REVIEW OF OCTOBER.

The month just past will always be memorable for the financial catastrophe which overwhelmed the country, bringing a suspension of numerous financial institutions, causing a run on many banks and trust companies, and compelling the Associated Banks in New York and in many other cities throughout the country to resort to the issue of Clearing-House certificates. The distrust and lack of confidence which wrought this state of affairs had their origin long ago. The more immediate causes for the upheaval deserve narration here.

When the month opened the President was on his trip down the Mississippi River. It will be recalled that even in September the public mind was apprehensive with regard to the results of this trip. The President made several speeches en route and was entirely unguarded in his utterances. Other adverse developments kept piling up one after another. The copper trade was a seat of great disturbance. After the tremendous previous drop there came still further declines in the metal until the quotation got down to 12 cents, as against 26 cents only about six months previously. There were, too, multiplying evidences of a reaction in the iron and steel trades and of recession in general business. In the dry goods trade one premonition which was considered highly significant was the action of Marshall Field & Co. of Chicago in announcing on the 14th a reduction of from 9 to 15% in the prices of prominent lines of bleached and other cotton fabrics. The Agricultural Bureau report, issued the 10th of the month, likewise had some influence, showing a falling off in the grain harvest of 1907 as compared with the extraordinary yield in 1906. Besides this, the long continued decline in American securities had weakened many holders of such securities abroad, and had also created a feeling of distrust in Europe concerning American properties; the two combined led to very extensive selling in our market on foreign account, very naturally causing further very severe breaks here. About the middle of the month, too, the passing of their dividends by two Western traction properties, namely the Detroit United Railways Co. and the Toledo Rwy. & Light Co., caused a semi-panic on the Montreal Stock Exchange.

The further decline in copper prices brought with it utter collapse in all copper securities, including, of course, the shares of the United Copper Co., with which F. Augustus Heinze was so prominently identified. The Heinzes appear to have been interested in a market pool in these shares, and thought they detected selling on the part of some of the members of the pool. Thereupon the firm of Otto Heinze & Co. undertook to corner the stock, and to that end stopped the transfer of a certain block of the stock on the books of the company. The effort proved unsuccessful. The price was run up to 60 but quickly tumbled again. In the resulting collapse, the Stock Exchange house of Gross & Kleeberg was forced to the wall, owing to the refusal of Otto Heinze & Co. to take up the stock bought for their account. Later, Otto Heinze & Co. themselves suspended. F. Augustus Heinze had earlier in the year purchased a large interest in the Mercantile National Bank of this city and had been elected its President. It soon developed that this bank had become involved in the downfall of the Heinzes and the collapse of the copper properties. Mr. Heinze was forced to resign. This was on the 17th. After an examination the same day by the Clearing-House Committee, the bank was declared entirely solvent, and the Clearing-House decided to stand by the institution and to supply the needful amount of cash to carry it through. The seriousness of the copper situation was further emphasized by the action of the Amalgamated Copper Company the same day in reducing its quarterly dividend from 2% to 1%.

After the resignation of Mr. Heinze, the presidency of the Mercantile National was offered to Comptroller of the Currency Ridgely. He took the offer under consideration but declined it on Saturday the 19th. On that day and on Sunday the 20th the Clearing House made an examination of other banks. The National Bank of North America and the New Amsterdam National Bank were particularly under investigation, these being banks with which Charles W. Morse, the steamship man, who had been associated with Mr. Heinze in the Mercantile National, had become closely connected. The Clearing House found these banks solvent and determined to help them over. But as a preliminary it was considered essential that Mr. Morse should sever his connection with all the banking institutions in which he had an interest, and it was also determined that Edward R. Thomas and Orlando F. Thomas should pursue the same course. This was done with the view to restoring confidence in the local banking situation. One effect, however, was to make the public suspicious concerning any institution with which any of these men had had any connection, no matter how remote. After this there came in rapid succession the series of events with which our readers are so familiar—the suspension Tuesday, Oct. 22, of the Knickerbocker Trust and the assignment of the Stock Exchange firm of Mayer & Co., the run Wednesday and succeeding days on the Trust Company of America, with the appointment of receivers for the different Westinghouse concerns at Pittsburgh, and the closing of the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange; the runs Thursday on various banks and trust companies in the city and the suspension of a number of uptown banks, followed Friday by the closing of the Union Trust Co. of Providence, R. I., and the suspension of several other institutions here and in Brooklyn.

On this latter day the disturbance appears to have reached its height, thanks to the efforts put forth by Mr. J. P. Morgan and the banking and financial interests of the city, aided by the action of Secretary Cortelyou. Full details of what was done were given in the "Chronicle" of Oct. 26, pages 1058 to 1062. On Saturday, Oct. 26, the final steps in the measures of relief devised were taken. The New York Clearing House decided to issue Clearing-House certificates, and the next week the Clearing Houses at other centres took similar action. Finally enormous engagements of gold for import were made, aggregating over $24,000,000. No attempt was made by the European banks to obstruct the flow of gold this way, but as a matter of protection the Bank of Germany raised its rate of discount from 5½% to 6½% and the Bank of England from 4½% to 5½%. A recovery in the price of copper to 15 cents was a favorable feature as the month closed.

It is needless to say that the money market was disturbed as has not been the case for years. On call money commanded as high as 100@125%, and often borrowers were fortunate in being able to obtain accommodation even at these figures. While the strain was greatest, leading financial interests headed by Mr. J. P. Morgan came to the rescue several times. Two money pools, one for $25,000,000 and another for $10,000,000, were among the month's events, besides which John D. Rockefeller is also understood to have placed $10,000,000 or more at the market's disposal, and assistance was extended from other sources.

As to the stock market, prices dropped not only to the lowest figures of 1907, but the lowest in a long term of years: There was practically no market for either stocks or bonds, and it has been possible to effect sales only at stupendous concessions. This will account for the fact that in our general quotations on subsequent pages of this publication large numbers of securities are left without any quotation. Even where prices are given, they should be accepted with reserve, as in the present situation the market is subject to wide and erratic fluctuations, and bond houses cannot guarantee to furnish quotations that would hold good for even twenty-four hours.

The foreign exchange market was of course utterly demoralized and the drop in rates led to the extensive gold engagements made during and after the panic.
