BULLETIN OF THE U. S. BUREAU OF LABOR STATISTICS.

WHOLE NO. 218.

WASHINGTON.

OCTOBER, 1917

WAGES AND HOURS OF LABOR IN THE IRON AND STEEL INDUSTRY, 1907 TO 1915.

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY.

Rates of wages or earnings per hour, full-time hours per week, and full-time weekly earnings in 1913, 1914, and 1915 are presented in this report for 10 departments of the iron and steel industry in the United States, together with similar statistics for 1907 to 1912, repeated from Bulletins 151 and 168.

These statistics may be taken as fully representative of general conditions in the industry,<sup>1</sup> as they are based on reports from plants whose total tonnage capacity, in each department covered, is from 35 to 63 per cent of the total tonnage capacity of all plants in the United States.

The increases in rates of pay to both tonnage workers and time workers, which were general in this industry during the early part of 1913, were not affected by the period of depression extending from the summer of 1913 to the summer of 1915, but the earnings per hour of tonnage workers, and consequently their earnings per week, were materially decreased thereby, owing to the gradual slowing up which is almost unavoidable when a plant has little work ahead. This decrease in the earnings of tonnage workers reduced the combined full-time weekly earnings of tonnage workers and time workers in May, 1915, as compared with May, 1913, in blast-furnace plants 4 per cent, in Bessemer plants 10 per cent, in open-hearth plants 1 per cent, in blooming mills 5 per cent, in standard rail mills 3 per cent, in bar mills 4 per cent, and in sheet mills 5 per cent. The weekly earnings in plate mills were the same in 1915 as in 1913, while in tin-plate mills they were 3 per cent higher in 1915 than in 1913.

In May, 1915, as compared with May, 1914, full-time weekly earnings had increased from 1 to 5 per cent in Bessemer plants, open-hearth plants, plate mills, bar mills, and tin-plate mills; they were unchanged in blast-furnace plants and blooming mills, and had decreased from 2 to 7 per cent in puddling mills, standard rail mills, and sheet mills.

Full-time weekly earnings in May, 1915, were from 4 to 8 per cent higher than in May, 1907, in the three departments for which reports are made for nine years (blast furnace, Bessemer converting, and bar mill); and in all departments, excluding puddling mills, they were from 2 to 22 per cent higher than in May, 1910. These increases in full-time weekly earnings represent an even greater increase in average earnings per hour, as the average full-time hours per week had decreased in 1915 from 2 to 6 per cent as compared with 1907 in three departments, and from 1 to 6 per cent as compared with 1910 in seven departments. The hours in plate mills and tin-plate mills were the same in 1915 as in 1910. The facts above quoted are drawn from the tables of index numbers, pages 15 and 16.

Statistics are presented in this report for employees in—

Blast furnaces, 1907–1915.

Bessemer converters, 1907–1915.

Open-hearth furnaces, 1910–1915.

Puddling mills, 1914, 1915.

Blooming mills, 1910–1915.

Plate mills, 1910–1915.

Standard-rail mills, 1910–1915.

Bar mills, 1907–1915.

Sheet mills, 1910–1915.

Tin-plate mills, 1910–1915.

These statistics are based on actual pay-roll data for one pay-roll period in each year, in most cases the second half of May, but in a few instances, when conditions in May were not representative of the year, reports were taken for a normal period as near May as available.

CONDITION MONTHLY, JULY, 1913, TO JUNE, 1915.

The depressed condition existing in the several departments of the industry from July, 1913, to June, 1915, is very clearly depicted in the table given on page 9, in which index numbers show for each month of such period the per cent that the pay roll was of the estimated pay roll for full time and the per cent of the customary full-time turns that actually were worked.

The index numbers are computed from the figures in Table 10, where such basic figures are fully explained. The method of computing these index numbers is explained on pages 65 to 67. Referring to the table, the figures for blast furnaces for July, 1913, show that the aggregate pay roll in that month was 84 per cent of the estimated average monthly pay roll had the full equipment of all plants been running full time. The next column shows that 85 per cent of the customary turns of that particular month, July, actually were worked.

TABLE 1.—INDEX NUMBERS—VOLUME OF EMPLOYMENT, JULY, 1913, TO JUNE, 1915.

[Per cent pay roll was of estimated pay roll for full customary time as computed from actual pay rolls for broken time. Per cent turns actually worked were of full-time customary turns in the same month.]

CHANGES IN EMPLOYMENT AND EARNINGS IN 1915 AND 1916.

The iron and steel industry was at the lowest ebb during the winter of 1914-15. An improvement in general conditions began in the late winter and continued quite steadily, month by month, until February, 1916, when the increased activities had assumed such proportions as to fully warrant the remarkable series of increases in rates of pay which has continued to the present time (December, 1916).<sup>1</sup>

The general tables of this report speak for one specific period in each year—the month of May—and therefore do not in any way reflect month to month changes; moreover, as the last figures of these tables are for May, 1915, the unusual increases in rates of pay referred to above are not suggested. However, the figures of Table 1 show the increasing activity in the several departments from the winter of 1914-15 to June, 1915, and the following tables, compiled from the issues of the MONTHLY REVIEW of this bureau, show the great increase in employment in the industry as a whole from January, 1915, to December, 1916. The phenomenal increases in rates made during 1916 are shown in the text statements below, which also are taken from issues of the MONTHLY REVIEW.

The plants furnishing information for the MONTHLY REVIEW on volume of employment are the same ones which furnished wages data published in the general tables of this report, but the figures in the monthly report cover entire establishments and are not limited to the 10 departments discussed in this report.

Table 2, below, shows the total number of employees on the half-monthly pay roll ending nearest the 15th of each month and the total amount of such pay roll in identical establishments reporting for the same month in 1915 and 1916, and also the per cent of increase in employees and pay-roll total in each month of 1916 as compared with the same month in 1915. Comparisons can not be made between succeeding months in this table because of changes in the number of establishments reporting.

The report for May, 1916, from 102 establishments shows 31.7 per cent more employees on the pay roll than in May, 1915, and an increase of 69.2 per cent in the amount of the pay roll, there being an increase in earnings of 28.5 per cent per capita in the 12 months.

In Table 3 is shown the number of employees at work on the last full-time day of each pay period reported and the per cent of increase on the stated day in each month of 1916 as compared with that day in the same month of 1915. Although some establishments did not furnish data for this table the per cent of increase in employees corresponds very closely with that in Table 2.

Other figures published in the MONTHLY REVIEW show changes in volume of employment from month to month in identical plants, which plants vary in number as in the preceding tables. Index numbers have been computed for the iron and steel industry from the data available, with January, 1915, taken as the base, or 100. These index numbers indicate the percentage of increase or decrease in each succeeding month, as compared with January, 1915. Thus, the index of the number on the pay roll in December, 1916, was 160, indicating that the number on the pay roll was 160 per cent of the number on the pay roll in January, 1915, or an increase of 60 per cent in the number of persons on the pay roll. The amount of the pay roll in December, 1916, was 234 per cent of the amount of the pay roll in January, 1915.

These index numbers probably understate the per cent of increase, both in the number of employees and in the amount of wages paid in the industry, as the figures are based on reports made by plants that were in operation in both 1915 and 1916. No account is taken of any plants from which no reports were received—that may have been shut down in the winter of 1914–15, and started up later in 1915 or in 1916.

The MONTHLY REVIEW for July, 1916, contains the following report as to changes in wage rates between May 1, 1915, and May 15, 1916:

Ninety-one of the 101 establishments in the iron and steel industry reporting announced increases in rates of wages since May 1, 1915; 10 only reported having made none. Seven other establishments reported as to volume of employment, but failed to answer this question. Of these 91, 83 increased wages in May, 1916, and for 71 of the 83 this was at least a second increase during the 13 months' period. One establishment reported having advanced its rates every 60 days, with aggregates of from 15 per cent to 30 per cent in the different departments. February, 1916, ranks next to May in increases, 38 establishments reporting advances during that month.

One-half the increases made were of 10 per cent each, with a range in the several increases of from 5 per cent to 30 per cent, aggregating 33 per cent in one establishment where there had been 3 separate advances. Forty-five establishments reported 2 increases of 10 per cent each. In nearly every case approximately all the employees of the establishments were affected by the increases, although 3 establishments reported that common labor only was benefited. These increases are not confined to any one district, but have been general in establishments in the Eastern, Middle Western, and Southern States.

