Trade in 2 for 1... and come out ahead on the deal!

Many banks have found that one Recordak Reliant 500 Microfilmer with an additional film unit easily outperforms two or more older microfilmers... handles more work, increases efficiency, cuts costs.

If you now have a new Reliant 500 in your bank and an older microfilmer, you can make the same economies by trading in this older machine for an extra film unit.

With a Reliant 500 and extra film units, two or more departments can do their microfilming with the same machine. It takes only a second to slip out the original film unit... and substitute another. This way each department’s work is on separate film rolls just as if separate microfilmers had been used.

Speeds up all operations

This new Recordak Reliant 500 Microfilmer photographs up to 500 items a minute—one or both sides, and it indexes the film record. Also, with an accessory endorser, it endorses or cancels as it microfilms checks in one automatic operation.

Contact your local Recordak representative, or write for complete details. Recordak Corporation, Dept. A-4, 770 Broadway, New York 3, N.Y.

Christmas Club Reports Record Savings of $1,573,861,000

AN ALL-TIME record of $1,573,861,000 in Christmas Club savings has been reported for 1962 by Edward F. Dorset, president of Christmas Club Corporation, New York.

The record was accomplished by 13,711,000 members of Christmas Club in some 9,000 financial institutions. The average member saved $115 each to total this huge Christmas bonanza.

This is the 11th year that club disbursements have exceeded $1 billion, according to Christmas Club a Corporation surveys, and the second year that the total has been over a billion and a half dollars, Mr. Dorset said.

The 1962 total represents Christmas savings in all 50 states with New York leading, followed by Pennsylvania, New Jersey and California.

Surveys by Christmas Club a Corporation show that the total will be used in the following ways:

Christmas Purchases—30 per cent $ 472,158,300
Savings and Investment for Future Use—42 per cent $61,021,620
Taxes—17 per cent $207,556,370
Year-end Bills—5 per cent $78,893,050
Miscellaneous—6 per cent $94,431,060

$1,573,861,000

"Christmas Club has become a part of the American way of life," said Mr. Dorset. "It's our proof that in their own small way every man and woman can be a capitalist and decide for themselves what they will save and how they will use their savings."

Burroughs Earnings Up

Burroughs Corporation has reported revenue for the nine months ending September 30 of $303,500,000, compared with $282,318,000 for the same period of 1961. Net earnings were $5,869,000 against $5,500,000 last year. Based on the average shares outstanding, net earnings were 88 cents per share versus 83 cents in 1961.

Suggests Tax Cut

A more favorable environment for business profits is the key to the nation's economic growth, David M. Kennedy, chairman of Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Company, Chicago, said recently.

Mr. Kennedy expressed confidence in the nation's long-term growth, but stressed that the only way such growth can be obtained is to assure that corporate profits grow with the economy.

From a psychological point of view, he said, "hoped-for cuts in corporate tax rates may be one of the most important factors toward speeding up growth of the economy."

"With pre-tax corporate profits running at better than a $50 billion annual rate, a cut of five percentage points would add more than $2.5 billion to the funds which corporations would have available either to pay out in dividends or to reinvest in business."

Walter J. Hein

Walter J. Hein, veteran St. Louis banker and civic leader, died at 3:40 p.m., October 25, at Barnes Hospital, St. Louis, after a short illness, of cerebral thrombosis. He was 70 years old.

OUT OF REMODELING

For the banker whose growth is blocked by outmoded, inefficient quarters, and who still wants to stay in his present location, the rewards from modernization can be great. But great risks can also be present... particularly in renovating older buildings. Their weathered faces too often hide a hornet's nest of construction problems. The answer:

Cut Risk with Specialized Financial Design

CONTINENTAL ILLINOIS NATIONAL BANK

AND TRUST COMPANY OF CHICAGO

Northwestern Banker, November, 1962
Banking in the United States has been developed and grown great under the dual system.

There are now some individuals, including the new Comptroller of the Currency, who think that national banks should not be governed by state laws and should be allowed to establish branches of national banks even in states where branch banking is illegal. The Comptroller refers to such laws as “unhealthy state statutes.” We disagree with the Comptroller on this and we know you do also, Mr. Myers.

“The fundamental concept of American banking” as you have expressed it, “is the independent private institutions, locally owned and controlled and deriving their business largely from the people of their communities and their commercial and industrial enterprises. The patterns for banking operations, therefore, must be adapted to the requirements of the several states so that the economy of each shall have banking services suited to its special needs. There is no urgent or compelling need for nation-wide uniformity. On the contrary, the diverse requirements of the states make any attempt at such uniformity unrealistic and futile.”

The dual banking system does not exist simply to protect “state control of branching of national banks” as the Comptroller has implied.

If the Comptroller wishes to keep the dual system completely separate, then he should not be a member ex officio of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation since it exercises power directly over state banks.

Let’s not increase any further a centralization of “power in Washington” over our present dual banking system which has proven its success in developing our American economy and which is still the envy of the world.

Dear Robert L. Myers, Jr.:

Secretary of Banking of Pennsylvania, Harrisburg.

In your 1962 Savings Survey among Commercial Banks you emphasized these points:

1. The importance of savings to commercial banks.
2. The rate of interest being paid by banks of various size.
3. Over 25 per cent of the banks in the nation depend on regular savings deposits for 40 per cent of their total assets.
4. In the $50,000,000 group, 99.6 per cent of the banks accept regular savings accounts and pay interest.
5. In the $10,000,000 size, only 89.8 per cent accept interest-bearing savings deposits.

The survey also presents the following data on (1) Deposit size, (2) Average size of regular savings accounts, and (3) Interest rate paid:

1. Total Deposit Size:
   - Under $10 million: 67.6
   - $10 to $50 million: 15.6
   - $50 to $100 million: 7.2
   - $100 to $500 million: 7.9
   - $500 million and over: 1.7

2. Average Size of Regular Savings Account:
   - Under $850: 29.4
   - $850 to $1,149: 25.5
   - $1,150 and over: 45.1

3. Advertised Interest Rate, Jan. 2, 1962:
   - Under 2.0 per cent: 12.6
   - 2.0 to 3.0 per cent: 54.7
   - 3.5 per cent no-split rate: 21.6
   - 3.5 per cent split rate: 11.1

The survey drew usable responses from 4,060 insured commercial banks representing 64.9 per cent of the total assets of all insured commercial banks.

Many small banks do not accept savings accounts, or pay a relatively low interest rate, perhaps because of no local competition from savings and loan associations.

However, doesn’t this provide an opening for credit unions and for loan associations in larger nearby towns to attract these savings accounts? The survey definitely shows that savings deposits are very important to commercial banks and should be solicited actively and continuously.

Sees $25 Billion in Advertising
By 1970 to Move Nation’s Goods

George W. Head, manager of advertising and sales promotion for National Cash Register Company, told Des Moines advertising men last month that by 1970 the United States will need an annual expenditure of $25 billion annually for various advertising media to sell the nation’s products and services. He stated that the present $553 billion gross national product figure is expected to hit $890 billion by 1970. At the present time, advertising expenditures are $12½ billion, but the increase in production and accompanying competition from abroad and in foreign markets will require an intensification of advertising efforts to move these goods.

Mr. Head was in Des Moines as an official of the Advertising Federation of America to present a charter to the Advertising Round Table of Des Moines, which is affiliated with the AFA.

Creates Demand

Mr. Head, long noted as a national authority on the techniques of advertising for mass merchandising, reminded his audience that years ago the business managers in United States companies learned it takes advertising to create the mass demand that makes mass production possible, and mass production is what has built the dynamic economy enjoyed by this nation today.

Proof that what has been accomplished by advertising in the United States is an important merchandising factor is evidenced in foreign countries where nations such as France, Italy and Japan copied our advertising technique exactly and used it to create the demand that made possible the postwar production boom. France, for instance, is spending 11 times more today on advertising than nine years ago.

“And here in the United States,” Mr. Head said, “we have another population group the size of France that has grown with us just since the end of World War II. This 44 million represents our population expansion in those 17 years. It took France 2,000 years to attain that size.”

Saves Money for Buyer

Mr. Head warned his audience there are some who still think of advertising as warm publicity rather than an investment in an effective merchandising media. He emphasized that the $12½ billion spent on advertising today in the U. S. represents a savings of at least $70 billion to the buying public due to the savings made possible by the mass production that advertising has created. He cited numerous examples of products that today cost the same or less than several decades ago, due to lowering prices from savings in mass production.

He warned, too, against the hazardous and mistaken practice of thinking that the advertising budget is the place to start when a recession or other financial squeeze is put on a company. “Who thinks of taking his foot off the gas pedal when the going gets tougher uphill?” Mr. Head asked.

He pointed out that Procter and Gamble, for instance, stepped up its advertising budget from $110 million to $116 million in 1954 when recession threatened. Some of its competitors sought the cost cutting method through lessened advertising. The result was that P&G came out of it in an even firmer position as leader than before.

Must Tell Own Story

He said advertising men had made a great mistake in past decades while developing advertising as the effective sales tool it has been for the economy. They have been so busy making advertising work, he said, they haven’t taken time to tell the public what an important part it plays in the economy. The AFA is undertaking such a program this year and national ads and regional ads will tell the story of advertising and the part it plays in the home, in business, in recreation and all levels of social and public life.

Wells Fargo Retirement

John D. Boden, vice president, retired from Wells Fargo Bank on November 1, concluding a 45-year banking career.
"Why we chose the NCR 315 Computer."

"A study of our computer needs indicated three important factors to be considered:
- Our current data processing requirements
- Future processing requirements to take care of our constant growth
- The need for a data processing system which would provide the capacity and the flexibility to process new and expanded services.

"After careful evaluation of several computer systems available, we selected the NCR 315 Computer System. We believe this system will enable us to accelerate the processing of all accounting data for our 31 Offices serving 22 Connecticut communities, and provide a tool for expanding our services to meet the many new demands upon modern banking.

"Installation of the NCR 315 Computer System will correspond with a move to our new headquarters at One Constitution Plaza early next year, and is another step in our constant effort to provide the highest quality service to our customers."

FPRA Elects New Officers

MORE than 1,500 delegates gathered in Atlantic City last month for the 47th annual convention of the Financial Public Relations Association.

Bankers from the Northwestern Banker area in attendance agreed that the departmental meetings were particularly valuable from the standpoint of obtaining new ideas that can be put to practical use. The meetings were conducted by recognized authorities in public relations, advertising, business development and merchandising.

ON THE COVER

New officers of the Financial Public Relations Association, elected during the final day of the association's 47th annual convention at Atlantic City, N. J. Left to right, they are: President, Ernest G. Gearhart, Jr., vice president, First National Bank of Miami, Fla.; first vice president, Harold W. Lewis, vice president of the First National Bank of Chicago; second vice president, Charles H. Hoeflich, president of the Union National Bank & Trust Company, Souderton, Pa.; third vice president, Frank R. Swan, executive vice president of the City National Bank & Trust Company, Oklahoma City; and treasurer, Robert A. Bachle, vice president of the National Boulevard Bank, Chicago.

Automatic Deposit Plan

Pointing up the dramatic changes in business accounting techniques since the turn of the century, Bank of America's more than 26,000 employees in California began receiving their salaries recently through an automatic deposit in their checking accounts.

Instead of a paycheck for the mid-October payday each staff member was issued an electronically prepared statement of earnings representing his net salary deposited into his checking account. The process eliminates the necessity of endorsing checks, depositing them or making arrangements to have them deposited when they are on vacation.

NABAC Speaker Suggests Service Charge Revision

Banks today in order to maintain efficient and profitable operations must sell the public on realistic service charges.

Thomas E. Sebrell III, president, Clarendon Trust Company, Arlington, Va., made this statement before the 38th annual convention of NABAC, The Association for Bank Audit, Control and Operation, in Bal Harbour, Fla.

