The 156 National Forests, 20 National Grasslands, and 9 land utilization projects located in 44 States, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands are managed under multiple use and sustained yield principles. The natural resources of timber, minerals, range, wildlife, outdoor recreation, watershed, and soil are utilized in a planned combination that will best meet the needs of the Nation, without impairing productivity of the land or damaging the environment. These management and utilization principles are recognized in the Multiple-Use Sustained-Yield Act of 1960 (16 U.S.C. 528–531). The budget request does not make a specific assumption about the 1994 timber sales program volume at this time. Decisions on that sales volume will be made subsequent to the scheduled Forest Conference. Reallocations of the request stemming from those decisions may be submitted to Congress later.

Land and resource protection.—Provides for the protection and/or maintenance of National Forest System users, resources, lands and facilities, including roads and trails.

Renewable resource management and utilization.—Provides for the management and utilization of the timber, mineral, range, recreation, wildlife, fisheries, watershed, and soil resources on National Forest System lands.

General administration.—This activity provides line managerial and administrative support to programs financed from National forest system, Construction, Forest research, State and private forestry, Forest Service fire protection, Emergency Forest Service firefighting fund and Land acquisition appropriations.

Construction of facilities—

Recreation facilities.—Provides facilities necessary to safely meet recreation demand while protecting environmental values and other resource uses of the National Forests.

Other facilities.—Provides for construction and acquisition of fire, administrative, and other improvements and related facilities necessary to carry out National Forest and State and private forestry programs. Includes fire lookouts, offices, dwellings and barracks for employee housing, service, and storage buildings, insectories, tree nursery buildings, dams, and other forest resource management projects. Efforts to make buildings more energy efficient (retrofit) will be continued.

Research construction.—Provides for construction, alteration, and improvement of research laboratories and related facilities, and for procurement and installation of necessary initial equipment needed to put the facility into operating condition. Efforts to make research facilities more energy efficient (retrofit) will be continued.

Road and trail construction—

Road and trail construction.—Roads and trails are essential to the protection and management of the National Forest System, as well as providing access to National Forest System areas for recreation and utilization of their resources. Of the revenues received annually from National Forest activities, 10 percent is being transferred to the General Fund with a comparable amount appropriated to the construction program for road and trail construction activities.

Timber purchaser construction.—Roads may be constructed and/or reconstructed by a timber purchaser who in turn receives credit against timber value as a reimbursement. These roads are those required within a timber sale area specifically for the removal of the timber, but which will remain on the National Forest development road system for resource management purposes after the timber sale contract is completed. Research is conducted and disseminated through eight regional forest experiment stations and the Forest Products Laboratory, and includes both in-house and extramural programs.

Forest management research.—Research is conducted to develop improved silvicultural alternatives and management guidelines to increase the productivity and multiple-use benefits of forest lands, maximize tree growth and quality, and maintain land productivity.

Forest products and harvesting research.—Research is conducted to provide technology to harvest and utilize timber more efficiently and in ways that are environmentally acceptable, to improve the performance of wood products, and to expand opportunities for wood products exports.

Forest protection research.—Research is conducted to understand the impact of forest fires, atmospheric factors, insects, and diseases on forest and range ecosystems; to improve methods for preventing, predicting, controlling, and reducing the effects of wildfire, insects, and diseases, and for using fire for resource management; and to acquire basic knowledge to monitor and predict atmospheric effects on forests.

Resource analysis research.—Research is conducted to provide inventory information on forest resources; to determine the effects of economic and institutional forces on forest product markets and forest management strategies; and to improve methods of managing outdoor recreation and wilderness.

Forest environment research.—Research is conducted to provide knowledge needed to manage forests and range nontimber resources; including wildlife and fish habitats, watersheds, and forage.

For 1994, forest research will focus on basic research thus allowing the private sector to concentrate on developmental and applied research.

The Working Capital Fund is a self-sustaining revolving fund that provides services to National Forests, to research experiment stations, to other Federal agencies when necessary, to State and private agencies as provided by law, and to persons who cooperate with the Forest Service in fire control and other authorized programs.

The forestry related supply and support services include:

Equipment Services.—The fund owns, operates, maintains, replaces, and repairs common use motor driven and similar equipment. This equipment is rented to administrative units, that is, National Forests, research experiment stations, and other units, and, in some cases, to other agencies, at rates which recover the cost of operation, repair and maintenance, management, and depreciation. The rates also include an increment which provides additional cash which, when added to depreciation earnings and the residual value of equipment, provides sufficient funds to replace the equipment.

Aircraft Services.—The fund operates, maintains, and repairs Forest Service owned aircraft used in fire surveillance and suppression and in other Forest Service programs. The aircraft are rented to National Forests, research experiment stations, and in some cases to other agencies, at rates which recover the cost of depreciation, operation, maintenance, repair, and improvements in the airworthiness of the aircraft. Aircraft replacement costs are financed from either appropriated funds or the Forest Service Working Capital Fund, or a combination of both.

Supply Services.—The fund operates the following common services:

This appropriation provides agency-wide audit and investigative functions to identify and recommend corrections for management and administrative deficiencies that create conditions for existing or potential instances of fraud, waste, and mismanagement. The audit function provides internal audit, contract audit, and inspections services. Contract audits provide professional advice to agency contracting officials on accounting and financial matters relative to negotiation, award, administration, repricing, and settlement of contracts. Internal audits review and evaluate all facets of agency operations. Inspections services provide detailed technical evaluations of agency operations. The investigative function provides for the detection and investigation of improper and illegal activities involving programs, personnel, and operations. Increases are proposed to perform financial statement audits as required by the Chief Financial Officer's Act of 1990.

The programs of the Economic Development Administration (EDA) provide grants for public works and development facilities, other financial assistance, and the planning and coordination needed to alleviate conditions of substantial and persistent unemployment and underemployment in economically distressed areas and regions. In 1994, EDA will continue to encourage development that maximizes the utilization of the Nation's manpower and capital, protects the environment, and alleviates the adverse impact caused by technological changes, structural decline, economic dislocation, and natural disasters.

Within the areas served, EDA strives to meet its program objectives through the use of a broad range of activities.

Planning grants.—Support the design and implementation of effective economic development policies and programs by local organizations.

Technical assistance grants.—Provide for local feasibility and industry studies, natural resource development and export promotion. At the national level, provide for studies of topical issues such as technology transfer and business financing. In addition, provide funding for a network of university centers that assist public bodies, nonprofit organizations and businesses to plan and implement activities designed to generate jobs and income in distressed areas.

Development grants.—Provide for infrastructure projects that foster the establishment or expansion of industrial and commercial businesses providing long-term employment to the unemployed and underemployed residents of communities experiencing high unemployment, low per-capita income, and outmigration.

Economic adjustment grants.—Provide a package of assistance tools to help communities counteract either a gradual erosion or a sudden dislocation of their local economic structure.

Research, evaluation and demonstration.—Funds are used to support studies of national and regional economic and industrial trends that will increase knowledge about the causes of economic distress and approaches to alleviating such problems.

Trade adjustment assistance.—In 1994, this program is proposed for termination.

Current surveys and statistics.—

Current economic statistics.—The business statistics program provides current information on sales and related measures of retail and wholesale trade and selected service industries. The 1994 initiative for business statistics will improve and expand service statistics by improving the measurement of services purchased by industry, expanding corporate financial data, and extending the coverage of the Service Annual Survey to include industries previously included only in the quinquennial Census of Service Industries.

Construction statistics reports are provided on significant construction activity such as housing permits and starts, value of new construction, residential alterations and repairs, and quarterly price indexes for new single-family houses. The 1994 initiative will improve coverage of nonresidential additions and alterations; and will improve the quality of industrial plant construction data. The initiative will also allow the development of new methodologies to measure construction price changes.

Manufacturing statistics survey key industrial commodities and manufacturing activity, providing current statistics on the quantity and value of industrial output. The Census Bureau will reduce from monthly to quarterly the frequency of three Census reports relating to cotton fiber and soybean, cotton, and other fats and oils—M22P, M20J, and M20K reports. General economic statistics provide a Standard Statistical Establishment List (SSEL) of all U.S. business firms and their establishments, uniform classification data, annual county business data, participation in the development and operation of the National Trade Data Bank, and corporate financial data. The 1994 initiative will provide annual statistics on minority- and women-owned businesses, and is designed to augment the data currently collected every five years as a part of the Economic Censuses. The extended use of administrative records, coupled with a mail survey for partnerships and corporations, will produce more frequent and timely information on this growing segment of the economy.

Foreign trade statistics provide for publication of monthly, cumulative, and annual reports on the quantity, shipping weight, and dollar value of imports and exports, by mode of transportation, detailed commodity category, customs districts, and country of origin or destination. The Census Bureau will improve commodity classifications for comparability and other activities in support of the Trade Act of 1974.

Government statistics reports are published annually regarding the revenue, expenditures, indebtedness and debt transactions, financial assets, employment, and payrolls of State and local governments. The Census Bureau provides quarterly information on State and local tax revenue on the national level by type of tax and governmental level, and provides information on financial assistance programs of the Federal government. The 1994 initiative consolidates the funding for the Federal Audit Clearinghouse, which is operated by the Census Bureau as the Executive Agent for the Office of Management and Budget, and provides for the collection, review, and analysis of audit reports of local governments and nonprofit organizations.

Current demographic statistics.—Household surveys provide information on the number, geographic distribution, and the social and economic characteristics of the population.

Population and housing analyses provide current demographic reports on the geographic distribution and on the demographic, social, and economic characteristics of the population, as well as current estimates and future projections of the population of the United States, and special analyses of demographic, social and economic trends. International statistics provide estimates of population, labor force, and economic activity, including spatial distribution, and analyses concerning aspects of demographic policies, economic policies, and trends for various countries. The Census Bureau compiles housing statistics on the Nation's housing inventory and provides national and regional estimates of housing vacancy rates.

Survey development and data services.—The Statistical Abstract that the Census Bureau prepares annually summarizes Government and private statistics of the industrial, social, political, and economic activities of the United States. The Bureau conducts general research on survey methods and techniques to find ways of improving the efficiency, accuracy, and timeliness of statistical programs. Data systems development provides advanced data capture, data processing, and information retrieval technology to meet Census Bureau program requirements.

Reimbursable program.—The Bureau of the Census undertakes work for specific individuals, groups or organizations, State and local governments, and other Federal agencies when it is more appropriate or efficient to have the work performed by the Bureau. Significant work includes collection of labor force and consumer expenditure data for the Bureau of Labor Statistics, national education and health program data for the Department of Education and the Department of Health and Human Services, and annual housing data for the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

This appropriation funds legislatively mandated censuses of economic and demographic areas once or twice each decade and other authorized periodic activities.

Economic statistics programs.—

Economic censuses.—The economic censuses provide data on manufactures, mineral industries, retail and wholesale trade and service industries, construction, and transportation. The censuses are taken every fifth year, covering calendar years ending in two and seven. 1994 is the fifth year in the six-year cycle of the 1992 Economic Censuses. This year marks the end of the major data collection and data capture activities, and most activity is directed towards analytical review and the initial release of more than 700 reports.

Census of governments.—This census collects State and local government data on taxes, tax valuations, governmental receipts, expenditures, indebtedness, and number of employees. This census is taken every fifth year for calendar years ending in two and seven. 1994 marks the completion of data processing and tabulation for the 1992 Census of Governments.

Census of agriculture.—This census covers the agricultural sector of the economy.

1994 is the fifth year in the six-year funding cycle for the 1992 Census of Agriculture. FY 1994 concentrates primarily on the tabulation and review of the consolidated data, and release of the Advance Reports for all 3,000 counties, States, and the United States.

Demographic statistics programs.—

Intercensal demographic estimates.—This program provides updated population estimates for general purpose governmental units for use in the equitable allocation of funds by various Federal programs and for other purposes.

1990 Decennial census.—FY 1993 is the last year of funding for the 1990 decennial census.

Decennial Census.—Planning for the 2000 Decennial Census continues as a high priority in 1994. Social, demographic, and economic changes, such as shifts in the composition of the Nation's labor force, changing living arrangements, and new technology will necessarily call for changes in the conduct of the next census. In FY 1994, Census will focus on refining decennial census features that will be tested in 1995. This effort will identify what changes are needed to adapt the Census taking process to the needs and character of our Nation's society in 2000.

The 1994 increase will provide for the design and development of automated systems required to conduct the test census operations, including data collection systems. FY 1994 is the first year of the cycle for operational preparation for the decennial census. The focus of these activities is the preparatory work required for the census regardless of the design.

Sample redesign.—This program provides for revisions to the statistical samples used for monthly, quarterly and annual household surveys.

Geographic support.—This activity provides the geographic products and services needed to correctly assign all houses, farms, and businesses to a census block and to determine which blocks belong in each of the numerous governmental units and statistical areas used to report the results of each census and sample survey. This is done using the Topologically Integrated Geographic Encoding and Referencing (TIGER) System. The FY 1994 program provides for updating the boundaries of all governments that had changes since January 1, 1992, creating a permanent file of residential addresses linked to the TIGER System (the Master Address File) in cooperation with the U.S. Postal Service as well as State and local governments, updating the TIGER data base with the new streets and related information needed to accomplish the geographic assignment and classification tasks, and developing software to perform these tasks that is portable among all standard computers.

Data processing systems.—This program provides the resources necessary to improve the data processing installation of the Bureau of the Census. This will provide for equipment required for the new Bowie Computer Center. This equipment includes uninterruptible power supplies, emergency generators, and power distribution units.

Economic analysis.—The objective of this activity is to provide a clear picture of the state of the economy through the preparation, development, and interpretation of the economic accounts of the United States. The Economic Statistics Initiative will make fundamental improvements in the quality of economic statistics. The principal programs of the Bureau of Economic Analysis (BEA) are:

National economic accounts.—The national accounts, summarized by the gross domestic product (GDP), provide a comprehensive, detailed view of the U.S. economy. In 1994, increases are provided to invest in improving the quality of the GDP estimates and to modernize the U.S. national economic accounts and increase their international comparability in support of the Economic Statistics Initiative's goal of strengthening the Nation's statistical infrastructure.

International economic accounts.—The balance of payments accounts provide a comprehensive, detailed view of economic transactions between the United States and foreign countries. Work on international investment consists of the preparation, development, and analysis of estimates of U.S. direct investment abroad and foreign direct investment in the United States. In 1994, Economic Statistics Initiative increases are provided to upgrade the international accounts to better track increasingly complex and interrelated international markets for goods, services, and capital.

Regional economic accounts.—Regional economic measurement consists of the preparation, development and analysis of gross State product and of total and per capita personal income by region, State, metropolitan area, and county. Regional economic analysis includes the preparation of regional impact analyses and economic projections for States and local areas.

Analysis of economic trends.—This work includes a system of leading, coincident, and lagging business cycle indicators and analyses of the economic situation.

Develop and acquire source data.—This work consists of upgrading the economic accounts by the development and acquisition of new and improved source data, as called for in the Economic Statistics Initiative. The funds would be used to address high priority quality issues—accuracy, reliability, and timeliness—and buttress the integrating role within the statistical system played by BEA's economic accounts.

Bureau of Economic Analysis (BEA) relocation.—BEA's relocation will be completed this fiscal year.

Policy support.—ESA headquarters supports the Secretary, Under Secretary for Economic Affairs, and other Government officials in interpreting the state of the economy, and on matters relating to economic policy.

Reimbursable.—ESA provides economic and statistical data and analyses on a reimbursable and advance payment basis to other Federal agencies, individuals, and firms requesting such information. Funds received for these services cover the cost of performing this work.

The activities of the International Trade Administration in the Department of Commerce are intended to develop the export potential of U.S. firms in a manner consistent with national security and foreign and economic policy and to promote an improved trade posture for U.S. industry.

Trade development.—The trade development program assesses the competitiveness of various U.S. industries; performs trade and investment analyses in support of industry programs and trade policy; and conducts export promotion programs directed toward industry sectors. In 1994, Trade Development will continue the Market Development Cooperator Program. In 1994, an increase is requested that will enable Trade Development to fund at least three Consortia of American Businesses offices in the Newly Independent States.

International economic policy.—This program develops regional and multilateral economic policies; provides marketing services directly and through the Foreign Commercial Service which assist U.S. businesses in expanding exports; identifies long range trade and investment problems and develops remedial strategies. The Department will continue to provide policy support to the U.S. Trade Representative on issues related to the North American Free Trade Agreement. In 1994, an increase is requested to aid in building American market share and aid the transition to market democracy in the Newly Independent States.

Import Administration.—Import Administration investigates antidumping and countervailing duty cases to ensure compliance with applicable U.S. statutes and administers certain other statutory programs relating to imports and foreign trade zones.

U.S. and foreign commercial service.—The U.S. and foreign commercial service counsels U.S. businesses on exporting through 47 District Offices in the United States and overseas offices in 67 countries. The program's goals are to increase the number of U.S. firms that export and the number of foreign markets to which they export; to provide export market information; to promote and facilitate participation of U.S. firms in trade shows; and to encourage and sponsor additional involvement by private, State and local organizations. Furthermore, in 1994, ITA will continue its counseling services to U.S. businesses through its automated Commercial Information System (CIMS) that will provide customized and proactive export assistance to U.S. businesses. An increase of $10,000,000 is requested to restore overseas purchasing power erosion and to fill authorized but unfunded positions in the foreign field.

Reimbursable program.—This account includes receipts for services rendered to other Federal agencies and receipts received on a cost recovery basis from private entities for trade events and export information services.

The activities of the Bureau of Export Administration are designed to enforce U.S. export trade laws consistent with national security, foreign policy, and short supply objectives. The program strives to achieve a balance between the interests of U.S. exporters, the U.S. economy and U.S. national security requirements. In 1994, a decrease in the budget request is possible due to a decline in workload.

Management and policy coordination.—The management and policy coordination program controls the development, analysis, coordination, and consolidation of policy initiatives and responses within the Bureau of Export Administration.

Export administration.—The export administration program assures that export activity is consistent with national security and foreign policy requirements.

Export enforcement.—The export enforcement program detects and prevents the illegal distribution of controlled U.S. goods and technical data in violation of the export administration provisions of the U.S. Code. Responsibilities also include enforcement of prohibitions against participating in unsanctioned boycotts against countries friendly to the United States. Resources are requested to increase Commerce's enforcement of the antiboycott compliance provisions of the Export Administration Act.

Industrial resource administration.—The industrial resource administration program ensures the availability of industrial resources for national defense under the authority of the Defense Production Act.

The Minority Business Development Agency (MBDA) has the lead role in the Federal Government of coordinating all minority business development programs. The mission of the Agency is critical to the national economy. The Agency was created to promote private and public sector investment in the development of competitive minority businesses in this country. In 1994, there will be an increased effort to strengthen the Enterprise Development programs to meet the challenges of Minority-owned businesses.

Enterprise Development.—This activity provides management and technical assistance to minority Americans and firms seeking to establish or expand their businesses through 100 Minority Business Development Centers (MBDCs) located throughout the country. The services which these centers provide are business planning; marketing to help sell the firms' products and services; financial planning to assure adequate financing for the business ventures; loan and business packaging to acquire capital to finance the business activities; bid and proposal estimating and preparation, especially for construction projects; and management counseling to operate personnel, accounting and inventory supplies; plus a variety of other services. Increases are requested to fund Minority Enterprise Growth Assistance (MEGA) Centers to upgrade the level of services in support of job creation.

Resource Development.—This activity provides for the indirect business assistance programs conducted by MBDA. These programs focus on increasing minority business access to capital, management and market resources; expanding business information and business services through trade associations; promoting and supporting the mobilization of resources of Federal agencies and State and local governments at the local level; and assisting minorities in entering new and growing markets.

Advocacy, Research, and Information.—Within this activity, MBDA provides advocacy efforts, a research program, and information systems for formulating policy decisions and for reducing information barriers to improve the participation rate of minority-owned businesses in the U.S. economy.