The August REVIEW notes the changes in wage rates between May 15 and June 15, 1916:

More changes in wage rates were reported for the iron and steel industry than for any other. Twelve establishments reported increases as follows: Two per cent to a little over half the force in one establishment; 5 per cent on a few positions in two establishments; 5 per cent to a third of the force in one establishment; and 5 per cent to three-fourths of the force in another. One plant reported an increase of  $7\frac{1}{2}$  per cent to "labor" and another an increase of 5 to 10 per cent without specifying the proportion of force affected. A 10 per cent increase was made in one plant to the men in a single department, while another made a 10 per cent increase to 40 per cent of the force; 3 establishments reported an increase of 10 per cent to all employees. Fifty-two plants reported no change, and 34 failed to make a report. The reported increases were not confined to any particular locality.

The September REVIEW states:

The greatest number of increases in wages [during the month ending July 15] is reported for the iron and steel industry, where certain groups of employees or those in a selected occupation are reported as receiving increases of from 5 to 15 per cent; seven establishments report increases ranging between these figures.

The October REVIEW presenting information for the month ending August 15, states:

Three establishments report increases ranging from 5 to  $16\frac{2}{3}$  per cent to all employees. Twelve establishments report increases ranging from 5 to  $16\frac{2}{3}$  per cent to a part of the force, the high rate being reported in several cases for puddlers. One establishment reports an increase in rate to furnace men of 15 cents a day to 12-hour men and 10 cents a day to 10-hour men.

The November REVIEW states:

One establishment in this industry reports [for the month ending September 15] an increase of  $2\frac{1}{2}$  per cent to three-fourths of the force. Three establishments report an increase of 3 per cent to from one-half to three-fourths of the force. One establishment reports an increase of 5 per cent, but does not specify the class of employees receiving such increase. An increase of 10 per cent is reported by three establishments; in one of these establishments the increase is given to all employees, in another to three-fourths of the force, and in the third to a small percentage of the employees.

The December REVIEW states:

In the iron and steel industry there was an increase [in the month ending October 15] of from 3 to 5 per cent to all employees in 5 plants and an increase of 7 per cent to all in 6 plants. Six and one-tenth per cent increase to all is reported by 1 plant; another reports an increase of  $7\frac{1}{4}$  per cent to one-third of the force, and an increase of 5 per cent to the other two-thirds;  $7\frac{1}{4}$  per cent to one-fourth of the force and 5 per cent to the other three-fourths is reported by 1 establishment.

Two establishments report an increase of 10 per cent; in one case the 10 per cent increase is general, while in the other the proportion of the force receiving it is not stated.

The January (1917) REVIEW states:

In the iron and steel industry [for the month ending November 15] a 1 per cent increase to one-third of the force is reported by one establishment; an increase of  $2\frac{1}{2}$  per cent to tonnage men is reported by another establishment; while the same rate of increase is given to men covered by the amalgamated scale, about 20 per cent of the force, in still another establishment; and tonnage men get an increase of  $2\frac{3}{4}$  per cent in one establishment.

The February (1917) REVIEW states:

In the iron and steel industry [for the month ending December 15] one establishment reports an increase of 7 per cent, but does not state the proportion of the force receiving the same. An increase of 10 per cent to all employees is reported by two establishments; another applies the same rate of increase to the office force, while still another makes the same rate of increase apply to all but salaried people. One establishment gave a 10 per cent increase, but does not state the proportion of the force receiving the advance. In one blast furnace the entire force received an increase of 15 cents a day for 10-hour men and 25 cents a day for 12-hour men.

INDEX NUMBERS, BY DEPARTMENTS.

In the sections relating to the several departments the full-time weekly earnings, the full-time hours of labor per week, and the rates of wages or earnings per hour are shown for each group of occupations. These figures are summarized in the form of percentages, which show the trend of wages and hours from year to year in each department as a whole, and are assembled, for the convenience of the reader, in Table 5, below. The percentages (relative or index numbers) for each year previous to 1914 are based on a combination of the principal productive occupations only, in each department, but those for 1914 and 1915 are computed on data covering all occupations in each department, including the unclassified groups (see pp. 55 and 56) tabulated in this report for 1914 and 1915 for the first time.

The heavy-faced figures of the table following are relative or index numbers. These relative numbers are simply percentages computed from the actual weekly earnings, the actual hours of labor, and the actual rates of wages per hour appearing in the tables giving statistics by occupations in the several departments. In computing such index numbers the actual figures for 1915 are taken as the base, or 100 per cent; thus the facts for each preceding year are brought into direct comparison with the facts for the latest year available, namely, 1915. The relative for each year preceding 1915 is the per cent which the average in that year is of the average for 1915. For example, in Table 5, it is shown that the relative full-time weekly earnings of employees in the principal productive occupations in blast furnaces in 1907 were 93 per cent of such weekly earnings in 1915. The weekly earnings decreased in 1908 to 88 per cent of the earnings in 1915, and in 1909 to 87 per cent. There was an increase to 94 in 1910, a one-point increase in 1911, and a similar decrease in 1912, followed by a marked increase in 1913, when the relative was 104, and a decrease to 100 in 1914, the same as in 1915. The relative numbers for full-time hours per week in blast furnaces decreased from 106 in 1907 to 100 in 1915—in other words, the average full-time hours of work per week in 1907 were 106 per cent of the average full-time hours in 1915. The other relative numbers of the table are read in like manner. The method of computing these relative numbers from the averages of the hours and wages shown in the several tables of this report is explained on pages 65 to 67.

† No change.

In addition to the relative numbers of this table, percentages have been computed showing the per cent of increase or decrease in 1915 as compared with each year preceding, and in each year compared with the year immediately preceding. Referring to the weekly earnings of blast-furnace employees in Table 5, it is seen that full-time weekly earnings in 1915 were 8 per cent higher than in 1907, 14 per cent higher than in 1908, etc. The next column shows that the weekly earnings of blast-furnace employees in 1908 were 5 per cent lower than in 1907, 1 per cent lower in 1909 than in 1908, 8 per cent higher in 1910 than in 1909, and so on. The percentages for hours per week and wages per hour for this department and for the other departments presented in the table are read in like manner.

FULL-TIME WORKING DAYS PER WEEK.

A blast furnace, from the nature of its process, must be in continuous operation day and night seven days per week. In 1907, in the 20 plants reported for that year, for 97 per cent of all employees in the occupations considered the customary working time per week was seven days, and for the remaining 3 per cent six days, but since 1910 there has been a material reduction in seven-day work, many plants having made provision to lay off each employee in rotation one day in seven, thus making a six-day week for the employee, while the plant is continuously in operation seven days.

Eighty-nine per cent of all the employees reported in blast-furnace operation, in 34 plants, worked seven days per week in 1911; 82 per cent, in 36 plants, worked a seven-day week in 1912 and 80 per cent in 1913; while only 58 per cent, in 38 plants, worked seven days per week in 1914 and only 59 per cent in 1915. The figures above embrace the principal productive occupations alone, but including the unclassified productive and nonproductive occupations which are tabulated for the first time for 1914 and 1915 (see pp. 55 and 56), the per cent of seven-day workers is further reduced to 53 per cent in 1914 and to 54 per cent in 1915. In 1915 42 per cent of all blast-furnace employees were down to a six-day-per-week basis.

The steel-making departments—Bessemer converters and open-hearth furnaces—usually are in operation day and night for six days per week, a shut-down being made over Sunday for a period varying from 12 to 36 hours. When the demand for production is heavy, however, the plants are operated seven days per week. In 1907, a year of large production, 24 per cent of the employees in the 9 Bessemer plants covered worked seven days per week. In the next two years the percentage was smaller. In 1910, another prosperous year, 34 per cent of the employees in the same 9 plants worked seven days per week. In 1913 only 11 per cent of the employees of the 10 plants covered worked seven days per week. Throughout the nine-year period the majority of the employees in the Bessemer converting department worked six days per week, while a few worked six and seven days in alternate weeks. The employees in open-hearth furnaces during the six years covered were as a whole about equally divided among the seven day, seven day and six day alternately, and the six day groups. In all rolling mills the per cent of employees working seven days per week was very small.

