Alderman, Dr.
Has a talk with Mrs. Wilson as to the eulogy on President Wilson he is to deliver to Congress on Dec. 15, 1924. Oct. 23, 1924. 92

Mr. Bolling tells me that Dr. Alderman has brought with him only full evening dress so we are to do the same. Dec. 14, 1924. 196

Mrs. Wilson, Mr. Bolling, Bertie and I dine with Sen. and Mrs. Swanson to meet Dr. and Mrs. Alderman. Present: Mrs. Wilson, Bertie, C.S.H., Admiral and Mrs. Grayson, Mr. and Mrs. Baruch, and Dr. Jones. Dec. 14, 1924. 196, 197.

Dr. Alderman delivers a eulogy on President Wilson, before joint session of H.R. and Senate. The Supreme Court, the President and Cabinet, the General of the Armies, and many others were present.

Bertie, Anna, and I attended as the guests of Mrs. Wilson. We took in our auto Miss Margaret Wilson and Miss Helen Bones. Bertie and Anna sat in the gallery with Mrs. Wilson, and I sat on the floor with personal friends of President Wilson—Admiral Grayson, Mr. Baruch, Mr. George Peabody, Mr. Vance McCormick, Dr. Ruffin, Mr. Ray Stannard Baker, Mr. Charles Warren, and others.

Dec. 13, 1924. 196

Dr. Alderman delivered a masterly oration, one of the best I ever heard.

He spoke of the League of Nations in a really wonderful manner, showing great courage considering that President Coolidge, Sec. Hughes, and Sec. Hoover were there.

There were some points on which I did not agree with him:

1. He said Wilson did not have a mind like Kant or Chief Justice Marshall.

2. He said or intimated that Wilson was not willing to compromise. He compromised in the Federal Reserve Act by agreeing to making F.R. notes U.S. Govt. obligations; he compromised in the Versailles Treaty on Shantung; he compromised in the League of Nations to please Lowell, Taft, and Root; he even agreed to the Hitchcock reservation that the question of moral responsibility under Art. X should be determined by the Congress.

3. He said Wilson did not know how to persuade and could not solicit support. Had it not been for this very power the Federal Reserve Act would never have passed.

Dec. 15, 1924. 200

I am very disappointed that Dr. Alderman did not speak of the profound influence of Mrs. Wilson on her husband.

Dec. 16, 1924. 200
Alderman, Dr. (Cont.)

Dr. Alderman: I showed great courage and built the best he knew. On certain points, however, he did not know, and perhaps could not know the evidence, and had to rely on my or rumor. To correct rumor and myth will be the duty of the official biographer. It was certainly, however, a superb piece of work.

Axson, Dr.
C.S.H. meets Dr. Axson at dinner with Mrs. Wilson. He said he was an ardent believer in the League of Nations, and deeply regretted the action of the Dem. National Convention in side-tracking it; that he did not believe McAdoo could have been nominated even if he had not supported a referendum on the League; that he was sorry to have to admit this as he was an enthusiastic McAdoo man.

July 15, 1924. 9

Insisted that McAdoo was a firm believer in the League, and said McAdoo had come out for it strongly in speeches made in Georgia some years ago.

C.S.H. said the only reference in his scrap book was one clipping in 1920 stating that he was coming to Washington to induce President Wilson to accept the Lodge reservations.

July 15, 1924. 10

Dr. Axson lunches with me at the Cosmos Club. He said Mrs. McAdoo insisted on their going abroad, that they left their children with a trained nurse, taking Sally McAdoo with them. He said Mrs. McAdoo had been really very ill during the Convention; that a specialist gave her an X-ray examination, and finally very reluctantly permitted her to sail; that McAdoo took two secretaries with him. He still felt sure McAdoo came out for the League of Nations some years ago. He reluctantly said that, differing from his opinion of yesterday, McAdoo's failure to press the League may have caused his defeat in the Convention.

I believe he feels that Mrs. Wilson considers McAdoo disloyal to President Wilson in abandoning the League, and I am firmly convinced that in his heart he also believes the same.

July 17, 1924. 10, 11.

I meet Dr. Axson at Mrs. Wilson's, listening to John Davis' Baltimore speech over the radio.

Oct. 1, 1924. 58

I invited Dr. Axson to dinner but he had an engagement. He came to the Cosmos Club at 5 p.m. and we talked in my room for nearly an hour.

He talked very interestingly about President Wilson, the first Mrs. Wilson, and their daughters, but, to my surprise, never once referred to Mrs. Edith Bolling Wilson.

He said he had wired McAdoo at the hospital in Baltimore and had received a reply that he would be glad to see him any time; that McAdoo was very bitter against certain people, not necessarily delegates, who, he believed, had betrayed him.

Oct. 9, 1924. 75

(He also talked at length over the Princeton controversy.)

Miss Bolling tells C.S.H. how they resented Dr. Axson's article on the Wilson family published during the campaign of 1916; that it almost seemed an apology for Mr. Wilson's marriage to Edith Bolling Wilson.

Oct. 30, 1924. 107

Miss Bolling tells C.S.H. that they were all at Shadow Lawn when Dr. Axson's article was published, and that Dr. Axson was there also; that the article disturbed them very much; that she told Dr. Axson just what she thought of it.

Nov. 13, 1924. 127, 128

C.S.H. tells Mrs. Wilson to tell her sister, Bertha Bolling, that he had read Dr. Axson's article on the Wilson family, published in the N. Y. Times magazine section of Oct. 8, 1916, printed later by Mrs. Malcomb Forbes.

Mrs. Wilson asked me smilingly what I thought of it and I said - "Tell your sister I agree with every word she said to me about it, when last I called, but I decline to discuss it with you." At this, she smiled again, merely saying that the first Mrs. Wilson was a charming, lovely woman. She added that she would tell her sister what I said.

Dr. Axson's article doubtless was well intentioned, but he gave four pages to the first Mrs. Wilson, and only about four lines to Mrs. Edith Bolling Wilson, although he spoke beautifully about her. Bertha Bolling feels very bitterly towards Dr. Axson, and I must say I think her feeling was justified.

Nov. 22, 1924. 148

Mrs. Wilson says Dr. Axson is in a sanitarium in New York in charge of a Doctor Coles, in whom Margaret Wilson has perfect confidence, but whom Admiral Grayson distrusts.

Dec. 8, 1924. 181

Mrs. Wilson said Dr. Axson had written her a pathetic letter about William Allen White's references in his book quoting Dr. Axson's letter of 1910. Dr. Axson pointed out how mistaken many of his quotations were. He evidently realized that White was playing on his article to set off one branch of the family against the other. In his letter he told Mrs. Wilson how greatly he valued her friendship and how much he thought of her.

Dec. 8, 1924. 181

Mrs. Wilson told me Dr. Axson had promised to write for her a complete account of the Princeton controversy.

Dec. 9, 1924. 183

Mrs. Wilson cautions me to be careful not to let Margaret Wilson, who was coming to visit her, know Admiral Grayson's opinion of Dr. Coles.

Dec. 13, 1924. 194
Baker, Newton D., (cont.)

The audience, and I am told, the delegates, were all in accord with him, but the influence of Homer Cummings and the McAdoo forces, defeated Baker by a vote of two to one.

June 28, 1924. 6

C.S.H. listened to Baker's speech over the radio at Mrs. Wilson's. June 28, 1924. 6

See: Wilson

Mrs. Wilson tells C.S.H. that Margaret Wilson was very bitter against Baker, because, as she said, he put McAdoo in the position of opposing the League of Nations when really he was most earnest in favoring it.

July 30, 1924. 13

Federal Reserve Board appoints Baker general counsel in the Pascagoula bank par clearing case.

Sept. 4, 1924. 34

C.S.H. lunches with Baker and has a talk with him. (See C.S.H. letter to H.P.H. scrap book.)

Sept. 4, 1924. 34

Tells C.S.H. that France did not charge the U.S. a rent for the use of the trenches occupied by the U.S. troops; that those trenches had been built when the U.S. troops arrived in France; that when the U.S. needed land for docks, works, etc., France took the land by eminent domain and the U.S. paid France just what she paid.

Sept. 4, 1924. 38

Baker tells C.S.H. about a falling out with Baruch; that during the war Baruch had a woman secretary who was suspected of being an Austrian spy; that the War Department, without Baker's knowledge, put a dictograph in her (or possibly in Baruch's) room; that Baruch finally learned of this and was very angry, holding Baker responsible, although he was not; that the dictograph reported nothing except some flippant conversation.

Sept. 12, 1924. 39, 40.

Tells C.S.H. that Mrs. Wilson has asked him to call this afternoon to talk about the choice of an official biographer of President Wilson.

He said he had heard that Margaret Wilson wanted George Creel to be appointed - an entirely unfit one; that Prof. Dodd was not up to it; that the two best men were Prof. Guerard, of the Rice Institute, Texas, and Prof. John Spencer Bassett of Smith College.

Sept. 3, 1924. 179, 179.
C.S.H. did not reveal that Mrs. Wilson had ever spoken to him about the matter, but said frankly that if his opinion were asked by Mrs. Wilson, he would strongly advise the choice of Ray Stannard Baker.

Mr. Baker said he liked Ray Stannard Baker very much, although he thought his three volume book on the World Settlement in some respects was not well written.

He also said that the great objective would be to choose some historian who could tactfully oppose Mrs. Wilson's view that everything Mr. Wilson did was above criticism.

He said perhaps he himself shared this view unconsciously, and that for this reason he felt that he would not be a proper person to write the biography.

C.S.H. also said Ray Stannard Baker, in his book, had not hesitated to criticize President Wilson's attitude in certain things, e.g., Shantung, and would not fail to express his convictions, but would be glad to ascertain sympathetically what Mrs. Wilson's views were on any question and give all proper weight to them as one entitled to speak with authority.

C.S.H. also said Mrs. Wilson was a woman of such broad intelligence and such deep, broad and fair spirit, that she would not be averse to reasonable criticisms, but would take them up and consider them calmly and dispassionately, desiring only that the real, underlying facts should be sought and found.

C.S.H. also told Mr. Baker that he felt strongly that the official biographer should be appointed at once so that all of the evidence could be found and brought together for all time; that, although this would go out as the official biography, it might be one hundred years--as in the case of Chief Justice Marshall, before the final book was written, but that such a biography, written now, would bring together all the evidence and would serve as a foundation for the many histories which would undoubtedly be written in the future, perhaps in the far future.

C.S.H. finally said Ray Stannard Baker, in his opinion, had written a book of the highest order, and that he could begin the official biography at a point at which it would take years of study for any other historian to reach.

Dec. 5, 1924. 173, 174

C.S.H. met Mr. Baker at Mrs. Wilson's, and he has a half hour's talk alone with her.

After my talk with Mr. Baker, I telephoned Mr. Bolling just what he had said, and he urged me not to tell her what he said about her feeling that Mr. Wilson was above criticism.

Mrs. Wilson said nothing to me tonight about her talk with Mr. Baker. C.S.H. tells Mrs. Wilson of the feeling of a number of Mr. Wilson's friends that the official biographer should be someone who did not know either President Wilson or herself, and who would thus be free from the influence of those who believed everything he did was above criticism, adding that Secretary Baker had spoken of this feeling. She said Mr. Baker had not expressed any such opinion to her.

C.S.H. said he had alluded to the opinion of others of which Mr. Baker had spoken.

C.S.H. did not tell her that this was also Mr. Baker's opinion as Mr. Bolling had asked him not to.

C.S.H. gives Mrs. Wilson a letter from Prof. Taussig as to Prof. Guerard and Prof. Bassett suggested by Mr. Baker for writing the official biography of President Wilson.

Baker, Ray

Was just starting on a campaign tour in 1916 when Tumulty forged a letter from President Wilson forbidding his going, which greatly distressed Baker, and he could scarcely believe it when told of the truth.

Baker, Ray Stannard

C.S.H. meets, at dinner at Mrs. Wilson's.

C.S.H. returns with Baker and he spent 12 hours in my room at the Cosmos Club.

Mr. Baker told C.S.H. that he had no doubt but that the break between President Wilson and Col. House came about primarily by their different points of view on the Versailles Treaty, and secondly, from personal matters such as the conduct of his son-in-law Auchincloss, etc.; that Col. House planted his seeds, and development was trouble and confusion.

relations on the Peace Commission; that of the experts, Auchincloss alone was given the privilege of having his wife with him; that Dr. Mezes, his brother-in-law was among those appointed.

He also said that Col. House was not in accord with President Wilson's policy on Fiume; that he was bent on securing some compromise of the dispute; that instead of consulting the experts who were charged with studying the Fiume question and of advising President Wilson, he swept them aside and consulted Dr. Mezes and other experts not charged with the solution of the Fiume dispute, and then made suggestions of compromise to the Italians based on the advice of these other experts; that this plunged the whole matter into confusion; as it made the Italians believe that our delegation was divided and that by holding out they would get better terms; that Col. House did divide our delegation and plunged the whole question into confusion; that in so doing he was working against President Wilson's views.

He also said that undoubtedly Mr. Lansing referred to Col. House, when he said in his book that one of the Italian delegates told him that one of our delegates had said that he could bring President Wilson around to the Italian point of view; that Col. House's craze for compromise, and desire to please everybody, made him forget the wishes of President Wilson and plunged the whole matter into confusion.

He also said that, after Mr. Wilson's return home, leaving Col. House in charge, Col. House was completely outwitted by Clemenceau, Lloyd George, and the Italians, and permitted the covenant of the League to be dropped from the treaty, in absolute, if not intentional violation of President Wilson's policies; that on other matters also he consented to compromises.

He said he thought Col. House intended to be loyal but that he had not the intellectual equipment to comprehend the diplomatic game being played by Clemenceau, Lloyd George and the Italians; that a happy compromise and a desire to please everybody seemed to be the limit of his intellectual capacity.

He said that, opposed to Col. House's inability to understand the diplomatic game, there never was a moment when President Wilson failed to understand it.

He said that Col. House when acting as ears and eyes for Mr. Wilson, in getting information and reporting it, did work of great value, but his mind was not in the class of that of President Wilson, and when he tried to act, he disregarded Mr. Wilson's views, and the result was trouble and confusion.

He said finally, in speaking of the so-called "break" between Mr. Wilson and Col. House, that Col. House really eliminated himself.

He also said that the statement in David Lawrere's book, that Mrs. Wilson called to Col. House's attention an article in The Times of London that Dr. House himself published in The Nation, was unquestionably true. Mrs. Wilson did just right in calling it to Col. House's attention.

He also said that President Wilson did not fail at Paris; that his prime effort was to put and keep the League of Nations Covenant in the Versailles Treaty and that he succeeded in this in spite of almost insurmountable obstacles, thereby achieving a memorable victory over the greatest diplomats of Europe; that while he had to yield on certain matters in the Treaty, this was largely because of the secret treaties made by the Allies with one another during the war, of which he had no knowledge until he came to Paris; that these concessions would have had to be made ultimately even if the League covenant had not been put into the Treaty, but that the presence of the League covenant in the Treaty made it possible to correct these concessions in the future.

Nov. 18, 1924.

Dr. Shotwell, of Columbia University, and in charge of the history of the World War now being published by the Carnegie World Peace Foundation, told me at dinner at Nicholas Murray Butler's house, that he had a very high opinion of Ray Stannard Baker; that he was one of the original "muck rakers," so-called, who wrote for the American magazine, that he had done really good work in the capacity that he regarded his three volume work on World Settlement and the Peace Treaty as exceedingly well done and of the highest order of ability.

C.S.H. tells Mrs. Wilson that he left early after dinner, Nov. 19, because he thought Mr. Baker wanted to talk with her as to the collection of Mr. Wilson's addresses and speeches which he and Prof. Dodd were preparing for publication, and that he was surprised when Baker got up and left with us.

Nov. 22, 1924. 146

Mrs. Wilson said she feared I was bored with Mr. and Mrs. Fitzwilliam Woolworth who called during the evening.

Nov. 22, 1924. 146
Baker, Ray Stannard (Cont.)

Mrs. Wilson said Baker was much disturbed at the publication by the Review of Reviews of President Wilson's addresses, etc., but that she told him they were public documents which anyone could print and that his collection, more complete and with marginal notes, would not be injured.

Nov. 22, 1924. 146

Mrs. Wilson tells C.S.H. she talked with Mr. Baker on the question of the official life of Mr. Wilson, and said she really wanted to have him do it, but had not finally made up her mind that she asked him if he would collaborate with anyone else and that he said he would not. She said she went over this with him last Tuesday night before I came to dinner.

Nov. 23, 1924. 146

I told her I was re-reading Baker's World Settlement and the Peace Treaty carefully, and was very much impressed with it; that I felt there was no one as well equipped as he to do the work; that I thought the ideal solution would be collaboration between Baker and some one of transcendent literary ability and freshness of viewpoint, such as Bliss Perry.

She said this was her feeling also, and that she was carefully pondering over the matter.

Nov. 22, 1924. 147

Mrs. Wilson asks C.S.H. to read Baker's 3 volume book carefully and advise her whether she felt he had dealt with Col. House in a satisfactory manner, as some friend had told her that he had not handled this matter satisfactorily but had "soft pedalled" on Col. House.

C.S.H. said he would at once do this, that he had already read most of what he had written.

Nov. 23, 1924. 153

C.S.H. said he believed no one was better equipped to write Mr. Wilson's life.

Nov. 25, 1924. 153, 154
C.S.H. reads a memorandum he had prepared quoting every word in Mr. Baker's book concerning Col. House, and showing how critically he had handled Col. House.

(See copy of C.S.H.'s letter to Mrs. Wilson enclosing a copy of this memorandum.)

Nov. 29, 1924. 163, 164

C.S.H. also prepared a similar memorandum showing every criticism of Mr. Wilson made by Baker in his book, also every reference to Mrs. Wilson in the book. He left his long hand copy at S Street but Mr. Bolling said he would give it to him tomorrow so he could have it typewritten.

Nov. 30, 1924. 165

C.S.H. has this typewritten and gives it to Mrs. Wilson.

Dec. 2, 1924. 167

Mr. Bolling said he hoped his sister would choose Mr. Baker to write Mr. Wilson's life and C.S.H. agreed with him. He said Mr. Baruch wanted some one chosen who never knew Mr. Wilson.

Dec. 2, 1924. 167

Met Prof. Dodd at tea at Mrs. Wilson's; he is collaborating with Mr. Baker in publishing the addresses of President Wilson.

Dec. 4, 1924. 172

Newton Baker tells C.S.H. he likes Ray Stannard Baker very much, although he thought his 3 volume book in some respects was not well written, but gave no particulars.

Dec. 5, 1924. 173

C.S.H. said Ray Stannard Baker had not hesitated to criticise Mr. Wilson in his book, and would express his sincere convictions, but that he would go over every matter with Mrs. Wilson in perfect sympathy.

Dec. 5, 1924. 174

C.S.H. said Ray Stannard Baker had not hesitated to criticise Mr. Wilson in his book, and would express his sincere convictions, but that he would go over every matter with Mrs. Wilson in perfect sympathy.

