MEDIA ADVISORY

New York Fed to Host Access to Capital Forums in New York City
October 6, 2014

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York this month will co-sponsor two forums aimed at providing information on financing and credit to the area’s small business community.

The first forum is scheduled for October 8 and will be held in Brooklyn. This event will provide technical assistance for small businesses interested in learning about alternative and emerging sources of financing. Attendees will hear from lenders and experts on a wide range of topics, including crowd-funding basics, online lending platforms and revolving loan funds.

The second forum is geared towards small businesses interested in learning about traditional and alternative sources of financing. This workshop takes place on October 22 in the Bronx, and will give attendees information on alternatives to traditional bank loans and tips on improving their chances for success, among other topics.

Resource expos will be held after both events.

Access to Capital: Alternative & Emerging Sources of Capital »
Wednesday, October 8
Borough Hall
209 Joralemon Street, Courtroom
Brooklyn, NY 11201

Access to Capital: Traditional & Alternative Sources »
Wednesday, October 22
Bronx Museum of the Arts
1040 Grand Concourse
Bronx, NY 10456

Contact:
Kevin Sajdak
212-720-6143
kevin.sajdak@ny.frb.org