BRITISH WAR FINANCE, 1914-1915. New York:
Van Nostrand, 1915. Pp. vi, 367.

The author of this book, a London journalist, is obviously much dissatisfied with many of the economic and financial measures of the British Govt. during the 1st year of the war. Although it is not stated that the various chaps. first appeared as newspaper articles, they bear every earmark of that kind of writing and consequently do not make a very satisfactory book. Owing to the assumption that the reader is familiar with details of current events, proper enough in newspaper discussion, the book does not contain a sufficient narrative of the measures which were adopted. Analysis also is curtailed owing to the inveterate journalistic failing of making points forcibly at all costs. In short, the book is valuable mainly from the light it throws upon one section of British public opinion during the early months of the war. O. M. W. SPRAGUE, A.E.R., v. 6, Mar. 1916, p. 103.