The figures for all years covered in the ten departments appear in Table 6. The figures for the years grouped are strictly comparable as they represent identical plants. The inclusion of additional plants in the comparison of later years makes some differences in the percentages, as must be expected.

TABLE 6.—PER CENT OF EMPLOYEES IN EACH DEPARTMENT WORKING EACH SPECIFIED NUMBER OF DAYS PER WEEK, BY YEARS, 1907 TO 1915.

[The figures for each group of years are for identical plants. Two sets of figures are given for the plants reporting for 1914 and 1915, the first covering only the principal productive occupations in each department as shown for all the preceding groups of years, and therefore strictly comparable with them, and the second including also the unclassified occupations (see pp. 55 and 56) tabulated for 1914 and 1915 for the first time.]

FULL-TIME WORKING HOURS PER WEEK.

Employees in the several departments are classified in Table 7 to show the per cent working specified hours per week.

TABLE 7.—PER CENT OF EMPLOYEES IN EACH DEPARTMENT WORKING EACH SPECIFIED NUMBER OF HOURS PER WEEK, BY YEARS, 1907 TO 1915.

[The figures for each group of years are for identical plants. Two sets of figures are given for the plants reporting for 1914 and 1915, the first covering only the principal productive occupations in each department, as shown for all the preceding groups of years and therefore strictly comparable with them, and the second including also the unclassified occupations (see pp. 55 and 56), tabulated for 1914 and 1915 for the first time.]

Referring to the figures for blast furnaces it is seen that in 1907, in 20 plants reported, 3 per cent of the employees reported worked 60 hours per week when they worked full time; 13 per cent worked over 60 and under 72 hours per week; less than half of 1 per cent worked 72 hours per week; 5 per cent worked over 72 and under 84 hours per week; and 80 per cent worked 84 hours per week. By 1910 the employees working 84 hours per week had decreased to 76 per cent in the same plants, or, as shown by 34 plants, to 75 per cent. A very material reduction was made in working hours by 1911 and a still greater reduction by 1912. Between May, 1913, and May, 1914, in the same group of 35 plants, the number of employees working 84 hours was reduced from 64 per cent to 46 per cent, or to 41 per cent as shown by 38 plants. There was no change between 1914 and 1915.

The per cent of employees working specified hours in the Bessemer converting department, and some other departments, differed materially in the several years owing to fluctuations in the volume of business and to changes from 12 to 8 hour shifts or vice versa.

COMMON LABORERS.

The rate of wages paid common laborers is to a large extent a basic rate from which are determined the rates for other occupations requiring little skill, hence the rate for common labor is of importance beyond the limits of the occupation proper. The rate per hour of common labor is practically the same in all the departments of a plant, but the earnings per day or week, of course, are determined by the number of hours worked.

TABLE 8.—AVERAGE RATES OF WAGES PER HOUR OF COMMON LABORERS IN EACH DEPARTMENT, BY DISTRICTS, 1907 TO 1915.

[In this table each department of an establishment is counted as a separate plant. The number of plants stated is the total of all departments, the number of plants in each department is not shown here. The figures for each group of years are for identical plants.]

There are in every department various occupations which require little skill but which have distinctive positional names and are necessary to the proper operation of the department, and employees in these occupations must be on duty during the entire working time of the department. They are usually paid little if any more than the regular rate for common labor, but such positions are eagerly sought by laborers, owing to the regularity of employment and the consequent stability of earnings, as well as to the fact that men in these occupations are in line for promotion. Employees in these occupations are not generally classified as common laborers by iron and steel establishments, and consequently, so far as possible, they are not so classified in this report. However, even after this exclusion, 11 per cent of all the employees tabulated for 1915 are classified as laborers.

VOLUME OF EMPLOYMENT, JULY, 1913, TO JUNE, 1915.

To determine the variable amount of employment afforded by the iron and steel industry during the last two years covered by this report, data as to the number of turns worked in each department, the number of turns not worked owing to slack work and other causes, and the total amount of the pay rolls, were obtained from the plants which furnished wages data for the several departments, for each month of the period from July, 1913, to June, 1915, inclusive. These reports are tabulated by months and presented in Table 10, while the number of employees necessary to operate the entire equipment of the total plants in each department on full time is shown in Table 9.

These tables clearly demonstrate the depressed condition of the iron and steel industry during this period. The early part of 1913 was a time of such large production that nearly all plants increased their rates of pay to employees, but the latter part of 1913 was of opposite character; business improved somewhat during the spring and summer of 1914, but November and December of that year were the months most affected by the depression. However, every department shows an improvement from the first month of 1915. Unfortunately similar data are not at hand for the last half of 1915, but it is a well known fact that all plants have been working at practically 100 per cent of full time since the autumn of that year and through 1916. The bureau's reports published in the MONTHLY REVIEW clearly demonstrate the enormous increase in number of employees, in the amount of pay rolls, and in wage rates. A brief résumé of such more recent figures is given on pages 10 to 14.

A "turn" is a day's work for a crew composed of several men working together. Each plant in a department is made up of one or more units, each unit having its own crews. One blast-furnace plant may represent from 1 to 12 separate stacks, an open-hearth furnace plant from 5 to 25 separate furnaces, a sheet or tin-plate mill plant from 5 to 42 separate mills, etc., and in computing turns each unit is considered separately, so that if a bar-mill plant is made up of five separate mills, each one working two turns per day, in a 31-day month there would be  $5 \times 2 \times 31 = 310$  possible turns for the plant.

Turns for Bessemer converting plants, however, indicate the total turns for each plant as a whole only, as there is not a separate crew for each converter, the number of men in the crew varying according to the number of converters operated. For this department, therefore, the amount of the pay-roll totals more clearly illustrates the per cent of full-time operation of the entire equipment than does the per cent which the turns actually made is of the turns customarily worked.

The length of a turn in the various plants, or in the several departments of a plant, varies from 8 to 12 hours from Monday to Friday, and, except in blast furnaces, open-hearth furnaces, and sheet and tin-plate mills departments, the Saturday turn is usually from one-half to three-quarters as long. Frequently "lighting up" adds to the length of the first turn of a week. The majority of blast furnace, open-hearth furnace, blooming mill, plate mill, and rail mill employees work 12 hours per day; Bessemer converting employees generally work 12 hours per turn, although in a large proportion of plants there are some employees divided into three shifts, working 8 hours each; the greater number of sheet and tin-plate mill employees also are divided into three shifts working 8 hours each; puddling mill employees to a large extent work turns of 8, 9, or 10 hours each; and bar mill employees work turns of 8, 9, 10, 11, or 12 hours each. In addition to the inconstant length of a turn as shown above there is another condition, especially pronounced in dull periods, which affects the average number of hours in a turn, that of working a shorter turn than is customary in order that work sufficient for a few days only may be extended over a longer period, the employees preferring part-time work for a week to full time for a few days followed by a complete shutdown.

It will be seen, therefore, that there is no standard turn for the iron and steel industry as a whole, and even if one were created arbitrarily to attempt to conform all the odd turns to it would present insuperable difficulties. The turns tabulated simply indicate the total number of separate days when the several crews of each department worked, irrespective of the number of hours worked each day.

Identical plants were included in each of the 24 months of the period, hence the figures are comparable from month to month. Separate computations were made of the facts reported for each plant in a district, but only the monthly totals for each district are presented in the tables.

The maximum number of turns possible is the total number of turns that could be made in a month by the several plants reported, if no shutdowns were made any day for any reason, the number for each plant having been computed on the basis of the number of turns per day under the plan under which it operates. The total number of turns customarily not worked on Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays is next presented, followed by the percentage which that total is of the maximum number of turns possible.

The aggregate numbers of turns customarily worked were obtained by deducting the turns customarily not worked on Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays from the maximum possible turns. The number of turns customarily worked were in turn separated into turns actually worked and turns down (not worked) owing to slack work or to all other causes. The actual number of turns worked is stated, and the table also shows the percentages that this actual number of turns worked and the actual number of turns down, in either group, are of the aggregate number of turns customarily worked.

The total of the pay rolls in each department is the total amount of the pay rolls of the various plants reported for each month.

Occasionally a plant changed its custom of working from a two-turn to a three-turn basis, or vice versa, and this fact accounts for differences in the maximum possible turns in two months of equal lengths.

FULL-TIME FORCE.

Table 9 shows the full complement of employees necessary to operate all the units of each plant on a regular full-time basis.

