of facilities at the Mike Monroney Aeronautical Center, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. This contingent liability will be funded through this account.

The proposed funding sustains the current infrastructure and supports the FAA plan to modernize and improve the national airspace system. In particular, funds would provide for significant progress in developing the advanced automation system, designed to upgrade air traffic control technology; and the voice switching and control system, to modernize the system's outdated communications network. An additional $106,718,000 for 1994 is included in the separate investment budget schedules.

The 1994 budget proposes funding to conduct research, engineering and development programs to improve the national air traffic control system by increasing its safety, security, productivity and capacity to meet the expected air traffic demands of the future. The agency also administers human factors and aviation medical research aimed at increasing the effectiveness and safety of air traffic controller personnel, airway facilities maintenance and the safety of aircrew members.

These programs are conducted by the agency's technical personnel and through contracts with qualified private firms, universities, and individuals, and through agreements with other Government agencies. An additional $12,629,000 for 1994 is included in separate investment budget schedules.

The Airport and Airway Improvement Act of 1982, as amended, and section 9502 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 authorizes use of the Airport and Airway Trust Fund as the source of financing a portion of FAA's operating costs. For 1994, it is proposed that $2,268,750,000 of the Operations appropriation be financed from the trust fund to provide an overall 75 percent cost recovery for FAA programs in total. Financing a portion of the operation's costs from the trust fund means that the users of the aviation system will help pay for the salaries and related expenses of FAA's critical safety employees who have the daily responsibility of ensuring the safety of the flying public.

MARITIME ADMINISTRATION

The Maritime Administration is responsible for programs authorized by the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, as amended, and other related acts, to promote a strong U.S. Merchant Marine. Emphasis is placed on increasing the competitiveness and productivity of the U.S. maritime industries as well as ensuring adequate seafaring manpower for peacetime and national emergencies. Programs include: providing subsidy aid for operation of U.S.-flag operators; the administration of the Federal Ship Financing Fund loan portfolio; reimbursing the Commodity Credit Corporation for the expanded cargo preference requirement in the Food Security Act of 1985; the preservation and maintenance of merchant ships retained in the National Defense Reserve Fleet including the Ready Reserve Force; emergency planning and coordination; and conducting Federal technology assessment projects.

The following table shows the funding for the Maritime Administration programs:

The Merchant Marine Act of 1936, as amended, provides for operating subsidies to be paid to qualified operators of U.S.-flag vessels. The 1994 request provides funds for current operations under existing operating-differential subsidy contracts. The budget reflects no new contract authority on the basis that the obligations under the existing contracts were incurred when the contracts were signed.

Public Law 99–198 amended section 901 of the Merchant Marine Act to increase from 50 to 75 percent the amount of agricultural commodities under specified programs that must be carried on U.S.-flag vessels. The increased cost associated with this expanded U.S.-flag shipping requirement stems from higher rates charged by U.S.-flag carriers compared with foreign-flag carriers. The Maritime Administration is required to reimburse the Department of Agriculture for ocean freight differential costs for the added tonnage above 50 percent. These reimbursements are funded through borrowings from the Treasury. This account has a permanent, indefinite appropriation to liquidate debt provided in Public Law 100–202 to cover these costs.

The Maritime Administration's ocean freight differential costs are one portion of the government's cargo preference program. The ocean transportation subsidy costs related to cargo preference for all relevant agencies are presented in the following schedule.

This appropriation provides funding for the Ready Reserve Force (RRF), which is comprised of Government-owned, U.S.-flag merchant ships laid up in the National Defense Reserve Fleet (NDRF). The RRF is maintained in an advanced state of readiness to meet surge shipping requirements during a national emergency. Funding for this program was transferred from Navy appropriations beginning in 1989.

The appropriation provides for additional RRF vessels, RRF ship activations and deactivations required to test ship reactivation readiness, maintaining RRF ships in an advanced state of reactivation readiness and associated costs of berthing ships at dispersed locations, special programs in support of the RRF, and long-term capital improvements at the fleet sites.

Funding in 1994 will provide for the continued addition of ships for the RRF. Growth of the RRF is needed to avoid jeopardizing the ability to provide basic logistic support to our deployed forces during the initial surge period of an armed conflict. With this level of funding, MarAd will continue toward meeting the Department of Defense requirement of attaining a 140-ship force.

The Maritime Administration is authorized to reactivate, operate, deactivate, and charter merchant vessels. These operations are financed through the Vessel Operations Revolving Fund with reimbursements from sponsoring agencies. In addition, the fund is available to finance the necessary expenses to protect, maintain, preserve, acquire, and use vessels involved in mortgage foreclosure or forfeiture proceedings instituted by the United States other than those financed by the Federal Ship Financing Fund; and to process advances received from Federal agencies. Also the acquisition of ships under the trade-in/scrap-out program are financed through this account.

Funds are reimbursed to this fund for various DOD/Navy-sponsored activities, such as the operation of activated RRF vessels, installation of sealift enhancement features and other special projects. Programs are funded by reimbursements from other Federal agencies.

The Merchant Marine Act of 1936, as amended, established the Federal ship financing fund to assist in the development of the U.S. merchant marine by guaranteeing construction loans and mortgages on U.S.-flag vessels built in the United States. No new commitments for loan guarantees are projected for 1994, and no new budget authority has been requested under the new Federal credit program as enacted in the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990.

Administrative and operating expenses incurred in the operation of the Federal Ship Financing Fund will continue to be paid from income to the fund. In 1994 the estimate includes $150 million as a contingency against possible defaults. The fund receives income from insurance premiums on construction loans and mortgages, fees, and interest on mortgages held directly and sale of defaulted assets.

The 1992 end of year balance in the Federal Ship Financing Fund is primarily a result of sale of assets, court decisions in favor of the fund, normal collection of periodic loan guarantee fees, and interest income.

The Hazardous Materials Transportation Uniform Safety Act (HMTUSA) establishes a national registration program of shippers and carriers of hazardous materials. The registrants will finance, through fees, emergency preparedness planning and training grants programs, a training curriculum for emergency responders, and monitoring and technical assistance to States, political subdivisions, and Indian tribes. In the HMTUSA, there are permanent appropriations for the planning and training grants, monitoring and technical assistance, and for administrative expenses. The Budget proposes to limit 1994 activities to those authorized for the Department of Transportation. Appropriations are requested for the training curriculum.

Departmental Offices' function in the Treasury Department is to provide basic support to the Secretary of the Treasury, who is the chief operating executive of the Department. The Secretary of the Treasury maintains the primary role in formulating and managing the domestic and international tax and financial policies of the Federal Government. The Secretary's responsibilities funded by the Salaries and Expenses appropriation include: recommending and implementing United States domestic and international economic and tax policy; fiscal policy; governing the fiscal operations of the Government; maintaining foreign assets control; managing the public debt; overseeing the major law enforcement functions carried out by the Treasury Department; managing development financial policy; representing the United States on international monetary, trade and investment issues; overseeing Treasury Department overseas operations; and directing the administrative operations of the Treasury Department.

In support of the Secretary, the Salaries and Expenses appropriation provides resources for policy formulation and implementation in the areas of domestic and international financial, investment, tax, economic, trade and financial operations and general fiscal policy. This appropriation also provides resources for comprehensive administrative support to the Secretary and policy components, and coordination of Departmental administrative policies in financial and personnel management, procurement operations, and automated information systems and telecommunications.

The Salaries and expenses appropriation funds the following major activities:

Secretarial policy and program development.—This activity includes the immediate offices of the Secretary and Deputy Secretary, as well as policy offices responsible for policy management and intelligence support, foreign assets control, legal counsel, Treasury law enforcement, domestic tax policy, legislative affairs, public affairs, domestic finance policy, economic policy, general fiscal policy and debt management.

International affairs.—This activity covers a wide range of policy development and analysis functions involving international trade, investment, and monetary affairs, development financing and debt policy, economic issues including resource and commodity policy, balance of payments, and major reports of economic data. In 1994, the International Affairs appropriation is proposed to be merged with Salaries and expenses.

Departmental management and administration.—This activity provides support services associated with general administrative management, oversight of Treasury bureaus, and the administration of Departmental Offices' function. These responsibilities include: financial management, personnel management, program and management analysis, procurement operations, telecommunication and information systems, equal employment opportunity programs, automated systems development and management, and other administrative activities.

Buildings maintenance and operations.—Under the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 (as amended), the Treasury Department has direct operational control over the Main Treasury Building and Annex. Services that otherwise would be provided by the General Services Administration (such as maintenance and utility services) are provided for Treasury directly through the Salaries and Expenses appropriation. This activity includes the staff and funding needed to conduct these operations.

Repairs and improvements.—This activity includes the program for repairs and selected improvements to maintain the Main Treasury and Annex buildings.

This appropriation provides agencywide internal audit and internal investigative functions to identify and correct operational and administrative deficiencies which create conditions for existing or potential instances of fraud, waste, and mismanagement. The audit function provides internal audit and contract audit services. Contract audits provide professional advice to agency contracting officials on accounting and financial matters relative to negotiation, award, administration, repricing, and settlement of contracts. Internal audits review and evaluate all facets of agency operations. The investigative function provides for the detection and investigation of improper and illegal activities involving programs, personnel, and operations. This appropriation also provides for the oversight of internal investigations made by the Office of Internal Affairs and Inspection in the Bureau of ATF, the Customs Service, and the Secret Service and, internal audits and internal investigations of the Inspection Service at IRS.

The Inspectors General Auditor Training Institute provides the necessary facilities, equipment, and support services for conducting auditor training for the Federal Government Inspector General community. Institute personnel develop and deliver instructional programs related to basic government audit skills. The budget simply requests "seed" funding. The full cost of training will be charged to those who benefit, specifically IGs who send their auditors to training.

Matching funds in primaries.—Upon certification by the Federal Election Commission, every candidate eligible to receive payments is entitled to an amount equal to the contributions each has received on or after the beginning of the calendar year immediately preceding the election year.

Nominating conventions of parties.—Upon certification by the Commission, payments may be made to the national committee of a major party or a minor party which elects to receive its entitlement. The total of such payments will be limited to the amount in the account at the time of payment. The national committee of each party may receive payments beginning on July 1 of the year immediately preceding the calendar year in which a presidential nominating convention of the political party is held. The two major parties will receive $4 million each, plus a cost-of-living increase.

Candidates for general elections.—The eligible candidates of each major party in a presidential election will be entitled to equal payments in an amount which, in the aggregate, shall not exceed $20 million each, plus a cost-of-living increase.

Also, provision is made for new parties, minor parties and candidates, who may receive in excess of 5 percent of the popular vote and therefore be entitled to reimbursement of qualified campaign expenditures.

The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to deal in gold and foreign exchange and other instruments of credit and securities as deemed necessary, consistent with U.S. obligations in the International Monetary Fund (IMF), regarding orderly exchange arrangements. An Exchange Stabilization Fund, with a capital of $200 million, is authorized by law for this purpose (31 U.S.C. 5302). All earnings and interest accruing to this fund are available for the purposes thereof. Transactions in special drawing rights (SDR's) and U.S. holdings of SDR's are administered by the fund. U.S. drawings from the IMF are also advanced to the fund.

The principal sources of the fund's income have been profits on foreign exchange transactions, interest on foreign exchange swap transactions, and on investments held by the fund, including interest earned on fund holdings of U.S. Government securities.

The amounts reflected in the 1993 and 1994 estimates entail only projected net interest earnings on Exchange Stabilization Fund (ESF) assets. Also reflected in the 1993 estimates are actual gains on SDRs and foreign currency transactions recorded in the first few weeks of 1993. The estimates are subject to considerable variance, as the amount and composition of assets can change dramatically, as well as interest rates applied to investments. In addition, exchange rate fluctuations can cause the dollar value of income received on foreign currency and SDR investments to fluctuate. Moreover, estimates make no attempt to forecast valuation gains or losses on SDR holdings or realized gains or losses on foreign currency holdings. As required by Public Law 95–612, the fund no longer is used to meet the administrative expenses.