National Ocean Service.—These programs provide scientific, technical, and management expertise to (1) promote safe and efficient marine and air navigation; (2) assess the health of coastal and marine resources; (3) monitor and predict the coastal ocean and global environments; and (4) protect and manage the Nation's coastal resources. An increase is proposed to maintain traditional geodetic activities and to enhance support for the National Water Level Measurement System, essential for marine navigation and storm surge warnings.

National Marine Fisheries Service.—These programs provide for the management and conservation of the Nation's living marine resources and their environment, including marine mammals and endangered species. An increase is proposed to maintain research facilities and staffing necessary to implement statutory requirements.

Oceanic and Atmospheric Research.—These programs provide: the understanding and technique development necessary to improve NOAA services (weather warnings and forecasts, solar-terrestrial services, climate predictions, and marine services); and the understanding of environmental systems necessary for national policy formulation (e.g., long term climate change, acid rain and ozone issues) and the enhanced use of ocean resources (e.g., fisheries, and water quality). An increase is proposed to improve measurements and research on climate, air quality, and atmospheric and marine processes, and to enhance atmospheric prediction and observation technologies and space weather observations.

National Weather Service.—These programs provide timely and accurate meteorologic, hydrologic, and oceanographic warnings, forecasts, and planning information to ensure the safety of the population, mitigate property losses, and improve the economic efficiency of the Nation. Funding is proposed for continued operations of the weather forecast and Weather Service offices, the river forecast centers, and the National centers.

National Environmental Satellite, Data, and Information Service.—These programs provide for the: operation of environmental polar-orbiting and geostationary satellites; and global environmental data and information products and services to users in commerce, industry, agriculture, science and engineering, the general public and Federal, State and local agencies. An increase is proposed to maintain the current Program support.—These programs provide for overall NOAA management, NOAA's share of the Regional Administrative Support Centers, and the operational and logistics support of ships, marine centers, and aircraft to support NOAA missions.

Prior to the enactment of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 a portion of Office operating costs were recovered through user fee revenues. This Act directed a significant increase in user fees to the point where the Office was nearly fully fee funded in 1991 and 1992. PTO is fully fee funded in 1993 and will be in 1994. The Office's 1992 authorization act directed an increase in fee revenues effective in December 1991. Legislation to authorize PTO programs for 1994 will be proposed.

Fee collections were $427.9 million in 1992 and are estimated to be $486.0 million in 1993 and $519.4 million in 1994.

The 1992 unobligated balance brought forward is $13.5 million, of which $3.9 million is reserved for trademark programs. Remaining funds will be utilized in 1993 for procurement actions delayed from 1992 and for program requirements resulting from higher workloads.

An Information Technology Plan provides for the automation of the majority of the functions and operations of the Office in the 1990's. The 1994 funds provide for the continued implementation of the Automated Patent and the Automated Trademark Systems. Automation resources are distributed among the four activities of the Office.

Patent process.—Applications are examined to determine inventor entitlements to a patent for the claimed invention. Patent application examination also includes quasi-judicial review in appeal and interference proceedings, and the publication of issued patents.

The 1994 increases support programs (1) to maintain reduced patent application pendency time while maintaining the quality of issuing patents, (2) to manage increasing workloads especially in emerging technologies and (3) to implement the Patent Application Management (PAM) module of the Automated Patent System.

Key patent application workload and performance data are:

Trademark process.—This activity provides for the examination of applications to determine whether the statutory criteria for the Federal registration of the trademark or service mark have been met. When the criteria are met, a registration is printed and issued to the applicant. Examination also includes inter partes proceedings involving oppositions, cancellations, and interferences. The 1994 funding allows for reduced pendencies in trademark examination and anticipates a continued increase in the receipt of applications. The PTO will propose legislation to increase the trademark application fee in order to provide sufficient resources to address anticipated workloads. There is also an increase for office automation capabilities and program management.

Information dissemination.—Materials and services which assist in the examination of patent and trademark applications and in the transfer of technological information are provided in this activity. Specific materials and services include art documents; maintenance of a scientific library and public search rooms; preparation of copies of patents, trademark registrations, and official documents; assignment of patents and trademark rights; and administration of printing.

The 1994 increases provide funds for the processing of increased volumes of work; to expand user access to products and services; to maintain paper search files; to enhance classification services; and to expand the availability of search tools to patent examiners.

Executive direction and administration.—Management and administration of the Office functions are supported in this activity. Funds in 1994 will provide for the executive leadership of the Office; for the provision of legal services, including litigation and the registration of patent attorneys and agents; for the development and implementation of intellectual property policies and proposals in the U.S. and abroad; for the provision of administrative, personnel, financial, and planning services throughout the Office; for the implementation of the Office's Information Technology Plan; and for the acquisition and management of leased space.

The Technology Administration coordinates the Department's technology activities with the goal of enhancing U.S. competitiveness.

The offices of the Under Secretary for Technology and the Assistant Secretary for Technology Policy provide executive direction, policy guidance, and management oversight for the Technology Administration, the National Institute of Standards and Technology, and the National Technical Information Service. Policy guidance and executive direction are provided for the following activities: identifying means of eliminating barriers to technology commercialization and promoting technology financing and technology transfer; monitoring and reporting on commercialization of federally funded technology; reviewing international science and technology agreements; monitoring and disseminating foreign science and technology information, particularly through the Japan Technology Program where up to 100 U.S. manufacturing engineers will spend a year working in and obtaining technical experience in a technologically advanced Japanese manufacturing enterprise; managing the Clearinghouse on State and Local Competitiveness Initiatives, an important technology information dissemination program; sponsoring the President's National Medal of Technology, Award Program; and performing other, relevant policy-related technology assessments and supporting special projects. Through the National Institute of Standards and Technology, the Under Secretary administers the Malcolm Baldrige Quality Award Program and programs to facilitate national voluntary conversion to the metric system. In addition, the Under Secretary participates extensively on interagency commissions, such as the FCCSET and the Industrial Technology Advisory Board, which address technology issues to enhance U.S. industry competitiveness in the international arena.

The National Institute of Standards and Technology (NIST) is responsible for the measurement foundation which supports U.S. industry, government, and scientific establishments. NIST's intramural research program is funded by the Scientific and technical research and services appropriation.

Measurement and engineering research and services.—

Electronics and electrical engineering.—This includes research efforts to support the fundamental electronic technologies of semiconductors, magnetics, and superconductors; communications technologies, such as fiber optics and microwaves; electrical power systems; and electronic measurement instrumentation.

Manufacturing engineering.—This encompasses research in high precision dimensional measurement and precision engineering; robotics and intelligent machines; manufacturing data description, data administration, and information processing; and advanced sensors for manufacturing processes.

Chemical science and technology.—This covers fundamental investigations of measurement-based phenomena related to the composition and behavior of chemical and biochemical systems. This research includes developing and improving measurement capability and quantitative understanding of the underlying physical principles of measurement science.

Physics.—This includes investigation of the structure and dynamics of atoms and molecules and establishment of measurement methods and standards for infra-red, visible, ultra-violet, x-ray, gamma-ray, electron, and neutron radiation.

Materials science and engineering.—This covers research in materials characterization, nondestructive evaluation, metallurgy, polymers, and ceramics and addresses the measurement and standards issues crucial to exploiting the potential technological advantages of advanced materials.

Building and fire research.—This includes research and development of technologies to predict, measure, and test the performance of construction materials, components, systems, and practices, and to investigate the scientific principles that govern the phenomena of fire and the fire properties of materials.

Computer systems.—This covers support for the development of national and international voluntary standards and conformance tests for computers and telecommunication systems, as well as research and technical support to Federal agencies and industry in the effective use of computers and related systems.

Applied mathematics and scientific computing.—Efforts in this area ensure that the best and most appropriate techniques in mathematical modeling, statistics, numerical analysis, and scientific computing are made available to and used by NIST.

Technology assistance.—This area provides a central source of information and leadership for U.S. industry regarding national and international standardization activities and offers industry central access to Standard Refer-

The Manufacturing Extension Partnership provides seed money to support the transfer of new and innovative technology to small and medium size businesses. The Advanced Technology Program provides matching grants to industry-led efforts to support development of generic precompetitive technologies. The Quality Program extends U.S. competitiveness through quality technology development, information transfer and administration of the Malcolm Baldrige National Quality Award.

The National Telecommunications and Information Administration (NTIA) is the principal executive branch adviser to the President on domestic and international communications policy. Additionally, it manages the Federal Government's use of the radio frequency spectrum and performs extensive research in telecommunications sciences.

Domestic and international policies.—

Domestic policies.—In 1994, NTIA will continue to develop and advocate policies to improve and expand domestic telecommunications services and markets. NTIA will place special emphasis on emerging technologies, including advanced video and radio applications, and will develop and advocate policies in the common carrier and mass media fields to offer increased consumer choices. Particularly, NTIA will conduct policy and technical research which will assist the Federal Communications Commission in developing effective regulations and standards.

International policies.—In 1994, NTIA will continue to develop and advocate policies for the advancement of U.S. interests in the international telecommunications regulatory and policy areas. NTIA will place emphasis on promoting U.S. Government positions at international radio conferences; aiding in the enhancement of telecommunications infrastructures in developing countries; and furthering U.S. objectives to liberalize telecommunication regulations and laws worldwide. In coordination with the Department of State, the agency will continue to discharge the Presidential responsibility for oversight of the Communications Satellite Corporation (COMSAT) in its role as the U.S. Signatory to INTELSAT.

Spectrum management.—

Spectrum plans and policies.—In 1994, NTIA will continue to manage the government's spectrum with the advice of the Federal agencies; resolve spectrum management problems among the Federal agencies; conduct long-range strategic Federal and private sector spectrum planning in coordination with the FCC; prepare for, participate in, and implement the results of international, regional, and national conferences addressing spectrum allocation and utilization. NTIA will also maintain the openness program by which the private sector can obtain information on the Federal government's use of the spectrum, comment on spectrum sharing issues and provide information on new innovative radiocommunications developments.

Spectrum management, analysis and operations.—In 1994, NTIA will continue to authorize frequency assignments, review and certify spectrum for proposed Federal radio communications systems, conduct frequency band studies and operate the necessary automated data facilities to support the above.

Telecommunication sciences research.—

Spectrum research and analysis.—In 1994, NTIA will continue to conduct applied research and analysis as a basis for developing spectrum use concepts and models that lead to more efficient use of the radio spectrum, and electromagnetic wave and propagation models that lead to improvement in radio systems performance.

The public telecommunications facilities program awards grants to noncommercial entities for the planning and construction of telecommunications facilities throughout the U.S. and its territories. PTFP has three major responsibilities: (1) to extend public telecommunications services to as much of the population as possible; (2) to improve the facilities at public broadcasting stations; (3) to increase public telecommunications services and facilities available to, operated by, and owned by minorities and women. Funding from PTFP also supports the Pan-Pacific Educational and Cultural Experiments by Satellite [PEACESAT] program which provides educational, medical and cultural telecommunications services to the Pacific island nations.

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE—MILITARY

MILITARY PERSONNEL

ACTIVE FORCES

These appropriations finance the personnel costs of the active duty forces of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force. Changes in financial requirements are primarily related to military personnel strengths. In addition, these appropriations finance the future retirement benefits of the current active forces. While most of the entitlements financed by these appropriations are set by statute, the estimates reflect continuing efforts to improve management including implementation of audit recommendations, improved management of military travel, and prudent use of bonus programs, and other pay programs.

The numbers of active duty military personnel provided for are shown in the following table. Included in the 1992 actual yearend numbers are 954 National Guard and Reserve Personnel brought onto active duty pursuant to sections 672 and 673, U.S.C. 10:

The Reserve Officers' Training Corps program provides training for reserve and regular officer candidates who have enrolled in the course while attending a college at which an ROTC unit has been established. College graduates who satisfactorily complete the advanced course of the program are commissioned and may be ordered to active duty for a minimum of 3 years.

The Reserve Officers' Training Corps Vitalization Act of 1964, as amended, authorizes a limited number of scholarships for ROTC students on a competitive basis. Successful candidates for the scholarships generally serve a minimum period of 4 years on active duty upon graduation and appointment as a commissioned officer. A number of scholarship recipients will fulfill their entire obligation in the Reserve components.

The Armed Forces health professions scholarship program provides a source of active duty commissioned officers for the various health professions.

The numbers of commissioned officers graduated from these programs are summarized below:

OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE

These appropriations finance the costs of operating and maintaining the Armed Forces, including the Reserve components and related support activities of the Department of Defense, except military personnel pay, allowances and travel costs. Included are amounts for pay of civilians, contract services for maintenance of equipment and facilities, fuel, supplies, and repair parts for weapons and equipment. Financial requirements are influenced by many factors, including the number of aircraft squadrons, Army and Marine Corps divisions, installations, military strength and deployments, rates of operational activity, and the quantity and complexity of major equipment (aircraft, ships, missiles, tanks, et cetera) in operation.

The budget activities reflected in the program by activities schedules for the military services' active and reserve components and the Defense-wide appropriations have been restructured to more closely associate program requirements along mission budgeting lines. 1992 data has been realigned accordingly for comparative purposes.

PROCUREMENT

The procurement appropriations of the Department of Defense finance the acquisition of weapons, equipment, munitions, spares, and modification of existing equipment.

Procurement continues in 1994 for the Army's ATACMS tactical missile system, Hellfire antitank missiles, Multiple Launch Rocket System launchers, UH-60 Blackhawk helicopters and improved conventional munitions. Upgrade programs are also included for the M-1 tank and Bradley Fighting Vehicle.

Modernization of our naval forces in 1994 includes continued procurement of the F/A-18 air combat fighter, T-45 trainer aircraft, and antisubmarine warfare helicopters and remanufacture and upgrade of AV-8B vertical/short takeoff and landing close air support aircraft. Procurement of Trident strategic missiles and conventional Tomahawk missiles continues. Procurement of DDG-51 guided missile destroyers continues and full funding is included for the sixth LHD-1 class amphibious assault ship.

Significant Air Force programs include procurement of AMRAAM air-to-air missiles, F-16 air combat fighters, C-17 airlift aircraft, E-8B ground surveillance aircraft, satellites, space launch vehicles, and advance procurement for the Tri-Service Standoff Attack Missile (TSSAM).

In 1994, procurement of tactical missile defense systems continues under the central management of the Strategic Defense Initiative Organization in recognition of the increased worldwide tactical ballistic missile threat.

The budget plan for each appropriation is shown as a separate table immediately following the program and financing schedules for those appropriations that are available for obligation for more than one year. In 1994, it presents, by budget activity, the value of the program requested for the life of the multiple-year appropriation, with comparable amounts in 1992 and 1993.

RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT, TEST, AND EVALUATION

Programs in this title support modernization through military research, exploratory development, fabrication of technology-demonstration devices, and development and testing of prototypes and full-scale preproduction hardware. This work is performed by industrial contractors, Government laboratories and facilities, universities and nonprofit organizations. Research and development programs are funded to cover annual needs.

The budget plan for each appropriation is shown as a separate table immediately following the program and financing schedules for that appropriation. Funds for each fiscal year are available for obligation for a two-year period beginning on the first day of that fiscal year.

The 1993 program provides for major technology and development efforts. These include the National Aerospace Plane, Balanced Technology Initiative, Defense reinvestment activities, stealth technologies, the B-2 Bomber, the Strategic Defense Initiative, Armored System Modernization Program, advanced anti-tank weapons, RAH-66 Helicopter, the F-22 Advanced Tactical Fighter, the F/A-18 E/F improved multirole fighter aircraft, the A/FX medium attack aircraft, C-17 transport aircraft, concept development for a new design, lower cost submarine and submarine technologies, the V-22 tiltrotor aircraft, the Tri-Service Standoff Attack Missile, and the High Performance Computing and Communication program. Several programs have been restructured to reflect a new approach to acquisition. The Department will continue to emphasize technology efforts that ensure that the Nation will maintain a technological advantage when compared to potential adversaries. Dual-use technologies will receive emphasis. Development and evaluation of technologies will be pursued through prototyping with further development and production based on identifiable threats and maturity of the technology.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION

The budget plan for each appropriation is shown as a separate table immediately following the program and financing schedules for those appropriations that are available for obligation for more than one year. In 1994 it presents, by budget activity, the value of the program requested for the life of the multiple-year appropriations, with comparable amounts in 1992 and 1993.

The direct military construction programs for the Armed Forces, both Active and Reserve, shown in the individual schedules of this title are summarized in the following table (in thousands of dollars):

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION PROGRAM

($ in thousands)

Active Forces	2,981,584	1,528,237	2,338,143
Reserve Forces	616,866	608,198	351,769
Interservice activities	2,921,899	2,988,417	3,209,433
Total	5,286,617	5,124,852	5,899,345

The Military Construction programs are intended to provide facilities required as a result of new weapon systems entering the inventory including naval vessels, to support chemical demilitarization and other high priority initiatives. The program continues initiatives to improve living and working conditions, to reduce operating costs, increase productivity, and conserve energy by upgrading or replacing facilities which have become functionally obsolete or can be made more efficient through relatively modest investments in improvements. Also included in this request are resources required to realign and close bases consistent with the Base Closure Acts of 1989 and 1990, and the expected land revenues which partially offset the one-time costs of closures.

FAMILY HOUSING, DEFENSE

These appropriations finance all costs associated with construction, improvements, operations, maintenance and leasing of all military family housing. The program contains initiatives to reduce operating costs and conserve energy by upgrading or replacing facilities which can be made more efficient through relatively modest investments in improvements.

The budget plan for each appropriation is shown as a separate table immediately following the program and financing schedules for those appropriations that are available for obligation for more than one year. In 1994 it presents, by budget activity, the value of the program requested for the life of the multiple-year appropriation, with comparable amounts in 1992 and 1993.

The National Defense Stockpile is planned and operated under the authority of the Strategic and Critical Materials Stockpiling Act. The purpose of the Stockpile is to decrease or preclude a dangerous and costly dependence by the United States upon foreign sources for supplies of strategic and critical materials in times of national emergency. The quantities of the materials stockpiled as required by the Stockpiling Act are to be sufficient to sustain the United States for a period of not less than three years during a national emergency situation that would necessitate a total mobilization of the economy for a sustained conventional global war of indefinite duration.

The National Defense Stockpile Transaction Fund provides for the financing of acquisition and upgrading of strategic and critical stockpile materials, and all related expenses such as transportation, development of specifications, testing, quality studies, and relocations of materials.

Trust Funds

Section 662 of the Defense Authorization Act for 1992 and 1993, Public Law 102-190, established the Voluntary Separation Incentive (VSI) Fund to help reduce and reshape military personnel levels during the force drawdown. VSI provides annual payments to selected active-duty Service members with more than six but less than 20 years of service who leave the service voluntarily. The Act provided that after January 1, 1993, all voluntary separation incentive payments shall be made from the fund. The fund is financed through: (a) actuarially-determined Government contributions from the Department of Defense personnel appropriations to cover the unfunded liability and the present value of future benefits for those separating, and (b) interest on the investments. The Act requires that the total present value costs of VSI benefit payments be deposited in the fund by September 30, 1995 when the authority to approve VSI benefits ends. The authority to make VSI payments is effective only as provided in Appropriations Acts. This authority is contained in section 9106 of the FY 1993 Defense Appropriations Act and is proposed for continuation in the Act for FY 1994.

The National Security Education Act of 1991 established a program for undergraduate scholarships, graduate fellowships, and grants to educational institutions in critical area studies, foreign languages and other international fields.

The Act will enhance the quality of U.S. educational programs in these fields and, by making it possible for more U.S.-citizen students to study abroad, develop a pool of potential U.S. Government employees with knowledge of particular cultures, languages, and governments. The program is to be carried out by the Secretary of Defense in consultation with a National Security Education Board. The Board will establish the criteria for awards.

Undergraduate scholarships. Scholarships will be awarded to permit students to study for at least one academic semester in foreign countries that are critical countries.

Graduate fellowships. Fellowships will be awarded to permit students to pursue critical languages, area studies, and other international fields.

