* From special reports of April 28, 1909, obtained for the National Monetary Commission.

[a] Figures for banks other than national in 1880 are from reports to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and include 375 state banks, trust companies, and private banks not reporting to the Comptroller of the Currency. (See Report of the Comptroller of the Currency, 1880, p. 87.) The figures for 1880 cover practically all of the banks of the country. The figures for 1890 and 1900 are not so comprehensive, inasmuch as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue ceased collecting taxes on deposits and information from the banks in 1883. It has been estimated in the office of the Comptroller of the Currency that the nonreporting banks (principally private) in these years reached the following numbers: 1890, 3,270; 1900, 3,595; and in 1908, 3,654; but it should be understood that these estimates include many firms whose business is confined to brokerage and exchange. For 1909, 193 state banks and 2,828 private banks and bankers listed in bankers' directories did not furnish reports as of April 28.

[b] The resources of the 855 reporting banks in the State of New York on or about July 1, 1908, amounted to $5,445,000,000, or an average per capita of $637.20, and the average per capita resources of banks of Massachusetts was $486.30, the average per capita bank resources of these two States being greater than for any State of the Union. Indicating the large volume of business transacted by each New York bank, it will be noted that on July 1, 1908, 137 savings banks in New York had 2,719,598 depositors, or a number almost equal to the total population of Indiana, where there were 793 banks in operation on that date. Massachusetts had 189 savings banks with 1,971,644 depositors, or a number greater by 300,000 than the population of Kansas, where there were 961 banks in operation in 1908. In 1909 the aggregate resources of 885 banks in New York State were $5,958,925,084.56, an average per capita of $684.45; in Massachusetts, $1,606,570,746.77, or $507.02 per capita.

[c] The fact that the District of Columbia contains few wholesale business houses and practically no manufacturing establishments probably accounts for the small number of banking institutions there as compared with the States.

[d] Official returns from state and private banks of Nebraska used in this table include 202 banks not included in aggregates of tables on pages 208 and 223, Comptroller's Report, 1890.

[a] Banks for which receivers are appointed and then are restored to solvency and permitted to resume business within the year of report are not included in the table of insolvent banks. During the year ended October 31, 1893, 87 national banks with aggregate capital of $18,205,000 temporarily suspended owing to the panic, but resumed business prior to that date; no receivers were appointed for these banks, but they were placed in charge of national-bank examiners until the Comptroller permitted them to resume business. Such institutions are not included in the list of failures.

The following number of banks in the years indicated, placed in charge of receivers temporarily, were restored to solvency and permitted to resume business within the report year: 1893, 2 banks; 1895, 1 bank; 1897, 1 bank; 1898, 4 banks; 1899, 2 banks; 1900, 2 banks; 1901, 2 banks; 1903, 3 banks; 1904, 4 banks; 1905, 3 banks; 1906, 2 banks; 1907, 6 banks; 1908, 9 banks; 1909, 5 banks.

[b] 24 banks with capital stock of $6,135,000 restored to solvency not included. (See Comptroller's Report, 1909, p. 94, and table 65, p. 288.)

[c] Nominal or book value.

[d] On October 31, 1908, there were 77 insolvent national banks in charge of receivers the affairs of which had not been settled; the proved claims of these receiverships amounted to $38,441,868, upon which dividends aggregating $23,509,180 had been paid, or a balance of $14,932,688 due on claims; these figures include $313,993 interest paid on claims in 1898—the amount required to pay creditors the face value of their claims is therefore $15,246,681. (See Table No. 73, p. 388, Comptroller's Report, 1908.) On October 31, 1909, there were 68 active receiverships, with claims proved $31,917,575, upon which dividends had been paid amounting to $20,200,122.

[e] Percentages expressed decimally in fractions of 1 per cent.

[f] 1 bank formerly in voluntary liquidation.

[g] 4 banks formerly in voluntary liquidation.

[h] 2 banks formerly in voluntary liquidation.

[i] 1 bank restored to solvency.

[j] None by averaging.

[k] 11 banks restored to solvency.

[l] Data relative to losses incomplete.

o Exclusive of $268,872 interest paid creditors in 1889, 1900, 1908, and 1909.

p The average annual deposits (individual, bank, and government) of the national banks 1865 to 1908 is $2,165,700,000, and the average annual loss to creditors of the 401 insolvent banks, affairs of which are finally closed for the same period, is $754,117, or an average annual loss of 0.0348+ per cent. The Comptroller of the Currency estimates the aggregate loss to creditors of all failed national banks (including those the affairs of which are not finally closed) at $51,924,333, the average annual loss at $1,180,099, and the average annual ratio of loss to individual deposits 0.074 per cent. (Comptroller's Report, 1908, p. 391.) Using the Comptroller's estimate of average annual loss, the ratio of average annual loss to annual average of total deposits (individual, bank, and government) will be 0.054+ per cent.

TABLE No. 18.—AUTHORIZED AND ACTUAL CIRCULATION OF NATIONAL BANKS ON DATE NEAREST JUNE 30, 1864 TO 1909.