The Revenue Sharing Act was not reauthorized upon its expiration at the end of 1986. This budget does not include any request for the salaries and expenses appropriation. This account was fully liquidated in fiscal year 1992.

The Federal Law Enforcement Training Center provides the necessary facilities, equipment, and support services for conducting recruit, advanced, specialized, and refresher training for Federal law enforcement personnel. Center personnel conduct the instructional programs for the basic recruit and some of the advanced training. This appropriation is for operating expenses of the Center, for research in law enforcement training methods, and curriculum content. In addition, the Center has a reimbursable program to accommodate the training requirements of various Federal agencies. As funds are available, law enforcement training is provided to certain State and local law enforcement personnel on a space-available basis.

Financial Operations.—Payments are made through seven regional offices for Federal civilian agencies, except the U.S. Postal Service, the U.S. Marshals Service, and certain Government corporations. These disbursing services are provided through the timely issuance of checks, letters of credit, and electronic funds transfer (EFT) payments. This activity is also responsible for processing EFT claims, for promoting the use of electronics in the payment process, and for providing full field representation for other functional areas of the Service. This activity is also responsible for the control and financial integrity of the Federal payments and collections processes. This includes conducting reconciliation, accounting, and claims activities. It adjudicates and settles claims against the United States resulting from instances in which Government checks have been forged, lost, stolen, destroyed, or mutilated, and collects moneys from those parties having liability to the United States through fraudulent or otherwise improper negotiation of Government checks. Financial Operations ensures the integrity of the Government's financial accounting, reporting, and financing services to the Government-at-large and to its agents, who participate in the payments and collections processes. Additionally, this activity provides financial services for numerous accounts, including the two Social Security Trust Funds, the two Medicare Trust Funds, the Unemployment Trust Fund, the D.C. Government loan account, the Highway Trust Fund, the Airport and Airway Trust Fund, and the St. Lawrence Seaway Toll Rebate Program. In addition, this activity provides for payment of domestic and international claims.

The productivity measures relating to these functions are as follows:

Federal Finance.—This activity provides direction, leadership, and technical guidance for managing the Federal Government's cash, credit, and financial management programs. It is responsible for the development, implementation, and dissemination of tools, regulations, standards, and guidelines affecting all aspects of the Government's cash, credit, and financial management programs. The major focus is on development and evaluation of cash, credit and asset management techniques, credit management training, and financial accounting and reporting systems to minimize the cost and maximize the effectiveness of the Federal Government's financial management. In addition, this activity oversees compensation made to commercial depositories for the processing services they provide to the Government in collecting and accounting of Federal Tax Deposits.

Agency Support.—This activity provides leadership and guidance for administrative and financial activities that enable the Service to manage programs and resources effectively. It is responsible for all internal FMS accounting, auditing, program review, budget and financial operation, financial systems, and facilities and personnel functions. This activity also encompasses the Service's legal, planning, and legislative and public affairs needs. Top management and the Service's Chief Financial Officer are also included under this activity.

In addition, this activity is responsible for overseeing the development, implementation, and operation of information and financial management systems. It is responsible for automated data processing (ADP) operations and the associated computer support necessary to maintain the Service's internal and Government-wide systems. Specific functions include operating and maintaining all central facility computer systems and data communications mechanisms, scheduling and processing development and production workloads, installing and tuning operating system software, planning and coordinating hardware installations, providing user support services, and acquiring ADP and telecommunications equipment, software, services and supplies. It also supports a large number of developmental efforts to enhance the collections, payments, accounting, reporting, and resource management functions of the Service.

Credit financing accounts disburse funds and receive various payments and fees. When cash balances result from an excess of receipts over outlays, these balances are deposited with Treasury and earn interest. This account pays such interest to credit financing accounts from the general fund of the Treasury in accordance with section 505(c) of the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990. The estimates of interest paid by this fund are derived from the estimates of interest received in the various credit financing accounts.

The Energy Security Reserve was created principally to finance the activities of the U.S. Synthetic Fuels Corporation. Public Law 99–190 rescinded the balance of unobligated funds available to the Corporation. The Act left $10 million in the Reserve for the Corporation's liquidation and $400 million for a Clean Coal Technology Demonstration program, which has been transferred to a new account in the Department of Energy. The Act also transferred responsibility for ongoing projects of the Corporation to the Secretary of the Treasury; these projects' activities and financing will continue to be displayed in this account.

These retained funds will be held in a reserve against the possibility of further guaranteed loan defaults. Treasury payments annually reimburse the FAC for interest expense on FAC debt, which is authorized to be issued through 1992. Treasury is authorized to pay all or part of FAC interest for the first 10 years on each 15-year FAC debt issuance. Debt proceeds are used to provide assistance to financially troubled Farm Credit System lending institutions.

The Federal Financing Bank (FFB) was created to ensure the coordination of Federal and federally assisted borrowing from the public and to ensure that such borrowings are financed in a manner least disruptive of private financial markets and institutions.

Through 1991, the Bank was the vehicle through which most Federal agencies financed their programs involving the sale or placement of credit market instruments, including agency securities, guaranteed obligations, participation agreements, and loan assets. The major exceptions are Title XI ship mortgage bonds and Government National Mortgage Association asset sales.

With the enactment of Credit Reform in 1992, agencies finance direct and guaranteed loan activity by borrowing directly from the Treasury as needed. The FFB no longer originates new loans to agencies to finance lending activities with the public. The FFB will continue to initiate new loans to agencies to finance other activity, such as the resolution of failed thrift institutions and banks by the Resolution Trust Corporation and Bank Insurance Fund.

Transactions by the FFB on behalf of a Federal agency are treated as a means of financing the agency—i.e., lending by the FFB to the agency and borrowing by the agency from the FFB. These transactions are not reflected directly in the budget totals because borrowing and the repayment of borrowing between Federal agencies and the Treasury are not budgetary transactions. Rather, the budget authority and the outlays of the agency that are financed by such borrowing are reflected in particular agency accounts and, hence, in the budget totals.

Lending by the FFB to an agency may be accomplished in any of three forms (the form used depends on the authorizing statutes pertaining to a particular agency or program): (1) the FFB may purchase agency financial assets; (2) the FFB may originate direct loans on behalf of an agency; and (3) the FFB may acquire debt securities that the agency is otherwise authorized to issue to the public. In the case of FFB loan originations, the FFB actually disburses loans directly to private borrowers on behalf of the agency and receives repayments from the private borrower on behalf of the agency. However, consistent with the legal requirement that transactions by the FFB be treated as a means of financing agency obligations, the budget reflects the budgetary effect of those transactions, which, in succession, are a loan by the FFB to the agency, a loan by the agency to a private borrower, a repayment by a private borrower to the agency, and a repayment by the agency to the FFB.

In recent years, Congress has authorized certain Rural Electrification Administration-guaranteed borrowers and Department of Defense-guaranteed foreign military sales borrowers to prepay certain loans at par, without the contractually required prepayment premiums. These prepayments result in losses to the FFB and thus the taxpayer.

Pursuant to these actions, the FFB has received REA-guaranteed borrower prepayments of $2.9 billion with associated losses of $0.7 billion.

To date, $7.8 billion of eligible FMS loans held by the FFB have been prepaid, with an associated taxpayer loss of $2.4 billion.

As a result of these losses FFB had a negative net worth of $2.1 billion at the end of 1992.

The following table shows by agency and program the net lending by the FFB during each year and the amount of loans outstanding at the end of the year.

The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms is responsible for the enforcement of the laws designed to eliminate certain illicit activities and to regulate lawful activities relating to distilled spirits, beer, wine and nonbeverage alcohol products, tobacco, firearms, and explosives.

Compliance operations.—This activity covers the regulation of: the alcohol and tobacco industries relating to revenue protection and product and market integrity; the legal firearms industry through a system of licensing and compliance inspections; and the explosives industry through a license and permit system for manufacturers, dealers, and users of explosives. Effective July 1, 1987, this activity became responsible for the deposit and accounting for alcohol and tobacco excise taxes.

The 1994 Budget includes appropriations language that would initiate a user fee for alcoholic beverage label approvals and laboratory analyses performed by the Bureau. These services are currently provided free of charge.

Law enforcement.—This activity covers the enforcement of: Federal laws relating to the liquor industry; Federal firearms statutes and Federal laws to suppress illegal use of explosives and illegal trafficking in explosives.

Inspection and control.—In enforcing the provisions of the Tariff Act of 1930, as amended, the Inspection and Control activity must: (1) stop the illegal entry of drugs and other prohibited items and enforce export laws while accommodating the law-abiding persons and cargo entering this country; (2) augment selectivity of Customs inspectional enforcement programs through improved techniques and equipment; (3) process persons and cargo entering this country; and (4) open new ports of entry and expand service at existing ports to meet the needs of the traveling and importing public.

Enforcement.—Operating under the authority of titles 19 and 26, U.S. Code, this program investigates violations of laws and trade regulations enforced by Customs, including currency, neutrality, smuggling, illegal exports of critical technology and arms, cargo theft, and child pornography. Financial investigations, export enforcement, and commercial fraud enforcement are major areas currently emphasized. Also, Customs has the ability to detect, sort, intercept, track, and apprehend the air and vessel smuggler, despite the continually shifting narcotics and contraband smuggling threat.

Tariff and Trade.—The Tariff and Trade program: (1) enforces the provisions of the Tariff Act of 1930, as amended; (2) collects lost revenue by assisting in enforcement investigations of commercial fraud; (3) improves the efficiency of processing through better selectivity in document review and laboratory analysis; (4) improves the administration of post-audit

Customs Inspectors receive compensation for overtime work at rates different from most other Federal employees. Current law provides strong incentives for wasteful overtime scheduling practices and excessive overtime compensation. The Budget proposes to reform Customs overtime law to solve these problems. This will reduce required overtime payments by an estimated $18 million per year.

Current law also requires that inspector overtime be paid with fees collected from air and sea passengers entering this country. These fees are set to expire in 1995. The Administration proposes to extend the fees indefinitely. Further, proposed changes to fee legislation will allow benefits from overtime reform to be returned to the taxpayer via deficit reduction.

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing designs, manufactures, and supplies Federal Reserve notes, various public debt instruments, as well as most evidences of a financial character issued by the United States, such as postage and internal revenue stamps. The Bureau executes certain printings for various territories administered by the United States, particularly postage and revenue stamps.

The anticipated work volume is based on estimates of requirements submitted by agencies served. The program comprises the following activities:

Engraving and printing—

Currency.—Total deliveries of currency for 1993 and 1994 are estimated to be 8.0 and 9.0 billion notes, respectively. During 1992 the Bureau delivered 8.4 billion Federal Reserve notes.

Stamps.—This category of work is comprised of postal and internal revenue stamps. The projected requirements for 1993 and 1994 are 31.6 and 35.0 billion stamps, respectively. In 1991, the Bureau delivered 30.5 billion stamps.

Securities.—This program encompasses the production of a wide variety of bonds, notes, and debentures for the Bureau of Public Debt and certain other agencies of the Government.

Commissions, certificates, etc.—This program is comprised primarily of Presidential and Department of Defense commissions and certificates, White House invitations, and identification cards for various Government agencies. It represents a small portion of the Bureau's total workload.

Space utilized by other agencies.—Other agencies are charged for services provided in the space occupied in the Bureau's buildings.

Other miscellaneous services.—A wide variety of miscellaneous services are performed by Bureau personnel for other agencies, which are charged on an actual cost basis.