"With rising costs today, banks cannot continue to give away services if they desire to remain in the profit bracket," Mr. Sebrell said. "Costs, on a breakdown basis, can be compared with the cost figures of other banks of comparable size, composition and locales by utilizing the services of NABAC and the ABA."

The commission is also making available a brochure entitled "How Banks Can Help." It is to be distributed by banks to their customers. It is a recital of "human interest" facts and stories about banks and people, telling about the expanding services provided by banks over the past 100 years. ABA member banks can purchase copies for 10 cents each.

He and Chase Manhattan's J. Michael Carter, in charge of Federal Funds trading, were watching the activity as we came along. Asked if he used this correspondent service, Mr. Stewart replied:

"Frequently... and I can tell you in this business you people are unique... putting emphasis where it belongs—on excellent service... whatever the effect on Chase Manhattan's own cash position... Say, look at those orders move!"

For John Stewart, and for hundreds of correspondent bankers who have seen our new head office facilities, the Government Trading Desk is indeed a fascinating sight. Yet, busy and exciting as Federal Funds trading is during every minute of the short trading day, there is much that doesn't meet the eye. For example, the difference in Chase Manhattan's basic attitude—of "service first" to every correspondent bank. It is a difference that can only be experienced... one that goes far to explain why Chase Manhattan serves half of all U. S. banks with a New York correspondent.

If your bank has any Federal Funds or Reserve Position problems, Chase Manhattan's Mike Carter will help you.

Says John A. Stewart:

Diebold Unveils New Data Pac

THE first Business and Banking Equipment Show held by Diebold, Incorporated, in the downtown New York City area, attracted more than 2,000 bankers, brokers, insurance and management executives to the Downtown Athletic Club during its three-day session, according to Raymond Koontz, president, Diebold, Incorporated.

“New DATA-PAC shown by Kathy McKay for Diebold, Inc., at New York show can be used in computer departments and with punched card equipment in banks and other financial institutions. The unit is able to accommodate any accounting cycle. “We’ve found that the exhibition of our latest machines and systems equipment in the convenient proximity of the downtown area of New York City offered busy executives an opportunity to quickly review the Diebold lines,” said Mr. Koontz.

Diebold used the occasion to unveil its newly designed Data Pac, which provides a fixed compartment Data Processing Aid and is able to accommodate any accounting cycle.

“Data Pac solves a knotty problem for many of those companies involved in using computers and punched card equipment. The Data Pac allows operating personnel to quickly move a particular billing cycle to the computer or the sorter and, when completed, to move it away and store it for the next billing cycle,” said the Diebold executive.

Also on view at the Diebold Business and Banking Equipment Show were Diebold Super Elevator Files; Power Files; Magnetic Ink Character Recognition equipment; Diebold Alpha-Numeric System files, and the company’s Check Guide equipment.

ASSETS of the insured commercial banks increased 9 per cent to $275 billion during the year ended June 30, 1962. Of the $22 billion growth during the year, $11 billion was in loans, nearly $8 billion in securities, and $3 billion in cash balances.

Deposits of insured commercial banks totaled $215 billion at mid-1962. Over half of the increase during the preceding year was in time deposits (of business and individuals) and savings deposits which together rose 16 per cent to $53 billion. Demand deposits of business and individuals increased 3 per cent to $11.1 billion.

Loans totaled $129 billion at mid-1962. Commercial and industrial loans advanced $3 billion to $46 billion during the year. Real estate loans were up almost $3 billion to $32 billion. Consumer-type loans totaled $9 billion, an increase of $2 billion. Loans to banks and other financial institutions increased from $7 billion to almost $9 billion.

Talcott Earnings Up

James Talcott, Inc., has reported net income rose 16 per cent to a new high during the nine months ended September 30, 1962.

Unusual 1963 Calendar

The Bank of New York, founded in 1784, is using the life story of Alexander Hamilton, one of its principal founders, as the subject of its 1962-63 calendar. Original drawings by Elizabeth Fraser, commissioned by the bank especially for this purpose, show important events in Mr. Hamilton's life including the meeting which resulted in the bank's founding. The drawings, done in unique pen and ink style with a water color wash, carry out the historic quality of the theme.

Manufacturers Hanover Trust Company, New York, announced the election of Andrew Scharps as vice president and treasurer, effective December 1, when he will succeed Craig S. Bartlett who retires on that date.

Mr. Scharps joined the bank in 1926. He was named an assistant secretary in 1938, assistant vice president in 1944 and vice president in 1952.

Prior to the merger of Manufacturers Trust Company with The Hanover Bank in 1961, Mr. Scharps headed Manufacturers Trust's portfolio department. As of December 1 he will have charge of the merged bank's investment portfolio department.

James J. Saxon
Comptroller of Currency
Proposes

7 New Bank Regulations

THE long awaited recommendations of the Comptroller of the Currency, James J. Saxon, were revealed just prior to his platform appearance at the A.B.A. annual convention in Atlantic City. The list of 84 proposals embodied matters ranging from the controversial national bank branching provision to one that would simplify the issuance of stock dividends.

At that time it was his expressed desire to begin immediately to translate some of these proposals into effective regulations. Accordingly, on October 16, 1962, he mailed to all national banks a copy of changes in regulations he proposes to put into effect on November 20, 1962, and February 1, 1963. In an accompanying letter to presidents of all national banks, Comptroller Saxon said in part:

“These regulations, dealing with certain of the corporate practices and procedures of national banking associations, merit your careful consideration.

“Our primary aim in the drafting of these proposed regulations has been to provide the maximum freedom of action for national banks that is consistent with their obligations to their stockholders and to the communities which they serve.

“... we therefore most cordially invite and welcome comments of all national banks and other interested persons on these proposed regulations.”

The Comptroller’s letter contained a summary of the seven regulations that would be changed, along with a copy of the official and detailed wording of each part. Shortly after sending the letter, Mr. Saxon addressed the 76th annual convention of the Iowa Bankers Association in Des Moines, and discussed the seven proposed changes in the course of his text.

Briefly, the substance of the proposed regulations are summarized as follows:

Appointment of Directors. To avoid the necessity of having a special meeting of stockholders and attendant expense, or the necessity of the resignation of an incumbent director, stockholders would be permitted to authorize the board of directors to increase the number of directors of the bank and appoint such persons to serve until the next meeting of stockholders. This would be limited to not more than three nor more than one-third of the existing number of directors, whichever shall be the lesser. Part 7.5 (a), (b), (c).

Pre-emptive rights. Existing paragraph 6110 of the Digest of Opinions published in 1960 states that all stockholders of a national bank are entitled, in preference to any other persons, to the opportunity to purchase additional stock resulting from an increase in the bank’s capital, in proportion to the number of shares held by them respectively. By majority vote of holders of voting shares, a bank could amend its articles to modify or eliminate these pre-emptive rights. Part 7.6 (a), (b).

Annual report to stockholders. Every national bank will be required, on or before December 31, to furnish its stockholders with an annual report containing at least minimal information called for by the proposed regulation. This is information readily available to the bank from its records, and the report may be inexpensive, such as in mimeograph form. The report should contain such items as a balance sheet at the close of the calendar year, reconciliation of capital funds for the period, and profit and loss statements compared to the preceding year.

Solicitation of proxies. The proposed proxy regulation seeks to provide the simplest and most feasible procedure for meeting stockholders’ needs, without imposing undue burdens on banks. It applies only to banks which solicit proxies from stockholders. If proxies are solicited, but only for the election of directors, only Section A in the detailed regulation shall be applicable. This sets forth the information that must be given to each stockholder when soliciting a proxy—names of directors, nominees, shares of stock held, whether cumulative voting is permitted and how such voting shall be done. If further matters, such as voting on pension plans, profit-sharing or other such proposals shall be the basis for proxy solicitation, further details must be complied with in this regulation. 11.1; 11.2 (a), (b); 11.3(a), (b), (c), (d); 11.4 (a), (b); 11.5; 11.6.

Ownership of capital securities. Every national bank will be required, within 10 days of date of regulation becoming effective, to file with the Comptroller a statement containing the names and addresses of, and amount of securities (bank stock) held by each owner of record of more than 10 per cent of any class of outstanding capital securities issued by the bank. Also, the bank shall file similar information if at any later date any person acquires 10 per cent or more of the bank’s capital securities. Also, if any person’s ownership of stock increases or decreases by 5 per cent, notice shall be filed with the Comptroller. If the bank has reason to believe that someone other than the owner of record actually is the beneficial owner, this information also shall be filed. “Person” shall not be...

The Congress has just completed the enactment of a tax bill. It's long, 390 pages. I shall give you a report on the provisions of that bill.

The bill that the Congress just passed was the result of a request for legislation by the President of the United States to the Congress. Details of the President's request were spelled out by the Secretary of the Treasury and his aides.

Withholding Tax—Among the provisions of tax law requested by the Administration was one for the withholding of taxes on interest and dividends. This created a wide interest not only of bankers, savings and loan associations, insurance companies, but among the rank and file of our people.

The Congress turned down this request and, I think, rightfully so. It would be costly and there are other ways of reaching whatever loss of revenue that might now occur by reason of the failure to report the receipt of interest and dividends by taxpayers. I have never felt that the loss from this failure to report was nearly as great as the Treasury contends. The mail on withholding of taxes on dividends and interest was very heavy from all over the United States.

In rejecting the withholding tax provision the Senate adopted an amendment proposed by Chairman Byrd. The Byrd amendment in lieu of withholding requires that the payor of interest, dividends, and patronage dividends shall report to the Bureau of Internal Revenue all payments of $10 or more. The payor also is required to give a statement to the payee informing him of the amount of interest, dividends, or patronage dividends that he has received, if over $10. Failure to do this subjects the payor to a penalty. At the present time, interest of less than $600 does not have to be reported, nor are patronage dividends of less than $100 reported.

A year ago the Congress passed an act which, in my mind, will materially lessen any loss that might now exist due to failure to report interest and dividend income. I refer to the proposal to assign to each federal taxpayer a file number. For those individuals who have a social security number, the number for their tax file will be the same. The others will be assigned a number. This will make it possible for the Internal Revenue Service to install mechanized equipment in handling tax returns.

Investment Credit—One of the very controversial items in the President's tax program was the investment credit. It passed. The objective of the investment credit is to spur our economy. It is to give a tax credit to the individual or taxpayer that makes an investment in new machines and equipment. It covers all capital goods other than buildings and livestock. (A further revision was announced last month after Senator Curtis made this talk.)

This investment credit provision means that a 7 per cent tax credit is given on the purchase of all capital goods since January 1, 1962. In the case of public utilities it is 3 per cent rather than 7 per cent.

This means that if a taxpayer buys a machine for $3,000, he can deduct 7 per cent of $3,000, or $210, from the amount of tax that he will owe for the year. This is not subtracted from his income, but from his tax. Actually, a tax credit is no different than having the taxpayer mail in the full amount of his tax and having the government mail back a direct subsidy check to him. When this machine is depreciated under the rules you start not with a basis of $3,000 but rather a basis of $2,790, which is the price paid less the tax credit.

I did not support the investment credit proposal. I do not believe that it, standing alone, will necessarily spur our economy. I dislike the use of tax credits, because they whittle away the revenue. I prefer a more liberalized system of depreciation. In fact, I think that the taxpayer should have wide latitude in following his best judgment, and the best accounting practices available to his business, in determining over how long a period of time he should write off the cost of equipment.

The investment credit is discriminatory in that it will be to the disadvantage of the concern that prior to 1962 had already purchased new machines, or expanded its plant, and it will discriminate against a business concern that cannot and should not undertake an expansion or modernization at this time. It discriminates against the individual taxpayer or corporate taxpayer that cannot buy new equipment.

