Preface

In this bulletin, the Bureau of Labor Statistics annually has assembled information on anticipated contract adjustments for the calendar year. This statistical information identifies major situations by company and union in which during the year, contracts will terminate, deferred wage increases will become due, changes in the Consumers Price Index will be reviewed, and contracts will reopen. Because of the Federal Government's regulation of wages and prices, these data take on added dimensions as timely indicators of some of the important movements that might be expected in the economy.

This bulletin combines the Bureau's annual wage calendar article, which appeared in the January 1972 issue of the Monthly Labor Review, and the Bureau's listing of major agreements which expire during the year. Each contract covers 1,000 workers or more. Virtually all of these agreements are on file in the Bureau's Division of Industrial Relations and are open to public inspection. Information for a few situations was taken from published sources.

Table 8 lists agreements scheduled to expire in 1972 by month and table 9 arranges them by industry. Users should refer to appendix A for a list of common abbreviations and to appendix B for codes used in identifying the entries by industry, State, union, and employer unit.

Table 10 lists 1972 contract reopenings (for wages, benefits, and working conditions) by month for selected collective bargaining agreements each covering 1,000 workers or more. This list is duplicated in part in table 7 for agreements covering 5,000 workers or more, in which wage reopenings, terminations, cost of living adjustments, and deferred wage increases are reported.

Expirations that were reported to the Bureau too late to be included in table 8 and 9 are listed in table 11.

This bulletin was prepared jointly in the Division of Trends in Employee Compensation and the Division of Industrial Relations by Michael E. Sparrough and Lena W. Bolton.

Wage Calendar, 1972

A RELATIVELY LIGHT collective bargaining schedule, smaller deferred wage increases, and the Pay Board's 5.5-percent restriction on wage and benefit increases are expected to hold down the overall size of wage increases going into effect during 1972. Bargaining activity will be light, since contracts covering only 2.8 million workers will expire or be reopened this year. (See tables 1 and 2.) Although more workers are scheduled to receive deferred wage increases this year than in the past 2 years, the average gain will be less than the record high of 1971. The number of workers covered by cost-of-living escalator clauses will be at an all-time high.

This article presents data on wage increases scheduled to become effective during 1972. Deferred increases resulting from bargaining concluded in earlier years and agreed upon prior to November 14, 1971, are to be allowed under Pay Board regulations, unless challenged by at least five members of the Board or by a party in interest. The Board's 5.5-percent restriction on wage and benefit increases applies to contracts negotiated on or after November 14, 1971.

In early December 1971, the Bureau of Labor Statistics had information on 2,022 contracts covering 9.4 million of the 10.6 million workers under all major collective bargaining agreements (those covering 1,000 workers or more<sup>1</sup>). This article is largely limited to data for these 9.4 million workers. The other 1.2 million workers were covered by agreements not yet expired, still being negotiated, or whose terms were not available.<sup>2</sup>

Deferred increases

Some 6.7 million workers will receive deferred wage increases averaging 6.1 percent in 1972, down from 7.8 percent last year.<sup>3</sup> As shown in table 3, the average size of the deferred increases scheduled for 1972 varies considerably, depending upon the industry affected and the presence or absence of a cost-of-living escalator provision. The average increase for contracts without escalators, covering 3.1 million workers, is 8.1 percent. For those with escalators, covering 3.6 million workers, the average scheduled increase is 4.5 percent, but the actual increase will be raised to the extent provided by the individual escalation formulas. Arbitrarily assuming a 3-percent rise in the Consumer Price Index for 1972, the resulting increase for this group would average 6.3 percent. On this assumption, the average increase for all the 6.7 million workers receiving deferred increases in 1972 would be 7.1 percent.

In the manufacturing sector, deferred increases average a moderate 4.4 percent. In nonmanufacturing, an 8.1-percent average gain largely reflects increases in the transportation and construction industries. About 573,000 workers in the contract construction industry are scheduled to receive an average increase of 79.2 cents in 1972, or 11.6 percent.<sup>4</sup> In transportation, workers will receive an increase averaging 48.2 cents, or 9.5 percent.

As can be seen from the following historical table, the number of workers receiving deferred increases in 1972 will be the largest of any year for which comparable data are available, except 1969:

NOTE: Data for 1966 and earlier years exclude the services, finance, insurance, and real estate industries.

