

FEDERAL RESERVE BANK OF DALLAS

FISCAL AGENT OF THE UNITED STATES

Dallas, Texas, April 16, 1942

WAR LOAN DEPOSITARIES

To All Banking Institutions in the Eleventh Federal Reserve District:

Under the provisions of Treasury Department Circular No. 92, as revised and supplemented, any incorporated bank or trust company in the United States may make application to the Federal Reserve Bank of its District to qualify as a special (War Loan) depositary; and any incorporated bank or trust company so qualified may effect payment for new issues of Treasury bonds, notes, certificates of indebtedness, War Savings bonds, Tax Series notes, and certain issues of Treasury bills, for itself or its customers, by payment through advice of credit to an account known as the "War Loan Deposit Account." This deposit does not remain constant but is withdrawn, in whole or in part, upon receipt of instructions from the Secretary of the Treasury as the needs of the Treasury require; no interest is paid thereon but it must be secured by certain classes of collateral as specified in Treasury Department Circular No. 92.

Heretofore the Treasury has suggested that maximum designations be held to an amount approximating 100 per cent of the combined capital and surplus of the depositary bank. More recently, however, the Treasury has advised that consideration would be given to an increase in the maximum designation of such depositaries to an amount equal to 150 per cent of the combined capital and surplus when such seemed desirable.

Any incorporated bank or trust company already qualified and desiring to increase its maximum designation, or not already designated and desiring to qualify as such depositary, should make application to this Federal Reserve Bank for appropriate forms. Further details as to the operation of the account will also be furnished upon request.

Yours very truly,

R. R. GILBERT

President