Counting each department of each plant as a separate and distinct working organization, there are 227 plants included in this report, and to fully man them on a 100 per cent time and capacity basis would require 59,752 men. Table 11 shows that 48,140 men were employed in these 227 plants in May, 1915. In other words the plants, as operated in May, 1915, were using 81 per cent of the number of employees that would have been required had they been operating their entire equipment on a full-time basis.

TURNS AND PAY-ROLL TOTALS.

The volume of employment during the period from July, 1913, to June, 1915, in the plants covered, is shown by departments in Table 10. The figures are presented by means of monthly totals for each geographic district and for all districts combined. Index numbers computed from this table appear in Table 1.

In a few instances the total number of plants, or number of separate units, may not agree with such totals as presented in the regular wage tables of a department. These variations may be explained by using bar mills as an illustration. The table of plants and units covered by this report (Table 12) states that 57 plants and 128 separate mills were represented in the report for the 1914-1915 wage group. The volume of employment table (Table 10) shows 58 plants and 131 mills. By following the comparison back to the several districts it will be found that the difference is in the Eastern district. In this district one plant having three separate bar mills, which was reported for the 1913-1914 group, was not in operation in 1915 owing to lack of orders, and was omitted therefore from the 1914-1915 wage group; but to have omitted it from the table showing volume of employment would have unjustifiably lessened the per cent of slack work in that study.

The first section of the volume of employment table concerns the blast-furnace department. The totals for July, 1913, show that 39 plants, having 134 stacks, were covered. The maximum number of turns possible in the month was  $134 \times 31 \times 2 = 8,308$ , and, as the operation of a blast furnace is continuous, the aggregate turns customarily worked is the same. All the 134 stacks were not in operation during the entire month, however, and the turns actually made in the 39 plants were 7,102, or only 85 per cent of the 8,308 turns customarily possible. The turns down were equally divided between slack work and all other causes combined, each being 7 per cent of the aggregate turns customarily possible. The number of turns down is not stated, only the per cents computed therefrom being shown. All per cents in these tables are computed to the nearest whole number, hence the sum of those in the three columns may add one point above or below 100. The total pay rolls in July was \$846,737, but this amount represents 35 plants only, as the pay roll totals of four plants were not obtainable.

The next month, August, 1913, had the same number of possible and customary turns as July, but the number of turns actually made by the 39 plants was less in August than in July, being 7,012, or only 84 per cent of the customary full number. Nine per cent of turns were lost on account of slack work and 6 per cent from all other causes combined. The pay-roll total was a little larger than in July, being $852,865 for the same 35 plants as reported in July.

SCOPE AND METHOD.

The number of plants and the number of employees for which data are shown in this report are specified for each year, by departments, in Table 11. The great increase in the number of employees shown in the 1914-1915 group in each department, as illustrated by the total number in all departments in 1915—48,140, or nearly double the number for 1914 in the 1913-1914 group—is due in part to the greater number of plants reported (227 as compared with 165) but mainly to the fact that for 1914 and 1915, in addition to the principal productive occupations which alone were reported in previous years, all other occupations except salaried men, clerks, and foremen are included, grouped as "Unclassified." These unclassified occupations are tabulated in two groups: Productive and non-productive.

Employees in productive occupations are those whose services are directly required in the production of iron and steel. Employees in nonproductive occupations are those whose services are not directly required in production, but whose employment is necessary to secure successful operation and to provide for the maintenance of the equipment in the various producing departments. In the latter group are included that part of the power, mechanical, and yard force chargeable to each department. The number of employees engaged in the principal productive occupations who are represented in this report for 1915 is 32,517, and the number in unclassified occupations is 15,623, a total of 48,140. This number would have been 24 per cent greater (59,752—see Table 9) had every plant reported been working its entire equipment, for each department reported, on full time.

Reports from 20 identical blast furnaces, in Table 11, above, were obtained for the period 1907 to 1910. These same 20 plants furnished data for the years 1911 and 1912, and 14 additional plants reported data for the years 1910, 1911, and 1912, thereby making comparable data available for 34 plants for 1910 and 1911. Another plant was included for 1911 and 1912, making comparable figures available for those two years from 35 plants; and for 1912 and 1913 still another plant was included, making 36 blast-furnace plants for these two years. One plant was out of blast in 1914 and 1915, and 5 other plants were likewise "down" in 1915; but 8 additional plants were included in the report with data for both 1914 and 1915; thus there are 35 identical plants with comparable data for 1913 and 1914, and 38 plants for 1914 and 1915. Comparable data were obtained for 4,278 blast-furnace employees in 1907 and 4,381 employees in 1910; for 7,050 in 1910 and 5,268 in 1911; for 5,336 in 1911 and 5,973 in 1912; for 6,101 in 1912 and 6,589 in 1913; for 6,636 in 1913 and 5,246 in 1914; and for 9,253 in 1914 and 8,563 in 1915. The figures for other departments may be explained in a similar manner.

The figures for 1910, published in this report, are a part of the data included in the report on Conditions of Employment in the Iron and Steel Industry, made by this bureau and published as Senate Document No. 110, Sixty-second Congress, first session. These figures for 1910 were collected in the fall of that year. The collection of data for the other years, from 1907 to 1912, was begun in the fall of 1912, complete reports for all years having been obtained at one time, and plants not continuously in operation from the time of starting until 1912 having been omitted.

The collection of data for the year 1913 was begun in the summer of that year, and to keep a fair representation it was necessary, in some instances, to report new plants in place of those which for one reason or another were temporarily or permanently not in operation. In such added plants comparable data for 1912 were obtained together with data for 1913.

Reports for 1914 and 1915 were obtained during those years, and owing to the dull period prevailing in this industry a number of plants previously reported in the several departments were not in operation and other plants were substituted for them. Puddling mills were added to the report in these two years and many new plants in other departments, noticeably in the bar-mill department, were also reported.

Data for establishments were not included in this report unless information for at least two consecutive years was available. Direct comparisons of data for two or more successive years can be made properly only when the plants furnishing the data are identical, and the word is here used in the strictest sense. By identical plants is meant not only identical establishments of identical companies but also identical units or departments—as, for example, separate bar mills or groups of open-hearth furnaces. Frequently in this report the number of plants remains unchanged from year to year while the plants are not identical—one plant may have been shut down and another substituted, or when there was no change in the plants themselves it may have been impossible in one plant to obtain reports for one occupation in one year, or an establishment reporting several bar mills, for example, may have ceased operating one, or have added a new one. As in nearly every instance substituted plants were located in the immediate vicinity of those omitted, it frequently happens that the new data correspond very closely to the old, and the two reports for one year are, therefore, in such cases nearly the same.

In some instances an occupation as tabulated embraces two or more subclasses of employees (for example, see Glossary, p. 493, for description of shear-men's helpers in blooming mills) and for some reason it may have been impossible to secure reports for one year for one class. In such a case, while the number of plants for the occupation remains unchanged, the plants in the two years are not considered identical and two reports are made for the connecting year, one comparable with the previous year when all classes making up the occupation were represented, and another comparable with the succeeding year when one class was omitted.

Information was secured from plants located in 14 States. To make the groups of data of sufficient volume to be of representative value, the several plants covered have been divided into four districts only. These districts were not established strictly on geographical lines, but rather on account of similar industrial conditions. The "Eastern" district covers the northeastern part of the United States as far west as central New York and central Pennsylvania, and including Maryland. The "Pittsburgh" district includes not only the plants in Pittsburgh proper but also those in western Pennsylvania, those along the border line in Ohio from Youngstown south to Bellaire, and the plants which are located in the "Panhandle" of West Virginia. The "Great Lakes and Middle West" district includes plants scattered along the Great Lakes from western New York to Illinois and Wisconsin, and also some plants in inland districts, including Colorado. Although this is a very large territory geographically, it is essentially a unit industrially (so far as the iron and steel industry is concerned), the wage rates of the entire district being based largely on those paid in the two producing centers, Buffalo and Chicago. The "Southern" district includes the establishments in Virginia, Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama, Kentucky, and in the southern part of Ohio. The southern Ohio plants are included with the Southern district because the conditions both as to wages paid and the general class of labor employed resemble much more closely the conditions of the Alabama and Kentucky plants than they do those of the other plants of Ohio. The plants included in the report are representative of the industry, and a fair apportionment is given to the several districts.