Expense Accounts—We have heard a great deal about abuses of expense accounts. No doubt some abuses have existed. The horror examples of abuses perhaps represented isolated cases. There is nothing wrong with the wording of the present statute in regard to requiring expenses to be ordinary and necessary before they can be deducted. There was one court decision which perhaps called for some new legislation in the way of greater substantiation of an item claimed as a business deduction, but otherwise it is a matter of enforcement. However, the administration asked for legislation denying a deduction to a taxpayer for all entertainment and gifts. The Congress did rewrite the present statute.

If a taxpayer, under this new law, wishes to deduct the cost of entertaining customers, he must show that the entertainment was not only for good will but that business was actually discussed and promoted at the time of the entertainment. This may mean that the entertainment...
Revision Bill

A condensation of the address delivered by Senator Curtis before the 65th Annual Convention of the Nebraska Bankers Association of a bank’s customers at a luncheon before a football game will have to include business discussion to be deductible.

In order for an item of entertainment to be deductible it must show the amount spent, the time and place, the business purpose, the business relationship of the parties entertained, and that business was discussed.

In the case of gifts given by the taxpayer to his customers there is a limit established. No gift will be deductible for a greater sum than $25 per year per donee. However, items costing less than $4 and given generally to all of the taxpayer’s customers are not to be included in the $25. This would mean that a taxpayer could buy calendars with his advertising thereon, or other such items and deduct the cost thereof en bloc and it would not be a part of this $25 computation per year per donee.

Travel Expense—Limitations are placed upon what may be charged off in the way of travel expense by a taxpayer. If a lawyer or a doctor, or any other taxpayer goes to a professional meeting and returns within one week, the entire amount of his travel is deductible if he went for a business purpose. If he stayed beyond a week and more than 25 per cent of his time was spent not for business but for personal pleasure, then he could not deduct the entire cost of his travel, but would have to pro-rate it.

Foreign Subsidiaries—A new departure over existing tax law since we had an income tax in 1913, was enacted in reference to foreign subsidiary corporations. In a way, this may seem remote to the state of Nebraska. On the other hand, I think that Congress made a mistake in this field, that it will hurt our economy generally, and will cut down our exports.

From the beginning of our income tax law an American owned foreign subsidiary corporation did not pay taxes on income earned outside of the United States until that money was brought into the country. The recipient then paid the taxes on the dividends. That rule is changed for all subsidiary corporations except export trade corporations selling goods manufactured in the United States.

Under this new law, if an American subsidiary is engaged in manufacturing in France and sells its products throughout Europe through another subsidiary located in Switzerland, the income earned by the foreign subsidiary is taxable to the parent corporation in this country even though it never comes back to this country. There is one escape from the payment of this new tax by the American parent company which lessens the U. S. tax to the extent that the earnings are returned to this country. If as much as 47 percent of the foreign earnings are returned to this country then this new section does not apply. Otherwise, you really have a tax imposed upon the stockholder, that is the American parent corporation, on the earnings of the foreign corporation that may never be received.

This violates the rule that you must have jurisdiction to tax.

Whenever an American corporation establishes a subsidiary in a foreign land, whether it be Brazil, England or France, it increases our exports to that part. By the acquaintance built up in the foreign land and the learning of the language, a beach head is established for the sale of more American products. We send machinery, raw materials, replacement parts and component parts to the foreign subsidiary. It adds to jobs in this country. An additional tax burden on their operation will actually lessen the ultimate profit coming to this country and the revenue to the Treasury.

It will, in my opinion, lessen our exports, and it gives the American company operating abroad a disadvantage with its competitors. For instance, if there is to be a factory established in Guatemala, the American company should have the same tax burden in that foreign country as does the German firm, or the British or the Japanese firm. We should not attempt to tax foreign earned income until it is brought into this country.

This part of the tax bill violates all past practices. It is indeed cumbersome, complicated and was enacted over the protests of most businesses engaged in foreign transactions. It may turn out as the undistributed profits tax of the early 30’s.

Patronage Dividends—Another proposal in the tax bill is the treatment of patronage dividends of cooperatives. At the present time the revenue received from this source is estimated at about $1 or $2 million. Under the new proposal it is expected to increase to about $40 million.

When a cooperative pays a patronage dividend it is now taxable to the patrons. Some of these dividends are not paid in cash, but are paid in some form of script and the money is held by the cooperative. Under the new law, every patronage dividend must be paid to the extent of at least 20 per cent in cash. The endorsement of this check will constitute an agreement for the patron of the cooperative to report his full patronage dividend as income to the patron. If the patron fails to agree to report it in this manner the entire amount is taxed to the cooperative at corporate rates.

Savings and Loan Tax—There will be a sizable increase in the amount of tax paid by savings and loan associations. At the present time the total rev-
Recent years have seen tremendous forward strides in the electronic processing of banking items such as checks, deposits, and other banking functions. A wide variety of automation devices are currently in use by this nation’s 14,000 banks to keep pace with the exploding public utilization of banking services.

The larger banks are rapidly installing sophisticated computer systems to handle the majority of the run-of-the-mill banking functions. But what of the smaller bank that is not large enough to justify expensive computer installations? These banks have the same basic requirements for processing data but on a much reduced scale. The larger bank, of course, can now extend many additional data processing services to its correspondent banks. However, a new area of the communicating of data from one bank to another needs increased exploration and investigation.

DATA-PHONE Service

DATA-PHONE service is the newest entry in a long line of data communications services offered by the telephone companies. Teletypewriter service, a form of data service, has been available for many years. Other means of data communications have also been available but have required special engineering and special services. DATA-PHONE for the first time combines all the advantages and flexibility of regular telephone service with the ability to transmit data.

Basically, DATA-PHONE service might be considered as a hybrid of telephone and data service. It permits one to communicate the human voice with the ability to transmit data communications in one unit. Connections are established in the normal fashion as any other telephone call and then transferred to the “data mode.”

It should be noted that DATA-PHONES do not originate intelligence just as a regular telephone does not originate intelligence. As the telephone depends upon the human to originate and interpret intelligence so does the DATA-PHONE depend upon machines. Due to the wide variety of business machines on the market today with the capability of data communications a wide variety of DATA-PHONES are required. But, they all provide the same basic service—the ability to transmit data from one machine to another machine.

Wide Area Phone Service

DATA-PHONE service is compatible with all of the voice communications services now offered by the telephone companies. DATA-PHONE service will work with regular telephone service, long distance service, private line telephone service, and more recently WATS (Wide Area Telephone Service). WATS is similar to regular long distance service except that it is available on either a message or full time basis.

WATS provides a customer with a telephone line permitting him to call any telephone within a given geographic area. Customers have a choice of six geographic areas which in total encompass the entire United States. He may choose one or all of these areas as his need dictates, the cost of service increasing with the geographic coverage.

WATS is an originating service only. Charges are based on either full time or message usage. Full time service provides 24 hours a day, seven days a week service. Message type service provides for 15 hours per month service with prorated charges for each additional hour of service utilized beyond the initial 15 hour period.

Flexibility

The flexibility of DATA-PHONE service now permits customers to transmit data to and from any location in the United States that has regular telephone service—in actuality, any place in the United States. It offers the additional advantage of being portable to the extent that it can...
Banks Can Be Speeded

be moved from city to city as the needs of the customer warrants.

Since DATA-PHONE service is provided over the regular long distance network, it also offers economical advantages. Data calls can be placed as required. Special services are not needed, thereby making DATA-PHONE service a pay as you go service. Of course, as volumes grow an economical crossover point between long distance and private line services is reached. At this crossover point even greater economics can be obtained by DATA-PHONE customers.

The customer controls whether or not he wishes to transmit data or voice. Many customers utilize private line telephone or WATS in the daytime for normal voice calls and during the nighttime for data communications thereby doubling up on their communications dollar with even greater economic efficiency.

Truly, a new era in data communications is dawning for the banking industry. More and more uses of DATA-PHONE service are being discovered every day. It appears inevitable that one day the majority of the flow of data within the banking industry will be handled by DATA-PHONE service. Following is a synopsis of systems in use today involving either data communications or electronic data processing equipment:

Teller Recording

Several large savings banks have recently installed individual teller agent sets to assist in handling savings accounts, deposits and withdrawals. These agent sets work directly with a centrally located computer in the same or another location. Pass books presented to tellers are inserted into the agent set and the particular transaction, the deposit or withdrawal, entered by manual operation of various push buttons or keys.

The transaction is automatically recorded on the pass book and transmitted to the computer which debits or credits the appropriate account, determines a new balance, and automatically prints out the new balance on the pass book contained in the distant teller's agent unit—all in a matter of a few seconds. Transactions are completed faster, more accurately and with a maximum of service to the bank's savings customers. It can also be seen that this system eliminates many previous manual entries from point of origin to final account posting and provides an improved means of balancing accounts.

Closed Circuit TV

Closed circuit TV is being used on a limited basis for signature verification. It can be seen that with a TV

THE trend toward larger farming units and toward the use of larger and more expensive equipment is making it increasingly difficult for the smaller operator to stay in farming.

Although additional land for production would result in more pounds and bushels of feed, Clarence J. Hofer and his three sons who farm near Huron, S. D., have reconciled themselves to bettering the yield of acres now under their control. Also, they are using every available method to keep production costs at a minimum.

One important factor in the success of the Hofer operations is the joint ownership and joint use of the larger farm equipment.

Mr. Hofer and his youngest son, Gordon, age 13, farm near Huron. His other two sons are married and operate farms nearby. These three farms are typical of many throughout the country competing in a high-cost agricultural economy.

Mr. Hofer's oldest son, Glen, age 24, spent his summers helping his father on the home place while attending school. During this time he bought a few calves and then continued to develop his productive nucleus on a 160 acre farm he purchased at $50 per acre.

Jerry, age 22, worked at Armour & Company on a part-time basis, enabling him to rent a neighboring farm which lacked much by way of productivity and facilities.

The work on these three farms is well synchronized and the total 1,680 acres properly farmed.

In 1959, the Hofers purchased a new diesel tractor, a four-bottom 16-inch plow and a four-row cultivator by trading in the gas burning equipment and by financing the balance on a three-annual-payment basis.

"The diesel works 18 hours a day and last spring the 13-year-old boy plowed 90 acres in 30 hours," Mr. Hofer said. "We can operate three units for half the previous cost with this diesel tractor."

Another recently acquired and jointly owned implement is a forage harvester. As a result, excellent equipment is available to all three operators and sufficient labor is ready to operate the equipment a maximum number of hours during the busy seasons.

Mr. Hofer and the boys decided some time ago that livestock was the answer to success in the Huron area and each fall they store large tonnages of silage in trenches or bunkers. They feel that greater profits can be realized from minimum acreages through the use of silage.

After feed supplies are in store and pasture no longer in abundance, the Hofers make maximum use of labor and feed. Clarence and Glen have milking parlors. Each milks 15 to 20 cows and sells Grade C milk to be used for cheese and dried milk. Clarence’s two-stall parlor, completely installed, cost $725. Glen’s two-cow system was installed for the same amount.

Both systems have the cows elevated, gates are controlled by the milker, and artesian wells provide water pressure for udder washing and other sanitation purposes. These facilities are not particularly elaborate, but Clarence says his unit will net $210 per month.

This entire farming arrangement is evidence to the fact that the young men can enter agriculture in today's economy. Mr. Hofer says that it doesn't necessarily cost $15,000 for equipment to start farming. An adequate living can be produced with a minimum investment on today's farm and joint ownership of larger equipment is one method that can be used to keep the investment down.

The methods used by the Hofer family also show that it may be practical for groups of neighbors to arrange joint ownership of some of today's costly farm equipment.

