The Development Credit Authority (DCA) will permit USAID to utilize direct loans and loan guarantees that have market-based rates and other market-based terms and conditions to achieve sustainable development objectives where these objectives can be achieved more effectively through the use of credit mechanisms, as opposed to through grants or other financing mechanisms. The DCA will only be used in cases where credit risks can be accurately assessed, where the specific sovereign or non-sovereign developing country obligor can responsibly undertake the credit servicing obligation, and where the use of USAID credit mechanisms will assist in the development of private sector mechanisms that can sustain the development impact. Therefore, while DCA will offer USAID an additional financing mechanism, it will not alter the Agency's programmatic priorities. The Agency will continue to provide the majority of its assistance on a grant basis and will utilize the DCA to finance sovereign and non-sovereign development projects that are both developmentally sound and creditworthy.

The DCA is requested as a permitted transfer from funds appropriated to carry out Part I of the Foreign Assistance Act so that the actual amount of funds transferred for the subsidy cost of DCA credits can be commensurate with USAID's credit management capabilities. USAID has undertaken an ambitious Credit Management Improvement Action Plan and is implementing this plan with the cooperation of the Office of Management and Budget. The Agency is currently putting a number of far-reaching credit management reforms into effect and expects to have capabilities in place by the end of 1998 that will allow the transfer of the entire $15 million requested for the DCA.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records, for this program, the subsidy costs associated with the direct loans obligated and loan guarantees committed in 1992 and beyond, (including modifications of direct loans or loan guarantees that resulted from obligations or commitments in any year) as well as for the administrative expenses of this program. The subsidy amounts are estimated on a net present value basis.

The Overseas Private Investment Corporation encourages the participation of United States private sector capital and skills in the economic and social development of developing countries and emerging market economies. Its primary credit program is investment financing through loans and guaranteed loans.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, the Program Account records the subsidy costs associated with the direct loans obligated and loan guarantees committed in 1992 and beyond (including modifications of direct loans or loan guarantees that resulted from obligations or commitments in any year), as well as administrative expenses of this program. The subsidy amounts are estimated on a present value basis; the administrative expenses are estimated on a cash basis.

tives in Latin America and the Caribbean with a direct impact on the lives and the capacity for self reliance of people at the lowest economic levels. In addition to appropriations and private gifts, the Foundation is funded by annual transfers from the Social Progress Trust Fund administered by the Inter-American Development Bank. In 1999, the IAF will continue its new strategic programming approach which emphasizes: (1) building partnerships among grassroots organizations, Non-Governmental Organizations, local governments, and private enterprises to foster social and economic development at the local level; and, (2) expanding access to private business sector resources for grassroots development. The IAF will continue to refine its system of measuring the results of its grants for the purposes of identifying and disseminating best practices and lessons for the benefit of the major development funders, new private sector contributors and development practitioners. Using information derived from the results system that is based on the grassroots development framework from a set of learning practices focused on grants, the Foundation will systematically incorporate lessons learned back into the Foundation's strategic planning and grant decision-making processes. It will also disseminate the results assessment system and development information to partner organizations in the region, to other donors and enterprises supporting development activities, and to grassroots practitioners.

Development Grants.—This activity includes the cost of all grants made directly to grassroots membership and service organizations to carry out development projects in Latin America and the Caribbean. In 1999, the Foundation plans to award approximately 100 grants and 20 grant supplements in 17 countries.

Development Research and Evaluation.—This activity funds grants and fellowships for grassroots development research and for the evaluation of the Foundation's projects.

In-country Support.—Resources associated with this activity are used by local development professionals in Latin America and the Caribbean to provide grantees with technical assistance and training when necessary to conduct and assess the results of their projects.

Program Management and Operation.—This activity includes Foundation expenses for salaries and benefits, travel, rent, service contracts, and other support costs.

The African Development Foundation (ADF), a public corporation, is a unique agency of the U.S. Government that supports community-based, self-help initiatives to alleviate poverty and to promote sustainable development in Africa. Through its grant program, ADF has pioneered participatory development in Africa. Foundation grants are made directly to private grassroots African groups and are premised on self-help to foster self-reliance through the promotion of African leadership and ownership of the development process.

The Foundation has recently completed a 15-month comprehensive, reengineering process in which ADF has: (a) developed new strategic goals and objectives, at the corporate level and for all country programs, to focus and concentrate financial resources for greater impact; (b) completed an organizational restructuring to focus more human resources on field operations; (c) streamlined all programming and support systems to increase operational efficiency and effectiveness; and (d) implemented a plan designed to increase the decision making, program monitoring and evaluation capacity of field staff. In addition, ADF has installed a new grants accounting system and procured computer hardware and software to permit Internet access and connectivity with field staff. Finally, the Foundation is pursuing strategic partnerships with the private sector and other donors to leverage resources and to develop new modes of assistance for Africa.

In 1999, ADF will provide assistance to fifteen countries in Africa, but resources will be concentrated in eight: Benin, Ghana, Guinea, Mali, Senegal, Tanzania, Uganda, and Zimbabwe. This budget request will fund the Foundation's operating costs and more than 50 small grants to African non-governmental organizations, community-based groups and researchers, in pursuit of ADF's three strategic goals.

Program Components:

(1) Advance sustainable development and empowerment of the poor in Africa.—ADF will promote micro and small enterprise development which will generate employment and enhance income. ADF will also seek to improve community-based natural resource management for sustainable rural development. Increasing participation of African grassroots enterprises and producer groups in trade and investment relationships with the U.S. and within Africa is another primary focus of ADF. Finally, ADF will work to strengthen civil society and local governance and to encourage African governments to expand grassroots participation in policy-making and resource allocation processes. Examples of projects which will be funded are: micro-finance capital; business development services, training and technical assistance; soil and water reclamation; civil education; and advocacy training.

(2) Enhance U.S. assistance and relations with Africa.—ADF will share its experience and encourage expanded U.S. funding for participatory grassroots development, improve program and policy coordination on grassroots development among U.S. foreign assistance and foreign policy agencies, and leverage public and private resources through strategic partnerships.

(3) Expand use of participatory development policies and practices.—ADF will intensify its efforts to develop, evaluate and disseminate new interventions and methodologies for participatory development, and encourage African governments to increase utilization of participatory development "best practices."

Recent financial developments in Asia have required an urgent response from the international community. The United States, independently and through the multilateral mechanism of the International Monetary Fund (IMF), has taken a strong lead in shaping the international response to the threat of more widespread financial instability. The IMF has acted quickly to provide financial support in conjunction with strong policy direction to the affected countries in the region, mitigating the spillover effects from their financial crises on the global economy, and consequently on U.S. output and employment. It is imperative that the United States continue to provide strong leadership in the IMF and to support the IMF's efforts to bring about fundamental economic and financial sector reforms in these countries that establish the foundation for renewed growth. In consultation with Congress, the Administration expects to request a supplemental appropriation for 1998 for an increase in the U.S. quota of the IMF and for U.S. participation in the New Arrangements to Borrow (NAB) so that the IMF remains an effective promoter of international financial stability, which is essential to continued U.S. economic growth.

General and special funds—ContinuedUNITED STATES QUOTA, INTERNATIONAL MONETARY FUND—

Quota Increase.—The International Monetary Fund, established in 1945, is a multilateral organization of 182 member nations. Its functions include: promoting international monetary cooperation and exchange rate stability; facilitating the development of the productive resources of its members; and, consistent with these objectives, providing financial assistance with adequate safeguards to allow members to correct prolonged payments imbalances without resort to measures harmful to the international monetary system. The IMF is a subscription-based institution. Members' quota subscriptions are the primary source of the IMF's funding for members seeking to redress the underlying causes of severe and prolonged external payments problems. IMF quotas have not been increased since 1992.

