DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS DEREGULATION COMMITTEE

September 17, 1982 Meeting

TO ALL MEMBER BANKS AND OTHERS CONCERNED
IN THE ELEVENTH FEDERAL RESERVE DISTRICT:

The Depository Institutions Deregulation Committee (DIDC) took the following actions at its September 17, 1982 meeting:

1. Issued an interpretive ruling that fees may be paid to bona fide brokers and not be included as interest under conditions that ensure that no part of the finders' fee is paid to depositors.
2. Denied petitions by four states requesting certain exemptions for depository institutions in their states from DIDC regulations limiting interest rate ceilings.

Enclosed are copies of the DIDC's press release and the material as submitted for publication in the Federal Register. Questions regarding the material contained in this circular should be directed to this Bank's Legal Department, Extension 6171.

Additional copies of this circular will be furnished upon request to the Department of Communications, Financial and Community Affairs, Extension 6289.

Sincerely yours,

William H. Wallace
First Vice President

DEPOSITORY INSTITUTIONS DEREGULATION COMMITTEE

September 17, 1982 Meeting

At its September 17, 1982 meeting, the Depository Institutions Deregulation Committee (DIDC) determined that its finders' fee regulation, which requires a finders' fee to be considered as part of interest paid to a depositor, does not apply to fees paid to bona fide brokers. A finders' fee is defined as a fee paid by a depository institution to a third party who introduces a depositor to the institution. In 1980, when the regulation was issued, the Committee was concerned about depository institutions circumventing interest rate ceilings by paying finders' fees, which were then given back to depositors. The Committee's interpretive ruling means that a bona fide broker can receive a fee for placing any type of deposit (time or demand) with a depository institution and not reduce the interest paid to the depositor, as long as certain conditions are met. These conditions assure that no portion of the fee paid to the broker is passed on to the depositor. The Committee defined a bona fide broker as a person principally engaged in the business of acting as a broker or dealer in regard to deposits, securities or money market instruments.

The Committee also denied petitions by four states requesting certain exemptions for depository institutions in their states from DIDC regulations limiting interest rate ceilings. The states requested the exemptions in order to permit institutions in their states to compete with money market mutual funds. The Committee concluded that granting such exemptions could aggravate thrift earnings problems, and would put institutions in neighboring states at a competitive disadvantage. The DIDC noted that Congress is in the midst of considering legislation that: (1) could expand thrift asset powers, thus allowing them to increase their profitability, and (2) could direct the DIDC to authorize an instrument to be issued by all depository institutions nationwide which would be competitive with money market mutual funds. Therefore, the Committee denied the petitions and declined to take any further action on this issue until Congress has completed its consideration of the financial reform legislation.

The next DIDC meeting will be held on Wednesday, December 1, 1982, at 3:00 p.m.

12 C.F.R. Part 1204
[Docket No. D-0028]

Payment of Finders' Fees to Bona Fide Brokers

AGENCY: Depository Institutions Deregulation Committee

ACTION: Interpretive Ruling

SUMMARY: Effective December 31, 1980, the Depository Institutions Deregulation Committee ("Committee") adopted the finders' fee regulation (12 C.F.R. 1204.110) which defined as interest a fee paid by a depository institution to a third party who introduced a depositor to the institution. That regulation was adopted in response to concern with widespread use of finders' fees to circumvent interest rate ceilings by passing finders' fees through to the depositors. The Committee has received questions as to whether the regulation applies to the payment of a fee to a bona fide broker for the placement of deposits with a depository institution. At its September 17, 1982 meeting, the Committee determined that fees may be paid to bona fide brokers and not be included as interest under conditions that ensure that no part of the finders' fee is paid to depositors.

EFFECTIVE DATE: September 17, 1982

Douglas Birdzell, Counsel, or Joseph A. DiNuzzo, Attorney, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (202) 389-4147; or Paul S. Pilecki, Senior Attorney, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (202) 452-3281.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: Pursuant to its authority under Title II of the Depository Institutions Deregulation and Monetary Control Act of 1980 (94 Stat. 142; 12 U.S.C. § 3501 et seq.), to prescribe rules governing the payment of interest and dividends on deposits of Federally insured commercial banks, savings and loan associations, and mutual savings banks, the Committee amends, effective September 17, 1982, Part 1204 -- Interest on Deposits (12 C.F.R. Part 1204) by adding a new Section 202 to read as follows:

§ 1204.202 - Payment of Fees to Bona Fide Brokers

(a) Under section 1204.110 of the Committee's rules, any fee paid by a depository institution to a person who introduces a depositor to the institution must be paid in cash when paid for a deposit subject to rate ceilings and generally will be regarded as a payment of interest for purposes of compliance with rate ceilings. This rule was adopted effective December 31, 1980, in order to prevent the circumvention of rate ceilings that could occur if a "finders' fee" is passed on to the depositor.

(b) The Committee has received several inquiries as to whether depository institutions are required to pay fees in cash to brokers that solicit deposits on behalf of the institution and to regard such payments as interest. The Committee previously found the finders' fee regulation inapplicable to All-Savers Certificates and to a specific person who acted as a broker of demand deposits. The Committee has determined that finders' fees may be paid to bona fide brokers of time and demand deposits without regarding such payments as interest for purposes of deposit interest rate ceilings. Accordingly, a fee to a broker will not be regarded as a payment of interest if: (1) the fee is paid to a bona fide broker, which is a person who is principally engaged in the business of acting as a broker or dealer in regard to deposits, securities or money market instruments; (2) the relationship between the broker and depository institution is memorialized in a written agreement, a copy of which is retained by the depository institution and made available to examiners; and (3) an officer of the broker certifies that no portion of the fee paid to the broker is directly or indirectly passed on to the depositor, and a copy of the certification is given to the depository institution to be retained on file with the agreement.

By order of the Committee, September 24, 1982.

Gordon Eastburn
Policy Director
