WHOLESALE PRICES IN 1930

The present bulletin gives complete information for the year 1930 and a summary of the principal facts for earlier years. Persons desiring the earlier detailed data are referred to Bulletin No. 521 and previous reports.¹ Much information concerning wholesale prices is also contained in the monthly pamphlets published by the bureau. An explanation of the method used in collecting the prices for inclusion in the bureau's reports, and also the method followed in computing the index numbers for the various groups of commodities, will be found in Bulletin No. 493 (pp. 2 to 6).

MOVEMENT OF WHOLESALE PRICES IN 1930

A marked decline in the general level of wholesale prices took place in 1930. Except for a slight reaction in late summer, the trend was steadily downward throughout the year, the net decrease in the 12 months being 17 per cent. The year's average was more than 10 per cent below the 1929 level.

Among farm products there were radical price declines in grains and in livestock and poultry. Grains as a group fell 21 per cent in price from January to July, rose slightly in August, and again declined to the end of the year. December prices averaged about one-third below those of January, wheat in most markets decreasing 40 per cent in the year. Meat animals and poultry declined over 18 per cent in price in the first half of the year, rallied somewhat in August and September and again decreased thereafter. Beef steers fell 25 per cent in price from January to August, but gained later. Cows were cheapest in November, when prices averaged only 60 per cent of those of January. Hog prices were erratic, rising in the early part of the year, falling in summer, rising again in late summer and fall, and slumping in December. Prices of sheep and lambs also varied widely during the year, new low levels being reached in fall and winter. Live poultry slumped in the year, with December prices two-thirds those of January. Cotton in all markets showed a radical decrease, falling over 40 per cent in price during the year. Eggs averaged about 75 per cent of 1929 prices, the December average being less than 60 per cent of that of December, 1929. Prices of onions, tobacco, and wool were appreciably lower than in the year before, while potatoes in all markets averaged higher but with weakening prices at the end of the year.

Food prices averaged about 10 per cent lower than in 1929. Marked variations were shown in the prices of butter, fresh and cured meats, dressed poultry, coffee, fish, flour, fresh and dried fruits, and canned vegetables. Hides and skins reached new low levels in the closing months of the year, the December average being one-third below that of January. Leather also declined, but to a less extent than hides and skins. Prices of boots and shoes and other leather products were more stable, but with a downward tendency. Textiles showed radical price decreases, cotton goods falling 18 per cent, silk and rayon 32 per cent, woolen and worsted goods 13 per cent, and other textiles 23 per cent in the year. Compared with prices in 1926, the bureau's base year, silk and rayon had decreased approximately 50 per cent by the end of 1930, while hemp and jute had decreased more than 50 per cent.

In the group of fuel and lighting materials, with the exception of petroleum products, prices were fairly stable in the year, but with a downward movement. Anthracite and bituminous coal and coke showed small decreases, while gas advanced. Crude and refined petroleum decreased radically, with prices at the end of the year in many instances at less than half those of 1926.

Metal products steadily declined in the year, with nonferrous metals leading in price decreases. Copper, lead, silver, tin, and zinc averages for 1930 were materially lower than those for the preceding year. Agricultural implements and automobiles also averaged lower than in 1929. Lumber prices moved sharply downward during the year, with brick, paint materials, and other building materials showing smaller decreases. Chemicals and drugs likewise exhibited price declines, fertilizer materials and mixed fertilizers being included in the decrease. Furniture showed little change from the 1929 level, while furnishings were somewhat cheaper. In the group of miscellaneous commodities, cattle-feed prices declined rapidly in 1930, the average for December being 36 per cent below the average for December, 1929. Paper and pulp showed smaller decreases, while crude rubber sank to a point in October that was only 42 per cent of the October, 1929, price and only 17 per cent of the 1926 base price. Automobile tires were somewhat cheaper than in the year before.

WHOLESALE PRICES, 1890 TO 1930

Index numbers of wholesale prices from 1890 to 1930, inclusive, by groups of commodities and by months, are shown in Table 1.

