February 10, 1943.

Dear Jimmy:

Your speech of last night heartened me more than anything that has happened in a long time. I listened uninterruptedly to it, and I am not only in complete agreement with it from start to finish but I consider it the best discussion on this complex and difficult subject that has yet been put on the air. It was not only comprehensive and well-rounded, but you made the subject as understandable to the layman as, in my judgment, it is possible to make it. And you delivered it with a conviction and force-fulness that inspire confidence.

I feel more encouraged today about successfully grappling with these grave dangers than I have felt for a long time because the kind of leadership exemplified by that speech is bound to succeed.

Sincerely yours,

Honorable James F. Byrnes, Director, Office of Economic Stabilization, Washington, D. C.

ET:b

THE WHITE HOUSE WASHINGTON

February 11, 1943

Dear Marriner:

Thanks for your note.

I stole your "market basket" sentence and am going to steal some others for a speech I will make on Saturday night.

With best wishes, I am

JAMES F. BYRNES

Hon. Marriner S. Eccles, Federal Reserve System, Washington, D. C.