

December 11, 1956.

My dear Mr. Secretary:

Enclosed is a copy of what was intended to be an off the record speech which I gave recently in Boston. It was taken down by stenotype and copies furnished to me so that I have been able to have it somewhat revised and mimeographed for distribution among some of my friends and associates who are interested in the subjects discussed.

I made some references to the problems arising from the inflow of gold and thought that you might possibly wish to see them.

Sincerely yours,

Honorable Henry Morgenthau, Jr.,
Secretary of the Treasury,
Washington, D. C.