In Table 4 the index numbers of wholesale prices as computed by the Bureau of Labor Statistics for the major groups of commodities have been extended back to 1890, the earliest year for which wholesale prices were collected by the bureau. While results here given for years prior to 1913 are necessarily based on a smaller number of commodities than are the results for the years since 1913, they may be considered comparable for all practical purposes.

TREND OF WHOLESALE PRICES, 1801 TO 1930

The trend of wholesale prices in the United States since the beginning of the last century is shown by the figures in Table 5. The index numbers for the years 1801 to 1840 are arithmetic means of unweighted relative prices of commodities as published on pages 235 to 248 of Bulletin No. 367. The index numbers for 1841 to 1889 also are arithmetic averages of unweighted relative prices and have been taken from the Report of Committee on Finance of the United States Senate on Wholesale Prices, Wages, and Transportation, March 3, 1893 (52d Cong., 2d sess., Rept. No. 1394, pt. 1, p. 9). As originally published, these figures were computed with 1860 as the base year. They are here converted to the 1926 base. The prices used are in currency and the number of commodities varies from approximately 150 in the earlier years to 250 in the later years of the period.

The index numbers from 1890 to 1930 are the bureau's regular weighted series. In using the data in this table it should be borne in mind that the figures in the three series here joined are not strictly comparable, since they are based on different lists of commodities in different markets and are, moreover, unweighted for the years prior to 1890. They are believed, however, to reflect with a fair degree of accuracy wholesale price changes in general over the period stated.

PURCHASING POWER OF THE DOLLAR, 1913 TO 1930

Monthly changes in the buying power of the dollar in relation to wholesale prices from 1913 to 1930 are shown in Table 6. The figures in this table are but reciprocals of the index numbers. To illustrate, the index number representing the general level of wholesale prices in 1913, with prices in 1926 as the base, is seen to be 69.8. The reciprocal of this index number is 0.01433. Translated into dollars and cents this becomes $1.433. The table shows that the dollar shrank so much in its buying value that $1.433 in 1913 was equal to only $1.000 in 1926. In 1930 its value increased to $1.159.

AVERAGE WHOLESALE PRICES OF IMPORTANT COMMODITIES, 1930

WEIGHTED COMMODITIES

The average wholesale prices of individual commodities for each month of 1930 are shown in detail in Table 7. Yearly figures from 1890 to 1929, inclusive, and monthly figures for the years from 1913 to 1929, inclusive, have, wherever this information has been collected by the bureau, been published in previous bulletins.² The even pages of Tables 7 and 8 contain average money prices for each month, while the odd pages contain index numbers for each month as compared with the average price in the year 1926; that is, the per cent that the average price in each month is of the average price in the year 1926. These index numbers have been computed from average prices carried to four decimal places, while the average prices here published have been rounded off to three decimal places. In some instances, therefore, the index numbers show changes that are not reflected in the average prices.

For each commodity the average price for the year was computed by dividing the sum of the quotations by the number of quotations. Where a range of prices was found, the mean price for each date was taken and the sum of such means was divided by their number to obtain the average price for the year. For example, the sum of the 52 mean weekly prices for No. 2 hard wheat at Kansas City obtained for 1930 was found to be $46.775. This total divided by 52 gives $0.900 as the average price for the year 1930. For monthly averages a similar plan was followed in cases where prices on a particular day of each week were used. For many commodities, however, monthly averages based on daily quotations have been obtainable. First-of-the-month prices have been used for a limited number of articles whose prices are quite stable.

In computing the averages shown in the table the net cash price was used for textiles and all other articles subject to large and varying discounts. In the case of a few commodities, such as plain wire, nails, steel plates, steel sheets, etc., the prices of which are subject to a small discount for cash within 10 days, no deduction has been made.

An explanation of the method employed in constructing group index numbers from the individual commodity prices shown in Table 7 will be found in Bulletin No. 493 (pp. 2-4). Appendix B (pp. 225-236) of that bulletin shows the relative importance of the various commodities in the base year 1926. The physical quantities of commodities used as weights in computing group and general index numbers since the beginning of 1930 are given in the appendix (See p. 93).
