Preface

For the first time, the Bureau of Labor Statistics is combining its analytical wage calendar article appearing in the January 1968 Monthly Labor Review and its extensive listing of contract expirations which it had previously issued separately, to provide a more comprehensive and valuable report for those using these materials.

In previous years the Bureau published a listing in the yearend Monthly Labor Review describing expirations, reopening and wage adjustments due in the following year, but limited to situations affecting 5,000 workers or more. A more exhaustive and detailed listing of contracts expiring during the coming year, covering 1,000 workers or more, was published later. These two reports are combined in this bulletin.

Most of the contracts identified in these reports are on file in the Bureau's Division of Industrial and Labor Relations and are open to public use. Information for a few situations was taken from published sources.

The summary of deferred wage increases was prepared early in December and does not reflect settlements reached later in the month. By early January, the Bureau had recorded settlements that provided deferred wage increases in 1968 for approximately 400,000 additional workers. Of these, about 115,000 were in metalworking; 80,000 in wholesale and retail trade; 75,000 in food; 50,000 in transportation; 20,000 in construction; 12,000 each in apparel, and lumber and furniture; 10,000 each in paper and utilities; 9,000 in stone, clay, and glass; 7,000 in services; 5,000 in printing; 4,000 in petroleum refining; and 1,000 in leather.

Table 8 and 9 are reproduced directly from machine tabulation printout; table 8 lists the agreements scheduled to expire in 1968 by month of expiration; and table 9 lists them on an industry basis. Where a new contract has already been negotiated, the entry has been lined through in both tables.

Users should refer to appendix A for the list of common abbreviations, and to appendix B for codes to identify the entries for the particular columns of the two listings.

Table 10 lists 1968 wage reopenings, by month of major bargaining agreements, each covering 5,000 workers or more.

Expirations which reached the Bureau too late to be included in tables 8 and 9 are listed in table 11.

This Bulletin was prepared jointly in the Divisions of Wage Economics and Industrial and Labor Relations by William M. Davis and Cordelia T. Ward.

The Wage Calendar for 1968

WAGE INCREASES are received—in most years—by at least 3 out of 4 workers covered by major collective bargaining agreements. Some of the increases result from negotiations concluded during the year; others are the result of long-term contracts negotiated in earlier years. For a substantial minority, negotiated or deferred increases are supplemented by adjustments under cost-of-living escalator clauses.

The relative importance of deferred and newly negotiated changes varies from year to year, since the number of workers covered by expiring long-term agreements is not uniform among years. Of the slightly more than 10.4 million workers under major agreements, at least 8.4 million are now covered by contracts that remain in effect for more than a year and that provide for deferred wage increases.<sup>1</sup> In addition, open-end contracts, under which negotiations are not concluded every year, cover about 700,000 workers.

During 1968, more workers covered by major collective bargaining agreements will receive deferred than negotiated increases. Deferred wage increases are scheduled to go into effect for about 4.6 million workers. For another 400,000 workers, contracts that expired in 1967 were still being renegotiated in late 1967; an unknown number of these will receive deferred increases some time during the year. About 4 million are included under contracts that either expire or can be reopened in 1968. The rest, about 1.2 of the 10.4 million, are working under agreements that are neither subject to reopening nor provide a wage increase during 1968.

In 1967, wage increases resulting from current negotiations and deferred wage increases each affected about the same number (approximately 4.5 million workers). About a million, including most telephone workers and some railroad non-operating workers, were covered by contracts that did not expire and did not provide the possibility of a pay increase in 1967.

More workers are eligible for cost-of-living escalator adjustments in 1968 than in any year since 1962, but for most of these workers a limit on the size of such adjustments has been established by their agreements.

