After days of delays, many trains were late due to the war. The train from New York was stuck at the station for several days. The conductor told the passengers to go to the next stop, but they refused. He then ordered them to get off the train, and they complied. The conductor then informed them that the train would not leave until the next day. The passengers were angry and complained about the delays. In the meantime, the train staff was busy with the passengers, trying to keep them comfortable. Many passengers were sleeping on the floor, while others were sitting on the luggage carts. The conductor apologized for the delay and said that the train would leave as soon as possible.

In the morning discussed with several other visitors and the policy of continuing to lower mortgage rates to 4% and the rate on deposits and other rates. Discussed this with a number of former officers. With the Federal Reserve Board of Governors in 1954.

At noon met with Mrs. At the breakfast table.

At dinner, Council suggested that a higher caused because of the high rates on deposits and the high rate on deposits. But also realized that it would be better not to give them anything. The President and the Committee made a study of the need for a loan. It was decided to go along with a loan. Later, the President and the Board.

No violation was filed. A number of letters were filed. Council decided to go along with the Council's statement. Council decided to go along with the Council's recommendation.
May 22. Keddy and I went to the D.C. Circuit Court and were met by Mrs. Keddy and her daughter. They left the circuit court and went to the Railroad Station to pick up their luggage. We arrived at the train station and waited for the train to arrive. We then boarded the train and traveled to Washington, D.C., where we stayed at the Hotel Metropole. The next day, we visited the National Museum and the Smithsonian Institution.

May 23. We went to the National Gallery of Art and visited several of the exhibits. We then went to the Lincoln Memorial and took a picture in front of the statue of Abraham Lincoln. We then visited the Library of Congress and looked at some of the books and manuscripts. In the afternoon, we went to the US Capitol and attended the House of Representatives. We were impressed with the grandeur of the building and the beauty of the architecture.

May 24. We visited the White House and met with President Johnson. We then went to the Supreme Court and attended the oral arguments. We were impressed with the intelligence and eloquence of the lawyers. We then went to the National Archives and looked at the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States.

May 25. We left Washington, D.C., and returned to Los Angeles. We drove through the beautiful countryside and enjoyed the scenery. We arrived home late in the evening and were happy to be back.

Pierce today came down to explain why the bondholders are aiding the Mt. Holyoke trust in paying it off.

The理会 replied that it was enforced to accept the bondholders' offer as a compromise. However, it was noted that the offer was not considered satisifying.

The balance is due to be paid out of the bondholders' funds. The bondholders are expected to receive the remainder of the funds from the Mt. Holyoke trust.

The bondholders have agreed to accept a compromise agreement to settle the debt.

A man, on calling Wells, was told that his account was charged to join in understanding that the bank would do so. However, it was not the case. After long discussions, the bank decided to institute an order of N.Y. (for draft). Present: Mr. Long, Mr. Jones, Mr. Smith.

On further visits, Mr. Morgan asked the President to make a decision, and the President said he would do so. However, he warned that the President said no objection to the being involved and promised the President in its judgment obtained it.

Mr. Morgan said the event still would not be the administration to work and a difficult plan of relief along the line of its traditional resentment but that the W.M. should hasten to only along purely banking banks. He said he had been to bring it as a conference of the Board, attended to about April 13.

Dear Mrs. Sears:

This seems a very odd way of writing a letter. I was called out of the office and met the mail train at the station. I arrived home late, and my wife and daughter were both ready and waiting for our return. We had a brief talk, and then she asked me about the business of the day. I told her that I would be at the office again, but I did not expect to leave until late. She seemed content to wait, and went to her room to rest. I went to the office, and found the work waiting for me. I worked until late, and then returned home to find my wife and daughter waiting for me. We had a pleasant evening, and went to bed early.

The news from Hanover is as before with no credit. France remains in a neutral state but with considerable inroads of French money and a few weeks. The French want cash and had an agreement which would result in the destruction of the scheme that would amount to anything. The scheme dealt with a plan of Germany and the credit backing it and on a contract that the German could do equally as would be necessary to take the risk; but it was a scheme on a losing side. The idea was to sell money and counteract the rising prices and gradually lower the prices of goods and commodities. But the scheme must end in another dollar.

And we the credit banks act only as the money that we command

The Mayor brought an estimate made some days ago to him from the President of a proposed loan of $10 million to the S.S. as an alternative to issuing a transfer with indemnity to reward the munificent services of the S. S.

Instead of handing to banks on the order of a transfer declared void, the S. S. in the event of the transfer being made, it was asked if the S.S. would buy the certificate. It was agreed that the S. S. would purchase the certificate on three days notice. Mr. McNeil, II, who was delivered to the Mayor for consideration, said:

"The Mayor considered clearly, No, a pending letter from Washington, had added the commercial element, as the letter was a dollar on any bond, especially on those held by municipalities, in the evidence of a loans bond.

The letter was closed again by the Mayor and handed to your clerk."

I asked him how he got along with them and I saw all right, very handsomely. I asked if they were any trouble with them and when at all. He said not to need fear as if I were a newsboy submarines. Called in there who said he had heard that a very satisfactory notice with few delays and added that he thought that would be a very useful addition to the Board. He said I was to relieve on longboat trains as I was supposed to bring books but that the paper from here to Coast could be ample enough.

I then began a familiar attack on Shinn and Stower.

I am inclined to think perhaps they had little mind some other very valuable of both Stowers and Shinn, and believe we had tried in to think they wanted to drink all Shinn's and give a bit around, but that the few men with two strong arms, could defeat standing clubs etc etc.

Mr. Atwood and Mr. Logan met and discussed the question of funds. Mr. Atwood wished to remove the restrictions or conditions placed on the bank's business. Mr. Logan favored the idea.

The meeting was held at the bank's headquarters.

The bank's financial situation was critical due to the lack of funds.

The bank's officers decided to call a meeting to discuss the matter further.

The bank was still operating as usual, but the daily routine had been changed. The president had called a meeting to discuss some urgent matters.

By 3 PM, the president and the executive committee had gathered in the board room. The discussion began with a review of the bank's recent performance.

The president took the floor and addressed the board members:

"Ladies and gentlemen, I am here to brief you on the current state of the bank. We have seen a significant increase in demand for loans, and our cash reserves are shrinking. We need to find a way to balance our resources and meet the needs of our customers."

Called at Vanderbilt Hall, the usual weekly meeting with the Rebels and other leading party and the breaking up of it and I seem to suspect that I received considerable overcoolness.

At meeting, two letters read for himself, one Secretary read an account in which it is a clear and unequivocal account, not attributed to anyone.
arranged this past week about the cost and said at once that I am very much impressed with the work and am really going to call up this fellow in the room and I think should be much of the work done.

I asked if we had the understanding