Dec. 5, 1924. 174
Baker, Ray Stannard (Cont.)

Mrs. Wilson suggests to C.S.H. that he write Prof. Taussig to find what Ray Stannard Baker's position was as a historian. C.S.H. said he would, but later pointed out that it would not be of much value, as the Harvard historians would undoubtedly say that Baker had done little or no original historical work except this book, and that few, if any of them, had probably critically studied this book. She thereupon agreed with me, and that I had better not write Prof. Taussig.

Dec. 11, 1924, 188

Mrs. Wilson spoke of Sir. Maurice Low with much appreciation, and said he had qualities which Ray Stannard Baker did not have.

Dec. 12, 1924, 190

C.S.H. meets Ray Stannard Baker at tea at Mrs. Wilson's.

Dec. 12, 1924, 191

C.S.H. meets Ray Stannard Baker at lunch, and after lunch he came to my room.

He said that Col. House was so taken in by the wily British and French diplomats that he did not really realize that the League covenant had been dropped from the Treaty during President Wilson's absence from Paris; that, as agreed, they were ostensibly fixing the military terms of the Treaty, but that they gradually and unobtrusively extended the scope and got in what they really wanted, leaving out the League covenant; that Col. House did not see through their diplomatic game; that he is certain that Col. House never specifically cabled President Wilson that the covenant of the League was not in the Treaty, although he was in constant touch with the President by cable and kept him generally informed as to what was going on; that President Wilson understood that the League of Nations covenant had been omitted and his talk with Col. House as to this omission must have been very interesting.

He said he was certain President Wilson had not been told of the secret Treaties, for he (Baker) had gone over every scrap of President Wilson's memoranda and there was nothing in them on the subject.

He added that he was sure Col. House did not intend to be disloyal to President Wilson, but that he was in fact disloyal as to Fiume and the omission from the Treaty of the League covenant, while President Wilson was away from Paris.

He said he felt that Col. House's head had been turned and that this fact, coupled with his limited intellectual equipment, and his desire to make everyone satisfied by compromise, was the cause of the trouble.

He also said that, unlike Col. House, President Wilson comprehended the diplomatic game of Clemenceau and Lloyd George perfectly, and that none of our other commissioners did. That when President Wilson had to compromise he knew it was a compromise.

Dec. 13, 1924. 193

Baker tells C.S.H. that Mrs. Wilson advised President Wilson not to give as a reason for calling for Mr. Lansing's resignation the fact that he had called Cabinet meetings during his illness.

Dec. 13, 1924. 193

Mrs. Wilson told C.S.H. that she had frequently told Mr. Baker, half jestingly, that she would not choose him as the official biographer unless she was unable to find one better qualified than him; that she asked him yesterday whether he would be guided by her judgment in e.g. a case where she of her own knowledge knew all of the facts, - in case she asked him to be the official biographer; that he replied, somewhat Delphically, that he could not conceive himself as refusing to be dominated by facts.

Dec. 13, 1924. 193

Mrs. Wilson tells C.S.H. that she told Mr. Baker that she wanted to be free from any Publisher, but that she did not feel she could afford to finance the writer of the biography pending its publication; that Baker quietly replied that he would have no difficulty in financing it, - at which she smilingly replied that she had not yet appointed him!

Dec. 13, 1924. 193, 194.

C.S.H. meets Ray Stannard Baker at lunch at the Cosmos Club. He said he would come up to my room after lunch, and a ens up for a minute to say that Mr. 4.olling had just telephoned him to come up as Yin3 Wilson wished to talk with him.

Dec. 14, 1924. 195

C.S.H. has a seat on the floor of the H.R. at Dr. Alderman's eulogy, between Dr. Ruffin and Ray Stannard Baker.

Balfour

Mrs. Wilson tells C.S.H. that Lloyd George, Balfour and Clemenceau prepared with Mr. Wilson the statement as to Plunx; that Henry White had given out one draft initiated by Balfour; that it was agreed that each should give it out separately, that Mr. Wilson's was given out first and so enraged the Italians, that the others went back on their agreement and refused to publish it.

Calls up Mrs. Wilson from New York and asks if she will agree to an indorsement of the L. of Nations by the Dem. Natl. Convention "with reservations." She at once said No.

June 27, 1924. 5

Sec. Baker tells C.S.H. that Baruch, during the war had a young woman secretary who was suspected of being an Austrian spy that the War Department, unknown to Baker, installed a dictograph in her (or possibly in Baruch's office; that nothing except some rather bombastic remarks of Baruch were discovered; that Baruch later found this out and was very angry and held Baker most unjustly responsible.

Sept. 12, 1924. 39, 40.

Baruch tells Mr. Bolling that the official biography of Mr. Wilson should be written by someone who did not know Mr. Wilson.

Dec. 2, 1924. 167

Baruch, at a dinner of Sen. Swanson, says the Ku Klux defeated Davis and had put the party back for 20 years; that the campaign was wretchedly managed, no one trying to elect Davis, but everyone for himself; that he wanted an intensive campaign mass for the Senate which would cost $750,000; that he agreed to pay for this, but no attempt was made to do it; that the failure of the Convention to attack the Ku Klux by name stirred up the Catholics, while the opposition in the Convention to the Ku Klux angered the Protestants; that McAfee would have been defeated if he had been nominated.

She is a sister-in-law of John W. Davis.

Sec. Baker suggests, as a good man to write biography of President Wilson.

Sec. Baker suggests C.S.H. the best man.

Dec. 5, 1924. 173

C.S.H. writes Prof. Taussig who says Bassett is a steady, accurate, careful historian; that he has written several books rather of the text book variety, but well done; that he has made no brilliant or outstanding contributions to history; that he has been Secretary of the American Historical Association and has given satisfaction in that capacity.

Oct. 30, 1924. 106, 107

C.S.H. dines with Mrs. and Miss Bolling.

Miss Bolling said they were disgusted with Dr. Axson's article on the Wilson family published during the campaign of 1916, and that it was an apology for President Wilson's marriage to Edith.

She said President Wilson consulted Edith on every important matter and that she would tell me of many specific instances.

I said I was trying to induce her to write her recollections, and she and her mother both urged me to try to induce her to do this.

I said Bertie also hoped she would do it.

At dinner she asked me to say grace, and I repeated the grace my mother had taught me and which I had not repeated for nearly forty years, but which I remembered perfectly.

Oct. 30, 1924. 106, 107, 108

I called by appointment on Mrs. and Miss Bolling in the evening, to make a dinner call.
Boiling, Bertha (Cont.)

They said they spent election night with their sister, Edith; that my telegram as to the Mattapoisett vote gave them great pleasure, Edith showing it to every one who came in; that during the evening they were so disappointed and tired Edith opened a bottle of wine.

Miss Bolling again alluded to the Dr. Axson article; she said they were at Shadow Lawn at the time and that Dr. Axson was there also and she told him just what she thought of it.

She also said it made her very indignant to have writers dwell entirely on Mr. Wilson's life with the first Mrs. Wilson, ignoring Edith; that she had no doubt the first Mrs. Wilson was a most charming and lovely woman, although she had never met her, but that her life with him, while filled with delightful experiences, had in it none of the elements of tragedy with which his life was filled while he was married to Edith; that Edith was a woman not only of great personal beauty, but, as well, of a deep intelligence; that it was her devotion and care which made it possible for Mr. Wilson to finish his term of office; that he was passionately devoted to her and bowed to her every wish; that during his illness at the White House he would call for her at all hours of the day and night; that he was never happy unless she was with him; that, worn out as she was, she gave the strictest orders to the nurses not to fail to call her when he asked for her; that they were devoted companions; that he consulted her on every important matter, even official matters of the gravest kind.

C.S.H. told her that in his opinion the first Mrs. Wilson, fine as she was, was not in the same class as Mrs. Edith Bolling Wilson, Miss Bolling saying to either as to personal charm or intelligence, nor could she have done for Mr. Wilson what Mrs. Edith Bolling Wilson was able to do.

C.S.H. said it made Bertie and himself very indignant at the way writers sneered over Mr. Wilson's marriage with his sister Edith, and that in his book he should see that she had the place in history she deserved.

They said they were delighted to learn this.

Miss Bolling said her sister would never forgive her if she knew she had spoken to me of Dr. Axson's article, as she would not admit any feeling of pique in the matter.

She said the Wilson girls had treated her sister finely, and that Dr. Axson seemed to like her also, but that she could not understand him.
Bolling, Bertha (Cont.)

She was very bitter at David Lawrence's book and said that while at Princeton he was constantly at the Wilson house and a great chum of Margaret Wilson, each calling the other by their first names.

C.S.H. said he thought Lawrence's book as published had omitted many critical references contained in the articles as originally published; that the only possible critical reference to her sister Ethel was on p. 288 where he spoke of her as a "Queen Regnant" but that this was at the close of a really fine tribute to her; that in a sense this was true as it was she who made it possible for Mr. Wilson to finish his term; that she made him fit to do so, and without her help, he could not have done it.

She said she had been asked by syndicates to write about her sister and to name her own terms, but that, of course, she had declined.

Nov. 13, 1924. 127, 128, 129, 130

Miss Bolling was taken violently ill on Sunday night. C.S.H. sends her a note and a bunch of violets.

Nov. 18, 1924. 135

C.S.H. tells Mrs. Wilson to tell Miss Bolling that he had reread Dr. Axson's article. She asked me what I thought of it and I replied asking her to tell her sister that I agreed with every word she said to me on the occasion of my last call and jokingly added that I would decline to discuss it with her. At this she smiled.

Miss Bolling is very bitter about it and I think with some reason.

Nov. 22, 1924. 148

Miss Bolling calls up C.S.H. to thank him for the violets. She said she was still very weak but hoped to go to 5 Street to see Bertie when she arrived, and that she hoped she would see much of us this winter.

Nov. 25, 1924. 150

Miss Bolling writes C.S.H. a most appreciative letter thanking him for the song. She said my note for N.Y. praising her song was a poem in itself.

Nov. 29, 1924. 163

Has Miss Bolling at dinner at Mrs. Wilson's.
Mrs. Wilson says her sister read her her letter and she was charmed with it; that it certainly was a poem in itself, and that I had a wonderful facility for expressing myself.

Dec. 6, 1924. 177

June 27, 1924. 5

Shocked at McAdoo’s course on the League of Nations.

July 1, 1924. 8

Arrives at Mattapoisett at 6:30 p.m.

July 24, 1924. 13

Mrs. Sayre, at Mrs. Forbes’ luncheon, puts him the direct question as to which candidate Mrs. Wilson favored, and he said naturally her sympathies were with McAdoo but when he dodged the L. of N., or rather, abandoned it, she thought Sen. Glass was the best choice; Mrs. Sayre then said that is a sensible conclusion.

Oct. 2, 1924. 62

Tells me about Wooley's efforts to get Mrs. Wilson to write a letter favoring Davis' candidacy. Very much opposed to it.

C.S.H. said it was a difficult problem; that I knew Davis was strongly for the L. of N., but that the platform had put a ball and chain on him under which he was restive and chafing.

He added that Coolidge was certain to win, and that our Party did not deserve to win because of its course on the L. of N.

Oct. 24, 1924. 95, 96

Called up Mr. Bolling who said I was expected for dinner this evening.

I told him Wooley was in town and that Bertie hoped she would send Davis a letter.

He said his sister talked with Wooley Saturday and settled the matter adversely.

He said she had also consulted with others and all gave her the same advice as C.S.H., and that he regarded the incident as closed.

Very pessimistic over the elections.

Oct. 28, 1924. 103

C.S.H. asks Mr. Bolling to lunch at the Cosmos Club. He gave a rather evasive answer, and later when we were alone, said he never left his sister alone at any meal, that she would be very indignant with him if she learned he had said this to me or if I even knew of his feeling. He evidently considers that she is very depressed and does not like to leave her alone.

Oct. 28, 1924. 104, 105

Telephones C.S.H. that Mrs. Wilson wants me to drive with her and her mother this afternoon.

Oct. 30, 1924. 106

Called C.S.H. that there was a story that Rice had telephoned to him.

Col. Rice tells me that he called up Mr. Bolling on the telephone and asked if he could call on Mrs. Wilson today, but he said she had a very busy day and would not make any appointments; that he then asked if he could call tomorrow, but he said the day was filled with appointments.

I do not believe Mrs. Wilson knew anything about this.

Nov. 14, 1924. 133

C.S.H. calls up Mr. Bolling who said his sister surely expected me to dinner unless she had to go to her sister Bertha who was quite ill.

Nov. 18, 1924. 135

C.S.H. said perhaps George had not given it to him, but Randolph said he did not have it, and Mrs. Wilson said he was not punctual and always late.

C.S.H. asks Gov. Harding as to gold exports during embargo, and for text of his book regarding them, as he wished to learn whether in discussing the Masher case, he had mentioned Mr. Bolling, as he knew Gov. Harding was angry with Mr. Bolling for sending him a note that President Wilson was not willing to have Gov. H. publish his book letter to Gov. H. approving the Board's warning against over-investment in British exchequer notes.

Nov. 20, 1924. 140, 141

C.S.H. called up Mr. Bolling to say good-by, but he was out walking with his sister.

Nov. 20, 1924. 140, 141

Gov. Harding writes C.S.H. that he has not mentioned Masher in his book and felt nothing should be said about gold shipments during embargo for some years yet.

C.S.H. feels from this that he has not mentioned Mr. Bolling in his book.

Nov. 20, 1924. 141

C.S.H. called up Mr. Bolling who said they wanted to get in touch with him today but that his sister had overslept herself and had not come down yet, but would call me later.

Nov. 23, 1924. 153

Tells C.S.H. that Tumulty once, in his presence, forged the signature of Mr. Wilson to an alleged memorandum so cleverly that he could not have told the difference between it and his genuine signature, and he believed he would have deceived Mr. Wilson himself; that he would have tested it upon Mr. Wilson but Tumulty tore it up.

Nov. 25, 1924. 156

C.S.H. asks him how Col. Rice got his telephone number last week, and he said he did not know as he never had given it to him.

C.S.H. said he never gave it to him or to anyone and did not even know he had telephoned until he told me himself late last night.

C.S.H. said perhaps George Peabody had given it to him, but Randolph said he did not have it and Mrs. Wilson said he was most punctilious and always wrote.

C.S.H. reminded him that Col. Rice saw President Wilson last year and that it may have been given to him then.

Mrs. Wilson came to Col. Rice's defense and said that might be the explanation of why that magazine that was bought was not returned for Mrs. Wilson's solicitation to advertise in it. Nov. 25, 1924. 158

C.S.H. telephones him and he said Mrs. Wilson expected him to dinner tonight. Nov. 25, 1924. 158

C.S.H. telephones that he left at the house last evening part of his memorandum regarding Baker's book, that they would call for me tomorrow at about 6 p.m. to go to the station to meet Bertie. Tells C.S.H. that Prof. Dodd wants very much to be the official biographer; that Mr. Wilson was greatly pleased with the life of him he published in 1920 or 1921; that Mrs. Wilson had replied to his request for an interview by saying that while she had nothing to do with the way of business, to which she saw, she would be delighted to have his consent to send; they both asked me to stick close during his call and guide the conversation so as to avoid the subject of the biographer. Dec. 4, 1924. 172

C.S.H. remains with Mr. Bolling downstairs while Newton Baker is having an interview with Mrs. Wilson. Dec. 5, 1924. 174

Mr. Bolling shows me a letter from Sen. Edge, who owned an advertising agency and to whom Musher owed some $30,000 for advertising. It was in form civil, but I did not like the tone of it. It stated that Mr. Bolling was representing Musher in the advertising business and asked him to force Musher to pay.
Rolling, John Randolph (Cont.)

The underlying thought was that Mr. Rolling could bring pressure to bear upon Musher and force him to pay.

Reada C.S.H. a proposed reply to effect that Musher also owed him, I believe, $2000; that he was not now doing business for him, and had not seen him for many months.

He told C.S.H. that Musher and Company became insolvent and that a receiver had been appointed who had organized a new company, and C.S.H. thinks he said that he, Mr. Rolling, represented the new company, which Musher was assisting in an individual capacity.

Dec. 5, 1924. 175, 176

C.S.H. saw Mr. Rolling of his fear that Gov. Harding might attack him in his book, but that he had learned from him that he had not mentioned Musher in his book. (See letter from Gov. H.)

Dec. 5, 1924. 175, 176

C.S.H. explained reason for his fear, — quoted above, — that Gov. H. thought his note discourteous.

He said he took it down exactly as Mr. Wilson dictated it.

Later in the evening he asked his sister if she could show me a copy of the note and she said yes.

C.S.H. believes the letter sent was not discourteous and that the decision was right, as the letter should not have been published in Gov. Harding's book.

C.S.H. told him Musher was a bad egg.

Dec. 5, 1924. 175, 176

Mr. Rolling was ill all day with neuralgia.

Mr. Rolling was able to attend at Dr. Alderman's wedding in the U.K. Dec. 16, 1924. 190

Asks my opinion on following facts:

Mr. Wilson had his shoes made by a N. Y. bootmaker who had made casts of Mr. Wilson's feet in wood; some days ago the bootmaker called on him and his sister and presented a bill which he paid, taking a receipt in full for all shoes, including the casts, which were specifically mentioned in the receipt.

When the man left a package was found which, when opened, contained the casts from which the shoes were made.

Later the man wrote asking that the "package" he left be returned to him.

C.S.H. advised him that the title to the casts was in his sister as sole executrix of Mr. Wilson, and she need not return them as requested.

He said his sister wished to destroy them at once, but I advised against this.

Finally Mr. Bolling prepared a short letter to the effect that his sister assumed that he had returned the casts as being her property as evidenced by the receipt he had signed, and that she had made ered the transaction closed.

The letter also asked him to return a paper drawing of the outlines of Mr. Wilson's feet which he had signed in large letters, "Woodrow Wilson" at the man's request when he made the casts.

C.S.H. advised that, although the title was undoubtedly in his sister, it might be better, for the present, at least not to demand this back, but that if any controversy arose, this also should be returned.

We all hear Davis' acceptance speech over the radio at Marion.

It was, generally, very able, but weak as to League of Nations.

He took issue with President Coolidge that the door was closed but he did not make the League an issue.

I was terribly disappointed as was also Mrs. Wilson.

I believe, however, that he wanted to say as much as he dared in favor of it without making it a direct issue.

I feel this is a terrible mistake, as it will take all of the sentiment out of the campaign and will not secure a single Republican vote in order to secure the League.

Aug. 11, 1924, 17, 18.

Charles Warren has had an interview with Davis and says Davis told him he was strongly for the League and would construe his election as an "expression of opinion" of the people in favor of it, as mentioned in his acceptance speech.
As the Convention shunted the League, I do not see the logic of this.

He also said Davis was perplexed as to the Ku Klux Klan and was considering an open denunciation with a demand on Coolidge to do the same and thus remove it from politics.

He said he advised Davis, if he did not take the above course, to come out and say he did not want the vote of any Ku Kluxer who did not accept the Democratic doctrine of freedom from racial or religious prejudices.