Purchase of operating equipment.—This category consists of new purchases and replacement of printing equipment and other related printing items.

Plant alterations and experimental equipment.—This category encompasses alterations made on the Bureau's buildings and purchases of experimental equipment.

The operations of the Bureau are currently financed by means of a revolving fund established in accordance with the provisions of Public Law 656, August 4, 1950 (31 U.S.C. 181), which requires the Bureau to be reimbursed by customer agencies for all costs of manufacturing products and services performed. The Bureau is also authorized to assess amounts to acquire capital equipment and provide for working capital needs. Bureau operations during 1992 resulted in an increase to retained earnings of $44.5 million.

The Coinage Profit Fund is a permanent, indefinite appropriation authorized to pay for the transportation of domestic coin and for metal wastage in coinage. A portion of the seigniorage resulting from manufacturing coins is available to cover wastage and recoinage losses incurred in coinage, and the cost of distributing coins (31 U.S.C. 5111, 5112 and 5120). The remaining seigniorage is recorded in the Seigniorage Receipt Account.

Various enacted commemorative coin legislation authorized the use of the Coinage Profit Fund for deposits of all sales proceeds received and for the payment of all expenditures incurred under those acts.

The Coinage Profit Fund includes estimates for the 1992 Olympic Commemorative Coin Act (P.L. 101-406). In 1993 the Congress enacted a revolving public enterprise fund for the numismatic operations of the Mint. It is the intent of this legislation to establish the Mint's numismatic operations on a more business-like basis.

Legislation has been enacted which created a fund, the Public Enterprise Fund, to finance numismatic and bullion coin operations for the United States Mint beginning with 1993.

The Mint retained profits from 1992 reimbursable programs to support start-up operations. During 1993 and thereafter, sales proceeds will be deposited into the revolving fund and operating and capital expenditures will be charged against the fund. At year's end, numismatic and bullion program net profits will be deposited into the General Fund of the Treasury, with the exception of a stated amount of funding to be retained to finance start-up operations for the subsequent fiscal year.

The Mint will be required to submit business-type statements to the Congress in support of the operations of the revolving fund.

This appropriation provides for the examination of tax returns, both domestic and international, and the administrative and judicial settlement of taxpayer appeals of examination findings. It also provides for technical rulings, monitoring employee pension plans, determining qualifications of organizations seeking tax-exempt status, examining tax returns of exempt organizations, enforcing statutes relating to detection and investigation of criminal violations of the internal revenue laws, collecting unpaid accounts, and securing unfiled tax returns and payments. Funds are requested to continue the Service's ability to ensure equitable application and adequate enforcement of the tax laws, to promote voluntary compliance with the internal revenue laws, to identify possible nonfilers for investigation and to investigate cases of fraud or financial transactions related to possible money laundering schemes.

Examination.—This activity encourages voluntary compliance with the internal revenue laws through the determination of correct tax liability by the selective examination of tax returns, the correction of errors, and explanation of these corrections to taxpayers.

Appeals, tax litigation, and technical.—The appeals portion of this activity provides for an independent administrative review of contested tax assessments and adjustments with the objective of settling tax controversies without litigation. When settlement is not possible, the tax litigation portion of the activity provides for the handling of Tax Court litigation and for the coordination of the Service's legal position to ensure consistency. The technical activity provides legal advice and assistance to field enforcement activities, furnishes non-tax legal services and provides legal expertise in the issuance of ruling letters; technical advice; publication of revenue rulings and revenue procedures; review of legislation; interpretation of statutes and drafting of regulations.

Employee plans and exempt organizations.—This activity monitors private pension plans to ensure compliance with the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, as amended. Organizations apply for tax-exempt status, which is determined by this activity, through the application of certain tests. By examining tax returns of tax-exempt organizations, it monitors and ensures compliance with current tax laws regarding tax-exempt organizations.

International.—This activity directs the full range of IRS enforcement and assistance programs related to U.S. taxpayers doing business or residing outside the United States as well as non-resident aliens with a U.S. tax obligation; provides technical tax training and administrative assistance to foreign governments; provides compliance and taxpayer service support to Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and certain Pacific Island jurisdictions; and manages activities related to tax treaties between the United States and other governments. The International Counsel function identifies and resolves international tax issues; provides timely guidance to the field through both routine program assistance to the Assistant Commissioner (International) and to district counsel and international examiners with respect to specific cases and issues; and provides timely guidance to taxpayers and tax practitioners through the rulings and regulations program.

Tax fraud and financial investigation.—This activity provides for enforcement of the criminal statutes relating to violations of internal revenue laws. It investigates cases of suspected intent to defraud, recommends prosecution as warranted, and assists in the preparation and trial of criminal tax cases. In addition, financial investigations of money laundering schemes involving Currency Transaction Reports are conducted.

Collection.—This activity collects unpaid tax accounts and secures delinquent returns; develops and implements programs to prevent tax accounts from becoming delinquent; determines and analyzes reasons for tax accounts that become delinquent; and develops, implements, and measures programs that analyze the reasons for types and degrees of nonfiling.

Information reporting.—Through the Information Reporting program the Service processes information returns, such as wage, dividend, and interest statements and matches them with related individual income tax returns. This enables the Service to identify income reporting discrepancies, unsubstantiated deductions, and nonfiling of tax returns and to verify facts and amounts in question through taxpayer contact prior to assessing additional tax or refunding excess credits.

As provided by law, there will be instances wherein the earned income tax credit will exceed the amount of tax liability owed, resulting in an additional payment to the tax filer. The Earned Income Credit was originally authorized by the Tax Reduction Act of 1975 (Public Law 94-12) and made permanent by the Revenue Adjustment Act of 1978 (Public Law 95-600). The Tax Reform Act of 1986 and the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 have increased the allowance for earned income credit.

Under certain circumstances, as provided in 26 U.S.C. 6611, interest is paid on Internal Revenue collections that must be refunded. The Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (Public Law 97-248) provides for daily compounding of interest. Under the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (Public Law 99-514), interest paid on Internal Revenue collections will equal the Federal short-term rate plus two percentage points, such rate to be adjusted quarterly. A 6-percent rate will be in effect from January 1, 1993, through March 31, 1993.

This revolving fund was established pursuant to section 112(a) of the Federal Tax Lien Act of 1966, to serve as the source of financing the redemption of real property by the United States. During the process of collecting unpaid taxes, the government places a tax lien on real estate in order to protect the government's interest. Situations arise where property of this nature is collateral for other indebtedness and the tax lien is subordinate to the original indebtedness. In this circumstance, it is often to the government's interest to purchase the property during the foreclosure sale. The advantage arises when the property is worth substantially more than the first lienholder's equity but is being sold for an amount that barely covers that equity, thereby leaving no proceeds to apply against delinquent taxes. Under these circumstances, if the Government buys the property and subsequently puts it up for sale under more advantageous conditions, it is possible to realize sufficient profit on the transaction to fully or partially collect the amount of taxes due. revolving fund is reimbursed from the proceeds of the sale in an amount equal to the amount expended from the fund for the redemption. The balance of the proceeds are applied against the amount of the tax, interest, penalties, and additions thereto, and for the costs of sale. The remainder, if any, would revert to the parties legally entitled to it.

[2] As of January 1, 1993, the Secret Service is responsible for tracking all criminal referrals issued by all Treasury-Regulated Financial Institutions, which is estimated to be 25,000 annually. All referrals are initially opened for data base tracking/matching purposes, with an estimated 5,200/4,700 referred for investigation to the field and 8,500/20,300 closed at Headquarters in 1993/1994 respectively.

The Office of the Comptroller of the Currency was created for the purpose of establishing and regulating a national banking system. The National Currency Act of 1863 (12 U.S.C. 1 et seq., 12 Stat. 665) provided for the chartering and supervising functions in this connection. The income of the bureau is derived principally from assessments paid by national banks and interest on investments in U.S. Government obligations.

The Administrator of National Banks charters new banking institutions only after investigation and due consideration of charter applications. Supervision of existing national banks is aided by the required submission of periodic reports and detailed onsite examinations, which are conducted by a staff of approximately 2,767 national bank examiners. At present, there are approximately 3,647 national banks with more than 26,600 operating branches and total assets of more than $2.0 trillion.

In addition, the Comptroller considers applications for mergers in which the resulting bank will be a national bank and applications from banks to establish branches. The Comp-

The Office of Thrift Supervision was created by the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 (12 U.S.C. 1811 note). The Office assumed the regulatory functions of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board dissolved by the same act.

The Office charters, regulates and examines Federal thrifts, all of which are insured by the Savings Association Insurance Fund. In addition, the Office cooperates in the examination and supervision of State-chartered thrifts insured by the Savings Association Insurance Fund. The Office sets capital standards for Federal and State thrifts and reviews applications of State-chartered thrifts for conversion to Federal thrifts. It also reviews applications for establishment of branch offices.

Investment proposal:
Budget authority	.....	.....	584,000
Outlays	.....	.....	534,000
Total:
Budget authority	13,625,685	14,845,407	15,642,723
Outlays	13,566,532	14,542,232	15,499,707

The level of funding in this schedule along with the investment of $584 million reflected in the Investment section will provide an increase of $1.0 billion over the enacted FY 1993 appropriation level. This increased funding will provide resources to furnish quality health care to all eligible veterans expected to apply on a system-wide basis and adequate levels of equipment and other items. This level of funding will allow the health system to activate newly completed construction projects, increase staff to meet requirements of residency programs, continue implementation of the unit dose program, as well as enhance services for veterans suffering from PTSD and those who are homeless. Workload estimates by program reflect greater utilization of appropriate care settings, when consistent with desired medical outcomes.

In 1994 increased costs are associated with: (1) operational requirements of existing facilities; (2) payroll increases; (3) equipment and land and structures increase; and (4) increased cost of utilities, communications, provisions, prosthetics, medical and dental supplies, and operating supplies. These increases are partially offset by savings of $12 million anticipated from FTS 2000.

The 1993 and 1994 requests reflect the transfer of a portion of the former Office of Facilities to the Medical Care program.

The Medical and Prosthetic Research account is comprised of the following three programs:

Medical research.—This program is comprised of investigator-initiated and special research. In addition to the broad spectrum of biomedical research projects, priority is given to research Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome and conditions that frequently occur among veterans such as aging, alcoholism, schizophrenia, delayed stress disorders and other mental illness, and spinal cord injury and tissue regeneration. Cooperative studies include surgical treatment of angina pectoris, adjunct treatment of diabetes, and relative potency and side-effect liability of new and marketed sedatives. In 1993, the Department of Defense will provide $30 million to support research in areas of interest to both VA and DOD.

Rehabilitation research.—This program is dedicated to the development and application of science and technology to improve the care of the physically disabled veterans through prostheses for the amputee, improved wheelchairs for the paralyzed, and better joint functions for the arthritic. It also includes care for those with visual, hearing and speech disorders.

Health services research.—This program provides support for health services projects at Department of Veterans Affairs medical centers for improving the effectiveness and economy of delivery of health services and improving the accessibility of services to veterans.

In support of the research activities of these three programs, VA applies a variety of budgetary resources including appropriations from the Medical Care account and reimbursements from the Department of Defense. Grants from the National Institutes of Health, private proprietary sources, and voluntary agencies provide additional support for VA's researchers. The first table summarizes all budgetary resources for the Medical and Prosthetic Research account. The second table shows total number of projects and award rates for newly approved projects. The budget proposes to fund all ongoing projects in 1994.

The Medical Care Cost Recovery (MCCR) Fund was established by the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990, P.L. 100-508. This Fund serves as a depository for all third party insurance collections. A portion of these monies will be utilized to provide for FTE and other administrative costs associated with the medical care cost recovery efforts. After providing for the estimated cost of operations for the ensuing year, remaining funds are transferred to the Department of Treasury before January of next year.

