THE First National Bank of Chicago, the First Trust and Savings Bank and the National Safe Deposit Company are governed by the same board of directors, and invite the business of responsible people, offering complete, convenient, and satisfactory financial service in every conservative form. These institutions are located in the First National Bank Building, at the Northwest corner of Dearborn and Monroe streets.

The First National Bank of Chicago

organized in 1863, was the eighth national bank to receive the approval of the Federal Government. During half a century its growth has been coincident with that of Chicago and the vast area of which this city is the commercial center. The bank's capital in 1863 was $205,000; today the bank has capital and surplus of $20,000,000. In 1863 the first published statement showed deposits of $273,000; deposits at the end of 1915 were $149,136,960. The bank's business is international in scope and under its divisional organization customers come into close, personal contact with officers familiar with financial requirements in their specific lines.

The First Trust and Savings Bank organized in December, 1903, with a capital of $1,000,000, confines its operations to savings, investment, and trust business. The success and growth of this bank have been marked. Its capital and surplus now amount to $10,000,000, and its deposits to more than $65,000,000. The savings department allows three per cent interest on savings accounts. Interest-bearing certificates of deposit are also issued. Special and reserve accounts are given particular attention. The Bond Department offers for sale only such securities as have been purchased primarily for the bank's own investment, while the Trust Department acts as trustee, administrator, and in other fiduciary capacities, both for individuals and corporations, under the authority of the law.
