Dear Bill:

I realize you were very busy when you were over here recently but I hope that the next time you come to Washington I will have an opportunity to have a visit with you. There are a great many problems, economic, political and social, about which I like to exchange views with you, not that I hope either one or both of us collectively will be able to do much about any of the problems confronting the world today. However, I find it extremely interesting to discuss them abstractly with a courageous, thoughtful and intelligent person like yourself.

With kindest personal regards, I am

Yours sincerely,

M. S. Eccles