Many pieces of equipment are used just a few days each year and are impractical for a small farm operator. Used jointly with a neighboring farmer, the larger equipment can be kept in operation more days with the result of greater returns from the investment—End.

Here are nine ideas from a recent FPRA meeting:

2. Trading stamps seem to be a craze now. Perhaps four out of five housewives are saving them. Each family tries to concentrate on possibly one or two brands of stamps, yet accumulates odds and ends of others. Why not, as a P.R. service, suggest to banks to serve as a clearing house for stamp savers? Banks could give receipts to customers and prospects for their off-brand stamps, swapping them for the favored kind and perform a real service. —Joe H. Davis, First National Bank of Memphis, Tenn.

3. Have a “construction party” during a building or remodeling project. The party can be held amid the rubble of construction and guests can wear coveralls and protective helmets, sit on nail kegs at rough board tables. Entertainment is simple; just a piano is best. The menu can be made up of food with “construction” terminology. This gets the press and public thinking about the building before it’s ready for the grand opening.

4. We get names of newcomers from the utility company. The local bakery bakes a cake with “Welcome to Indianola” on it and one of our staff delivers it along with a card that entitles the family to a free “check wallet” when they call at the bank. —William Buxton III, Peoples Trust & Savings Bank, Indianola, Iowa.

5. We send a dozen roses to every mortgagor of ours after the loan is closed and on the day they move into their new home. The flowers last only a short time, but the thoughtfulness of a bouquet lasts many years. —Ron Watrous, Binghamton Savings Bank, Binghamton, N. Y.

6. Follow up the “Welcome Wagon” with a personal letter or telephone call; or better yet, a personal call. The “Welcome Wagon” can only give passing mention to the bank because of the number of things to be covered, but the personal follow-up will underscore the first favorable impression. —F. J. Blake, Central National Bank, Cleveland, Ohio.

7. We sent companion mailing pieces, one titled “Recipe for Money Management,” the other a recipe for a tasty dish. These can be mailed to women customers, or if a bank has a Women’s Call Program, these two pieces would be fine literature for leaving with the customer or prospect when making a call. —Mabel Taylor, First National Bank of Memphis, Tenn.

8. Provide a “slide rule” for new accounts personnel for use in demonstrating to customers the charges under regular checking account plans and special (10 cents per check) checking account plans for various numbers of checks drawn with different average balances, and showing the “break-even” points for selected balances. —James K. Sanbourne, Denver U. S. National Bank, Denver, Colo.

9. Use present customers to get new customers by offering premiums. One bank offers $1.50 per new checking account and opened 1,000 new accounts in a year. Advertising was by statement enclosures and in-bank displays. —F. J. Blake, Central National Bank, Cleveland, Ohio.
Help Your Customers Keep Working Capital Working

By KENNETH C. GLASER
President
Lend Lease Transportation Co.
Minneapolis, Minnesota

MANY banks and businessmen do not realize that during the past two decades, the leasing/rental of cars and trucks has soared to a gross volume of over $1 billion in the United States and the advantages of its operations are still not too well understood.

Leasing of transportation equipment frees “working capital” and improves a firm’s “balance sheet.” It eliminates the necessity of tying up “working capital” in fast-depreciating transportation equipment.

Regarding the tax aspects, the accelerated depreciation available under the Internal Revenue Act of 1954 is available to business and industry where the equipment has a useful life of more than three years. In actual practice, vehicles are seldom used for this period of time.

Leasing is a long-term arrangement, preferably in the interest of both lessor and lessee, of at least 15, 24 or 36 months. Of all motor vehicles being leased or rented in the United States today, about 90 per cent are leased rather than rented. Over 3,000 major American firms are “Keeping Their Working-Capital Working” by the use of leased motor vehicles.

Seven Advantages
In general, transportation leasing offers seven major advantages:

1. Frees or conserves working capital for more profitable investments.
2. Improves the asset and liability relationship of a company’s balance sheet. (The obligations of a leasing arrangement are not reflected in a financial statement.)
3. Leasing will often provide funds, not available from any other source, for expanding of medium-sized concerns.
4. Leasing conserves bank credit lines. Funds normally borrowed from financial institutions can now be used for other productive uses.
5. Leasing serves as a hedge against rising costs. Commitment for leased transportation equipment is made at today’s dollar value and if inflation continues, will be paid back with devalued dollars.
6. Leasing can eliminate red tape required by company purchasing procedures. Once a master lease is entered into with a leasing company, additional equipment requirements can be handled routinely.
7. Leasing will result in a tax savings, especially when plans without options to buy, are selected. The extent of tax reduction is determined by the term for which the lease is written, as compared with the “usable life” write-off, generally used by a firm for depreciating similar transportation equipment. The shorter the lease term, as compared to “useful life” used for depreciation purposes, the greater the amount of tax reduction.

In some companies, because of the nature of their business, the investment and expense associated with motor vehicle equipment may be so small relatively, that leasing may not be considered as worth the trouble. Individual situations may make company ownership more advantageous.

With creeping inflation and steadily increasing operating costs, firms are finding a need for a greater dollar amount of “working capital” in order to maintain the same volume of business.

Tax Aspects
Whether company ownership or leasing of transportation equipment is better tax-wise, depends on the existing situation. At any rate, payments to a reputable, experienced leasing organization are usually deductible and easy to establish for income tax purposes, in contrast to the time and labor in maintaining a host of depreciation records needed to justify tax deductions in company ownership and maintenance.

Data By Telstar

The feasibility of using space satellites for long-distance transmission of banking data has been demonstrated in Dayton, Ohio, at the research and development center of the National Cash Register Company.

The NCR tests were conducted jointly with the Bell System, which developed the space satellite Telstar, now orbiting the earth at a speed of 16,000 miles an hour.

They involved an NCR "on-line" data processing system in which basic business machines can be linked directly to the computer, regardless of the distance involved, for faster and more efficient information processing.

Business Gifts

Suggestions on how you can build good will for your bank

BUSINESS Christmas gifts can be a valuable addition to your bank’s goodwill program, if the gifts are selected and given properly.

The Business Goodwill Advisory Council, in a pamphlet entitled “Business Gifts at Christmas—Good or Bad?”, lists seven rules as the keys to successful gift giving:

1. Keep your gifts of modest value in relation to the importance of each recipient as an employee, prospect or customer. Extravagant gifts can be misinterpreted as a form of bribery.

2. Choose your gifts individually, considering the tastes of each group of recipients, or preferably, of each individual recipient.

3. Choose only high quality gifts that are useful, durable and dependable.

4. Personalize each gift, if possible, with the recipient’s name or initials.

5. Package each gift attractively and securely.

6. Accompany each package with a personal note, greeting card or at least a special gift label.

7. Deliver each gift with a flair, if possible personally or by special messenger, and preferably to each recipient’s home rather than to his office.

Remember Purpose

In setting up a gift program for your bank, you should keep in mind that the only purpose of the program is to build goodwill toward your bank. Most people consider a bank as a cold and impersonal thing. A business gift should, as much as possible, build goodwill toward your bank and the person to receive the gift.

To achieve these purposes your gift should first of all look like a gift and should be presented with a flair, with some attempt to recapture the excitement we all had as children when seeing the gaily-wrapped packages.

One of the most difficult questions regarding gift giving is “What should a gift cost?”

This is almost impossible to answer in general. The purpose of a gift is to gain friendship, and to increase goodwill. How much is this worth? Your gift should be in relationship to its potentials.

A bank customer may have two banks in mind when he considers a business transaction. He will pick the one he remembers with the greatest friendliness. The proper gift can build such a friendship.

It is practically impossible to develop a percentage figure to determine an amount to spend on a gift. The cost of a gift should be dependent upon the relationship between your firm and the customer. The one thing to be particularly watchful for is that the gift dare not be too lavish. A lavish gift may be accepted, but it still may arouse resentment in the re-

What Executives Choose

A recent study of six price categories offered by Select-A-Gift Division, Ebco Industries, Birmingham, Ala., shows that most recipients chose gifts for their homes. Each booklet offered 30 items, but the bulk of the selection went to only 8 to 12 of the items offered. Following is a comparison between gifts selected for the home and for outdoors, broken down by price categories:

recipient, or an effort to show that he was not influenced by the presentation.

Gift Certificate Plans

One of the most successful gift giving methods developed in recent years is that of gift certificate plans. It is simple to use and the customer is assured of receiving a gift he will use and enjoy. The plans work something like this:

A company issues a catalogue which describes a group of gifts. The catalogues usually are attractively printed and come in a folder which identifies the donor. The gifts in any one catalogue are of the same price range and the donor selects the price range of gifts he wishes to present before the catalogues are mailed to customers. In some instances the donor handles the mailing; in others a list is supplied to the catalogue firm. Recipients of the catalogue select from the gifts in the catalogue and indicate which he would prefer on a business reply card included in the catalogue. The certificate company receives the reply card and ships directly to the recipient. The firm giving the gifts then is billed according to the actual merchandise mailed out.

Perhaps the major advantage in this plan is that all the mechanical handling is taken care of, and the recipient gets something he wants.

In selecting a catalogue to be mailed to customers you should consider the following questions:

- Are the gifts offered what you would like to offer or receive? What does the catalogue look like? Will it bring a credit to you? Is the plan reliable? Does it offer good value, well handled and shipped promptly?

- Many advertising specialty jobbers now have gift certificate plans available, some of which have the added feature that you can make up your own catalogue using sets of sheets, already printed, each of which describes a single item.

Long Range Programs

Still another gift-giving idea is that of adopting a long-range gift program. Some companies have adopted such a plan with great success. While they do not give the same thing year after year, each year's gift is a variation of, or a supplement to, what they had given previously.

Glassware is perhaps the simplest example of this type of gift. Each year a set of glasses is selected, each year of the same pattern, but each year a different shape or size. One year you might give a set of iced tea glasses, the next brandy snifter, etc. Recipients thus build up a fine set of glassware, but at the same time each year's gift is sufficiently different to be interesting.

Other examples of the same idea are desktop accessories, personal jewelry, kitchenware, cutlery, leather-bound volumes of great books. This program is particularly effective if the gift is related to the donor's business.

Since a gift is basically from one person to another, the more it is selected especially for the recipient, the more effective it will be. Everyone likes to get something that shows that someone put thought into the selection.

Personalize Gifts

The simplest way to make a gift personal is to put a monogram or the name of the recipient on it. In addition to being appreciated the recipient is less likely to give it away.

But imprinting three letters, or even an entire name, on a gift is not really personalizing it. Most executives are sophisticated enough to know that imprinting is a fairly mechanical operation, done at comparatively little expense. The real method of personalizing a gift is to find something that would be acceptable to only one man in the world—the one to whom you are sending the gift. This is not easy and the recipient knows it, and thus appreciates the personal thought that went into the selection.

To do this you have to learn something about the man himself, his hobbies and his pleasures, his likes and his dislikes. This takes time but is not impossible.

Gifts do not have to be expensive to be effective. It is the appropriateness of the gift that makes it successful.

Giving gifts does not have to be a headache; it can even be fun. If it is an enjoyable task and you think as much of the recipient as you do of the donor chances are you will make wise selections of gifts.

Perhaps the best single rule of gift giving is a simple one: use quality and taste. Whatever you give, whether it be small or large, inexpensive or high in price, let it be the best of its kind. Make sure that it is something that you would be glad to receive, and something you can be proud of as a donor. Let your signature on the card accompanying the gift be the only place your name appears on the gift. If the gift is appropriate your name will not be forgotten. If the gift is not appropriate, the presence of your name on the gift will do you no good.

Finally, don’t spoil a good selection by sloppy handling.—End.

Year Around Gift

A gift that is used and appreciated 12 months out of the year is an atlas. The American Map Company, Incorporated, 3 W. 61st Street, New York 23, N. Y., features a complete line of atlases ranging from giant world maps and space atlases to a useful vacation and highway atlas of the United States that includes photographs and description of the top vacation spots in the country.

