How the banks look at branch banking,

BANKERS MAGAZINE,

January, 1925.
In Detroit where there are 3 national banks without branches, 179 state branch banks are operated. The national banks are in an unfavorable position to compete with the state banks having many branches. This shows itself especially in the ability of the latter to secure savings deposits.

The convention of the A.B.A. adopted a resolution condemning the practice of branch banking.

Nationwide branch banking, BANKERS MAGAZINE, October, 1928.
Mr. Collins gives ... a brief but clear treatment of the branch banking question as it has developed in the U.S. in the past few years. His 1st chapters deal with branch banking under state laws, and the number and distribution of statutory branches of national banks.

He then discusses the establishment of additional offices of natl. banks under the rulings announced by Comptroller Crissenger in 1922, later sustained by an opinion of Attny. General Daugherty. No mention is made of the establishment of additional offices in some states in which State banks are not allowed to open branches.

Chief value is that it brings together the facts in current controversy in U.S. and summarizes them.