Grants to educational institutions. Grants will be awarded to permit institutions of higher learning to establish and/or improve programs in critical foreign languages, area studies, and other international fields.

Other. The activity covers all costs of administering the program. The activity includes: costs for reimburseable personnel; program development and promotion; selection; awards; monitoring student progress; and job placement for students who have a service agreement.

Funds are requested for operation, maintenance, and related activities of the Corps of Engineers at the navigation, flood control and multiple purpose projects for which it is responsible. Work to be accomplished consists of dredging, repair, and operation of structures and other facilities, including recreation facilities, all as authorized in the various Rivers and Harbors and Flood Control Acts. Related activities include aquatic plant control, monitoring of completed coastal projects, wetlands research, dredging research, removal of sunken vessels, and the collection of domestic waterborne commerce statistics. This request also includes funds for National Emergency Preparedness as directed in Executive Order 11490.

Emphasis would be placed on the maintenance of existing structures and equipment through the major rehabilitation program. However, beginning in 1993 the new and continuing construction work recommended for the repair of hydropower structures and of structures on the inland waterway system are funded under the Construction, General appropriation. Continuing major rehabilitation projects for repairs of hydropower structures and structures on the inland waterway system initiated prior to 1993 remain in the Operation and Maintenance, General appropriation.

Five new initiatives would be undertaken: four to improve efficiency of operation and maintenance, and one to comply with legislative direction. Initiatives to improve efficiency are: (a) Coastal Inlet Research Program to reduce dredging costs and to minimize erosion on adjacent shorelines, (b) River Confluence Ice Research to reduce future maintenance costs on Corps structures such as locks and dams, river training structures and bank stabilization revetments, (c) Water Control Research Program to apply technological advances to system-wide water control, and (d) National Dam Safety Program to coordinate with the Federal Emergency Management Agency for development of Federal Guidelines for Dam Safety. A new initiative resulting from recent legislation is the Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation Act (NAGPRA) to inventory Native American and Hawaiian human remains and associated objects for public information as provided in the NAGPRA law.

Proposed legislation would expand authority to collect recreation user fees. The increase in revenues, to become effective in 1994, would allow construction, operation and maintenance of recreation facilities consistent with public demand. However, there will be no fee increase greater than $3.00 per site or activity.

Proposed legislation would also authorize the use of the Inland Waterways Trust Fund to cover up to 100 percent of the Corps of Engineers Operation and Maintenance (O&M) costs on taxed segments of the Inland Waterways (IWW) System within four years. Under this legislation fuel taxes would be increased each year, starting in Fiscal Year 1994 to reach the amount necessary in the fourth year to fund 100 percent of O&M costs on the taxed segments of the IWW. Receipts would be available for O&M subject to appropriations beginning Fiscal Year 1995.

Executive direction and management.—The Office, Chief of Engineers, and 11 division offices supervise work in 36 district offices. Under proposed legislation, up to $2 million of the $7 million transferred into the account in FY 1993 to initiate reorganization of Corps headquarters and division offices would become available during 1993 for funding a shortfall which has developed because the expected manpower savings from the planned reorganization cannot be realized.

Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors.—This advisory board was terminated in March 1993.

Coastal Engineering Research Board.—The Board provides policy guidance, reviews and plans requirements for conducting coastal engineering research and development, and recommends research project priorities.

Humphreys Engineer Center Support Activity.—This support center provides administrative services for the Office, Chief of Engineers and other separate field operating activities to include personnel, logistics, and finance and accounting.

Engineer Automation Support Activity.—This central data processing service was terminated in 1991.

Water Resources Support Center.—This support center performs studies and analyses for meeting national objectives. It develops planning techniques for comprehensive management and development of the Nation's water resources, and manages the Washington level review of all proposed water resources projects.

Maintenance and operation of dams and other improvements of navigable waters.—License fees are levied by the Department of Energy for private construction, operation and maintenance of dams, conduits, and reservoirs. License fees are also levied by the Department of Energy for benefits accruing directly as the result of headwater improvements by Federal projects. One hundred percent of these fees collected are used for maintenance and operation of Federal dams and other navigation structures, and for improvement of navigable waters (16 U.S.C. 803e).

Payments to States.—Three-fourths of the money received from lease of Federal lands acquired for flood control, navigation, and allied purposes is paid to the State in which such property is situated for public schools, roads, or other expenses of county government (33 U.S.C. 701c-3).

The Inland Waterways Trust Fund was established in accordance with the Inland Waterways Revenue Act of 1978, Public Law 95–502, and amended by the Water Resources Development Act of 1986, Public Law 99–662. Revenue is derived from taxes imposed on fuel in vessels engaged in commercial waterway transportation and is used for one half of the construction and rehabilitation costs of specified inland waterway projects. See "Construction, General" for appropriations language.

Legislation is being proposed to incrementally increase fuel taxes over the next four calendar years starting in 1994 to fund up to 100 percent of operation and maintenance costs on taxed segments of the inland waterways system by 1997. After 1998, the rate is to be indexed for inflation.

The Harbor Maintenance Trust Fund is established in accordance with the Harbor Maintenance Revenue Act of 1986 (Public Law 99-662, Title XIV, as amended). Under law, revenue is derived from: (1) receipts from a 0.125 percent ad valorem user fee imposed on commercial cargo loaded and unloaded at specified U.S. ports open to public navigation, and (2) collection of charges and tolls imposed by the Saint Lawrence Seaway Development Corporation.

The Harbor Maintenance Revenue Act also authorized expenditures from the Trust Fund to fully finance the operation and maintenance of the Corporation, to finance up to 100 percent of Corps of Engineers' harbor operation and maintenance (O&M) costs, including O&M costs associated with Great Lakes navigational projects, and to rebate the U.S. portion of tolls paid on the Seaway.

For appropriation language, see the following accounts: Army Corps of Engineers, Civil "Operation and Maintenance, General"; St. Lawrence Seaway Development Corporation "Operation and maintenance"; and Department of the Treasury "St. Lawrence Seaway toll rebate program" and "Rental Payments".

In 1990, the Coastal Wetlands Planning, Protection and Restoration Act (Public Law 101-646) authorized transfer of 18 percent of each annual appropriation from the Sport Fish Restoration Account for coastal wetlands activities; 70 percent of this amount is allocated to the Corps of Engineers for use by the Louisiana Coastal Wetlands Conservation and Restoration Task Force, chaired by the Secretary of the Army, to provide for the long-term conservation, protection, and restoration of coastal wetlands in the State of Louisiana. The Coastal Wetlands Restoration Trust Fund is established to receive these funds and finance the appropriate activities.

Concentration grants.—Funds provide additional resources for compensatory education programs to local educational agencies that have high concentrations of children from low-income families.

Capital expenses.—Funds assist local educational agencies to pay for certain additional capital costs associated with providing equitable compensatory education services to children in non-public schools.

Even start.—Funds are provided on a formula basis to States, which in turn award grants to local educational agencies to operate projects that provide educational services to children under 8 years of age and basic education to their parents. Prior to 1992, grants were awarded directly to local educational agencies.

State agency programs.—Funds enable State educational agencies to provide supplementary compensatory education services to migrant children and neglected or delinquent children in State institutions, with amounts allocated to the

State grants.—

Grants to States.—This formula grant program assists States in providing special education and related services to children with disabilities. In order to participate in the program, States must provide services to all children with disabilities ages 6 through 17. States must be providing services to all children ages 3 through 5 with disabilities in order to count 3- through 5-year olds for allocations. Children with disabilities ages 18 through 21 must also be served, except when such services would be inconsistent with State law or practice, or the order of any court. To be eligible for a grant, each State is required to submit an acceptable State plan that requires the development and use of an individualized education program for each student with a disability, the establishment of procedural safeguards for all children with disabilities and their parents, and the training of personnel for these special education programs.

Chapter 1 handicapped program.—Under chapter 1 of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965, States receive formula grants to help them provide early intervention services to children, ages birth through 2 years, and special education and related services to children, ages 3 through 21 years, who have disabilities and who are served by State agencies. A reduction, which is offset by an increase in the Grants to States program, has been proposed as part of the continuing merger of the program with programs under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act.

Preschool grants.—This formula grant program provides additional funds to States to further assist them in providing special education and related services to children with disabilities ages 3 through 5 who are counted under the Grants to States program and, at a State's discretion, to 2-year old children with disabilities who will reach age 3 during the school year. To receive awards under this program, States must serve all 3- through 5-year olds with disabilities.

Grants for infants and families.—This formula grant program assists States in: (1) developing and implementing statewide programs of early intervention services for infants and toddlers with disabilities, from birth through age 2, and their families; (2) enhancing their capacity to provide quality early intervention services; and (3) expanding and improving existing early intervention services. States may use funds to provide a free appropriate public education to children with disabilities from their third birthday to the beginning of the following school year. The statewide program must be implemented by the fourth year of a State's participation and services must be provided to all infants and toddlers with disabilities by the fifth year of a State's participation. Between 1990 and 1992, States experiencing difficulty in meeting fourth or fifth year requirements were able to request and receive extended participation for up to 2 years. All States must provide services no later than 1993. Primary funding for services is provided by other Federal, State, local, and private sources.

Special purpose funds.—

Deaf-blindness.—Awards are made to support activities to improve special education services for children with both deafness and blindness.

Serious emotional disturbance.—Projects are supported to improve special education services for children with serious emotional disturbance.

Severe disabilities.—The program supports activities to improve special education services for children with severe disabilities.

Early childhood education.—Awards support activities to expand and improve early intervention and special education services for children with disabilities from birth through age 8.

Secondary and transitional services.—Projects improve secondary school special educational services and assist youths with disabilities in moving from school to work, further education, and adult services.

Postsecondary education.—The program supports demonstration projects to assist persons with disabilities in pursuing postsecondary, vocational, technical, continuing, and adult education.

Innovation and development.—Support is provided for research and related activities to improve special education and early intervention services.

Media and captioning services.—Funds are used for a variety of media related purposes including captioning films and television for individuals with hearing impairments, and descriptive video and recording activities for individuals with visual impairments.

Technology applications.—Awards are made to advance the use of technology, media, and materials in providing special education services.

Special studies.—Studies are conducted to provide information on and improve the effectiveness of special education programs.

Personnel development.—Awards are made to improve the quality and increase the supply of personnel in the fields of special education and early intervention.

Parent training.—Awards are made to parent organizations to provide training and information to parents regarding the education of their children.

Clearinghouses.—The program supports clearinghouses to disseminate information to parents and others regarding special education, provide information on available postsecondary services, and encourage and assist individuals to seek careers in special education.

Regional resource centers.—Centers provide technical assistance to States to help them provide special education and early intervention services.

This institution provides college preparatory, undergraduate, and continuing education programs for persons who are deaf, and graduate programs related to deafness for students who are deaf and students who are hearing. The University also conducts basic and applied research and public service programs for persons who are deaf and persons who work with them.

Gallaudet operates two pre-college programs on the main campus of the University. The Kendall Demonstration Elementary School serves students who are deaf from infancy through age 15, and the Model Secondary School for the Deaf serves students who are deaf of high school age. Both schools also develop and disseminate information on effective educational techniques and strategies for teachers and professionals working with students who are deaf or hard of hearing.

In 1992, the Federal appropriation represented 67.2 percent of the University's operating budget, excluding Federal financial aid, vocational rehabilitation, and competitive grants, and 99.4 percent of the operating budgets of the related elementary and secondary schools. Funds are also requested for endowment matching grants.

Vocational education.—

Basic grants.—Formula grants provide funds to States and localities to expand and improve their programs of vocational education and promote equal opportunity in vocational education programs for historically underserved populations. Funds under the Indian program are awarded to federally recognized Indian tribes and are in addition to services provided under other provisions of the Perkins Act. Funds under the Territorial set-aside support the expansion and improvement of vocational education programs in American Samoa, Guam, the Northern Marianas, and Palau.

Community-based organizations.—Formula grants to States assist recipients of Perkins Act funds to operate vocational education programs jointly with community-based organizations.

State councils.—Formula grants support the activities of the State councils which provide advice on the State vocational education plan and evaluate State vocational education programs. Each council is composed of 13 members, 7 of whom represent the private sector.

Tech-prep education.—Formula grants to States support planning and demonstration grants to consortia of local educational agencies and postsecondary institutions to develop and operate model 4-year programs. Programs begin in high school and provide students with the mathematical, science, communications, and technological skills needed to earn a 2-year associate degree or a 2-year certificate in a specific occupational field.

Tribally controlled postsecondary vocational institutions.—Grants support the operation and improvement of tribally controlled postsecondary vocational institutions, to ensure continued and expanded educational opportunities for Indian students.

National programs.—

Research.—Funds are awarded on a competitive basis for research activities that contribute to knowledge of how to improve access to vocational education for underserved populations and how to improve vocational education nationally. Activities include a national center for research in vocational education, a national assessment of vocational education, regional curriculum coordination centers, and a program of discretionary research projects.

Demonstration programs.—Funds support vocational education demonstration projects that are designed to develop and demonstrate more effective methods of providing vocational education.

Data systems.—Funds support the operation of the National Occupational Information Coordinating Committee and the State occupational information coordinating committees.

The Smith-Hughes Act of 1917 (Public Law 64-347), as amended, provides a permanent appropriation for vocational education basic grants and national programs.

Adult education.—

State programs.—Formula grants are made to States to eliminate functional illiteracy among the Nation's adults and to assist adults in obtaining a high school diploma or its equivalent.

National programs.—Funds support discretionary activities to evaluate the effectiveness of Federal, State, and local adult education programs and provide technical assistance to States to improve program quality. Funds also support the operation of the National Institute for Literacy.

Literacy training for homeless adults.—Funds provide discretionary grants to States to support special literacy services for the homeless.

Workplace literacy partnerships.—Funds support discretionary grants for projects to provide literacy and basic skills education in the workplace.

State literacy resource centers.—Formula grants support the creation of State or regional adult literacy resource centers that coordinate literary services and expand the capacity of State and local organizations to provide literacy services.

Literacy programs for prisoners.—Funds support discretionary grants to establish, improve, and expand literacy programs for State and local prisoners.

The narrative and tables below reflect the Administration's budget and legislative proposals.

Pell Grants.—Undergraduate students establish eligibility for these grants under award and need determination rules set out in the authorizing statute and the annual appropriation act. The maximum award for FY 1994 would be $2,300, the same as for 1993. The Administration has requested a fiscal year 1993 supplemental appropriation of $2,024 million to meet fully current projections of the funding needed to support Pell Grant awards to students during the 1993–94 award year and to eliminate funding shortfalls from prior award years.

Campus-based programs. The budget and legislative program proposes major reforms of the three-campus-based programs: Work-Study, Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants (SEOG), and Perkins Loans.

Under the Work-Study program, Federal grants are awarded by formula to qualifying institutions, which develop and provide part-time jobs for eligible undergraduate and graduate students with demonstrated need. Federal grants in most cases pay 75 percent of a student's hourly earnings, with the remainder paid by the employer. Hourly earnings must not be less than the Federal minimum wage. Institutions are required to spend at least 5 percent of their Work-Study allocation to pay students working in community service jobs.

Under the SEOG program, Federal funds are awarded by formula to qualifying institutions, which use these funds at their discretion to award grants to undergraduate students, with priority for Pell Grant recipients and others with exceptional need. The Federal share of such grants may not exceed 75 percent of the total grant.

Under the Perkins Loan program, Federal capital contributions (FCC) are awarded by formula to qualifying institutions, which make long-term, low-interest loans at their discretion to eligible undergraduate and graduate students with demonstrated need from an institutional revolving fund. The revolving fund is composed of newly appropriated FCC, institutional contributions of not less than one-third of the FCC, collections on prior year loans, and Federal payments for loan cancellations granted in exchange for specified types of teaching, military or public service.

The budget and legislative program proposes to require institutions participating in the Work-Study program to use at least 10 percent of their overall allocation for the three campus-based programs to pay students employed in community service activities. This would support the President's goal of expanding the participation of college students in community service. The 10 percent allocation would help pay wages in over 133,000 community service jobs during the 1994–1995 school year.

The budget and legislative program would reduce funding from 1993 levels for the campus-based programs—eligibility for which overlaps the more strictly need-based Pell Grant and Stafford Loan programs—by $200 million in 1994, while increasing efficiency by giving participating institutions complete flexibility—outside the 10-percent community service requirement—to allocate funds among the three programs to best meet student needs. Institutional allocations for the three programs would be reduced as a proportion of each institution's allocations for the 1993–1994 school year.

Income contingent loans.—This program was repealed by the Higher Education Act Amendments of 1992. Outstanding loans will be converted to Perkins Loans.

Perkins loans—Cancellations.—Under the Perkins loan (formerly national direct student loan (NDSL)) cancellation program, institutional revolving funds are reimbursed for indebtedness cancelled as a result of a borrower engaging in certain public service occupations. Appropriations in 1992 were not needed because sufficient unobligated balances were available to fund expected cancellations in that year.

The following tables display student aid funds available, the number of aid awards, average awards, and the unduplicated count of students receiving awards, including aid under the Federal Family Education Loan Program (FFELP), formerly the Guaranteed Student Loan (GSL) program, and the Direct Loan Program under the budget and legislative program request. The tables include the effects of matching funds wherever applicable. ICL and Perkins loan amounts also reflect other available capital in institutional revolving funds, including loan collection and loan cancellation receipts. FFELP amounts reflect the capital actually loaned, not the Federal costs of those loans.

The Administration is proposing legislation to modify and expand the demonstration program with the goal of replacing the guaranteed student loan program in FY 1997. Direct loans will be originated by eligible postsecondary institutions. Loan repayments will flow through Department contractors.

As part of the President's strategy to enable more people to engage in national service occupations, the Administration's student loan program legislation will also include new approaches to flexible loan repayment. Individuals with high student loan debt will be able to work at lower paying jobs and have repayments adjusted to income. Options include graduated repayment and income contingent repayment.

Total loan volume disbursed is expected to be $514 million in 1994 and will grow to $18.4 billion in 1997 as the program is phased in.

Program operations.—Title VII, Section 702, of the Higher Education Act of 1965, as amended, authorizes such sums as may be necessary to pay obligations incurred prior to 1987 under the Higher Education Facilities Loan Program previously authorized under Title VII, Part C. Prior to 1987, this program provided direct loans at 5.5 percent interest, repayable within 50 years, to colleges, universities, and higher education building agencies for the construction, reconstruction, or renovation of academic facilities. No new loan commitments have been made since 1981, and no new commitments are authorized for 1993 and beyond.

Financing.—Loan capital for this program has been provided both through appropriations and the sale of participation certificates which are backed by pools of existing higher education facilities loans held by the Federal Government. All participation certificates held by this account were redeemed as of September 30, 1988.

Interest is payable to Treasury on the amount of appropriations paid out for loan capital and remaining outstanding, less the average undisbursed cash balance in the fund during the year. The interest rate certified by Treasury for payment from the account is 6.875 percent in 1992.

Repayments on outstanding loans, interest revenue, and investment income are used to pay operating expenses and to repay interest costs to Treasury. For 1994, operating income is expected to be sufficient to finance all expenses. No appropriation is needed. The status of defaulted loans is shown in the table below:

Program operations.—Loans in this account were made for construction and renovation of college housing facilities prior to 1987 under title IV of the Housing Act of 1950. The Higher Education Amendments of 1986 repealed title IV and gave the Secretary authority to manage outstanding college housing loans under title VII, Part F of the Higher Education Act as amended. New loans made after 1986 under Part F of the Higher Education Act amendments of 1986 were financed in the College Housing and Academic Facilities Loans Account. The Higher Education Act amendments of 1992 do not authorize new loan activity in this account.

Financing.—Loan capital for this program was provided primarily through Treasury borrowings and the sale of participation certificates which were backed by pools of college housing loans held by the Federal Government. The participation certificates sold by the Government National Mortgage Association (GNMA) and held by this account, were redeemed as of September 30, 1988. As of September 30, 1992, $593 million in loan capital is still due the Treasury at an annual interest rate of 2.75 percent.

