

FEDERAL RESERVE BANK OF DALLAS

Dallas, Texas, December 26, 1940

To the Bank Addressed:

There is enclosed a copy of Army Purchase Information Bulletin, 1940, which contains a list of the supplies purchased by the Army and furnishes information regarding the procedure of the War Department in connection with purchases. As pointed out in the Bulletin, the War Department decentralizes its procurement activities, and the purchase of specialized products is assigned to depots or field purchasing offices listed in Section III.

The Navy has a central purchasing bureau, and general purchases, except for local supplies, are handled by the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts, Navy Department, Washington, D. C.

This information is furnished for your assistance in connection with inquiries received from any of your customers who may wish to bid on Government contracts.

Yours very truly,

R. R. GILBERT

President

ARMY PURCHASE INFORMATION

FOREWORD

1. This bulletin is published as a guide to manufacturers who are interested in placing their facilities at the disposal of the government in connection with the current rearmament program. It is suggested that manufacturers who desire to participate in this program follow the routine outlined herein. Communications should be directed to the proper purchasing office or procurement district headquarters in the field.

2. So far as practicable, the War Department decentralizes its procurement activities. Accordingly, in the interest of keeping down overhead costs to American industry, correspondence with and visits to the offices of the War Department in Washington, D. C., should be minimized.

3. Each War Department procuring agency is interested in specialized products which are assigned to the depots or field purchasing offices listed in Section III, "Purchasing Agencies". For convenient reference, the more important articles being purchased under the current program are listed alphabetically in Section X, "General Index of Articles Purchased". The listings in this section refer the manufacturers to the proper field purchasing offices listed in Section III, "Purchasing Agencies".

4. The maps inserted between Sections I and II show the locations of the field procurement district headquarters and the areas served by each. The addresses of the field planning offices located at these headquarters are given in Section I, "Procurement Planning".

SECTION I

PROCUREMENT PLANNING

1. The agencies listed in this section are engaged in planning for the procurement of supplies and equipment which will be needed by the army during a war or other major National emergency. Military requirements are computed in advance. They are apportioned by the supply arms and services to procurement districts. The procurement planning officers in these districts search the areas to which they are assigned for the productive capacity necessary to meet requirements. Individual plants are surveyed, production studies are made, and in agreement with the management, plants are allocated for particular production during an emergency.

2. The management of plants having facilities which are considered suitable for the production of military equipment should communicate directly with the officer in charge of the Procurement District which is nearest the plant for detailed information regarding this activity.

SECTION II

PURCHASING METHODS

1. After Advertising: All normal purchases of the War Department are made after advertising for bids. Purchasing officers prepare circular proposals and invitations to bid. These papers list the items to be purchased, list the applicable specifications, state delivery points and dates, and furnish all the information necessary for a prospective bidder to calculate his costs and submit a bid. Bids are required to be submitted by a stated time in sealed and properly addressed envelopes. Bid bonds are frequently required with the bids. At the stated time, the Purchasing Officer publicly opens the bids. As a result of this procedure, the purchase contract is awarded to the best advantage of the government. Circular proposals are given wide distribution in order to secure the maximum competition. Newspaper advertising is frequently used. Several commercial publications provide timely information regarding invitations issued by the various purchasing agencies of the government. Manufacturers and dealers who desire to sell to the War Department should communicate directly with the purchasing agency engaged in the procurement of articles which the manufacturer or dealer can supply. Invitations to bid will be forwarded them when purchases of those articles are to be made.

2. Without Advertising: A great portion of the requirements of a military force are articles which are not in ordinary commercial production. These are such items as weapons, ammunition, and numerous special articles of transportation and communication equipment. The military requirements for numerous articles which are in commercial production are so large as to require particular procurement methods. In connection with the procurement of such requirements there are several factors which govern War Department purchasing. These are the consideration of prompt delivery, proper quality, fairness of price, effect of the defense program upon consumers, maintenance of fair labor standards by prospective contractors, avoidance of undue geographic concentration of contracts, financial and moral responsibility of prospective contractors, avoidance of transportation congestion, and the availability of power facilities. In order to permit proper consideration of these factors, the Congress has authorized the award of contracts under special circumstances without advertising. In those cases where the current rearmament program will be accelerated or consideration of the National economy is involved, contracts will be awarded under this authority after consideration of factors mentioned.

3. Open Market: Purchasing officers of the War Department may purchase to the amount of $500 or less in the open market. Such purchases are made, with minor variations covered in the regulations, in a manner common among business men. Purchases in excess of this amount may be made without formal advertising when authorized by the chiefs of the respective arms or services. Informal quotations are requested from several convenient sources of supply. The purchase order is issued to secure those terms which are most advantageous to the government. Price and discounts, quality, and delivery are considered. Purchases of this sort are made, in general, at posts and stations to meet maintenance requirements when local procurement by purchase offers advantages over procurement by requisition on military supply depots.