Davis said the Jews were more aroused on the issue than even the Catholics.

Justice McReynolds tells C.S.H. that Davis cannot possibly be elected.

C.S.H. sends Mrs. Wilson an analysis of the acceptance addresses of Davis and Coolidge.

Mrs. Wilson tells Norman Davis that John Davis had at last been smoked out and had to talk on the League of Nations. Norman Davis said to her that Davis was absolutely for the League. Mrs. W. then asked why he so explicitly affirmed the Democratic platform which shunted the League. Norman Davis said he had forgotten about this. Mrs. W. said she adopted a jesting attitude but really meant it.

McAdoo tells the Democratic Committee that he radically disagreed with Davis in his labor attitude and other questions and that, therefore, he could make no set speeches for him but would only make short rear end R.R. speeches. The Committee had given McAdoo copies of Davis' speeches for his examination.

Mrs. Wilson reads C.S.H. a letter from McAdoo, written abroad saying, among other things, that Davis was a good fellow but that he differed radically from him on almost every question.
Davis, John W. (Cont.)

Mrs. Jewell Brown, in 1920, said to the Convention that if Davis were nominated we should have at last a gentleman in the White House.

C.O.H. hears Davis' Baltimore speech over the radio at Mrs. Wilson's.

Oct. 1, 1924. 57

Sen. Pittman tells C.O.H. that Davis is praising Mr. Wilson and the League in every speech and that the Demo. Committee had cautioned him not to go too far, but without avail.

Oct. 4, 1924. 64

Sen. Pittman said Davis made a wonderful speech at Princeton eulogizing Cleveland and Wilson and the League of Nations which was greeted with thunderous applause; that on that evening he delivered an even greater speech at Newark, N. J., which was barely mentioned in the press, as the Princeton speech only was featured; that the former boss, Nugent, whom Wilson had overthrown, told Davis there was a strong sentiment for Wilson and the League in Essex county; that the only influential paper in the country was holding back an endorsement of Davis; that he begged Davis to stress Wilson and the League, although he said he did not personally favor it.

Sen. Pittman said Davis made the best speech he ever made, paying a splendid tribute to Wilson and the League; that the applause was thunderous, and that the next morning the paper in question came out for Davis.

Sen. Pittman said Charles Warren had given Davis a most pat quotation with which Davis was delighted:

"Up rose the dumb old servitor
And the deal, steered by the dumb,
Went upwards with the flood."

He said they were to get Davis to lead up to this better, as it was one of the best things Davis had.

(6.O.S. gave this to Warren.)

He said Sen. Cummins told him that if the election was thrown into the H.R. and Coolidge lacked the necessary votes, he should come out openly for Davis.

Oct. 4, 1924. 64, 65, 66

Sen. Pittman said Davis was sure of election either in the electoral college or in the H.R.

Huston Thompson says that Bishop Freeman sent word to him not to make a political speech at the Armistic ceremonies at the Cathedral, which he took as an insult; that the Bishop was at the short service at Bethesda Chapel, but did not attend the out-door service to hear him, pleading another engagement; that the Bishop evidently feared his address would alienate his rich Republican friends; that the Bishop was a bigoted, partisan Republican; that he did not believe he favored the L. of R.; that he was using Wilson’s name to boost the Cathedral. Henry White refers incidentally to the break between President Wilson and Col. House, Sept. 4, 1924.

C.S.H. tells Mrs. Wilson that Mrs. Walter Tuckerman said that she (Mrs. Wilson) caused the break between Mrs. Wilson and Col. House, Sept. 30, 1924.

See Wilson

Mrs. Wilson says Col. House was a very agreeable man, not of a brilliant mind nor of a keen intelligence, but that she believed he intended to be loyal to the President; that she felt the attentions paid him in Europe unconsciously turned his head; that before Mr. Wilson went abroad, Col. House was treated as of royalty; that the British Government placed at his disposal, free of cost, a fine house filled with servants; that his every thought crystallised into action; that when Mr. Wilson came to Paris Col. House found it difficult to realise that Mr. Wilson was supreme in command; that his son-in-law, Mr. Auchincloss, contributed to this feeling.

She agreed with C.S.H. that Col. House's attitude on Fiume was opposed to that of Mr. Wilson.

She also said that Ambassador Page's published letters revealed Col. House's condition of mind.

C.S.H. feels Mrs. Wilson's talk on Col. House has cleared up the matter.

Mrs. Wilson says Col. House's course on Fiume is not very fresh in her memory, and that she will talk with me later as to Auchincloss.

Mrs. Wilson tells C.S.H. that while in N.Y. her auto and that of Col. House were locked together, her machine was a little behind although she saw him perfectly. She added that she had not seen him since the old days when his head became turned and he felt he was higher than the President, and that undoubtedly his son-in-law Auchincloss contributed to this feeling.

Ray Stannard Baker tells C.S.H. he has no doubt but that the break between Mr. Wilson and Col. House was brought about primarily by their different points of view on the Versailles Treaty, and secondarily by personal matters such as the conduct of Auchincloss.

He said Col. House had planted his friends and relations on the Peace Commission experts etc.; that Ambrose alone had the privilege among the experts of having his wife with him; that he had his brother-in-law, Dr. Moses, appointed as the head of the experts; that, on the Fiume dispute, he consulted Dr. Moses and other experts not charged with examination into Fiume, more than he did the experts charged with this matter; that this made the Italians believe our delegation was divided on the question, and that by holding out they would get some advantage; that Mr. Lansing in his book clearly had Col. House in mind when he quoted an Italian Commissioner as saying that some one had told his commissioners that he could bring Mr. Wilson around to the Italian point of view on Fiume.

Baker also said that Col. House, after Wilson left Paris for Washington, was fooled by Lloyd George, Clemenceau, and the Italians, and finally permitted the League covenant to remain outside of the Treaty in absolute disregard of Mr. Wilson's well-known wishes; that in other matters also, he compromised against the views of the President.

He said undoubtedly Col. House intended to be loyal, but that he lacked the intellectual equipment to comprehend the game of the diplomats, that he was obsessed with the idea of making happy compromises on all questions, trying to please everybody.

He said Mr. Wilson thoroughly grasped the game of the diplomats while Col. House could not; that Col. House's services were invaluable so far as getting information was concerned, but his mind was not up to that of Mr. Wilson. He added that, as far as the break between them was concerned, Col. House really eliminated himself.

He said that the statement in Lawrence's book that Mrs. Wilson showed Col. House a newspaper article (By Wickham Stead) eulogising House at the expense of Wilson, was true.

Dr. Shotwell tells C.S.H. he is an intimate friend of Col. House and sees him often.

Mrs. Wilson asks C.S.H. to go over carefully Ray Stannard Baker's three volume book on the World Settlement, and let her know how he had treated Col. House, as some one had told him that he had "sort pedalled" oh him. C.S.H. told her he had already read most of what he said about him and felt he had torn him into shreds but that he would read the whole book again and give her his opinion.

Mrs. Wilson tells C.S.H. that she did call to Col. House's attention an article by Wickham Stead; that one day in Paris he dropped into her sitting room before keeping an appointment with Mr. Wilson, and she told him she had been given an article by Stead; that the article was an extravagant eulogy of Col. House at the expense of Mr. Wilson; that it stated that Col. House was the only statesman on the American Commission; that all that had been accomplished had been his work, and that if Mr. Wilson could only remain ill long enough, Col. House could work out the L. of N. problem.

She said Col. H. was a very close, intimate friend of Stead, and that the article was full of statements warranting the conclusion that they must have been given to Stead by Col. H. himself.

She said Col. House took it with very great embarrassment, said something as to never having seen it before, and finally left without waiting to keep his appointment with Mr. Wilson; that this was the last time she ever saw him, and she heard nothing more from him about it.

Nov. 25, 1924. 154

Nov. 29, 1924. 163, 164

C.S.H. meets Ray Stannard Baker at lunch at the Cosmos Club, and later has a talk with him in his (C.S.H.'s) room.

He said he believed Col. House was so taken in by the British and French diplomats that he really did not comprehend that the League Covenant was not in the treaty; that the diplomats were ostensibly at work, during President Wilson's absence in the U.S., fixing the military terms of the Treaty; that they gradually extended its scope so as to get in what they wanted, but leaving out the L. of N.; that Col. House did not see through their game; that he is certain Col. House never cabled Mr. Wilson specifically that the Covenant of the League was not in the Treaty, although he kept the President informed generally as to what was taking place; that he felt sure that Mr. Wilson had noted this omission and that his talk with Col. House at Brest must have been forceful.

He also said he was certain that Mr. Wilson had no knowledge, from Col. House or from anyone else, of the existence of the secret treaties, until he learned of them at Paris; that he had gone over every scrap of Mr. Wilson's memoranda and found nothing relating to these treaties.

He further stated that he felt sure that Col. House did not intend to be disloyal to Mr. Wilson, but that, in fact, he certainly was disloyal, however unconsciously, as to Fiume, the omission of the League covenant from the Treaty, and as to other matters.

He added that he thought Col. House's head was turned, and that this fast, coupled with his limited intellectual equipment, and his desire for compromise and for making everyone happy, was the cause of the trouble.

He said that President Wilson absolutely comprehended the diplomatic game, but that neither Col. House nor the other American Commissioners did.

He added that when President Wilson had to yield or compromise he understood perfectly what he was doing.

Houston, David F.

C.S.H. reads to Mrs. Wilson a letter from Bartie describing a breakfast given by Charles R. Crane in honor of Mr. Houston, at which Mr. Crane said that House was President, practically for over a year, while Mr. Wilson was ill; that Mr. Crane also said he would not leave for China until Houston had promised Mr. Wilson to remain at his post until the end of the Administration.

He said he saw Davis at Frank Polk's house a week after the Convention and that he seemed dazed; that he had no copy of either the Dem. or Repub. platforms; that he said many of the Dem. planks were bad; that he had no comprehension of the issues; that he warned his brother not to charge the Republicans with responsibility for deflation; that there had been none in the sense in which the term is ordinarily used; that if there had been any, it must have been caused by a Democratic Federal Reserve Board; that in spite of this Davis went to Omaha and charged the Republicans with deliberate deflation; that he saw one circular being put out by the Dem. Committee charging the Federal Reserve Board with deflation; that he protested to Shaver, who said it was being put out only in a few places.

Oct. 21, 1924. 94

Says in a speech that the Democratic Administration by putting up discount rates brought on the crisis of 1920; that this administration had lowered rates. (See scrap book.)

James, George R.

Objects to putting open market operations under control of a committee of Governors. Said it was against the spirit of the Sherman law; that Federal Reserve banks should compete in these operations.

It was pointed out to James that as New York was the great market, each F.R. bank would have to have an office or agency in N.Y. for this purpose; that the resulting competition would demoralise instead of stabilising rates; that when F.R. banks sold it would flood the market with money; that open market purchases were generally made for the good of the whole system, and that operating through a committee was a reasonable regulation.

June 25, 1924. 1, 3.

Says he believes the charge that the F.R. Board is dominated by N.Y. is true.

Gov. Crissinger, very angry, asks for specifications, and the whole Board joined.

The only specifications James could give were:

1. Open Market Committee.
2. High charges on collections by clearing house banks. James cited Chicago and Atlanta as the most conspicuous examples.
3. Boards action in approving reduction of N.Y. discount rate to 3½%, thus lowering (under N.Y. clearing house rules) the rate of interest paid by N.Y. banks on bank balances. Miller told James that the Class A (banker) directors bitterly fought this reduction, which was brought about by the Class B directors, especially Young and Wooley.

June 25, 1924. 2, 3.

Thinks rates should be uniform at all Federal Reserve banks.

June 26, 1924. 3.

Is a believer, unconsciously perhaps, in one central bank. He said if our system is not a central bank, each Federal Reserve bank should be allowed to compete freely in New York in open market purchases. It was pointed out to James that, as to rediscounts Federal Reserve banks can only take paper offered by member banks, thus, negotiating competition by Federal Reserve banks; also that under Section 14, a Federal Reserve bank establishing a foreign agency must allow other banks to operate through it, thus regulating competition.

Lansing, Robert, Mr. and Mrs.
Henry White says relations between Mr. Wilson and Lansing made team work impossible.
Sept. 4, 1924. 37

C.S.H. tells Mrs. Wilson, who had said that Mrs. Lansing avoided bowing to her, that he believes she is afraid to bow to her, in view of Mr. Lansing's book, and of his relations with Mr. Wilson. She said she did not see why she should act in this way. C.S.H. asked her if she would return her bow or speak to her if she made the advance. She replied that she most certainly should, although it would not be very pleasant for her to do so, but that although feeling very keenly about Lansing's book, she would be willing to let bygones be bygones, at least to this extent.
Oct. 28, 1924. 104

Ray Stannard Baker tells C.S.H. that Lansing undoubtedly referred to Col. House when he wrote in his book that an Italian Commissioner complained to him that one American delegate had told him he could bring Mr. Wilson over to the Italian point of view on Fiume.
Nov. 18, 1924. 139

By mistake, on the Railroad journey from Brest to Paris, Mr. Lansing and Margaret Wilson were assigned to and their effects placed in one railroad compartment.
Dec. 2, 1924. 166

C.S.H. tells Mrs. Wilson he wishes President Wilson in dismissing Lansing had put it solely on the ground that he had not been Ray Stannard Baker tells C.S.H. that Mrs. Wilson strongly urged President Wilson not to place his request for Lansing's resignation primarily on the ground of calling Cabinet meetings during his illness.

Dec. 13, 1924. 193

C.S.H. believes that if Mr. Wilson had followed Mrs. Wilson's judgment a very different reason would have been assigned for dismissing Lansing, although she never intimated such a thing to C.S.H.

Dec. 15, 1924. 200

Lawrence, David

Miss Bolling speaks very bitterly of Lawrence's book on Mr. Wilson; said that while at Princeton Lawrence was much at the Wilson house and was a chum of Margaret's, each calling one another by their first names.

C.S.H. says he thought some criticisms of Mr. Wilson had been expunged from the book as finally published.

C.S.H. tells her that Lawrence in one place speaks of Mrs. Wilson as a "Queen Regnant," and C.S.H. says in a sense this was true as it was she who made it possible for Mr. Wilson to finish out his term; that she so cared for him that he was able to function.

Nov. 13, 1924. 129, 130

C.S.H. tells Mrs. Wilson he will send her Lawrence's book, indexed as to references to all important matters. She said if she wished her to, she would read it and talk with him about it.

C.S.H. told her that while Lawrence in places praised her very highly, in one place he referred to her as "Queen Regnant."

Nov. 14, 1924. 131

Nov. 14, 1924. 135

Mrs. Wilson tells C.S.H. she has read part of Lawrence's book, but that his evident prejudice disturbed her so that she could not read any more of it.

Nov. 18, 1924. 138

Ray Stannard Baker says that Lawrence's statement in his book that Mrs. Wilson showed Col. House a copy of a very eulogistic article by Stead, severely attacking Mr. Wilson, is true.

C.S.H. feels that Lawrence, in calling Mrs. Wilson a "Queen Regnant," is grotesquely false. She made it possible for Mr. Wilson to perform his duties, but he and not she performed them.

League of Nations

Baruch called up Mrs. Wilson and asked if she would consent to an indorsement by the Dan. Convention of the L. of N. "with reservations." She said No.

She was right. Great Britain, as Lord Grey, pointed out, would never consent to the Lodge reservation limiting the voting power of the British colonies. This was put in by Lodge,
I believe, to defeat the League.
June 27, 1924. 3

Baruch says the McAdoo forces are working to dodge the League by coming out for a referendum.
June 27, 1924. 5

Sec. Baker makes a wonderful speech opposing a referendum on the L. of N. Baker favored inducing the League. Voted down by 2 to 1.
June 28, 1924. 6

C.S.H. feels the Party has pitched Wilson and the L. of N. out of the window. It says it has no opinion on the League ... had; it is like the school teacher who said she would teach that the world was round or flat, as the School Board dictated.

It would take years to have such a referendum and meantime civilization must languish.

This form of the question put in the platform is absurd. - Do you favor joining the League of Nations with such reservations or amendments as the President and Senate may approve, or words to that effect.

The wildest irreconcilable could vote for this.

C.S.H. really hopes, after this, that McAdoo may get the nomination and see what he can do on a platform "down with Wilson and the League."
June 28, 1924. 7, 8

Mrs. Wilson much shocked and "tried at McAdoo's course in abandoning the League.
League of Nations (Cont.)

Dr. Axson, at dinner at Mrs. Wilson's, a firm believer in the League, regretted deeply the action of the Convention.

He thought McAdoo could not in any event have been nominated, but Mrs. Wilson and C.S.H. believe he might have been had he stood for the League.

July 15, 1924. 9, 10.

Dr. Axson insisted that McAdoo believed in the League, and so declared in Georgia some years ago.

C.S.H. said the only reference in his scrap book was one saying McAdoo in 1920 was coming to Washington to induce Mr. Wilson to accept the Lodge reservations.

July 15, 1924. 10

Mrs. Wilson believes Mrs. McAdoo at heart felt that McAdoo should have stood by the League but was too loyal to him to admit it.

July 15, 1924. 10

Dr. Axson is sure McAdoo came out for the League in Georgia some years ago, but can not find any reference.

July 17, 1924. 10, 11.

C.S.H. believes Dr. Axson feels that Mrs. Wilson believes McAdoo disloyal to Wilson in throwing over the League, and that in his heart he thinks so too.

July 17, 1924. 11

Miss Bolling believes McAdoo was disloyal to Wilson on the League.

July 20, 1924. 11

C.S.H. believes Mrs. Wilson feels so also.

July 20, 1924. 11

Miss Margaret Wilson tells Mrs. Wilson that President Wilson would have approved the platform of the Convention on the League. Mrs. Wilson told her she knew perfectly well he would have repudiated it and any candidate who favored the platform.

July 20, 1924. 11, 12.

Margaret Wilson was very bitter towards Sec. Baker for, in his speech, putting McAdoo in the appearance of opposing the League, when, she said, he was most earnestly in favor of it.

League of Nations (Cont.)

Mrs. Wilson tells C.S.H. that she has written both Mrs. McAdoo and Margaret, since the Convention, to the clear effect, if not so expressly worded, that she felt McAdoo had not been loyal to Mr. Wilson in his attitude on the League, and that his course, even on the lowest plane of political expediency, was a fatal mistake.

July 20, 1924. 12

C.S.H. at luncheon with Mrs. Malcolm Forbes, condemns the action of the Convention on the League; she rather mildly agreed but said the referendum was merely a postponement.

C.S.H. said if invited to dine with a host who met him at the door and pitched him into the street, it could scarcely be said that the host had merely postponed the pleasure of having him as a dinner guest!

Aug. 6, 1924. 14

Mr. Bolling, in reply to a direct question from Mrs. Sayers, said that all of Mrs. Wilson's sympathies were naturally with McAdoo, but that when he dodged the League she thought Sen. Glass was the best choice.