PROPORTION OF TOTAL IRON AND STEEL EQUIPMENT OF THE UNITED STATES INCLUDED IN THIS REPORT.

In Table 12 is given for each department and district the number of plants, the total number of units represented, and the tonnage capacity, first, of all plants in the United States, as listed in the Iron and Steel Works Directory of the United States, published by the American Iron and Steel Institute in 1916, and second, of the plants included in this report for 1915. The proportion of the total plants, units, and tonnage capacity embraced by the plants herein covered is indicated by percentages.

The "Total" columns relating to the directory cover not only the four districts specified, but the Pacific coast district also, making it a total for the United States. Additional columns of the table show the number of employees in 1915 in each district and department. The number of employees in plants not covered is of course not available.

It is seen from the table above that in the blast-furnace department this report for 1915 covers 38 of the 170 plants, or 22 per cent, of the blast-furnace plants in the United States, 133 of the 370 stacks, or 36 per cent of the separate stacks, and 19,003,125 of the 42,380,825 tons, or 45 per cent of the tonnage capacity. These 38 plants employed 8,563 men. Sixty-three per cent of the total tonnage capacity of plants in the United States making bessemer-steel ingots is included; 35 per cent of the total tonnage capacity of plants making open-hearth steel ingots; 49 per cent of puddling-mill capacity; 37 per cent of blooming-mill capacity; 37 per cent of plate-mill capacity; 50 per cent of standard-rail-mill capacity; 38 per cent of sheet-mill capacity, and 37 per cent of tin-plate-mill capacity. Figures showing the tonnage capacity of bar mills are not available, but this report covers 33 per cent of the plants and 23 per cent of the separate bar mills in the United States. A total of 48,140 men were employed in 1915 in both productive and nonproductive occupations of the 10 departments covered. This number does not include salaried men, foremen, and clerks.

EXPLANATION OF THE DATA PRESENTED.

The greater part of the data presented was obtained by personal visits of agents of this bureau to the several plants. A part of the information was obtained from the plants by correspondence, on schedules and under instructions prepared by the bureau. In certain instances agents visited plants that had furnished data by correspondence to harmonize data not clearly expressed on the schedule.

The number of employees shown in the several tables, with the exception of laborers and those employed in certain other unskilled general occupations, represents the number of employees required to man properly the positions in the mill under normal operating conditions and is not the number of employees who might have appeared on the pay rolls during the pay period covered. For example, a certain operation required 4 men, but during the pay-roll period there were times when one of these 4 did not report for duty and the position was filled by a different employee, and during the pay period a total of 6 men covered the 4 positions and appeared on the pay roll. In such instance the number of employees was reported as 4 and not 6.

The data presented are for one pay-roll period in each year—the pay roll for the second half of May, except in the very few plants where abnormal conditions in May made it desirable to take some other period.

The full-time hours of labor per week shown in the tables of the report are the regular hours of work of the several employees under normal conditions in the establishment. The working time is the time on duty, including intervals of waiting for work; in other words, the time between the hour of reporting for duty and the hour of going off duty.

The working time of employees is not always the working time of their occupation as a whole. Some plants operating seven days per week make provision for laying off each employee one day a week. In such a plant the full-time hours per week of an employee working 12 hours a day is 72 hours. In a plant making no such provision, the full-time hours per week of an employee working 12 hours a day is 84 hours. The full-time hours per week and the relative or index numbers based thereon do not in any way indicate the extent of unemployment. Employees may work overtime, broken time, or be laid off, or a temporary reduction may be made in working hours without such change affecting the full-time hours per week.

The rates of wages per hour appearing in the tables include both the wages of time workers and the earnings of tonnage or pieceworkers. All time rates by the day or week have been reduced to rates per hour. The earnings of tonnage workers, the earnings of employees working at both time and tonnage rates, and the earnings of employees who, in addition to a regular time rate, receive a bonus based on production, also have been reduced to earnings per hour by dividing the earnings by the hours worked. The time workers and tonnage workers of each occupation are combined as one group.

In this connection it should be noted that while in other industries the earnings of employees paid on a piecework basis usually are proportionate to the exertion and skill of the individual employee, in the iron and steel industry the earnings of tonnage workers depend upon the production of an entire department or group of employees.

A change in the earnings per hour of tonnage workers does not of necessity indicate a change in tonnage or piece rates. A change in methods or machinery, a speeding up, or more steady work resulting from a greater volume of business, may increase the hourly earnings or, on the other hand, changes in methods, a slowing down in speed, or a lull in business may reduce hourly earnings. Varying intervals while on duty waiting for work may also affect hourly earnings.

The reports from the plants in most instances showed wages of each individual employee, but in some cases, particularly in the sheet and tin mills, reports gave the aggregate wages of two or more such persons in an occupation instead of wages of each individual. In such plants the classification of wages per hour is made of averages of aggregate wages of the employees, instead of wages of each individual, and hence the classification in the tables of this report for the department as a whole is to a very limited extent a combination of such averages and of individual earnings.

The full-time weekly earnings are the earnings per week of employees working full time, or the earnings on broken time reduced to equivalent earnings for a full week.

In considering weekly earnings it should be remembered that a reduction of hours tends to reduce weekly earnings just as an increase tends to increase them. Thus between 1907 and 1915 it will be observed that in the blast-furnace department the hours for the department were reduced 6 per cent and wages per hour were increased 14 per cent, each tending to offset the other, and making the increase in weekly earnings only 8 per cent. Further, a reduction in the hours of a pieceworker may reduce his earnings in a week and leave his earnings per hour unchanged, while a reduction of hours for a time worker will, if his weekly rate remains the same, increase his rate per hour.

Still another influence on average weekly earnings for the department as a whole must be considered. That is, the changes in the number of employees in the several occupations from year to year. It is obvious that an increase in the number of employees in the lower-paid occupations, or a decrease in the number of those in the higher-paid ones would lower the average rate and earnings for all occupations, just as an increase in the number of employees in the higher-paid occupations or a decrease in the number in the lower-paid ones would increase the average.

METHOD OF COMPUTING AVERAGES.

The averages of full-time hours per week, rates of wages per hour, and full-time weekly earnings are computed by adding the data for each individual employee and dividing the total by the number of employees.

REASON FOR TAKING 1915 AS BASE YEAR.

Relative full-time hours of labor, relative rates of wages per hour, and relative full-time weekly earnings are briefly described on pages 14 and 15.

It will be observed that in the tables of relative numbers the data for the latest year available, 1915 in this report, are taken as the base, or 100 per cent. Relative or index numbers are most frequently used to compare the latest year with preceding years, as 1914 with 1915, 1913 with 1915, etc., and a comparison with 100 conveys a clearer idea than a comparison of any two numbers, neither of which is 100. For example, the ratio 96.4:100 is more readily grasped than the equal ratio 137.3:142.4.

Another and more important reason for taking the last year, 1915, as the base, or 100 per cent, is that the data for 1915 are greater in amount and better in quality than for any preceding year. Thus for blast furnaces data were obtained from 20 plants for 1907 and from 38 plants for 1915. While the average for 20 plants might possibly have been a fairly acceptable base, the average of nearly twice as many plants recently canvassed becomes more nearly representative of the industry, and thus a more satisfactory base. Starting with 1915 and computing the index back year by year to 1907 the weakness, if any, in the data of earlier years can not manifest itself in the relative numbers except in the earlier years. But if the average for 1907 were taken as a base, any weakness beginning in the index of the earlier years would be continued down through the later years, though the basic data for such later years were entirely satisfactory.

METHOD OF COMPUTING RELATIVE NUMBERS.

The method of computing the relative numbers is best explained by an illustration. The full-time weekly earnings in 1913, 1914, and 1915 of stockers in the blast-furnace department is taken as an example.

|                                                                                      | Numberofidenticalplants. | Year.   |         |         |

|                                                                                      | 35                                   |         | 14.03   | $13.99 |
| Relative full-time weekly earnings computed therefrom.....                           |                                      | 106     | 100     | 100     |
| Full-time weekly earnings in identical establishments covering the full 3 years..... | 29                                   | 15.12   | 14.31   | 14.47   |
| Relative full-time weekly earnings computed therefrom.....                           |                                      | 104     | 99      | 100     |

Data are available for this occupation from 1907 to 1915, but the figures for 1913 to 1915 only are used, being sufficient to illustrate the method of computing the relative numbers.

