Mr. Elliot Thurston,
Dear Sir,

Of course, being an American citizen, I am in politics. Our government has granted me political rights and I have an interest in exercising them; but it grants me no economic interest, it is up to me to create that for myself in our great system of private enterprise.

Since Mr. Eccles frequently refers to our "economic and political system" and recommends Federal expenditures to stimulate that system, it appears that economics and politics are so closely related that one can hardly refer to one without touching upon the other, unless he means that it shall be done in such a way that the right hand knoweth not what the left hand doeth.

But after reading both addresses and the letter it dawns upon me that I've butted in on a personal affair only, and for that I make apology, I detest name-calling too, in public.

I thank you for your courteous reply and for the material sent me.

Sincerely yours,