While the MCCR Fund reflects the program costs of both third-party and copayment activities, the receipts only reflect third-party recoveries. The table below presents the complete relationship between the costs of MCCR activities and the total collections, regardless of source, resulting from these activities.

Program activity	1992	1993	1994

This account provides funds for operating expenses of VA medical facilities furnishing nursing home care to certain veterans in receipt of pensions. Title 38 provides that a veteran with no spouse or child will only receive $90 per month in pension beginning the third full month following the month of admission to VA furnished nursing home care. The difference between the $90 the veteran receives and the amount otherwise authorized is transferred to this fund for spending expenses at the facility furnishing the nursing care.

This revolving fund, established pursuant to the Veterans Omnibus Health Care Act of 1976, Public Law 94-581, provides a mechanism for the furnishing of rehabilitative services to certain veteran beneficiaries who are receiving medical care and treatment from the Department of Veterans Affairs.

Funds to operate the various rehabilitative activities and provide for the therapeutic work for remuneration for patients and members in VA health care facilities are derived from contractual arrangements with private industry or nonprofit entities. Public Law 102–54 authorizes VA to contract with any Federal agency, including VA, and authorizes the Fund to cover training, education and travel costs of employees associated with the rehabilitative programs. This is a self-sustaining fund, and therefore no appropriation is required to support these activities.

This fund consists of gifts, bequests, and proceeds of sale of property left in the care of the facilities by former beneficiaries, patient's fund balances and proceeds of sale of effects of beneficiaries who die leaving no heirs or without having otherwise disposed of their estate. Such funds are used to promote the comfort and welfare of veterans at hospitals, nursing homes, and domiciliaries where no general appropriation is available. Public Law 102-54 authorizes a compensation work therapy and therapeutic transitional housing program and a transitional housing loan program to be funded from the General Post Fund. In addition, donations from pharmaceutical companies, non-profit corporations, and individuals to support VA medical research are deposited into this fund. (38 U.S.C. chs. 83 and 85.)

This program provides loans to nonprofit organizations to assist them in leasing housing units exclusively for use as a transitional group residence for veterans who are in (or who have recently been in) a program for the treatment of substance abuse. The amount of the loan cannot exceed $4,500 for any single residential unit and each loan must be repaid within two years through monthly installments. The amount of loans outstanding at any time may not exceed $100,000.

Nonprofit organizations participating in the program must ensure that, in the operation of each residence established with the assistance of this loan: (1) the use of alcohol or any illegal drug in the residence will be prohibited; (2) any resident who violates the prohibition on alcohol and drug use will be expelled from the residence; (3) the cost of maintaining the residence, including fees for rent and utilities, will be paid by the residents; (4) the residents will, through a majority vote, establish policies governing the conditions of the residence, including the manner in which the applications for residence are approved; and (5) the residence will house no less than six veterans.

This appropriation would provide for the payment of compensation benefits to veterans and survivors. Compensation is paid to veterans for disabilities incurred in or aggravated during active military service. Death and Indemnity Compensation (DIC) is paid to survivors of servicepersons or veterans whose death occurred while on active duty or as a result of service-connected disabilities.

The Secretary may pay a clothing allowance to each veteran who uses a prescribed medication for a service-connected skin condition, or wears a prosthetic or orthopedic appliance (including a wheelchair) which, in the judgment of the Secretary, tends to damage or tear the clothing of such veteran.

Caseload and cost tables shown below do not include proposed legislation but does include the supplemental request.

specific length (normally 90 days or more) during a designated war period; disabilities considered permanent and total; and countable income below established levels. There is no disability requirement for survivor cases. Income support is provided at established benefit levels.

Veterans who are under the age 45 and are in receipt of disability pension will be evaluated to determine whether a vocational goal is reasonably feasible. Those for whom a vocational goal is feasible prior to January 31, 1992, are eligible for a program of vocational training.

Automatic annual cost-of-living increases comparable to annual social security increases are provided for those pensioners in the improved program and to parents receiving dependency and indemnity compensation. These increases, effective with payments made on January 1, are expected to be 3 percent.

Both authorities expire at the end of fiscal year 1997.

This appropriation finances educational assistance allowances for certain peacetime veterans and for eligible dependents of those veterans: (a) who died from service-connected causes or have a total and permanent rated service-connected disability; and (b) servicepersons who were captured or missing in action. In addition, certain disabled veterans are provided with vocational rehabilitation, specially adapted housing grants, and automobile grants with the associated approved adaptive equipment. The funding level in 1994 will be $133.4 million more than in 1993. This is due primarily to the increases in MGIB trainees and average benefit payments.

The following table provides a comparison of trainees and costs for the Dependents Educational Assistance program.

Special assistance to disabled veterans.—Service-disabled veterans requiring vocational rehabilitation receive assistance to cover the costs of subsistence, tuition, books, supplies, and equipment.

Specially adapted housing grants, up to a maximum of $38,000, are provided to certain severely disabled veterans. Veterans who suffer service-connected blindness or who have lost the use of both upper extremities can receive up to $6,500.

An allowance, up to a maximum of $5,500, is provided to certain service-disabled veterans and servicepersons toward the purchase price of an automobile. Adaptive equipment and the maintenance and replacement of such equipment is also provided.

The following table shows a caseload and cost comparison for these beneficiaries.

Payments to States.—State Approving Agencies are reimbursed for the costs of inspecting, approving and supervising programs of education and training offered by educational institutions and training establishments in which veterans, dependents and reservists are enrolled or are about to enter.

All Volunteer Force educational assistance (Montgomery GI Bill).—Public Law 98-525, enacted October 19, 1984, established two new peacetime educational programs: an assistance program for veterans who enter active duty during the period beginning July 1, 1985 and an assistance program for certain members of the Selected Reserve. The Readjustment benefits appropriation pays the basic benefit allowance for the peacetime veterans. Supplementary educational assistance for peacetime veterans and the basic benefit allowance for reservists are financed by payments from the Department of Defense and the Department of Transportation.

The following table shows a caseload and cost comparison for these beneficiaries under existing legislation:

Legislation will be proposed to increase the contribution servicemembers make as a condition of eligibility for Montgomery GI Bill education benefits. The increased contribution will restore the 9:1 ratio of participant benefits to servicemember contributions based on the new monthly benefit rates authorized by the Veterans' Benefits Act of 1992 (Public Law 102-568). In addition, the contributions will be annually adjusted to reflect future MGIB benefit increases based on the Consumer Price Index, as authorized by Public Law 102-568. This legislation will affect servicemembers entering active duty after September 30, 1993.

This fund finances the payment of claims on nonparticipating life insurance policies issued and currently is open for new issues to veterans having service-connected disabilities. The program provides insurance coverage for service-disabled veterans at standard rates. Administrative expenses are paid from the General operating expenses appropriation.

Operating costs—

Death claims.—Represents payments to designated beneficiaries.

All other.—Represents payments to policyholders who surrender their policies for their cash value and hold endowment policies which have matured.

Capital investment.—A policyholder may borrow up to 94 percent of the value of his policy.

The trend in the number and amount of policies in force is indicated in the following table (dollars in thousands):

Number of policies	162,967	165,467	163,507
Insurance in force	$1,478,754	$1,456,000	$1,429,000

Financing.—Operations are financed from premiums and other receipts. Additional funds are received by transfer from the Veterans insurance and indemnities appropriation, instead of direct appropriations to this fund.

Operating results and financial condition.—Since premium and other receipts are insufficient to cover operations, the fund continues to project liabilities in excess of assets. The deficit is expected to reach an estimated $375 million by September 30, 1993.

This fund pays claims and administrative costs on participating life insurance policies issued during the period May 1, 1965, through May 2, 1966, under three life insurance programs: (1) service-disabled standard insurance, (2) service-disabled rated insurance, and (3) nonservice disabled insurance availing disabled World War II and Korean conflict veterans an opportunity to acquire life insurance coverage who were no longer eligible for other Government insurance.

Budget program—

Death claims.—Represents payments to designated beneficiaries.

Dividends.—Policyholders participate in the distribution of annual dividends.

All other.—This represents payments to the General operating expenses appropriation for the administrative costs of processing claims and maintaining the accounts, and to those policyholders who: (a) surrender their policies for cash value; (b) hold endowment policies which have matured; and (c) have purchased total disability income coverage and subsequently become disabled.

Policy loans made.—A policyholder may borrow up to 94 percent of the cash value of his policy at an interest rate adjusted to reflect private sector borrowing costs.

The following table reflects the decrease in the number of policies and the amount of insurance in force (dollars in thousands):

Number of policies	113,651	110,230	106,560
Insurance in force	$819,966	$796,290	$775,120

Financing.—Operations are financed from premiums collected from policyholders and interest on investments. Excess earnings of the fund are now distributed to the policyholders in the form of an annual dividend.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records, for this program, the subsidy costs associated with the direct loans obligated and loan guarantees committed in 1992 and beyond (including modifications of direct loans or loan guarantees that resulted from obligations or commitments in any year) as well as administrative expenses of this program. The subsidy amounts are estimated on a present value basis.

The Guaranty and Indemnity Fund was established to replace the Loan Guaranty Revolving Fund with respect to loans closed after December 31, 1989. The following Federal guaranty protects lenders against losses: (a) for loans of $45,000, or less, 50 percent of the loan is guaranteed; (b) for loans greater than $45,000, but not more than $56,250, $22,500; (c) for loans more than $56,250 but less than $144,000, the lesser of $36,000 or 40 percent of the loan; or (d) for loans greater than $144,000, the lesser of $46,000 or 25 percent of the loan.

This schedule shows the effects of three of the Administration's proposals: (1) increase the loan origination fee by .75 percent; (2) require a 2.5 percent fee and a 10 percent downpayment for the multiple-use of the loan guaranty benefit; and (3) resale losses on loans.

Fees.—The current fee is 1.25 percent for a no-downpayment loan, and fees decrease as the downpayment increases. The Administration proposes to increase the loan origination fee by .75 percent for most loans. The fee for interest rate reduction refinancing loans (IRRs) and loan assumptions would not be subject to the fee increase.

Multiple-use.—Currently, multiple-users are charged the same fee as first-time users, and are not required to make a downpayment. The Aministration proposes to require a 2.5 percent fee and a 10 percent downpayment for the multiple-use of the loan guaranty benefit. This proposal exempts active duty military.

Resale Losses.—The Administration proposes to make permanent the inclusion of expected losses on the resale of a foreclosed property in the formula used to determine whether it is more cost-effective to: (1) pay the guarantee to the lender, or (2) acquire a foreclosed property from the lender and resell it.

The savings shown in the schedule reflect the interactive effects of the three proposals. The savings for these three proposals would be greater than those reflected here, if interactive effects were not taken into account.

This schedule shows the effects of three of the Administration's proposals: (1) increase the loan origination fee by .75 percent; (2) require a 2.5 percent fee and a 10 percent downpayment for the multiple-use of the loan guaranty benefit; and (3) resale losses on loans.

Fees.—The current fee is 1.25 percent for a no-downpayment loan, and fees decrease as the downpayment increases. The Administration proposes to increase the loan origination fee by .75 percent for most loans. The fee for interest rate reduction refinancing loans (IRRs) and loan assumptions would not be subject to the fee increase.

Multiple-use.—Currently, multiple-users are charged the same fee as first-time users, and are not required to make a downpayment. The Administration proposes to require a 2.5 percent fee and a 10 percent downpayment for the multiple-use of the loan guaranty benefit. This proposal exempts active duty military.

Resale Losses.—The Administration proposes to make permanent the inclusion of expected losses on the resale of a foreclosed property in the formula used to determine whether it is more cost-effective to: (1) pay the guarantee to the lender, or (2) acquire a foreclosed property from the lender and resell it.