The average for 1915 is taken as the base (100), then $14.03 divided by $13.99 equals 100 (100.3), the relative for 1914. The ratio of 1913 to 1914 is $15.00 divided by $14.19. The relative for 1914 just determined, 100 (100.3), multiplied by $15.00 divided by $14.19 equals 106 (105.7), the relative for 1913. In this report the relative number is published without decimals.

This method of computing relative numbers is used because of the change that was made in the number of establishments to get a wider representation in the later years. In computing a series of relative numbers, account must be taken of changes in plants from year to year, as some discontinue operations or cease to be representative and new plants come into operation. Thirty-three plants furnished data for 1913 and 1914, but in 1915 four of these plants were not in operation and six other plants furnished data for both 1915 and 1914, making 35 for that group. These changes reduced the weekly earnings somewhat, the average in 1914 for 35 plants being $14.03 as against $14.19 for 33 plants. With a varying number of plants such differences must be expected.

The average of the weekly earnings for the 35 plants in 1915 was $13.99. In the 29 plants, running through the full 3-year period, the average earnings in 1915 were $14.47. Thus the averages for 35 plants show a decrease in earnings from $14.03 in 1914 to $13.99 in 1915, while the averages for 29 plants show an increase from $14.31 in 1914 to $14.47 in 1915. Relatives have been computed on the data of the 29 plants, and are presented in the table simply to illustrate the difference shown by relatives based on different amounts of data. The relatives based on the greatest amount of available data, being more nearly representative, are presented in the several tables of relative numbers in the report.

A word of caution is given as to the use of relative numbers. The per cent of increase or decrease from one year to another is not the difference between the relative numbers for the two years. Thus, in Table 14, the relative full-time weekly earnings of stockers increased from 95 in 1907 to 106 in 1913, a difference of 11 in the relatives. This difference, 11, is 11.6 per cent of the relative 95, but as decimals are not used in this table this becomes 12 per cent.

The above illustration shows the method of computing the relative numbers for an occupation. Precisely the same method was used in computing the relative numbers for each department as a whole. For example, for each year the full-time weekly earnings of each employee of all occupations covered were added and the sum divided by the total employees covered, giving the average full-time weekly earnings of all employees in the department. From these averages (unpublished) the relative full-time weekly earnings for the industry were computed by the method illustrated above. This explanation applies equally to relative full-time hours of labor and to relative rates of wages per hour.

In Table 10 figures are given concerning the volume of employment in the several departments, monthly, from July, 1913, to June, 1915, and in Table 1 there are presented index numbers computed therefrom. As the method of computation is complex, an explanation is given in the form of an illustration. The tin-plate mill figures are taken as the example.

What constitutes customary turns is explained on page 29. The turns actually worked in July, 1913, were 6,418. The number of customary turns in July, 1913, was 9,574, of which number the turns actually worked (6,418) constituted 67 per cent.

The estimated full customary time pay roll was computed from the actual pay rolls of the turns worked. The customary turns for each of the 24 months were added and the sum (224,771) was divided by 24, giving 9,365 customary turns as the average monthly number for these mills. The actual pay rolls for the 24 months were added and the sum ($11,672,445) was divided by the sum of the turns actually made in the 24 months (168,693) and the quotient multiplied by the average monthly full number of customary turns (9,365), giving approximately $648,000 as the estimated full-time monthly pay roll. The actual pay roll in July, 1913, was $450,365, which number is 70 per cent of $648,000.

PREVIOUS REPORTS.

Wages in the iron and steel industry have entered into several reports published by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, among such reports being the Sixth Annual, the Nineteenth Annual, and Bulletins Nos. 59, 65, 71, 77, 151, and 168.

Two Senate documents contain reports of investigations made by the Bureau of Labor Statistics treating in part of wages in the iron and steel industry, namely:

Report on Strike at Bethlehem Steel Works. Senate Document No. 521, Sixty-first Congress, second session.

Report on Conditions of Employment in the Iron and Steel Industry in the United States (4 volumes). Senate Document No. 110, Sixty-second Congress, first session.

The last-named document is a very comprehensive study of the wages, hours of labor, working conditions, etc., in the industry in the year 1910. It covered all occupations in the industry and practically all plants in operation in the United States. The wage data of this report were based mostly on a half-month pay roll, in most instances in the month of May.

The resources of the Bureau of Labor Statistics would not warrant such a large and expensive study to be made each year. This present report contains representative data only, as before stated, but such data cover not only 1910, but all the years from 1907 to 1915, inclusive, in three departments; from 1910 to 1915, in six departments, and 1914 and 1915, in one department.

Figures for each department and each geographical division for years preceding 1914, corresponding to those given in this report for 1913, 1914, and 1915 were given in Bulletins 151 and 168 of this bureau.

Descriptions of the occupations in each department are to be found in the Glossary of Occupations, pages 467 to 526.

SUMMARY.

The year 1913 marked the highest point in wages per hour and per week in this department in the period 1907 to 1915. Wages per hour fell off 1 per cent in 1914, accompanied by a reduction of 3 per cent in the hours of labor, making a reduction of 4 per cent in the earnings of a full-time week. Both wages and hours of labor remained practically unchanged in 1915 as compared with 1914. The lowest point in wages during the nine-year period was reached in 1909. The figures stated apply to the department as a whole ("All occupations"), but there are some deviations therefrom in the several occupations as is indicated in the table of relative numbers (Table 14).

From 1907 to 1915 there was a steadily exerted effort to reduce the turns (days) per week and therewith the hours per week of individual employees in blast-furnace operation. Some seven-day occupations were reduced to six-day occupations, and many seven-day "turn" occupations made six-day positions, one day out of seven being worked by a relief man.

The most significant facts concerning wages and hours of labor in the several occupations of the blast-furnace department appearing in this report are summarized in the table following. Data are presented for the years 1907 to 1915, the figures for each group of years being for identical plants. The information for 1915 represents 8,563 employees, and was obtained from 38 plants having 133 stacks and capable of producing 45 per cent of the total tonnage capacity of blast furnaces in the United States. Of the 8,563 employees 4,914 are in the 16 principal production occupations specified each year from 1907 to 1915, and the remaining 3,649 are in the unclassified productive and nonproductive groups reported for the years 1914 and 1915 only. In this summary table occupations are grouped according to wages paid, beginning with the lowest-paid group, and the occupations in each group are presented in alphabetical order. Classified full-time hours per week and rates of wages per hour are shown by percentages which were computed from the actual figures given in Table A.

<sup>1</sup> Summary figures relating to this department are given with figures for other departments of the iron and steel industry on pages 7 to 26; an account of the volume of employment in this and other departments from July, 1913, to June, 1915, is given on pages 26 to 55; and an explanation of the scope of the investigation and of the methods employed is given on pages 55 to 59.

Referring to the first occupation presented in Table 13, "Laborers," direct comparison can be made of figures for 20 identical plants from 1907 to 1910, for 34 plants for 1910 and 1911, for 35 plants for 1911 and 1912, for 35 plants for 1912 and 1913, for 34 plants for 1913 and 1914, and for 37 plants for 1914 and 1915. The first line shows that in 1907 the 20 blast-furnace plants which furnished information employed 957 laborers, and that the average hours of these laborers, when working full time, was 75.8 hours per week. For 11 per cent of these laborers the full-time hours per week were 60 and under; for 37 per cent, over 60 and under 72; for less than 1 per cent, 72; for 5 per cent, over 72 and under 84; and for 47 per cent, or nearly one-half, 84 hours. The average rate of wages or earnings per hour of laborers in the year considered (1907) was 14.6 cents. Of the total number, 4 per cent earned under 12 cents per hour; 29 per cent received 12 and under 14 cents per hour; 40 per cent received 14 and under 16 cents per hour, and 28 per cent received 16 and under 18 cents per hour. The average earnings for a full week's work was $11.13. The other lines of the table are read in the same manner.