The IMF membership completed the Eleventh Review of Quotas in September of 1997 and agreed on the need for a 45% overall increase in quotas to maintain the IMF's relative influence in relation to the growing international capital markets and its ability to respond effectively to financial crises. Recent IMF programs to provide crisis assistance in Asia have drawn heavily on the Fund's existing quota resources, reducing them to relatively low levels. The United States urgently needs to provide its share of the IMF's proposed $87 billion increase in regular resources so that the IMF can continue to meet members' anticipated demands while coping with additional exceptional calls under current crisis conditions should they arise.

In consultation with Congress, the Administration expects to request a supplemental appropriation for 1998 amounting to the U.S. dollar equivalent of 10,622.5 million Special Drawing Rights, $14.5 billion, for an increase in the U.S. quota for the IMF. In accordance with the budgetary treatment recommended by the Presidential Commission on Budgetary Concepts in 1968 and modified by the Congress in 1980, U.S. transactions with the IMF under the quota subscription are monetary exchanges which will not be scored as outlays and thus will not increase the deficit. This is because the United States receives a liquid, interest-bearing claim on the IMF, corresponding to any transfer under the U.S. quota subscription to the IMF, and that claim would be backed by the IMF's substantial reserves, including its holdings of gold. The authority for the discretionary cap adjustment to accommodate the budget authority for an appropriation for the quota was obtained in P.L. 105-33.

New Arrangements to Borrow.—The New Arrangements to Borrow (NAB), proposed by the IMF in 1997, is modeled on the General Arrangements to Borrow (GAB), which was established in 1962 by 10 industrial countries including the United States. The GAB is a set of individual credit lines extended to the IMF by participating countries; these credit lines are intended to supplement the IMF's resources when responding to financial crises that threaten the stability of the international monetary system. The NAB would provide additional resources for such emergencies beyond those available under the GAB. IMF lending programs financed from credits extended to the IMF under both the GAB and the NAB typically require borrowing countries to implement comprehensive market-based structural reforms to support the immediate stabilization efforts and long-term market opening and transparency.

In consultation with the Congress, the Administration expects to request a 1998 supplemental appropriation amounting to the dollar equivalent of 2,462 million Special Drawing Rights, $3.4 billion, to cover the United States' share of the proposed NAB. This supplemental request would allow the United States to provide its fair share of contingent supplementary resources for the IMF for dealing with international financial crises of systemic import.

In accordance with the budgetary treatment recommended by the Presidential Commission on Budgetary Concepts in 1968 and modified by the Congress in 1980, United States' transactions with the IMF under the NAB, as under the GAB, will not be scored as outlays and thus will not increase the deficit. This is because the United States would receive a liquid, interest-bearing claim on the IMF corresponding to any transfer under the NAB to the IMF, and that claim would be backed by the IMF's substantial reserves, including its holdings of gold. The authority for a discretionary cap adjustment to accommodate the budget authority for an appropriation for the NAB was obtained in P.L. 105-33.

The Enhanced Structural Adjustment Facility (ESAF) is an important feature of United States' foreign economic policy in the developing world. The relatively modest U.S. contribution to the facility helps to leverage $15 billion in total concessional lending to developing and transitional economies. ESAF promotes strong market-based economic and financial reforms, catalyzes other sources of assistance, supports the multilateral program for sustainable debt for the most heavily indebted poor countries (HIPC), and advances the objectives of the Administration's Partnership for Growth and Opportunity in Africa. Countries that borrow from ESAF are usually required to adopt strong multi-year economic and structural reform programs that foster a transition to open, transparent, market-based economic activity. ESAF programs advance critical U.S. interests in promoting economic growth, financial stability, and the conditions essential to foster open and accountable democratic institutions.

Created by the International Monetary Fund (IMF) in 1987, ESAF provides financing on concessional terms to poor countries with protracted balance of payments problems. These poor countries, most of which are in Africa or were part of the former Soviet Union, generally do not have access to private capital flows and are otherwise dependent principally upon direct aid flows from official bilateral sources to meet their external financing needs. ESAF obtains its resources from members of the IMF through loans to the ESAF Trust or through contributions to its interest subsidy account. In the late 1980's, Congress authorized and appropriated $150 million for the U.S. contributions to the initial ESAF interest subsidy account. In 1994 the IMF membership agreed to an expanded and enlarged successor ESAF, bringing the total amount available for loans to roughly $15 billion. The Administration offered to contribute an additional $100 million to the interest subsidy account to help support the enlarged loan capacity under this expanded ESAF. This $100 million would outlay over a 15-year period. The Congress authorized and appropriated $25 million of this amount in 1995. There is still $75 million outstanding from this commitment.

The Administration is seeking an appropriation of $7 million for 1999 to meet part of the remaining $75 million commitment to the enlarged ESAF. It is also seeking authorization for this $75 million.

This appropriation provides funding for human space flight activities, including development of the Space Station, the Space Station research program, and operation of the Space Shuttle. This includes support of planned cooperative activities with Russia, upgrades to the performance and safety of the Space Shuttle, and required construction projects in direct support of Space Station and Space Shuttle programs.

Performance Objectives

Space Station.—The Space Station will be an international laboratory in low Earth orbit on which American, Russian, Canadian, European, and Japanese astronauts will conduct unique scientific and technological investigations in a micro-gravity environment. The goal of the Station is to support activities requiring the unique attributes of humans in space and establish a permanent human presence in Earth orbit. The proposed budget provides multi-year funding through an advanced appropriation for the complete development of the Station with Station assembly beginning in mid-1998 and finishing by the end of 2003. With the first launch to assemble this unique orbital laboratory only a few months away, the budget includes sufficient funding to keep subsequent assembly missions on schedule and provide a long-term solution to the safe return of the full complement of Station crewmembers.

In 1997, node and laboratory module fabrication were completed, the node was delivered to the launch site, and qualification testing of flight hardware components continued. Activities are well underway to support crew training, payload processing, and hardware element processing requirements. In 1998, continued fabrication of flight hardware, qualification testing, and assembly and integration will be the focus of the program. First element launch is scheduled for the summer of 1998. In 1999, plans are to complete phase 2 (the first ten assembly flights) of the Station.

U.S./Russian Cooperation and Program Assurance.—As part of an operating plan approved in May 1997, the U.S./Russian budget line was discontinued, and a new budget line entitled U.S./Russian Cooperation and Program Assurance was established. It includes two activities, U.S./Russian Cooperation and Russian Program Assurance (RPA). U.S./Russian Cooperation continues the support to the Russian Space Agency, including the cooperative use of Mir. The RPA budget was established to implement contingency plans in response to the slippage of the Russian service module (SM) to the Space Station, from May 1998 to December 1998. The United States and Russia are continuing a program of joint space missions. In 1997, three Shuttle flights to Mir took place, highlighted by the continual presence of American astronauts aboard the Mir conducting scientific research. Flight hardware to conduct experiments has been and will continue to be placed on the Mir. These flights provide valuable opportunities to gain experience in working with our Russian partners, which will be crucial to the success of building and operating the International Space Station (ISS). Two additional flights are planned in FY 1998, completing phase I of this cooperative precursor to Space Station.