Michael E. Sparrough, a labor economist in the Division of Trends in Employee Compensation, Bureau of Labor Statistics, prepared the text of this article. Lena W. Bolton, of the Division of Industrial Relations, prepared the detailed analysis of 1972 expiration, reopening, and wage-adjustment provisions contained in table 7.

Deferred increases scheduled for 1972 are most commonly found in the metalworking industry; workers in the automobile and steel industries are the largest groups covered. In the nonmanufacturing sector, deferred changes are most heavily concentrated in the transportation industry (mainly in trucking and railroads) and in communications, covering most telephone workers of the operating companies in the Bell System.

Of the 6.7 million workers receiving deferred increases, 3.5 million, or 51.9 percent, will receive their increases within the first half of the year (table 4). About 1.3 million of these workers will receive additional hikes in the second half of the year.

The growing popularity of fringe benefits, which now constitute 20 to 25 percent of total compensation, has led to study of these benefits in addition to wage hikes. When the cost of deferred benefit improvements is added to the wage gain, the average package increase in 1972 in agreements covering 5,000 workers or more will be 6.5 percent. (See table 5.) This compares with an increase of 8.3 percent in 1971.

Contract bargaining

Contracts scheduled to expire or be reopened during the year cover some 2.8 million workers, down considerably from the approximately 4.75 million workers under contracts expiring in both 1970 and 1971. Key industries in which bargaining will take place include construction, apparel, retail trade, services, transportation equipment, and food. Unlike

NOTE: Because of rounding, sums of individual items may not equal totals.

1970, when settlements were concluded in the automobile and trucking industries, or 1971, when agreements were reached in steel and communication industries, no particular industrial sector (except construction) seems likely to dominate bargaining in 1972.

Of the 9.4 million workers whose contracts have been studied, only 40,000 are covered by agreements that extend through 1972 but do not provide for specific deferred increases or unconditional wage reopenings. However, some of these workers may, in fact, be affected by negotiated wage increases. For example, some workers in the Southern textile industry come under contracts that do not necessarily contain specific wage reopening provisions but typically are reopened after the nonunion sector of the industry raises wages. In some industries, a rise in the Consumer Price Index may trigger wage negotiations. This type of reopening provision covers about 317,000 workers; primarily in the ladies' apparel industry. Also, while the normal cycle of bargaining in recent years has generally been for 3-year agreements, there has been some indication of a possible trend toward shorter contract durations.

Cost-of-living clauses

More workers will be covered by cost-of-living escalator clauses in 1972 than in any prior year. The increase in coverage from 3 million workers in 1971 to 4.3 million<sup>5</sup> in 1972 is mainly attributable to 1971 settlements in the steel industry, where such clauses were reinstated after the parties had agreed to drop them in 1962 (table 6), and in the communications industry, where such clauses were incorporated for the first time. Prior contracts for workers in these two industries were negotiated in 1968, and workers had seen their wage gains in those agreements eroded by subsequent increases in the cost-of-living. The following historical table illustrates the increasing emphasis placed on such provisions, reflecting more than a 100-percent increase since 1966 in the number of workers covered:

January	Workers (in millions)	January	Workers (in millions)

Not only has the number of workers covered by formal escalator clauses increased, but the number affected by normal reviews in 1972 will increase sharply over 1971. In 1972, some 2.0 million of the 4.3 million covered by formal escalation will come under annual reviews, while 1.7 million will be reviewed quarterly, 44,000 semiannually, and 8,000 monthly. (About 31,000 will not have a review during the year.) Further, 89,000 will have minimum guarantees and maximum limits on their reviews, 1.0 million maximums only, and 100,000 minimums only. In this article, guaranteed minimum escalator adjustments are treated as deferred increases—workers receiving a 10-cent deferred plus a 3-cent cost-of-living minimum are considered to have received a 13-cent deferred increase.

Among the major industries where cost-of-living reviews will take place in 1972 are the following: (1) The steel industry, where contracts will be subject to an initial review in August, with quarterly reviews thereafter, and with no minimum guarantees or maximum limits for 1972;<sup>6</sup> (2) in the communications industry, where there will be an annual review in July, with no provision for minimum guarantees or maximum limits; (3) the automobile industry, where there will be quarterly reviews starting in March, with no minimum guarantees or maximum limits; (4) the trucking industry, where there will be

during the entire year (excludes minimum guarantees).

