Insurance Agents Seek to Limit Banks

The nation's insurance agents are making another effort to limit insurance activities of lending institutions and holding companies. Their latest appeal, directed to the National Association of Insurance Commissioners (NAIC) would prevent banks from handling all insurance except credit life, health and accident. The Association of Registered Bank Holding Companies says the insurance agents are trying to stifle competition.

Both the National Association of Insurance Agents and the National Association of Mutual Insurance Agents submitted a legislative proposal to the NAIC's subcommittee on insurance holding companies at a recent hearing in St. Louis. Section one of the model bill would provide that: "No lending institution, or holding company, subsidiary or affiliate of the foregoing or any director, officer or employee thereof may directly or indirectly be licensed to sell insurance or act as a broker for insurance in this state, except that a lending institution may be licensed to sell credit life, health and accident insurance in accordance with regulations promulgated by the insurance commissioner."

Spokesmen for the NAIA and NAMIA state that corrective legislation is needed not only to protect the agent from "unfair competitive advantages" but also to "protect the right of the customer to choose the insurance

365 TIME CALCULATOR

ACCURATE

FOR ANY NUMBER OF DAYS

TESTED AND APPROVED BY HUNDREDS OF BANKS -IN USE SINCE 1921

It gives you at a glance the exact number of days between any date, past or future, and also the future due date after a determined number of days, without adding, subtracting or turning pages. The explanation below will convince you that you cannot afford to be without this amazing aid to your interest and time figuring.

HOW TO USE STUMME'S TIME CALCULATOR

- 1. Assuming that today is August 5th, take the page with August 5th at the top.
- Assume a note was given March 5th and paid today, how many days have elapsed? Answer: Look for March 5th, and in the second column headed "Past Number of Days" will be the answer, 153 days.
- 3. Now find the number of days on a note due January 20th of the following year. Answer: Look in the third column opposite January 20th headed "Future Number of Days," and find the answer . . . 168 days.
- 4. Now find the due date of a note given today for 120 days. Look in the third column, "Future Number of Days," until you find the number 120. Look at the date, and you will find that it is December 3rd.
- * On a note with partial payments at various dates, turn to page corresponding to date of note and find days elapsed to date of payment in "Future Number of Days" column.
- * Simple, rapid calculation of number of days between dates
- * A page for each day of the year
- * Completely accurate
- * No chance of costly error

(ARBHC) responded with a letter to the NAIC stating in part, "The agents associations' newest proposed State legislation has the same basic purpose as their earlier draft proposals, that is, to protect their members from competition from insurance agencies affiliated with bank holding companies, banks, savings and loan associations and credit unions.

"We submit that this legislation is anticompetitive, unconstitutional and not in the interest of the public generally, or of consumers particularly. We urge the National Association of Insurance Commissioners not to lend its good name to legislation of this nature.'

The ARBHC acknowledged that Section 7 of the Bank Holding Company Act reserves to the states their power to regulate banks, bank holding companies and their subsidiaries, but contends this was not new authority but rather a preservation of existing powers. "The intent of Congress," ARBHC maintains, "was to make sure that the Act was not construed to preempt all State legislation concerning holding companies. It is clear that Section 7 does not give States a basis for discriminating against bank holding companies and denying them equal protection of the laws.

"No Federal statute can validly authorize a State to enact a statute which is unconstitutional. We submit that the proposed prohibition against the licensing of an insurance agency to write certain types of insurance simply because it is affiliated with a bank holding company is an unfair and unreasonable restraint on trade and commerce and not constitutional."

Noting that the NAIA has taken credit for enactment of "anticom-petitive statutes prohibiting lending institutions from being licensed as insurance agents in several States," the ARBHC comments:

"Leaving aside the conspiratorial aspects of this effort, it remains to be seen whether these statutes can withstand a court test of their constitutionality."

The ARBHC concluded by saying that the legislation proposed by NAIA and NAMIA runs counter to various federal acts and state laws and repeated, "The legislation proposed by the agents associations is unnecessary, unconstitutional, and against the public interest because it is intended to stifle competition."

A high official of NAIA told the Northwestern Banker some time ago that one of the major causes of agent concern over banks writing insurance had been the activities of large bank holding companies in the Carolinas and other southern claim they have evidence of lending institutions there using coercive tactics to get borrowers to purchase insurance from them, rather than leaving the selection to the borrower. There was not widespread evidence of similar restrictive activities in other states, he said.

A midwest insurance association official told the Northwestern Banker that complaints received by his office about banks are few and scattered. He emphasized that banks in many small communities are providing a needed service and doing it well through their insurance agencies. Many bank agencies belong to the state insurance agency associations, he pointed out, and are valued members of the association. "All we ask," he said, "is that the insurance business be kept distinctly apart from the lending business so the customer does not feel he's being pressured to buy his insurance at the bank when he might prefer to deal with his own independent agent.'

Apparently, the thrust of NAIA's effort is to ask the NAIC for the toughest possible ruling in the hope that ensuing discussion will at least result in a modified position that will curb the flagrant violations.
