New York Fed to Release Regional Household Debt and Credit Snapshots May 31

May 24, 2017

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York will release profiles of reports detailing trends in borrowing and indebtedness at the state and local level next Wednesday, May 31.

The Regional Household Debt and Credit Snapshots will include data about credit cards, auto loans, mortgages, student loans, and delinquencies for New York City (including each of its boroughs), as well as various metro areas in New York State, northern New Jersey, and western Connecticut. There will be a total of 28 Snapshots released, along with underlying data.

These reports are based on data from the New York Fed’s Consumer Credit Panel, a nationally representative sample drawn from anonymized Equifax credit data. The series is updated biannually and the Snapshots series reflect data through December 2016.