Bargaining During the Year

Although collective bargaining activity will continue at high levels in 1968 and will affect several key industries, the number of workers covered by contracts that expire or are subject to

For this article, a deferred increase is defined here as one resulting from a contract negotiated prior to the year it goes into effect. Increases are usually spaced at 1-year intervals. Thus, a 3-year contract beginning in July 1967 typically provided deferred increases in July 1968 and 1969. Workers sometimes receive 2 increases or more within a year, notably in the construction industry.

Except in the last paragraph on page 5, and table 5, only changes in wage rates are discussed in this summary; changes in supplementary benefits are excluded.

Workers in the service and finance, insurance, and real estate industries were included for the first time in the data on deferred wage increases due in 1967. They are included in all tabulations for 1968. The number of workers in the newly added industries who are due to receive deferred increases in 1968 is only about 225,000.

reopening on wages will be below 1967 levels. Contracts will expire or be reopened for about 4.0 million workers in 1968 compared with approximately 4.6 million in 1967.

Of the workers who are covered by provisions for bargaining, about 2.8 million are under contracts that expire in 1968, and nearly 650,000 are covered by provisions for reopenings under contracts that expire in 1969 or later. Open-end contracts for another 550,000 workers—in railroads and coal mining—can be reopened in 1968. Shopcraft unions have already served notice of wage demands for about 275,000 workers.

In manufacturing, contracts for about 1.8 million workers expire or are subject to reopening this year. Collective bargaining will be dominated by negotiations on new contracts in basic steel and related industries (aluminum and metal fabrication), aerospace, and men's apparel. Agreements for most workers in shipbuilding, glass, and leather and leather products will also terminate. (Many leather workers' contracts will expire after they receive a deferred wage increase.) Many major agreements in the paper, chemical, and tobacco industries are subject to renegotiation. Most bargaining will take place in the second half of the year (table 1). Steel contracts expire the end of July; aerospace at that time or later. Contracts for about 80,000 workers in electrical products may be reopened on wages during the year.

Bargaining can take place in 1968 for about 2.1 million workers in nonmanufacturing industries; 1,050,000 under contracts that expire, 550,000 under open-end contracts with reopeners in 1968, and

Because of the lack of information on many contracts expiring late in 1967, estimates on the number of expirations and reopeners are incomplete. Unlike other tables in this article (except table 8), information in this table is based on agreements rather than bargaining situations (which may involve several agreements negotiated jointly).

<sup>1</sup> Includes only those situations for which information on expiration dates was available in early December 1967. Because of the lack of information on many contracts expiring late in 1967, estimates of the number of expirations in 1968 or later are incomplete. Includes 34 situations with 156,000 workers scheduled to expire in 1971 or later and 27 situations with 49,000 workers for which the termination date was unknown.

tions with 545,000 workers under open-end agreements that can be reopened in 1968 and 7 situations with 147,000 workers under open-end agreements that can be reopened in 1969. All of the open-end agreements are in railroads or mining.

550,000 under other contracts with reopeners. Contracts terminate in the spring for large numbers of construction workers and in the fall for Atlantic and gulf coast longshoremen. Telephone contracts for nearly 500,000 can be reopened on wages—the first in the spring and the last in the fall.

Most railroad operating unions have already served demands under reopeners for wage increases to be effective on January 1, 1968. Some nonoperating brotherhoods can also bargain under reopeners in 1968. The Railroad Clerks are free to bargain for changes to be effective the begining of the year, while some other nonoperating brotherhoods are free to negotiate under reopeners in the second half of the year after receiving a deferred wage increase on January 1. Any increase under railroad shopcraft employees' contracts can be effective no earlier than January 1, 1969, and hence their negotiations are considered here as part of the 1969 bargaining picture.

This summary of expiration provisions differs from those of previous years which had been based primarily on contracts actually on file with the Bureau of Labor Statistics, plus railroad and airline agreements on file with the National Mediation Board. The summary for 1968 and subsequent years supplements the earlier sources with information about other major contracts that have been concluded but not yet filed. Another change that has been made is to include reopenings under open-end contracts in the railroad and mining industries among those that will bargain (table 2). (In recent years, many of these contracts have been revised to specify a reopening date.) The 1968 data also differ from those for earlier years by the addition of agreements for government-owned utilities and recent increases in employment. On the other hand, contracts scheduled to expire on December 31 are now considered subject to renegotiation during the subsequent year; formerly they were counted as part of the bargaining picture for the current year.

