Understanding the New Committee

A WIDE-ANGLE view of the activities of the Depository Institutions Deregulation Committee—rather than a narrow focus on its decisions day-to-day—may lend a better perspective on the financial community's progression toward deregulation. (The Deregulation Committee is charged, under the recent omnibus financial deregulation law, with responsibility for phasing out deposit interest limits between now and March 31, 1986.)

While many bankers and various financial trade associations have been intensely interested in the complexities and competitive implications of the Deregulation Committee's actions, those who step back a pace or two and examine the Committee's efforts more dispassionately may gain a better understanding of the deregulation process.

The anomaly inherent in the Deregulation Committee's task is the fact that it must use the tools of regulation in order to move toward deregulation. Just as important, the Committee has inherited from the Congress all of the fiercely partisan atmosphere that heretofore dominated the lawmakers' deliberations whenever the subject was Regulation Q and the interest rate gap between what banks and specialized thrift institutions are allowed to offer.

Recent Decisions

Decisions reached late last month by the Committee allow thrifts to retain their one-quarter percent interest rate advantage for six-month money market CDs in limited cases, and for 30-month CDs as well. However, banks will be able to roll over maturing money market CDs at least one time at the same interest rate as thrifts are allowed to offer.

Banks also will have interest rate parity with thrifts for six-month CDs when the Treasury bill rate is $8\frac{3}{4}$ or more and $7\frac{1}{4}$ or less. In other words, the differential applies to new six-month CDs in a sliding scale only when Treasury bill rates are in the $7\frac{1}{4}$ to $8\frac{3}{4}$ range.

When T-bill rates are $8\frac{3}{4}$ or more, the rules allow all institutions to pay up to one-quarter percent more than the prevailing T-bill rate. And all institutions can pay up to $7\frac{3}{4}$ on the six-month CDs even when prevailing T-bill rates are at $7\frac{1}{4}$ or less, though banks and thrifts may pay less than the ceilings in any case.

Maximum interest rates on the 30-month CDs were boosted by one-half percent. This means that thrift institutions can pay the same rate as 30-month Treasury obligations, and banks now can pay one-quarter percent less. However, the "cap" on interest payable on these CDs remains in place at 12% for thrifts and $11\frac{3}{4}$ % for banks. Also, even when 30-month Treasury obligations are paying less than $9\frac{1}{2}$ %, thrifts will be allowed to pay up to $9\frac{1}{2}$, while banks will be allowed to pay up to $9\frac{1}{4}$ %.

Early Withdrawals

Finally, the Deregulation Committee stiffened early withdrawal penalties; in some cases, early withdrawal under the new rules may result in a reduction in principal. The new penalty for early withdrawal when an instrument's original maturity is one year or less is an amount equal to three months' simple, nominal interest. And the penalty is six months' nominal, simple interest on certificates of longer maturity.

The Committee has been approaching the deregulation process by making very small alterations of two highly important deposit instruments. The result is a pricing schedule which ranges from free competition at the low end of the interest rate range; to a sliding scale of discriminatory prices at the mid-point of the range; to an equitable price-fixing system intended to deal with peaks in interest rate cycles.

Even at the top end of the scale, traditional depositories probably would not be able to compete with money market mutual funds. However, a significant but little-noticed element of the Deregulation Committee's decisions will make both the six-

LEGALITY TO BE APPROVED BY DORSEY, WINDHORST, HANNAFORD, WHITNEY & HALLADAY, ATTORNEYS, ST. PAUL, MINNESOTA

The City of Inver Grove Heights, Minnesota, is located in northern Dakota County. The City has an area of 19,000 acres. There are several large industrial concerns located in Inver Grove Heights which account for a major portion of the City's assessed valuation. Those industries are, for the most part, located in the Pine Bend area in the extreme southern part of the City. Most of the industries are highly automated and consequently are major taxpayers but not large employers. The City's major industries are: Northern States Power Company; Farmers Union Exchange; and Union Carbide. Other industries in the City are Mid-America Pipeline Company; Mid-Space Steel and Screen; Krech Iron and Wipline Incorporated. There are two major banks in Dakota County which have opened branch facilities in Inver Grove Heights. As of December 31, 1979, these banks had total deposits in excess of $76,500,000.

These bonds are being issued pursuant to Chapters 429 and 475, Minnesota Statutes, for the purpose of financing various street and utility improvements in the City. These bonds are payable primarily from special assessments levied against benefited property owners. In the opinion of counsel, these bonds are also legal and binding general obligations of the City of Inver Grove Heights, Minnesota, and all taxable property located therein is subject to the levy of sufficient taxes to pay the principal of and interest on the bonds without limit as to rate or amount should the assessments prove insufficient.
