MEDIA ADVISORY

New York Fed and Bank Indonesia to Co-Host Central Banking Forum in Indonesia

September 27, 2018

Updated on October 5, 2018 to account for changes in the start times of certain events and to add Deputy Governor Diwa Guinigundo, Bangko Sentral Ng Pilipinas to the panel discussion

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York and Bank Indonesia will co-host their second Central Banking Forum in Bali, Indonesia on October 10. During the conference, participants will share their views on the current macro and policymaking environment and how some of the broader global trends may be impacting their decision-making.

The first portion of the conference will be on the record and open to journalists to attend in-person. It will not be available via webcast. This portion of the day includes keynote remarks by New York Fed President John Williams and Bank Indonesia Governor Perry Warjiyo. Their remarks will be followed by a press briefing with President Williams and Governor Perry Warjiyo, and then a panel moderated by Simon Potter, New York Fed Executive Vice President and Head of Markets.

Details about the open press events are below. Information on the full conference and the agenda is available here.