The effect of these changes on the estimates of the number of workers affected by bargaining can be summarized in the following tabulation:

Scope of estimates	Subject to negotiation in—
	1967	1968
Contracts expiring during the year, excluding government-owned utilities, reopenings, and contracts not on file.....	3.1	2.7
Contracts expiring including government-owned utilities, plus those with reopening provisions	4.6	4.0

The addition of government-owned utilities raises the number covered by major contracts to 10.4 million from slightly more than 10.3 million.<sup>2</sup>

Deferred Increases

More workers are scheduled to receive deferred wage increases in 1968 than in any year since 1957. About 4.6 million workers<sup>3</sup> under major collective bargaining agreements will have their pay increased during 1968 as a result of negotiations concluded in 1967 or earlier.

1964.....	2.4	1958.....	4.0
1963.....	2.4	1957.....	5.0

<sup>1</sup> Data include approximately 225,000 workers in 1968 and 195,000 in 1967 in the service, finance, insurance and real estate industries, excluded from totals for earlier years.

<sup>2</sup> Includes 700,000 workers in 1967, 200,000 in 1966, 100,000 in 1964, and 115,000 in 1963 who received increases in these years but were not included in the annual articles for these years because their settlement terms became known after the articles were completed.

As indicated in the tabulation, this number is slightly above the 4.5 million who received deferred increases in 1967.

The 3.8 median percentage deferred wage increase scheduled to go into effect during 1968 is the highest on record.<sup>4</sup>

The fact that most contracts in the automobile, auto parts, farm and construction equipment, and trucking industries were negotiated in 1967 is the main reason more workers will receive deferred raises in 1968<sup>5</sup> than in 1967 (table 3). Other groups for whom 1968 wage increases have already been determined are workers in electrical manufacturing, rubber, meatpacking, and petroleum. Agreements for most women's apparel industries also specify wage increases to go into effect during 1968.

Some lumber and furniture, paper, and leather workers, as well as some in construction, wholesale and retail trade, and gas and electric utilities will also receive deferred adjustments.

The largest number of workers due deferred increases will receive adjustments of 3½ and under 4 percent or 14 but less than 15 cents in 1968, compared with 2 and under 2½ percent and 7 and under 9 cents in 1967. Increases of this size in 1968 will go to automobile workers.<sup>6</sup>

In construction, about 800,000 workers under major collective bargaining agreements will receive deferred increases in their scales in 1968. With most construction trades contracts on the west coast scheduled for renegotiation in 1968, this number is substantially below the approximately 935,000 workers who received deferred in-

<sup>3</sup> This estimate is a correction of the 9.5 million made in the December 1966 Monthly Labor Review.

<sup>4</sup> This estimate does not include those covered by settlements reached early in December 1967, when this article was prepared, or those that were concluded earlier but had not yet been reported to the Bureau of Labor Statistics. For settlements providing deferred increases to an additional 80,000 workers, see Addendum.

<sup>5</sup> Percentage increases were first computed in 1966, but in earlier years cents-per-hour medians were lower than those for 1968 and, consequently, the percentage medians would be smaller.

<sup>6</sup> Although bargaining on new contracts for workers at General Motors Corp. and American Motors Corp. had not been concluded in early December when this article was prepared, it was assumed that the provisions for deferred increases would be similar to those at Ford Motor Co. and Chrysler Corp. For this reason, these workers have been included as receiving the same deferred increases in 1968 as Ford workers. They also are included in the total with annual rather than quarterly escalator reviews.

