Marriner S. Eccles,
Governor, Federal Reserve Board,
Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. Eccles:

I will be in Washington again the week of June 3 and I hope to have the privilege of an interview with you to see if I can help again with the banking bill in the senate.

Would it be too much to ask if one of your secretaries could be requested to look up the record of the senate vote on your confirmation? When I arrive I want to check up and see how well some of my friends kept their promises.

I am most appreciative of the information you sent me regarding your statement before the senate committee on the banking bill. I think you did a wonderful job, as you did before the House committee, whose hearings I attended. I believe when this bill is passed you can be trusted not to throttle the intent of the law by unreasonable regulations and rules, as so many Washington bureaus have done. When this banking bill is passed, for the first time in the history of America, we will have a real banking system that can actually serve impartially the country at large. I think I can see how it will work a change in our system of financing industry so that the New York underwriting houses will not have ever again the opportunity to mistreat both our industries and investors. Good luck to you, I will do everything I can to help.

Best regards,

Yours very truly,

Harry B Lear
President.