The RPA provides contingency planning funds to address ISS program requirements resulting from delays on the part of Russia in meeting its commitments to the ISS program. The first step in the contingency plan is to protect against a potential further delay in the SM. The ISS program is purchasing, from the U.S. Naval Research Laboratory (NRL), an interim control module (ICM) to provide attitude control and reboost functions for continuation of the ISS assembly sequence in case the Russian SM is launched later than December 1998. The NRL's ICM will be prepared for a February 1999 launch and will be attached to the back of the Russian built functional cargo block (FGB). If the SM is launched in December 1998, the ICM will be reconfigured to be attached to the SM. The ICM would then be able to dock to the back of the SM in 1999 to back up any shortfall of Russian Progress fuel resupply vehicles.

Payload and Utilization Operations.—These funds will support the mission planning and hardware preparation activities required to support the payload and experiment infrastructure, including the Spacelab. In 1997–1998, 3 module missions (MSL–1 reflight and Neurolab) will be flown, along with 2 pallet missions. The Spacelab program is scheduled to be terminated in 1998, following the Neurolab mission. In FY 1999, one (Spacelab) science mission will be supported, in addition to seven assembly flights for the ISS.

Activities funded by the Payload Processing budget support the technical expertise and facilities necessary to perform payload buildup, test and checkout, integration, servicing, transportation and installation into the launch vehicle. In FY 1998, over 20 major and secondary payloads will be supported; in FY 1999, a similar number will be supported, including major hardware for ISS assembly. Advanced Projects pursues advanced technology developments for future human space flight requirements. Under this program, the X–38 experimental vehicle is being designed to demonstrate the technology and processes required to produce a crew return vehicle for the ISS. Beginning in FY 1999, funding for Advanced Projects other than X–38 and X–38 transition costs, will be terminated. The Engineering and Technical Base provides basic engineering and technical capabilities to support the NASA mission assigned to the programs carried out by the Human Space Flight Centers. These funds support a core environment dedicated to multiprogram laboratories, test facilities and associated systems, including a skill base to respond to research, testing and simulations.

Space Shuttle.—The Space Shuttle is a partially reusable space vehicle that provides several unique capabilities to the United States space program. These include launching spacecraft and retrieving payloads from orbit for reuse, servicing and repairing satellites in space, safely transporting humans to and from space, and operating and returning space laboratories. In FY 1998, six missions are planned, including the final two flights to the Russian Mir Space Station, and the initial assembly flight for the ISS. Activities supporting consolidation of Shuttle contracts into one Space Flight Operations contract were completed in FY 1996. This will result in significant reductions in the cost of operating the Space Shuttle through FY 2000 and beyond, with no impact on safety, performance or schedule.

In 1999, eight shuttle flights are planned, seven of which are in support of ISS assembly. Upgrades to the shuttle to increase its reliability and maintainability will be continued. Major Shuttle upgrades, including the Super Light Weight Tank and the Alternate Turbo Pump, will be completed with initial flights planned to occur in 1998.

This appropriation provides for the research and development activities of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. Funds are included for the construction, maintenance, and operation of programmatic facilities.

Funding for Space Science, Earth Science, Aeronautics and Space Transportation Technology is proposed as part of the Research Fund for America. This proposal highlights the Administration's priority to providing needed and sustained investments in important Federal research programs on a deficit neutral basis. A discussion of the Research Fund for America, and two other funds for the environment and transportation, can be found in Section II of the Budget volume.

Performance Objectives

Space Science.—The Space Science program seeks to answer fundamental questions concerning: the galaxy and the universe; the connection between the Sun, Earth and heliosphere; the origin and evolution of planetary systems; and, the origin and distribution of life in the universe. The Space Science program is comprised of a base program of research and development activities, including research and flight mission activities, and major flight missions which provide major space-based facilities. In 1997, highlights included the July 4 landing of the Pathfinder spacecraft on Mars, the first Mars landing since the Viking missions in 1976 and the first ever to use air bags to cushion impact on the surface. Shortly after Pathfinder's landing, the Sojourner rover began its own exploration of nearby rocks and other features. The images from both craft were posted to the Internet, where more than 500 million "hits" were recorded by the end of July. The international Cassini mission left Earth bound for Saturn on October 15, 1997. With the European Space Agency's Huygens probe and a high-gain antenna provided by the Italian Space Agency, Cassini will arrive at Saturn July 1, 2004. Also, astronauts flawlessly performed major maintenance and upgrades to the orbiting Hubble Space Telescope, replacing older hardware with two dramatically improved instruments that are helping astronomers probe the universe in greater detail than ever before. This year, Hubble uncovered over 1,000 bright, young star clusters bursting to life in a brief, intense, brilliant "fireworks show" at the heart of a nearby pair of colliding galaxies. The Hubble image of the galactic collision was printed on the front pages of newspapers around the world as well as on the cover of Newsweek magazine. Images captured during Galileo's closest flyby of Europa on February 20 showed features of the Jovian moon, lending credence to the possibility of hidden, subsurface oceans. The findings generated new questions about the possibility of life on Europa. Scientists using the joint European Space Agency/NASA Solar and Heliospheric Observatory (SOHO) spacecraft have discovered "jet streams" or "rivers" of hot, electrically charged plasma flowing beneath the surface of the sun. These new findings will help scientists understand the famous 11-year sunspot cycle and associated increases in solar activity that can disrupt the Earth's power and communications systems.

To capitalize on these enormous successes during the past year, the NASA budget request for FY 1999 once again highlights Space Science. Space Science continues to focus on the Origins program and fundamental questions regarding the creation of the universe and planetary systems and the possibility of life beyond Earth. In addition to planning for the deployment of powerful telescopes to detect Earth-like planets elsewhere in our galaxy, planning has begun for a Europa mission to launch in 2003 to directly observe potential subsurface oceans on Europa, and the Mars Surveyor Program is augmented to enhance the Mars 2001 lander. NASA will also initiate a series of Solar-Terrestrial Probes to track solar phenomena and their impact on the Earth, and initiate mission development for a gamma-ray telescope to understand the final stages of stars' lives and to seek out the most extreme environments in the universe.

Development activities will continue in 1998-1999 on the Advance X-ray Astrophysics Facility (AXAF) in support of a launch in early FY 1999. Development activities continue on the Relativity (Gravity Probe-B) mission, which remains on schedule for launch in 2000. The Space Infrared Telescope Facility (SIRTF) initiates development in April 1998, with launch planned for December 2001. Development activities on the Thermosphere, Ionosphere, Mesosphere Energetics and Dynamics (TIMED) mission began in 1997, with launch planned in 2000. Development activities on the Stratospheric Observatory for Infrared Astronomy (SOFIA) continue to receive support. The Second Hubble Space Telescope (HST) servicing mission in February 1997 provided two new science instruments and other servicing, and the upgraded telescope is providing new insights into our universe by investigating objects in the near-infrared portion of the electromagnetic spectrum. Funding for HST continues to support operations, as well as preparation for the third servicing mission in 1999. Galileo's highly successful tour of Jupiter and its moons has been extended through 1999, with a focus on the moons Europa and Io.

