

Federal Reserve Banks to Release Joint Small Business Credit Survey January 15

For immediate release: Jan. 8, 2015

On January 15, the Federal Reserve Banks of Atlanta, Cleveland, New York and Philadelphia will release findings from a joint regional survey on small business credit conditions.

The Small Business Credit Survey captures information on the financing decisions and credit experiences of smaller firms in the Northeast. This year, the survey has been expanded to include insights from small businesses — on both the aggregate and state levels — from selected parts of the Southeast and Midwest. The survey was conducted during the fall of 2014.