<sup>7</sup> For automobile and electrical products workers, guaranteed cost-of-living escalator increases in 1968 (3 cents and 0.5 percent, respectively) were considered as part of the deferred wage increase.

creases in 1967. The most common wage scale increases in construction will average 4 to 4.5 percent.

As is customary in construction, most of the increases will go into effect during the first half of the year (table 4). Of the approximately 250,000 workers scheduled to receive increases in the second half, some 175,000 will also receive increases in the first 6 months.

Nearly all construction scale increases will be at least 10 cents and most will average 3 percent or more. In other industries, increases of these amounts will affect 78 and 84 percent, respectively. At least half of all construction workers will receive increases totaling 25 cents or more, compared with only 1.5 percent of the workers in other industries.

For the first time, information is available on the cost of deferred increases in wages and benefits. Based on collective bargaining contracts affecting 5,000 workers or more, this information indicates that the average increase in wage and

Cost-of-Living Escalation

With the relatively sharp increase in the Consumer Price Index during 1966 and 1967, there was a modest increase in the number of workers covered by major collective bargaining agreements with escalator clauses. The growth was somewhat slower in 1967 than in 1966 and, moreover, the trend toward establishing maximum limits on the increase in escalator allowances accelerated. During the year, such limits were established for the two largest groups of workers covered by escalator provisions, and the escalator adjustment for the automobile workers was changed from quarterly to annual.

The number of workers covered by cost-of-living escalator provisions at the end of 1967—about 2.25 million<sup>8</sup>—although higher than in any year since 1962, was still well below the peak levels reached in 1958 and 1959, as the following tabulation indicates:

	Number of workers (millions)		Number of workers (millions)
1968.....	2.5	1962.....	2.5

1963.....	1.85	1957.....	3.5

Adoption of new escalator clauses was concentrated in the metalworking industries. The largest group of workers affected was in the electrical products industry.

Almost all of the workers covered by provisions for cost-of-living escalator adjustments are also due deferred wage increases during 1968 (table 6). Included are employees of industries in which wage escalation is concentrated. The only major exception is in the aerospace industry, where most contracts expire during the year after either 2 or 3 escalator reviews.

While cost-of-living provisions are almost always limited to long-term contracts that specify wage increases for a period of more than a year, most workers are covered by long-term contracts that do not have a cost-of-living escalator provision. Of all workers due deferred wage increases in 1968, only about 36 percent will have escalator reviews. Among those who will receive a deferred wage increase but are not covered by escalation are nonoperating railroad employees, workers in construction, most food production (other than

<sup>7</sup> The difference between 3.8 for the median deferred increase and the 4.5 for the median deferred wage and benefit increases cannot be interpreted as due to larger changes in benefits than in wages considered alone. The estimate for wage and benefit changes is limited to contracts affecting 5,000 workers or more while that for wages alone includes all contracts affecting 1,000 workers or more.

<sup>8</sup> To these workers should be added at least 785,000 workers who are covered by smaller union agreements or are not unionized but are covered by provision for cost-of-living escalation. These include 415,000 production workers in nonunion and small union manufacturing plants and about 370,000 white-collar workers in establishments where unionized employees are covered by escalator clauses in agreements. Among the unorganized workers covered by cost-of-living escalation are about 22,000 employees of the State of Wisconsin whose salaries are adjusted on the basis of changes in the CPI.

meatpacking), women's apparel, rubber, and petroleum workers, and most of those in the service industries, electric and gas utilities, trade, lumber and furniture, paper, leather, and finance, insurance and real estate.

In 1968, a majority of the workers—at least 65 percent—covered by cost-of-living escalator clauses will have their allowance reviewed on an annual basis, with quarterly reviews in effect for about 500,000 workers, and even fewer having either monthly or semi-annual reviews. This will be the first year in which annual reviews have been more important than quarterly adjustments. Prior to the automobile settlements in late 1967, which substituted annual for quarterly adjustments, approximately 60 percent of all workers with cost-of-living escalator clauses received quarterly adjustments in their allowance. (See table 7.) Substitution of annual for more frequent cost-of-living escalator reviews has resulted in deferring the first review of the size of the cost-of-living allowance until the end of the first year or the beginning of the second year of the contract and, hence, reducing the number of reviews to two in a 3-year contract.