The savings shown in the schedule reflect the interactive effects of the three proposals. The savings for these three proposals would be greater than those reflected here, if interactive effects were not taken into account.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records, for this program, the subsidy costs associated with the direct loans obligated and loan guarantees committed in 1992 and beyond (including modifications of direct loans or loan guarantees that resulted from obligations or commitments in any year) as well as administrative expenses of this program. The subsidy amounts are estimated on a present value basis.

The purpose of the VA home loan guaranty program is to facilitate the extension of mortgage credit on favorable terms by private lenders to eligible veterans. As of January 1, 1990, the guaranty on all new loan originations is provided by the Guaranty Indemnity Fund (GIF), except for manufactured home loans. Guaranty amounts made prior to the establishment of the new Fund will be paid from the Loan Guaranty Revolving Fund (LGRF) in case of foreclosure. The guaranty protects lenders against losses: (a) for loans of $45,000 or less, 50 percent of the loan is guaranteed; (b) for loans greater than $45,000, but not more than $56,250, $22,500; (c) for loans more than $56,250 but less than $144,000, the lesser of $36,000 or 40 percent of the loan; or (d) for loans greater than $144,000, the lesser of $46,000 or 25 percent of the loan.

The subsidy amounts are estimated on a present value basis.

Direct loans to veterans.—Specially Adapted Housing (SAH) loans are made to certain totally disabled veterans to supplement grants authorized to assist the veteran in acquiring suitable housing units with special features necessary due to the nature of their disabilities. Veterans receiving SAH loans are exempt from the loan origination fee.

Direct (vendee) loans.—A vendee loan is established when a VA-owned property is sold on terms to a veteran or a non-veteran. Under current law, a veteran or a non-veteran receiving a vendee loan is charged a loan origination fee of 1 percent.

The fund provides educational assistance payments to participants who entered the service after December 31, 1976, and are pursuing training under chapter 32, title 38, U.S.C. Section 901 is a non-contributory program with educational assistance provided by the Department of Defense. Public Law 99-576, enacted October 28, 1986, closed the program permanently for new enrollments effective March 31, 1987. The estimated activity in the fund follows:

Note.—The Department of Veterans Affairs insurance policy loans are not an extension of Federal credit. Credit schedules previously shown for this account have been discontinued.

This fund was established in 1940 for the World War II servicemen's and veterans' insurance program. Over 22 million policies have been issued under this program. Activity of the fund reflects a rising claim workload. The trend in the number and amount of policies in force is shown as follows (dollars in thousands):

Number of policies	2,491,813	2,417,590	2,338,330
Insurance in force	$20,971,473	$20,690,400	$20,424,650

The status of the fund, excluding noncash transactions, is as follows (in thousands of dollars):

Undisbursed balance of fund, end of year	11,320,289	11,618,429	11,816,858

This fund is operated on a commercial basis to the extent possible. The fiscal year 1994 figures reflect the impact of the proposed general provision that would authorize VA to pay administrative expenses from excess revenues in this and two other insurance programs.

The income of the fund is derived from premium receipts, interest on investments, and payments which are made to the fund from the Veterans insurance and indemnities appropriation.

Assets of the fund, which are largely invested in special Treasury interest-bearing securities and in policy loans, are expected to increase from $12,387 million as of September 30, 1992 to $12,672 million as of September 30, 1993. The actuarial estimate of policy obligations as of September 30, 1994, total $12,602 million, leaving a balance of $70 million for contingency reserves.

This fund was established in 1919 to receive premiums and pay claims on insurance issued under the provisions of the War Risk Insurance Act. The general decline in the activity of the fund is indicated in the following table (dollars in thousands):

The fund is operated on a commercial basis to the extent possible. The fiscal year 1994 figures reflect the impact of the proposed general provision that would authorize VA to pay administrative expenses from excess revenues in this and two other insurance programs.

The income of the fund is derived from interest on investments and payments from the Veterans insurance and indemnities appropriation. Effective January 1, 1983, premiums were discontinued since reserves held in the fund were adequate to meet future liabilities of the program.

Assets of the fund, which are largely invested in interest-bearing securities and policy loans, are estimated to decrease from $149 million as of September 30, 1992, to $135 million as of September 30, 1993, as an increasing number of policies mature through death or disability. The actuarial evaluation of policy obligations as of September 30, 1992, totals $146 million, leaving a balance of $3 million for contingency reserves.

This fund finances the payment of claims on life insurance policies issued before January 3, 1957, to veterans who served in the Armed Forces subsequent to April 1, 1951. No new policies can be issued. Policyholders may elect to purchase total disability income coverage with the payment of additional premiums.

Budget program—

Death claims.—Represents payments to designated beneficiaries.

Cash surrenders.—A policyholder may terminate his or her insurance by cashing in the policy for its cash value.

Dividends.—Policyholders participate in the distribution of annual dividends.

All other.—Classified in this category are payments to policyholders who: (a) hold endowment policies which have matured; (b) have purchased total disability income coverage and subsequently become disabled; and (c) are paid interest on dividend credits and deposits.

The following table reflects the decrease in the number of policies and the amounts of insurance in force (dollars in thousands):

Number of policies	283,416	275,500	267,990
Insurance in force	$2,915,340	$2,830,990	$2,819,430

Financing.—Payments from this fund are financed primarily from premium receipts and interest on investments.

Operating results and financial condition.—Favorable mortality experience on insurance written against this fund has kept death claim payments well below the amount of premium and interest receipts, thereby producing an annual increase in the total revenue of the fund. Excess earnings of the fund are now distributed to the policyholders in the form of an annual dividend. The fiscal year 1994 figures reflect the impact of the proposed general provision that would authorize VA to pay administrative expenses from excess revenues in this and two other insurance programs.

Under the provisions of 38 U.S.C. 5021, the Supply Fund finances, on a reimbursable basis, the cost of warehouse inventories at depots and field stations and selected items of equipment procured centrally. It also finances, on the same basis, items and services to other Federal agencies who either request or are assigned to the Department of Veteran Affairs for support by the Office of Federal Procurement Policy.

Budget program.—The Fund provides financial support for: (1) maintenance of depot and field station inventories; (2) maintenance and operation of three supply depots; (3) operation of a service and reclamation program operating out of the supply depots; (4) a National Acquisition Center or central buying office; (5) a prosthetic distribution center; and (6) a publications depot that provides forms and publications for VA installations on a centralized basis.

The Supply Fund does not finance costs for the operation and administration of supply activities at VA field stations. These costs are charged directly to applicable appropriations.

Financing.—Costs of supplies, equipment, and services acquired through the Supply Fund and Supply Fund operating costs are recovered through reimbursements from the VA appropriations and other Government agencies receiving goods and services. For 1994 Supply Fund sales are estimated to reach $1.31 billion. Average inventory needed to support those sales will be $130 million.

Operating results.—The Fund operated at a profit of $2.5 million in 1992. The new total of retained earnings is $62

This appropriation provides EPA audit and investigative functions to identify and correct management and administrative deficiencies that create conditions for existing or potential instances of fraud, waste, and mismanagement. The audits function provides contract audit, internal audit, and grant audit services. Contract audits provide professional advice to agency contracting officials on accounting, financial, and propriety matters relative to the negotiation, award, administration, repricing, and settlement of contracts. Internal audits review and evaluate all facets of agency operations. Grant audits focus on the effectiveness of individual projects, reasonableness of costs, and adequacy of management systems. The investigative function provides for the detection and investigation of improper and illegal activities involving programs, personnel, and operations.

This appropriation finances research and development supplies, certain operating expenses, contracts, grants, intergovernmental agreements, and purchases of scientific equipment. These activities provide the scientific basis for EPA's regulatory actions.

Air.—Research will provide the data base needed to support national ambient air quality standards, establish new source performance and emission standards for hazardous air and mobile source pollutants and assess acid rain controls. Research will also be performed to support the indoor air, global change, and stratospheric ozone depletion research programs. Incorporates, beginning in 1993, work previously described under the "Energy" activity.

Water Quality.—Research activities include gathering scientific data pertaining to toxic pollutants, developing scientific base for site-specific water quality standards, supporting the National Pollution Discharge Elimination System, and assessing the impact of various wastes when dumped into the ocean. Research is also performed in wastewater treatment technology, oil spills and wetlands.

Drinking Water.—Research includes evaluating the health effects of drinking water contaminants, methods to treat these contaminants in a cost-effective manner, and research to support the Agency's ground water protection program.

Hazardous Waste.—Research activities include providing hazardous waste measurement methods and protocols, assessing the risk from exposure to hazardous wastes, municipal solid waste, oil spills, and developing the necessary data to revise and implement treatment, storage and disposal standards and regulations.

Pesticides.—Research activities provide scientific data to support the Pesticides Program by means of health and environmental exposure studies, the development of exposure protocols, and the quality assurance program. Biotechnology research is also included in these activities.

Radiation.—Activities include demonstrations of non-regulatory techniques to mitigate radon in new and existing homes and schools, research on radon measuring devices for which user fees are to be collected, and radiological monitoring and surveillance services for the Department of Energy nuclear testing program at the Nevada Test Site.

Multimedia.—Research provides cross program support for environmental monitoring and assessment, human exposure, ecological and human health risk assessment methods, health effects, and pollution prevention. Exploratory research grants and centers, technology transfer, and procurement of laboratory equipment and supplies are also included in this area.

Toxic Substances.—Activities support the development of scientific and technological methods to understand, predict and manage the entry and movement of chemicals in commerce and into the environment and to determine the effects of these chemicals on both human health and the environment.

This appropriation includes funds for contracts, grants, and cooperative agreements for pollution abatement, control, and compliance activities and administrative activities of the operating programs.

Air.—The air program sets standards for: ambient air quality; emissions of hazardous air pollutants; emissions from new stationary sources; motor vehicle emissions; and prevention of significant deterioration of air quality. The program also conducts motor vehicle testing, for which user fees are collected. The focus of 1994 activity will be on implementation of the Clean Air Act Amendments of 1990.

Water Quality.—The water quality program has as its goal the protection and restoration of the Nation's waters. The program relies on a partnership between EPA and the States to meet the goals of the Act. The program encompasses the following major activities: (1) developing water quality standards; (2) establishing technology-based effluent limits for industrial discharges; (3) monitoring water quality; (4) developing guidelines for advanced identification of wetlands and programs to enhance State and local wetlands protection; (5) risk-based targeting of abatement activities to protect important habitats through geographic initiatives; (6) developing compliance and enforcement agreements to end ocean disposal of dredged material, as well as monitoring existing dumpsites; (7) issuing and enforcing requirements of National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System (NPDES) permits for industrial and municipal sources, for which user fees will be collected for all EPA issued permits; and, (8) managing the municipal wastewater facilities construction grants and State Revolving Fund programs.

Drinking Water.—The safe drinking water program protects the Nation's drinking water supplies from contaminants. This involves: (1) setting national drinking water standards that protect human health; (2) assisting States and Indian tribes in implementing or directly implementing these regulatory programs; (3) initiating enforcement actions against noncompliance with drinking water and underground injection control regulations; and, (4) directing the Agency's activities to manage and improve ground water quality.

Hazardous Waste.—The hazardous waste program is designed to ensure that hazardous wastes are managed in a manner that protects public health and the environment. The program emphasizes delegation of authority to the States, permitting of operating and closed facilities, enforcement of hazardous waste regulations, and corrective action. State assumption of hazardous waste authorities will be encouraged through Federal financial assistance, regulations, and guidance.