In Explorer missions, the Advanced Composition Explorer (ACE) was launched in August 1997 and development activities continue on the Far Ultraviolet Spectroscopy Explorer (FUSE) for a launch in 1998. Development is also underway for the Microwave Anisotropy Probe (MAP) and Imager for Magnetosphere-to-Aurora Global Exploration (IMAGE) Medium-Class Explorer (MIDEX) missions. Three new Small (SMEX) missions were selected in 1997: the High Energy Spectroscopic Imager (HESSI) is to launch in 2000; the Galaxy Evolution Explorer (GALEX) will launch in 2001; the Two Wide-Angle Neutral-Atom Spectrometers (TWINS) has been selected as a mission of opportunity, to be launched in 2001 or 2003 aboard a currently undesignated U.S. Government mission. These missions emphasize reduced mission costs and accelerated launch schedules.

The Mars Global Surveyor entered Mars orbit in September 1997, and funds are requested for the development of future Mars missions in 1998 and beyond. The third Discovery-class mission, Lunar Prospector, launched in January 1998, the fourth, the Stardust mission, is to be launched in 1999. Two new Discovery missions were selected in 1997: the Comet Nucleus Tour (CONTOUR) to be launched in 2002; and Genesis, a solar wind sample return mission, to be launched in 2001. The New Millennium program is underway to provide flight demonstrations of critical new technologies which will greatly reduce the mass and cost of future science instruments and spacecraft subsystems, while maintaining or improving mission capabilities. Development activities continue on the Deep Space-1 and Deep Space-2 missions, scheduled for launch in July 1998 and January 1999, respectively.

The Space Science program is responsible for Agency-wide core technology development. Space Science is also undertaking an aggressive technology development effort to enable new missions to the outer planets, and to search for Earth-like planets around nearby stars. New technologies are also being pursued to enhance our capability to explore Mars robotically, and perhaps to confirm the past or current presence of life on that planet.

Life and Microgravity Science.—This program uses the microgravity environment of space to conduct basic and applied research to understand the effect of gravity on living systems and to conduct research in the areas of fluid physics, materials science and biotechnology. In addition to conducting basic and applied research, this program provides the opportunity to refine the definition, design, and development of experiment hardware planned for use on the ISS. In FY 1998 five Shuttle missions involving Life and Microgravity Science are planned, including the USMP-4 mission and Neurolab, the final Spacelab series flight. The final two NASA/Mir missions are planned for 1998. The NASA/NIH Neurolab mission will continue the agency's efforts to expand its collaborative activities with the National Institutes of Health and other Federal agencies to maximize the return on science investments. In FY 1999, as assembly of the ISS continues, the program will fly one science mission (STS-95) on a Spacelab carrier with ISS precursor science experiments. The U.S. Laboratory will be launched for ISS mid-year, which will allow Life and Microgravity hardware and experiments to be established aboard the ISS and will begin a new era of research.

Earth Science.—The purpose of NASA's Earth Science (ES) enterprise is to understand the total Earth system and the effects of natural and human-induced changes on the global environment. ES is pioneering the new interdisciplinary field of research called Earth system science, which recognizes that the Earth's land surface, oceans, atmosphere, ice sheets and biota are both dynamic and highly interactive. Earth system science is an area of research with the potential for immense benefit to the nation, yielding new knowledge and tools for weather forecasting, agriculture, urban and land use planning, and other areas of economic and environmental importance. In concert with other agencies and the global research community, ES is providing the scientific foundation needed for the complex policy choices that lie ahead on the road to sustainable development. ES has established three broad goals to fulfill its purpose: (1) expand scientific knowledge of the Earth system using NASA's unique capabilities from the vantage points of space, aircraft and in situ platforms; (2) disseminate information about the Earth system; and, (3) enable productive use of ES science and technology in the public and private sectors.

The Earth Observing System (EOS), the centerpiece of Earth Science, is a program of multiple spacecraft missions (the AM, PM, Chemistry series, Landsat 7, and others) and interdisciplinary science investigations aimed at providing a 15-year data set of key parameters needed to understand global climate change. The first EOS satellite launches will be in 1998. Preceding EOS are a number of individual satellite and Shuttle-based missions which are helping to reveal basic processes. The Upper Atmosphere Research Satellite, launched in 1991, collects data on atmospheric chemistry. The Total Ozone Mapping Spectrometer instrument, launched in 1978 and 1991, measures ozone distribution and depletion. Two total ozone mapping spectrometer instruments were launched in 1996, one on the Japanese Advanced Earth Observing System (ADEOS) mission and the other on a dedicated U.S. Earth probe. France and the U.S. collaborated on the Ocean Topography Experiment (TOPEX/Poseidon), launched in 1992, to study ocean topography and circulation. The NASA scatterometer, also launched on the Japanese ADEOS in 1996, provided 10 months of ocean winds data. The failure of Japan's ADEOS satellite meant the loss of the NASA scatterometer (as well as one of the two TOMS). NASA will launch QUIKSCAT in November 1998 to minimize the loss of ocean winds data. In 1997 the Tropical Rainfall Measuring Mission (TRMM) began measuring tropical precipitation. Complementing EOS will be a series of small, rapid development Earth System Science Pathfinders (ESSP). Data from ES will be captured from the satellites, processed into useful data products, and broadly distributed by the EOS Data and Information System (EOSDIS). In FY 1997, NASA initiated a data purchase program designed to acquire data sets from private sources that are necessary to accomplish the broad research goals of Earth system science. The ES science program is essential to the discovery of new concepts and to the design of future missions. The ES research is coordinated through the U.S. Global Change Research Program (USGCRP), the Committee on the Environment and Natural Resources (CENR) Subcommittee on Global Change Research, and the various boards and committees at the National Academy of Sciences.

Aeronautics and Space Transportation Technology.—The goal of this Enterprise is to pioneer long-term high risk, high payoff technologies that are effectively transferred to industry and government. This Enterprise has developed dramatic technology goals which are grouped into three areas: global civil aviation, revolutionary technology leaps, and access to space. These technology goals reflect the national priorities for aeronautics and space.

Within Aeronautics, the High-Speed Research program continued to develop technologies to establish the viability of an economical and environmentally sound High Speed Civil Transport. This vehicle—if built by U.S. industry—could promote U.S. leadership in long-range commercial air travel markets of the next century. Development of this vehicle could offer returns of $200 billion in sales and 140,000 high-quality jobs for the United States. In FY 1997, a two-dimensional bifurcated inlet concept and a center-stick flight controller concept were selected for further research and evaluation. In FY 1999, funding is included to extend High-Speed Research to mitigate risk in two critical areas—propulsion and airframe materials and structures. In FY 1997, the Advanced Subsonic Technology program completed the set of National Airspace System operational scenarios in support of aviation capacity research. In FY 1998, the Aging Aircraft element will be completed with the field demonstrations on non-destructive evaluation prototypes that can locate cracks, corrosion and disbonds in aircraft fuselages. Funding is included to continue development of high payoff technologies that enable a safe, highly productive global air transportation system with reduced environmental impact.

The High Performance Computing and Communications program demonstrated significant reductions in cost and time in performing three-dimensional aerodynamic simulations that reduced the development time for an extremely fuel-efficient, high pressure compressor by 50%. In FY 1998, this program's NASA Research & Education Network (NREN) begins activities supporting development of the Next Generation Internet (NGI) to increase quality, security and certainty of Internet transmissions on a network capable of 1,000 times the capacity of the 1996 baseline. This initiative will involve several Federal agencies, including the Departments of Defense, Energy and Commerce, the National Science Foundation, and NASA. In FY 1997, research activities within the research and technology base developed innovative concepts, explored new areas of theory and created the computational models of the aeronautical principles that lead to more efficient design and operation of advanced aerospace systems. In FY 1998, the safety research will be initiated in support of the Administration's Aviation Safety initiative and in FY 1999, the research and technology base will continue to develop advanced concepts and technologies that will allow safe, economical and environmentally compatible air transportation systems.