Aug. 6, 1924. 14, 15

C.S.H. thinks Davis' speech of acceptance was weak as to the League, although he repudiated Coolidge's statement that the door was closed, but that he did make the League an issue.

Aug. 11, 1924. 17

After we got home, Mrs. Wilson, with keen judgment and intelligence, said that Davis had said enough about the League to furnish a foundation for a future League campaign, provided he was forced into a discussion of it.

Aug. 11, 1924. 17

C.S.H. believes Davis said as much about the League as he dared without throwing down the gage of battle and making it an issue, and that even from the political standpoint this was a fatal error, for it will remove all sentiment from the campaign and will not induce a single League Republican to vote for Davis, in order to get the League.

Aug. 11, 1924. 17, 18

Charles Warren says Davis is strongly for the League, and will construe his election as a "referendum" of the people.

Aug. 19, 1924. 24, 25

Justice McReynolds says Wilson could have got the League had he submitted to the Lodge reservations.
C.S.H. said he absolutely approved Mr. Wilson’s course; that if he had accepted the reservations, Great Britain, as Lord Grey pointed out in his letter, would never have accepted the 14th reservation as to voting power; that we had greater control over some central American powers than Great Britain had over her colonies.

Aug. 21, 1924. 29, 30.

The Boston Herald of Aug. 30, 1924, contains an account of a statement made by Prof. Pay at Williamsburg, that a close friend of President Wilson, whose name he would not reveal, who saw him just before his death, said that Mr. Wilson told him that, after all, he was not sorry that the U.S. did not join the League at the outset. (See scrap book.)

Sept. 2, 1924. 33

C.S.H. cannot believe that this is true, at least in the bald form in which it was put, as it was hardly consistent with statements Mr. Wilson had said to him in the fall of 1913.

Sept. 2, 1924. 33, 34.

Ambassador Houghton claims not to believe in the League, but C.S.H. believes he is bluffing and that he knows that without it, future wars must come.

Sept. 13, 1924. 39

He said, however, he favored strongly an agreement between the great nations to uphold and not attack one another and to agree upon arbitration with the sanction of force. He did not realize that this was the essence of the League.

He said Germany was not very anxious to enter the League and would only do so as a full member, with representation on the council.

Sept. 12, 1924. 39

Sec. Baker is very much pleased at the defeat of Sen. Shields of Tenn. because of his opposition to the League, and says he would vote against Sen. Walsh for the same reason if he lived in Mars.

Sept. 12, 1924. 40

C.S.H. remembers that one night Sen. Walsh dined with us and said he would work and vote for the League.

Sept. 12, 1924. 40

Col. Slocum tells C.S.H. he is earnestly in favor of the L. of N.

Sept. 15, 1924. 41

Sept. 19, 1924. 43
Mrs. Wilson says she jestingly told Norman Davis that John Davis was at last smoked out and forced to speak about the League; that Norman Davis said he was absolutely and genuinely for it; that she asked why then did he in his acceptance speech so explicitly accept the referendum on the League in the platform.

Sept. 30, 1924. 46, 47.

Mrs. Wilson said the thought often crept into her mind whether our Party really deserved to win after its rejection of the League. Sept. 30, 1924. 47.

Mrs. Wilson said that if called on for help in the campaign by way of an interview or letter, she could and would say nothing which could be construed as accepting the action of the Dem. Convention on the League. Sept. 30, 1924. 47.

Mrs. Wilson said that McAdoo left an interview for the reporters before leaving the ship, praising the League but advocating the Referendum. Sept. 30, 1924. 47.

Mrs. Wilson reads C.S.H. a letter written abroad from McAdoo, stating that his campaign had been for Wilson and his ideals; that he did not draw the plank in the platform for the League referendum; that he did not believe in it; that it was forced on the committee by the Michigan members; that if he had been nominated he would have straightened out the matter satisfactorily. This is in direct contradiction of his interview on shipboard. Sept. 30, 1924. 49.

We both attack Sen. Pittman for his course on the League in the Convention. He said he wanted to win and he feared if we made the League an issue we should be beaten; that he had always believed in the League and had fought for it; that in Feb. 1919, after his return from Europe, Mr. Wilson asked Sen. Swanson and himself whether reservations were necessary to secure ratification; that they said, in principle No, but in getting two-thirds of the Senate, Yes; that Mr. Wilson said he could not see how force was implied in the covenant except when so directed by Congress; that Mr. Wilson put the same question to Sen. Hitchcock and Sen. John Sharp Williams who both said ratification could be secured without any reservations; that this was before the Lodge reservations; that he thought Lodge in his heart believed in the League; and would have put it through if it had been a Republican measure, but that his hatred of Wilson was so great
C.S.H. said he believed Lodge fixed up the reservations, especially that as to Article X and reservation 14, cutting down the voting power of the British colonies, so that Mr. Wilson could not accept them without stultifying himself, and with full knowledge that Great Britain, as shown by Lord Grey's letter, would never accept the voting reservation.

Oct. 4, 1924. 65, 66, 67

Sen. Pittman repeated that his course on League was fixed by a desire to win the elections; that almost all of the independent supporters of the League, including Owen Young, either refused or accepted the referendum; that Davis was praising the League in every speech and that the Demo. Committee had had to caution him not to go too far, but without avail.

Oct. 4, 1924. 64

Sen. Pittman also said Davis praised the League at a noon speech at Prine University which was not reported; that in the evening he delivered an even abler speech at Newark, New Jersey; that Boss Nugent, whom Wilson had defeated for president; that Nugent told Davis there was a strong sentiment for the League in Essex County; that the most influential paper in the state, a strong advocate of the League, was withholding any endorsement of Davis; that he begged Davis to stress the League without hesitation, although personally he did not favor it.

Oct. 4, 1924. 64, 65

Sen. Pittman said Davis made a really wonderful speech paying the most eloquent tribute to Wilson and the League, carrying the audience by storm; that the next morning the paper in question came out for Davis.

Oct. 4, 1924. 65

Mrs. Wilson has been terribly shocked by McAdoo's course in the League.

Oct. 5, 1924. 71

Mrs. Wilson asks C.S.H. whether she should write a letter endorsing Davis as requested by Wooley.

C.S.H. said it was a difficult question, but that as she said she would only write endorsing his stand on the League, C.S.H. advised her that in view of his recent interview reaffirming the Demo. platform, he advised her not to write a letter.

Nov. 21, 1924. 142

Dr. Shotwell tells C.S.H. he spoke about the League because he knew that many of the trustees looked on it coldly; that it shocked him to hear so much, at the meetings, about International peace, but not a word about the League.

House was so taken in by the British and French diplomats that he did not really comprehend that the League was not in the Treaty; that the diplomats ostensibly were fixing the military terms of the Treaty and that, little by little, they added what they wanted but left out the League; that Col. House did not inform Mr. Wilson.

that the League was left out, although he kept him informed generally as to what was being done; that Mr. Wilson clearly understood this and that his talk with Col. Margaret Wilson was very bitter towards Sec. Baker for putting McAdoo in the attitude of opposing the League.
July 20, 1924. 12

(See letter to Bertie in scrap book in which Margaret admitted to Baker that her father would not have approved the action of the Convention.)

Mrs. Wilson tells C.S.H. that, since the Convention, she has written Mrs. McAdoo and Margaret to the clear effect, if not specifically so worded, that she felt McAdoo had not been loyal to Mr. Wilson.
July 20, 1924. 12

Mr. Bolling, in reply to a direct question from Mrs. Sayres, as to which candidate Mrs. Wilson favored, said that naturally her sympathies would be with McAdoo, but that when he deserted the League, she thought Sen. Glass was the best choice.
Aug. 6, 1924. 14, 15

Mrs. Wilson writes she will show C.S.H. an extraordinary letter from McAdoo.
Sept. 15, 1924. 42

Mrs. Wilson says the Dems. Caucus tried to get hold of McAdoo on his arrival from Europe to caution him as to what to say on the political situation; that they arranged to take him off at quarantine; that at first they thought they would all meet him, but finally agreed this would be unwise, and therefore only some of them met him; that unfortunately he left an interview for the reporters before leaving, in which he praised, the League but favored the referendum; that the Committee had given him copies of all of Davis' speeches; that he finally told them he radically disagreed with Davis in his labor attitude and on other questions; that, therefore, he could make no set speeches for him, but would have to content himself with short, ready and railroad speeches.
Sept. 30, 1924. 47, 48.

Mrs. Wilson was very indignant with McAdoo and said the Committee should have demanded that he either support Davis or come out frankly and oppose him. She thought the committee paid him such consideration that it turned his head.
Sept. 30, 1924. 48

Mrs. Wilson reads C.S.H. a long letter from McAdoo, written abroad. In this letter McAdoo reviewed his whole campaign, saying that many friends of Wilson had joined Tammany and the reactionary forces to ruin him and prevent his nomination; that they failed in the former but succeeded in the latter; that now he felt free to attend to his own affairs; that his campaign was for Wilson and his ideals; that he had gone down fighting the battles of Wilson; that Davis was a good fellow and that he should support him, but that he differed radically from him on almost every question.

Sept. 30, 1924. 48

McAdoo also said in the letter that he did not draw the referendum clause on the League, adopted by the Convention, and did not believe in it; that it was forced on the committee by the Michigan members; that if he had been nominated he would have straightened out the whole matter satisfactorily!

(This is in direct contradiction to his interview on ship board strongly favoring the referendum.)

Sept. 30, 1924. 49

Mrs. Wilson said it was the most absurd letter she ever read, and was evidently prepared for general future use; that, by merely striking out "Dear Edith", it could have been sent to anyone.

Sept. 30, 1924. 49

Admiral Grayson tells us that McAdoo summoned him and Dr. Hugh Young to New York and that he would shortly have to have an operation, but did not say what it was.

Sept. 30, 1924. 49

Mrs. Harriman says Mrs. McAdoo is so absorbed in Mr. McAdoo that she has no mind of her own.

Mrs. Wilson said she had a mind of her own and that she told McAdoo, after his testimony before the Congressional Committee, that she hoped he would take the advice of his friends and withdraw, now that he could do so with honor, but that McAdoo persuaded her to accept his view.

Oct. 1, 1924. 55

C.S.H. tells Mrs. Wilson of McAdoo's interview of Feb. 1924, strongly advocating a referendum on the League, absolutely inconsistent with his letter to her.

Oct. 2, 1924. 60, 61.

Mrs. Wilson says she has not heard a word from McAdoo, who is in the hospital at Baltimore.

Oct. 8, 1924. 68, 69.

C.S.H. tells Mrs. Wilson he has a most kindly feeling for McAdoo in spite of his differences with him. She said she, of course, understood that.

Oct. 8, 1924. 69
Mrs. Wilson said she might go over to see McAdoo.

Oct. 8, 1924. 69

Mrs. Wilson says she has not heard a word from McAdoo, although Admiral Grayson had seen him and said everything was going well; that she did not think she would go over to see him.

Oct. 8, 1924. 71

McAdoo's action on the League has been a terrible shock to Mrs. Wilson.

Oct. 8, 1924. 71

C.S.H. tells Mrs. Wilson he wrote McAdoo and offered to go over to see him, as in spite of his action on the League, he still had regard for him, but felt he would not want to see him.

Oct. 8, 1924. 71

Mrs. Wilson said she should think he would want to see C.S.H. above all things, and that it was very good in C.S.H. to offer to go, which offer she thoroughly appreciated.

Oct. 8, 1924. 71

C.S.H. believes Mrs. Wilson's real reason for going to New York to visit Mrs. Norman Davis is to escape the necessity for seeing McAdoo. C.S.H. does not blame her and believes she will not return until McAdoo has left.

Oct. 8, 1924. 74

Charles Warren says there is much bitterness towards McAdoo in the west where he has just returned; that all felt he was no sport; that his "operation" was a fake so as to avoid taking the stump for Davis.

Oct. 9, 1924. 75

Dr. Axson says he wired McAdoo at the hospital; and he replied asking him to come over at any time; that McAdoo was very bitter against certain people, not necessarily delegates, who had, he felt, betrayed him.

Oct. 9, 1924. 75

Dr. Ruffin is very bitter against McAdoo; said he was doing his best to "queer" Davis in the hope of defeating him and of becoming the LaFollette of the Darn. Party. He referred to the rumor that his operation was a fake, and C.S.H. thinks he so believes it.

Oct. 9, 1924. 76

C.S.H. fears Mrs. Wilson may have told above rumors to Dr. Ruffin.

Oct. 9, 1924. 77
McAdoo, W. G. (Cont.)

Mrs. Wilson thinks McAdoo's public letter endorsing Davis is more of an endorsement of LaFollette than of Davis, and deplores it. Oct. 9, 1924. 88

Mrs. Wilson says she wrote McAdoo at the hospital and offered to take him into her house for his convalescence and that she received a most cordial reply. Oct. 21, 1924. 88, 89

Mrs. Wilson said that one day, while calling on Mrs. Grayson, McAdoo came in with Mr. Roper; that he looked feeble, and acted towards her rather sheepishly; that she left before he did, pleading an engagement to drive with her mother; that she learned he drove back to the hospital; that he did not call on her; that Mrs. McAdoo wrote her a sweet note thanking her for her offer to take McAdoo into her house. Oct. 21, 1924. 89

Mrs. Wilson spoke of McAdoo's belated speech for Davis with a smile, - we all saw the humor of it. Oct. 28, 1924. 102

C.S.H. believes McAdoo has ruined any political future he might have had by his treatment of Davis. Oct. 28, 1924. 103

Mrs. Wilson referred to McAdoo's speech at Los Angeles favoring the League with a smile; it seemed incomprehensible to both, - knowing her real attitude. Oct. 31, 1924. 109

Newman, formerly District Commissioner, told C.S.H. he had arranged with 23 radio circuits for a speech by 'Waco, without any expense, on Monday night before election, but that McAdoo, because of other engagements, was not able to accept. Nov. 10, 1924. 124

C.S.H. believes McAdoo has killed all chance of future political preferment. Nov. 10, 1924. 124

C.S.H. tells Mrs. Wilson of above and she was shocked, saying that if she had been a defeated candidate, nothing would have prevented her from accepting. She added, mildly, that perhaps McAdoo was dominated by somebody just as she was dominated by C.S.H. in the matter of the letter to Davis. Nov. 14, 1924. 130

Houston thinks McAdoo and Smith will continue their fight and that they will likely kill one another, but the party as well. He was very bitter against McAdoo.

Almanac of President Nov. 24, 1924. 151, 152.

Gov. McLean tells C.S.H. that Sen. Pat Harrison and Sen. Glass were treacherous to McAdoo; that recently he had received a letter from McAdoo from which he gathered that he had given up all hope of running again; that he now believed McAdoo could not have been elected if nominated.

Nov. 29, 1924. 162

Gov. McLean also said that McAdoo's prostate gland was enlarged and that some time he would have to be operated upon; that his present trouble, however, was merely a very slight stricture, to cure which an instrument was inserted which by spreading out made the passage larger.

He also said that, in his opinion, there was no necessity for doing anything at this time, and that McAdoo went through it as an easy way of avoiding taking the stump for Davis.

He also said McAdoo explained his not doing more for Davis by the fact that the Progressives were supporting him (McAdoo) and that it was not advisable for him to turn them down by actively supporting Davis.

Nov. 29, 1924. 162, 163

Miss Bassel, sister-in-law of Mr. Davis, tells C.S.H. that a friend of hers came over on the steamer with McAdoo and that McAdoo kept telling him how he disagreed with Davis' views, and said several times, - "What is there I can say for him?"

Nov. 30, 1924. 165

Byron Newton tells C.S.H. that he saw McAdoo just after Davis' nomination and urged him to give out an interview for Davis, but that McAdoo said he refused to himself perfect liberty of action in the matter; that McAdoo ran up tremendous bills at the Vanderbilt, N. Y., and that finally Stuart Giboney was asked to raise money to pay them, which he did for the most part.

He said he had written several times to McAdoo, but that he did not answer his letters. He said Meredith was slated to run with McAdoo, and that he did not know why he refused to run with Davis.

McReynolds, Justice

C.S.H. dines with Justice McReynolds at the Metropolitan Club, happening to meet him there.

He talked in a rambling way, attacking everything and everybody.

He said Davis could not be elected; that Judge McKenna was in fairly good physical condition but that "there was nothing here" (touching his head); that Judge Holmes was still all right mentally but he was extremely narrow and shut out from the world, and should have resigned long ago; that he seriously considered introducing a motion that no case should be referred to a judge over 75 years of age for an opinion; that the court should do this to preserve itself; that Judge Brandeis, although able in a certain way, had no conception of the spirit of the common law, and should never have been appointed; that he distrusted all Jews, as the Oriental mind was entirely different from the Anglo-Saxon mind; that Jewish lawyers looked on law as if handed down from Zion.

He inquired very courteously as to Mrs. Wilson and asked if she was as bitter as Mr. Wilson, adding that he could have secured the League had he accepted the Lodge reservations.

To avoid controversy with him, - which would have been useless, I interrupted him and said very positively that I believed firmly in the League of Nations, and unqualifiedly endorsed Mr. Wilson's course on it, especially his refusal to accept the Lodge reservations, - asking him how e.g. Mr. Wilson could have accepted Reservation 14, cutting down the voting power of the British colonies, knowing, as he did that, as Lord Grey pointed out in his letter, that Gt. Britain would never accept it, and fully realizing that the U.S. has greater control over certain central American countries, through loans etc. than has Gt. Britain over her colonies.

My positive statements seemed to stagger him and he said he did not believe the U.S. should enter into partnership with any nation, except possibly Great Britain, which might involve us in war.

I spoke of Mr. Wilson’s manly course towards France, and said that if the U.S. if refusing to enter the League, should at least have accepted the pact of mutual assistance for France, pending the setting up of the League of Nations, in case of unjustifiable attack.

He said Mr. Wilson did nothing to press this treaty.

C.S.H. replied he had done everything, but that neither the Democrats nor the Republicans would consent to it - that he knew this from personal knowledge. Aug. 21, 1924. 28, 29, 30.

Mellon, Sec.

Untermyer has a scandal involving a transfer to the Franklin National Bank of Washington of political funds through the F.R. Bank of Chicago, engineered by Sec. Mellon.

C.S.H. said it was absurd and that Untermyer had better be sure of his facts before charging it.

Oct. 28, 1924. 100

C.S.H. hears Sec. Mellon’s speech over the radio at Mrs. Wilson’s.

Sec. Mellon, in this speech, said that the failure of the F.R. System to raise discount rates after the armistice, was the cause of the crisis in 1920.

Nov. 2, 1924. 110

Sec. Mellon, at meeting of the Federal Advisory Council, opposed any increase in the discount rates of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York (now 3%), as he believed much of the present business improvement was normal, — merely taking up the slack.

Miller, in discussing the pension bill said the great danger of dry rot was in the higher paid men.

Oct. 31, 1924. 113

Nov. 10, 1924. 124

Nov. 12, 1924. 125, 126

Miller says open market powers should not be used to stabilize discount rates, now abnormally low. All agreed to this.

