CRICK, W. F.

British banking statistics, JOURNAL OF THE AMERICAN
STATISTICAL ASSOCIATION,

December, 1922.

Pp. 8.

Calls attention to the dearth of banking statistics in G.B. as compared with the wealth of such information in the U.S. The author attributes the difference to the fact that there are legal requirements in the U.S. calling for publication of statements and reports. Furthermore, the conception of banking as a public function is much more widely held in the U.S. than in G.B. Finally, the British banker relies more on tradition and instinct for guidance than the American banker.