Two Unique Gifts

Two unusual gifts that have proven to be successful are the Spruce Electrical Manicurist and the Erasomatic Electric Eraser, available from the Abar Manufacturing Company and Mar-Go-Co., respectively, Cleveland, Ohio. The electrical manicurist has been effective as a gift to either men or women. It provides superb fingernail care in just a few minutes.

The electrical eraser cuts erasing time by two-thirds, results in neater work, reduces wasteful “start-overs,” does not damage paper and is simple to operate.

Both of these products are sold only direct-from-factory at a 40 per cent discount from their established price of $49.92, making a net price of $29.95 each, delivered. Further price reductions are based on quantity over six units ordered for shipment at one time to one address.

Charles J. Roubik

Charles J. Roubik, prominent Chicago banker and civic leader, died last month in St. Francis Hospital in Evanston.

Mr. Roubik, 64, was vice president and secretary of Harris Trust and Savings Bank, which he joined in 1920. He had been with the Harris trust department more than 40 years, and an officer of the bank since 1926.

limited to a natural person, but also includes corporations, pension funds, etc. Forms are available from the office of the Comptroller. 12.1 (a), (b), (c), (d); 12.2 (a), (b); 12.3 (a), (b).

Employee stock option and stock purchase plans. In order to enable national banks to attract and retain competent personnel, this proposed regulation would permit the adoption of employee stock option plans conforming to the requirements of the Internal Revenue Code, and other employee stock purchase plans as may be appropriate. A national bank could sell shares of its capital stock, under this regulation, to its employees, for a consideration of not less than 85 per cent of the fair market value of the shares on the date the option is granted or, if a stock purchase plan, on the date the shares are sold. Such plans must be adopted by the board of directors and be approved by at least two-thirds of the outstanding shares and by the Comptroller. Stock options shall not extend beyond a 10-year period from date of issuance. Shares issued to employees under these plans may be authorized but not issued by stockholders. 13.1; 13.2; 13.3.

Changes in capital structure. Five changes are proposed as follows:

(a) Capital adequacy will no longer be confined to the ratio of capital to risk assets and to total deposits. Instead, it will be determined upon the consideration of these factors: quality of management; liquidity of assets; history of earnings and retention thereof; quality and character of ownership; burden of meeting occupancy expenses; potential volatility of deposit structure; quality of operating procedures, and bank's capacity to meet present and future financial needs of its trade area, considering the competition it faces.

(b) Authorized but unissued stock may be permitted by vote of stockholders owning two-thirds of the stock of the bank, and with approval of the Comptroller. Such authorized but unissued stock may be issued from time to time to employees pursuant to stock option and purchase plans described above.

(c) Stock dividends, whether on a recurring or nonrecurring basis, will not be subject to disapproval of the Comptroller, except in rare or unusual circumstances. Technically, approval is sought from the Comptroller by filing Form 1904-C with the Regional Chief Examiner. If the Regional Chief does not send disapproval or communicate otherwise within 15 days the application shall be deemed approved by the Comptroller, and the bank may proceed to obtain approval of stockholders if this has not already been done.

(d) Preferred stock may now be issued by vote of stockholders owning two-thirds of the stock of the bank, in issues convertible or nonconvertible of one or more classes, with such other provisions and in such amount and with such par value as shall be approved by the Comptroller.

(e) Capital debentures also may be issued with similar rules for preferred stock. These could be issued with conversion features into common stock where appropriate. The principal amount of capital debentures outstanding at any time, when added to all other outstanding indebtedness of the bank, except those forms of indebtedness exempt from provisions of 12 U.S.C. No. 82, shall not exceed an amount equal to 100 per cent of the bank's unimpaired, paid-in capital stock plus 50 per cent of the amount of its unimpaired surplus fund. 14.1; 14.2; 14.3 (a), (b); 14.4; 14.5 (a), (b); 14.6 (a), (b); 14.7 (a), (b); 14.8.

Comptroller Saxon has stated it is his intention that Parts 7.5 and 7.6 of Part 7 (paragraphs 1 and 2 above), and Parts 13 and 14 (paragraphs 6 and 7 above) "will enter into effect on or about November 30, 1962, with such revisions as may be deemed appropriate in the light of the comments submitted."

"Parts 10, 11 and 12 (paragraphs 3, 4 and 5 above) of the proposed regulations will not enter into effect prior to February 1, 1963."—End.

Tax Revisions...

Revenue received from this source is perhaps $30 or $35 million. Under the new bill that will be increased to between $200 and $250 million. Under this new law, the income of a savings and loan association, after deducting the interest and earnings paid out to the depositors (shareholders), will have a further deduction of 60 per cent of its income for a bad debt reserve. The balance will be taxed at the regular corporate rates. That is in the form that the House passed the bill. The Senate increased this by several million dollars by increasing the tax on stock savings and loan associations, but this was later dropped.

Mutual Insurance Companies—Mutual insurance companies, that is fire and casualty companies, will have their taxes raised, too. At the present time, a small county or neighborhood mutual that has gross receipts of $75,000 or less pays no taxes. That amount is raised to $150,000.

Under present law, mutual companies are taxed under one of two formulas. Under one formula they are taxed at ordinary corporate rates on their investment income only. Under the other formula they pay a tax on gross investment income, plus premium income after policy dividends are paid. They must pay the higher of the two.

Under the new law, these mutual insurance companies will pay taxes at the regular corporate rates on all their income less a deduction of one per cent of their losses, plus one per cent of their underwriting gain. This deduction is placed in a loss reserve account for five years. If it is not used during that time for losses it is then taxed, but at a lower rate.

In addition to raising the exemption for the very small mutual companies that I mentioned, the next size mutuals whose gross receipts run from $150,000 to $500,000 may pay the tax on investment income only. There is a third category of mutual companies whose gross receipts are more than $500,000 but not more than $1,100,000 where the effective rate of taxation is less than the larger companies but is graduated so that if their receipts are in excess of $1,100,000 they pay the full corporate rate less the deductions that are mentioned.

There were some sections of this bill with which I disagreed. There were other sections of the bill that were meritorious and may have been long overdue and, of course, I supported those. In the final analysis, I voted against the bill because the net effect of the bill was an overall loss in revenue of more than $500,000,000 as it passed the Senate and a greater amount when it came from conference. This was primarily because of the loss of revenue due to the investment credit.

I did vote against final passage because of the loss of revenue involved. It did not indicate my opposition to many of other sections of the bill because I specifically favored them.—End.

Promote Trust Officers
Three vice presidents in the pension trust department have been named by the First National City Bank, New York.

They are: Everett G. Judson, Kenneth E. Frantz, and Herbert E. Nevins. Mr. Frantz and Mr. Nevins were both formerly assistant vice presidents in the same department. Mr. Judson comes to the bank from First Boston Corporation.

Vote to Remove Saxon
The Independent Bankers of Minnesota voted to demand immediate removal of Comptroller of the Currency James P. Saxon to be replaced by a “better qualified person with experience in banking.”

The first annual meeting of the group organized to represent the 600 independent bankers throughout Minnesota requested President Kennedy to dismiss Mr. Saxon because of policies detrimental to the “tradition of democratic and diffused system of banking.” Mr. Saxon has repeatedly advocated branch banking irrespective of state law, the resolutions committee of the convention declared.

Other resolutions passed at the meeting include a determined stand against attempts to legislate branching in Minnesota, outlawed in 1923, and a stand against further expansion of savings and loan associations through establishments of branches. Currently federally chartered savings and loans are allowed to branch in the state.

The independents also served notice they will fight in the 1963 legislature against centralized and branch banking with a program of their own.

Stonier School Changes
The Board of Regents of The Stonier Graduate School of Banking has approved important changes in the School’s admissions requirements which will apply to applicants for enrollment in the 1963 entering class. It was announced recently by Dr. Murray G. Lee, director of the school.

The new requirements, which are part of a comprehensive long-range program for upgrading the School’s academic program, include the following:

Open New Wall Street Quarters

The Manufacturers Hanover Trust Company has opened its new downtown headquarters office at 40 Wall Street in New York.

The bank occupies the first five floors of the building and the first and second basement levels. These facilities serve as headquarters for Manufacturers Hanover's Wall Street division, corporate trust division, the securities department for the entire bank and the money transfer and wire communications center.

The 160,000 square feet of space occupied by the bank has been under renovation for more than a year. Charles S. Bishop, senior vice president, is in charge of the office.

These moves represented the last major relocation of bank personnel since the merger of Manufacturers Trust and The Hanover Bank on September 8, 1961. In a complex series of moves since that date, the bank has relocated more than 4,000 employees. Two-thirds of them were relocated downtown, the remainder uptown at 350 Park Avenue, the bank's uptown headquarters. Correspondent facilities are at 350 Park Avenue.

Expand Irving Trust

Demolition work began recently on three buildings in the financial district of lower Manhattan in preparation for construction of a 30-story expansion of the Irving Trust headquarters building at One Wall Street.

When completed, the enlarged Irving Trust Building will occupy the entire Broadway block from Wall Street to Exchange Place. The three buildings being removed were formerly occupied by The Hanover Trust Bank and have a long history as quarters for financial houses.

The project will contain about one million square feet. Total cost will be $25 million. Completion date is set for late 1964.

On Mercantile Board

Monte E. Shomaker, executive vice president of Brown Shoe Company, has been elected to the board of directors of Mercantile Trust Company, St. Louis.

camera, checks can be viewed on remotely located receiving units to be immediately compared with the original signature of the depositor. Closed circuit TV is also being used in one of the larger banks in New York for daily administrative meetings between the officials located in one bank with those located in a branch bank.

Closely allied with the concept of closed circuit TV, several other visual presentation systems are also under consideration or in operation. Facsimile service which permits written, typed, etc., data to be transmitted electrically from one point to another may play an important part in banking functions of the future. Negotiable securities, bonds, stocks, etc., may one day be transferred from one bank to another or between banks and their customers by facsimile service.

Another photoelectric device permits signature verification through an encoding, decoding procedure of the customer’s signature. The signature is scrambled (encoded) originally and when inserted in this device at a teller’s location is automatically unscrambled (decoded) for viewing through a special type viewer. Many similar functions requiring visual presentation of data can be envisioned and undoubtedly a great deal of research is being conducted in the electronics scanning field.

Installment Loan Payments

Consumer financing and budget loan accounting is currently being performed for affiliated correspondent banks with a simple DATA-PHONE communications service utilizing WATS and a simple card reading device.

Upon the establishment and authorization of a loan the central processing location, usually a computer, prepares a “coupon booklet” containing individual payment cards with all of the data concerning the customer loan. Each coupon card represents a monthly installment to be paid at a prescribed time. These booklets are then mailed to the person who made the loan. As payments are received, either in person or through the mail, they are recorded and collected. Once a day a call is placed from the computer location via WATS to the bank at which time each card is inserted in the card reader and transmitted by DATA-PHONE service to the central processing location.

The data is received at the processing center in card form for automatic insertion into the electronic processing system. The electronic processor will update and analyze each account and prepare a detail report of that bank’s previous consumer loan payment activity including the new balance for delivery by mail the following day. Other functions could also be handled by this DATA-PHONE/card reading system.

Private Line Teletypewriter

Teletypewriter service has been used for many years in the banking world to advise member banks of credits and debits. It is also being used to transfer securities from one bank to another, particularly the transfer of government securities between the Federal Reserve Banks. While some may not consider teletypewriter as a data service, in actuality, it has been the backbone of the majority of data communications in the banking industry. Teletypewriter service is continually undergoing changes and modernization and undoubtedly will continue to be a major data communications service for use in the banking industry.

What About Future?

