REVIEW OF JULY.

Influences of a disturbing nature predominated during July. The adverse developments included events of both domestic and foreign origin. The latter, of course, proved unsettling at the European centres, too.

At the beginning of the month much concern was felt regarding the crop situation. Intense heat prevailed all over the United States and many of the principal crop-growing sections of the country also suffered from long-continued drought. A remarkable feature was that the extremely high temperatures extended to practically all parts of the country, and for nearly two weeks of the month no relief appeared in sight. Here in New York the Weather Bureau reported a maximum of 98 on July 3, and for many consecutive days the high point was 90 or above, while at Chicago over 100 was registered, and from numerous points of the West and South the records showed even higher temperatures. After the first two weeks a sharp drop in temperatures occurred, and further relief came in very general rains over the West and Southwest. There can be no doubt, however, that some of the early damage was beyond repair. Unfortunately, too, it appeared from the monthly crop report of the Government, issued July 10, and recording the agricultural condition at the beginning of July, that serious impairment of all the leading crops (excepting only cotton) had already occurred in June. The latter half of July there was no repetition of the severe heat for which the first half of the month will always remain memorable; indeed, the thermometer now dropped very low. In the northern peninsula of Michigan the unusual experience of snow in July was encountered. Chicago on July 4 and 5 reported a maximum temperature of 102, while on July 24 the thermometer got down to 57.

With the agricultural prospect thus brightening again, a more cheerful tone would undoubtedly have pervaded business except for unfavorable happenings elsewhere. Late on July 24 the Inter-State Commerce Commission handed down another decision in the long-standing cases involving rates to Spokane, Reno, Salt Lake City and other points in what is known as inter-mountain territory, in their relation to Pacific Coast rates. It has long been the practice to make rates from Eastern points of origin to these Pacific terminals lower than the charge to intermediate points, like Spokane, Reno and Salt Lake City, since the Coast cities have the benefit of water competition. The custom has been to increase the Coast rate by the amount of the local charge back to the interior point, though often there would be important modifications of this rule—the addition in the case of Spokane, for example, having been very much less than what would be called for by this rule. In a ruling in the matter, announced in July of the previous year, the Inter-State Commerce Commission indicated its dissatisfaction with the practice of charging more to intermediate points than to far-distant points, and presented a very lengthy schedule of commodity rates for adoption by the trans-continental lines, intended to lower the differences between the two sets of places. No order, however, was then made, and, owing to the intricacies of the matter and the opposition which the proposed schedules evoked both from the railroads and from the localities which would be adversely affected, and the further fact that the amended Inter-State Commerce law of 1910 had gone into effect, giving the Commission much wider latitude in applying what is known as the "long-and-short-haul" clause, the Commission took the whole question under re-consideration, and now announced its final conclusions.

As an indication of how the amended short-haul clause was to be interpreted, the new ruling was as important as its application to the particular cases under review, from which the reason for the importance attached to it can be judged. By the 1910 amendment the words "under substantially similar circumstances and conditions," in the prohibition forbidding carriers from charging any greater compensation for a shorter than for a longer distance over the same line and in the same direction, was stricken out, and it was made illegal to charge more to an intermediate point than to a far-distant point except with the permission of the Commission. Commissioner Lane, who wrote one of the two opinions in the cases, indicated the view entertained by the Commission as to how the law must now be construed by saying: "The intendment of the law is to make its prohibition of the higher rate for the shorter haul a rule of well-nigh universal application, from which this Commission may deviate only in special cases and then to meet transportation circumstances which are beyond the carrier's control."

Applying this view to the question of Pacific Coast rates, an entirely new basis of rate-making was now announced, involving more important departures from the old schedules than proposed twelve months before.

Accounts regarding the growing cotton crop were extremely favorable all through the month, except that at the very beginning some fears were expressed regarding the effect of extremely high temperatures in Texas and Oklahoma. These fears were entirely relieved when the drought was broken by general and heavy rains. All the indications pointed—barring future adverse developments—to a crop of unusual dimensions. This situation was reflected in a sharp break in prices, middling upland cotton in this market dropping from 14.85 cts. July 5 to 12.50 cts. July 31. Some sharp cuts in the prices of cotton goods were made the latter part of the month, and although this quickened trade in special lines of goods, its general effect was to increase hesitation among buyers. Print cloths at Fall River remained at 3 $\frac{5}{8}$  cts.

