

January 31st 1934

Dear Mr Eccles

When I was two years ago in Washington you have been good enough to let me have your views expressed before the Senate Committee. I wonder if I could ask you again to let me have if any of your views have appeared in print ^{since} that date which would give a concise picture of your philosophy which I regard the finest contribution toward the solution of the deflationary crisis.

I shall be in Washington all this meet and would be very happy indeed

if there could be a chance of meeting
you.

Perhaps you remember that I wrote two years ago to you when I was here on a Rockefeller fellowship to study American methods of recovery and compare them with those practiced in various European countries. I am very glad that your method was so successful and wish you equal success to meet the new problems arising now and later on.

Very respectfully yours

Dear Mr. Eccles:

I shall be in Washington all this week, and would be very happy indeed if there could be a chance of meeting you.

Perhaps you remember that I wrote two years ago to you when I was here on a Rockefeller fellowship to study American methods of recovery and compare them with those practiced in various European countries. I am very glad that your method was the successful and wish you equal success to meet the new problems arising now and later on.

My dear Mr. Haras:

Mr. Eccles has asked me to advise you that he regrets the impossibility of his seeing you at this time. However, if you will call me, I will be very glad to arrange an appointment for you either with Dr. Goldenweiser or Dr. Currie.

Mr. Eccles also requested that I send you a copy of an address which he gave before the Seventh New England Bank Management Conference of the New England Council in Boston on November 13th, and I am, therefore, enclosing a copy herewith.

Very truly yours,

Secretary to Mr. M. S. Eccles.