Referring to the last column of the table, it is seen that in 20 identical plants the average full-time weekly earnings of laborers was $11.13 in 1907. In the next two years there was a drop to $10.24 and $10.17 respectively, and in 1910 an advance to $11.18. While the average full-time weekly earnings in 1910 in 20 plants was $11.18, the average in 34 plants for the same year was $11.23. In the 34 plants there was a decrease from $11.23 per week in 1910 to $11.13 in 1911. The difference between $11.23 and $11.13 measures the change from 1910 to 1911. It would not be a proper comparison, however, to state that earnings decreased from $11.18 in 1910 to $11.13 in 1911, because of the change in plants and the difference known to exist in the averages for 1910 in the two groups of plants. In 35 plants there was an increase from $11.14 in 1911 to $11.15 in 1912, and in the second group of 35 plants an increase from $11.15 in 1912 to $12.43 in 1913. Comparing the 34 plants reported for the years 1913 and 1914 a decrease from $12.65 to $12.47 is shown. In the next comparison there are 37 plants showing a decrease from $12.52 in 1914 to $12.20 per week in 1915. The other items of this table should be studied with like care.

Comparing the full-time earnings for both the years 1914 and 1915 of the several occupations it is seen that the lowest earnings are found in the occupation of laborers; the average being $12.52 and $12.20 respectively. Several other occupations receive but little more, bottom fillers, cinder men, keepers' helpers, larry mens' helpers, and stockers all receiving less than $15 per week. The highest earnings in any occupation of this department are found in the occupation of blowers, the average full-time weekly earnings in this occupation being $26.74 for the year 1914 and $26.93 for 1915.

INDEX NUMBERS.

Owing to changes in the number of plants reported from year to year, and the consequent differences in the averages for the overlapping year in two groups of plants, it is difficult to make a comparison of the actual data over a period of several years which will give an accurate measure of the changes throughout the period. To aid in making such a comparison, relative or index numbers have been computed from the averages shown in Table 13 for full-time hours per week, rates of wages per hour, and full-time weekly earnings, for each occupation from 1907 to 1915 inclusive. Such figures appear in Table 14, following. These relative or index numbers are simply percentages for which the data for 1915 are taken as a base, or 100 per cent. The relative for each year is the per cent that the average for that year is of the average for 1915. For example, the relative full-time weekly earnings of stockers in 1907 were 95 as compared with 100 in 1915; that is the full-time weekly earnings of stockers in 1907 were 95 per cent of the full-time weekly earnings in this occupation in 1915. The method of computing relative numbers is explained on pages 65 to 67.

Table 14 also shows for each occupation the per cent of increase or decrease in full-time hours per week, rates of wages per hour, and full-time weekly earnings in 1915 as compared with each specified year preceding. Thus the full-time weekly earnings of stockers in 1915 were 5 per cent higher than in 1907, 16 per cent higher than in 1908, 14 per cent higher than in 1909, 8 per cent higher than in 1910, 6 per cent higher than in 1911, 5 per cent higher than in 1912, 6 per cent lower than in 1913, and the same as in 1914.

In other columns of the table is shown the per cent of change in each year as compared with the year immediately preceding. Thus the full-time weekly earnings of stockers in 1908 were 9 per cent lower than in 1907, 2 per cent higher in 1909 than in 1908, 6 per cent higher in 1910 than in 1909, 1 per cent higher in 1911 than in 1910, 1 per cent higher in 1912 than in 1911, 12 per cent higher in 1913 than in 1912, 6 per cent lower in 1914 than in 1913, and the same in 1915 as in 1914. The other items of the table can be studied in like manner. The per cent of increase or decrease is computed from the relative numbers. The figures for the department as a whole ("All occupations") appear at the end of the table.

1 No change.

Comparing 1915 with 1909, the year of lowest wage in the department, it appears that the advance in weekly earnings varies in the several occupations from 3 per cent for iron handlers and loaders to 22 per cent for bottom fillers. The reduction in hours in the nine-year period varies in the several occupations from 4 to 9 per cent and in the department as a whole is 6 per cent. Between 1907 and 1910 there was some variation in hours, but the steady decline did not begin until after 1910.

The figures for all occupations combined for years previous to 1914 are based on the principal productive occupations only, but for 1914 and 1915 they are computed on data for all employees in the department including the unclassified groups (see pp. 55 and 56) tabulated for 1914 and 1915 for the first time.

The relative full-time weekly earnings of the department as a whole in 1907 were 93 per cent of such earnings in 1915. The relative dropped to 88 in 1908 and to 87 in 1909, advanced to 94 in 1910 to 95 in 1911, dropped to 94 in 1912, advanced to 104 in 1913, and dropped to 100 in 1914, the same as the base year 1915. The next column shows that in 1915 the full-time weekly earnings of the department as a whole were 8 per cent higher than in 1907, 14 per cent higher than in 1908, 15 per cent higher than in 1909, 6 per cent higher than in 1910, 5 per cent higher than in 1911, 6 per cent higher than in 1912, 4 per cent lower than in 1913, and the same as in 1914. The third column under "Weekly earnings" for the department as a whole shows that the full-time weekly earnings in 1908 were 5 per cent lower than in 1907; in 1909, 1 per cent lower than in 1908; in 1910, 8 per cent higher than in 1909; in 1911, 1 per cent higher than in 1910; in 1912, 1 per cent lower than in 1911; in 1913, 11 per cent higher than in 1912; in 1914, 4 per cent lower than in 1913; and in 1915 there was no change as compared with 1914.

FULL-TIME WORKING DAYS PER WEEK.

The number and per cent of employees in the principal productive occupations in blast-furnace plants whose customary working time per week was 6 days or turns, or 7 days, or variations thereof, are shown in Table 15. The figures are presented for each district and for the four districts combined.

Two sets of figures are given for the plants reported for 1914 and 1915, the first covering only the principal productive occupations, as shown for all of the preceding groups and therefore strictly comparable with them, and the second including the unclassified occupations (see pp. 55 and 56) tabulated for 1914 and 1915 for the first time.

While the blast-furnace process represents a continuous operation, a marked difference is seen in the working days per week of employees in the few years between 1907 and 1915; 7 days was the regular working time of 97 per cent of the employees in the selected occupations in 1907, while in 1915 the number working 7 days per week had been reduced to 59 per cent in the same group of occupations. When all the employees, including the newly introduced unclassified groups, are taken into account only 54 per cent were working 7 days per week in 1915. This reduction is due to the fact that during recent years many establishments have carried into effect a provision to lay off employees one day in 7, thus making the working time for each individual 6 days, while the plant continues in operation 7 days. Under this working condition the 24-hour double turn formerly made by one individual when turns shifted has been practically eliminated.

The most marked evidence of the progress of this plan is seen in the data for the Pittsburgh and the Great Lakes and Middle West districts. The Eastern district has made a considerable reduction in hours per week in this department, while in the Southern district the change seems to be taking a backward turn.

Two general tables are presented for the blast-furnace department, as follows:

Table A.—Full-time hours per week, rates of wages per hour, and full-time weekly earnings in the United States, by years, 1907 to 1915.

Table B.—Full-time hours per week, rates of wages per hour, and full-time weekly earnings, in each district, by years, 1913 to 1915.

The data from Table A are summarized in Table 13, percentages being used instead of the actual figures for classified full-time hours per week and rates of wages per hour.

The order in which the occupations are given in Tables A and B and in the table of relative numbers follows that of the process of manufacture. "Identical plants," as used in the tables of this report, are identical units of identical establishments reporting the same occupations in each of two or more consecutive years. For a more extended explanation see page 58.

Figures for each geographical division for each preceding year back to 1907 corresponding to those given for 1913, 1914, and 1915, in Table B were given in Bulletins 151 and 168 of this bureau.

Descriptions of the occupations which are specified in this chapter and of other occupations of the blast-furnace department tabulated as "unclassified" may be found in the Glossary of Occupations, pages 467 to 475.

SUMMARY.

In 1915 the average rate of wages or earnings per hour of employees in the Bessemer converting department ranged from 12 per cent lower to 12 per cent higher than in the years of the period 1907 to 1914. Wages per hour were highest in 1913, owing to the large tonnages made, and the fact that in so many of the occupations earnings are based on production.

In 1914 and 1915 Bessemer production, not taking into account Bessemer duplexing, was greatly reduced.

The most significant facts concerning the several occupations of the Bessemer converting department appearing in this report are summarized in Table 16. Data are presented for the years 1907 to 1915, inclusive, the figures for each group of years being for identical plants. The data for 1915 represent 1,187 Bessemer converter employees in 19 selected occupations and 1,031 employees in unclassified occupations, making a total of 2,218 employees. Employees other than those in the selected occupations are included in the reports for 1914 and 1915 only.