Collective bargaining in recent years has produced other changes in wage escalation formulas. The major development has been to limit the amount the allowance can be increased in a year or over the life of the contract. Limits on escalator allowances were established in basic steel and related agreements in 1960, but, with the abandonment of escalation in these contracts in 1962, the number of workers covered by limited escalation declined. At the beginning of 1966, contracts covering only 50,000 workers set an absolute maximum on escalator increases. The provisions for limits grew rapidly in 1966 and especially in 1967. As of January 1968, an estimated 1.5 million workers were covered by such limits.

Trucking agreements set a 4-cent annual maximum increase in the cost-of-living allowance. As a result of agreements in the automobile and related industries, two annual cost-of-living reviews with a maximum increase in the allowance in the second contract year of 8 cents and by the beginning of the final year of the contract of another 8 cents were substituted for a quarterly adjustment

<sup>1</sup> Three quarterly reviews of the cost-of-living allowance at American Motors Corp. and 2 reviews at other automobile companies resulted in increases of 5 cents and 2 cents, respectively, prior to contract expirations in the Fall. New 3-year agreements at Ford Motor Company and Chrysler Corp. changed the escalator review to annual from quarterly with the first review in 1968. General Motors Corp. and American Motors Corp. were still bargaining in mid-December 1967.

<sup>3</sup> Resulting from 3 quarterly reviews prior to contract expirations late in the year. A new 3-year agreement at Caterpillar Tractor Co. changed the escalator review to annual from quarterly with the first review in 1968. Other companies were still bargaining in mid-December 1967.

<sup>5</sup> The 1957 changes apply to employees of only a few firms; escalator clauses were not established at some others until 1958. By 1965, most companies had escalator clauses, including all the large firms on the Pacific Coast.

<sup>6</sup> A 3-cent increase was diverted into health and welfare funds; no wage increase was granted.

<sup>11</sup> A 3-cent increase was diverted toward a projected increase in the cost of insurance.

in the cost-of-living allowance, with no maximum limit. The parties reportedly agreed that if the CPI advances sufficiently to warrant a greater increase in the allowance under the previous formula, the 1970 negotiations would take this into account.

A number of the 1967 contracts contained other stipulations. Agreements for about 50,000 workers specify that only if the CPI rises enough to provide a cost-of-living escalator adjustment in excess of the deferred wage increase will there be any change in the allowance; some also specify that the Index must rise substantially—about 2.0 points—before the allowance will be adjusted. Whereas most agreements tie the change in the allowance to changes in the Index between single months, about 750,000 workers have clauses which base adjustments on changes in quarterly averages of the CPI.<sup>9</sup>

The national BLS-CPI continues to be the most widely used index for escalator clauses. Only about 70,000 workers, or approximately 3 percent of all workers with escalator clauses, have adjustments based on reviews of individual city indexes.

<sup>9</sup> Another important provision for escalation involves pensions of workers already retired under the Federal Civil Service Annuity Plan. Legislation passed in 1962 provided for annual adjustments in these pensions whenever the CPI rises by 3 percent for 3 consecutive months since the month on which the last adjustment was based.

ERRATA

The following corrections should be made in the above article: In the last sentence of paragraph 3 on page 1, about 1.4 (instead of 1.2) million workers are under agreements that are neither subject to reopening nor provide a wage increase in 1968.

The last sentence of paragraph 2 on page 2 should read, "Most operating unions and the clerks have already served notice of wage demands for about 275,000 workers."

The number of workers covered by cost-of-living escalator provisions for 1968 (tabulation at the bottom of page 6) should be 2.25, instead of 2.5 million.