There may be many other data processing and communicating systems in use today in the banking industry of which I am unaware. I do not offer this as a comprehensive list of such systems, rather a representative list.

What about the future? What can we expect?

Personally, I feel the surface has only been scratched. The majority of attention thus far in the adaptation of the electronic processing methods in the banking industry have been devoted to the internal functions of a given bank. The success of the MICR plan is representative of the benefits of uniform procedures within the banking world.

Looking into my crystal ball I can visualize a nationwide data communications banking network which one day will permit all banking functions to automatically flow from one bank to another, be electronically processed and the individual accounts instantaneously and perpetually maintained.

Deposit Machine

BANKOGRAPH, a fast, automatic deposit system, was shown to bankers attending the American Bankers Association Convention by The Mosler Safe Company.

Bankograph accepts deposits of checks, paper currency, and change, making a photographic copy of the deposit. At the same time, the unit photographs the accompanying deposit slip. When the transaction is completed, the machine returns one copy of the validated deposit slip to the depositor.

At the end of the day, checks and cash are proved against deposit slips. In the event of a discrepancy, the deposit slips may be checked against the photographic record of the deposit.

When placed in a bank lobby, according to John Mosler, president of The Mosler Safe Company, Bankograph will relieve congestion at regular tellers’ positions during peak hours by accepting deposits without requiring tellers’ time. In many cases, he said, Bankograph may be used for after hours deposits or for off premises banking.

Bankograph is manufactured by Reflectone Electronics, Incorporated, a subsidiary of Universal Match Corporation, and sold nationally by The Mosler Safe Company. Further information on Bankograph is available from The Mosler Safe Company, 320 Park Avenue, New York 22, N. Y.

Get Nebraska Bankers Attention

By BEN HALLER, JR.
Editor

Bankers attending the 65th annual convention of the Nebraska Bankers Association in Lincoln last month had plenty to talk about—bank holding companies, branch banking, credit unions, and tax inequities. All of these matters, as well as new association programs, were discussed on and off the platform for the 1,100 persons registered for the last fall convention of the NBA. As announced previously, annual conventions now will be held in the spring, so another convention will be held six months from now.

18-Month Term of Office

In keeping with this decision, Lyman Stuckey, president of the Lexington State Bank at Lexington, was elected for an 18-month term and ident until the annual convention in the spring of 1964. Serving him as vice president for this period will be N. T. Tiemann, president of the Commercial State Bank at Wausa.

Mr. Stuckey was advanced from the vice presidency to succeed B. D. Berkheimer, president of the First National Bank of Gordon, who becomes immediate past president.

Elected for a three year term as treasurer was E. T. Tanner, vice president of the First National Bank of Omaha.

Members elected to the executive council, all for three year terms, were:

Group 1 — Otto Kotouc, Jr., president, Home State Bank, Humboldt.
Group 3 — Adon Jeffrey, president, First National Bank, Wayne.
Group 5 — Reuben Gustafson, president, First State Bank, Hordville.
Group 6 — A. C. Peterson, president, First State Bank, Lodgepole.

President’s Report

Business sessions the first day of the convention were held in Hotel Cornhusker. President B. D. Berkheimer’s address was the first order of business and he announced that the executive committee meeting in session just prior to the convention had voted to instruct the NBA legislative committee to draw up a bill to be presented to the Nebraska legislature this coming session that would prohibit the formation of bank holding companies. He said this action was based on results of a poll conducted by the association to determine views of the membership on this subject. Results showed 312 banks opposed to bank holding companies, 35 in favor and 10 expressing no opinion. The other 67 banks did not reply.

Mr. Berkheimer reported that close cooperation had been carried on between the Nebraska Bankers Association and Nebraska Bar Association on a proposed bill that would give Nebraska a new Uniform Commercial Code. This is the result of several years’ work and the legislature will be asked to adopt the Code during its coming session in Lincoln.

Plan Joint Conference

President Berkheimer said it had been voted by committee to consolidate the Bank Management Conference at Crete, the Agricultural Credit meeting and the Installment Credit Conference into one conference next June. The three-day meeting will be held on the campus of Doane College in Crete with each of the above groups having a part in the conference. A special feature will be a management “game” of planning computer operations and programming specific bank functions on IBM computer equipment. Those at the conference would be taken in groups by bus to Lincoln in the evenings, where in smaller groups of eight or 10 men they will work on these problems.

The group meetings and clearing house meetings will be continued, Mr. Berkheimer said. The latter meetings are important because work that can be accomplished with smaller groups. He said this shows the desirability of having the additional help now available through the new assistant secretary, Wm. H. Osterberg, who was added to the staff last February.

Tells Legislative Plans

State Banking Director Ralph Misko, in his annual address to the convention, cited various recommendations he will make to the coming unicameral legislature for changes in banking laws of the state. These include personal loans on real estate; recommending that stockholders be permitted to borrow from their own banks the legal lending limit for customers; permission for banks to put an amount equal to 100 per cent of their capital into a bank building, as well as permitting state banks to hold stock in a building corporation from which they lease; making certain decisions of the department of banking subject to the right of appeal, a process not now available other than on legal matters, and one that would provide a “safety valve” for state banks; requiring that the majority of a state bank’s board of directors be residents of Nebraska; permission for officers and employees to borrow up to $2,500 from their own bank with approval of the board of directors, and no borrowing limit except the legal limit for those officers not active in the day-to-day management of the bank; changing detached teller facility law to permit banks in towns under 5,000 population to have such facilities (presently confined to banks in towns over 5,000).

United States Senator Carl T. Curtis of Nebraska was given a warm welcome. His review of the new tax bill adopted by Congress appears in the feature pages of this issue.

Hits Credit Unions

David M. Molthrop, community education consultant for the National Small Business Association, Washington, D. C., proved to be a real stem-winder as the final speaker for the first day. His blast at the unbridled, unsupervised growth of credit unions was paced in such a way as to shake any banker in the audience loose from his lethargy concerning this subject. With the challenge that he will debate any union official, credit union or cooperative official at any time, any place, he proceeded to display an understanding of this growing threat to commercial banking that must have opened the eyes of many bankers.

He said that in the period from 1939-43 credit unions filled a void that banks failed to fill. The credit unions then developed further into the area of commercial banks through the small loan route. He said coop leaders have gained control of credit unions and have constantly been moving into the field of big banking. He said credit unions have expanded from $700 million in assets in 1953 to $6.6 billion in 1962.

Fair Taxation Needed

If credit unions want to operate in the financial system of this country, Mr. Molthrop said, they should be placed under proper supervision as their competitors are, and be made to pay their fair share of taxes, which they are now not doing. He said one rule that should be established and enforced is that credit union members should have a common employer not just a common bond.

Payment of proper taxes is a crucial issue, he emphasized. He suggested that one way to bring home payment of taxes to the public would be to have each person receive all his yearly income in one lump sum, then have to pay out federal taxes in one lump sum, state taxes likewise, and people would then realize the extent of their taxes. “Then,” he suggested, “we ought to have an election the next day.”

Rural Credit Unions

He told Nebraskans he was tired of helping pay their electric bills through his taxes, since there are no private power companies in the state. Further encroachment on an individual’s taxes would be made, he said, if Secretary of Agriculture Freeman was successful in giving $500,000 to a campaign to tell the 20 million people of rural America of the advantages of rural credit unions. This plot first came to light last January when Mr. Freeman instructed his Director of Agricultural Credit to take necessary steps to implement a program of expansion of rural credit unions.

He said private industry that gives credit unions on-premise services free of charge is helping sustain a program that is in direct competition with commercial banks which represent private enterprise. He called on banks to join the National Small Business Association, which carries on a national program to bring attention to these inequities and seeks their correction through appropriate legislation so that all who compete in the financial field will compete fairly and pay just taxes.

The business session was concluded the first day with election of officers and adoption of resolutions. Lee L. Loerch, vice president and cashier at First National, Tekamah, presented the committee’s nominations report and all officers as presented were elected, as noted above.

Resolutions Adopted

George Rainbolt cashier of the First National, McCook, read the report of the resolutions committee. Resolution V called for the elimination of tax inequalities, particularly of governmentally created and tax-sheltered or tax exempt institutions competing with banks but not bound by banking restrictions.

Resolution VI called for continued efforts to attain still more equitable taxation of savings and loan institutions.

Resolution VII said 85 per cent of the membership participated in an association poll on bank holding com-companies and 87 per cent of the participants voted against the formation of bank holding companies in Nebraska. It then stated the executive council and Past Presidents Association of the NBA had passed a motion directing the legislative committee to draft a suitable bill for this purpose, and called on the NBA membership to support this bill actively when it is presented in the 1963 legislature.

Resolution VIII endorsed again the dual system of banking, stated there is a movement which could eliminate this dual system, and called on the NBA to reaffirm its position in support of the dual system of banking.

All resolutions were passed unanimously.

Meet in New Building

Activities of the second day were conducted in the beautiful, new Nebraska Center for Continuing Education. Nebraska bankers had a special interest in this structure for the original plan for its construction was presented to Nebraska bankers at their convention in Lincoln in 1958. Bankers took a leading part in raising the necessary funds throughout the state and contributed approximately 18 per cent themselves of the nearly $1 million in funds collected. The matching grant from the Kellogg Foundation completed the amount necessary to put up the building.

After breakfast in the spacious auditorium as guests of Lincoln banks, registrants adjourned to the theater section for the business program. Secretary Osterberg gave details of the combined Bank Management Conference to be held in Crete next June.

Two Nebraska University students gave brief talks on the foreign student program in American universities. One was Tom Kotouc, a son of Otto Kotouc, Jr., president of the Home State Bank at Humboldt. He did an excellent job in presenting his talk. Dick Weill was the other student. Both proved themselves at ease on the platform and fine speakers.

A.B.A. Election

At the meeting of NBA members of the American Bankers Association, presiding officer was N. T. Tiemann, president of the Commercial State at Wausa and vice president of the A.B.A. for Nebraska. Mr. Berkheimer was elected a member of the A.B.A. nominating committee for next year. Alternate is Minor P. Baird, president of the Farmers State at Superior.

R. Duane Saunders, director of the Office of Debt Analysis of the United States Treasury, presented a talk titled, “The Practical Application of Federal Debt Management Objectives.” He used numerous color chart slides to show the breakdown of the national debt and issues of securities sold in various markets.

Final speaker was William H. H. “Tippy” Dye, Nebraska University’s director of athletics. He introduced the head football coach and his staff as well as coaches of the various other sports sponsored by the university.

The convention was concluded with a buffet luncheon at Hotel Cornhusker ballroom.

The evening banquet the first day of the convention was again a big success and was followed by an excellent program of entertainment furnished by the husband-wife team of Doraline and Ellis. Their musical revue of American stage play songs was well received by the entire audience.—End.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF OMAHA

Northwestern Banker, November, 1962
Omaha News

HAREHOldERS of The Omaha National Bank were to meet November 9 to vote on a stock split proposal. Directors called the meeting last month to ask shareholders to approve splitting the bank’s outstanding shares one for four, increasing the bank’s capital from $8 million to $32 million. A 25 percent stock dividend then would be approved according to the board proposal. Thus the number of shares outstanding would be increased from 400,000 to 1,000,000.

The board also announced its intention to pay a 24 percent per share dividend in December, 1962, and to establish a regular quarterly dividend rate of 21 cents per share commencing in March, 1963, if shareholders approve the stock split and dividend. The present dividend rate, adjusted to the proposed new stock basis, is 20 cents per share per quarter.

Omaha National Goes Electronic

A SPECIAL press conference was held last month at The Omaha National Bank to introduce the newest member of the bank’s expanding staff. He was described by Board Chairman W. B. Millard, Jr., as possessing considerable sophistication and one who fully merits the special remodeling that was done to provide him with an extra large, glass-enclosed office.