Available resources (loan repayments, interest revenue, and other income in excess of operating expenses) will be used to redeem a portion of the agency's debt in outstanding Treasury borrowings, as is being done in 1993 and as was done in preceding years. Approximately $40 million will be repaid to Treasury in 1993 and $37 million will be repaid in 1994; $70 million was repaid in 1992.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this program account records for this program the subsidy costs associated with Family Education Loans, formerly guaranteed student loans (GSL), committed in 1992 and beyond, as well as administrative expenses of the program. Administrative expenses include discretionary expenses for salaries, expenses and overhead of employees working directly on the program. Mandatory administrative expenses such as administrative cost allowances and supplemental preclaims assistance payments and contract collection costs for loans made prior to 1993 are separately identified on a cash basis. Beginning in 1993, mandatory administrative costs are included in the GSL subsidy estimates of each year's cohort. The subsidy amounts are estimated on a net present value basis.

The Federal Family Education Loan (FFEL) program, formerly the Guaranteed Student Loan (GSL) program, is designed to promote the availability of loans from banks and other lenders to students and their parents to help meet the costs of attending participating universities, colleges, and other postsecondary institutions after taking into consideration family financial resources and student self help. This is accomplished through the provision of Federal reinsurance against borrower default as well as through substantial Federal interest subsidy payments to lenders. In general, the program is administered by State and private nonprofit guarantee agencies that serve as intermediate loan insurers, defaulted loan collectors, and providers of various services to lenders. The Government also provides substantial subsidies to these agencies. Through July 1984, the Federal Government also provided direct loan insurance and, in such cases, continues to be responsible for defaulted loan collection and providing assistance to lenders.

Four types of guaranteed loans are available: Stafford loans, which provide in-school interest subsidy; "Unsubsidized" Stafford loans, which do have smaller Federal subsidy; PLUS loans for parents; and Supplemental loans for Students (SLS), under which students also may borrow less-subsidized loans. Evidence of financial need is required for a student to receive a subsidized Stafford loan. The other three loan programs are available to any eligible borrower. All loans can be used only to meet qualified educational expenses.

The Federal Government currently pays lenders a quarterly special allowance throughout the life of each Stafford loan originated after October 1, 1992, when the 91-day Treasury bill rate plus 3.1 percentage points exceeds the Stafford student interest cap of 9 percent. The Government is also liable for up to 100 percent of costs related to borrower default, death, disability, and bankruptcy.

Under the subsidized Stafford loan component, the Federal Government pays the interest obligation of eligible borrowers while they are in school and during grace and certain deferment periods. Federal costs are partially offset by an origination fee of 5 percent of loan principal, which is charged to borrowers. Under the Higher Education Amendments of 1992, PLUS and SLS loans disbursed in FY 1993 and beyond now require a 5 percent origination fee as well. The unsubsidized Stafford program requires a 6.5% combined origination fee and insurance premium.

The borrower's interest obligation in the other programs is not paid by the Federal Government.

Student borrowers that meet certain debt level criteria and have loans from multiple sources may consolidate these loans into a single new long-term loan. The interest rate is the greater of 9 percent or the weighted average of the interest rates of the loans discharged by consolidation, rounded to the nearest whole percent.

The Federal Government pays administrative cost allowances to guarantee agencies. Funds for "administrative expenses to limitation" requested in this account support administration of the program in the Office of Postsecondary Education.

Federal receipts primarily include collections on defaulted loans and reimbursements from guarantee agencies for their default collections. Also included are Student Loan Marketing Association (Sallie Mae) repayments of loans from the Federal Financing Bank; these transactions are treated as part of the cost of the program. Sallie Mae annual payments are $30 million through 1995. A payment of $4.3 billion is due in 1996, and the remaining balance of $400 million is due in 1997.

Total loan volume disbursed under all program components under the President's program is expected to be $18.2 billion in 1994, resulting in outstanding loans at the end of 1994 of $72.5 billion.

The Administration also proposes to assess fees on States with high default schools. This will encourage improved monitoring and licensing of postsecondary institution by States. This proposed policy is referred to as State risk-sharing for excessive defaults.

The text tables that follow provide additional information and reflect the effect of proposed legislative changes. These text tables include data from the Guaranteed Student Loan (liquidating) account. They do not include comparable data in 1994 for Direct Loans. (See Federal Direct Loan Program account).

[2] Includes direct Federal collections and collections due to Federal tax refund offset. Some of these collections are displayed below as offsets to Federal administrative costs, principally for collections work by Federal contractors. These collections are net of amounts retained by guarantee agencies to cover their collection costs. This "collections retention allowance" is reflected in the section on guarantee agency administrative costs.

[3] Includes repayment of agency advances, elimination of excess agency reserves through direct payments to the Government and through reduced reinsurance payments to the agencies, and purchase of rehabilitated loans by the agencies.

[4] Agency collection costs are not directly reimbursed by the Government; instead, they are financed by retained agency collections, and are thus reflected in reduced net agency collections transmitted to the Government. The transactions are displayed here on a gross and net basis for completeness.

[5] Federal contract collection costs are payments to debt collection contractors. The payments are financed in entirety by collections.

[6] Includes scheduled default collections from wage garnishment and IRS offsets pursuant to P.L. 102-164, and estimated default collections due to the proposed extension of the repeal of the statute of limitations provisions.

Because the costs of subsidizing educational loans can vary widely within a program, it becomes valuable to collect data for homogeneous groups within cohort or risk categories. Factors that were considered in developing appropriate risk categories include default behavior of borrowers, type of educational institution attended by the borrower, and the borrower's year in school.

The Stafford programs have been divided into four risk categories: (1) 4-year college, first and second year students, (2) 4-year college, all other students, (3) students attending 2-year schools, and (4) proprietary school students. Most borrowing under the unsubsidized Stafford program is estimated to occur under categories one and two. SLS loans have been divided into two risk categories: (1) nonproprietary school students, and (2) proprietary school students. PLUS loans are not further categorized.

Loan data by risk category provides further insight into the FFELP program. The following text table depicts preliminary findings of subsidy costs based on loan program by risk category. Gross default rates (default rates excluding collections on defaulted loans) by risk category are also displayed.

Frequently used default rate measures are the gross and net cumulative default rates. The former represents cumulative defaults divided by cumulative loans that have matured (i.e., entered repayment). The latter represents cumulative defaults minus cumulative collections on defaults, divided by cumulative matured loans. These rates are the best measures of the long-term default costs of the entire portfolio and the best indicators of longer term trends in default costs. The following table displays these gross and net default rates.

END OF YEAR GUARANTEED LOAN STATUS

[In thousands of dollars]

Cumulative loans disbursed	128,946,200	145,102,870	162,871,320
Cumulative loans matured	106,612,450	120,029,120	134,413,570
Cumulative defaults	19,682,066	22,244,151	24,723,687
Cumulative collections	5,381,016	6,730,367	8,311,051
Gross default rate	18.5%	18.5%	18.4%
Net default rate	13.4%	12.9%	12.2%

Another measure represents defaults in a given year divided by the average amount of loans in repayment during that year. This annual rate is more comparable to default rates calculated by commercial lending institutions. The volatility of this rate, depending as it does on annual flows into and out of repayment, makes this a less useful indicator in assessing longer term default trends.

The Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990 separates the College Housing and Academic Facilities Loans (CHAFL) account into two distinct operating activities and budget accounts—CHAFL (Liquidating) and CHAFL Program. The loan activity associated with loan awards made in fiscal year 1992 and beyond is recorded in the program account with the corresponding loan subsidies and Federal Administration. This program supports financing for the reconstruction, renovation, and construction of undergraduate academic facilities, housing and other postsecondary educational facilities for students and faculty. The priority is on renovation and reconstruction of older academic facilities and undergraduate academic facilities that have gone without major renovation or reconstruction for an extended period. Institutions receive direct interest-subsidized loans of 5.5 percent. This financing is intended to help higher education institutions finance reconstruction and renovation activities on more favorable terms.

This account is only partially self-financing since the amount of interest paid by borrowers, 5.5 percent, is lower than the amount the Department must pay Treasury for cap-

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, the College Housing and Academic Facilities Loans account was separated into two distinct budget accounts—College Housing and Academic Facilities Loans Liquidating Account and College Housing and Academic Facilities Loans Program. The College Housing and Academic Facilities Loans Liquidating Account records all cash flows to and from the Government resulting from direct loans made to schools and colleges for construction and renovation of undergraduate academic facilities, student and faculty housing, and other educational facilities from loans obligated prior to fiscal year 1992.

This account is only partially self-financing since the amount of interest paid by borrowers, 5.5 percent, is lower than the amount the Department must pay Treasury for capital borrowed to finance the loans. The Secretary pays, on average, 8.88 percent interest on funds borrowed for liquidating account loans. To meet the required repayment of interest and principal each year to Treasury, the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990 has provided permanent appropriation authority.

The Historically Black College and University (HBCU) Capital Financing Program was authorized by the Higher Education Act Amendments of 1992 to provide HBCUs with private capital for capital projects such as repairs, renovation and construction of classrooms, libraries, laboratories, dormitories, instructional equipment, and research instrumentations. The Secretary is authorized to enter into insurance agreements with a private for-profit bonding authority to guarantee no more than $375,000,000 loan principal plus accrued unpaid interest for HBCU's taxable bonds. The bonding authority will issue the bonds and establish and maintain an escrow account in which 10 percent of each institution's principal is deposited. This amount is estimated to be sufficient to cover all potential delinquencies and defaults.

Activities supported in 1992 and 1993 include short-term training of professionals for the care and welfare of people who are blind, the National Research, Development, and Demonstration Forum, and the Gifts and Bequests Miscellaneous Fund. No new contributions are currently anticipated for 1994.

GENERAL PROVISIONS

The following sections are proposed for deletion and do not appear below:

Sec. 306 ..... The P.L. 101-517 funds were available only through FY 1993. The provision is, therefore, moot.

Sec. 307 ..... Provision was enacted to give institutions time to prepare for administration of the new student loan limits in the Higher Education Act Amendments of 1992. Adequate time has elapsed and no similar provision would be necessary in the 1994 budget.

Sec. 308 ..... This provision was enacted to allow preaccreditation-status institutions to participate in Higher Education Act programs. The provision amended the law, and was, therefore, necessary only once.

SEC. 301. Funds appropriated in this Act or subsequent Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and Related Agencies Appropriations Acts to the American Printing House for the Blind, Howard University, the National Technical Institute for the Deaf, and Gallaudet University shall be subject to financial and program audit by the Secretary of Education and the Secretary may withhold all or any portion of these appropriations if he determines that an institution has not cooperated fully in the conduct of such audits.

SEC. 302. No part of the funds contained in this title may be used to force any school or school district which is desegregated as that term is defined in title IV of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Public Law 88-352, to take any action to force the busing of students; to force on account of race, creed or color the abolishment of any school so desegregated; or to force the transfer or assignment of any student attending any elementary or secondary school so desegregated to or from a particular school over the protest of his or her parents or parent.

SEC. 303. (a) No part of the funds contained in this title shall be used to force any school or school district which is desegregated as that term is defined in title IV of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Public Law 88-352, to take any action to force the busing of students; to require the abolishment of any school so desegregated; or to force on account of race, creed or color the transfer of students to or from a particular school so desegregated as a condition precedent to obtaining Federal funds otherwise available to any State, school district or school.

(b) No funds appropriated in this Act may be used for the transportation of students or teachers (or for the purchase of equipment for such transportation) in order to overcome racial imbalance in any school or school system, or for the transportation of students or teachers (or for the purchase of equipment for such transportation) in order to carry out a plan of racial desegregation of any school or school system.

SEC. 304. None of the funds contained in this Act shall be used to require, directly or indirectly, the transportation of any student to a school other than the school which is nearest the student's home, except for a student requiring special education, to the school offering such special education, in order to comply with title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. For the purpose of this section an indirect requirement of transportation of students includes the transportation of students to carry out a plan involving the reorganization of the grade structure of schools, the pairing of schools, or the clustering of schools, or any combination of grade restructuring, pairing or clustering. The prohibition described in this section does not include the establishment of magnet schools.

SEC. 305. No funds appropriated under this Act may be used to prevent the implementation of programs of voluntary prayer and meditation in the public schools. (Department of Education Appropriations Act, 1993.)

Weapons activities.—This program includes the following activities:

Research and Development.—This activity provides for the research, development, and engineering capabilities to support maintenance and surveillance of the U.S. nuclear weapons. Research and development on inertial confinement fusion is also included and the transfer of nonsensitive defense programs' funded technology to the private sector is promoted. The program also supports facility construction and maintenance for the nuclear weapons laboratories.

Nuclear Weapons Testing.—This activity provides for the research and testing of U.S. nuclear weapons at the Nevada Test Site (NTS), consistent with the 1992 Nuclear Testing Moratorium legislation. The program also supports facility construction, maintenance, and restoration for the NTS.

Stockpile Support.—This activity provides for the maintenance of the U.S. nuclear weapon stockpile, capabilities to modify or produce new weapons if required, lifetime surveillance of the stockpile, and retirement and disposal of weapons and weapon components. The program supports facility construction and maintenance for the nuclear weapons production plants.

Weapons Program Direction.—This program provides personnel and contractual services for the Federal management direction and the administration of selected Defense Programs' missions.

Complex Reconfiguration.—This program supports the efforts to "reconfigure" the nuclear weapons complex into Complex-21, which will be smaller, less diverse, and more efficient and cost effective than today's Complex. As part of the reconfiguration effort, a Programmatic Environmental Impact Statement is being prepared.

The Department of Energy and OMB are currently reviewing this. Upon completion of the review, the Department of Energy will provide detailed funding allocation information to Congress.

Environmental restoration and waste management.—This program encompasses the following defense-related activities:

Corrective activities.—Provides for those activities needed to bring active and standby defense facilities into compliance with applicable local, State, and Federal requirements and with internal Department of Energy requirements in an expeditious manner.

Environmental restoration.—Provides for assessments, cleanup, and decontamination and decommissioning at contaminated DOE facilities and sites. Various amounts and types of waste have accumulated at these facilities and sites as a result of past departmental activities spanning nearly five decades.

Waste management.—Provides for the management of wastes generated by defense activities, through treatment, storage or disposal of various waste types including radioactive, hazardous, mixed or sanitary wastes in compliance with applicable local, State, and Federal requirements and internal Department of Energy requirements.

Technology development.—Provides for research and development activities which will develop and apply more effective technologies for meeting the Department of Energy's 30-year environmental restoration and waste management goals.

Transportation management.—Responsible for ensuring the safe, secure, and economical transportation of DOE materials, including radioactive and other hazardous materials and waste.

Program direction.—Provides salaries and expenses for headquarters staff for administration and oversight of environmental restoration and waste management programs.

Facility Transition and Management.—Provides for the orderly transition, deactivation and disposition of contaminated facilities/sites, determined to be surplus to their mission, from other Departmental organizations, to the Office of Environmental Restoration and Waste Management.

Materials support and other defense programs.—This program includes the following activities:

Materials support.—This activity provides nuclear materials for national defense and nondefense requirements. To accomplish this mission, it operates and maintains a complex of production reactors, chemical processing plants, and support facilities.

Verification and control technology.—This activity supports the development and execution of U.S. national security and foreign policy in the areas of treaty verification and implementation, intelligence, arms control and nonproliferation. The program consists primarily of detection technology, analytical support, and intelligence. Detection technology efforts include research, development, and fabrication of seismic, nonseismic, and satellite devices. Analytical support provides technical support to both arms control and intelligence concerns.

Nuclear safeguards and security.—This activity provides for the development of measures to assure adequate and effective protection of nuclear weapons, nuclear materials, and facilities against theft, sabotage, espionage, and terrorist activity. Also included is the classification program which protects classified and unclassified sensitive information critical to the national security.

Security investigations.—This activity ensures that the common defense and the security of the United States will not be endangered by the granting of security clearances for personnel who, in the performance of their official duties, must have access to restricted data, national security information or special nuclear material, or who occupy a designated critical sensitive position. Security investigations are used as a basis to determine whether individuals are an acceptable security risk for such access.

Naval reactors.—This program provides for the design, development, and testing of improved Naval nuclear propulsion plants and reactors cores having increased reliability, improved performance, and simplified operating and maintenance requirements. These reactors are necessary to meet a variety of military requirements. During 1994, the program will continue to develop advanced nuclear reactor plant components/systems intended for the new attack submarine (SSN) class required by the Navy to maintain a viable SSN force and industrial base, and improve operating reactors and plant components. In addition, the program will continue to maintain its aging facilities, procure necessary equipment to support work and testing activities, and provide funding for shutdown of the highly enriched uranium production facility at Portsmouth, Ohio in FY 1995.

Office of Security Evaluations.—This program provides independent assessment of the safeguards and security posture of the DOE. This program is the principal focal point within the Department for all safeguards and security inspection and evaluation matters. Oversight is accomplished through the conduct of inspections at field sites and headquarters to evaluate the status of protection provided national security interests, public safety, and program operations. Assessments, evaluations, and special studies of the effectiveness and cost savings applications of protection policies and programs are conducted to provide a consolidated statement of the status of protection programs throughout the DOE complex. The budget also includes the Radioactive Materials Packaging Certification program, which is responsible for certifying that radioactive material packages are in safety compliance with Federal regulations and for maintaining a technology base to support certification activities.

Nuclear Safety Oversight.—This program provides independent oversight of nuclear safety to assure the Secretary of Energy and, in turn, the Congress and the public that DOE workers, the public and the environment are receiving the highest level of health and safety protection reasonably achievable from DOE nuclear operations. The program has broad authority under its charter to monitor and audit all aspects of nuclear safety through inspections, assessments, and investigations to identify circumstances indicative of deteriorating or inadequate nuclear safety performance. The program is also responsible for the Department's enforcement policy associated with the civil and criminal penalty authority of the Price-Anderson Amendment Act of 1988.

New Production Reactor.—A decision has been made not to proceed with construction of a new tritium production facility. The balances of the New Production Reactor appropriation has been merged with this appropriation.

Worker Training and Adjustment.—In accordance with Section 3161 of the National Defense Authorization Act of 1993, DOE is responsible for minimizing the impact on displaced workers that results from reductions in the workforce at defense nuclear facilities. This program provides for the development and implementation of plans to provide displaced defense employees preference in hiring, outplacement assistance, relocation assistance, and other assistance authorized under Section 3161 including incentives for early retirement and impact assistance to local communities.

Education programs.—Provides support for science and mathematics education at the precollege, undergraduate, and graduate levels.

High energy physics.—Research in this program focuses on the fundamental constituents of matter, the fundamental forces in nature and the transformations between matter and energy at the most elemental level. The program includes experimental and theoretical particle physics research and related advanced accelerator and detector technology R&D. The primary mode of experimental research involves the study of collisions of energetic particles using large particle accelerators or colliding beam facilities by means of advanced multiparticle detector systems and associated electronics. Research in 1994 will continue studies of known fundamental constituents of particles, initiate searches for new particle constituents, and continue to pursue a unified description of the four fundamental forces in nature.

The 1994 high energy physics budget request provides for continued research at the Tevatron, the Stanford Linear Collider (SLC), the Alternating Gradient Synchrotron (AGS) and advanced accelerator and detector R&D related to next generation high energy particle accelerators. The operation of the Tevatron will provide the capability for utilizing Fermilab's superconducting synchrotron as a 900 GeV on 900 GeV proton anti-proton collider and as a 800 GeV fixed target facility, while Stanford Linear Accelerator Center's SLC will produce 50 GeV on 50 GeV electron-positron collisions. Both facilities will allow access into previously unexplored areas of high energy physics. The request also provides continuing support for effective participation by university based groups in experimental research, including accelerator user group efforts and non-accelerator experiments, and for theoretical research efforts. The 1994 high energy physics capital equipment request provides for meeting the highest priority needs associated with the detectors required to implement the research programs using the new capabilities being provided by the Tevatron proton anti-proton collider at Fermilab and by the SLC electron-positron collider at SLAC. The construction request provides for continuation of the new Main Injector ring at the Fermi National Laboratory at a reduced pace.