SECTION III

PURCHASING AGENCIES

1. Actual purchasing activity of the War Department is specialized and decentralized. The greater volume of purchases is made by the depots and arsenals of the army. These specialize to a great extent in the articles purchased. Those facilities which are in production or are capable of production on any item of military requirements should communicate directly with the agency responsible for the purchase of that item. This communication should request that the name of the company be placed on the mailing list of the purchasing agency to receive invitations to bid when purchases are made of those items which the facility is in a position to supply.

2. The following is a list of the principal depots and arsenals and a general list of the articles purchased at each:

SECTION IV

CONSTRUCTION

Competitive Bids:

Under normal circumstances, contracts for construction are awarded by the War Department after advertising as outlined in Section II of this pamphlet. A Constructing Quartermaster is appointed for each project. The invitations to bid are prepared and published and the bids are opened and abstracted by him. The actual award is made from the Office of The Quartermaster General. Those concerns desiring to bid on War Department construction projects should communicate with the Construction Division, Office of The Quartermaster General, Washington, D. C.

Negotiation on a Fee Basis:

Contractors desiring consideration on construction contracts to be awarded by negotiation on a fee basis should communicate with The Quartermaster General, War Department, Washington. The request for consideration should contain complete data regarding:

1. Experience on fee construction
2. Experience in competitive bid construction
3. Organization available. (including architectural & engineering).
4. Equipment available
5. Financial resources

Statement under Items 1 and 2 should list types of projects, location and cost.

Services from Architects and Consulting Engineers:

It is possible that design contracts for construction projects may be awarded on a fee basis. Architects or consulting engineers who desire consideration in case such awards are made should submit a letter to the Quartermaster General, Washington, D. C. This request for consideration should contain the following information:

1. Full experience record indicating clients by name, location of project, type of project and money value.
2. Organization available with particular view to rapid completion of plans and specifications.
3. List of projects designed for Federal agencies.

Constructing Quartermasters:

Constructing Quartermasters - cont'd.

Constructing Quartermasters in charge of War Department projects frequently purchase construction materials and equipment. Dealers who desire to supply such articles to the Government should communicate with the Constructing Quartermaster on the project where the purchases are made. At the date of this publication, Constructing Quartermasters were detailed to projects at the following locations:

SECTION V

LOCAL PURCHASES

The Quartermaster, the Ordnance Officer, The Medical Supply Officer, the Signal Officer, the Engineer Supply Officer, the Chemical Warfare Officer, and the Air Corps Supply Officer at army posts where the activities of each are located purchase materials, supplies, and equipment. These local purchases are to cover requirements of the post when the supplies required are readily procurable and no advantage would exist from consolidation and procurement by a depot. The purchases are not restricted to the immediate vicinity of the particular army post, but are made from the source offering the best advantage to the government without regard to locality. The articles purchased are usually perishable subsistence items, materials for the operation and maintenance of utilities, minor construction projects, repairs and alterations of buildings, maintenance and repair of equipment, and special articles which are not procured by a central purchasing agency or which may be required in some emergency. It is suggested that local dealers and manufacturers' agents contact or communicate directly with the officer in whose activities they may be interested at such of the following army posts as they may be in a position to serve.

SECTION IX

Procurement Division, Treasury Department,
Navy Department and Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

1. The Procurement Division of the Treasury Department is the central purchasing agency for the government. With certain exceptions, the War Department is exempt from participation in contracts of the Procurement Division. Such items as tires and tubes; office furniture, filing cases and similar equipment; gasoline; and several less important items are purchased by the army against Treasury Department contracts. Other items contracted for by the Treasury Department may be purchased against such contracts by the army when it is advantageous to do so.

2. Under provisions of Public No. 117, 76th Congress, the Director of the Procurement Division of the Treasury Department, Washington, D. C., is purchasing the following strategic and critical materials for the national stockpile. All information or inquiries concerning these purchases should be addressed to the Director of the Procurement Division, Treasury Department, Washington, D. C.

Chrome Ore, (metallurgical grade, containing a minimum of 50% Cr₂ O₃.)
Manila Fiber
Mercury
Mica Sheets and Splittings
Quartz Crystals
Quinine Sulfate
Tungsten Ore (Containing 60% Wo₃ or 47% metal)
Industrial Diamonds

3. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation under the provisions of Public No. 664, 76th Congress has set up the following companies to purchase and store manganese, tin and rubber for the national stockpile.

The Rubber Reserve Co., %R.F.C., Washington, D. C.
Purchases: Rubber

The Metals Reserve Co., %R.F.C., Washington, D. C.
Purchases: Manganese, Ore and Tin

These companies should be contacted direct for information regarding those materials.

Procurement Division, Treasury Department,
Navy Department and Reconstruction Finance Corporation - cont'd.

4. Lubricating Oils and certain fuel oils are purchased by the army against contracts executed by the Navy Department.

5. Although the War Department is not concerned directly with procurement activity of the Navy Department, the following list of Field Purchasing Officers of the Navy is included in this pamphlet for information only.