The Space Transportation Technology program is developing new technologies aimed at revitalizing access to space. The technologies targeted will reduce launch costs dramatically over the next decade, and increase the safety and reliability of current and future generation launch systems. In 1997, the Reusable Launch Vehicle (RLV) program continued to pursue technology development, design and business planning activities in support of next-generation reusable systems, on the X-33 and X-34 flight demonstrators. The X-33 and X-34 have completed their critical design reviews and initiated fabrication of flight hardware. Funding for the RLV program in 1998 and 1999 is included to continue X-33 and X-34 technology development, hardware fabrication and test, in preparation for the flight of the technology demonstrators, both of which will fly in 1999. The Advanced Space Transportation Program (ASTP) is developing key technologies to dramatically reduce space transportation costs across the mission spectrum. ASTP will focus on technological advances with the potential of reducing launch costs beyond RLV goals, as well as on developing technology required to support NASA strategic needs that are not currently addressed by RLV. Industry-led Future Space Launch trade studies in 1999 and 2000 will support an end-of-the-decade decision called for in the National Space Transportation Policy on the development of an operational launch system to reduce NASA's launch costs. $760 million in placeholder funds are set aside in the outyears to pursue existing, planned or new vehicles in response to this decision.

The Commercial Technology Program's focus in FY 1997 has been to invest 10–15 percent of the NASA R&D budget in commercial partnerships with industry. Based on experience to date, these commercial partnerships are expected to increase the return on the government's R&D investment, allowing NASA to do more with limited funds, and strengthen the international competitiveness of key industry sectors. In FY 1997 and 1998, the program will emphasize increasing commercial partnerships with industry and continue to refine and expand a technology and partnership database.

Mission Communication Services.—The primary goal of this operational program is to provide highly reliable, cost-effective telecommunications services in support of NASA's science and aeronautics programs. Other U.S. agencies, international space-faring agencies, and U.S. commercial enterprises are supported on a reimbursable basis. Ground network, space network, and mission systems are provided under this program in support of planetary, deep space, Earth-orbiting, aeronautics, and suborbital systems.

Academic Programs.—The goal of this program is to promote excellence in America's education system through enhancing and expanding scientific and technological competence. NASA's education programs span from the elementary through graduate levels, and are directed at students and faculty. The goal of the Minority University Research Program is to expand opportunities for talented students from underrepresented groups who are pursuing degrees in science and engineering, and to strengthen the research capabilities of minority universities and colleges. The range of activities conducted under this program will continue to capture the interest of all students in science and technology, develop talented students at the undergraduate and graduate levels, provide research opportunities for students and faculty members at NASA centers, and strengthen and enhance the research capabilities of the nation's colleges and universities.

This appropriation provides funding for mission support and includes: safety, reliability and quality assurance activities supporting agency programs; space communication services for NASA programs; salaries and related expenses in support of research in NASA field installations; design, repair, rehabilitation and modification of institutional facilities and construction of new institutional facilities; and other operations activities supporting conduct of agency programs.

Performance Objectives

Safety, Reliability and Quality Assurance.—The goal of this program is to assure the safety and quality of NASA missions through the development, implementation and oversight of Agency-wide safety, engineering, reliability, maintainability, and quality assurance policies and procedures.

Space Communication Services.—Activities included in this program provide for the tracking, telemetry, command, data acquisition, communications and data processing required by NASA flight projects. In 1997–1999, the networks and support systems that accomplish these tasks will continue operation. Completion of the upgrade of the Tracking and Data Relay Satellite (TDRS) White Sands Complex and early development of the TDRS Replenishment Spacecraft occurred and will continue in 1997 and 1998. Development of a remote ground terminal at Guam which will extend network capability by providing for coverage of the zone of exclusion will be completed in FY 1998. Development of the replenishment Tracking and Data Relay satellites is ongoing. The first satellite will be launched in late FY 1999. The NASA Integrated Services Network consolidated all NASA wide area network systems in FY 1997.

Research and Program Management.—This activity provides for the salaries, travel support, other personnel expenses of the entire NASA civil service workforce, and includes vital support to the physical plant at the Centers and at NASA Headquarters.

Construction of Facilities.—This activity provides for: facility construction activities to preserve NASA's core infrastructure; environmental compliance and restoration activities, design of facilities projects, and advanced planning related to future facilities needs. In 1997–1999, activities in support of discrete projects to repair and modernize the basic infrastructure and institutional facilities at NASA centers will be conducted, as well as activities in support of environmental compliance and restoration requirements.

ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

Notwithstanding the limitation on the availability of funds appropriated for "Human space flight", "Science, aeronautics and technology", or "Mission support" by this appropriations Act, when any activity has been initiated by the incurrence of obligations for construction of facilities as authorized by law, such amount available for such activity shall remain available until expended. This provision does not apply to the amounts appropriated in "Mission support" pursuant to the authorization for repair, rehabilitation and modification of facilities, minor construction of new facilities and additions to existing facilities, and facility planning and design.

Notwithstanding the limitation on the availability of funds appropriated for "Human space flight", "Science, aeronautics and technology", or "Mission support" by this appropriations Act, the amounts appropriated for construction of facilities shall remain available until September 30, [2000] 2001.

Notwithstanding the limitation on the availability of funds appropriated for "Mission support" and "Office of Inspector General", amounts made available by this Act for personnel and related costs and travel expenses of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration shall remain available until September 30, [1998] 1999 and may be used to enter into contracts for training, investigations, costs associated with personnel relocation, and for other services, to be provided during the next fiscal year.

[Of the funds provided to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in this Act, the Administrator shall by November 1, 1998, make available no less than $400,000 for a study by the National Research Council, with an interim report to be completed by June 1, 1998, that evaluates, in terms of the potential impact on the Space Station's assembly schedule, budget, and capabilities, the engineering challenges posed by extravehicular activity (EVA) requirements, United States and non-United States space launch requirements, the potential need to upgrade or replace equipment and components after assembly complete, and the requirement to decommission and disassemble the facility.]

NASA shall develop a revised appropriation structure for submission in the Fiscal Year 2000 budget request consisting of two basic appropriations (the Human Space Flight Appropriation and the Science, Aeronautics and Technology Appropriation) with a separate (third) appropriation for the Office of the Inspector General. The appropriations shall each include the planned full costs (direct and indirect costs) of NASA's related activities and allow NASA to shift civil service salaries, benefits and support between and/or among appropriations or accounts, as required, for the safe, timely, and successful accomplishment of NASA missions. (Departments of Veterans Affairs and Housing and Urban Development, and Independent Agencies Appropriations Act, 1998.)

The research and related activities appropriation enables the United States to uphold world leadership in all aspects of science and engineering. This appropriation provides resources for NSF to achieve the following outcome goals: discoveries at and across the frontier of science and engineering; connections between discoveries and their use in service to society; and a diverse, globally-oriented workforce of scientists and engineers. Research activities will contribute to the achievement of these goals through expansion of the knowledge base; integration of research and education; stimulation of knowledge transfer among academia and the public and private sectors; and bringing the perspectives of many disciplines to bear on complex problems important to the nation. This appropriation supports NSF's active development of performance indicators that tie to the key program functions of Research Project Support, Research Facilities, and Education and Training.