Superconducting Super Collider.—The Superconducting Super Collider (SSC) is a new powerful particle accelerator capable of exploring the TeV mass region essential to advancing understanding of the fundamental nature of matter and energy. In 1994, R&D efforts will continue on magnet design, testing and fabrication, design and testing of other collider technical systems and on detector R&D. The request for capital equipment is in support of these R&D programs. Construction funding requested in 1994 will be used for the fabrication of injector technical systems, the superconducting magnet program, fabrication of collider technical systems other than superconducting magnets, and on-site construction of conventional facilities.

Nuclear Physics.—The goal of this program is to understand the interactions and structure of atomic nuclei and to investigate fundamental particles and forces of nature as manifested in nuclear matter. Program emphasis in 1994 centers on the role that quarks play in the makeup and interactions of nuclei, application of nuclear physics to astrophysical problems and properties of neutrinos, and the mechanisms by which colliding nuclei exchange mass, energy, and angular momentum. The program supports and provides experimental equipment to qualified scientists and research groups conducting experiments in nuclear physics accelerator facilities around the world.

The 1994 nuclear physics budget requests continuation of construction for the Relativistic Heavy Ion Collider (RHIC) at Brookhaven and for the Continuous Electron Beam Accelerator Facility at Newport News, Virginia.

The request provides for initiation of decontamination and decommission of LAMPF, continued operation of the, AGS/Tandem facility at Brookhaven, the Bevalac at Lawrence Berkeley, and smaller low energy heavy ion facilities. The program also supports the operation of dedicated university accelerator facilities.

General science program direction.—Provides direction, management, and administrative support to HEP and NP programs within general science.

The purpose of energy supply research and development activities is to develop new energy technologies and improve existing energy technologies. Included in this mission are basic and applied research along with selected technology development.

This account provides funds for operating expenses, capital equipment and construction projects for the research and technological development of the various energy technologies under examination in the energy supply, research and development mission.

Solar and renewable energy technology.—A strong, balanced program is proposed for FY 1994 that will contribute toward strengthening the Nation's energy security, promoting energy efficiency and renewable energy, and increasing industrial competitiveness and Federal technology transfer. The FY 1994 Budget Request represents an aggressive program of R&D of promising technologies which will increase the environmentally sound production and use of domestic energy resources and will increase American productivity and economic competitiveness. Toward this end, the Office of Conservation and Renewable Energy (CE) seeks to work with industry to strengthen the technology base leading to new products and processes for the commercial market. CE's programs address all areas of the energy sector—from production to delivery to end-use. Program activities range from basic research in universities and national laboratories to applied research and development and proof-of-concept projects with industrial firms.

The FY 1994 program continues to work in partnership with industry to develop and promote the use of solar energy. Specific goals or activities of solar energy programs include: (1) in photovoltaics: an industry-driven effort in research, production, engineering, and market development; (2) in solar uildings: a focus on cooperative industry and utility efforts to develop commercial solar hot water utilization; (3) in solar thermal: lowering the operating costs of existing trough systems and developing dish/Stirling and central receiver systems for commercial electric power generation, continued development of the use of concentrated solar energy to break down toxic organic wastes, and supplying process heat to industry; (4) in wind energy: development and deloyment of advanced utility-grade wind turbines in collaboration with utilities and industry; and (5) in biofuels: continued R&D to achieve further reductions in biomass energy costs, continued R&D on the biochemical conversion of municipal solid waste to methane, and the biochemical conversion of biomass to ethanol. The Solar Energy program also includes ongoing support for the interagency Committee on Renewable Energy Commerce and Trade (CORECT), for commercialization and demonstration joint ventures, and for renewable energy, outreach information and technical assistance programs.

The geothermal energy program reflects a continuing effort to work with industry and the utility sector to reduce the lifecycle cost of producing electricity with geothermal resources, while the hydropower program focuses on addressing the primary environmental mitigation issues associated with developing and maintaining hydropower production. The Electric Energy Systems program includes increased efforts to improve the efficiency of electric power transmission and distribution systems and increased studies on health effects of electric and magnetic fields, and Energy Storage includes R&D on batteries for use by utilities and on the production and storage of hydrogen.

Nuclear fission.—In 1994 the Civilian Reactor Development program places emphasis on the Light Water Reactor (LWR) program to ensure that nuclear energy continues to make a vital contribution to national energy security. This program will focus on making standardized advanced light water reactors available to assist in meeting the increased electrical capacity needs of the first decade of the next century. The program includes institutional and regulatory reform and supporting technology efforts. Cooperative programs with industry have the objective of ensuring that the designs developed are those of interest to utilities. Advanced reactor research and development on reactors that have no near-term commercial or other identified application will not be funded. The Advanced Liquid Metal Reactor, Modular High Temperature Gas-Cooled Reactor, and Nuclear Energy Robotics programs will be shut down. The Integral Fast Reactor and Light Water Actinide Recycle programs will continue with 1994 funding of $15 million to demonstrate the potential of actinide recycle to expand the usable capacity of the repository and thereby significantly defer the need for additional capacity additions. The Fuel Cycle Facility and the Analytical Laboratory at ANL-W will be operated to support this demonstration. The Advance Radioisotope Power Systems program will continue to develop and produce nuclear power systems for use in U.S. space missions and in support of military and civilian applications. The space reactor power systems program has been significantly reduced and will conduct special studies.

Environment, safety and health.—The Office of Environment, Safety and Health is made up of three programs: Environment, Safety and Health; Environmental Policy Analysis; and Scientific and Engineering Recruitment, Training and Development:

Environment, Safety and Health.—Environment, Safety and Health is responsible for oversight of all Department of Energy (DOE) activities to determine whether they are being conducted in conformance with applicable environmental laws and regulations and in a manner designed to ensure that the health and safety of workers and the public are protected. The Office also ensures that National environmental protection goals are incorporated in all DOE program areas; ensures that environmental, health and non-nuclear safety concerns are identified, prioritized and addressed through corrective and remedial actions; and provides liaison with other Federal agencies, such as the Environmental Protection Agency, the Department of Labor, and the Department of Health and Human Services, concerning regulatory efforts and specific actions of those agencies that may have an effect upon the Department's operations.

The Office of Environment, Safety and Health will continue to implement the Environment, Safety and Health Compliance Assessment ("Tiger Team") program. This program will provide the Secretary with current assessments of the status of DOE operating facilities' compliance with applicable orders, statutes, and regulations pertaining to environment, safety and health (including OSHA) considerations. In addition, baseline audits will be conducted at small DOE sites which will not be subjected to Tiger Team assessments.

Efforts will continue with the review of environmental legislation and regulations to ensure DOE-wide understanding and compliance with environmental laws and regulations. DOE-wide environmental policies, standards and directives will be developed as well as environmental guidance and training programs which cover the full range of environmental statutes, regulations, and internal requirements.

The Office continues to support the timely implementation of the Department's proposed actions by ensuring compliance with the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) and related environmental review requirements that are necessary prior to project commitment. The NEPA review workload is expected to increase significantly as a result of DOE project development and environmental compliance activities.

Establishing effective compliance agreements with the States and the Environmental Protection Agency continues to be a focus of environmental issues coordination and oversight. Oversight of the environment, safety and health aspects of the DOE award fee system will continue. Similar oversight efforts are continuing relative to the development and implementation of the Environmental Restoration and Waste Management Five-Year Plan.

The Office will continue to provide independent internal oversight of DOE line programs for occupational safety, aviation, firearms, high explosives, industrial safety, facility safety, packaging and transportation safety, and quality assurance conducted by program offices, field offices, power administrations, and operating contractors. Independent appraisals, reviews, and technical evaluations of the operation and management of DOE's facilities (exclusive of nuclear reactor and non-reactor nuclear facilities) will be conducted. Diagnostic assessments of DOE line management's safety and health program performance at nuclear and non-nuclear facilities will be conducted, and the Site Resident Program will be expanded to additional sites.

Also, this Office will continue to conduct a comprehensive DOE occupational health program, a strengthened program of oversight of the occupational medical program of the Department's contractors, and a comprehensive epidemiological and health surveillance program in cooperation with the Department of Health and Human Services.

Environmental Policy Analysis.—This office is responsible for developing the analytical framework and database for assessing the environmental implication of energy policy decisions and programs in light of changes in the Nation's energy situation, analyzing legislative and international environmental and resource proposals, and coordinating Department of Energy policy on such proposals, and for analysis and coordination activities for environmental issues related to energy production, delivery, use, and waste disposal. The immediate objectives are to assess the relationship between energy production and use and international and national environmental goals, and to assess the effects on energy supply and demand from changing environmental laws and regulations. Efforts to achieve these objectives will involve: (a) environmentally-related implementation actions and assessing the effect of the first National Energy Strategy (NES) implementation on the environment, including global climate change, (b) representing the Department at international discussions of global climate and transboundary environmental concerns involving energy implications, (c) providing effective DOE representation on environmental and related regulatory issues, and (d) providing timely, high quality analysis of, and recommendations on, emerging environmental policy issues.

Scientific and Engineering Recruitment, Training, and Development.—This Office is responsible for the development and implementation of a five-year plan for the recruitment, training, and professional development of technically trained professionals to staff and manage the Department's technically complex programs and facilities. Consistent with this responsibility, this Office will ensure that programs are in place to systematically analyze scientific and engineering job requirements, assess and identify the necessary technical qualifications and skills of each position and target training as appropriate, implement various recruiting initiatives to supply qualifed staff for all levels of technical vacancies, and provide a trained cadre from which the Secretary can fill the Department's senior technical managerial positions with qualified executives.

Office of nuclear safety.—The Office of Nuclear Safety has been transfered to the Materials Support and Other Defense Programs appropriation. This function appears under the heading Nuclear Safety Oversight. The Office of Nuclear Safety Policy includes the staff and funding required for the development of enhanced Departmental nuclear safety requirements and standards (policy, rules and orders) to assure safe operation of DOE nuclear reactor and non-reactor nuclear facilities.

Uranium Enrichment Activities.—Although the majority of enrichment activities will transfer to the United States Enrichment Corporation when it becomes operational on July 1, 1993, the Department will continue to be responsible for a few functions, such as remaining personnel and program management services.

Biological and environmental research.—This program develops the knowledge base necessary to identify, understand, and anticipate the long-term health and environmental consequences of energy use and development and utilizes the Department's unique scientific and technological capabilities to solve major scientific problems in the environment, medicine, and biology. Planned 1994 activities include programs in global climate change; terrestrial and oceanographic processes; molecular, cellular and systemic studies on the biological effects of radiation, including radon emissions; structural biology; and medical applications of nuclear technology and the Human Genome Program. Additional funding is provided to upgrade the Brookhaven Linac Isotope Producer: to continue construction of the environmental and molecular sciences laboratory previously funded in the Environmental Restoration and Waste Management Program; and to conduct research related to energy and environmental policy, and for project definition studies of a dedicated isotope source.

Spill test facility.—Fulfilling the direction of Energy and Water Acts, the Superfund Amendments and Reauthorization Act, and the Clean Air Act Amendments, the overall goal is to conduct user-sponsored spill tests and mitigation responder training in support of plant and community safety and worker and community health associated with the handling, shipping and storage of hydrocarbons and related chemical industries' materials with focused attention on liquefied gaseous fuels and other hazardous fluids. Within this goal, other Federal agencies such as the Environmental Protection Agency conduct user-sponsored tests concerning airborne toxic substances to refine hazard concerns in programs designed in collaboration with the Department.

Fusion energy.—Fusion is a potential energy source that offers the promise of being safe, environmentally benign, and economically affordable. This program provides support for a goal-oriented research and development program to demonstrate the technical feasibility of fusion energy. This effort represents an important part of a comprehensive, balanced National Energy Strategy. The long term goals of the program are to have an operating demonstration powerplant by 2025 and an operating commercial power plant by 2040. The strategy for achieving these goals is to gain the scientific understanding of the complex processes involved in fusion and to use this understanding to design and operate an engineering test facility to develop fusion technology. The 1994 budget provides for U.S. support for participation in a world-wide effort to develop the engineering design of an International Thermonuclear Experimental Reactor (ITER) and the conduct of deuterium-tritium fueled experiments in the Tokamak Fusion Test Reactor. In addition, support is provided to develop inertial fusion energy by conducting R&D on a heavy ion driver concept. Funds to begin detail design and construction of a new experimental device (the Tokamak Physics Experiment) to improve the current tokamak machine performance and contribute to the ITER effort are included in an investment proposal.

Supporting research and technical analysis.—The role of these programs is to expand the scientific and engineering base for future energy technology development and to provide independent, objective evaluations of energy research activities. Support is also provided for university related research and manpower training including the use of facilities at the national laboratories for student research and education.

Basic energy sciences.—This program funds basic research in the physical, biological, and engineering sciences in support of both the nuclear and non-nuclear technology programs. The principal focus of the basic energy sciences program is energy; however, a number of other important national goals are also supported including U.S. leadership in science and technology, U.S. economic competitiveness and the training of scientists and engineers. In 1994, work will continue in materials sciences, chemical sciences, advanced energy projects, energy biosciences, and research in engineering systems, applied mathematics, and the geosciences. The 1994 budget request attempts to maintain the necessary balance between all of the elements of the BES program. This budget is designed to balance: research and facility needs; university and laboratory research support; core research and enhanced activities; and ensure that the BES program is responsive to the overall NES goals. Strengthened research focused on the goals of the National Energy Strategy is also requested. These research enhancements will strengthen small science at both the DOE laboratories and universities. The request contains funding to continue the 6-7 GeV Synchrotron Radiation Source.

University and Science Education.—This program helps maintain strong scientific/technical research capabilities in support of the Department's long-range energy R&D mission in the university and private sector and the national laboratories. Specific activities supported include: university reactor fuel assistance; university laboratory cooperative science centers; energy manpower development; and related education and training activities. This program includes support for the purchase of state-of-the-art scientific instrumentation used in energy-related research areas such as geological sciences, materials characterization, catalysis, and health effects research.

Technology Transfer.—This program supports efforts to more effectively transfer research and technology from Energy Research laboratories by supporting cost-shared research projects to a point where they can be evaluated for commercial applications.

Energy research analysis.—This activity involves the independent assessment of existing or proposed technological initiatives, including examination of the base of research that underlies energy supply and utilization technologies.

Multiprogram energy laboratories facilities support.—The goal of the multiprogram energy laboratories facilities support program is to provide funds for rehabilitating and replacing deficient common-use utilities, roads, and buildings at the multiprogram laboratories. This program also includes support to correct deficiencies identified in the Tiger Team reviews. This program also provides funding in support of the landlord responsibility at Oak Ridge National Laboratory.

In-house energy management.—This program funds energy conservation retrofit projects at Department facilities. These projects are designed to improve the efficiency of DOE energy use and set an example for other Federal agencies and the private sector. Surveys are conducted to identify cost-effective candidate projects and projects are then selected on a competitive basis using as the primary criterion the greatest economic return.

Technical information management program.—This program contributes to DOE's missions in advancing energy and nuclear defense technologies and protecting U.S. economic and military security through the effective management and control of the Department's scientific and technical knowledge which is contained in its information resources. objectives which are structured to meet the overall purpose are the effective management, control, and use of the results of DOE's multibillion dollar research program, and the acquisition and management of results of worldwide investment in energy R&D.

Environmental restoration and waste management.—The Environmental Restoration and Waste Management Program encompasses the following non-defense activities:

Corrective Activities.—This program provides for those activities needed to bring active and standby Energy Supply Research and Development funded facilities into compliance with applicable local, State and Federal requirements and internal Department of Energy requirements in an expeditious manner.

Environmental Restoration.—This program provides for assessments, cleanup, and decontamination and decommissioning at contaminated DOE and legislatively authorized non-government facilities. Various amounts and types of waste have accumulated at these facilities and sites as a result of past department activities spanning nearly five decades.

Waste Management.—This program provides for the management of wastes generated by Energy Supply Research and Development funded activities, through treatment, storage or disposal of various waste types including radioactive, hazardous, mixed or sanitary wastes in compliance with applicable local, State and Federal requirements and internal Department of Energy requirements.

Policy and management.—Provides executive direction, management assistance, and administrative support to all programs within energy supply activities.

The Fossil Energy programs support the Energy Policy Act through research and development that will strengthen the technology base on which industry can draw in developing future new products and processes for the commercial market. The programs support activities ranging from basic research in universities and national laboratories to applied R&D and proof-of-concept projects in private sector firms.

Reductions in the Fossil Energy R&D programs are proposed in the 1994 budget that will reduce Federal in-house R&D at the Energy Technology Centers and will continue limited Federal support of company-specific technology development and demonstration activities. The program continues to fund high-priority, high risk and cross-cutting research that will improve the Nation's ability to cleanly and efficiently use coal, and to enhance the economic recovery of our oil and gas reserves.

Coal R&D.—The objectives of this program will be to continue generic, technology base and environmental research to provide an adequate scientific and engineering knowledge base to foster technological advances by the private sector. The 1994 research program provides for a continued, limited Federal role in high-risk R&D that supports technology development by the private sector. These efforts will include the Advanced Research and Technology Development program, with additional advanced research efforts conducted in the Advanced Research portions of the Coal Liquefaction, Control Technology and Coal Preparation, Combustion Systems, Fuel Cells, and Surface Coal Gasification programs. The coal program for 1994 is focused on both high-efficiency, low pollution systems aimed at meeting increasingly tough environmental requirements, and on technology with the potential to produce economically competitive liquid fuels from coal. In 1993, the Department plans to conclude work on coal-fired diesels, direct coal-fired turbines, and residential/commercial systems. In Coal Liquefaction, the goal is to withdraw from the Wilsonville facility and to find a smaller, cheaper facility to conduct cost-shared research with industry. The Department will continue work at LaPorte, but increase the level of industry cost-share.

Oil, gas and shale.—The Advanced Extraction and Process Technology (AEPT) and Enhanced Oil Recovery (EOR) programs are proceeding with the Oil Implementation Plan to support very aggressive Energy Policy Act enhanced oil recovery objectives. For FY 1994, the Department is proposing to accelerate development of EOR by beginning research on two additional classes of reservoirs.

Consistent with the Energy Policy Act objectives, the Fossil Energy R&D program on natural gas has been redesigned. This program, which previously focused on unconventional gas recovery, is now focused on enhanced gas production, storage technology, and high efficiency, low-NO_x turbines. As in all other 1994 programs, industry and Gas Research Institute cost-share is a key feature of this initiative. Also beginning in FY 1994, the Fuel Cells program will be included under oil, gas and shale instead of under coal R&D in recognition that gas-fired fuel cells will most probably be the first to be developed.

Program direction and management support.—This program provides the funding for all Headquarters and indirect field personnel and overhead expenses in Fossil Energy. In addition, it provides support for the day-to-day project management functions.

Federal Inspector for the Alaska natural gas pipeline.—Activities formerly included under the Office of the Federal Inspector for the Alaska natural gas pipeline are now funded in this line item, in accordance with the 1986 appropriation. Funding for this program ended in fiscal year 1992.

Environmental restoration.—The Department of Energy is assisting in payments for the environmental clean-up of former Fossil Energy projects as required by the Environmental Protection Agency. Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act (CERCLA) sites include the Western Superfund Site at Ft. Lewis, Washington, and the Rock Springs and Hoe Creek Sites in Wyoming. Resource Conservation Recovery Act (RCRA) efforts are underway at the Morgantown Energy Technology Center (METC) to eliminate cross-connections between sewer and storm water lines, and at the Pittsburgh Energy Technology Center (PETC) to clean up contaminated soil and monitor groundwater. In addition, as a result of internal DOE evaluations (Tiger Teams) other efforts are underway at both METC and PETC and at the National Institute of Petroleum Energy Research at Bartlesville, Oklahoma to correct a number of other environmental problems.