Nov. 12, 1924. 128

Miller now wants high rates. Perhaps he is no longer a borrower (Globe Milling Co.) Nov. 12, 1924. 126

Miller, before Federal Advisory Council repeats his remarks before the joint conference.

Sec. Mellon asked him if he thought the 3½ N.Y. rate should be increased, and with some hesitation he said yes.

Nov. 24, 1924. 150

Offers resolution that open market rates on acceptances should be sufficiently above the level of market rates to be effective, and at least 1¢ of 1½ above the actual current (sales) rates; calls for expression of views and a recommendation of the F.R. Bank of N.Y. on the subject of a revision of its open market rates in order to bring about a better adjustment of such rates to the trend of rates in the money market and in order to make its rates effective.

Miller said conditions in N.Y. were not now critical but might become so; that he feared the N.Y. directors were letting the situation get out of hand; that the effect of his resolution would be to prevent any more acceptances from being bought by the F.R. bank.

He said present acceptance rates were out of line with the trend of money rates.

He said, in his opinion, the 3½ discount rate should be advanced.

Votes against C.S.H.'s motion to postpone until tomorrow.

Rice, William G.
Spent last night at Cosmos Club in my room.

Called up Mr. Bolling and asked if he could call on Mrs. Wilson today. Bolling said she was to have a very busy day and could make no appointments.

Then asked if he could call late this afternoon. Bolling said she would be out all the afternoon.

Then asked if he could not call tomorrow. Bolling said she was filled with appointments tomorrow.

He never told me of this until late in the evening.

Am amazed that he should have called Bolling, without at least having first consulted me.

If he had, I might have asked Mrs. Wilson to let me bring him to lunch today, when I luncheon with her.

Mrs. Wilson knew nothing about this for when I told her that he was in town she said "Why didn't you tell me?"

I cannot understand where he got Mrs. Wilson's telephone number; I certainly never gave it to him, and Bertie and Anna say they did not.

C.S.H. speaks to Mrs. Wilson and Mr. Bolling about Rice telephoning them for an appointment, saying he wondered how he got their number; that he had never given it to him or to anyone; that I did not even know he had called up until late that evening.

Mr. Bolling said he had never given Rice the number.

C.S.H. said he was a great friend of George Peabody and he might have given it to him.

Mr. Bolling said Peabody did not have the number and Mrs. Wilson said Peabody was most punctilious and always wrote for appointments.

C.S.H. then said Rice called on President Wilson last year and perhaps it was given to him then.

Mrs. Wilson rather came to Rice's defense and said that was probably the explanation.

If he had written, Mrs. Wilson, I feel quite sure, would have arranged to see him.

I know that on the first day Mrs. Wilson was driven to as she told me at lunch she was going to take her mother to drive and was then going to the hospital to bring Wilmer Bolling - recovering from an operation for appendicitis - home to his house.

Rice may have secured Mrs. Wilson's telephone number from the outside of my telephone book in the club, - although it was written so softly as to be almost unintelligible. I think probably he took it down while in Mattapoisett where it was pinned up in a rather conspicuous place.

In any event, he should never have used it, without at least first asking my permission.

The Boston Herald of Aug. 30, 1924 contains an account of an address by Prof. Fay at Williamstown, to the effect that a personal friend, whose name he would not reveal and a close friend of Mrs. Wilson, saw Mr. Wilson just before his death, and that he said he was not sorry that the U.S. did not join the League at the outset. (See scrap book).

Mrs. Wilson in a letter to C.S.H. dated Sept. 7, 1924, said that Mr. Wilson used the exact words quoted by Prof. Fay, in a talk with Canon Robbins, of the Cathedral of St. Johns, the Divine, and Norman Davis, just before his last illness.
Sept. 22, 1924. 40

(C.S.H. wrote Dean Robbins and obtained from him a copy of his address quoting Mr. Wilson. See scrap book.)

Robbins, Mrs. Warren

Called on us at Mattapoisett

Her husband is Sec. of Embassy, Berlin.

She said she did not agree with Ambassador Houghton as to the necessity for further relief for the starving children in Germany; that there had been much suffering which had been helped by American, Swiss, and other relief; that since the issue of rentenmarks the currency has been stabilized and the farmers were selling food in the cities; that prior to this stabilization they did not do this because of the fluctuation of the mark.

She said there was much bitterness in Germany against the French and also, to a less degree, against us; that the old militaristic crowd were very bitter and held aloof from the allies; that a German officer who dined at a house where he was likely to meet any of the Allies would be expelled from his club.

She said that although the currency was now stable, the cost of living had increased enormously.

She said the Socialist Party was the hope of Germany.

Stock exchange
C.B.H. does not favor use of open market powers to regulate the stock exchange, but Gov. Strong points out that a rise in call loan rates may necessitate an increase in commercial rates.
Nov. 10, 1924. 123

Strong, Gov.
Board discussed the minutes of the Chicago meeting of the open market committee, in which the feeling was expressed that Gov. Strong should be authorized, with the cooperation of the committee, to buy or sell 100 million more of Govt. securities in case of emergency, subject to approval of the Federal Reserve Board.

Gov. S. said the committee had intended to report today to the Board along these lines, but that Miller had told him there would be objection in the Board; that some one must take the responsibility and if the Board would take the responsibility of refusing this, he would be content.

Gov. Strong pointed out that in the near future there would be a contraction of the reserves of member banks of over 200 millions — 26 millions already set aside for Canada, 100 millions loaned to Germany, being exported at rate of 9 millions per week, payment to be Feb. 1925 of U.S. bonds securing circulation which will require a deposit in the Treasury of 87 millions (the amount of these bonds securing national bank notes).

Gov. S. said this will tighten the market, and may necessitate putting up discount rates; that putting up rates now would cause uncertainty and bitter opposition in the U.S. and would seriously disturb our relations with Europe, probably causing renewed imports of gold.

Gov. S. evidently wants to purchase more Govt. securities to ease up the money market and keep down discount rates.

C.S.H. fears that Gov. S.'s desire to relieve the administration from embarrassment also, by keeping down discount rates, also that possibly be hopes for a little more inflation to put us on a parity with Great Britain.

Miller vigorously objected to giving Gov. Strong such powers, and Gov. S. read from the minutes of the Chicago meeting Miller's remarks favoring it, which staggered Miller.

Cunningham objected to using open market powers to stabilize discount rates even if he opposed increasing discount rates.

C.S.H. pointed out that in 1923 we disposed of most of our holdings of Govt. securities to avoid the necessity of putting up discount rates.

Gov. S., angry at Miller and Cunningham, suggested that the Board disband the committee and operate itself.

C.S.H. doubts whether open market operations should now be used to keep down a reasonable advance in discount rates.

C.S.H. does not believe open market powers should be used to regulate stock exchange operations directly but Gov. S. pointed out that a rise in call loan rates may ultimately necessitate an advance in commercial rates.

Gov. S. seems really to wish to revive the old money committee in use after the armistice, — which C.S.H. does not like.

Gov. Strong and Gov. Norris feel that while a moderate increase in discount rates might be of benefit domestically, it would injure Europe and this in the long run would injure us.

Nov. 10, 1924. 121, 122, 123, 124
Miller objected to giving Gov. Strong power to offset effect of the 50 million maturing certificates, and the exports of gold. C.S.H. pointed out that this power is proposed to be given to the committee and not to Gov. Strong.

Gov. S. said that as chairman he never had or would do anything except after conference with the committee, and that the Board had been and would be advised of every meeting.

Miller said he thought that Gov. Strong was to be given this power, but as it was to be given to the committee he would withdraw his objection.

C.S.H. pointed out that at the meeting last June the F.R. Bank of New York wanted the power but the Board objected. Gov. S. again pointed out that the gold earmarked for Canada, and that ordered by our banks for Germany, and the bond redemptions would seriously draw down the reserves of member banks, which must result in calling commercial loans or restricting credits, thus disturbing the commercial money market.

Gov. S. said the committee would at once increase bill rates to help control the situation.

Gov. Crissinger says there is much friction between Miller and Gov. Strong. Dec. 3, 1924. 170

Surplus

Board permitted F.R. Bank of New York to pay a semi-annual dividend, although not earned, as it could be charged to surplus at end of year, if necessary.

C.S.H. introduces a resolution to effect that power to pay dividends out of surplus, should not prevent the F.R. banks from making every reasonable effort to make necessary earnings using open market powers for the purpose, unless such course would unduly disturb market conditions.

Nov. 12, 1924. 127

Is furious about the Armistice service at the Cathedral.

Said it would be an outrage to have President Wilson's body permanently interred there.

He said that Bishop Freeman sent word to him not to make a political speech; that it was an insult; that Bishop F. took part in the short service in Bethlehem Chapel but would not go to the cross to hear him, pleading an engagement; that the Bishop evidently feared his address might alienate his rich Republican friends; that the Bishop was a narrow, partisan that he was using Wilson's name to boost the Cathedral.

As a Republican, that he did not believe he favored the L. of N.;

He said he favored buying a lot across the Potomac near the new Lincoln bridge and building a sepulchre there.

He said Mrs. Wilson wrote him a beautiful note saying frankly she could not trust herself to attend the services.

He also said he spoke some plain truths at the exercises, dwelling upon Mr. Wilson's armistice speech of last year.

He gave me a clipping from the Chicago Tribune headed, "Bitterness at the Cross of Peace", attacking his address.

She defended the Bishop saying he had no intention of insulting Thompson; that the services were gotten up by people who used Non-partisan League paper, and their statement said that Mrs. Wilson favored the services; that the Bishop sent
Dr. Bratenahl to her who said they greatly feared the services might be turned into a political meeting, and, to avoid such a contingency, she decided to take no part in it.

C.S.H. thinks that perhaps the Bishop knew how erratic Thompson is and feared what might happen.

Mrs. Wilson said Thompson sent her a copy of his address and she saw nothing in it subject to criticism.

6. C.S.H. reads to Mrs. Wilson Bertie's letter about the Houston breakfast given by Charles R. Crane, at which Mr. Crane said that Houston was practically President of the U.S. for a year when Mr. Wilson was ill, and that he (Crane) refused to leave for his post in China until Houston had promised Mr. and Mrs. Wilson to remain as Sec. of Agriculture until the end of Mr. Wilson's administration.

Mrs. Wilson said there was not a word of truth in this.

June 28, 1924. 5, 6

7. Mrs. Wilson said she was positive that Mr. Wilson never told Crane, as the man who nominated Houston said to the Convention, that Houston should be the nominee.

June 28, 1924. 6

8. While listening over the radio to Sec. Baker's speech on the League, in which he paid a beautiful tribute to Mr. Wilson, Mrs. Wilson broke down completely, sobbing like a child, while Mr. Wilson, to C.S.H., seemed almost sitting in the vacant chair nearby in the Library.

14. Mrs. Wilson to H. P. H.:

Refers to "that hot, noisy garden where all the courage and principles of the Democratic Party seem to have been murdered. I am afraid I am very bitter and have not the faith my husband had. I am glad I did not go to the Convention - it would have been more than I could have stood and would have led to embarrassment."
"We loved having Mr. Hamlin and Miss him very much. He is always so full of understanding and sympathy and thinks so straight on things that it is a great source of strength to me."

July 5, 1924. 71, 72.

July 15, 1924. 9

16. Mrs. Wilson believes McAdoo might have been nominated had he not opposed Mr. Wilson's ideals.

July 15, 1924. 9

17. Mrs. Wilson is sure that Mrs. McAdoo, at heart, felt that McAdoo should have fought for the League, but was too loyal to McAdoo to admit it.

July 20, 1924. 11

25. Mrs. Wilson says Margaret Wilson went over the Convention with her over and over again; that she told her (Mrs. Wilson) that she thought her father, Mr. Wilson, would have approved of the League plank; that she (Mrs. Wilson) said she knew perfectly well he would have repudiated it and any candidate who favored the plank.

July 20, 1924. 11, 12

26. Mrs. Wilson said Margaret was very bitter towards Sec. Baker for putting McAdoo in the position of fighting the League, when he really was most earnestly for it.

July 20, 1924. 12
27. Mrs. Wilson said she had written both Mrs. McAdoo and Margaret Wilson, since the Convention, to the effect that she felt McAdoo had not been loyal to Mr. Wilson

34. Mrs. Wilson tells us about Bishop Kinsolving, who once told
Mr. Bayard at a tea at her house that he did not care to be presented to Mrs. Wilson, who was at the tea, and that he had refused to marry her to President Wilson.
Mrs. Wilson said that her family had known Bishop K. for years, and, I think she said, he had married one of them; that, not knowing Bishop Harding, and not wanting the Rev.
Earnest Smith, she wrote and obtained Bishop Harding's consent, and that she then wrote Bishop K. and asked him to marry President Wilson and herself; that she explained in the letter that while she would very much like to invite Mrs. Kinsolving to be present at the wedding, her house was so very small that the guests necessarily had to be restricted to the immediate families of President Wilson and herself; that Bishop K. wrote that he would be delighted to marry them; that she enjoined secrecy upon him, but, notwithstanding, he made an announcement of the fact at some dinner in Philadelphia; that 2 or 3 days before the wedding he came to Washington and sent her a letter stating that it would be very awkward for Mrs. Kinsolving not to be present at the wedding, and that their titled friends in Europe (whether they were just sailing) would not understand her failure to receive an invitation; that if he did not hear from her to the contrary, he would assume it was agreeable to Mrs. Wilson and would bring her with him to the wedding.

Mrs. Wilson added that she immediately wrote him that she would relieve him from the embarrassment of officiating. She finally had Rev. Herbert Smith perform the ceremony. Mrs. Wilson said she still has his letter referred to above.

C.S.H. feels that Bishop Kinsolving is a despicable man, as well as a liar. In his statement to Mrs. Bayard he gave the impression that there was some serious reason why he was prompted to refuse to marry her.

C.S.H. believes he should be unfrocked for such a deliberate lie and slander.

Aug. 8, 1924. 15, 16.

34 A. One day at Mattapoisett Mrs. Wilson spoke of Dr. Ernest Smith with contempt. She said she was once a parishioner of his but felt she could not endure him, and left the church. She said that once when she was visiting the Wilson girls at Cornish, Dr. Smith wrote her a letter addressed to Cornish in care of President Wilson, asking her to use her influence to secure some appointment he wanted for his son; that she later wrote or saw him and expressed her displeasure, when he denied that he so addressed it, although she has the letter; that later he called on her one day, and, kneeling down, asked her to pray with him; that she declined and left the room.

C.S.H. told her he had heard that Dr. Smith was so in love with her that he asked her to leave his church, as he could not conduct the services while she was present.

Mrs. Wilson laughed heartily at this and said there was not a word of truth in it.

Aug. 11, 1924. 17
36. Mrs. Wilson and C.S.H. were greatly disappointed that he did not make the League an issue but affirmed the Democratic platform regarding it.

Aug. 11, 1924. 17

37. Mrs. Wilson, after we went home, made a remarkably keen comment showing her judgment and intelligence by saying that Davis had said enough about the League to furnish a foundation for a League campaign if forced by popular demand into a discussion of it.

Aug. 11, 1924. 17

38. Mrs. Wilson was under a terrible strain listening to the address of Davis, but she carried herself wonderfully, she appeared calm and collected, showing nothing of the ordeal she was undergoing. She has a marvelous control over herself, and showed an almost stoical calmness, completely shutting out what later she told me she was going through. And yet, in the family she is simple, natural, and above all, so human.

Aug. 11, 1924. 18

39. Mrs. Wilson planned to leave us today to visit Mrs. Pennigton at Lincolnville, Maine, stopping an route for a day or two. It rained so hard that, at our earnest request, she decided to stay over until tomorrow, and I so telephoned Mrs. Warren.

Aug. 12, 1924. 18, 19.

40. Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Bolling and I left Mattapoisett at 9:15 a.m. in her automobile. We stopped and inspected 2 Raleigh Street, passing by Mrs. Blake's house in Brookline. Mrs. Wilson said our house was one of the most charming she had ever seen.

I had intended to leave them there, but they begged me to go farther with them, so finally I went as far as Salem, and there left them.

Aug. 13, 1924. 20

41. We enjoyed Mrs. Wilson's visit immensely and felt very sorry when she left us. I played pool with her almost every night and set up very late, going over many incidents in the life of Mr. Wilson.

Henry White has often told C.S.H. what valuable assistance Mrs. Wilson gave Mr. Wilson at Paris.

Aug. 15, 1924. 20

Mrs. Wilson, in the family, has all the freshness and vigor of a young girl, full of life and spirit, but most modest and shy as to her personal experiences, never speaking of them unless urged, and almost entreated so to do, and then only with extreme reluctance.

Aug. 15, 1924. 20

Mrs. Wilson said that Lloyd George, Balfour, Clemenceau and Mr. Wilson prepared together a statement to Fiume, but agreed that it should be given out separately; that Mr. Wilson gave his out first and it caused great anger among the Italians, and the others broke their agreement and refused to publish it.

Aug. 13, 1924. 20

Mrs. Wilson said that Henry White had Balfour's draft initialled by him; that she wrote him for a copy and he sent her the original, which she now has.

Mrs. Wilson to H. P. H. Describes Lincolnville, etc.

Aug. 15, 1924.

C. S. H. writes Mrs. Wilson telling of a talk with Sir Maurice Low in which he said the ambition of his life was to write Mr. Wilson's biography; that Mrs. Wilson, however, had told him it ought to be written by an American, but that he hoped later to have another talk with her and persuade her to let him do it.

Aug. 16, 1924. 21

Sir Maurice Low also said his publishers wanted him to bring out another edition of his appreciation of President Wilson, brought down to his death, but that it would be a very unsatisfactory piece of work; that he much preferred to write a new biography.

Aug. 16, 1924. 21, 22

C.S.H. did not tell Sir Maurice that the (C.S.H.) had had many talks with Mrs. Wilson on this subject and had advised her to go very slowly that the occasion for haste was the collection of material in the shape of letters, papers, etc., that later the man would appear who could do the work best; that possibly she might decide it better to have a collaboration of several writers.

Aug. 16, 1924. 22

Mrs. Wilson asked C.S.H. what he thought of Bliss Perry and Mark de Wolfe Howe as possible biographers, and C.S.H. said they were good men to consider when the time comes for decision.

Aug. 16, 1924. 22

Mrs. Wilson, at Mattapoisett, talked with C.S.H. as to drawing her will. C.S.H. advised her to do this at once and gave her advice as to certain details she mentioned to him.

Aug. 16, 1924. 22

Mrs. Wilson also spoke to C.S.H. at Mattapoisett as to the business of Galt and Brothers, which is not a corporation and which she owns. I advised her to turn it into a corporation in order to escape personal liability for all debts, if any disaster should ever overtake it.

She said her counsel, Nathaniel Wilson, now dead, advised her not to do this.

C.S.H. said this was doubtless good advice when given, but that at the present time, from what she had told him, he believed this should be done; that this would not necessarily preclude continuing the present management on substantially the same terms as now.