Funding for all program activities in the Research and Related Activities Appropriation, except for U.S. Antarctic Logistical Support Activities, is proposed as part of the Research Fund for America. This proposal highlights the Administration's priority to providing needed and sustained investments in important Federal research programs on a deficit neutral basis. A discussion of the Research Fund for America, and two other funds for the environment and transportation, can be found in section II of the Budget volume.

The major research program activities of the Foundation are:

Biological sciences.—This activity promotes scientific progress in biology through support of research ranging from the study of molecules, through cells and organisms, to studies of ecosystems. This activity also supports a comprehensive research initiative on plant genomes, including research on economically significant crops.

Computer and information sciences and engineering.—Research is directed at “information technology” in the broadest sense of the term, ranging from fundamental theory to systems engineering.

Engineering.—Research supported by this activity aims to increase U.S. engineering capability and strength, and focus that capability and strength on areas which are relevant to national problems and long-term needs. This activity also includes small business innovation research.

Geosciences.—This research advances knowledge of the properties and dynamics of the planet Earth.

Mathematical and physical sciences.—Research in this activity is directed at increasing understanding of natural laws and phenomena. It includes research in mathematical sciences, astronomy, physics, chemistry, and materials science.

Social, behavioral and economic sciences.—This activity supports research in social, behavioral and economic sciences, facilitates international scientific cooperation, and funds science resources studies.

U.S. polar research programs.—This activity supports Arctic and Antarctic research and operational science support and other related activities for the United States polar research programs. This activity includes funding for the expenses of the Arctic Research Commission.

U.S. Antarctic logistical support activities.—This activity provides necessary expenses for reimbursing Federal agencies for logistical and other related activities for the United States Antarctic logistical support activities.

Education and human resources (EHR) activities provide a comprehensive set of programs that further NSF's goal of promoting excellence in U.S. science, mathematics, engineering, and technology (SMET) education and scientific literacy. At the pre-kindergarten through grade 12 (pre K-12) level, EHR catalyzes systemic reform of SMET education in states, cities, school districts, and rural areas. Its pre K-12 programs provide new instructional materials and pedagogical techniques that incorporate the latest advances in teaching, learning, and educational technologies. They provide enrichment activities for teachers and students. Undergraduate initiatives improve curriculum in all SMET fields and lead reform efforts in mathematics, chemistry, and other disciplines. EHR programs strengthen laboratory course offerings and enhance faculty. Programs for advanced technological education strengthen education for students preparing to enter the high-technology workforce. Graduate level support is directed primarily to research fellowships and traineeships to guarantee the U.S. world leadership in science and technology. All EHR programing focuses on broadening participation of groups underrepresented in SMET fields. The experimental program to stimulate competitive research (EPSCoR) broadens participation of states and regions in science and engineering. EHR supports research that advances SMET education, as well as development and effective implementation of learning technologies. Evaluation and communications activities ensure accountability by developing indicators that measure program impact and inform the education community of best practices and relevant information. This appropriation also supports NSF's active development of performance indicators that tie to the key program functions of education and training and research project support.

Funding for Education and Human Research is proposed as part of the Research Fund for America. This proposal highlights the Administration's priority to providing needed and sustained investments in important Federal research programs on a deficit neutral basis. The Office of Personnel Management (OPM) is responsible for personnel management functions which include the following activities:

Merit systems oversight and effectiveness.—This activity includes: (a) direct oversight of human resources management (HRM) in Federal agencies through various methods, including onsite evaluations; (b) administration of the classification appeals and Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA) programs to ensure that agencies adhere to the statutory requirements of both laws; (c) assisting agencies in developing merit-based internal HRM accountability systems which support mission accomplishment; (d) assessing the effectiveness of government wide HRM policies and programs and acting as a clearinghouse for best practices; (e) testing and evaluating innovative Federal HRM practices and systems, including demonstration projects under 5 U.S.C. Chapter 47; (f) providing readily accessible primary source data on Federal workforce information; and (g) administering parts of the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

Program performance.—The merit systems oversight and effectiveness program performance measures are designed to determine the value added, outcome-oriented impact that the oversight and effectiveness reviews and workforce information reports have on their clients: the Federal human resources management community and Federal employees. As a part of each review or report on human resources management at Federal agencies, client feedback is solicited on the importance and quality of written reports, and on the professionalism, usefulness and overall quality of the evaluation effort. Regular reviews are conducted of the quality of data used in our reviews and reports. Records of at least 97% of employees per agency that are input into the Central Personnel Data File are correct on all core elements. The Merit System Principles Questionnaire that OPM uses to collect employee perceptions of agency observance of each of the nine merit principles established by law is content valid and reliable. Feedback on agency oversight indicates that clients highly value the work, as shown by a rating of 4 on a scale of 1–5 on the overall quality of agency evaluations, and a rating of 4–5 on the quality of the written evaluation reports. In addition, Merit System Principles Questionnaires are administered as part of agency oversight reviews to measure employee perceptions of agency observance of each of the nine merit principles established by law. Based on preliminary responses, Federal employees report that the merit system is alive and well in key areas like recruitment, fairness, conduct, efficiency/effectiveness, training, and protection of employees from improper political influence and for lawful disclosure of information. However, employees believe that more work needs to be done to better link performance to pay and retention actions as articulated in the merit system principles. The questionnaire information is shared with Federal agencies and used to work with them to continuously improve the quality of their human resources management.

Employment service.—The Employment Service provides leadership and manages the merit-based employment system for the Federal government. In partnership with agencies, the Service provides a high-quality, diverse workforce through a mix of policy direction, technical assistance, and reimbursable services in the following areas: employment information; assessment; merit-based staffing services; veterans' preference; workforce diversity; automated human resources management (HRM) systems; workforce restructuring and placement, and organizational analysis and improvement. These operations are carried out through a network of Service Centers throughout the country.

Program performance.—The Employment Service establishes annual performance goals and objectives designed to accomplish long-term goals identified in OPM's Strategic Plan. Progress is monitored through a mix of outcome and output measures, including results of oversight reviews, qualitative feedback on usefulness of policies and information processes, customer satisfaction with services, cost-comparison analyses, workload accomplishment data, and quality and timeliness information, (Some of these measures were introduced in 1998.)

The Employment Service provided information to over ten million people in 1997 through a nationwide system available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, by telephone, fax, or personal computer, and touch screen kiosks. USAJOBS, the employment information website, averages more than 25,000 visits daily. Customer satisfaction with all systems increased from 78.7% to 82.4% in 1997.

The Employment Service conducts a recertification and training program for all agency Delegated Examining Units to ensure that agencies are carrying out their delegated responsibilities in accordance with law and regulation, and accomplished all scheduled recertifications. In 1997, they also made quality and timeliness improvements in two important specialized Federal employment programs, the Presidential Management Intern (PMI) Program and the Administrative Law Judges (ALJ), through increased automation and process reengineering.

In the area of policy leadership, the Employment Service proposed more flexible regulations regarding merit promotion and non-permanent employment; eliminating approximately 70 redundant excepted appointment authorities; published the

VetGuide (and posted it on the Internet) to help agencies better comply with Veterans' Preference requirements and to provide better information to the public; began publishing annual statistical profiles on all minorities, women, and veterans in the Federal government to help agencies target their recruitment and career development plans; effectively assisted in the governmentwide downsizing effort in a way that has minimized the impact on individual employees, assisting over 11,000 employees to find new Federal positions in 1996 (most recent data available).

