Two Minneapolis Banks “Guarantee” Checks

The two largest banks in Minnesota -- the First National Bank of Minneapolis and the Northwestern National Bank of Minneapolis -- are planning to issue “checking guarantee cards” to selected customers. The plastic cards will guarantee that the bank will cover checks in amounts up to $100 presented by the bearer, no matter what his bank account may be.

Gordon Murray, president of the First National Bank, explained that the cards, which will be introduced by First National after August 14, “augment our recently-introduced Checking Plus service,” checking accounts with a cash reserve for customers with approved credit lines of $600 or more, “and make possible an entirely new concept in checking account convenience.”

Mr. Murray also pointed out that the cards are neither identification cards nor credit cards, although John Moorhead, Northwestern National President, stated that they can provide “everything a credit card does” in service. Northwestern National which introduced the cards last week also provides a “Ready Reserve” service, comparable to First National’s “Checking Plus”.

It is anticipated that the check guarantee cards will make it easier for the customers with revolving charge accounts at their bank to cash checks, no matter where they may be. The cards have been seen by some as a means for the banks to compete more easily for the huge and growing business of consumer credit.

The guarantee cards will offer the two banks a tightly-controlled experimental program, since they have absolute control over who receives the cards and what the requirements are for obtaining the cards.

The banks also view the check guarantee cards as a means of educating the public for the eventuality of conducting all business without the use of checks or cash.

Both Northwestern National and First National pioneered in testing a credit card service in the late 1950’s, but the system proved too costly and cumbersome for profitable usage. Although some other large banks in the nation now offer a similar checking guarantee service, the introduction of the new cards by the Northwestern National and the First National mark the first time this service has been made available in the upper Midwest.

MONTANA NEWS

BUTTE: August 7 has been set as the starting date of a trial in the suit of Albert E. Leuthold, Montana superintendent of banks, to prevent a merger of the First National Bank of Butte with the Daily National Bank of Anaconda, recently approved by the comptroller of the currency. The merged bank plans to operate both existing offices as "divisions," but Mr. Leuthold contends that the merger will result in branch banking, which is contrary to existing Montana law. However, a Montana statute permits consolidated banks to maintain "merged offices." State Attorney General Forrest H. Anderson has ruled that the statute permits merged banks to conduct only the affairs of the merging bank and not to operate banking business at more than one location.

WYOMING NEWS

CHEYENNE: The American National Bank has purchased the Consistory Building in Cheyenne, which occupies the half-block adjoining the bank's present location. The announcement was made by bank President Michael E. Price, who did not disclose the terms of the transaction or the plans the bank has for the site. The building was formerly occupied by federal government offices.