C.S.H. strongly urged her to get the opinion of some eminent lawyer in Washington on this matter, pointing out that Mr. White, whom she said she consulted on business and legal matters, was, as she told C.S.H., not a lawyer but merely the managing clerk of Mr. Nathaniel Wilson's law firm; that while doubtless, he might know as much law as any lawyer, it would be decidedly of advantage to have any opinion he might give her viséed by some eminent lawyer of the District.

C.S.H. also strongly advised her to consult some level-headed business man as to the business details.

Sends Mrs. Wilson a clipping from the Boston Herald of Aug. 30, quoting Prof. Fay at Williamsport, who said that a close friend of President Wilson, whose name he would not reveal, who saw Mr. Wilson just before his last illness, said that Mr. Wilson said that, after all, he was not sorry that the U.S. did not join the League of Nations at the outset, etc. (See scrap book.)

C.S.H. doubts this, at least in the way it was put. Sept. 2, 1924. 33

73. Henry White acknowledges C.S.H. letter. Praises Mrs. Wilson:

"Mrs. Wilson is, as you say, and as I soon discovered after reaching Paris, a remarkable woman, with a great capacity for grasping questions, however intricate, which are brought to her attention, and with a singular capacity for looking at them from various points of view, and with a singular fair mindedness."
Sept. 4, 1924. 36

74. Mr. White also said:

"He (President Wilson) had no idea of teamwork, or its importance for a delegation to an International Conference, and, high as were his ideals, he lacked capacity for dealing with men, partly owing to shyness, partly to his being unduly affected by an antagonistic atmosphere.

Probably teamwork was impossible in view of the relations between him and Lensing before their departure for the Conference, and of those which afterwards developed in respect to Col. House ..."
Sept. 4, 1924. 37

she really meant it.
Sept. 30, 1924. 46, 47.

103. Mrs. Wilson said the thought often came to her, as to C.S.H.

that finally he told them he radically disagreed with Davis

107. Mrs. Wilson was very indignant and said they should have demanded that McAdoo should either support or oppose Davis, and should not have paid him such considerable as it evidently had swelled his head.

Sept. 30, 1924. 48

108. Mrs. Wilson reads C.S.H. a long letter from McAdoo, written abroad in which McAdoo reviewed the whole campaign, and said that many of Mr. Wilson's friends had joined Tammany and the reactionary forces to rain his reputation and defeat him for the nomination; that they succeeded in the latter but not in the former; that now he felt free to attend to his own affairs; that his campaign was for Wilson and his ideals; that he had gone down fighting for Wilson; that Davis was a good fellow but that he differed radically from him on almost every question.

Sept. 30, 1924. 48

109. Mrs. Wilson said it was the most absurd letter she had ever read; that it was evidently prepared, although addressed to her, for future general use; that by merely striking out "Dear Edith," it could have been sent to anyone; that she really believed he had had thousands printed for future use.

Sept. 30, 1924. 49

112. Mrs. Wilson says Col. House was a very agreeable man, not of brilliant mind, nor of keen intelligence; that she believed he intended to be loyal to Mr. Wilson; that she felt, however, that the attentions paid him in Europe unconsciously turned his head; that prior to Mr. Wilson's going abroad...

Col. House had been treated almost as if of Royalty; that the British Govt. had furnished him with a fine house filled with servants, at its own expense; that almost his every thought was crystallized into law; that when Mr. Wilson came to Paris it became increasingly difficult for Col. House to come to a realization of the fact that President Wilson, and not he, was in supreme authority; that his son-in-law, Mr. Auchincloss contributed largely to his state of mind.

Sept. 30, 1924. 50

Mrs. Wilson agreed with C.S.H. that Col. House's attitude on Fiume was opposed to that of Mr. Wilson.

Sept. 30, 1924. 50

Mrs. Wilson said that Ambassador Page's published letters showed the state of mind Col. House was in.

Sept. 30, 1924. 50, 51

She said she was not surprised; that she liked him very much personally but that the fact could not be gainsaid that he was not a man of the first rank; that he fully expected, because of his relations with Clemenceau and the other French delegates, that he would be the Liaison officer between Mr. Wilson and Clemenceau and Lloyd George on every important matter; that, very naturally perhaps, he was intensely disappointed when he found that this did not take place.

Sept. 30, 1924. 51

Mrs. Wilson said Mr. White thought that President Wilson should not have gone to Paris; that the Commissioners could have accomplished more without him by holding him up to the foreign diplomats as one who must approve everything they might at first sight agree to; that they could cable the President secretly asking him to disapprove matters they might agree to subject to his approval; that with Mr. Wilson present he had to give a final decision.

I said I should do this only when no outsiders were present, than in the presence of outsiders, Bertie and I would always treat her as a Queen Dowager but that in the family it would be most pleasant to think of her and treat her as another personality.

Bolling says Wooley wants her to write a letter for Davis, which he opposes, and that Mrs. Wilson wants me to advise her what to do. C.S.H. told Bolling it was a difficult question to decide; that Davis was for the League but that the Dem. platform had put a ball and chain around his neck under which he was chafing and restless and continually breaking away. C.S.H. at first thought Mrs. Wilson should write a letter. Bolling said that yesterday Davis replied to a direct question as to where he stood on the League by reaffirming the Dem. platform, which made it impossible for Mrs. Wilson to come out for him publicly; that Coolidge was sure to win and that we did not deserve to. C.S.H. pointed out that Mrs. Wilson went to the rally at Frederick, Md. and had subscribed to his campaign, - which certainly showed a very kindly spirit towards Davis. Mrs. Wilson then came in and said Wooley had sent her a draft of a letter along the lines he wanted. Mrs. Wilson said she told Wooley she certainly would write nothing.

without emphasizing the League of Nations and that he said he had no objection to her doing so.

Mrs. Wilson showed C.S.H. Wooley's draft, which did not mention the League in any way.

The draft was a most fulsome eulogy of Davis, representing him as one upon whom Mr. Wilson always depended upon for advice, and for whom he now would be most enthusiastic as a candidate, stating that they were absolutely in accord in all matters.

We all agreed that Mrs. Wilson could not sign this.
Oct. 21, 1924. 82, 83, 84.

"My dear Mr. Davis:
I have followed with deep interest all of your speeches in your campaign (and particularly your attitude towards the constructive measures with which your administration would deal should you become the head of this great nation,) and I am specially proud of the fearless way in which you declare your faith in the League of Nations, and your promise that all your influence will be thrown toward official American representation in the Disarmament Conference called by the League for next June.

It seems to me that the people of the country long for a leader, and that you are answering that demand by giving them a great spiritual and practical programme to which you pledge and dedicate both yourself and your Party.

Earnestly hoping for your election,
Yours cordially,"

C.S.H. advised her to stick to his draft of reply, as Annin would doubtless reply that Brougham did consult Mr. Wilson as to certain facts in the editorial, and the whole question would be reopened, while now she had complete proof in Mr. Ogden’s letter that Annin’s statements or innuendos were false.

Mrs. Wilson agreed to this.
Oct. 21, 1924. 86

198. Charles R. Crane was at dinner and put Mrs. Wilson the direct question why Mr. Wilson did not write a letter to the N.Y. Times praising Mr. Ochs for the Times memorial.

Oct. 21, 1924. 86

199. Mrs. Wilson says the notice in the papers that she had finally determined upon the Cathedral as the final resting place for Mr. Wilson’s body was not true; that a N.Y. Times reporter told her brother Wilmer that Bishop Freeman had made this announcement at some clerical meeting in N.Y.!

C.S.H. told her frankly, that the more he thought of it the more favorable he was to the idea, but that he felt without doubt the Cathedral people were using Mr. Wilson’s name to help raise funds for the Cathedral.

She said she realized this.

She also said she could not honorably put off a decision much longer and C.S.H. agreed with this.

Oct. 21, 1924. 87

214. C.S.H. tells Mrs. Wilson that there will certainly be a chapter on her in his Reminiscences when he publishes them, and that he should bring out Mr. Wilson's development on her and her influence over him. She some searching questions of C.S.H., said, very modestly, Mrs. Wilson that Mr. Wilson always consulted her on important matters

Mrs. Wilson.

C.S.H. told Mrs. Wilson he had thought over the matter deeply and felt that a letter from her strongly inquiring and emphasizing Davis's attitude on the League, - the only kind of letter she could possibly write, as she herself had said, would certainly be misunderstood and might even be construed as an attack on the platform and Davis, rather than as an indorsement and would be bound to cause confusion.

C.S.H. said he would talk with her about it more in detail this evening.

Mrs. Wilson said she might have to dine with her mother, but would let me know at 6 p.m.

At 6 p.m. Bolling called me up and asked me to come at 8 p.m. as Mrs. Wilson was not to dine with her mother.

C.S.H. called on Mrs. Wilson at 8 p.m.

Mrs. Wilson said she wanted me for dinner, but Dr. Alderman had an appointment with her at 5 p.m. to consult with her, and she thought he would surely remain through dinner, but that he left at 7 p.m.

Oct. 22, 1924. 92

220. C.S.H. has a long talk with Mrs. Wilson as to the Davis letter, saying that Davis's interview had officially removed the League from the campaign as an issue, and that a letter from her would be misconstrued and would only cause trouble.

Mrs. Wilson said she would not answer Woolley for 2 or 3 days; that he would soon be in Washington again and would call her up.

We both advised her to write nothing to Woolley.

She said she would tell Woolley that Davis's interview would not prevent her from saying anything in a letter on Davis's attitude on the League, and that it therefore seemed advisable to her to say nothing.

C.S.H. tells Mrs. Wilson he is sure that Mr. Wilson, if living, would have repudiated the Dem. League platform, and that he felt sure he would not endorse Davis unless he repudiated the platform, - which he, Davis, reaffirmed in his interview.

Oct. 22, 1924. 93

221. C.S.H. was asked by Mrs. and Miss Bolling to dinner tomorrow night but had accepted to dine with Mrs. Helm.

Mrs. Wilson tells C.S.H. she told her mother she would also dine with her, forgetting my engagement at Mrs. Helm's, but that her mother would arrange for another date.

Oct. 22, 1924. 93, 94.

222. C.S.H. gives Mrs. Wilson a photostat copy of Sir Cecil Spring-Rice's letter and offers to give her the original but she would not take it.

Oct. 22, 1924. 94.
Wilson, President (Cont').

223. C.S.H. gives Mrs. Wilson a photograph of Bertie and "Tot o" which pleased her very much. C.S.H. had it reframed as the old frame was broken.

Oct. 22, 1924. 94

225. Mrs. Wilson tells C.S.H. she is very grateful for his advice; that she needed advice on many questions; that she could always go to Woodrow who quickly solved every problem, but that now she was often perplexed. While she relies on Mr. Bolling, C.S.H. thinks she likes to have his judgment checked up independently.
C.S.H. told her she could always call on him for advice, and that he had no pride of opinion, but would merely tell her his opinion which she could feel free to accept or not, as the responsibility for decision rested upon her.
Oct. 22, 1924. 95

226. C.S.H. tells Mrs. Wilson he will be glad to put in writing his advice as to the Davis letter, and that she could tell Wooley what he advised.
Mrs. Wilson said that would not be fair to C.S.H.; that she must accept responsibility, although she wanted his advice to help her.
Oct. 22, 1924. 95

227. Mrs. Wilson tells C.S.H. that while in New York her machine and Col. House's were locked together for some minutes, but that her machine was a little behind his, so that he could not see her, but that she saw him perfectly. She said she had not seen him since the old days when his head became turned and he thought he was higher than President Wilson.
She said that undoubtedly Mr. Auchincloss contributed to this feeling.
Oct. 22, 1924. 96

228. Mrs. Wilson returns the volumes containing the addresses of Mr. Wilson I left with her some days ago.

231. Bertie believes Mrs. Wilson should send a letter to Davis.
   C.S.H. tells Bertie Mrs. Wilson said that under no circumstances would she write any other letter than one praising his stand on the League, and Bertie agreed that she could not do this now, in view of Davis’s interview.
   Oct. 25, 1924. 97

232. Mrs. Wilson to H.P.H.

   Oct. 28, 1924. 99

236. Woolay tells C.S.H. of his efforts to induce Mrs. Wilson to write a letter to Davis.
   C.S.H. said Mrs. Wilson had telegraphed Davis when nominated, had gone to Frederick, and had subscribed to the campaign fund.
   Woolay said Mrs. Wilson had done splendidly, but that a letter from her would be most helpful, and that at first she seemed willing to write a letter praising Davis for his references to the League; that he had sent her a draft written by Stephen Bonsall, which, he admitted, did not mention the League; that she said a letter on the League would not be helpful; in view of Davis's interview, and had decided to drop the matter.

236. (Con't.)

C.S.H. said that after this interview a letter from Mrs. Wilson praising Davis for his League stand would be more embarrassing than helpful to Davis.

C.S.H. said he thought Mrs. Wilson had done all and much more than anyone could have reasonably expected her to do, and that he fully indorsed her course.

Wooley said he thought this might be true, and that the only thing troubling him was the fear that Mrs. Wilson might think he had been trying to "put something over on her," which, he said, was absolutely not the case.

C.S.H. never mentioned to Wooley that Mrs. Wilson had talked with him about the matter.

Oct. 28, 1924. 101, 102.

C.S.H. gives her his photograph and she seemed very much pleased.

240. Mrs. Wilson said she went to Baltimore yesterday with Admiral Grayson to settle matters with the sculptor who had made the death mask of Mr. Wilson.

Oct. 28, 1924. 103.

241. C.S.H. noticed that the death mask was not on the table in the library and Mrs. Wilson said she had removed it, as certain people had been at lunch to whom she did not particularly care to have it shown.

Oct. 28, 1924. 103.

242. Mrs. Wilson was quite sanguine about the elections.
Oct. 28, 1924. 103.

C.S.H. from E.B.W.

244. C.S.H. tells Mrs. Wilson that the rabbit foot which President Wilson and she gave her for a birthday present in 1923, had on it only my own initials, and that I so wished it could be remarked:

Aug. 30, 1923."

Oct. 28, 1924. 103, 104.

Mrs. Wilson replied that she did not see why she should act in this way.

C.S.H. then asked Mrs. Wilson if she would return her bow or speak to her if she should make the approach. Mrs. Wilson said, most certainly yes, although it would not be very pleasant for her; that, although feeling keenly about the book, she would be willing to let bygones be bygones, - at least to that extent.

Oct. 28, 1924. 104.

247. C.S.H. asked Bolling to lunch and he gave a rather evasive answer and when he went downstairs he said he never left Mrs. Wilson alone at any meal, and that she would be very indignant if she knew of his feeling or of his saying so to C.S.H.

256. Mrs. Wilson said Mrs. Charles Warren had written asking to bring her father, Col. Bliss, to tea. C.S.H. at first thought she meant Winslow Warren. She smilingly said, - No, Col. Bliss, - a horse of a very different color. She asked me to come to help her out.

265. Mrs. Wilson was quite optimistic about the elections and said that C.S.H. was a "Gloomy Gus." Oct. 31, 1924. 109
266. Mrs. Wilson referred to Mr. McDade's speech at Los Angeles favoring the League of Nations, with a smile. In view of his known attitude, it seemed incomprehensible to us both.

Davis received 52 votes in Mattapoisett. This is the largest democratic vote for a generation. We all join in affectionate greetings.

270. Mrs. Wilson to C.S.H. and H.P.H.
Glad to be away on Armistice Day, for it is so filled with memories. I hope I won't be thought a quitter, but I just dare not trust myself to be there.
All that happened on Nov. 4 takes the heart out of me.... It may awaken something in the so-called "Leaders" and make them realize the Party can not rise on the rottenness of others, but must build a spiritual foundation, from which our standard can fly free giving a misguided people something to stir their pulses, instead of thinking only of themselves and their pocket books.
It was lovely Charlie could have the weak with you - and if he is there, give him my love.
Nov. 9, 1924.
Wilson, President (Con't.)

273. Mrs. Wilson to C.S.H.

"I came away to miss Armistice day."

I just did not trust myself to face a service such as the one arranged."

The political situation reminds her of a story Woodrow used to be fond of. "I simply can't believe it has happened, and you were good to try to find a silver lining to this cloud of darkness that has obscured everything fine that we believe in."

"I thought of you at Frederick. I had not seen about the McAdoo boom. It would be a very long shadow that would soon forecast such an event."

Nov. 10, 1924. 127

274. Canon Myer said Huxley Thompson's address at the Armistice services at the Cathedral was not very interesting. It was a eulogy of President Wilson and was entitled, "Peace without Victory."

Nov. 10, 1924. 127

276. Miss Bolling says she heard the election returns at Mrs. Wilson's; that Admiral and Mrs. Grayson and Admiral and Mrs. Helm were there; that Mrs. Wilson read C.O.H.'s telegram to each as they came in; that during the evening Mrs. Wilson opened a bottle of wine as they were all thoroughly worn out.

Nov. 13, 1924. 127

277. Miss Bolling again expressed her indignation at Dr. Axson's article on President Wilson and his family, written in 1916; that they were at Shadow Lawn, N. Jersey at the time, and that Dr. Axson was there also and that she told him just what she thought of it.

Nov. 13, 1924. 127, 128

278. Miss Bolling said it made her very indignant to notice that magazine and book writers of President Wilson seemed to dwell almost entirely on Mr. Wilson's life with the first Mrs. Wilson, almost ignoring Mrs. Edith Bolling Wilson, her sister; that she had never seen the first Mrs. Wilson but had no doubt she was a devoted, charming woman, but that her life with Mr. Wilson, while filled with delightful experiences, had it none of the elements of tragedy as existed during his life with her sister.

Nov. 13, 1924. 128

279. Miss Bolling said that her sister, Mrs. Wilson, was a woman not only of great personal beauty, but, as well, of deep intelligence; that it was her tender care and devotion that made it possible for Mr. Wilson to finish out his term of office; that he was passionately devoted to her and subservient to her every wish; that during his illness at the White House he would call for her at all hours of the day and night; that he was never happy when she was away from him; that, worn out as she was, she gave the strictest orders to the nurses never to fail to call her at any time day or night, when he asked for her; that they were devoted companions; that he consulted her on every important matter, official as well as personal.

Nov. 13, 1924. 128

280. C.S.H. told Miss Bolling that the first Mrs. Wilson, fine as she was in every respect, was not in the same class as her sister, Mrs. Edith Bolling Wilson, either as to personal charm or intelligence, nor could she have done for him what her sister was able to do.

Nov. 13, 1924. 129

281. C.S.H. told Miss Bolling it made him and Bertie indignant at the way writers paid so little attention to Mr. Wilson's married life with her sister, Mrs. Edith Bolling Wilson.

Nov. 13, 1924. 129

282. C.S.H. told Miss Bolling that, in his Reminiscences, when published, he would see that Mrs. Wilson had the place in history she deserved.

Nov. 13, 1924. 129

283. Miss Bolling said Mrs. Wilson would never forgive her if she knew that she had talked with me about Dr. Axson's article; that she would not admit feeling any pique about it.