NOTE: X indicates a cost-of-living escalator review took place during the year. O indicates a cost-of-living clause was in effect, but no review took place during the year. Dashes indicate no cost-of-living provision was in effect during the year.

annual reviews in July, with no minimum guarantee provisions, but an 8-cent hourly maximum limit for local cartage drivers and 2 mills per mile for over-the-road drivers; and (5) the electrical equipment industry (General Electric and Westinghouse, for example), where there will be annual reviews in October and November, respectively, with no minimum guarantees and an 8-cent maximum limit.

Of the 6.7 million workers receiving deferred increases in 1972, 3.6 million are covered by escalator clauses. With the exception of 73,000 workers tied to the Bureau of Labor Statistics city indexes, the 3.6 million workers are under clauses tied to the national BLS Consumer Price Index.

Provisions in selected contracts

Table 7 (pp. 9-14) lists 124 selected bargaining agreements, each affecting 5,000 workers or more in a broad range of industries, excluding construction. These agreements were chosen as representative of deferred increases, contract expirations, wage reopenings, or cost-of-living reviews in 1972. □

—FOOTNOTES—

<sup>1</sup> These agreements include multiplant or multifirm agreements covering 1,000 workers or more, even though each individual unit is smaller.

<sup>2</sup> Included in this group were 290,000 workers in the construction industry whose contracts had expired during the year but whose status was unknown at the time this article was written. Also, settlements had not been concluded for 165,000 workers in the aerospace industry, or for 75,000 workers in longshoring, whose contracts had expired in 1971. Settlements providing deferred increases for an additional 35,000 workers, primarily in the metalworking industry, were reported too late to be included in the tables.

<sup>4</sup> Some 213,000 of these construction workers will receive deferred increases under settlements in which the parties agreed to a total wage and benefit package, with the eventual allocation between wages and benefits subject to subsequent determination by the union. Since the eventual division was not known at the time this article was written, the entire amount was treated as a wage hike. For example, a 75-cent wage and benefit package negotiated in 1970 and scheduled to go into effect in July 1972 was treated as a 75-cent deferred wage hike for July.

<sup>5</sup> To these workers should be added some 425,000 production workers in nonunion and small union manufacturing plants. (Comparable data for workers in nonunion and small union non-manufacturing establishments are not available.) The 4.3 million includes workers in the aerospace industry, where agreements had not been concluded at the time this article was written. It was assumed that escalator clauses would be continued in this industry. The pensions of nearly 1.85 million retired military and Federal Civil Service employees and survivors are adjusted if the Consumer Price Index rises by 3 percent for 3 consecutive months. In addition, some 650,000 postal employees also will come under a cost-of-living provision, with an adjustment scheduled for July 1972.

<sup>4</sup> Refers to the date the contract is to go into effect, not the date of signing. Where a contract has been amended or modified and the original termination date extended, the effective date of the changes becomes the new effective date of the agreement.

For purposes of this listing, the expiration is the formal termination date established by the agreement. In general, it is the earliest date on which termination of the contract could be effective, except for special provisions for termination as in the case of disagreement arising out of wage reopening.

Many agreements provide for automatic renewal at the expiration date unless notice of termination is given. The Labor Management Relations Act of 1947 requires that a party to an agreement desiring to terminate or modify it shall serve written notice upon the other party 60 days prior to the expiration date.

<sup>5</sup> Date shown indicates the month in which adjustment is to be made, not the month of the Consumer Price Index on which adjustment is based.

<sup>7</sup> According to a newspaper report, workers in Dayton, Ohio, Frigidaire Division plants have agreed to extend the contract to May 1974, to forgo deferred increases in 1971 and 1972, and to waive cost-of-living increases that come due during the life of the current contract.

<sup>8</sup> Agreement has not yet been ratified by the union.

<sup>9</sup> Same that Bloomingdale Brothers will receive on Mar. 1, 1972, as a result of negotiations involving a contract due to terminate on Feb. 29, 1972.