Fuels conversion.—This program will continue regulatory reviews and oversight of the transmission of natural gas and electricity across the U.S. borders and to process certifications of alternate fuel capability.

A strong, balanced program is proposed for FY 1994 that will contribute to the Nation's energy security, that will promote energy efficiency in all sectors of the economy, and that will increase industrial competitiveness and Federal technology transfer. The FY 1994 budget proposal includes an aggressive program of cost-shared research and development in partnership with the private sector to help improve energy efficiency in buildings, industry, and transportation. Activities range from basic research in universities and national laboratories to applied research and development and proof-of-concept projects with industry. The FY 1994 budget also includes support for improved energy planning by utilities, and technical and financial assistance to States to help them improve their energy-related policies such as building codes and utility regulations.

Building Technologies. The FY 1994 program includes development of more energy-efficient, cost-effective building technologies; technology transfer programs; encouraging the adoption of the best available building energy efficiency codes; developing methods for rating the energy efficiency of appliances; promoting the use of "energy efficient" home mortgages; and expanding the Federal Energy Management Program to improve the efficiency with which the Federal government uses energy.

Industrial Technologies. The FY 1994 program consists of cost-shared R&D projects related both to energy demand reduction and energy supply. Demand-reduction program areas include the reduction of industrial wastes, which has both energy-efficiency and environmental benefits, improved electrical drives, materials processing, separations and drying, bioprocessing, advanced materials, and process sensors and controls. Supply activities include understanding and mitigating the emissions from combustion of municipal wastes, and more efficient industrial cogeneration.

Transportation Technologies. The FY 1994 program continues to increase support for cost-shared, industry-led development of electric and hybrid vehicles and enabling technologies such as light-weight and high-temperature materials. These activities will all become components of the Clean Car initiative announced by the President in February. In addition, the program expands the purchase of alternative-fuel vehicles for the Federal fleet, and will be responsible for advising the fuel-supply industry of siting plans for these vehicles, to help ensure that private fueling stations are available wherever Federal alternative-fuel vehicles are placed.

Technical and Financial Assistance.—Activities managed by the Office of Technical and Financial Assistance include the three State and local formula grant programs (Weatherization Assistance, Institutional Conservation, and the State Energy Conservation Program). Other activities include the Energy-Related Inventions/Energy Innovation program, technology deployment and outreach activities, and programs which develop and provide information and technical assistance.

Utility Technologies.—The Office of Utility Technologies provides technical assistance to utilities and regulators on the use of integrated resource planning (IRP). IRP is the process by which utilities determine the mix of demand- and supply-side resources to best meet customer needs. The mix should reflect a fair, market-based competition among all viable demand- and supply-side resource alternatives, including efficiency measures, storage, renewable energy technologies, emerging fossil and nuclear technologies, and traditional supply resources. IRP is expected to reduce future requirements for new power plants (and their attendant capital and environmental implications) through efficiency improvements and other noncapital-intensive alternatives.

Policy and Management.—This activity supports management in the development of policy and program evaluation for energy conservation programs to ensure effective program delivery.

The Reserve is being maintained in readiness for possible further use at the direction of the President. The budget proposes no additional appropriations in 1994 for SPR oil purchases. The budget outlay estimates assume direct purchases of 12 million barrels in FY 1993 and 4.8 million barrels in FY 1994.

the general public. The activities funded in this program include the design, development and maintenance of information systems on petroleum, natural gas, coal, nuclear, electricity, alternate fuel sources, and energy consumption. This includes collecting data and ensuring its accuracy; preparing forecasts of alternative energy futures; and preparing reports on energy sources, end-uses, prices, supply and demand, and associated economic, international, and financial matters. This program also includes the operation of the Energy Information Administration (EIA) computer facility, telecommunications support, customer services, and ADP software support to the Department of Energy and others. In addition, the National Energy Information Center disseminates publications, analytic reports, and public use tapes, and responds to public inquiries. Finally, this activity provides survey and statistical design standards, documentation standards, and energy data public-use forms clearance and burden control services.

In response to passage of the Energy Policy Act of 1992, EIA proposes to expand data and analysis of energy end use, alternative transportation fuels and vehicles, and green-house gases.

Hearings and appeals.—The Office of Hearings and Appeals issues all final orders of an adjudicatory nature other than those over which the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission or the Board of Contract Appeals has jurisdiction. It decides appeals of petroleum enforcement actions and adverse Freedom of Information Act and Privacy Act determinations, examines requests for exception relief, and administers refund proceedings involving funds obtained as a result of petroleum enforcement actions. This office is also responsible for (a) conducting hearings and issuing initial agency decisions on "whistleblower" complaints made under the DOE Contractor Employee Protection Program, (b) issuing final agency decisions on appeals of disputed "Payment-Equal-to-Taxes" determinations made under the Nuclear Waste Policy Act of 1982, as amended, and (c) conducting personnel security administrative review hearings, and performing administrative reviews of initial determinations.

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) is charged with regulating certain interstate aspects of the natural gas, oil pipeline, hydropower, and electric industries. Such regulation includes issuing licenses and certificates for construction of facilities, approving rates, inspecting dams, implementing compliance and enforcement activities, and providing other services to regulated businesses. In FY 1994, these businesses will pay fees and charges sufficient to fully offset the Commission's cost of providing licenses, inspections, and other services.

Natural gas and oil.—The Commission regulates 150 natural gas pipeline companies, and 130 common carrier oil pipelines companies, including the Trans-Alaska Pipeline System (TAPS). Responsibilities include: issuing certificates of public convenience and necessity for natural gas pipelines, determining rates for the transportation and sale of natural gas in interstate commerce and rates for the transportation of oil; and establishing applicable tariff provisions to carry out the Commission's responsibilities under the Natural Gas Act and the Natural Gas Policy Act. Under the Natural Gas Wellhead Decontrol Act of 1989, all remaining regulated wellhead gas prices were deregulated on January 1, 1993.

Hydropower.—The Commission issues preliminary permits, exemptions, and licenses, including relicenses, for non-federal hydroelectric projects, enforces their terms and conditions, and performs dam safety inspections. The Commission regulates more than 1,700 hydroelectric projects which supply about 10 percent of the electric energy generated in the United States. The Commission also performs investigations to determine the amount of headwater benefits that are derived from Federally-owned and FERC-licensed headwater improvements and returned $5.7 million in revenues to the U.S. Treasury in 1992.

Electric power.—The Commission is responsible for determining rates for the interstate sale or transmission of wholesale electric energy for more than 200 electric utilities and for overseeing electric utility corporate transactions. The Commission approves rates for all Federal power marketing agencies except TVA. The Commission also certifies cogenerators, small power producers, and electric wholesale generators.

This loan guarantee program was intended to subsidize loans for geothermal energy projects too risky to acquire private sector financing on their own. From 1979 to 1986, 8 loan guarantees were executed. Of those, 3 have been repaid and 5 have defaulted. The new budget authority in the fund in recent years has only been needed to support one FTE to monitor the remaining agreements and assets of the program. In 1992, that person's position was incorporated into the geothermal R&D activity, so no new budget authority will be needed in this account in FY 1994.

Public Law 99-190, making continuing appropriations for 1986, provided $400 million from funds in the Energy Security Reserve in the Department of the Treasury for a new Clean Coal Technology Program in the Department of Energy. This program was authorized under the Clean Coal Technology Reserve proviso of Public Law 98-473 to subsidize the construction and operation of facilities to demonstrate the potential commercial feasibility of such technologies.

The fiscal year 1994 program includes a continuation of funding for the fourth and fifth rounds of cost-shared Innovative Clean Coal Technology projects at $250,000,000. These projects demonstrate technologies appropriate for replacing, retrofitting, or modernizing existing coal-fired facilities to provide significantly reduced emissions. Projects are cost-shared, with industry providing at least half of the funding, and with provisions for the Government to recoup its investment through a share of revenues if the technology is commercialized.

This program was established in 1980 for the purpose of expediting the development and production of alternative fuels.

When the Synthetic Fuels Corporation was declared to be operational in 1982, the uncommitted and unobligated funds remaining in the program were transferred to the Energy Security Reserve for use by the Synthetic Fuels Corporation, with the exception of the loan guarantee for the Great Plains Gasification Project, which remained under the jurisdiction of the Department of Energy. The Department exercised its authority to borrow from the Treasury to repay the Federal Financing Bank upon default of the borrower in 1985. This loan was repaid, along with accrued interest, by a Supplemental appropriation in 1986. The Department acquired ownership of the Great Plains plant by foreclosure, which was completed on July 14, 1986, and continued operation of the plant without the expenditure of appropriated funds. On October 31, 1988, the Department completed the process of establishing an asset purchase agreement for the Great Plains Gasification Plant by settlement with Basin Electric Power Cooperative Association. Responsibilities for other related agreements—Trust Agreement, Gas Transportation Agreement, Gas Purchase Agreement—were also settled. Under the terms of the asset purchase agreement a check for $85 million was provided to the Government as an initial payment. These agreements are currently the subject of litigation between the Department, Dakota Gasification Company and the four pipeline companies which purchase the synthetic gas from the plant. Future revenue sharing payments to the Department are dependent upon the outcome of this litigation as well as natural gas prices for the next sixteen years. All future payments shall be transferred to the General Fund of the Treasury. The asset purchase agreement also includes a commitment to keep the facility operating through the year 2009 as long as revenues exceed expenses.

The nuclear waste disposal program consists of efforts related to the development, acquisition, and operation of facilities for the disposal of civilian and defense high level nuclear waste. These activities are funded by appropriations from the Nuclear Waste Fund which is paid for by the users of the disposal service, and the Defense Nuclear Waste Disposal account, which was established by Congress as part of the FY 1993 Energy and Water Development Appropriation (P.L. 102–377) in lieu of a payment from the Department of Energy into the Nuclear Waste Fund for activities related to the disposal of defense high-level waste.

The Isotope Production and Distribution program is directed towards the production, sale, and distribution of isotope products and related services to the user community utilizing Government-owned facilities. The isotopes produced by the Department of Energy are those that can be produced in existing DOE production and research facilities dedicated to the products required by the Isotope Production and Distribution program. The isotopes are sold at their market value or at a price determined to be in the best interest of the government for use in industrial applications, hospital and medical facilities, and Government, university, and industrial research programs.

ing plants in a 10-State area of the Southeast. Deliveries are made by means of transmission facilities owned by others. There are 22 projects now in operation. A schedule of kilowatt capacity of projects in operation or under construction follows:

Projects in operation	3,092,375
Project under construction: Russell B. Russell (pumping units)	300,000
Total	3,392,375

SEPA sells power at wholesale primarily to publicly and cooperatively-owned electric distribution utilities using wheeling and pooling agreements with the region's large private utilities to provide firm power to its customers. SEPA does not own or operate any transmission facilities. Its long-term contracts provide for periodic electric rate adjustments to ensure that the Federal Government recovers costs of operation and capital invested in power, with interest, in keeping with statutory requirements.

The SEPA program includes the following activities:

Systems operations and maintenance.—Provision is made for negotiation and administration of power contracts, collection of revenues, development of wholesale power rates, the amortization of power investment, investigation and planning of proposed water resources projects, scheduling and dispatch of power generation, scheduling storage and release of water, administration of contractual operation requirements, and determination of methods of operating generating plants individually and in coordination with others to obtain maximum utilization of resources. Proprietary receipts deposited in the Treasury were $139,950,088 for 1992 and are estimated to be $155,425,000 for 1993. Proprietary receipts are expected to be $213,757,000 for 1994.

The Southwestern Power Administration (Southwestern) operates in a six-State area as a marketing agent for hydroelectric power produced at Corps of Engineers dams. It also operates and maintains some 2,225 kilometers (1,380 miles) of high voltage transmission lines, 24 substations and switching stations, and 44 VHF radio and microwave stations. Southwestern sells its power at wholesale primarily to publicly and cooperatively owned electric distribution utilities. Its long-term contracts provide for periodic rate adjustments to ensure that the Federal Government recovers all costs of operation and all capital invested in power, with interest, in keeping with statutory requirements.

Southwestern also is responsible for scheduling and dispatching power, negotiating power sales contracts, and constructing facilities required to meet changing customer load requirements.

Systems operation and maintenance.—Provision is made for investigating and planning proposed water resources projects, scheduling and dispatching power generation, scheduling storage and release of water, administering contractual operation requirements, and determining methods of operating generating plants individually and in coordination with others to obtain maximum utilization of resources. Provision also is made for maintenance and improvement of the transmission system and related facilities to ensure reliable service, negotiation and administration of power contracts, collection of revenue, development of wholesale power rates and the amortization of the power investment. Estimated proprietary receipts which are deposited in the Treasury are $90,392,000 in 1992, and $98,637,000 (not including repayment increases) in 1993. Proprietary receipts are expected to be $97,536,000 in 1994 (not including repayment increases).

Purchase power and wheeling.—Provision is made for the payment of wheeling fees and for the purchase of energy in connection with the marketing of power under contracts with utility companies.

Construction.—The construction program provides transmission, substation, switching and control facilities to transmit power generated at Corps of Engineers' hydroelectric projects in the Southwest. This program is coordinated with the Corps of Engineers' construction program and customer requirements in order that transmission and related facilities will be in place when these power projects are completed and available for marketing. This program also provides for the purchase of capital electrical equipment used for upgrading the established system to meet changing customer load requirements.

Reimbursable program.—This program involves services provided by Southwestern Power Administration to others under various types of reimbursable arrangements. In 1994 the reimbursable program primarily provides for operation and maintenance, construction, and power and energy services. The power and energy service supports the requirements of two government agencies: Ft. Sill and McAlester Army Ammunition Plant, and direct purchase of energy for the Oklahoma municipalities.

The Western Area Power Administration (Western) markets electric power in 15 western States from federally-owned power plants operated primarily by the Bureau of Reclamation, Corps of Engineers, and the International Boundary and Water Commission. Western operates and maintains approximately 16,300 miles of high-voltage transmission lines and 270 substation/switchyards and constructs transmission facilities, including new transmission lines, substations, and essential additions and modifications to existing facilities.

Western sells power at wholesale to electric distribution utilities. In keeping with statutory requirements, Western's long-term power contracts provide for periodic rate adjustments to ensure that the Federal Government recovers costs of operation and capital invested in power facilities, with interest.

Systems operation and maintenance.—A total of 13 power systems will be operated and maintained. Western will continue to participate in conservation and renewable energy programs in 1994. Revenue will be available from Boulder Canyon project operations for Western's power marketing and transmission expenses, without further appropriation, as provided in the Hoover Power Plant Act of 1984 (Public Law 98-381).

Power is sold to wholesale customers such as municipalities, cooperatives, irrigation districts, public utility districts, State and Federal Government agencies, and private utilities. Receipts are deposited in the Reclamation fund, the General fund, the Colorado River dam fund, the Lower Colorado River Basin development fund, and the Upper Colorado River Basin fund.

Energy sales and revenues resulting from these Western power systems operations, excluding the Colorado River Storage project and the Colorado River Basin project, are as follows:

Energy sales (millions of kilowatt hours)	25,815	25,265	26,215
Revenues from energy sales (in thousands of dollars)	554,809	599,634	627,610

Purchase of power and wheeling.—The program provides for purchase of power and wheeling. Financing of this program consists of $100,707,000 of new budget authority, $3,346,000 of permanent budget authority, $28,599,000 associated with net billing procedures, $87,076,000 associated with customer bill crediting, $58,496,000 associated with reimbursement from other Federal entities, and $2,534,000 associated with Bonneville Power Administration power transfers, for a total program cost of $280,808,000.

Utah Mitigation and Conservation.—The 1994 budget request includes $5,000,000 for deposit into the Utah Reclamation Mitigation and Conservation Account in the U.S. Treasury, pursuant to Title IV of the Reclamation Projects Authorization and Adjustment Act of 1992. Funds are earmarked primarily for environmental mitigation expenditures in the State of Utah covering fish and wildlife, and recreation resources impacted by the Colorado River Storage Project.

System construction.—Construction of transmission facilities is necessary to maintain system reliability and for marketing electric power produced from generating plants of others. Funding is provided in 1994 for upgrading, rehabilitating, and extending the power system to reduce outages, reduce maintenance costs, and to improve overall operational efficiency and reliability, construction of maintenance facilities, and system security additions. Western will continue to participate in joint construction projects to encourage greater transmission access.

Reimbursable program.—This program involves services provided by Western to others under various types of reimbursable arrangements. In 1994, the reimbursable program primarily provides for construction and operation and maintenance services for the Bureau of Reclamation and for construction services associated with the California-Oregon Transmission project being built for non-Federal entities, for jointly financed activities with non-Federal entities under the Contributed Funds Act, and for power purchases for other-Federal entities under the Economy Act and for work for non-Federal entities under the Contributed Funds Act to maintain the new California-Oregon Transmission Project and to construct the Mead-Phoenix Project.

A continuing fund, maintained from deposits to the Reclamation Fund, is available to ensure continuous operation of power systems in the event of below-normal hydro-power generation, equipment failure, or other damage caused by acts of God, flood, drought, strikes, embargoes or other conditions which might cause interruptions in service. The continuing fund was activated for the first time in FY 1992 to finance power purchases associated with below-normal hydropower generation due to the drought.

Public enterprise funds:

Bonneville Power Administration Fund

Expenditures from the Bonneville Power Administration Fund, established pursuant to Public Law 93–454, are approved for [the Springfield Hatchery Production Facility, Dryden Dam Fish Screens, Bonneville Fish Sampling Facility, and Hungry Horse Resident Fish Hatchery, and, the purchase, maintenance and operation of two rotary-wing aircraft for replacement only; and for] official reception and representation expenses in an amount not to exceed $3,000.

Bonneville Power Administration (BPA) is the Federal electric power marketing agency in the Pacific Northwest. BPA markets hydroelectric power from 21 multipurpose water resource projects of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and 9 projects of the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, plus some energy from non-Federal generating projects in the region. These generating resources and BPA's transmission system, planned by the end of 1994 to consist of an estimated 14,800 circuit miles of high-voltage transmission lines and 392 substations, are operated as an integrated power system with operating and financial results combined and reported as the Federal Columbia River Power System. BPA is the largest power wholesaler in the Northwest and provides about four-fifths of the region's electric power transmission capacity.

BPA is responsible for meeting the net firm power requirements of its requesting customers through a variety of means, including energy conservation programs, acquisition of renewable and other resources, and power exchanges with utilities both in and outside the region.

BPA will finance its operations on the basis of the self-financing authority provided by Federal Columbia River Transmission System Act of 1974 (Transmission Act) (Public Law 93-454) and the new borrowing authority provided by the Pacific Northwest Electric Power Planning and Conservation Act (Pacific Northwest Power Act) (Public Law 96-501) for energy conservation, renewable energy resources and capital fish facilities. Authority to borrow is available to the BPA on a permanent, indefinite basis. The amount of borrowing outstanding at any time cannot exceed $3.75 billion.

Operating expenses: Energy resources.—Provides for the orderly planning, contractual acquisition, and oversight of reliable, cost-effective, environmentally acceptable resources, including resources purchased prior to the Pacific Northwest Power Act, as well as cost-effective conservation measures, including home energy efficiency, commercial energy efficiency, industrial technology transfers, solar energy applications, fuel switching and conservation measures for new home and commercial building construction. These resources are needed to serve BPA's portion of the region's forecasted net electric load requirements.

Residential exchange.—Provides for extending the benefits of low-cost Federal power to the residential and small farm customers of investor-owned and publicly-owned utilities, in accordance with the Pacific Northwest Power Act.

Transmission system development.—Provides funding from revenues for electric transmission research and development and program support of the capital investment program described below for transmission system development.

System operation.—Provides for operating an estimated 14,800 miles of line and 392 substations of the BPA transmission system during 1994.

System maintenance.—Provides for the annual expenses of maintaining the facilities and equipment of the BPA transmission system in 1994.