Pesticides.—EPA is responsible for protecting public health and the environment from unreasonable pesticide risks, taking into account the economic, social, and environmental costs and benefits from pesticide use. Major activities include: (1) review and registration of pesticide products; (2) developing and processing registration standards; (3) reregistration of pesticides as required by the 1988 amendments to the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act; (4) enforcement of pesticide use rules, with emphasis on Federal/State cooperation; and, (5) developing guidelines to ensure the protection of pesticide workers, as well as assisting in the development of State plans for pesticide use that will protect ground water and endangered species.

Radiation.—The radiation program endeavors to eliminate adverse health and environmental effects by limiting exposure to radiation. Major activities include development and promulgation of standards, regulations, and guidelines to reduce exposure from radiation sources and certifying radon remediation contractors, for which service a user fee will be collected. Also, the EPA will work with the Department of Energy to assess risks associated with high levels of naturally occurring radon, provide technical assistance and guidance to states on radon, and continue a three-year Federal grant program to assist the development of state radon programs.

Multimedia.—The multimedia program is composed of several activities that cut across media programs. This involves:

(1) review of environmental impact statements (EIS) to ensure actions taken by Federal agencies do not adversely affect the environment; (2) Federal agencies compliance with statutes and regulations for pollution control; and, (3) all legal aspects of the Agency's enforcement efforts including criminal investigation.

Toxic substances.—The toxic substances program is responsible for protecting human health and the environment from unreasonable risks posed by chemicals. The program places a balanced emphasis on evaluation and control of new and existing chemicals and the reduction of exposure through pollution prevention. Nonregulatory approaches to obtain compliance are used where appropriate. The program is developing a comprehensive lead control strategy to examine the long-term efficacy of lead abatement, and to implement the requirements of Title X of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1992. The Program also provides technical assistance to implement various requirements of Title III of the Superfund Amendments and Reauthorization Act of 1986 relating to chemical releases, and the Pollution Prevention Act of 1990.

Management and support.—Funds contract work for policy studies in the management and support program.

NOTES

Obligations include anticipated recoveries of prior year obligations of $175 million for 1993 and $160 million for 1994.

An amount of $3,986,884 has been ordered set aside and preserved by the U.S. District Court of the District of Columbia in Rochester Pure Waters District v. U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (Civil Action 89-2820). It is retained in unobligated balances as reserved.

This appropriation provides capitalization grants in 1992 and 1993 to states for State Revolving Funds (SRFs) to make loans to local public agencies to construct municipal wastewater treatment facilities which contribute to the attainment and maintenance of water quality standards. It also provides funds, in support of the proposed North American Free Trade Agreement, to improve water quality along the Mexican Border. In addition, this account funds a $60 million cost-shared program to improve wastewater treatment for Americans living in impoverished colonias in Texas and New Mexico. Finally, this appropriation provides funds for nonpoint source grants to States to help restore polluted watersheds.

This appropriation provides funds for the implementation of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act of 1980, as amended. This Act provides authority for responding to and cleaning up hazardous substance emergencies and abandoned uncontrolled hazardous waste sites.

There are three basic components to the Superfund program: site assessment and cleanup activities; enforcement; and support. Support includes approximately a third of Agency Superfund staff, facilities and management, research and development and other non-direct site work, including efforts of other Federal agencies. These components will be integrated and coordinated to ensure the wisest use of Fund money in order to achieve the greatest number of cleanups financed by both the Fund and private parties.

Financial responsibility for the program will be shared by the Federal and State governments as well as industry. EPA will allocate funds from its appropriation to other Federal agencies to carry out the Act.

The Leaking Underground Storage Tank (LUST) Trust Fund, authorized by the Superfund Amendments and Reauthorization Act of 1986, as amended by the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990, provides funds for responding to releases from leaking underground petroleum tanks. The Trust Fund is financed by a 0.1 cent a gallon tax on motor fuels, that became effective January 1, 1987.

EPA oversees cleanup and enforcement programs which are implemented by the States. Funds are allocated to the States through cooperative agreements to clean up those sites posing the greatest threat to human health and environment. The Trust Fund also covers administrative expenses necessary to carry out the program.

The Federal Buildings Fund finances the activities of the Public Buildings Service which provides space and services for Federal agencies in a relationship similar to that of landlord and tenant.

The Fund, established in 1975, replaces direct appropriations by using income derived from rent assessments which approximate commercial rates for comparable space and services. Rent and other income to the fund is as follows:

The Federal Buildings Fund program consists of the following activities financed from rent charges:

Construction and acquisition of facilities.—Space is acquired through direct federally-financed construction of facilities, prospectus-level extensions to existing buildings and direct purchase of facilities. All costs directly attributable to Federal Buildings Fund construction projects for site acquisition and construction are financed under this activity. The total cost of new commitments for direct federally-financed construction and acquisition of facilities is estimated at $643 million in 1993 and $747 million in 1994.

Repairs and alterations.—Repairs and alterations of public buildings are funded under this activity. Protection of the Government's investment, health and safety of building occupants, transfer of agencies from leased space, and cost effectiveness are the principal criteria used in establishing priorities. Primary consideration is given to repairs to prevent deterioration and damage to buildings, their support systems, and operating equipment. This activity also provides for conversion of existing facilities and non-prospectus extensions.

Design and construction services.—This activity consolidates funding for the full range of design and construction services including preparation of drawings and specifications, management and inspection of construction and repairs and alterations projects, other construction related costs and non-project related technical services. In the case of prospectus level new construction projects and repairs and alterations projects, design work will be restricted to those projects reflected in the budget justifications for this activity or other projects which have been specifically approved.

Installment acquisition payments.—Payments are made for liabilities incurred under purchase contract authority and lease purchase arrangements. The periodic payments cover principal, interest, taxes, and other requirements. Purchase contract authority, which provided for private investment capital financing of public buildings, expired at the end of 1975.

Rental of space.—Space is acquired through the leasing of buildings including space occupied by Federal agencies in U.S. Postal Service facilities. This program will provide an estimated 126.5 million square feet in 1993 and 124.1 million square feet in 1994.

Real property operations.—Services are provided for Government-owned and leased facilities, including cleaning, utilities and fuel, protection, maintenance, and miscellaneous services (such as moving, evaluation of new materials and equipment, and field supervision). The 1994 direct program compares with the 1993 program as follows (estimated square feet and expenses in thousands):

Program direction.—Overall general management, including office automation, financial management, policy development, planning, program evaluation and administration, is funded under this activity.

Other programs.—When requested by Federal agencies, the Public Buildings Service provides building services such as tenant alterations, cleaning and other operations, and protection services which are in excess of those services provided under the commercial rental charge.

This appropriation provides for property management, transportation services, transportation audits, schedules contracting, and regulatory activities. The major objective of these programs is to provide in a timely manner the goods and services needed by Federal departments and agencies, at a quality level to assure successful completion of their missions, all at least cost to the taxpayer.

Schedules.—The purpose of this activity is to provide a Governmentwide program of contracts for commercial and commercial-type items required by Federal agencies and other authorized users of the Federal supply system. The program allows civilian agencies to order standard commercial items directly from the contractor at prices which reflect the discounts associated with volume buying. This budget proposes $19,680,000 to support this program.

Transportation.—The purpose of this activity is to provide a Governmentwide program for transportation and travel management, transportation audits, mail management, Federal fleet management, and the management of aircraft owned or operated by civilian agencies in support of their missions. This budget proposes $18,168,000 to support the transportation programs.

The GSA/FSS transportation and travel management programs continue to provide support and dollar savings for Government agencies through negotiated airline city-pair contracts, Travel Management Centers (TMC), hotel/motel discounts, charge card/travelers check program, automated rate and routing processes, the small package express delivery program, audits of transportation claims by and against the U.S. Government, and the long-term vehicle lease contracts program.

Property management.—This activity manages and operates a Governmentwide personal property program including the utilization, donation, and sale of personal property. It encompasses most Government agencies, and provides for utilization of excess personal property and the donation and/or sale of surplus personal property. The budget proposes $17,956,000 in 1994 to support the property management programs.

Reimbursable operations.—This activity provides supply support services to other Government agencies on a reimbursable basis. The principal activities involve: (1) the provision of technical support services to the Government of Saudi Arabia for a joint U.S./Saudi Arabian project, known as CENPRO, for centralized procurement; (2) the provision of personal property services related to seized and forfeited property; and (3) provision for the sale of GSA's Interagency Fleet Management System (IFMS) vehicles. The IFMS vehicle disposal workload is funded reimbursably. The budget proposes a level of reimbursable services of $5,989,000 in 1994.

Public Law 99–88 provided that expenses of Transportation Audit Contracts and Contract Administration activities shall be financed from overcharges collected from carriers on transportation bills paid by the Government and other similar type refunds. Public Law 99–627 granted GSA authority to delegate to the Government agencies prepayment audit of their transportation bills before they pay transportation carriers, permanent authority to pay transportation audit contractors from carrier overcharges collected, and authority to transfer net overpayments collected to the Treasury. For fiscal year 1994, contract audit and contract administration expenses are estimated at $11.8 million. Total collections are estimated at $27.0 million.

This fund finances, on a reimbursable basis, a national supply distribution system, a system of ordering supplies for direct delivery to agencies, and a system of interagency Federal Fleet Management Centers. Legislation was enacted in fiscal year 1988 to authorize full cost recovery for all supply management, operating, and overhead expenses related to providing goods and services to other agencies through the General Supply Fund. Full cost recovery pricing results in the true cost of supplies and services being reflected in charges to agencies.

Supply operations.—

Stores, regular.—Stock of common-use commodities is purchased in volume, stocked, and issued through supply facilities to Government agencies. Sales were $1,085.6 million in 1992, and are estimated to be $1,015.7 million in 1993 and $985.6 million in 1994.

Stores, direct delivery.—Orders for store-type items, if sufficiently large and delivery time is not a factor, are placed with the commercial source of supply for delivery directly to the customer. Sales were $59.2 million in 1992, and are estimated to be $87.1 million in 1993, and $103.5 million in 1994.

Special order.—Definite quantity requirements of commodities which are not susceptible to economical stocking in supply facilities are purchased for direct shipment to using agencies. Sales were $1,021.3 million in 1992, and are estimated to be $1,037.9 million in 1993, and $1,024.6 million in 1994.

Export operations.—Stores and special order items are shipped to overseas customers. Receipts to the fund cover packing, transportation costs, and other reimbursable services. Sales were $15.7 million in 1992, and are estimated to be $14.6 million in 1993 and $14.5 million in 1994.

Federal Fleet Management Centers.—Services are provided through a system of Fleet Management Centers. Sales were $631.3 million in 1992, and are estimated to be $668.2 million in 1993, and $681.0 million in 1994.

Other revenue and expense.—Gains or losses on equipment disposals, adjustments between fiscal years, inventory write-offs, and discounts are applied against operating costs.

The Information Technology Fund was authorized by the Paperwork Reduction Reauthorization Act of 1986, as included in Public Laws 99-500 and 99-591, section 821(a)(1). The Fund was established as of January 1, 1987, and consists of the assets, liabilities and capital of the Federal Telecommunications Fund, and the Automatic Data Processing Fund. The purpose of the fund is to help ensure that automatic data processing, telecommunications, and other information technologies are acquired and used by the Federal Government in a manner which improves service delivery and program management, increases productivity, improves the quality of decisionmaking, reduces waste and fraud, and wherever practicable and appropriate, reduces the information processing burden for the Federal Government and for persons who provide information to and for the Federal Government.

The fund is available for expenses and for procurement for efficiently providing information technology resources to Federal agencies and for the efficient management, coordination, operation and utilization of such resources.

Levels of funding for capital investments and for operating capital are determined through the submission and approval process of planned cost and capital requirements to OMB by GSA pursuant to section 110(a)(1), Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949, as amended by Public Law 99-591.

