Dear Marriner:

Under date of December 19, 1949, you wrote me a warmly friendly Christmas letter which I had hoped to acknowledge by buying you a friendly drink at the Weber club. That opportunity did not materialize. I do have opportunity, however, of reminding our readers of your name and fame. If you haven't already seen it, you may enjoy reading my effort in our issue of Sunday, January 15, 1949, of which a clipping is attached.

Sincerely,

Dear Darrell:

Thanks for your letter of January 19th, enclosing a copy of your editorial, appearing in the January 15th issue of the Standard-Examiner.

I am sure you know how much I appreciate the confidence you have always shown in me and the excellent support you have given to me whenever you have had the opportunity to do so through the paper, as well as otherwise. It is one of the real compensations I receive for putting forth my best efforts in what I consider the long-range interest of the country. Sticking it out in Washington, as I have done for sixteen years, I have had to have a real economic and social philosophy backed by strong convictions.

Wishing you the best of everything for the year 1950,

Sincerely yours,

Mr. Darrell Greenwell,
