From Mr. Thurston

Mr. Falco, who has returned from a year and a half in Germany to resume his job with the McGraw-Hill organization, phoned to say that the McGraw-Hill editors are meeting here on January 21 and 22 for their customary two-day sessions and would like to have you speak to them at 5:00 p.m. on Thursday, January 22, at the Statler Hotel, probably in the South American Room. As you know, you have spoken to these editors before. It is entirely informal and off the record and is, of course, first-rate public relations.

I told Mr. Falco that you would be back in Washington on Monday, January 5, that I would let him know whether you could take this on. I told him I thought you could as there appeared to be no conflicting engagements.