Retirement and insurance.—This activity administers retirement and insurance programs for Federal employees and retired Federal employees. These programs include the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund, the Employees Life Insurance Fund, and the Employees and Retired Employees Health Benefits Funds.

Program performance.—In the retirement area, OPM reduced processing times for interim annuity payments from 5 days in 1996 to 4.6 days, averaging less than 3 days during the last half of the year, and authorizing 30 percent within one day of receiving the retirement applications at OPM. The time to take final action on an annuity account dropped from 42 days in 1996 to 39 days in 1997, while error rates remained constant at 6 percent. Customer satisfaction with claims processing remained at prior year levels, with 90 percent of survey respondents reporting that they were either "generally" or "very satisfied" with the service they received.

Annuitant Express, featuring Interactive Voice Response (IVR) technology and toll-free telephone service, was expanded to cover a wider range of allotments and withholdings. Use of the system increased by 60 percent. In a further effort to increase the amount of business it conducts by telephone, OPM extended 1-800 service to all of its call centers, added more customer service representatives and phone lines in its Washington, D.C., Retirement Information Office, and opened a new Teleservice Center in Pittsburgh, PA. These improvements resulted in a 35 percent reduction in caller hold times, and a 22 percent drop in lost calls. More importantly, customers' ability to get through to OPM by telephone improved by 38 percent, while the number of callers getting through on their first attempt increased by 34 percent. Overall, customer satisfaction with the courtesy, clarity and timeliness of telephone services increased by 8 percent.

In the health insurance area, OPM reduced processing times for disputed claims from 67 days in 1996 to 42 days in 1997. Ninety-two percent of all disputed claims were processed within the target of 60 days, and the balance of unprocessed work reached an historically low level.

Finally, OPM make significant progress in using new technologies to interact with its customers. It added state-of-the-art pages to its Website containing comprehensive information about plans participating in the Federal Employees' Health Benefits Program Contract Year 1998 Open Season. It also began offering Benefits Center, an interactive CD-ROM product that covers a wide variety of retirement, health and life insurance topics, including Social Security and Thrift Savings Plan benefits.

Workforce compensation and performance.—This activity includes: (a) developing and implementing pay and leave administration policy and evaluating the effectiveness of alternative compensation systems; (b) developing classification policies and systems and designing flexible alternatives to current systems; and (c) developing governmentwide policy concerning performance management.

Investigations.—This activity focuses on assuring applicant and appointee fitness and suitability and oversight of the investigative contract company.

Workforce relations.—This activity includes: (a) developing and administering policies, regulations and guidelines on employee relations, including adverse and performance-based actions and violence in the workplace; (b) facilitating and supporting Federal work and family programs; (c) providing leadership and policy guidance in support of agency human resource development programs and training; and (d) providing guidance and assistance to Federal agencies on labor-management relations and partnership, including managing the activities of the National Partnership Council on behalf of the Council Chair.

Program performance.—OPM's workforce relations performance measures are designed to determine the value-added of OPM's policy leadership and guidance on employee and labor-management relations issues, work and family programs, and human resources development and training. In 1998 several key measures were developed to evaluate the impact of OPM's policy leadership and technical assistance on the human resources management community. Prior to conferences, seminars and workshops, stakeholders were surveyed to identify principal areas of interest, and feedback was used to establish agendas. Following each session, feedback was obtained through structured questionnaires to determine strengths and weaknesses of each presentation. Programs were revised accordingly. At regular intervals, surveys were conducted of readers of published materials, both hard-copy and electronic, to ensure excellent customer service, timely policy guidance, and to measure the relative effect of OPM's guidance and assistance. Additionally, OPM developed an agency-wide customer survey that will provide useful information on workforce relations programs.

Executive resources.—This activity provides government-wide program leadership, policy direction and technical assistance on all aspects of the Senior Executive Service personnel system and comparable executive systems.

Administrative services.—This activity includes: OPM personnel and equal employment opportunity; security, facilities, telecommunications, publishing, acquisitions, and information resources management to support all OPM programs.

Executive and other services.—This activity includes: executive direction; policy development; legal advice and representation; public affairs; legislative activities; financial management; and the operating expenses of the President's Commission on White House Fellows.

Reimbursable programs.—OPM performs reimbursable work at the request of other agencies. OPM also provides administrative, information resources management, and executive services to other OPM accounts on a reimbursable basis.

This appropriation provides agency-wide audit, investigative, evaluation, inspection, and administrative sanction functions to identify management and administrative deficiencies that may create conditions for fraud, waste, and mismanagement. The audits function provides internal agency audit, insurance audit, and contract audit services. Contract audits provide professional advice to agency contracting officials on accounting and financial matters regarding the negotiation, award, administration, repricing, and settlement of contracts. Internal audits review and evaluate all facets of agency operations, including financial statements. Evaluation and inspection services provide detailed technical evaluations of agency operations. Insurance audits review the operations of health and life insurance carriers, health care providers, and insurance subscribers. The investigative function provides for the detection and investigation of improper and illegal activities involving programs, personnel, and operations. Administrative sanctions debar from participation in the health insurance program those health care providers whose conduct may pose a threat to the financial integrity of the program itself or to the well-being of insurance program enrollees. These Inspector General activities resulted in positive financial impact in excess of $87 million in 1997. This request includes an additional $0.5 million above the approved 1998 resource level to reduce the insurance audits cycles. The impact of the additional funds will be an increased positive financial impact for the OPM administered trust funds.

Workforce training.—In July 1995, the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) privatized its workforce training program.

DOD testing.—OPM conducts military entrance exams for the Department of Defense (DOD). The Employment Service continued to provide testing for the Department of Defense, conducting approximately 13,400 student test sessions and 30,700 enlistment sessions.

Employment service.—OPM delivers employment information, examining services, automated staffing, and related human resource management services to Federal agencies nationwide. Federal agencies contracted with the Employment Service to conduct examinations of job applicants. In 1997, Employment Service delivered 16,054 certificates of eligible candidates to these agencies.

Investigations.—Through a contract with an employee-owned private company, OPM conducts National Agency Check and Inquiry cases and background security investigations for Federal agencies on a reimbursable basis. To the extent that OPM is required to pay a fee to the Federal Bureau of Investigation for name and fingerprint checks, agencies are required to reimburse OPM for such fees through the revolving fund.

Workforce relations.—OPM provides training management assistance (TMA) to Federal agencies in support of their human resource development programs by designing and producing training products through partnership with Federal agencies and private sector firms specializing in instructional systems.

Program performance.—The TMA program performance measures are designed to determine value added to Federal agencies through human resources management assistance utilizing an instructional systems design approach. In 1998, several measures were implemented to determine the cost-effectiveness of OPM's services to enhance Federal human resources. These included workload measures such as the dollar amount of new and added funding for TMA projects; business well-being indicators such as the percent of income above contractor invoices; and customer satisfaction measures to better define the benefits of TMA services.

Executive resources.—OPM manages the President's quality awards program and conducts residential and non-residential programs for Federal executives and managers to improve the effectiveness and efficiency of Federal programs.

This fund: (1) pays annuities to retired employees or their survivors; (2) makes refunds to separated employees for amounts withheld and to beneficiaries of employees who died before retirement or before annuities equaled the amount withheld; and (3) pays expenses of the Office of Personnel Management and the Merit Systems Protection Board for administering the program. The fund covers two Federal civilian retirement systems: the Civil Service Retirement System (CSRS) and the Federal Employees' Retirement System (FERS).

