TO ALL MEMBER BANKS,

Effective January 1, 1978, certain responsibilities with regard to the field inspection and supervision of bank holding companies were shifted between the two departments that previously handled such activities at the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas, and the names of those departments were changed to more appropriately identify their functions.

The name of the Examination Department has been changed to the Bank Supervision and Regulations Department. The Regulations Department has been renamed the Holding Company Supervision Department.

The Bank Supervision and Regulations Department is responsible for bank examination and supervisory matters, examination and supervision of international banking organizations, consumer affairs, and the securities regulations.

The Holding Company Supervision Department is responsible for the supervision and field inspection of bank holding companies, including the processing of applications under the Bank Holding Company Act. The department also processes international applications under Regulations K and M.

No changes in the official or supervisory staff were involved in the above actions.
