REVIEW OF JANUARY.

After the panic and upheaval in the financial markets during December, a period of comparative quiet developed in January. This is a usual result at such a period. The shock over, restoration of confidence necessarily proceeds slowly. Conservative people like to measure the significance and importance of the event—to see if the full adverse effects have been felt, or whether the troubles already experienced are simply a prelude to a further and more extended and general disaster. In this case nothing has occurred to suggest cause for the slightest uneasiness, but on the contrary all the indications and developments have favored the theory that the trouble was simply the result of imprudent and excessive speculation—that trade and industrial conditions remain inherently strong and sound.

As far as concerns the causes or influences that served to disclose the weakness in the speculative fabric, these have disappeared as factors in the situation. The Transvaal war, for the time being at least, has ceased to have much influence. The money situation, both in the United States and in Europe, has changed altogether, passing from stringency to ease, thus removing all cause for anxiety on that score. Until the latter part of the month the developments in the Anglo-Boer conflict appeared to be favorable to the British forces, making the prospect to that extent correspondingly more assuring. A determined attempt on the part of the Boers the early part of the month to reduce Ladysmith failed, owing to the stubborn resistance of Gen. White, and the Boers were finally compelled to abandon the effort after having sustained, it is believed, heavy losses. Later the news came that Gen. Buller was making an aggressive forward movement, and had succeeded in crossing the Tugela River at two points, the object of course being the relief of Ladysmith. The British forces found the task no easy one, but seemed to be making satisfactory, if slow, progress. On Tuesday, January 23, a cablegram from Gen. Buller was published saying that Gen. Warren (who had command of the division assigned to press forward) would that night undertake to occupy Spion Kop, an important strategic point in the midst of the Boer position. Intense anxiety prevailed to know the result of this move.

It was not until Thursday morning, the 25th, that news came from Gen. Buller, in a dispatch sent the previous night, that Gen. Warren had gained his object and occupied Spion Kop. Gen. Buller stated that the small garrison there had been taken by surprise, but added that Gen. Warren had held the Kop all of Wednesday, notwithstanding a raking shell fire from the Boers. This relieved anxiety, but our stock market made hardly any response to the news. It had been dull but strong before. It retained the same characteristics, there being neither buoyancy nor increase of activity as the result of what seemed the most encouraging advices received in a long while. Friday morning a dispatch from Gen. Buller, sent the previous day, was published announcing that Gen. Warren, after taking Spion Kop Tuesday night, had abandoned it Wednesday. The stock market received this news with the same indifference as the other. Thereafter most alarming rumors were current, and on Monday, January 29, intelligence was received that the British army had met with a disastrous reverse and had been obliged again to retreat across the Tugela River. Consols in London dropped over a point as a result, but our markets remained undisturbed, showing that the war was no longer looked upon as an important factor.

The monetary situation abroad, as already stated, changed entirely. The 1st of January passed without serious trouble at any of the foreign financial centres, and thereafter, as usually happens at that season of the year, the money market worked easier and rates sharply declined. The bullion holdings of the Bank of England increased from £29,342,367 December 28 to £35,240,790 January 25, £2,877,000 of the gain representing gold imported from the United States and £2,943,000 gold received from the interior of Great Britain. The Bank of England reduced its minimum rate of discount from 6 per cent to 5 per cent on the 11th, to 4½ per cent on the 18th and to 4 per cent on the 25th. The Bank of Germany put its rate down from 7 per cent to 6 per cent on the 11th and to 5½ per cent on the 27th, while the Bank of France reduced from 4½ per cent to 4 on the 11th and to 3½ per cent on the 25th. The Bank of the Netherlands lowered its rate from 5 to 4½ per cent on the 16th and to 4 on the 29th, and the Bank of Belgium and the Bank of Antwerp from 5 to 4½ on the 25th. Thus there was a general easing off, which is also reflected in the sharp decline in the open market rates at all the leading centres. At London the unofficial rate January 31 was 3½@3¾ per cent against 6¼@6½ per cent December 29, at Berlin and Frankfort 4 against 6@6¼ per cent, and at Paris 3½ per cent against 4½ per cent.

At this centre the change in the money market was no less pronounced. There was a large return flow of currency from the interior, while at the same time the Treasury Department, in accordance with the policy begun in December, transferred further amounts to the depositary banks. The money holdings of the New York City Clearing House banks increased from $196,179,800 December 30 to $224,409,500 January 27, and the surplus reserve rose from $11,168,075 to $29,277,975. Deposits increased from $740,046,900 to $780,526,100, and loans from $673,089,400 to $688,332,800. As a consequence money rates for all classes of loans sharply declined, as will be seen by the following.

The stock market, while at first irregular, gradually gained strength, but transactions were very limited, though at the close there was some revival of activity notwithstanding the bad news from Africa. The contrast is especially marked with January of last year, when such an unrestrained speculation prevailed and the dealings were the largest ever recorded. Stock sales were only 9,843,716 shares in January this year, against 24,251,983 shares in January, 1899. New York Central displayed great strength and sharply advanced, while Third Avenue, on the acceptance of a bid for the Rapid Transit Road and the company's large floating debt, suffered a severe break. The course of the industrial shares was variable, Sugar stock declining on the continuance of the war with the independent refiners and the developments at the company's annual meeting. On the 31st Tunstall & Co. failed; they had large operations in this stock.

A decidedly easier tone developed in the foreign exchange market, a condition which continued until towards the latter part of the month. This statement may seem at variance with the fact that the price of 60-day bills on the 31st at 4 84@4 84½ was 2½ cents higher than the price of the same class of bills at the close of December. But that advance represents simply conformity to the lower discount rates in London. If we take the price of cable transfers as the standard, we find that at 4 88@4 88½ there has been a decline of fully ¾ cent per pound. In the case of sight bills the figure is 4 87½@4 87¾ January 31, against 4 87¼@4 87½ on Friday, December 29. The decline in money on the other side was the principal influence affecting the market all through the month; almost daily sterling figures were adjusted to meet the fall in discounts in London. This fall, as noted above, was quite considerable, and necessarily involved a narrowing of the difference between the price of sixty day sterling bills and that for sight bills and cable transfers. Generally the narrowing was accomplished by an advance in sixty day bills, but occasionally by a drop in sight bills, and sometimes by both. Commercial bills were not in overabundant supply, the cotton export movement remaining restricted by reason of the short crop and the rise in prices. There was some demand for sterling to remit for American securities sold here for European account. Cable transfers touched the highest figure of the month, namely 4 88¾@4 89, on the 4th and sight bills on the 5th at 4 87¾@4 88. These figures permitted the continuance of the export movement of gold and $150,000 was shipped to London on the 4th and $3,750,000 on the 6th. After that, however, rates declined, while it was also announced that the Bank of England would no longer make advances at the rate of 2½ per cent per annum on gold in transit from New York, as it had previously been doing. A withdrawal of $1,000,000 gold on the 11th for shipment to Buenos Ayres on London account ended the movement.