In the grain markets the devastating heat had the effect of engendering a wild speculation for higher prices in the early part of the month. This was followed, however, by a downward reaction the latter part on more favorable weather. The monthly report of the Agricultural Department at Washington, issued July 10, made the condition of winter wheat July 1 only 76.8, against 80.4 June 1; of spring wheat 73.8, against 94.6, and of oats only 68.8, against 85.7, while the condition of corn was put at 80.1, against 85.4 at the corresponding date last year. The condition of hay was given as only 64.9, against 76.8 on June 1 1911 and 80.2 July 1 last year. This was before the further damage from the extremely high temperatures in July. September corn at Chicago rose from 61 $\frac{1}{2}$  cts. July 1 to 67 $\frac{3}{4}$  cts. July 13, but closed July 31 at 63 $\frac{5}{8}$  cts. September oats at Chicago advanced from 44 $\frac{1}{4}$  July 1 to 47 $\frac{1}{2}$  cts. July 13, but got down to 39 $\frac{1}{8}$  cts. July 26, with the close

July 31 40 $\frac{3}{8}$  cts. September wheat closed July 31 at the same figure as June 30—89 $\frac{3}{4}$  cts., but in the meantime had been up to 92 $\frac{1}{2}$  cts. July 8 and down to 86 $\frac{3}{4}$  cts. July 19.

The disquieting elements in the situation abroad had reference to the contest between the British House of Commons and the House of Lords with regard to the Parliamentary Veto Bill, intended to deprive the Lords of a considerable portion of their legislative functions, and the tension which developed between France and Germany in relation to Moroccan affairs. The House of Lords amended the Parliamentary Veto Bill as it came from the Commons in a number of important particulars, one of the principal changes being the insertion of a proviso that no measure affecting the establishing of a national Parliament or a body with legislative powers in any part of the Kingdom, or which in the judgment of a joint committee of the two Houses raises an issue of great gravity, should receive Royal assent until it had been submitted to the referendum. In that form the Veto Bill passed the Lords by 253 votes to 46. Premier Asquith promptly let it be known that none of these amendments would be tolerated; that when the Bill was returned to the Commons, the latter would promptly disagree with the amendments and should the Lords insist on their position an appeal would be made to the King on behalf of the Government. In a note to Mr. Balfour, the leader of the Opposition, Mr. Asquith let it be known that the King would consider it his duty to act on the advice of the Ministry and create a sufficient number of new peers to overcome the adverse majority in the Lords.

This announcement occasioned great bitterness of feeling on the part of the Unionists and Conservatives arrayed in opposition to the Government. Accordingly, when Parliament convened on Monday, July 24, turbulent scenes were enacted and there was an exhibition of political rancor the like of which has rarely been witnessed in England. The Unionists created such an uproar when the Prime Minister sought to speak on the Veto Bill, and kept up the din so long, that the Speaker of the House for the first time in history was obliged summarily to adjourn the session. For three-quarters of an hour Mr. Asquith strove to make himself heard, but each time he attempted to speak he was greeted with yells of "Traitor," "Redmond" (meaning the Irish leader) and "American dollars." He finally abandoned the attempt and declared he would simply state the conclusions at which the Government had arrived. What these conclusions were could not be heard. Mr. Asquith also took the unusual course of furnishing to the newspapers a summary of the speech he had been prevented from delivering.

In the meantime Moroccan matters were fast approaching a critical stage and the latter part of the month the anxiety in connection therewith overshadowed that regarding the home political situation. At this period British consols, which had several times been making new low records, eventually fell to 77 $\frac{3}{4}$ , the lowest point reached in eighty years, and insurance was taken out with the Lloyds against Anglo-German war risks.

Here in the United States an important event was the passage by the Senate of the Canadian Reciprocity Bill. Numerous amendments had been offered in the hope that thereby the bill might assume such a form that the President would perforce feel obliged to veto it. All these amendments, however, were rejected, the most of them by overwhelming majorities. The bill was finally passed in the precise form in which it came from the House, by a vote of 53 to 27. The President's signature was attached July 26.

The Stock Exchange had many adverse circumstances to contend with. At the beginning of the month the torrid weather conditions and drought, with daily accruing damage to the crops, caused a downward drift. On July 25 after the decision of the Inter-State Commerce Commission in the matter of Pacific Coast rates, prices again weakened, though there was no such collapse in prices as occurred twelve months before, when the Commission announced its adverse decision in these same cases. Foreign liquidation in American securities also came in as an unfavorable influence. On the whole, however, the stock market may be said to have held up well against a series of untoward developments which, under other conditions of the market, would undoubtedly have precipitated a serious break.

VOLUME OF BUSINESS ON THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

Table with columns for Month of July, 1911, 1910, 1909, 1908. Rows include Stock sales, Bond sales, and Total bd. sales.

Money holdings and surplus reserves of the New York Clearing-House banks were heavily reduced during July because of the large payments into the U. S. Treasury on account of the $50,000,000 Panama bond flotation of the previous month. As a consequence the quotation for six-months loans was marked up to 3 1/8% @ 4% by the end of the month. Call loans remained on the same low basis as before.

STATE AND MUNICIPAL BONDS.

It is not the custom in quoting municipal bonds to include accrued interest in the price given. Hence this accrued interest must in all cases be added on. There are a very few instances which form exceptions to the rule—that is, where the prices given are flat prices, the accrued interest having been taken into account in making them. These are indicated by a special mark, thus (f).

The figures in the column "to net" indicate the basis on which the securities sell or the interest rate which the securities, if held to maturity, will net to the purchaser at the present market price.