The Information Technology Fund finances, on a reimbursable basis, the following Government-wide information resources management assistance programs:

FTS 2000 Program.—Long distance telecommunications services are provided through the Federal Telecommunications System 2000 (FTS2000) program which offers the Federal Government low-cost, state-of-the-art, integrated voice, data, and video telecommunications. The mission of the Office of FTS2000 is to provide leadership, policy, program direction, and oversight to ensure the provision of a timely, high quality, innovative and cost-effective governmentwide program for intercity telecommunications services.

FTS2000 program services are provided to more than 1.5 million users through two multi-billion dollar ten year contracts that were awarded to AT&T and Sprint in December 1988 to replace the 25 year-old FTS network. The contracts provide for "services" rather than equipment. GSA's role is to oversee and manage the provisoning of those services. The transition of voice service from the old FTS to FTS2000 was completed in June 1990.

Local telecommunications services programs.—Included in these programs is the provision of local telecommunications services to Federal agencies. Their objective is to operate consolidated telephone systems that provide effective and economical local service to Federal agencies and, through competitive processes, procure cost advantageous telephone services and equipment. This includes the program areas of Telecommunications Support Contract (TSC) and the Purchase of Telecommunications and Services (POTS) contracts. Also of critical importance is the Washington Interagency Telecommunications System (WITS) that replaces a selected portion of the Federal community telephone systems in the Washington, D.C., metropolitan area with one integrated voice and data transmission facility. In addition, the Aggregated Systems Procurement (ASP) program will consolidate systems into single procurement actions which are designed to achieve economies of scale and cost stability for systems in major metropolitan areas. The ASP will replace existing tariffed systems, as well as expiring completed systems, with state-of-the-art technology.

Information Security Management Program.—This program provides worldwide support to all Government activities, including GSA, conducting sensitive and classified operation in consonance with the objectives of the U.S. Communications Security Plan. To meet this responsibility, the program provides the full range of support services for communication security (COMSEC) and related systems that provide secure voice and data communications to Federal, civilian and selected Department of Defense activities, and friendly allied countries.

National Security Emergency Preparedness (NSEP) Program.—These programs ensure that GSA supports Governmentwide national security and domestic emergency preparedness plans and that the critical telecommunications needs of the Government are available during local, national and international crises. In addition, these programs provide telecommunications support to the Federal Emergency Management Agency and other agencies in the emergency and major disaster programs.

Federal Data Processing Centers (FDPC).—The three Centers, including the recently established Federal Computer Acquisition Center (FEDCAC), provide GSA's Government-wide information resources assistance programs in the areas of software, hardware, data communications, office automation, acquisition support and planning services; and in the collection and dissemination of Government-wide data. They provide technical assistance in the efficient and effective management and use of information resources and serve as sources of expertise for information resources management and technology for the Government. Additionally, they provide tools, techniques, handbooks, and assistance to facilitate the exchange of experience and knowledge throughout the Government.

Federal Information Systems Support Program (FISSP).—FISSP provides ADP support services to Federal agencies through regional contracts with private sector vendors. Services provided include systems analysis and programming; software definition and design of systems requirements and ADP facility operation services. Contracts are tailored to local market conditions and needs of Federal agencies. Overall contract administration, technical assistance, central guidance, and policy direction are provided by GSA.

Equipment lease program.—This program provides for the multiyear lease or purchase of ADP equipment by the IT Fund for subsequent leaseback to Federal agencies. No new activity is planned for this program.

This appropriation funds the utilization and disposal of excess and surplus real property. The estimate for 1994 is for activities related to the Real Estate Policy and Sales program, the appraisal of real property, and continuing emphasis on reuse of existing real property to extend its useful life.

Real estate policy and sales.—This activity promotes maximum utilization of real property by Federal agencies and the transfer among agencies of excess real property. It provides for the disposal of surplus real property by sale, exchange, lease, permit, assignment, or transfer, as well as the protection and maintenance of excess and surplus property pending its disposition. It also provides for the appraisal of excess and surplus property, necessary environmental and cultural analyses, disposition and predisposition reuse planning, and real property utilization surveys.

Fiscal year 1994 reflects the functional transfer of the Office of Governmentwide Real Property Policy from the General Management and Administration account to the Federal Property Resources Service. This office is responsible for providing broad policy direction in the real property area and for encouraging coordination and cooperation among the federal real property holding agencies.

In fiscal year 1994, this program will be funded by a direct appropriation from the general fund of the Treasury, rather than an appropriation from proceeds from transfers of excess real property and disposal of surplus real and related personal property.

This appropriation covers relocation costs involved in moving agencies from valuable underutilized property, targeted for public sale, to facilities determined to be more economically suitable to their needs. For 1992, approved allocations to other agencies for relocation purposes amounted to $15.8 million. The resulting disposal of underutilized property resulted in an average benefit/cost ratio of 2:1. The sale of these valuable underutilized properties would provide significant revenue to the Treasury and would far outweigh the relocation costs involved.

No appropriation is requested for this program in 1994. GSA will solicit relocation proposals from agencies and request funds to implement those proposals that have the highest economic benefit to the Government.

The Consumer Information Center Fund, a revolving fund established in 1983, provides for the efficient operation of the Consumer Information Center's activities. Under the revolving fund, the Consumer Information Center's activities are financed from moneys deposited to the fund, consisting of annual appropriations from the general funds of the Treasury, reimbursements from agencies, fees collected from the public and other income incident to Consumer Information Center activities.

Administrative expenses.—The Consumer Information Center helps Federal departments and agencies release consumer information collected as a by-product of the Government's program activities. The Consumer Information Center maintains close working relationships with more than 40 Federal agencies in order to identify, develop, promote, and make accessible to the public Federal consumer information. In addition, the Consumer Information Center promotes public awareness of this information through publication of the quarterly Consumer Information Catalog, through special projects promoting the catalog, and through various media services. Administrative expenses are funded by the direct appropriation and by fees collected from the public when ordering publications listed in the catalog.

Publications distribution.—The Consumer Information Center bills agencies and in turn reimburses the Government Printing Office for the costs of distributing free publications to the public.

This appropriation provides for research, development and operations activities of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. Research and development program activities are listed in the Program and Financing schedule above. The President has proposed a broad range of advanced technology investments and has also requested that options be examined for a less-costly space station. The funds for both of these activities are included in the Space Station and New Technology Investments composite line above. Once the station redesign review is complete in early June, 1993, a budget amendment will be transmitted to the Congress appropriately reallocating the funds in the Space Station and New Technology Investments line.

This appropriation covers: (1) the Government's share of the cost of health insurance for 1,718,000 annuitants as defined in sections 8901 and 8906 of title 5, United States Code; (2) the Government's share of the cost of health insurance for about 15,000 annuitants (who were retired when the Federal employees health benefits law became effective), as defined in the Retired Federal Employees Health Benefits Act of 1960; and, (3) the Government's contribution for payment of administrative expenses incurred by the Office of Personnel Management in administration of the act.

The budget authority for this account recognizes the amounts being remitted by the U.S. Postal Service to finance a portion of its post-1971 annuitants' health benefit costs. As of the end of FY 1992, this group of USPS annuitants had growth to 367,000 persons.

Although not shown in this schedule, the proposal to have the U.S. Postal Service make annual payments of $116 million in FY's 1995 through 1997 to finance the remaining liabilities for annuitant health care costs not captured in the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 (P.L. 101-508), would affect this account.

The 1980 law which established the Federal Employees Life Insurance Program requires all annuitants retiring after December 31, 1989 to begin to contribute toward their post-retirement coverage until they attain age 65. The annuitant contribution is two-thirds of the Basic life insurance premium, identical to that paid by active Federal employees for Basic life insurance coverage. The appropriation finances the government's share of premiums collected for post-retirement coverage.

Payment of annuities under special acts.—These annuities are paid to persons who were employed on the construction of the Panama Canal or their widows and widows of former employees of the Lighthouse Service. Numbers of recipients are as follows:

	Sept. 30, 1992	Sept. 30, 1993	Sept. 30, 1994
Panama Canal annuitants	3	3	3
Lighthouse Service widows	132	122	112

Payment of Government share of retirement costs.—The Civil Service Retirement Amendments of 1969 provide for financing of the current year's costs of the unfunded liability created since its enactment on October 20, 1969. Any statute which authorizes (1) new or liberalized benefits, (2) extension of retirement coverage, or (3) pay increases, is deemed to authorize appropriations to the fund to finance the unfunded liability created. Beginning in FY 1994, The Office of Personnel Management will notify the Secretary of the Treasury of "such sums as may be necessary" to carry out those provisions. This will permit the actual effects of pay increases and benefit liberalizations to be incorporated in the budget year as prescribed by 5 U.S.C. 8248, 58 Stat. 257 and 646 Stat. 465. It replaces the allowance for government share of retirement costs introduced in the FY 1993 budget to accomplish the same purpose.

Transfers for interest on unfunded liability and payment of military service annuities.—The Secretary of the Treasury is required to make annual payments from general revenues into the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund of an amount equivalent to: (1) interest on the unfunded liability, and (2) annuity disbursements attributable to military service. The Office of Personnel Management, at the end of each year, notifies the Secretary of the Treasury of the amount of payment to be made to the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund and reports such sums to the President and Congress.

Payments for spouse equity.—The Civil Service Retirement Spouse Equity Act of 1985, Public Law 98–615, provides for the payment of survivor annuities to eligible former spouses of annuitants who died between September 1978 and May 1986 and who did not elect survivor coverage. The law authorizes the Office of Personnel Management to notify the Secretary of the Treasury of the amount of such annuities paid each fiscal year and directs the Secretary to credit this amount to the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund.

Transfers for payment of FERS supplemental liability.—Under provisions of the Federal Employees' Retirement System (FERS) Act of 1986, Public Law 99–335, the Secretary of the Treasury is required to make annual amortization payments to finance supplemental (change in unfunded) liabilities as calculated for FERS.

This fund pays annuities to retired employees or their survivors; makes refunds to separated employees for amounts withheld and to beneficiaries of employees who died before retirement or before annuities equaled the amount withheld; and pays expenses of the Office of Personnel Management and the Merit Systems Protection Board for administering the program. The fund covers two Federal civilian retirement systems: the Civil Service Retirement System (CSRS) and the Federal Employees' Retirement System (FERS).

CSRS is basically a defined benefit plan, covering Federal employees hired prior to 1984. CSRS participants do not participate in the Social Security system. FERS is a three-tiered pension program that uses Social Security as a base, provides an additional basic benefit, and includes a thrift savings plan. FERS covers employees hired after 1983 and formerly CSRS-covered employees who elected to join FERS.

In accordance with the provisions of P.L. 101-508, lump-sum payments offered under the alternative form of annuity provision are suspended until fiscal year 1996 with the exception of payments to certain categories of retirees. The law also provides that beginning in 1991, the Postal Service must make additional contributions to the fund to partially finance cost-of-living adjustments paid to post-1971 Postal annuitants.

This schedule reflects the effect of proposals to: (1) conform CSRS and FERS student-child eligibility rules to match those in effect for Social Security beneficiaries, and (2) reduce the difference between what CSRS and FERS annuitants pay for electing survivor coverage and the actual cost of providing survivor benefits. Outyear estimates reflect the effect of proposals to: (1) eliminate the alternative form of annuity and its accompanying lump sum payment to all categories of annuitants beginning in FY 1996, and (2) require the U.S. Postal Service to make annual payments of $231 million from FY 1995 through 1997 to cover the additional cost of COLAs granted to Postal annuitants with creditable service after its 1971 reorganization.

The fund provides for the cost of health benefits for: (1) active employees; (2) employees who retired after June 1960, or their survivors; (3) those annuitants transferred from the Retired employees health benefits program as authorized by Public Law 93-246; and (4) the related expenses of the Office of Personnel Management in administering the program.