Power marketing.—Provides for forecasting regional demand; negotiating power sales and wheeling, billing, and servicing these contracts; reviewing and establishing wholesale power and wheeling rates; and encouraging public participation in the formation of BPA policies and programs.

Power scheduling.—Provides for the scheduling of power.

Fish and wildlife.—Provides the annual expenses for protection, mitigation and enhancement of fish and wildlife affected by hydroelectric facilities on the Columbia River and its tributaries, in accordance with the Pacific Northwest Power Act.

Planning Council.—Provides for activities of the Pacific Northwest Electric Power and Conservation Planning Council required by the Pacific Northwest Power Act.

Interest.—Provides for payments to the U.S. Treasury for interest on borrowings to finance BPA's transmission system development, system replacements, conservation related costs previously capitalized, capital equipment, and fish and wildlife programs under $3.75 billion borrowing authority provided by the Transmission Act as amended by the Pacific Northwest Power Act and replenished by Public Law 98-50. This category also includes interest on Corps of Engineers, BPA and U.S. Bureau of Reclamation appropriated debt.

Associated project costs.—Provides for repayment of the operation and maintenance (O&M) costs of the 30 U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and U.S. Bureau of Reclamation power generating projects, and amortization on the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation capital investment in power generating facilities and irrigation assistance at Bureau facilities.

Reimbursable.—Provides for reimbursable power purchases, and for services such as construction, operation and maintenance of transmission facilities when requested and financed by other entities. Also includes the coordination agreement payments to the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

Capital investments: Energy resources.—Provides for funding conservation measures including home and commercial energy efficiency, industrial technology transfers, solar energy applications and conservation measures for new home and commercial building construction.

Transmission system development.—Provides for planning, design and construction of transmission lines, substation and control system additions, and enhancements to the FCRPS transmission system for a reliable, efficient and cost-effective regional transmission system. During 1994, BPA plans to energize one additional substation along with a variety of upgrades and additions to existing facilities.

System replacements.—Provides for planning, design, and construction work to repair or replace existing transmission lines, substations, control systems, and general facilities of the FCRPS transmission system.

Capital equipment.—Provides for general purpose ADP equipment, office furniture and equipment, and software development in support of all BPA programs.

Fish and wildlife.—Provides for capital investments to protect, mitigate, and enhance fish and wildlife affected by hydroelectric facilities on the Columbia River and its tributaries, in accordance with the Pacific Northwest Power Act.

Contingencies.—Although contingencies are not specifically funded, the need may arise to provide for purchase of power in low-water years; for repair and/or replacement of facilities affected by natural and man-made emergencies, including the resulting additional costs for contracting, construction, and operation and maintenance work; for unavoidable increased costs for the planned program due to necessary but unforeseen adjustments, including engineering and design changes, contractor and other claims and relocations, or for payment of a retrospective premium adjustment in excess nuclear property insurance.

Financing.—The Transmission Act provides for the use by BPA of all receipts, collections, and recoveries in cash from all sources, including the sale of bonds, to finance the annual budget programs of BPA. These receipts result primarily from the sale of power and wheeling services. The Transmission Act also provides for authority to borrow from the U.S. Treasury at rates comparable to borrowings at open market rates for similar issues. As amended by the Pacific Northwest Power Act and replenished by Public Law 98-50, it allows for $3.75 billion of borrowing to be outstanding at any time. The fiscal year 1994 capital program obligations are estimated to be $434.2 million. To the extent BPA capital borrowing authority is insufficient in 1994, BPA would use cash reserves generated by revenues from customers to finance some of these investments.

In 1992 BPA made payments to the Treasury of $661.3 million and also expects to make payments of $749.1 million in 1993 and $965.9 million in 1994 on a current services basis. The 1994 payment will be distributed as follows: U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service O&M for associated project costs ($132.9 million), interest expense on bonds and appropriations ($366.3 million), allowance for funds used during construction—capitalized interest ($16.2 million) and amortization ($450.5 million).

Direct loans.—There will be no direct loans in 1994.

Operating results.—Total revenues and reimbursements are forecast at approximately $3,705 million in 1994.

It should be noted that BPA's revenue forecasts are based on several critical assumptions about both the supply of and demand for Federal energy. The current FY 1994 forecast, for example, is from the initial rate filing for BPA's 1994 rates, and may change before the final filing in July, 1993. During the operating year, deviation from the conditions assumed in a rate case may result in a variation in actual revenues of several hundred million dollars from the forecast.

Western's operation and maintenance and power marketing expenses for the Colorado River storage project, the Colorado River Basin project, the Seedskadee project and the Fort Peck project are financed from power revenues.

Western operates and maintains approximately 3,500 miles of transmission lines, substations, switchyards, communications and control equipment associated with this fund. Wholesale power is provided to utilities over interconnected high-voltage transmission systems. In keeping with statutory requirements, long-term power contracts provide for periodic rate adjustments to ensure that the Federal Government recovers all costs of operation and all capital invested in power, with interest.

Colorado River storage project.—Western markets power and operates and maintains the power transmission facilities of the Colorado River storage project. Western also purchases electricity and pays wheeling fees to meet firm and nonfirm commitments.

Colorado River Basin project.—The Colorado River Basin project includes Western's expenses associated with the Central Arizona project and the United States entitlement from the Navajo coal-fired powerplant. Revenues in excess of operating expenses are deposited in the Lower Colorado River Basin development fund.

Fort Peck project.—Revenue collected by Western is used to defray construction, operation and maintenance and power marketing expenses associated with the power generation and transmission facilities of the Fort Peck project, Corps of Engineers—Civil, and emergency expenses to ensure continuous operation. The Corps operates and maintains the power generating facilities, and Western operates and maintains the transmission system and performs power marketing functions.

Seedskadee project.—Activity under the Seedskadee project at Fontenelle Dam in Wyoming was previously included in the Colorado River Storage project. Beginning in FY 1994, separate reporting will be maintained in order to comply with power repayment requirements.

Energy sales and revenue from the Colorado River storage project, the Seedskadee project and the Colorado River Basin project are shown in the table below. Revenue from the Fort Peck project is integrated with Pick-Sloan Missouri Basin program revenue and included in the revenue totals shown in Western's construction, rehabilitation, operation and maintenance account.

Title VII, part C of the Public Health Service Act established a revolving fund from which health professions schools could borrow in order to provide loans to their students.

Public Law 89–751, the Allied Health Professions Personnel Training Act of 1966, amended the Public Health Service Act to authorize the Federal Government to pay the difference between the interest paid by students to the schools and the interest payable by the schools to the Government National Mortgage Association (GNMA) and the Treasury.

Title VI and subsequently title XVI of the Public Health Service Act established a loan and loan guarantee fund for medical facilities with a maximum amount allowable for the Government's liability. Direct loans were made available for public facilities and guaranteed loans for private, nonprofit facilities. Funds under this authority were established in the amount of $50 million for use in fulfilling guarantees in event of default, $30 million as a revolving fund for direct loans and an amount for interest subsidy payments on guaranteed loans. Default and interest subsidy funds are replenished as necessary through the annual appropriation process.

Legislation has been proposed to set the Federal reimbursement rate at a uniform 50 percent for all State administrative costs of the Aid to Families with Dependent Children, Food Stamps and Medicaid programs. There will be waivers for some States, in hardship cases.

The President is committed to strengthening the child support enforcement system. Better child support enforcement will ensure both parents' responsibility for the well being of their children and decrease the burden of welfare on the taxpayer. Legislation will be proposed to meet the President's child support enforcement goals. The President will also be taking action to ensure that the Federal Government is a model employer in the area of child support enforcement.

DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT

This chapter presents the budget and program estimates for the Department of Housing and Urban Development. The major divisions of this chapter conform to the following Department activities:

Housing programs cover the Department's major housing subsidy programs except for those activities under the public and Indian housing programs. Included in the Housing section is the Homeownership and Opportunity for People Everywhere Grants (HOPE Grants) program and a new initiative—assistance for Severely Distressed Public Housing. The mortgage insurance activities of the Federal Housing Administration, including loan management and property disposition activities, are also included under this heading. Other activities included under this heading are the Office of Interstate Land Sales Registration and manufactured home inspection and monitoring programs.

Public and Indian housing programs cover public housing management and development activities (including modernization and resident management programs) and provision of Indian housing assistance. This section also includes a new urban anti-crime initiative—Community Partnerships Against Crime (COMPAC).

Government National Mortgage Association (GNMA) covers the Department's programs to assist in the availability of mortgage credit and stabilize financing of selected types of mortgage loans utilizing the guarantee of mortgage-backed securities. GNMA will begin utilizing multiple maturity securities issued through Real Estate Mortgage Investment Conduits (REMICs) in addition to its current single-class mortgage-backed securities.

Community planning and development covers the community development grant program authorized by the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, as amended, the Home Investment Partnerships program (HOME) and the homeless grant programs. This heading also includes the administration of the earlier terminated categorical community development programs, including urban development action grants, and the revolving fund for liquidating programs.

Fair housing and equal opportunity includes the Fair Housing Assistance Program authorized by title VIII of the Civil Rights Act of 1968, as amended, and the Fair Housing Initiatives Program.

Policy development and research includes the policy development, economic analysis, program evaluation, and research activities of the Department.

Departmental Management includes the Department's Salaries and Expenses, the Inspector General, and the Office of Federal Housing Enterprise Oversight.

A total of $8.7 billion is requested for 1994 under Annual Contributions for Assisted Housing. This includes $8.4 billion in new appropriations: $7.8 billion under this head and $0.6 billion under investments. In addition, the recapture and reuse of $0.2 billion of previously appropriated funds is requested.

The funding will be used for rental assistance for approximately 99,000 units and for amendments to existing contracts. Included within the total number of units proposed for this budget are 59,413 incremental units. This total is comprised of 6,400 units to assist the elderly and disabled, 41,338 incremental rental assistance units, 4,800 units for Public Housing Development, 2,725 units for Indian Housing Development, 1,364 units for the Moving to Opportunity program, 2,202 units for the Foster Child Care initiative, and approximately 600 units for Housing Opportunities for Persons with AIDS.

Within the $8 billion requested is funding for Public and Indian Housing amendments, lease adjustments, and $3.1 billion for Modernization activities. Annual Contributions funding ($600 million) is also being requested to preserve low-income housing by enticing owners not to prepay their mortgages and to maintain their projects for low-income renters.

Funding is also requested for Family Investment Centers ($26 million), Family Self-Sufficiency Coordinators ($8.4 million), Property Disposition and Loan Management activities ($282 million), and for lead-based paint abatement ($100 million).

The Budget also reflects several cost saving initiatives. Included is a reform to the Preservation program which will reduce the Federal cost limits from 120 percent to 100 percent of the prevailing rents in relevant local market areas in which the prepaying project is located. In addition, the fees paid to PHAs to adminsiter the rental assistance programs will be set at 7.2375 percent for fiscal year 1994, and the annual rental adjustment factor paid to project owners will, starting in fiscal year 1994, be rounded down to the nearest dollar instead of up to the nearest dollar. And finally, the residual receipts contained in project owners' project reserve accounts will either be returned to the Department or used to offset new funding required for the project.

The program being proposed for Annual Contributions in 1994 is summarized in the following table.

The funding requested for 1994 is expected to support 4,900 units for the elderly and 1,500 units for the disabled.

Public and Indian housing.—New development funding is being requested in fiscal year 1994 for both Public Housing ($400 million) and for Indian Housing development ($257 million). These funds are expected to support 4,800 Public Housing units and 2,725 Indian Housing units. In addition, $3.1 billion is requested for Public and Indian Housing Modernization activities and $84.7 million is requested for Public/Indian Housing amendments and lease adjustments. Within the modernization program, efforts are underway to expedite the transfer of funds to Public and Indian Housing Authorities, and to encourage these authorities to complete modernization projects in a more timely fashion. This policy will have the effect of increasing outlays for modernization.

Section 8 funding for the renewal of expiring subsidy contracts is being requested in a separate account.

To more concisely portray budget activity under the subsidized housing programs, the Annual Contributions for Assisted Housing account has been split into two accounts: Annual Contributions for Assisted Housing, which proceeds this section, and Other Assisted Housing Programs presented immediately above.

Rent supplement.—Rent supplement assistance payments will continue to be made on behalf of qualified low-income tenants in approximately 19,270 units which have not converted to section 8. A rescission of $32.4 million of balances recaptured pursuant to conversions in 1992 is proposed in 1994.

Section 235.—The Housing and Urban-Rural Recovery Act of 1983 (Public Law 98–181) authorized a restructured section 235 program based on a 10-year interest reduction subsidy. A total of $150 million of budget authority was provided in the Second Supplemental Appropriations Act of 1984 (Public Law 98–396) to fund the program. Recaptures of budget authority from terminations must be transferred into the Homeownership Assistance Fund account established pursuant to Public Law 98–181. Amounts deposited will be available for use to assist program beneficiaries still in need of assistance at the expiration of their present ten-year assistance contracts.

Section 236.—The Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968, as amended, authorizes the section 236 Rental Housing Assistance Program which subsidizes the monthly mortgage payment that an owner of a rental or cooperative project is required to make. This interest subsidy reduces rents for lower income tenants.

The Rental Housing Assistance Rescission allows the rescission of not more than $2,000,000 in uncommitted balances RF contract authority.

In addition up to $2.3 million in contract authority ($45.5 million in budget authority) may be rescinded as a result of mortgage prepayments by section 236 project owners.

The table below reflects the consolidated outlay total for both the Annual Contributions for Assisted Housing Account and the Other Assisted Housing account, including proposed funding shown separately as supplemental or investment requests.

The Homeownership and Opportunity for People Everywhere Program provides homeownership opportunities which are affordable for low-income families. Units will be converted to homeownership from public and Indian housing properties in HOPE 1, from FHA-insured and Government-held multifamily properties in HOPE 2 and from Government-owned or -held single family properties in HOPE 3. HOPE Grants will be used for property acquisition where appropriate, rehabilitation, mortgage subsidies, security measures, operating reserves, and technical assistance. In addition, grants may be devoted to counseling and training of residents, and other activities intended to help them become self-sufficient homeowners.

The budget authority for HOPE homeownership grants in 1994 will reflect the funding of implementation grants only. No additional planning grant funding will be provided. In addition, no further funding of the Elderly Independence Program is proposed in 1994.

The program and financing schedule also reflects funds appropriated in 1993 for the Opportunities for Youth: Youthbuild and the Revitalization of Severely Distressed Public Housing projects programs. The $40 million in 1993 for the Youthbuild program is drawn from HOPE 1 ($25 million) and HOPE 2 ($15 million). The $300 million in 1993 for the Distressed Public Housing program is drawn from amounts appropriated for this purpose under the "Hope Grants" heading. These amounts are being proposed for transfer into separate accounts.

Public housing units which are utilized for homeownership will be replaced by additional housing or housing assistance, and Section 8 rental assistance will be given to eligible residents who elect to move from multifamily projects which are converted to homeownership.

Section 8 assistance for single room occupancy dwellings is authorized by Title IV, subtitle E, of the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act, as amended by the Housing and Community Development Act of 1992. An appropriation of $107.8 million is requested for this program in 1994.

Funding for this program before 1990 was provided under the Annual Contributions for Assisted Housing account. A separate appropriation, independent of the Assisted Housing account, was provided beginning in 1990. The obligations and outlays shown in the Program and Financing schedule above do not include activity from the pre-1990 appropriations. For purposes of comparison, the table below presents data for the entire program from all appropriations:

Section 620 of the National Manufactured Housing Construction and Safety Standards Act of 1974, as amended, authorizes enforcement of appropriate construction standards for the construction, design and performance of manufactured homes to assure their quality, durability, and safety. All manufactured homes produced since the standards took effect on June 15, 1976 must comply with Federal construction and safety standards. The States are actively encouraged to participate in the program under compliance plans approved by HUD.

A fee is charged to the manufacturers for each manufactured home produced to cover the costs of the monitoring and enforcement activities by HUD contract agents. Fees are deposited in a special fund administered by the Department, and a portion of the fee receipts are transferred to the salaries and expenses account to defray the direct administrative expenses of the program.

The Interstate Land Sales Full Disclosure Act provides protection to the public with respect to purchases or leases of subdivision lots. Statements of record must be filed with the Secretary before subdivisions with 100 or more lots may be sold in interstate commerce, except when the subdivision is eligible for exemption.

The Secretary is authorized to charge a fee, to be paid by the developer when filing a statement of record. The fee receipts are permanently appropriated and have helped finance a portion of the direct administrative expenses incurred in program operations.

The Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968 authorized the Secretary to establish a revolving fund into which rental collections in excess of the established basic rents for units in section 236 subsidized projects would be deposited.

The Housing and Community Development Amendment of 1978 authorized the Secretary, subject to approval in appropriation acts, to transfer excess rent collections received after 1978 to the Troubled projects operating subsidy program, renamed the Flexible Subsidy Fund. Prior to that time, collections were used for paying tax and utility increases in section 236 projects. The Housing and Community Development Act of 1980 amended the 1978 Act by authorizing the transfer of excess rent collections regardless of when collected.

This Budget proposes that the resources from the Rental Housing Assistance Fund will continue to be transferred to the Flexible Subsidy Fund.

The Flexible Subsidy Fund assists financially troubled subsidized projects under certain FHA authorities. The subsidies are intended to prevent potential losses to the FHA fund resulting from project insolvency and to preserve these projects as a viable source of housing for low- and moderate-income tenants.

The Flexible Subsidy Program, together with the Low-Income Housing Preservation Program and the Multifamily Property Disposition Program, provides a comprehensive vehicle to accomplish the goal of preserving and restoring the assisted housing stock. Increased funding for these programs is an important component of the President's Investment Strategy. This program and financing schedule reflects the portion of the program which would continue to be funded by receipts from the Rental Housing Assistance Fund and income from the Flexible Subsidy Fund.

The Homeownership Assistance Fund was established by the Housing and Urban-Rural Recovery Act of 1983. It provides for the receipt of recaptures of budget authority, cash, and interest earnings under the restructured section 235 program. The funds are authorized to be used, to the extent approved in Appropriation Acts, by the Secretary to provide additional section 235 assistance payments for mortgagors who are unable to assume the full payment due under the mortgage after the termination of the original 10-year assistance payments contract.

The Nehemiah grants program was authorized by the Housing and Community Development Act of 1987 and funded in 1989, 1990 and 1991 under the Annual Contributions for Assisted Housing account. The legislation authorizes a revolving fund into which are deposited appropriated funds. This program and financing schedule indicates the appropriation from 1990 and 1991 as being transferred from the Annual Contributions account to the Nehemiah revolving fund.

The program provides loans to eligible families to assist in the purchase of new or substantially rehabilitated units. The purpose of the program was: (1) to encourage homeownership by families not otherwise able to afford homeownership; (2) to undertake a concentrated effort to rebuild the depressed areas of the cities and to create sound and attractive neighborhoods; and (3) to increase the employment of neighborhood residents. No new funding is requested for this program in 1994. Pursuant to 1993 Appropriations language, $18 million of unreserved balances are to be added to and merged with funds made available under the Annual Contributions account. This schedule reflects the liquidation of reserve/obligated balances remaining in the Nehemiah Housing Opportunity Fund.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records, for this program, the subsidy costs associated with the loan guarantees committed in 1992 and thereafter, as well as administrative expenses of this program. The subsidy amounts are estimated on a present value basis; the administrative expenses are estimated on a cash basis. Total insurance commitments are estimated at $64.6 billion in 1994. Because the net present value of future income for the 1994 book of business is expected to exceed the net present value of expenses, no credit subsidy appropriation is required. Negative subsidies are recorded in the MMI guaranteed loan financing account. The appropriation requested, $262.8 million, is to be transferred to the consolidated Salaries and Expenses, HUD, account.

Regulations implementing major reforms to this single family mortgage insurance program, enacted in the National Affordable Housing Act of 1990, became effective July 1, 1991. The objective of the reforms was to rebuild the economic value of the fund while maintaining the following principles: (1) meeting the needs of low- and moderate-income first-time homebuyers; (2) establishing insurance premiums that reflect the risk of default; and (3) requiring homebuyers to make minimum equity contributions to protect them and the Fund from excessive default risk.