His performance pleased Mr. Millard and other officials of the bank as well as drawing praise from reporters who are accustomed to seeing just about anything happen.

He has now been introduced to all customers of The Omaha National through special mailings as “Mr. 1401,” but to the staff he is known officially as the IBM 1401 system, or more intimately as “the mastermind.”

The new system is similar to that found in other large banks, including the 1401 processing unit, the 1402 card reader punch, the 1412 reader-sorter and the 1403 printer. The big difference

D. W. Ryan, vice president of the First National Bank, has been appointed to the A.B.A. installment credit commission by M. Monroe Kimbrel, A.B.A. president.

Newest Member of our Staff;
"Mr. 1401"

Next time you're in Omaha, be sure to come in and meet "Mr. 1401"—the new "whiz-kid" of the Omaha National Bank.

He can't mop the floors or wash the windows, but he's mighty handy around the bank. If we wanted him to, he could program a flight to the moon, or tell one of our vice-presidents his chances of staying out of the rain.

But that's not why we hired him.

He's here to conquer the problems of mounting paper work. For example, "Mr. 1401" reads and sorts up to 900 checks a minute — and can make as many as 3,300, eight-digit computations a second! He stores endless details in his fantastic "memory system"—and can produce amazing amounts of specific information in minutes with just the push of a button.

No other bank in Nebraska has such a complete electronic system as the IBM 1401 Data Processing System. Come in and watch "Mr. 1401" at work, next time you're in Omaha.

Grand Island Building

Construction of the new Commercial National Bank Building in Grand Island, Neb., was started recently.

The new building is being constructed adjacent to the bank's present drive-in facility. Edward Huwaldt, president, said that if weather conditions are favorable, the new building should be completed in about one year. The structure will measure 88 feet on Third Street and 100 feet on Cedar. Parking will be provided at the rear of the building. The main banking floor will include 10 teller windows, a customers' waiting lounge, a safety deposit vault, and an interior garden. A community room is planned for the lower level.

Exterior will be of brick and glass with black granite columns framing a silver and gold solar screen on the south and west elevations.

NBA Committees at Work

Committees of the Nebraska Bankers Association are hard at work planning activities of the association in the coming months.

The legislative committee, under Chairman J. R. Kenner, president of the Thayer County Bank at Hebron, met in Lincoln October 25. This committee will present a bill to the Nebraska legislature early in 1963 for adoption of the Uniform Commercial Code. This major project has been under intensive study by the NBA in cooperation with the Nebraska Bar Association for several years.

The committee also will present a bill seeking to ban bank holding companies from Nebraska. This is in line with the wishes of the membership as noted in the convention story in this issue. The committee also will take up any other matters pertinent to banking interests that come up in the next legislative session.

Mr. Kenner's committee consists of eight other bankers, one from each of the six groups, plus one from Lincoln and one from Omaha.

November 8 Meeting

A joint meeting of seven committees will be held Thursday, November 8, starting at 9:45 a.m. in the Yancey Hotel at Grand Island. These committees are: Agricultural, bank management, education, group insurance and pensions, insurance and protection, public relations, and installment credit. The session will last until approximately 3:30 p.m.

Service Study Committee

The NBA Service Study Committee was appointed by Immediate Past President B. D. Berkheimer as one of his last official functions before leaving office last month. Chairman is Ed Cosgriff, chairman of the City National Bank at Hastings. The committee is made up of two bankers from each group, plus two from Omaha and two from Lincoln. It will study all facets of banking including holding companies, branch banking, and financial services performed by banks in the public interest.

Legislative Dinners

Following the November election, all state legislators elected at that time will be invited to attend one of 36 legislative dinners planned by the Nebraska Bankers Association for representatives of the state's 43 districts. The chairman for each of the 36 dinners is being selected from the district in which the meeting will be held. These dinners will enable bankers to become acquainted with their state legislators, as well as affording an opportunity to discuss bank matters that may come up in the legislature.
Save taxes AND dollars for your employees!

You can now with a profit sharing trust designed by the National Bank of Commerce Trust and Savings. Congress has provided many tax advantages to a savings plan established by corporations for their officers and employees. The "qualified plans" offer so many tax and savings advantages that most large national corporations have established profit sharing plans. But Nebraska corporations have lagged behind in establishing the plans because there has been no uniform plan devised which could profitably be adopted by a corporation regardless of size. N.B.C. has worked out all the details for a qualified profit sharing plan for large or small Nebraska corporations with these outstanding features:

- Maximum tax advantages
- A program of central management
- Uniform administrative procedures
- A flexible program suitable to any size Nebraska bank or corporation.
- It will pay you—not just in the accumulation of extra dollars and cents, but also in added employee good will—to look into N.B.C.'s special plan.

Mr. Sommerhalder will join Ed Coblentz, president of Farmers State, in management of that bank. Mr. Coblentz recently was elected president following the sudden death of G. K. Waldron.

George W. Barlow, Jr., has been appointed assistant cashier of the First National Bank and Trust Company, according to an announcement made recently by Burnham Yates, president of the bank.

After graduation he spent 17 months with the U. S. Army. In April, 1958, Mr. Barlow returned to Lincoln and the First National Bank and Trust Company to pursue his career in the field of banking.

Gresham Cashier a Suicide

As Examiner Walks in Bank

Arthur Walford, 73, cashier of the Gresham State Bank at Gresham, committed suicide with a shotgun in the rear room of the bank October 22 as State Bank Examiner F. H. Pochop entered the front door. Immediate investigation disclosed a "sizeable" shortage and a more detailed examination pegged the defalcation in the neighborhood of $468,000.

David Yung, 93, president of the bank, who had unlocked the door to admit Mr. Pochop, said the bank is not insured with FDIC. Mr. Walford had seen Mr. Pochop step from his car, and as Mr. Yung went to unlock the front door to admit him, Mr. Walford went to the back room and shot himself, the sheriff reported.

State Banking Director Ralph E. Misko said no determination has been made conclusively yet as to what happened to the money. He said if preliminary examinations are correct, "all the bank's capital, surplus, undivided profits and fidelity bonds would be exhausted to meet obligations."

The June statement of condition showed assets of $722,731, liabilities of $681,931 and capital accounts of $103,799. The report was signed by Mr. Yung, Mr. Walford and Vice President and Director H. I. Hylton of York.

It appeared that the defalcation had accumulated over a long period of years.

Era of Change Stressed by Speakers at Iowa Convention

By MALCOLM FREELAND and BEN HALLER, JR.

IOWA bankers had the seriousness of a global war threat firmly impressed on them last month when the Cuban crisis erupted during their 76th annual convention in Des Moines. They got a first-hand report on the treachery of Russia and the communists from General Mark Clark (U.S.A. Ret.), who threw away his prepared manuscript and barreled into the Reds in a hard-hitting speech in which he supported the action of President Kennedy and stated that Russia recognizes only force and will back away when it is exhibited.

The tenseness of the week was further brought home when two of the prominent speakers on the program had to cancel their appearance because they were directly involved in the government maneuvering in Washington and the United Nations. Unable to appear were Iowa's U.S. Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper, who, as a member of the committee of 17 Congressmen on tap for such emergencies, was recalled to Washington, and the Hon. Francis T. P. Plimpton, deputy representatives of the United States to the United Nations, who received orders to remain in New York with Ambassador Stevenson.

Opinion of the record 4,838 persons who registered for the meeting was solidly in favor of the action shown by the blockade of Cuba.

The new high in registration was reached with 2,535 men attending and 2,303 ladies registered. The 1961 total was 4,518.

The speakers covered a diversity of topics during the three days of meetings, with the interest of Iowa bankers in getting such a broad perspective evidenced by the large attendance at every session. If any common thread could be selected as tying all the speeches together it would be the one emphasizing "change"—changes that have taken place in farming, business and banking, and more importantly, changes that are posed for the future.

At the 14th Annual Agricultural Breakfast Conference, which took up the first half-day of the convention, this emphasis on "change" was brought out by nearly every speaker. Herbert B. Howell, extension economist at Iowa State University, Ames, said: "Farming today is a dynamic and changing business. Only farmers who recognize this trend are willing to make changes and adjust to changing times will survive. Bankers and people with lending institutions are going to have to keep up with these changes. They must provide a credit framework that fits in with this new kind of Iowa agriculture."

Northwestern Banker, November, 1962
Carl G. Breeze, president of the Bank of Kremmling, Colo., who was elected president of the A.B.A. state bank division recently, discussed “Cattle Producer—and Feeder Outlook.” He predicted the price of cattle will hold up over the next few years. If the market does slip, he stated, better quality cattle will hold up best. Current prices are where they should be, based on production costs, he added. “If prices go up,” Mr. Breeze warned, “beginners will enter the market. Bankers can play an important part in this respect.”

Mr. Breeze gave the following valuation per head for cattle during the past 95 years: 1867—$19.60; 1900—$26.40; 1933—$17.78 (low for the century); 1956—$88.10, and 1962—$140.

He expects the over-all price in the 1960’s to be even higher due to the increase in the population and higher wage scales.

George H. Spence, ag representative for American National Bank and Trust Company, Chicago, talked on “The Importance of the Cattle Feeding Industry to the Economy of Iowa.” He showed the part this industry plays in the total farm income of the state and the dependence of other sectors of the economy on the success of cattle feeding.

Charles H. Walcott, president of the Security National Bank in Sioux City, presided throughout the convention as president of the Iowa Bankers Association until the final morning when his successor, Herb L. Ollenburg, was elected president for 1962-63. Mr. Walcott, in his president’s address, also emphasized the importance of cattle to Iowa, particularly this year, and expressed the hope that too many farmer-feeders would not go overboard in buying prices. He also called on Iowa bankers to take an objective look at suggestions being made for changes in banking regulations by the Comptroller of the Currency and others.

Mr. Walcott personally made a motion to adopt a resolution he presented for the endorsement by the IBA of Harry W. Schaller, president of the Citizens First National Bank of Storm Lake, for election as a director of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago. The motion was seconded by several and unanimously passed. Mr. Schaller is a past president of the IBA. He is seeking election to the directorship now held by Vivian W. Johnson, chairman of the First National Bank, Cedar Falls, who announced some time ago he would not be a candidate for the office.

Mr. Walcott was presented the ivory gavel in recognition of his service as president by Charles R. Gossett, chairman of the board of Mr. Walcott’s bank, Security National. Mr. Gossett was IBA president himself in 1939-40.

Charles J. Scanlon, president of the Federal Reserve Bank, Chicago, cited the fact that 55 per cent of Iowa’s farmers in 1959 “sold products valued at $10,000 or less,” adding that “the population and labor of the 97,000 farms producing less (than $10,000) adds up to a big potential addition to the state’s urban population and work force. (This) has offered manufacturing and other firms an incentive to settle in Iowa.”

Mr. Scanlon said the keen public interest in banking at this time is not necessarily generated by current proposals to change the banking system or the industry’s own focusing of attention on its problems, but rather public interest has been sharpened by the part banking plays in the economic growth factor that is posed by both political parties. He said studies show the current banking system to be sound and that a basic overhaul is not necessary. Banking has grown less rapidly than the economy as a whole and compared to other financial institutions, he said. However, he did not feel these facts were disturbing because there is no reason why banks should grow as fast as the economy—because the public is unconcerned as to who provides the services. This, he said, should be the concern of bankers.

He advised banks not to follow unwise policies in their aggressive efforts to be competitive, but rather follow intelligent planning in being competitive.

David Rockefeller, president and chairman of the executive committee of The Chase Manhattan Bank, New York, called for a cut in personal and corporation taxes of $8 to $10 billion annually in order to give the right kind of stimulation to the economy. He reasoned that a big enough tax cut would stimulate the expansion growth needed to create new jobs, new production and new marketing that eventually would upgrade the economy and actually result in greater federal tax income to balance the budget. He said if this nation does not improve its economic growth, other economic problems probably will worsen progressively and thus become more difficult to solve.

