A comparison is made between Prof. Bowley's, Mr. Keynes', and Sir William Beveridge's figures used in an earlier discussion of this subject, bearing on the net barter terms of trade, and the gross barter terms of trade which the author of this article believes show the trend of the whole barter trade under conditions that in fact prevailed. By indexes and charts he shows the differences in the trends when considered from these two points of view. Abstract by Harry R. Tosdal,