An independent actuarial analysis of the fund recommended that capital in the fund be increased to 1.25 percent of outstanding insurance in force within 2 years, and to 2.0 percent by the year 2000. According to the reforms implemented with the July 1, 1991 regulations FHA homebuyers are paying an annual premium of 50 basis points (0.05 percent) for a specified number of years depending upon the amount of downpayment the homebuyer makes. This annual premium is in addition to the up-front premium, currently 3.0 percent dropping to 2.25 percent beginning in 1995.

Other changes to the program aimed at stabilizing the fund included, elimination of distributive share payments (mutuality benefits) to FHA-insured homeowners who pay off their loans unless the entire fund is actuarially sound; and, elimination of vacation properties from the insurance program.

The Department is monitoring the effects of these reforms on the fund. The financial health of the fund depends on the number and costs of homeowner defaults, which are a function of general economic conditions and homeowner equity in the underlying property. The Secretary has the authority to raise or lower the premiums, if an independent auditor determines that the Fund is not meeting its operational goals. These statutory goals are: (1) maintaining an adequate capital ratio; (2) providing access to mortgage credit for homebuyers with low downpayments and first-time homebuyers; (3) minimizing the risk to the Fund and to homeowners from homeowner default; and, (4) avoiding adverse selection.

[1] Includes the transfer of the GI and SRI Fund Guaranteed Loan balances to a new account.

The Federal Housing Administration (FHA) Fund consists of four separate insurance funds. Prior to 1992, all budget transactions for the four funds were reflected in a single consolidated budget account (86–4070). Beginning in 1992, the transactions of the Fund appear in six separate accounts. (However, financial data for each individual insurance fund are continuing to be maintained for control and reporting purposes.)

In order to present more clearly the operations of the various funds, FHA's budget transactions have been separated into two major business segments. The single-family insurance programs in the Mutual Mortgage and the Cooperative Management Housing insurance funds (MMI/CMHI) form one segment. The multifamily and high risk insurance programs in the General and Special Risk insurance funds (GI/SRI) form the other.

The Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990 requires each FHA business segment to consist of three separate budget accounts. A liquidating account records the revenues and costs associated with loans insured prior to October 1, 1991; a financing account records the revenues and costs associated with loans insured after September 30, 1991; and, a program account records the transactions associated with the program subsidy costs, if any, and the costs of administering the program.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records, for this program, all cash flows to and from the Government resulting from loan guarantees committed prior to 1992. This account is shown on a cash basis. All new activity in this program in 1992 and thereafter (including modifications of loan guarantees that resulted from commitments in any year) are recorded in corresponding program (86-0138) and financing (86-4587) accounts.

The detailed program activity in the "Program Highlights" table shown below reflects only the activity in the MMI/CMHI Funds. The detailed GI/SRI program activity can be found with the GI/SRI liquidating account (86-4072).

The General insurance fund provides for a large number of specialized mortgage insurance programs, including the insurance of loans for property improvements as well as for cooperatives, condominiums, housing for the elderly, rental housing and nonprofit hospitals.

The Special risk insurance fund provides mortgage insurance on behalf of mortgagors eligible for interest reduction payments who otherwise would not be eligible for mortgage insurance. In addition, the fund provides insurance on mortgages covering experimental housing where strict adherence to State or local building regulations is not observed. Also provided is insurance for high-risk mortgagors who normally would not be eligible for mortgage insurance.

Budget program.—As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records, for this program, all cash flows to and from the Government resulting from loan guarantees committed prior to 1992. This account is shown on a cash basis. All new activity in this program in 1992 and thereafter (including modifications of loan guarantees that resulted from obligations or commitments in any year) is recorded in corresponding program (86-0200) and financing (86-4077) accounts.

The detailed programs activity in the "Program Highlights" table shown below reflects the consolidated activity of the GI/SRI account.

Note.—Amounts for direct loan obligations reflect reservations of section 202 funds. Loan obligations shown under the program and financing schedule reflect loans that have reached the initial closing stage of processing.

The Housing for the Elderly or Handicapped Fund was established pursuant to section 202 of the Housing Act of 1959, as amended. The fund provides direct loans to nonprofit organizations building and managing housing projects for lower income persons who are elderly or disabled.

Projects must include an assured range of necessary services for the occupants of such projects. In addition, the section 8 lower income housing assistance payments program has been used in conjunction with the section 202 program. Applications under the two programs have been processed simultaneously.

The data included in these schedules represent direct loan activities funded under the Housing for the Elderly or Handicapped Loan Fund. Activities in support of the needs of the elderly and disabled are carried out under a new grant program funded in the 1991 Appropriations Act (P.L. 101–507) and authorized in the National Affordable Housing Act (P.L. 101–625).

After April 1, 1992, all projects for which there were administrative reservations converted to the new capital advance assistance program. The operations of the new grant program are included within the Annual Contributions for Assisted Housing account presented elsewhere in this Appendix.

The program and financing schedule for this account summarizes the Federal government's obligations for this program. The amounts reflected in the following summary of administrative commitments reflect outstanding section 202 fund reservations, whereas, the obligations portion of the program and financing schedule reflects commitments which have reached the initial loan closing stage of processing.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records, for this program, all cash flows to and from the Government resulting from direct loans obligated prior to 1992. This account is shown on a cash basis.

The Nonprofit sponsor assistance fund provided interest-free loans to nonprofit organizations to plan housing projects to be financed under the section 202 housing for the elderly or disabled program. The Budget does not propose a loan limitation in 1994 since the capital advance program for the elderly and disabled provides money for technical assistance to help nonprofit sponsors to finance these "seed" costs.

The Low-Rent Public Housing Loan Fund is used to provide direct Federal loans to fund remaining Public Housing Agency (PHA) and Indian Housing Authority (IHA) construction, acquisition, and modernization activities reserved under the Annual Contributions appropriation through 1986. These loans are made from available resources of this fund and from borrowings from the Treasury. Under legislation enacted during 1986 (Public Law 99–272), the borrowings from the Treasury are forgiven at the end of each fiscal year and the loans to PHAs/IHAs are forgiven as construction, acquisition, and modernization activities are completed. Under the provisions of this legislation, $50 million of borrowings from the Treasury were forgiven in 1992, an estimated $50 million will be borrowed from the Treasury and forgiven in 1993 and an estimated $25 million will be borrowed from the Treasury and forgiven in 1994. The table below shows the status of outstanding loans for the period 1992–1994. The $92 million balance at the end of each year represents administrative loans, off-site facility loans, and preliminary loans on projects never undertaken and excess financing.

The Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968 authorized the Government National Mortgage Association (GNMA) to guarantee the timely payment of principal and interest on privately issued securities that are backed by pools of FHA, VA and FmHA mortgages. The GNMA guarantee gives lenders access to the capital markets for funds to originate new loans. Over 95% of new FHA and VA loans are pooled into new GNMA securities.

Financing.—GNMA Issuers are assessed commitment, guarantee and other fees to cover costs incurred by GNMA and to fund a reserve against possible future payments under the guarantee.

Operating results.—Fee collections, interest, and other income are expected to exceed expenses by $16 million in both 1993 and 1994. These amounts will be retained to cover future year expenses and as a reserve against losses that may be incurred on guarantees.

[1] Transfer to the financing account.
[2] Ultimate liability for GNMA mortgage backed securities rests with other U.S. agencies. Total Federal contingent liability should not be double counted.

The Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968 authorized the Government National Mortgage Association (GNMA) to guarantee the timely payment of principal and interest on privately issued securities that are backed by pools of FHA, VA and FmHA mortgages. The GNMA guarantee gives lenders access to the capital markets for funds to originate new loans. Over 95% of new FHA and VA loans are pooled into new GNMA securities.

Budget Program.—Program activity is summarized below:

Legislation will be proposed to authorize GNMA to issue Real Estate Mortgage Investment Conduits (REMICs), beginning in 1994. Under its new REMIC program, GNMA would guarantee REMIC securities based on and backed by mortgage-backed securities (MBS) guaranteed by GNMA. A REMIC is a trust composed of MBSs. The REMIC issues certificates of interest to investors and elects to be taxed under the REMIC provisions of Federal tax law (Sections 860A through 860G of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986). Virtually all REMICs issue multiple class securities with different maturities, typically between 2 and 20 years. This multiple class characteristic is largely what distinguishes REMICs from single class MBSs of the kind that GNMA has been guaranteeing since 1970.

Program activity is summarized below:

Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, as amended, authorizes the Secretary to make grants to units of general local government and States to fund local community development programs.

Funds are allocated to Indian tribes, and on an entitlement basis, to metropolitan cities and urban counties which receive their grants using the higher of two objective formulas. States and small cities are also allocated a portion of the available funds.

Budget program. A total appropriation of $4.2 billion is proposed for 1994, including $90 million as an investment proposal. The Administration also proposed a 1993 supplemental appropriation of $2.5 billion as part of the economic stimulus program. The Budget also proposes a 1993 supplemental transfer of $40 million from the Annual Contributions for Assisted Housing account, enacted in P.L. 102-368, to be used under the CDBG program for disaster-related purposes. Grant outlays are estimated at $3.8 billion in 1993 and $5 billion in 1994, including the impact of the stimulus and investment programs

In 1994, the Department proposes to fund public housing child care authorized by section 222 of the Housing and Urban Rural Recovery Act of 1983 at $15 million and the neighborhood development program authorized by section 123 of the 1983 Act at $5 million.

HOME INVESTMENT PARTNERSHIPS PROGRAM

For the HOME investment partnerships program, as authorized under title II of the Cranston-Gonzalez National Affordable Housing Act (Public Law 101-625), as amended, [$1,000,000,000] $1,088,620,000, to remain available until expended[: Provided, That in order to allocate the total amount provided, the Act shall be construed as follows: in section 216(3)(A), "$750,000" both places it appears shall be "$375,000"; in section 217(b)(2)(A), "$3,000,000" both places it appears shall be "$750,000"; in section 217(b)(2)(B), "$500,000" both places it appears shall be "$250,000"; and in section 217(b)(3), "$500,000" shall be "$250,000".]

[Hereafter, for purposes of amounts appropriated under this heading in the Departments of Veterans Affairs and Housing and Urban Development, and Independent Agencies Appropriations Act, 1992 (Public Law 102-139; 105 Stat. 736, 744), the per-unit cost limits established by the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development under section 212(d) of the HOME Investment Partnerships Act (42 U.S.C. 12742(d)) shall reflect the actual development costs in each area in a manner that ensures compliance with the matching contributions waiver provided under such heading in such Appropriations Act.]

[Section 217(a) of the Cranston-Gonzalez National Affordable Housing Act (42 U.S.C. 12747(a)) is amended—

(1) in the first sentence of paragraph (1), by inserting "and after reserving amounts for the insular areas under paragraph (3)" before the first comma; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(3) INSULAR AREAS.—For each fiscal year, of any amounts approved in appropriations Acts to carry out this title, the Secretary shall reserve for grants to the insular areas the greater of (A) $750,000, or (B) 0.2 percent of the amounts appropriated under such Acts. The Secretary shall provide for the distribution of amounts reserved under this paragraph among the insular areas pursuant to specific criteria for such distribution. The criteria shall be contained in a regulation promulgated by the Secretary after notice and public comment."]. (Departments of Veterans Affairs and Housing and Urban Development, and Independent Agencies Appropriations Act, 1993.)

The Budget also proposes a 1993 supplemental transfer of $60 million from the Annual Contributions for Assisted Housing account, enacted in P.L. 102–368, to be used under the HOME program for disaster-related purposes.

Title IV, subtitle C, of the Stewart B. McKinney Homeless Assistance Act (Public Law 100–77) authorizes assistance to promote the development of supportive housing and services for deinstitutionalized homeless individuals, homeless families with children, homeless individuals with mental disabilities, and other homeless persons. Such assistance is available for the acquisition, rehabilitation, construction, or leasing of structures to be used for homeless persons as well as to pay for operating costs and supportive services.

The Budget proposes a total appropriation of $320 million for the Supportive Housing Program in 1994, including $165.9 million as part of the Administration's investment program. The Administration also proposed a 1993 supplemental appropriation of $423 million as part of the economic stimulus program.

The proposed appropriation increase for the Supportive Housing Program will permit the funding of two demonstration initiatives in 1994. Rather than requesting separate appropriations for new programs authorized under subtitles D and G of Title IV of the McKinney Act, funds for the Supportive Housing Program will be made available for "safe havens" demonstration projects and rural homeless assistance projects. Up to $50 million of Supportive Housing Program funds will be made available for safe havens projects. In addition, up to $20 million will be made available to carry out rural homeless assistance projects, including any eligible activity described in subtitle G.

This appropriation funds the Office of Federal Housing Enterprise Oversight (OFHEO), which was established in 1992 to regulate the financial safety and soundness of the two housing Government Sponsored Enterprises (GSEs)—the Federal National Mortgage Association and the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation. The Office was authorized in the Federal Housing Enterprise Safety and Soundness Act of 1992, which also instituted a three-part capital standard for the GSEs, and gave the regulator enhanced authority to enforce those standards. In addition to financial regulation, the OFHEO will monitor the GSEs' compliance with affordable housing goals that were also contained in the Act.

The value of unused bidding rights increases at a rate set quarterly by the Secretary of the Treasury, pursuant to section 11 of the Debt Collection Act of 1982 (31 U.S.C. 3717). Trustee funds, Alaska townsites.—Amounts received from sale of Alaska town lots are available for expenses incident to the maintenance and sale of townsites (31 U.S.C. 1321; Comp. Gen. Dec. of Nov. 18, 1935).

State regulatory program grants.—This program activity is to provide grants to States for the operation of permanent enforcement programs under the terms of the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977 (the Act). As of September 30, 1991, 24 States with actual or planned coal mining facilities had approved State programs.

Federal regulatory programs.—This activity includes programs for Federal oversight of State permanent regulatory programs, for monitoring State inspection and enforcement, for the provision of technical assistance to States, for the assessment and collection of civil penalties imposed pursuant to the Act, and for the administration of the Federal regulatory program in States without approved permanent enforcement programs. In addition, it also includes funding for the Office of Surface Mining (OSM) to perform reclamation in cases where performance bonds have been forfeited and OSM is the regulatory authority, and funding derived from collections of civil penalties pursuant to the Act, which is used by OSM and the States for reclamation projects.

General administration.—This activity includes: the Offices of the Director and Deputy Directors; the Headquarters staffs for Public Affairs, Equal Employment Opportunity, Congressional Liaison, Information Systems Management, Planning and Analysis, Budget, Correspondence, and Issues Management; and the Divisions of Financial Management; Personnel; and Management Services. This activity represents only that portion of the total General Administration expenses attributable to the Regulation and Technology appropriation. The remainder has been requested from the Abandoned Mine Reclamation Fund.

State reclamation program grants.—Each State and Tribe with an approved reclamation program is entitled, subject to appropriation, to receive 50 percent of Abandoned Mine Reclamation Fund revenues derived from operating mines in that State or Tribal Land. With grants, States and Tribes assume primary responsibility for addressing problems such as subsidence, underground fires, open shafts, and acid drainage in accordance with priorities set forth in the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977 (the Act). States with approved reclamation plans are responsible for emergency reclamation.

Federal reclamation programs.—This activity includes fee collection, assistance to States in developing reclamation programs, abandoned mine lands reclamation projects undertaken directly by the Office of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement for States lacking approved reclamation plans, and the Rural Abandoned Mine Program (RAMP) administered by the Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service.

Small operator assistance payments.—This activity provides payments for authorized services to eligible coal mine operators in preparing applications for mining permits under a permanent State or Federal regulatory program. These services include determining the probable hydrologic consequences of the proposed mining operation and analysis of test borings or core samples.

General administration.—This activity includes the offices described for the General Administration activity in the Regulation and Technology appropriation. The funds for this activity represent only that portion of general administration expenses attributable to the Abandoned Mine Reclamation Fund.

Implementation of the Central Utah Project Completion Act (Titles II–VI of Public Law 102–575) has required the establishment of two new accounts: the Central Utah Project Completion Account and the Utah Reclamation Mitigation and Conservation Account. For technical reasons, these accounts have been included in the Bureau of Reclamation section of the fiscal year 1994 Budget, but they will be presently separately in future Budgets.

The Titles II thru VI of Public Law 102–575 provide for the completion of the Central Utah Project authorized by the Act of April 11, 1956, and other water delivery and management features and activities; and for the mitigation, conservation, and enhancement of fish and wildlife and recreational resources. Funds are requested for the Central Utah Water Conservancy District, for the Utah Reclamation Mitigation and Conservation Commission, for the Federal Contribution to the Utah Reclamation Mitigation and Conservation Account, and to carry out the responsibilities of the Secretary.

The Geological Survey provides basic scientific data and information concerning water, land, and mineral resources and works with other Federal agencies to encourage increased data-production partnerships, data sharing, and adherence to standards for production of geographic, geologic, and water data. Funding for 1994 emphasizes water-quality research and accelerated digital geographic data production, and continues geological hazards and global change research, and energy and mineral assessments.

National mapping, geography, and surveys.—The national mapping program produces and makes available, in printed and digital format, cartographic and geographic base data and multipurpose and special-purpose maps. Research is conducted in the mapping sciences, geography, and related disciplines in support of data production and applications. Advanced cartographic systems (ACS) is a multiyear effort to modernize and expand the capability to generate map products more efficiently to meet the needs of the Nation.

Geologic and mineral resource surveys and mapping.—The national program of onshore and offshore geologic research and investigations produces: (1) information on geologic hazards, such as earthquakes, volcanoes, and landslides; (2) information for use by other Federal and State agencies in the management of public lands and in national policy determinations related to the Nation's environmental information needs; (3) information on the chemistry and physics of the Earth, the climate, and the geologic processes by which it was formed and is being modified; (4) geologic, geophysical, and geochemical maps and analyses to address environmental concerns; and (5) improved methods and instruments for mineral and energy assessments.

Water resources investigations.—The national program of water resources monitoring, investigations, and research has the objective of appraising the Nation's water resources and ensuring that the information necessary to develop and manage them efficiently and effectively is available when needed. The program produces data, analyses, and assessments to support Federal, State and local government decisions on water planning, water management, water quality, energy development, and enhancement of the quality of the environment.

General administration.—General administrative expenses provide for management, executive direction and coordination, and administrative support.

Facilities.—This activity finances the operation and maintenance, facilities management, and special support services for the operation of the National Center headquarters and field centers.

Reimbursements from non-Federal sources are from States and municipalities for cooperative efforts and proceeds from sale to the public of copies of photographs and records; proceeds from sale of personal property; reimbursements from permittees and licensees of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission; and reimbursements from foreign countries and international organizations for technical assistance. Reimbursements from other Federal agencies are for mission related work performed at the request of the financing agency.

The Geological Survey has 15 quarters located at geomagnetic or seismic observatories. The operation and maintenance of these quarters, in the past, have been funded out of rental receipts which were credited to the Survey's annual Surveys, Investigations, and Research account. Under the provisions of Public Law 98–473, this account was established to receive rental receipts to remain available until expended for operation and maintenance of these quarters.

Information and analysis.—This program provides a reliable data base for analysis of national minerals issues including lifecycle analysis and recycling, by collecting, interpreting, and disseminating worldwide information relating to the production, consumption, and availability of nonfuel minerals and materials. The program maintains information on the production and consumption of over 100 mineral commodities and materials, and also on the minerals-related industries of about 175 countries. Indepth economic, technical, and policy studies that address the worldwide supply and demand for nonfuel minerals and materials are conducted in this program. The program develops and utilizes methodologies for evaluation of mineral deposits based on quantifiable technical, economic, and social data. The program also includes mineral land assessments on certain lands managed by the Department of the Interior, Department of Defense, and Department of Agriculture in development of land management plans and withdrawal decisions required by the Secretary or other bureaus.

Research.—