Miss Hilda H. Kollman, president of the National Association of Bank Women, and vice president and cashier of the State Bank of Blue Island, Ill., spoke on “Women in Banking,” telling the great strides made by women in performing successfully the ex-

Northwestern Banker, November, 1962
Executive duties assigned them in banks both large and small.

Gordon L. Mennen, president of the Le Mars Savings Bank, reported on plans for celebrating the Centennial in 1963 of the national banking system and dual system of banking, then showed the film on this program made by the A.B.A.

M. Monroe Kimbrel, A.B.A. president and chairman of the First National Bank at Thomson, Ga., made a real impression on the packed ballroom during his first appearance before a state bankers' convention following his election at Atlantic City. He proved himself an able speaker, with the kind of platform polish that held attention as he went through the A.B.A. program for the year and set forth its stand on various matters, with practically no reference to notes before him.

He said much credit for the gains made by banking during the recently concluded session of Congress must be given to rank and file members from all states, who supported every program when called on to do so by A.B.A. headquarters. He said his office will continue to review any legislation coming up and when President Kennedy's tax bill is presented next year, A.B.A. will look at it objectively to see that it is honest tax reform on a broad, strong base that will be in the best interests of the nation.

He reported that at the NABAC convention in Florida, an administration speaker had proposed increasing FDIC coverage for banks from $10,000 to $25,000 with no increase in present premiums.

He also asked bankers not to approach suggested changes within the industry with closed eyes, but rather with a view to seeing what proposals, if any, are for the betterment of service to customers, and to banks.

Comptroller of the Currency James J. Saxon, Washington, D.C., outlined the steps his office plans to take immediately for changes in line with the 84-point report submitted to the President by his office several weeks ago. These steps are reviewed in a special feature article in this issue.

General Mark W. Clark (U.S.A. Ret.), president of The Citadel in Charleston, S.C., spoke at a most appropriate time. Feeling was running high during the convention over the Cuban crisis and General Clark gave Iowans a first-hand report on what it feels like to be dealing with people who cannot be trusted and who do not observe the same ground rules of integrity and morality that other nations observe. He said during his tenure as Commander of the U.S. Fifth Army in Italy, he was requested by Gen. George Marshall to permit a Russian general and his staff to accompany General Clark's own staff through Italy. General Clark consented, but learned later that the political commissar who accompanied the Russian group, was following up behind American troops when they would take Italian villages and cities after fierce fighting and was going in and organizing Communist cells.

Later, General Clark headed the military government in Austria where he had face to face dealing with Russians and found them completely untrustworthy. He learned here, he said, that only a vigorous display of force that let the communists know there was no backing down was the only thing these people understood. Later, when he commanded UN forces in Korea, this same forceful attitude had to be displayed all the time to prevent Russians from running away with everything during political maneuvering during the "truce."

The non-traveling members of our Correspondent Banking Team often wish they could get to as many places as their signatures do. But they’re kept busy at Live Stock National serving our many banker friends by phone and mail.

PAUL BETZ, Senior Vice President, supervises our Trust and Mortgage Loan Departments. Paul is always on the lookout for unusual coins to add to his collection.

HAROLD JOHNSTON, Executive Vice President, is an authority on bonds. Harold spends his spare hours tape-recording music. KEN CHRISTENSEN, Comptroller and Auditor, can match fishing stories with the best of them and is also a philatelist of some note.

General Clark backed the play of President Kennedy, advocating force of arms if necessary to preserve the western hemisphere from further infiltration of communists.

Robert L. Myers, Jr., secretary of the Pennsylvania department of banking, Harrisburg, defended state's rights in his talk, "Dual Banking—Fact or Fancy." He is retiring president of the National Association of Supervisors of State Banks and disagrees sharply with some of the sweeping changes advocated by Comptroller Saxon, particularly where the latter would have national bank rights enforced over any state laws in the matter.

Walter P. Marshall, president of Western Union Telegraph Company, New York, gave bankers information on the "Conquest in Communications," which consisted in great measure of the part Western Union is taking in national defense work. Many in the audience did not realize it, but Mr. Marshall was trying for the first time one of Western Union's inventions. The two panes of clear glass that were placed in front of him on each side of the podium were connected by wires with backstage equipment. His entire speech was projected electronically on these plates of clear glass but the words were visible only to the speaker from his side of the platform. The backstage monitor set was controlled by an operator who triggered a revolving drum that had Mr. Marshall's speech printed in extra large type. This permits the speaker to look at his audience while actually seeing his speech projected on the glass.

One of the greatest windup speakers to tread the Iowa convention platform was Dr. Robert J. Samp, a cancer specialist from University Hospitals of Wisconsin Madison. He exhibited a rare sense of humor in a talk that captured every man and woman in the audience. The thesis of his talk was the "crime" that most Americans are committing against themselves by being overweight. He stated flatly that the audience averaged 15 pounds overweight per man. A look around the room was enough to verify this. He stated further that every 15 pounds of overweight has been figured by experts to trim three years off a person's life.

"This," he illustrated vividly, "is like being forced to carry a bowling ball with you wherever you go. And some of us here have two or three bowling balls!"

He told the men to figure their height in inches, then subtract their girth in inches. If the resulting number is 39, 40 or 41, the man is in good shape. If it's higher than 41 he's really lean. If the figure is 36 or below, "you're just plain overweight," he chided.

He asked bankers to consider the matter of getting and maintaining their proper weight as a challenge and to see if they have enough will power within themselves to achieve this desired level of weight. He suggested moderation in food, good exercise—brisk walking above all—use of plenty of water throughout the day, and proper rest.

Dr. Samp closed the convention on a note that left everyone in good humor and with good intentions.

John B. Keeline, president of Central Trust & Savings Bank, Cherokee, was introduced to the audience and a resolution backing him in his candidacy for election as treasurer of the A.B.A. in 1963 for a two-year term was adopted unanimously.

Social functions of the convention were again most entertaining. The Storm Lake, Iowa, Little Theatre Group staged the play “South Pacific,” in real professional fashion. Guy Lombardo and his orchestra played to a jammed house at the Val-Air Ballroom for the buffet supper dance, and the final general entertainment was Bob Newhart and a group of professional entertainers that did a fine job. The ladies also were entertained with an afternoon style show presented by Miss Pauline Trigere, and this was a highlight of the week for them.

The dates for the 1963 convention will be announced later.—End.

As a result the bank is in the unique position of building a completely new electronic department that is entirely staffed from its own employees. The six men involved in this work represent over 75 years of banking experience.

No employees will lose their jobs because of the new equipment, Mr. Johnson emphasized. Duties of some employees will change, giving opportunities for more interesting and advanced work to girls formerly doing routine sorting of 30,000 to 40,000 checks per day.

At the present time, work is progressing on conversion of trust accounting, demand deposit accounting, savings, installment loans, and bank payroll to the 1401 system. All of this should be accomplished by the start of 1963.

Eventually, all functions within the bank that can be handled on this equipment will be changed over. In addition, this equipment offers numerous possibilities for The Omaha National to serve even better its correspondent bank and commercial account customers, Mr. Johnson stated.

The equipment is in a special room in the lower lobby level of the bank and is available for inspection by interested bankers at any time.

Vincent Starzinger, board secretary, said that an institution achieves its greatest value through the time, energy and money of those associated with it.

“Few community leaders have given as much as all three to Iowa Methodist Hospital as James Hubbell,” he said.

Mr. Hubbell was named to the board in 1938 and appointed chairman of the building committee in 1942.

Installation of a fourth drive-in teller’s window has been announced by the National Bank of Des Moines. R. M. Donhowe, vice president, said the new window is at the southwest corner of the building and that this is the second expansion of the bank since it was established in 1955.

Mrs. Marie H. Donhowe, wife of Arthur T. Donhowe, president of the Central National Bank & Trust Company, died last month in a Des Moines hospital.

Mrs. Donhowe was born in Story City and lived in Des Moines 35 years. She was a member of St. John’s Lutheran Church, the Des Moines Woman’s Club, FZ Chapter of the P.E.O. Sisterhood and Ladies of the Des Moines Bankers Club.

Surviving are her husband, a son in Des Moines; a daughter in Charleston, W. Va.; two brothers, one in Davenport and one in Santa Ana, Calif., and six grandchildren.

Twenty-four members of the Women's Division, Cedar Rapids Chapter of A.I.B., chartered a bus and came to Des Moines one day last month to attend the Des Moines Chapter's Annual Fall Style Show.

They were guests of the Central National Bank & Trust Company during the day where they toured the bank, with special interest in the bank's automation program, which was shown, demonstrated and explained.

B. C. Grangaard, president, welcomed them; Mary Halstad, assistant cashier, gave a short talk on women in banking and the opportunities of advancement through A.I.B. study courses, and Clarence Dickson, assistant cashier, and chairman of the board of governors, Des Moines Chapter, discussed A.I.B. activities in the Des Moines area and offered several worthwhile tips for chapter growth and success.

Through their chairman, Wilma Wilkinson, Farmers State Bank of Marion (suburban bank), they extended an invitation to the women of the Des Moines A.I.B. to return the visit in the spring, reports Jane Byers, Central National, chairman of the Women's Division, Des Moines Chapter.

Council Bluffs Savings Drive-In Opens

OFFICERS, directors and employees of the Council Bluffs Savings Bank were pleased by an overwhelming response of about 15,000 persons last month to a highly-successful opening of the bank's new drive-in facility.

When the bank mailed its monthly statements several weeks ago, it enclosed entry blank cards, which were to be filled out with the customer's name, address and phone number. Supplementing these blanks were similar ones in the local newspaper. Object of the promotion was to encourage people of the Council Bluffs area to drive through the new drive-in to deposit their entries. The prize attraction was $1,856 in cash—the amount representing the year of the bank's founding—1856.

First prize was $1,000; second was $500 and third was $256, with ten prizes of $10 each. There was a ribbon-cutting ceremony; L. W. Ross, president, accepted from Congressman Ben F. Jensen an American flag which has flown over the White House; there was a trip through the drive-in in a 1914 Overland touring car, and Miss Council Bluffs was a charming helper during the morning ceremonies and the evening drawing for prizes . . . but the big news of the day was the all-day-long parade of cars—three abreast—through the drive-in to deposit chances on the prize money.

Joins Creston Bank

Arthur J. Duben has been promoted from vice president and cashier to vice president and manager of the agricultural department of Iowa State Savings Bank, Creston, according to Joseph G. Knock, president. Mr. Knock also announced the appointment last month of Peter J. Dykema to succeed Mr. Duben as vice president and cashier. Mr. Dykema has moved to Creston from Kalamazoo, Mich., where he was associated with a bank.

One of Mr. Duben's first duties last month as manager of the bank's expanding agricultural department was to host to 140 farmer-cattle feeders of the Creston area when the bank took the group to Iowa State University at Ames for the annual cattle feeders Hey-Day. Four buses provided transportation for the group. After the one-day meeting in Ames, they were guests of the Iowa State Savings Bank for dinner at the Des Moines Golf and Country Club during a stop en route back to Creston in the evening.

Mr. Knock also revealed last month that Iowa State Savings is the first bank in Iowa under $100 million in deposits to become fully automated. Complete automation of all bookkeeping and routine operational functions was begun in late September, utilizing electronic equipment installed by National Cash Register Company.

"It brings to the bank more depositors. We have had several open an account with us so they can share in the plan.

"The manner in which Central States men have presented the Bank-Health plan, and the way our customers have responded, has been a pleasure to us."

Bank-Health has many attractive features — frequently brings a bank new customers. It also is a service that returns a profit to the bank. May we provide you with complete details?
