Administration Invites Next Generation of Women Leaders From Across the Country to Submit Questions, Gather via Watch Parties for Event Webcast

WASHINGTON – On Monday, March 29, 2010, the U.S. Department of the Treasury, in partnership with The White House Council on Women and Girls, will convene a Women in Finance Symposium in celebration of Women's History Month. The symposium will bring together senior administration officials, private sector leaders, university presidents and women entering the field for a series of panel discussions to recognize the contributions of women and to discuss the best means to foster success among future generations of women in the public and private finance sectors.

The Administration is also offering the opportunity for students around the country to engage in the symposium via webcast. In addition to providing insight about how each achieved success in the world of finance, symposium panelists will answer questions submitted in advance from the next generation of women leaders. Students and young professionals can submit questions to WomenInFinance through the close of business on Friday, March 26, and gather for "watch parties" to see their questions answered live throughout the symposium.

CNBC anchor Maria Bartiromo will moderate the Symposium's opening panel and broadcast "Closing Bell with Maria Bartiromo" live from the Treasury Department later that afternoon.
