Treasury must seriously take up the possibility of earmarking a portion of its monetary gold supply for sale for licensed industrial users." Then at a luncheon hosted by the National Executives Conf. of Washington, Ken Gunther heard Chairman Mills make the following off-the-record comment to an audience of approx. 200 people -- Deane Hinton was there -- Mills said the U.S. Treasury should sell as much of our gold stock as is necessary to break the back of those speculating against the dollar. He noted that we have enough gold to break them; it is a wholesome solution and it should be done.

Also, he had found out informally that one of the reasons why the charter had not been sent to the Federal Register is that the General Counsel's office did not feel this was an appropriate matter for the Federal Register; that the publicizing of the Charter within Treasury and out of Treasury could be handled in other ways. Mr. Englert was going to try to get together with you to explain this. This is fine with Mr. Miller -- and he suggests that what could be done is attach a copy of the Charter to the notice of his appointment when it is distributed.

10:45 AM - I spoke with Joseph Barr's secretary and explained that you had held off responding to his invitation to join him in viewing the Inaugural Parade because you had the thought in mind of using your own office and bringing your children into the Treasury Department (who, in turn, had each invited a guest). But with the word now that your offices were being taken over by the Secretary for his personal guests you were hesitant to accept Mr. Barr's invitation because of your commitment to include Janice and Jimmy and their friends.

-- Miss Capriotti, Mr. Barr's secretary, explained that the invitation did not include children (to begin with -- there are now exceptions being made, especially those in the age category of Janice and Jimmy who really can't be considered young children) -- because liquor is being served and there is a fairly strong feeling about children at drinking parties. She said that a huge buffet luncheon was going to be offered from about 12:30 p.m. until about 2:30 p.m. and extra guests at the luncheon would have no effect on the amount of food being served. She suggested that I talk with Jim Rogers who was taking all the reservations and she had him call. Mr. Rogers added the information that the BANK had reserved grandstand seats -- and he is holding 6 for you; also that the viewing will be done on the outside (with guests expected to come into the Bank 12:45 PM - Message from Barbara Otis concerning your question to the Secretary this morning about whether he would like you to go ahead and notify the State Dept. and the Embassy that the Secretary was attempting to get in touch with John Turner ^{not} (he has/been successful in reaching him as yet) -- the Secretary says "no", since he left word just this morning at the hotel in West Indies and he would like to give Mr. Turner more of a chance to return his call; therefore he would not advise anybody yet.

FYI --
1:00 PM - Secretary has reached John Turner and is talking to him on the phone. (per Barbara Otis)
