Fed Issues Credit Card Regulations

New regulations to protect credit card holders against billing errors and shoddy merchandise have been issued by the Federal Reserve System to become effective October 28. The Federal Reserve was directed by Congress to draw up such regulations to implement Public Law 93-495 passed last year by Congress, titled Fair Credit Billing Act.

The regulations continue the erosion of the "holder in due course" doctrine that has been taking place for a long period of time. The American Bankers Association responded earlier this year to the Fed's invitation for comment on proposed regulations issued last May, and on August 18 submitted a 72-page document responding to each specific section of the regulation with comments or suggestions.

Among the provisions of the regulation are these:

1. Credit card companies may be held accountable by credit card users for the quality and service-ability of merchandise purchased by the card holders. The "holder in due course" doctrine is eliminated, thus negating or tempering the rule of law under which customers could be held liable for bills to creditors, even when the credit was used to buy goods which turned out to be unserviceable.

2. Alleged errors in bills for credit cards or open-end credit, such as checking account loans, are subject to specific procedures for resolution. Customers have 60 days to notify the lender of a contested billing. The lender must correct or challenge the alleged error in 90 days or forfeit the amount in dispute.

Before this could take place, three pre-existing conditions would have to be met: A) The purchase price must be in excess of $50.00. B) The purchase must be made in the cardholders state or within 100 miles of cardholders current mailing address. C) The cardholder must have made a good faith attempt to return the merchandise or reconcile the dispute with the merchant.

A number of options are listed in the regulation for the customer and the bank, with specific time frames for action.

3. An important point is included in regard to customers who pay cash rather than use a credit card. Credit card companies may not restrain merchants from offering discounts to these cash customers. Merchants generally now pay from 2% to 5% discount on the total volume of credit card transactions, and many cash buyers feel they should receive a similar discount.

4. Credit issuers may not cancel a customer's account or file an adverse report on the customer's credit rating while a dispute is in progress.

5. All issuers of credit cards must notify every cardholder (at least active ones) of his or her rights under the new law. This Statement of Rights, contained in the Federal Reserve regulation must be provided to cardholders within one billing cycle after October 28.

In 1973, the latest year for which complete figures are available, the ABA reports Americans used their bank cards 632.5 million times, a average of more than three times for every man, woman and child in the U. S., and 1973 volume was up about one-third over the previous year. About 1,500 banks actually issue cards and operate their own plans. The average card purchase is about $20, and the average outstanding balance is $280.

Full details of the Federal Reserve regulation are expected to be in the hands of all lenders at any early date.

Bank on September 12 transferred $6 million from earnings to loan loss reserve. This anticipates additional loan losses, primarily from credits extended for the development of the recreational facilities at Devil's Nest in northeastern Nebraska. The bank initiated foreclosure proceedings on the real estate loan to Devil's Nest Development Company in late July. The after tax effect is an indicated reduction of the bank's and Omaha National Corporation earnings to a range of $1.5 to $2 million, compared to $4,400,000 earned by the corporation in 1974. No change in dividend policy is presently anticipated.

- 1. Your bank can eam a fee for referring a lease customer. The fee, based on a percentage of equipment cost, is paid when the lease agreement is completed. The fee can be substantial and the transaction has no recourse to the bank.
- 2. If your bank can use the depreciation and tax benefits available from leasing, this plan is for you. A participation agreement is prepared with the bank and LeaseAmerica each owning a mutually agreeable portion of the equipment. The depreciation and tax benefits accrue to both parties in the same portion of participation. Income and expenses, plus any residual benefits are also shared proportionately. LeaseAmerica is paid a commensurate fee for providing documentation, servicing, statement mailing, and remittance of funds to the bank.
