ELBERT ALVIS KINCAID

A small collection of the papers of Elbert A. Kincaid, professor of economics and finance, economist and vice president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, has been given to the University of Virginia and is housed in the Alderman Library there. The Federal Reserve Board is one of the groups represented in these papers.

Linear feet of shelf space occupied: 5

Approximate number of items: 1500

The collection is open to qualified students. It seems a fair assumption that the collection may be enlarged in time by further gifts.

Description of Series

The collection contains copies of articles, speeches, and press releases collected by Dr. Kincaid as a member of various committees and commissions or in the capacity of professor of economics at the University of Virginia. The following groups are represented: Federal Reserve Board, National Defense Advisory Commission, Temporary National Economic Committee, and The Economists' National Committee on Monetary Policy.

The material covers a broad range of economic subjects, including money and banking, war industry in Virginia, wages, the textile industry, and economic geography.