Budget program.—The balance of the fund is available for payments without fiscal year limitation. Numbers of participants at the end of each fiscal year are as follows:

Active employees	2,419,000	2,419,000	2,419,000
Annuitants	1,655,420	1,700,694	1,718,767
Total	4,074,420	4,119,694	4,137,767

In determining a biweekly subscription rate to cover program costs, one percent is added for administrative expense, and three percent is added for a contingency reserve held by the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) for each carrier. The OPM is authorized to transfer unused administrative reserve funds to the contingency reserve.

In December 1993, the temporary "Phantom Big 6" formula for determining the maximum government contribution toward FEHB premiums will expire. Beginning in 1994, the maximum government contribution will be calculated by averaging premiums from the remaining "Big 5" plans. The government's maximum contribution will be 60 percent of that average for non-postal employees and annuitants, and 75 percent for Postal Service employees. In addition, the government's contribution for non-postal employees and annuitants may not exceed 75 percent of any plan's total premium cost. For Postal Service employees, this limit is 93.75 percent.

Operating results.—Funds made available to carriers but not used to pay claims in the current period are carried forward as special reserves for use in subsequent periods.

The Office of Personnel Management maintains a contingency reserve, funded by employee and Government contributions, that may be used to defray future cost increases or provide increased benefits. OPM makes payments to carriers from this reserve whenever carrier-held reserves fall below levels prescribed by OPM regulations or when carriers can demonstrate good cause such as unexpected claims experience or variations from expected community rates.

This schedule shows the effect of: (1) requiring the U.S. Postal Service to meet its liabilities for health costs not captured in the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 (P.L. 101-508) through Postal payments in FY's 1995 through 1997 of $116 million each year, and (2) applying Medicare Part B fee limits to all FEHB annuitants, thereby eliminating the disparity between non-Medicare covered Federal annuitants age 65 and older and the vast majority of the population in that age group covered by Medicare.

The Small Business Administration (SBA) provides assistance to small businesses and to victims of physical disasters. These efforts are conducted through the following activities:

Finance, Investment and Procurement.—The Associate Deputy Administrator for this function exercises direction over Financial Assistance, Disaster Assistance, Investment Assistance, Surety Guarantees, Procurement Assistance, and the Minority Small Business and Capital Ownership Development (MSB/COD). These offices are responsible for the administration of all SBA financial assistance, procurement and minority-assistance programs.

In 1994, the budget proposes a number of initiatives to reduce the underwriting risks of SBA loan programs. The Administration proposes to reduce the guarantee of commercial loans under the section 7(a) program from the current average of 81 percent of principal down to 75 percent. This will require private lenders to share in the default risk more than under current law, resulting in better lending practices and fewer defaults. In addition, a new 50 basis point fee will be charged on the unpaid guaranteed principal balance of all loans sold in the secondary market on or after October 1, 1993.

The disaster assistance program is proposed to be reformed by reducing subsidies by increasing the interest rate on disaster loans to the Treasury's cost of borrowing plus one point.

Procurement Assistance activities are aimed at assuring that small business receives a fair share of Government procurements. In addition, SBA maintains a Procurement Automated Source System, which is used by Federal agencies and prime contractors to identify small businesses for contract opportunities. The Natural Resources Development Program, which provides for a nationwide tree planting program, is also administered through this activity.

The Minority Small Business and Capital Ownership Development activity provides assistance to minority small business concerns—primarily in the area of Federal procurement—and evaluates overall Agency performance in promoting minority business development. The business development program assists in the establishment or expansion of firms that are owned by minority or other disadvantaged business persons and that have the potential to develop into viable competitive businesses in a reasonable period of time.

Business Development.—The Associate Deputy Administrator for this function exercises direction over Business Initiatives, Education and Training, Veterans' Affairs, Women's Business Ownership, International Trade, and Small Business Development Centers. These offices are responsible for effective management and operational efficiency in assuring that specialized attention and proper emphasis to the emergent needs of the small business community are represented. The SCORE, SBI, and SBDC programs are administered through this activity.

Advocacy.—This office is responsible for the development and implementation of a Small Business Administration Advocacy program. Activities include the representation of small business interests, the analysis of the effects of federal law and regulation on small business, the development and utilization of a small business data base to aid in this analysis and liaison with small business and small business organizations and the public.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records, for this program, the subsidy costs associated with the direct loans obligated and loan guarantees committed in 1992 and beyond (including modifications of direct loans or loan guarantees that resulted from obligations or commitments in any year), as well as administrative expenses of this program. The subsidy amounts are estimated on a present value basis; the administrative expenses are estimated on a cash basis.

General Business Assistance.—The Small Business Administration (SBA) guarantees loans to small businesses that are unable to obtain private financing. These loans must be of such value or so secured as to reasonably assure repayment. No loan may be made unless the financial assistance is not otherwise available on reasonable terms. Under the guarantee plan, the SBA agrees to purchase the guaranteed portion of the loan only upon default. The SBA's share of loans guaranteed by private lenders averages about 81 percent. In addition to providing financial assistance to the general business community, particular emphasis is given to the following groups:

Businesses owned by socially and economically disadvantaged individuals;

Businesses that employ or are owned by handicapped individuals;

Small business concerns located in urban or rural areas with high proportions of unemployed or low-income individuals or owned by low-income individuals; and

Small business concerns owned and operated by veterans, especially Vietnam-era veterans.

Investment Company Assistance.—A primary function of small business investment companies is to provide a source of equity capital or long-term loans to new or expanding small businesses. The Small Business Investment Act, as amended, authorizes the SBA to purchase or to guarantee the timely payment of all principal and interest, as scheduled, on debentures issued by such companies. The guarantee authority requested under the Minority Investment Companies program is expected to fully meet demand for the program.

Development Company Assistance.—Under the Small Business Investment Act, the SBA makes loans through State and local development companies to small businesses. Through these programs, the SBA promotes economic development and job creation and maintenance by stimulating the flow of long-term financing to small business concerns for projects that involve fixed assets. These projects are designed to create or retain a meaningful number of jobs in the communities affected, with a special emphasis on distressed areas.

1994 Proposal.—This request proposes establishing guaranty participation for the 7(a) General Business Loan Program at an average of 75 percent. In addition, this request proposes charging an ongoing fee of 50 basis points per year, on the unpaid guaranteed principal balance on all loans sold in the secondary market on or after October 1, 1993.

A new secondary market fee and a lower SBA share on guaranteed loans, together with improved credit management and debt collection policies, will substantially reduce the Federal subsidy of these credit programs.

1349	Direct loan subsidy outlays	72,356	336,339	211,034

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records, for this program, the subsidy costs associated with the direct loans obligated in 1992 and beyond (including modifications of direct loans or loan guarantees that resulted from obligations or commitments in any year), as well as administrative expenses of this program. The subsidy amounts are estimated on a present value basis; the administrative expenses are estimated on a cash basis.

This account finances disaster loans made pursuant to section 7(b) of the Small Business Act, as amended.

Physical Disaster Loans.—Under this program, loans are made to individuals and businesses at favorable terms and conditions for uninsured losses of property, both real and personal, damaged by natural disasters such as tornadoes, floods, hurricanes, etc. On average, SBA makes about $390 million in new loan obligations each year. During 1992, however, there was an unusually high demand for these loans as a result of Hurricanes Andrew and Iniki and the Los Angeles riots.

The budget proposes that starting in fiscal year 1994, to reduce the deep subsidy in this program, the interest rate is proposed to be increased to the Treasury cost of borrowing, plus one point.

Public Law 94–305, approved June 4, 1976, established this fund to alleviate the adverse impact of pollution regulations on small businesses. The Small Business Administration may, whenever it determines that small business concerns are to be at an operational or financial disadvantage with respect to planning, design, or installation of pollution control facilities or the financing thereof, guarantee the payment of rentals or other amounts due under qualified contracts. As a result of the elimination of tax exempt financing associated with the Pollution Control Guaranteed program, the level of activity has decreased significantly.

In FY 1989, any new financings for this program were authorized under the Business Loan and Investment Fund to provide participation loans to finance the planning, design, or installation of pollution control facilities.

During FY 1992, the Small Business Administration started the process of redeeming a large number of outstanding bonds on which it has taken over loan payments. Most of these targeted bonds are ten years old and voluntary redemption is now viable under the bond documents. Redemption of these obligations would eliminate the SBA from paying excessive interest over the next ten years.

Volunteers in Service to America.—In 1994, the VISTA program will provide 2,928 volunteer service years to assist communities working to resolve local poverty-related problems in areas such as illiteracy, hunger, unemployment, substance abuse, homelessness, and lack of adequate health support. The Literacy Corps will provide an additional 430 VISTA volunteer service years to develop, strengthen, supplement, and expand the efforts of public and private non-profit organizations at the local, State, and Federal levels to overcome the problems of illiteracy. The Student Community Service Program assists secondary and post-secondary educational institutions and vocational schools to establish and maintain student volunteer activities for low-income communities.

Special Volunteer Programs.—These programs stimulate and encourage innovative approaches to the application of volunteer resources to help meet human service needs in low-income communities. Primary mechanisms include demonstration grants to support the development of promising community-based volunteer strategies, and training and technical assistance initiatives designed to build organizational capacity and facilitate replication of effective models.

Older American volunteer programs.—These programs provide opportunities for people aged 60 and over, including those who are low-income, to volunteer their services to the community in many socially useful activities including working with the emotionally disturbed, the mentally retarded, and physically disabled, as well as the isolated and infirm elderly. In 1994, approximately 23,650 Foster Grandparent volunteers will serve about 78,200 children. Emphasis will be on abused and neglected children, boarder babies, children with AIDS, youth with drug/alcohol-related problems, teenage parents, eligible Head Start children, and the learning disabled. The Retired Senior Volunteer program will support about 439,500 part-time volunteers providing service in areas such as literacy, drug abuse prevention, health, nutrition, education, and crime prevention, plus addressing the problems of "at-risk" persons and refugees. Approximately 12,500 volunteers in the Senior Companion program will provide long-term care services such as companionship, respite care, and household management assistance to about 31,250 frail and elderly Americans.

Office of the Inspector General.—The Office of the Inspector General provides an independent assessment of agency operations, primarily through audits and investigations, with the goal of preventing fraud, waste, and abuse.

Program support.—Costs of program direction and administration are financed by this activity.

The Conference assists the President, the Congress, Federal departments, and agencies in improving administrative procedure. It conducts studies of the efficiency, adequacy, and fairness of the procedures that the agencies and departments use to determine the rights, privileges, and obligations of private persons. The Conference issues formal recommendations for improvements and then encourages their implementation.

In addition to its research activities, the Conference also arranges for the interchange among administrative agencies of information useful in improving administrative procedure and, on an ongoing basis, furnishes assistance and advice on matters of administrative procedure to the agencies, the Congress, and others. It also publishes a number of administrative law sourcebooks and deskbooks used by attorneys throughout federal agencies saving redundant publication costs.

The Conference receives funds from other Federal agencies for special projects carried out by the Conference pursuant to agreements with these agencies. In past fiscal years, USIA funding supported Rule of Law initiatives in Eastern Europe. USIA or the State Department may support similar activities by the Conference in 1994.

The Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations (ACIR) is a 26-member independent, bipartisan body. The Commission and its staff examine Federal, State and local trends, events, and programs that affect intergovernmental relations. On request, proposed legislation and executive actions are reviewed to determine their overall effect on the Federal system. The Commission also identifies emerging problems of Federal-State-local relations and assists States and localities in anticipating and meeting problems caused by various intergovernmental overlaps and conflicts, and makes recommendations concerning the workings and structural arrangements of governmental units and allocation of responsibilities and revenues among the various levels of government. The recommendations and published reports growing out of the Commission's work are submitted to the executive and legislative branches of Federal, State, and local governments for appropriate action.