Nov. 13, 1924. 129

284. Miss Bolling said the Wilson girls had all treated Mrs. Wilson finely.

Nov. 13, 1924. 129

285. Miss Bolling said Dr. Axson seemed to be very fond of Mrs. Wilson, but that she could not understand him.

Nov. 13, 1924. 129

286. Miss Bolling was very bitter towards David Lawrence and his book. She said that while at Princeton he was constantly at the Wilson house; that he was a great chum of Margaret Wilson, each calling the other by their first name.

Nov. 13, 1924. 129

287. C.S.H. told Miss Bolling that after reading David Lawrence's book he was under the impression that some critical references originally published had been omitted from the final edition.

Nov. 13, 1924. 129
C.S.H. told Miss Bolling that Lawrence, in the book, at one place (page 288), after praising Mrs. Wilson most highly, referred to her as a "Queen Regnant;" that in a sense this was true as it was Mrs. Wilson who made it possible for Mr. Wilson to perform the duties of his office, after his illness.

Nov. 13, 1924. 129, 130.

While with Miss Bolling, Mrs. Wilson telephoned that she and Randolph would reach home late in the evening, having dinner on the road.

Nov. 13, 1924. 130

C.S.H. called on Mrs. Wilson and she asks him to lunch.

Nov. 14, 1924. 130

C.S.H. tells Mrs. Wilson at lunch what Mr. Newman told him; that he had arranged for sending McAdoo speech over 20 radio circuits, free of expenses, the night before election day, but that McAdoo had a "previous engagement."

Mrs. Wilson was shocked and said that if she had been a defeated candidate, nothing would have prevented her from accepting. Then she said smilingly, "Perhaps Mr. McAdoo was dominated by some one just as I was dominated by you as to the Davis letter!"

Nov. 13, 1924. 130

Mrs. Wilson said that Mr. Wilson had received literally hundreds of letters about his Mexican policy; that most of them were plainly inspired by selfish interest, and many of them filled with patently false statements; that every lying pamphlet, however, contained some basis of truth, and by piecing these truths together he could find much to guide him.

Nov. 13, 1924. 130, 131.

C.S.H. told Mrs. Wilson that he would send her David Lawrence's book on Mr. Wilson, with a rough index showing references to all important matters, including all references to herself, if she wished him to.

She said, if C.S.H. desired it, she would read it and talk it over with C.S.H. later.

Nov. 13, 1924. 131

C.S.H. told Mrs. Wilson that Lawrence referred to her in his book as a "Queen Regnant." She said this disturbed her greatly; that while she assisted Mr. Wilson in every way, acting in a secretarial capacity, seeing people in accordance with his instructions, cheering him up in every

Nov. 14, 1924. 131

295. Mrs. Wilson said positively that, with the exception of a short period just following his stroke, there never was a time when he could not perform the duties of his office, that while she gave him strength and courage, he it was who performed the duties of his office.

Nov. 14, 1924. 132

296. Mrs. Wilson said that Mr. Wilson often asked her to see people for him, telling her exactly what to say, of which she usually made a memorandum in writing, with caution, although he often laughed at her scrupulous caution, saying it was not necessary.

Nov. 14, 1924. 132

297. She remembers tendering Mr. Alexander his commission as Sec. of the Interior, at Mr. Wilson's request; that Mr. Alexander said he would accept but wished to retain his seat in Congress; that she needed no specific instructions to tell him this could not be done; that he then accepted unconditionally.

Nov. 14, 1924. 132

298. Mrs. Wilson tells C.S.H., that in his Reminiscences to be particularly careful to bring out the real truth, that every decision made was made by President Wilson, she merely helping him in a secretary and wifely manner.

Nov. 14, 1924. 132

301. C.S.H. told Col. Rice this evening that he had lunched with Mrs. Wilson (he spent last night at the Cosmos Club and takes my room at 7:30.)

301. (Cont.)

Col. Rice told me that this morning he called up Mr. Bolling on the telephone and asked if he could call on Mrs. Wilson today; that Bolling said she had a very busy day and that he could not make any appointments; that Col. R. then asked if he could not call late in the afternoon; that Bolling replied that she would be out all of the afternoon; that Col. R. then asked if he could not call tomorrow; that Mr. Bolling said that day was filled with appointments.

C.S.H. knew of Mrs. Wilson's appointments today for she told him at lunch that she had to take her mother to drive and then go to the Emergency Hospital to take her brother Wilmer (just recovering from an operation for appendicitis) home to his house.

I am amazed that Col. R. asked for an appointment with Mrs. Wilson without first mentioning it to me last night when he entered to my room. Had he done this, I might have mentioned it to Mrs. Wilson when I telephoned her this morning, and very likely she would have asked me to bring Col. R. with me for lunch, for when at lunch, I casually mentioned that Col. R. was in town. Mrs. Wilson quickly said, "Why didn't you tell me!" I am convinced she knew nothing, at least until afterward, of Col. R.'s telephone message.

I do not know how Col. R. got Mrs. Wilson's telephone number. I certainly never gave it to him, and Bertie and Anna assured me they did not either. He may have got it from the telephone book in my room, where it was written on the outside of the book, or on the occasion of some previous use of my room this summer, or he may have got it in Mattapoisett where it was on a paper on the outside of my desk.

302. C.S.H. tells Mrs. Wilson that the action of newspaper and magazine writers, in saying so much of President Wilson's life with the first Mrs. Wilson, and practically ignoring his life with her, made him very angry.

Mrs. Wilson laughed at this, and said it had never disturbed her in the slightest degree; she added that the first Mrs. Wilson was undoubtedly a most charming, cultured woman, of the greatest help to Mr. Wilson and devotedly loved by him.

C.S.H. said this was true but that this was before the tragedy of the war, with its fearful strain and perplexities; that she had made it possible for Mr. Wilson to go through it and through his subsequent illness, and that, but for her devotion and strength, intellectually as well as physically, he could not have survived the ordeal.

Mrs. Wilson then said, "Don't you think any devoted wife would have done this?" C.S.H. replied, "Many would have tried and failed, where you succeeded!"
Nov. 14, 1924. 134

303. C.S.H. told Mrs. Wilson that she had established herself in an important place in history, and that he and Bartle were to try to see that it was recognized; that she had made a distinctive record in the White House, both for dignity, gracious hospitality and charming grace and personality; that in their opinion she would stand alongside with Dolly Madison.

C.S.H. added, "I suppose you don't realize this."

Mrs. Wilson said, "I have never given such a thing a thought!"

Nov. 14, 1924. 134, 135

Nov. 14, 1924.

305. C.S.H. calls up Mr. Bolling who said Mrs. Wilson surely expected him to dinner tonight unless she was called away to her sister, Bertha, who was taken quite ill Sunday night; that Mrs. Wilson spent most of last night with her; that he would call me up at 5:30.

Nov. 18, 1924. 135

306. Mrs. Wilson called up C.S.H. and asked him to come to dinner at 7 p.m.

Nov. 18, 1924. 136

307. Huston Thompson said at lunch at the Cosmos Club that it would be an outrage to have Mr. Wilson's body permanently interred in the Cathedral. He said Bishop Freeman was using Mr. Wilson's fame to boom the Cathedral.

307. (Con't.)
He said he favored buying a lot across the Potomac, near the site of the new Lincoln bridge and building a seapulchre there.

He said Mrs. Wilson wrote him a beautiful note saying frankly she could not trust herself to attend the services on Armistice Day at the Cathedral.

He said that in his address he dwelt specially upon Mr. Wilson's armistice address of 1923.

He gave C.S.H. a clipping from the Chicago Tribune, referring to bitterness at the Cross of Peace, dwelling upon Thompson's praise of Mr. Wilson for castigating Lodge.

Mrs. Wilson asked C.S.H. to say grace and he repeated a grace his mother taught him.

Nov. 18, 1924. 137

309. C.S.H., after dinner, told Mrs. Wilson what Thompson told him - that Bishop Freeman sent word to him not to make a political speech at the Armistice exercises and said that Thompson felt insulted.

Mrs. Wilson said Bishop F. had no such intention; that the meeting was arranged by people who used Non-partisan League paper, and that the statement was made that she favored the meeting; that the Bishop sent Dr. Bratenahl to her and that he said they greatly feared the meeting might be turned into a political meeting; that to avoid such a contingency she decided to take no part in it.

C.S.H. told Mrs. Wilson, that from the report in the Chicago Tribune it appeared that Thompson praised Mr. Wilson for his castigation of Lodge.

Mrs. Wilson said Thompson sent her a copy of his address and that it contained nothing which could fairly be criticized.

Nov. 18, 1924. 137, 138.

310. Mrs. Wilson tells C.S.H. she has read part of Lawrence's book, which he sent her, but that his evident prejudice so disturbed her that she could read no more of it.

Wilson, President (Cont.)

311. Mrs. Wilson said she had no copy of William Allen White's book on Mr. Wilson, but was reading his sketches in "Liberty," C.S.H. said he would send her his copy and she said she would like to look it over.

Nov. 18, 1924. 138, 139.

313. Ray Stannard Baker tells C.S.H. that the statement in Lawrence's book, that Mrs. Wilson called to Col. House's attention an article by Wickham Stead, eulogizing Col. House at the expense of Mr. Wilson, was true.

Nov. 18, 1924. 140

314. Ray Stannard Baker says Mr. Wilson did not fail at Paris; that his prime effort was to put the League covenant into the treaty, and that he succeeded; that while he had to yield on certain things, it was largely because of the secret treaties; that he would have had to make these concessions even if the League had not been in the Treaty and that the presence of the League in the Treaty made future correction possible.

315. C.S.H. to Mrs. Wilson

Nov. 20, 1924.

316. C.S.H. called up Mrs. Wilson and Randolph to say good-bye, but they were out walking.

Nov. 20, 1924. 141

317. C.S.H. meets Charles Dana Gibson at dinner in N.Y. at Nicholas Murray Butler's. He spoke very pleasantly of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, saying he never met them until after they had left the White House. He asked particularly as to whether Mrs. Wilson was to continue to live at S Street, and whether she was in comfortable circumstances financially, to which C.S.H. replied he did not know.

Nov. 21, 1924. 142, 143.

318. Dr. Shotwell tells C.S.H. that Mr. Wilson will stand in history as among the greatest of American Presidents.

Nov. 21, 1924. 144
319. C.S.H. called up Mr. Bolling who said they had wanted to get in touch with him, but that Mrs. Wilson had overslept and had not yet come down; that he would call me up at 1 p.m.

He called me up at 1 p.m. and said Mrs. Wilson wanted me to dine with Dr. Edward Davis of Philadelphia, a classmate of Mr. Wilson, who was spending the week-end with her.

C.S.H. knew him intimately years ago at Marion, Mass. C.S.H. went to dinner and had a delightful talk with Dr. Davis about old Marion days.

About 9 p.m. C.S.H. and Mrs. Wilson played pool against Dr. Davis and Mr. Bolling.

Afterwards C.S.H. and Mrs. Wilson played together.

Nov. 22, 1924. 144, 145.

320. Mrs. Wilson told C.S.H. that the sarcophagus and railing at Bethlehem Chapel were finished and that only the canopy to go over the Niche remained unfinished.

She also said Ralph Adams Cran, suggested moving the body of Mr. Wilson at once but that she preferred to wait until everything was finished.

Nov. 22, 1924. 145.

321. C.S.H. told Mrs. Wilson he was more and more pleased at the thought of having the body of Mr. Wilson permanently interred in the Cathedral; that Mr. Glover and his kind would soon disappear, while the Cathedral would go on forever.

Mrs. Wilson replied that she felt exactly as did C.S.H.

Nov. 22, 1924. 145.

322. C.S.H. explains to Mrs. Wilson why he left so early after dinner last Tuesday, that he thought Ray Stannard Baker wanted to talk with her. Mrs. Wilson laughed and said she thought C.S.H. was bored by Mr. and Mrs. Pitney Woodrow who called.

Nov. 22, 1924. 146.

323. Mrs. Wilson said Ray Stannard Baker was disturbed at the Review of Reviews edition of Mr. Wilson's addresses, but that she told him that these were public documents which anyone could print and that his book containing the addresses, with valuable marginal notes, would not be injured thereby.

Nov. 22, 1924. 146.
Wilson, President (Cont.)

324. Mrs. Wilson said she told Ray Stannard Baker she really wanted him to be the official biographer, but that she had not yet made up her mind. She asked him if he would be willing to collaborate with someone else, but he said No. She said she went over this with him Tuesday night before C.S.H. arrived.

Nov. 22, 1924. 146

325. C.S.H. tells Mrs. Wilson he is reading again Ray Stannard Baker's 3 volume book, World Settlement, and is very much impressed with it; that he felt no one was as well equipped as he to do the work; that he thought, however, the ideal solution would be a collaboration between Baker and someone with more distinctive literary ability and freshness of viewpoint, such as Bliss Perry. Mrs. Wilson said this was her feeling also, and that she was carefully pondering over the matter.

Nov. 22, 1924. 147

326. Mrs. Wilson asks as to Bertie's plans for the winter. C.S.H. said he did not want her to take a house, but to take a good rest, which she sadly needed; that she might go to Bermuda.

Nov. 22, 1924. 147

327. Mrs. Wilson asked C.S.H., "Do you think Bertie and Anna would be content to spend the winter with me? I should so love to have them."

C.S.H. thanked her warmly but said this would not be possible. Her kindness was really touching.

Nov. 22, 1924. 147

328. Mrs. Wilson said she had had no letter recently from Bertie but that she owed her one and would write her tomorrow, and C.S.H. gave her Mrs. Blake's address, where Bertie was staying.

Nov. 22, 1924. 147, 148.

329. C.S.H. tells Mrs. Wilson to tell Miss Bolling he had read again Dr. Axson's article on the Wilson family in the N.Y. Times Magazine Section of Oct. 8, 1916 (later printed by Mrs. Forbes.)

Mrs. Wilson also smiled, and, C.S.H. thinks, understood what he meant.
Wilson, President (Cont.)

330. C.S.H. thinks Dr. Axson meant well, but he devoted 4 pages to the first Mrs. Wilson and only 2 paragraphs to Mrs.
Wilson. C.S.H. thinks Miss Bolling's bitterness is justified.
Nov. 22, 1924. 148

331. C.S.H. to Mrs. Wilson
Sends her some playing cards which he got at the Somerset Club at her request; gives her a statement as to Bertie's life and how she has helped him.

332. Mrs. Wilson to H.P.H.
Nov. 23, 1924.

333. C.S.H. receives a slip of paper covered with the word "Apples", evidently from Mrs. Wilson and Mr. Bolling.
These refer to the apples Mr. Twohey said he would send C.S.H. from Washington, which C.S.H. said he would give Mrs. Edson.
Nov. 24, 1924. 149, 150.

334. Mr. Bolling calls up C.S.H. and says Mrs. Wilson wants him to book from the N.Y. Times.

335. Mrs. Wilson said that neither she nor Randolph liked the White book.
Nov. 25, 1924. 153

336. Mrs. Wilson said that the N.Y. Sun had asked Prof. Dodd to write a review of White's book and that he sent her in advance the proof of his review and she wrote him she did not like it, giving her reasons.
Nov. 25, 1924. 153

337. Mrs. Wilson asks C.S.H. to examine Ray Stannard Baker's book,
- World Settlement, - and advise her as to the way in which he treated of Col. House, as some friend had told her he had, in a way, soft-peddled on him.
Nov. 25, 1924. 153

338. C.S.H. told Mrs. Wilson that he would do this at once; that he had already read over most of what Baker had said in his book on the subject of Col. House, and that he most certainly not "soft peddled," but had criticized him severely; that he would, however, go over the book again carefully and advise her.
Wilson, President (Cont.)

339. C.S.H. told Mrs. Wilson he had about finished the first volume of Baker's book, and thought it was extremely well done, and showed the keenest appreciation of Mr. Wilson's statesmanship and of his really great handling of the Paris problems, - that he believed no one better qualified to be the official biographer.

Nov. 25, 1924. 153, 154.

340. Mrs. Wilson tells C.S.H. that the statement in Lawrence's book as to her showing Col. House the article by Wickham Stead was true.

She said that one day in Paris, Col. House dropped into her sitting room while awaiting an appointment with President Wilson; that she showed him an article by Wickham Stead; that it stated that Col. House was the only statesman connected with the American Commission; that all that had been accomplished had been the result of his work; that if Mr. Wilson would only continue ill long enough, Col. House would be able to work out the League of Nations problems etc. etc.

Mrs. Wilson said Col. House took the article in a dazed sort of way, muttering that he had never seen it before, was very much confused and embarrassed, and finally left without waiting to keep his appointment with President Wilson.

Mrs. Wilson added that this was the last interview she ever had with him.

Nov. 25, 1924. 154.

341. Mrs. Wilson asked C.S.H. to find out whether Charles Moore, in charge of the Manuscript Division of the Library of Congress, was an extreme Republican partisan, - as evidently some one had told her. C.S.H., returning to the Cosmos Club, met Mr. Parsons, and at once wrote Mrs. Wilson what he said about Moore.

Nov. 25, 1924. 154.

Praises Moore and says, while he is a Republican, he does not believe he is an intense partisan.

Nov. 25, 1924. 154.

343. Mrs. Wilson speaks to C.S.H. of William Allen White's references to Humility in his book and said that the statements quoted from Tumulty were absolutely false; that Tumulty wrote Mr. Wilson asking him to send a message to the Coordination dinner in N.Y., but Mr. Wilson declined; that later Tumulty saw him and he declined again; that Mr. Wilson never gave or authorized any message whatsoever; that one might, Tumulty, returning from N.Y., met her brother Wilmer, got into his car and told him that N.Y. Times had an article set up on this matter which, if published, would ruin him; that he must see Mr. Wilson, as he only could stop it; that Wilmer went to see her at her mother's, where she was calling at the time; that she finally returned and awoke Mr. Wilson, at the risk of spoiling his sleep for the night, to talk with him about it; that in White's book all the essential correspondence between Tumulty and herself was omitted; that his statement or intimation that the Mr. Wilson authorized any such message was a deliberate lie.

Nov. 25, 1924. 154, 155.

344. Mrs. Wilson said that once Tumulty, to play a trick on Ray Baker, in 1914, just as Baker was attending a dinner prior to going off on a stump ing tour, prepared a typewritten letter on White House paper, forging Mr. Wilson's name to it. The letter purported to forbid Baker's taking part in the campaign. Mrs. Wilson said Tumulty had this letter given to Baker near the close of the dinner; that Baker nearly collapsed and finally made Tumulty leave the table and showed it to him; that finally Tumulty told him it was all a jest, but it took a long time to persuade Baker of this, Mr. Wilson's signature was so skillfully forged.

Nov. 25, 1924. 155, 156

345. Mrs. Bolling told C.S.H. that once Tumulty, before him, forged Mr. Wilson's signature on a memorandum, and it was so perfect that Mr. Bolling said he would have sworn it was Mr. Wilson's signature, and he would have shown it to Mr. Wilson, but Tumulty destroyed it.