These data were obtained from 12 plants having 32 converters and capable of producing about two-thirds of the tonnage of Bessemer steel ingots made in the United States.

In this table occupations are grouped according to the wages paid, beginning with the lowest-paid group, and the occupations in each group are presented in alphabetical order. Classified full-time hours per week and rates of wages per hour are shown by percentages which were computed from the actual figures given in Table C.

<sup>1</sup> Summary figures relating to the Bessemer converting department are given with figures for other departments of the iron and steel industry on pages 7 to 26; an account of the volume of employment in this and other departments from July, 1913, to June, 1915, is given on pages 26 to 55; and an explanation of the scope of the investigation and of the methods employed is given on pages 55 to 59.

Referring to the first occupation presented in Table 16—laborers—direct comparison can be made of data for 9 identical plants from 1907 to 1910, for 10 plants from 1910 to 1912, for another group of 10 identical plants for 1912 and 1913, and yet another group of 10 identical plants for 1913 and 1914, and for 12 identical plants for 1914 and 1915. The first line of the table is analyzed as follows: In 1907 the 9 Bessemer plants from which reports were obtained employed 801 laborers, whose average full-time hours of work were 78 per week. For 3 per cent of the 801 laborers the full-time hours per week were over 48 and under 72; for 22 per cent, 72; for 33 per cent, over 72 and under 84; and for 42 per cent, 84 hours. The average rate of wages or earnings per hour of laborers in the year considered (1907) was 15.5 cents. Of the total number 71 per cent received 14 and under 16 cents per hour, and 29 per cent, 16 and under 18 cents per hour. The average full-time weekly earnings were $12.12. The other lines of the table may be read in the same manner. Referring to the last column of the table, it is seen that in 9 identical plants the average full-time weekly earnings of laborers were $12.12 in 1907. In the next two years there were drops to $11.80 and $11.62, respectively, and in 1910 an advance to $12.69. In the 10 identical plants reporting for 1910, 1911, and 1912, the average for 1910 was also $12.69. There was a decrease to $12.39 in 1911 and an increase to $12.64 in 1912. Despite the fact that the two reports for 1910 are the same, it would not be an accurate comparison to state that earnings increased from $12.12 in 1907 to $12.64 in 1912, because one more plant is included in the 1912 average than in that for 1907. In the second group of 10 plants the full-time weekly earnings were $12.68 in 1912 and $14.38 in 1913. In the third group of 10 identical plants the full-time weekly earnings were $14.43 in 1913 and $14.57 in 1914. In the group of 12 plants for 1914 and 1915 the full-time weekly earnings decreased to $14.27 and $14.31, respectively.

Comparing the average full-time weekly earnings for 1915 of the several occupations, it is seen that the lowest average was that of laborers, which was $14.31. The averages of the other 18 occupations for this department show 7 with a range between $15.42 and $18.43, 8 ranging between $21.18 and $25.90, and 1 each at $27.96 for steel pourers, $30.87 for vessel men, and $35.61 for blowers. The averages for all other occupations in this department, which are shown only for the years 1914 and 1915, are, respectively, $16.23 and $16.93 for the unclassified productive and $16.81 and $16.79 for the nonproductive occupations.

INDEX NUMBERS.

Owing to changes in the number of plants reported from year to year, and the consequent differences in the averages for the overlapping year in two groups, it is difficult to make a comparison of the actual data over a period of several years which will give an accurate measure of the changes throughout the period. To aid in making such a comparison, relative or index numbers have been computed from the averages given in Table 16 for full-time hours per week, rates of wages per hour, and full-time weekly earnings for each occupation from 1907 to 1915, inclusive. Such figures appear in Table 17. These relative or index numbers are simply percentages for which the data for 1915 are taken as the base, or 100 per cent. The relative for each year is the per cent that the average for that year is of the average for 1915. For example, the relative full-time weekly earnings of stockers in 1907 were 96, as compared with 100 in 1915; that is, the full-time weekly earnings of stockers in 1907 were 96 per cent of the full-time weekly earnings in this occupation in 1915. The method of computing relative numbers is explained on pages 65 to 67.

Table 17 also shows for each occupation the per cent of increase or decrease in full-time hours per week, rates of wages per hour, and full-time weekly earnings in 1915 as compared with each specified year preceding. Thus, the full-time weekly earnings of stockers in 1915 were 4 per cent higher than in 1907, the same as in 1908, 3 per cent lower than in 1909, 7 per cent lower than in 1910, 10 per cent higher than in 1911, 16 per cent lower than in 1912, 23 per cent lower than in 1913, and 10 per cent lower than in 1914.

In other columns of the table is shown the per cent of change in each year as compared with the year immediately preceding. Thus, the full-time weekly earnings of stockers in 1908 were 4 per cent higher than in 1907, 3 per cent higher in 1909 than in 1908, 5 per cent higher in 1910 than in 1909, 16 per cent lower in 1911 than in 1910, 31 per cent higher in 1912 than in 1911, 9 per cent higher in 1913 than in 1912, 15 per cent lower in 1914 than in 1913, and 10 per cent lower in 1915 than in 1914. The other occupations and items of the table may be studied in like manner. The percentages of increase and decrease are computed from the relative numbers.

The relative full-time weekly earnings for all occupations of the department combined in 1907 were 96 as compared with 100 in 1915. In other words, the full-time weekly earnings in 1907 were 96 per cent of those in 1915. The relative dropped to 88 in 1908, advanced to 93 in 1909, and to 98 in 1910, dropped in 1911 to 93, advanced in 1912 to 100, and in 1913 to 111, and dropped to 96 in 1914. In 1915, the base year, the relative was 100. These relative numbers for each year previous to 1914 are based on the principal productive occupations only, but those for 1914 and 1915 include also the unclassified groups tabulated for 1914 and 1915 for the first time.

The next column shows that full-time weekly earnings in 1915 were 4 per cent higher than in 1907, 14 per cent higher than in 1908, 8 per cent higher than in 1909, 2 per cent higher than in 1910, 8 per cent higher than in 1911, the same as in 1912, 10 per cent lower than in 1913, and 4 per cent higher than in 1914.

FULL-TIME WORKING DAYS PER WEEK.

The number and per cent of employees in the principal productive occupations in Bessemer converting plants whose customary working time per week was 6 days or turns, or 7 days, or variations thereof, are shown in Table 18. The figures are presented for each of the two districts for which these plants are reported and for the two combined. The employees given under the headings "5 days, 6 days, and 7 days in rotation," "6 days, 6 days, and 7 days in rotation," and "6 days, 7 days, and 7 days in rotation" are engaged in occupations for which the plant employs three shifts instead of the customary two to complete the 24 hours of a day. The heading "6 days, 6 days, and 7 days in rotation," for example, indicates that each week one-third of the employees reported work 7 turns instead of the customary 6, the plant being shut down during the time of two shifts on one day each week.

Two sets of figures are shown for the plants reported for 1914 and 1915, the first covering only the principal productive occupations as shown for all the preceding groups and therefore strictly comparable with them, and the second including the unclassified occupations (see pp. 55 to 56) tabulated for 1914 and 1915 for the first time.

Two general tables are presented for the Bessemer converting department, as follows:

Table C.—Full-time hours per week, rates of wages per hour, and full-time weekly earnings, in the United States, by years, 1907 to 1915.

Table D.—Full-time hours per week, rates of wages per hour, and full-time weekly earnings, in each district, by years, 1913 to 1915.

The data from Table C are summarized in Table 16, percentages being used instead of the actual figures for classified hours and rates of wages.

The order in which the occupations are given in Tables C and D, and in the table of relative numbers, follows that of the processes of manufacture. "Identical plants," as used in the tables of this report, are identical units of identical establishments, reporting the same occupations in each of two or more consecutive years. For a more extended explanation, see page 58.

Figures for each geographical division for each preceding year, back to 1907, corresponding to those given for 1913, 1914, and 1915 in Table D, were given in Bulletins 151 and 168 of this bureau.

Descriptions of the specified occupations which appear in the tables of this chapter and of others included in the two groups designated as "Unclassified—productive" and "Unclassified—nonproductive," are to be found in the Glossary of Occupations on pages 475 to 481.