Prior to the act of March 14, 1900, the maximum amount of circulating notes issuable to a national bank on United States bonds deposited with the Treasurer of the United States was 90 per cent of such bonds, but not over 90 per cent of its capital stock; since that date a bank may take out circulation equal to the par value of United States bonds on deposit, but not in excess of its capital stock actually paid in.

[Compiled from reports to the Comptroller of the Currency.]

[a] The greater part of the national-bank notes "in the Treasury" are notes in process of redemption. Lawful money having been paid out for these notes by the department, they are held as assets until assorted. Then the fit notes are returned to the banks of issue and the unfit notes destroyed and reissued, the banks being required by the Treasurer to make good the 5 per cent redemption fund.

[a] The excessive amount of national-bank notes issued during the monetary stringency of 1907 caused increased redemptions during 1908–1909, and the lack of force to count and assort caused an accumulation of these notes in the Redemption Division of the Treasurer's Office for several months before they could be properly assorted and redeemed.

[a] Deposits on account of failed banks are made from the proceeds of the sale of the bonds held as security for the circulation of such banks. Section 5222 of the Revised Statutes requires lawful money to be deposited to redeem the outstanding circulation of banks in voluntary liquidation. Section 6 of the act of July 12, 1882, requires lawful money to be deposited within three years after the extension of a bank's corporate existence to redeem the remainder of the circulation outstanding at the date of such extension. Section 4 of the act of June 20, 1874, as modified by the act of July 12, 1882, contains the general provisions of law enabling banks to deposit lawful money for the purpose of withdrawing circulation and taking up the bonds held as security therefor. Section 9 of the act of March 4, 1907, limited the deposits of lawful money for the purpose of retiring circulation to $9,000,000 per month.

TABLE No. 29.—LOAN AND DISCOUNT RATES IN THE NEW YORK MARKET, WEEKLY, 1890–1909.

[From the Commercial and Financial Chronicle, New York.]

Method of compiling rates.—The tables require but little explanation. As will be noticed, we first give the call-loan branch of the market—that is, the range at the Stock Exchange for each week, the week's average rate, and the minimum rate at banks and trust companies. Following this we give time money; under that head we report separately transactions at thirty days, sixty days, ninety days, and four, five, six, and seven months, all representing choice collateral. Finally, the rates for commercial paper are presented. First among these appears double-name paper, known as sixty to ninety day indorsed bills receivable. Following the double-name is single-name paper. Here it will be noted that in 1894 two new classes were entered, making three classes of single-name paper as against only one class in previous years. This change grew out of a new practice by commission houses in dealing with the acceptances of consignors. Theretofore commission houses had issued acceptances covering drafts made by consignors which were classed choice four-months double-named paper; but in 1894 the same houses began to give cash to consignors and issue their single-name notes, upon which they receive cash in the market, and these were then termed prime four-months and prime six-months commission-house names. Beginning with 1897 rates for four-months and for six-months single names have been identical, and the two are now comprised under one head.

It will be observed that at different times in the years prior to 1897 classified rates are lacking for time loans or for paper, or for both. These represent periods of disturbed conditions.

NOTE 1.—Statistics for national banks are compiled from statements made to the Comptroller of the Currency for date nearest June 30 of the years indicated; statistics for banks other than national are compiled from the annual reports of state bank superintendents and are necessarily for varying dates, in some instances it being found necessary to use figures for a date near the close of the year in order to obtain the proper classification of deposits.

NOTE 2.—In a number of States where banks were not required to classify deposits in their reports of condition, such unclassified deposits are included with "deposits subject to check" in the above compilation, the estimated amount so included being stated in a footnote for each year.

NOTE 3.—Individual deposits in banks of the United States, as compiled by the Comptroller of the Currency from reports of condition made nearest the close of the fiscal year, were as follows:

[a] See for further details Treasury Department Circular No. 99, p. 13, and Report of Secretary of Treasury, 1908, p. 145.

[b] Not including gold certificates, silver certificates, and currency certificates.

[c] Not including 5 per cent redemption fund.

[d] National banks only and includes in the cash held United States certificates of deposit (and 3 per cent certificates, 1867 to 1873, inclusive.)

[e] Includes cash items in banks other than national.

[f] Includes money in banks other than national.

[g] The Director of the Mint recently made a revised estimate of the stock of gold coin, and, as a consequence of such revision, the estimated stock of gold in the United States and of gold coin in circulation was reduced $135,000,000 in the figures for 1907.

[h] Revised figures.

[i] From special reports of April 28, 1909, obtained for the National Monetary Commission; includes $7,702,287.88 in banks of island possessions; figures for preceding years do not include islands.

NOTE.—Specie payments were suspended from January 1, 1862, to January 1, 1879. During the greater part of that period gold and silver coins were not in circulation except on the Pacific coast, where, it is estimated the specie circulation was generally about $25,000,000. This estimated amount is the only coin included in the above statement from 1862 to 1875, inclusive. In 1876 subsidiary silver again came into use, and is included in this statement, beginning with that year. The coinage of standard silver dollars began in 1878, under the act of February 28, 1878. Specie payments were resumed January 1, 1879, and all gold and silver coins, as well as gold and silver bullion in the Treasury, are included in this statement from and after that date. For redemption of outstanding certificates an exact equivalent in amount of the appropriate kinds of money is held in the Treasury, and is not included in the account of money held as assets of the Government. This table represents the stock of money and the circulation of the United States as shown by the revised statements of the Treasury Department for June 30 of each of the years specified.

