Post-script to Memoranda on Fred I. Kent

Today I talked with Dorothy Warden at Ingalls and Snyder about the disposition of Mr. Kent's books. She said that after the Princeton Library had taken what they wanted, the rest were given to the library of New York University. New York University also received scattered papers which were duplicates of some which went to Princeton. N.Y.U. received only papers which had duplicates, as the entire paper collection went to Princeton.