Nov. 25, 1924. 156

346. Mrs. Wilson said nothing would convince her but that Tumulty had sent out many forged letters of Mr. Wilson.

Nov. 25, 1924. 156

347. Mrs. Wilson said Mr. White, in his book, quoted Tumulty as saying that the surgeon who operated on Mrs. Tumulty charged Tumulty $2,500 for his services, although Tumulty was a poor man, etc.; that this was a deliberate lie; that Dr. Edward Davis performed the operation; that Dr. Davis told her last Saturday, when spending the week-end with her. that at

347. (Con't.)

Tumulty's earnest request he came down to Washington with two assistants and performed the operation; that later he asked Admiral Grayson whether Tumulty could afford to pay a reasonable fee, and that Admiral Grayson said he could, as he was in good circumstances; that he finally sent him a bill for $600, which he (Dr. D.) thought a very reasonable fee; that Tumulty wrote him a most grateful letter of thanks and gratitude, but enclosed a check for only $300 instead of $600; that he called Tumulty's attention to the error but could get no response; that repeated letters were not acknowledged; that finally he put the bill in the hands of a collector who finally collected it.

Nov. 25, 1924. 156, 157.

348. Mrs. Wilson spoke of Ambassador Jusserand and asked C.S.H. what he thought of him. C.S.H. said he did not like him and she said she agreed with C.S.H. She said that when they left the White House it was over a month before he or his wife left cards on them, although every other diplomat called at once.

Nov. 25, 1924. 157.

349. Mrs. Wilson said the Jusserands lived in Paris in a very modest, small apartment on the 8th floor without an elevator, and that she, from this, supposed they must be in reduced circumstances, but that Henry White told her they were very well to do, and that it indicated merely French thrift, as in France income taxes were levied on the rental value of an apartment.

Nov. 25, 1924. 157.

350. Mrs. Wilson said that the complaint that Mr. Wilson did not invite outside people to dinner grew out of the fact that he could not invite one without inviting hundreds; that in those trying times there was danger that some might repeat, or perhaps exaggerate statements made at dinner, even though entirely innocently.

Nov. 25, 1924. 157, 158.

351. Mrs. Wilson said that Mr. Wilson loved to have his friends with him at dinner as much as any one.

Nov. 25, 1924. 158.

352. Mrs. Wilson said Mr. Wilson objected to the use of "in respect to," instead of "in respect of," and to the phrase "under the circumstances" instead of "in the circumstances."

354. C.S.H. tells Mrs. Wilson and Randolph that he wonderd how Col. Rice obtained their telephone number. Randolph said he would not imagine as he had never given it to him. C.S.H. said he never gave it to him or to anyone; that he did not even know he had telephoned until late that night. C.S.H. said George Peabody, an intimate friend might have given it to him. Randolph said Peabody did not have the number, and Mrs. Wilson said Mr. Peabody was most punctilious and always wrote when asking for an appointment. C.S.H. reminded Randolph that Col. Rice called on Mr. Wilson last year and that possibly they might have given it to them then. Mrs. Wilson rather came to the rescue of Col. Rice and said that probably was the explanation.

355. Mrs. Wilson said Margaret Wilson was coming down Thanksgiving day after seeing the Sayres off for Europe. Nov. 25, 1924. 159

356. Mrs. Wilson said C.S.H. had probably noticed that his photograph was no longer on the Library table; that she had promoted it or demoted it to her own room where she kept Bertie's. C.S.H. said this was not a "demotion" but was a "translation."

357. C.S.H. told Mrs. Wilson Bertie would come to Washington on Monday positively but that I should be back Saturday morning unless "higher influences" prevailed. She laughed heartily at this and said I was surely to call up when I returned. Nov. 25, 1924. 159

358. Mrs. Wilson tells C.S.H. that of course he was to stay at her house during Bertie's visit. C.S.H. told her he had better not do this, as I might have to give up my room at the Club or consent to its being rented, as rooms were in great demand there. She said - "Tell them you are out of town."

I said they might insist on letting the room from night to night. She seemed quite disappointed and finally said that if I would not come to the house, she would surely expect me at every meal.

C.S.H. said she need not worry, he should certainly bore her to death. Nov. 25, 1924. 159, 160.
Wilson, President (Cont.)

373. Mrs. Wilson incidentally told C.S.H. she was born in 1872. This shows that Lawrence in his book was in error in stating that she was 48 when she married Mr. Wilson; this would have made her 57 today instead of 52.

     compartment there was a card showing
     At the two occupants were to be; that by some error the husbands and wives were mostly separated; that the card on one apartment

Dec. 3, 1924. 171

392. Bertie tells Mrs. Wilson that Bishop Oldham told her in Albany that Dr. Bratenahl told him that the reason he was not for the League of Nations was that the Bible was filled with accounts of wars, and that he felt they were necessary to the development of civilization.

Newton Baker said the most important thing was to have some historian appointed who would be able to withstand Mrs. Wilson's feeling that everything Mr. Wilson did was right; that he himself, sometimes he thought, was affected with the same feeling, and therefore would be unfit to write Mr. Wilson's biography.
Dec. 5, 1924. 173, 174

402. C.S.H. told Newton Baker that Ray Stannard Baker, in his book, had not hesitated to criticize Mr. Wilson in some matters, both as to personality and policy.
Dec. 5, 1924. 174

403. C.S.H. told Newton Baker that, in his opinion, Mrs. Wilson was of such broad intelligence that she would be the last person to object to reasonable criticism, and would be able to consider any such criticism calmly and dispassionately and that this opinion was based upon many talks with her.
Dec. 5, 1924. 174

404. C.S.H. told Newton Baker that the official biography should be started at once; that the real history might not be written for 50 or 100 years; that Chief Justice Marshall's permanent history was not written (Beveridge) until 100 years after his death; that the official biographer should put together all the evidence, critical and otherwise, so that future writers could turn to it with confidence, as the foundation of their work.

H. to print in his book his letter approving the warning of the Federal Reserve Board as to over investment in British exchequer notes.

Dec. 5, 1924. 175, 176.

410. Mr. Bolling said he took down the note exactly as Mr. Wilson dictated it. He asked Mrs. Wilson if he could show C.S.H. the original and she said he could. The original was marked "personal" and there was a notation on it showing it was dictated by Mr. Wilson.

417. Bertie says Mrs. Wilson told her that Henry White, the other day, asked her if the body of President Wilson was to be put into the Sarcophagus; that she said yes, that she had never thought of anything else; that Mr. White said this was often not done in Europe; that he spoke of the possibility of the body being stolen, as there was at present no night watchman at the Cathedral. Mrs. Wilson also said some one had told her that Bishop Harding's body was in his Sarcophagus, but that Bishop Saterlee's body was not.
Dec. 7, 1924. 177, 178.

418. We all drove with Mrs. Wilson to Mr. and Mrs. Pennington's, in Georgetown, for lunch. Then Mrs. Wilson and Anna took a long walk. Then we went back to tea and listened to a sermon by Bishop Freeman over the radio. Mrs. and Miss Bolling came in for supper and Mrs. Wilson told C.S.H. not to go back to dress, so he stayed on.

Dec. 7, 1924. 179

422. C.S.H. tells Mrs. Wilson of a feeling among some of Mr. Wilson's friends that the official biographer of Mrs. Wilson should be one who never knew him, and one who would be free from the influence of Mrs. Wilson and those of Mr. Wilson's friends who believed everything he did to be above criticism.

C.S.H. said to Mrs. Wilson that Newton Baker spoke to him as to the existence of this feeling. Mrs. Wilson said Newton Baker expressed no such opinion to her. C.S.H. said he spoke to him of the opinion of others, but did not tell Mrs. Wilson that this was also Newton Baker's opinion; C.S.H. did tell Randolph of this but he begged him not to tell of it to Mrs. Wilson.

C.S.H. told Mrs. Wilson he thought the above expressed opinion was wrong; that the official biographer should be one who had known Mr. Wilson, and one in sympathy with him and Mrs. Wilson; that her sympathetic cooperation and general supervisory was absolutely necessary; that every criticism of Mr. Wilson should be considered and dealt with fairly, all the evidence pro and con being fairly stated; that historians would be writing his life perhaps a hundred years from now, and that they should be able to turn to this official biography as a complete reservoir of evidence in the case, fair and impartial.

Dec. 7, 1924. 179, 180.

423. Mrs. Wilson told C.S.H. that she agreed with him entirely; that she would not think of surrendering to one who never knew her husband, the power to pass final judgment on his life, that was for the historian of the future, perhaps the far future, to do. She was perfectly willing, however, to have every criticism stated and answered.

424. Mrs. Wilson asked C.S.H. to lunch and to dinner. C.S.H. said he could not do either but would come to tea; that he could not come to dinner as he probably must practice at a meeting of the Cosmos Club. Mrs. Wilson said she was very sorry as she had invited her brother Wilmer and his wife to dine with her.

C.S.H. finally found that Mr. Marlatt would preside at the Club meeting and telephoned Mrs. Wilson he would dine with her.

436. Mr. Bolling asks C.S.H.'s opinion on the following facts: "A N.Y. bootmaker made casts in wood of Mr. Wilson's feet from which he made shoes; that some days ago he came to Washington and called on Mr. Bolling and Mrs. Wilson; that he presented his final bill, which Mr. Bolling paid, taking a receipt in full; the receipt specifically mentioning the casts; that when he left behind him a bundle, which when opened, was found to contain the wooden casts; that later he wrote asking that the "package" he left be returned to him.

C.S.H. told Mr. Bolling that the title to the casts was in Mrs. Wilson, as executrix, as shown by the receipt, and that she was not bound to return them; that it was like ordering visiting cards from a plate, it being the custom to return the plate with the cards if called for.

Mr. Bolling said Mrs. Wilson wanted to destroy the casts at once, but C.S.H. advised against this.

Mr. Bolling finally prepared a short letter stating that Mrs. Wilson assumed that he left the casts for her to keep, the whole transaction having been closed, and said he would submit this to Mrs. Wilson.

When the casts were being measured for Mr. Wilson, at the maker's request, signed his name in large letters across the paper pattern of Mr. Wilson's feet. Mr. Bolling wanted to put in the letter a request also for return of these patterns, but C.S.H. advised against doing this in this letter, as he did not wish to have any trouble, but to reserve this for another letter if they heard anything more from him.

Dec. 10, 1924. 163, 184

437. As C.S.H. left Mr. Bolling he heard Mrs. Wilson coming down the front stairs. When he got into the front hall, he saw her running up the stairs.

Mrs. Wilson said at dinner that she had breakfast in her room and heard C.S.H. playing the piano, and when she started to go down to Randolph's room she thought C.S.H. had gone, and, hearing voices, she ran up stairs to avoid meeting some stranger; that later Randolph said it was C.S.H. and they had a good laugh over it.

Dec. 10, 1924. 184

438. C.S.H. took tea and dines with Mrs. Wilson.
Mrs. Helm also dined there.
After dinner C.S.H. and Mrs. Wilson played pool.
Dec. 10, 1924. 184
Wilson, President (Con’t.)

439. (Con’t.)

C.S.H. tells Mrs. Wilson of the letter of Prof. Taussig to him as to the historians Newton Baker recommended as official biographers; he said that Prof. Bassett was a steady, accurate, careful historian; that he had written some books, rather of the textbook variety, but well done; that he had made no brilliant or outstanding contribution to history; that he had been Sec. of the Amer. Historical Association and had given satisfaction in that capacity; he said Prof. Cerar was an Alsatian by birth; has written on French civilization; has handled topics of a larger scope than has Bassett; that he is said to be clever, even brilliant, but perhaps superficial; that how he will stand 20 years from now—in the opinion of those whose opinions count—seems to be still an open question.

Dec. 10, 1924. 185

440. C.S.H. told Mrs. Wilson that all of the criticisms of Mr. Wilson were, to his mind, susceptible of ready explanation except one: that he wished that Mr. Wilson, in calling for Lansing’s resignation, had simply put it on the ground that he had not been loyal to him in the treaty negotiations, especially the League of Nations, and not on the ground that he had called cabinet meetings.

Dec. 10, 1924. 186, 187

441. Mrs. Wilson said she agreed with C.S.H. absolutely—that the important, underlying reason was disloyalty, and that, while in his sick condition the cabinet question assumed considerable proportions, it would have been far better to have stated the real, underlying reason; that Mr. Wilson, however, was so kindhearted that he would not have hesitated to assign a less important reason to shield Lansing, even though it might appear in the nature of a after to his (Mr. Wilson’s) disadvantage.

Dec. 10, 1924. 186

442. Mrs. Wilson said Mr. Wilson had a very fine tenor voice; that she could never forget a trip she took on the sylph shortly after her marriage, with Dr. Edward Davis and others, when they all spent the evening singing Princeton songs.

448. Mrs. Wilson asked C.S.H. to advise her as to what disposition to make of Mr. Wilson's hoods, representing honorary degrees, after she died.
C.S.H. said they would be of very great historical value; that they should go to some Museum, or possibly to Princeton University, as he believed Mr. Wilson would be venerated then in the not far future, if not now.

Dec. 11, 1924. 188

449. Mrs. Wilson suggested that C.S.H. write Prof. Taussig as to the standing as a historian, of Ray Stannard Baker. C.S.H. said he would, but later he said it would not help much, as the Harvard Professors would probably say that he had done little or no original historical work except on the Peace Conference, and that doubtless few, if any of them, had read that critically.
449. (Con't.)
Mrs. Wilson said she agreed with C.S.H. and that he had better not write Taussig.
Dec. 11, 1934. 188

Dec. 11, 1924. 190

454. Mrs. Wilson said Dr. Bratenahl told her that one day he met an old Irishman and his wife at Bethlehem Chapel, and that they said they had come on from the west for the sole purpose of seeing President Wilson's burial place in the Bethlehem Chapel; that, although Roman Catholics, they were so impressed with the beauty and solemnity of the Chapel and of the service that they remained through it.
Dec. 11, 1924. 190

Dec. 12, 1924. 190

457. Mrs. Wilson spoke of Sir Maurice Low with much appreciation; that he had certain qualities which Ray Stannard Baker lacked; that Sir Maurice told her he would give all the time necessary if chosen to write Mr. Wilson's biography.

Dec. 13, 1924. 193

462. Mrs. Wilson said she had frequently told Ray Stannard Baker, jestingly, that she would not choose him to write the biography unless she could find no one better fitted; that she asked him yesterday whether, for example, he would be guided by her judgment, if some case should arise in which she of her own knowledge, knew all the facts, - in case she appointed him as the official biographer; that he replied that he could not conceive himself as refusing to be dominated by the facts.
Dec. 13, 1924. 193

She is evidently laboring under a heavy strain and thinking of the exercises of tomorrow, which will be a difficult ordeal for her.
Dec. 14, 1924. 196

472. Mrs. Wilson seemed much worried on finding that there were to be more guests at Senator Swanson's than she was given to expect originally. She said she was told it would be a small, very informal dinner and now it was branching out into quite formal dinner party, which distressed her greatly.

   Dr. Alderman.

   C.S.H. and Bertie took in auto Miss Margaret Wilson, Miss Bones, and a niece of Mrs. Wilson.

477. The scene in the H.R. was most impressive. The floor and galleries were filled.
   The Senates solemnly filed in, followed by the Justices of the Supreme Court, and, last of all, by President Coolidge and his cabinet.

   Dec. 15, 1924 196

478. Dr. Alderman delivered a really remarkable address, showing great oratorical power.

   Dec. 15, 1924 196

479. Dr. Alderman said of Mr. Wilson some things which C.S.H. believes were erroneous.

   1. He said Mr. Wilson had a good mind, but not of the type of Immanuel Kant or Chief Justice Marshall. C.S.H. believes Mr. Wilson's mind was of the very first rank and very similar to that of Marshall, in his power of generalization and clear thought.

   2. He intimated that Mr. Wilson was not willing to compromise, and said if he had been a little more willing, and the Senators had been a little less vicious, the world might have been better today.
      This is one of the myths which are floating around concerning President Wilson. The fact is that he would never compromise on a question of principle, but the principle being admitted, he was always ready to make concessions. For example, in the Federal Reserve Act, to satisfy Mr. Bryan, he agreed that F.R. notes should be made Govt.
      obligations, and he made many concessions in the League covenant to satisfy Root, Lowell and Taft.
      Mr. Wilson, however, would never abandon a principle under the false name of compromise.

479. (Cont.)

For example, Article X of the League imposes a moral obligation; the Lodge reservation denied any moral obligation on the part of the U.S. to assist in maintaining the peace of the world; Mr. Wilson agreed that the U.S. should be the judge as to whether a moral obligation existed, but properly refused to accept as a compromise the statement that no such moral obligation existed.

3. Dr. Alderman said Mr. Wilson did not know how to solicit or to persuade people. Anyone familiar with the history of the Federal Reserve Act knows that but for Mr. Wilson's power of persuasion it would never have been enacted.

C.S.H. believes that any diminution in Mr. Wilson's power of persuasion was caused by ill health.

480. C.S.H. believes Mr. Wilson was eternally right in rejecting the Lodge reservations.

Dec. 15, 1924. 199

481. The dependence of Dr. Alderman on certain myths alluded to above satisfies C.S.H. that the official biographer of Mr. Wilson should be one who is in sympathy with Mrs. Wilson, and willing to get her point of view on all of these criticisms.

Dec. 15, 1924. 200

482. Mrs. Wilson has a clear, limpid mind, and keen intelligence, and is not averse to considering every criticism, and she can answer almost every criticism to the satisfaction of anyone who really seeks the truth.

Dec. 15, 1924. 200

483. C.S.H. is much disappointed that Dr. Alderman did not allude to the wonderful assistance Mrs. Wilson gave Mr. Wilson during their married life.

Dec. 15, 1924. 200

484. Mrs. Wilson exercised profound influence on Mr. Wilson. He consulted her at all times, upon all questions, and greatly valued her judgment.

Dec. 15, 1924. 200
Mrs. Wilson gave Mr. Wilson her very life's blood and strength, and her keen intelligence and watchful care made it possible for him to discharge his duties after his illness.

Dec. 15, 1924. 201

Lawrence's reference in his book to Mrs. Wilson as a "Queen Regnant" is unjust, and untrue. Mrs. Wilson, by her care and intelligence made it possible for Mr. Wilson to perform his duties, but he it was who performed them.

Dec. 15, 1924. 201

When history gives to Mrs. Wilson her proper place, she will stand with Dolly Madison, as one of the most brilliant and charming ladies of the White House, both for her brilliancy in entertaining and for her keen and subtle intelligence.

Dec. 15, 1924. 201

During the eulogy of Mr. Wilson, while the Senate was filing in, the spectators all arose. Mrs. Wilson also stood up and C.S.H. could see her from where he stood on the floor silhouetted against the light, a ray of which seemed to come across from the speaker's desk. It brought out her profile in a striking manner and she looked every inch a Queen, and a most beautiful Queen.

Lighted up in this remarkable manner, the sight was one of the most startling I have ever seen, - it seemed almost as if the spirit of President Wilson was enveloping her.

Mrs. Wilson told me afterwards that she noticed and felt this peculiar ray of light and felt surrounded by its influence, and that, apparently, C.S.H. was the only other person who noticed and felt this.