[a] Gold and silver can not be stated separately prior to 1876. From 1862 to 1875, inclusive, gold and silver were not in circulation except on the Pacific coast, where it is estimated that the average specie circulation was about $25,000,000, and this estimate is continued for the three following years under the head of gold. After that period gold was available for circulation.

[b] Total specie in circulation; gold and silver were not separately stated prior to 1876.

[c] Includes notes of Bank of United States, State-bank notes, demand notes of 1862 and 1863, fractional currency from 1863 to 1878, Treasury notes of 1890 from 1891 to date, and currency certificates, act of June 8, 1872, from 1892 to 1900. Currency certificates, authorized under the act of June 8, 1872, were included in the amount of United States notes in circulation from 1873 to 1891.

[d] As the result of special investigation by the Director of the Mint a reduction of $135,000,000 was made in the estimate of gold coin in circulation on July 1, 1907, as compared with the basis of previous years.

[e] Revised figures include 1909.

Treasurer U. S. does not include fractional currency in circulation statements after 1879.

[a] Fractional currency and state-bank notes. State-bank notes reported outstanding 1867, $4,484,112; when last reported, in 1876, $1,047,335.

[b] For subsidiary silver, see United States Treasury Department Circular No. 99, p. 6.

[c] Includes currency certificates, act June 8, 1872, from 1892.

[d] Revised figures include 1909.

[e] Figures in this column are exclusive of national-bank notes in Treasury, lawful money for the redemption of which having been deposited with the Treasurer U. S. See Table 25, p. 78, Report of Treasurer U. S., 1908.

NOTE.—Specie payments were suspended from January 1, 1862, to January 1, 1879. During the greater part of that period gold and silver coins were not in circulation except on the Pacific coast, where, it is estimated, the specie circulation was generally about $25,000.000. This estimated amount is the only coin included in the above statement from 1862 to 1875, inclusive. In 1876 subsidiary silver again came into use, and is included in this statement, beginning with that year. The coinage of standard silver dollars began in 1878, under the act of February 28, 1878. Specie payments were resumed January 1, 1879, and all gold and silver coins, as well as gold and silver bullion in the Treasury, are included in this statement from and after that date. For redemption of outstanding certificates an exact equivalent in amount of the appropriate kinds of money is held in the Treasury, and is not included in the account of money held as assets of the Government. The Director of the Mint recently made a revised estimate of the stock of gold coin, and as a consequence of such revision the estimated stock of gold in the United States and of gold coin in circulation was reduced $135,000,000 in the figures for 1907.

Minor coin—cents, nickel 5-cent pieces, etc.—are not included in above table; the amount outstanding June 30, 1909, was $48,815,415.08.

This table is compiled from figures taken from U. S. Treasury Department Circular No. 99, pp. 4 to 12, and the Report of Treasurer U. S., 1908, pp. 26 and 38.

[a] Gold coin became available for circulation January 1, 1879, as a result of the resumption act of January 14, 1875.

[b] Gold and silver can not be stated separately prior to 1876. From 1862 to 1875, inclusive, gold and silver were not in circulation except on the Pacific coast, where it is estimated that the average specie circulation was about $25,000,000, and this estimate is continued for the three following years under the head of gold. After that period gold was available for circulation.

[c] For redemption of outstanding certificates an exact equivalent in amount of the appropriate kinds of money is held in the Treasury, and is not included in the account of money held as assets of the Government.

[d] As the result of special investigation by the Director of the Mint, a reduction of $135,000,000 was made in the estimate of gold coin in circulation on July 1, 1907, as compared with the basis of previous years.

[b] All exported in 1908, but reported late by Custom House.

NOTE.—The Chronicle's records begin with April, 1893, the earlier figures for quarterly periods being those of the Government. As regards the weekly list which the Chronicle has obtained from the custom-house, it should be stated that these returns are prepared merely for the use of the newspapers, and as the figures do not go on the government records, it has never been thought necessary to reconcile them with the final monthly figures. Sometimes a shipment or import of the metal made in one week is not reported until the following week. It has also happened on occasions that an item of import or export would be completely overlooked, although an attempt has been made to correct these figures before printing in the Chronicle. In the above statement, a line is added at the end of each year to show the adjustment necessary in order to make the aggregate for the weeks correspond with the aggregate for the months, indicating just how much must be added or deducted for the purpose. These additions or deductions, however, do not entirely represent corrections. Where 52 weeks are taken, there is a shortage of one day as compared with the full year, and where 53 weeks are taken the total obviously covers considerably more than a year. On the whole, the adjustments found necessary to reconcile the weekly aggregates with the monthly aggregates have, except in one or two instances, proved much smaller than might have been supposed.