CSRS is basically a defined benefit plan, covering Federal employees hired prior to 1984. CSRS participants do not participate in the Social Security system. FERS is a three-tiered pension program that uses Social Security as a base, provides an additional basic benefit, and includes a thrift savings plan. FERS covers employees hired after 1983 and formerly CSRS-covered employees who elected to join FERS.

This display combines the Federal Employees Health Benefits (FEHB) fund and the Retired Employees Health Benefit (REHB) fund.

The FEHB fund provides for the cost of health benefits for: (1) active employees; (2) employees who retired after June 1960, or their survivors; (3) those annuitants transferred from the REHB program as authorized by Public Law 93-246; and (4) the related expenses of the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) in administering the program.

The REHB fund, created by the Retired Employees Health Benefits Act of 1960, provides for: (1) the cost of health benefits for retired employees and survivors who enroll in a Government-sponsored uniform health benefits plan; (2) the contribution to retired employees and survivors who retain or purchase private health insurance; and (3) expenses of OPM in administering the program.

Budget program.—The balance of the EHB fund is available for payments without fiscal year limitation. Numbers of participants at the end of each fiscal year are as follows:

and three percent is added for a contingency reserve held by OPM for each carrier. OPM is authorized to transfer unused administrative reserve funds to the contingency reserve.

In accordance with P.L. 103-66 and P.L. 105-33, this schedule includes the following adjustments: (1) in contract years 1997 and 1998, the average premium for the indemnity plan in the "Phantom Big 6" formula is modified to account for the average premium increase in the remaining "Big 5" plans minus one percentage point; (2) in the 1999 contract year, the maximum government contribution is 72 percent of the weighted average premium of FEHB Program participants; (3) Medicare Part B fee limits are applied to all FEHB annuitants; and (4) the Postal Service's payments of $116 million per year for fiscal years 1997 and 1998 to cover the cost of past retiree health benefits.

The REHB fund is available without fiscal year limitation. The amounts contributed by the Government are paid into the fund from annual appropriations. The number of participants at the end of each fiscal year are as follows:

	1997 actual	1998 est.	1999 est.
Uniform plan .....	1,760	1,500	1,200
Private plans .....	6,180	5,100	4,200
Total .....	7,940	6,600	5,400

Financing.—The funds are financed by: (1) withholdings from active employees and annuitants; (2) agency contributions for active employees, appropriated to agencies; (3) Government contributions for annuitants appropriated to OPM; and (4) contributions made by the United States Postal Service in accordance with the provisions of Public Law 101-508 and Public Law 103-66.

Operating results.—Funds made available to carriers but not used to pay claims in the current period are carried forward as special reserves for use in subsequent periods.

OPM maintains a contingency reserve, funded by employee and Government contributions, that may be used to defray future cost increases or provide increased benefits. OPM makes payments to carriers from this reserve whenever carrier-held reserves fall below levels prescribed by OPM regulations or when carriers can demonstrate good cause such as unexpected claims experience or variations from expected community rates.

Capital Access.—The Associate Deputy Administrator (ADA) for this function exercises direction over the following SBA program offices: Financial Assistance; Surety Bond Guarantees; Investment; and International Trade.

These offices are responsible for the administration of all SBA credit and international trade and lending programs. In 1998, SBA plans to continue providing business development and financial assistance for small business exporters through U.S. Export Assistance Centers. In addition, through special programs such as LowDoc, FASTRAK, Microloan, and the Export Working Capital Programs (EWCP), SBA is targeting financial assistance to segments of the population that have historically been under represented in SBA's credit programs. The SBA's efforts to reduce unnecessary paperwork and make the agency more customer-friendly have attracted new banks interested in establishing partnerships with SBA.

Entrepreneurial Development.—The Associate Deputy Administrator (ADA) for this function exercises direction over the following SBA program offices: Women's Business Ownership; Small Business Development Centers; Veteran's Affairs; Native American Affairs; and, Business Initiatives which includes the Service Corps of Retired Executives. These programs provide outreach and technical assistance to small business communities, especially women, Veterans, and minorities.

Government Contracting and Minority Enterprise Development.—The Associate Deputy Administrator for this function exercises direction over the following SBA program offices: Government Contracting; Minority Enterprise Development; Technology; and, Size Standards. These offices are responsible for effectively advocating for small businesses in the area of government contracting and Federal research and development. Government contracting activities are aimed at ensuring that small businesses receive a fair share of Federal procurement awards. The Minority Enterprise Development programs provide assistance to socially and economically disadvantaged small business concerns, primarily in the areas of business development and Federal procurement. Through this office, SBA assists firms that are owned by disadvantaged persons to help them develop into viable competitive businesses in a reasonable period of time.

Disaster Assistance.—The Associate Administrator for the Office of Disaster Assistance oversees the Disaster Loan Program which provides physical disaster loans to individuals and businesses of any size and economic injury loans to small businesses unable to obtain credit elsewhere. In addition to Presidentially-declared disasters, the program provides loans when a declaration is made by the SBA Administrator. Program eligibility is based on financial criteria, and interest rates are set according to statutory formulas. In recent years, the average interest rate on disaster loans has been about four percent. The budget proposes to reduce the cost of disaster loan subsidies by increasing the interest rate on disaster loans to the Treasury's cost for securities of comparable maturities, capped at six percent.

Advocacy.—The Chief Counsel for Advocacy is charged by law to be an independent voice for small business within the government, and to: (1) examine the role of small business in the economy and its contribution to competition; (2) evaluate financial markets and the credit needs of small business; (3) measure the costs of regulation on small business; (4) monitor agency compliance with the Regulatory Flexibility Act (RFA), as amended by the Small Business Regulatory Enforcement Fairness Act (SBREFA); and (5) appear as "amicus" in appeals arising from final agency regulatory actions, as appropriate.

Program Performance

Small Business Development Centers (SBDCs).—The SBDCs provide long term counseling to small businesses at about 1,100 locations in 50 states. In 1997, more than 600,000 customers were helped, of which roughly 40 percent were women and 17 percent were minorities. For 1999, the budget proposes $75.8 million.

Service Corps of Retired Executives (SCORE).—Using one-on-one counseling and workshops, SCORE reaches about 293,000 business owners annually using approximately 12,500 counselors through approximately 400 chapters located across the country. Counseling costs to the Government are less than $3 per hour. For 1999, the budget proposes a funding level of $3.5 million for this program. For 1999, the budget proposes $9.5 million for 7(j) assistance, to assist 8(a) firms, Native American communities, Alaskan villages, and other economically distressed areas.

Minority Enterprise Development Program.—This program provides business development assistance and Federal contracting opportunities to approximately 6,000 firms. In 1997, over 28,700 contracting actions were awarded to small disadvantaged businesses under the agency's 8(a) program, amounting to more than $6.3 billion in loans.

Microloan Technical Assistance.—The Microloan Program technical assistance component helps small businesses gain access to non-SBA loans and assists SBA's microloan program by providing on-going management advice and counseling. The program also helps support the Administration's initiative to help individuals receiving welfare assistance move to work by providing opportunities to start up small businesses using SBA-guaranteed microloans. Microloan Technical Assistance grants ensure that microloan borrowers are provided the necessary education and training needed for them to succeed. The budget provides $16.5 million in Microloan grants.

Women's Business Centers.—Through this program the SBA makes awards to private entities to deliver entrepreneurial training programs for women business owners or those interested in starting a business. In 1997, 63 Women's Business Centers were operating in 36 states, Washington, DC, and Puerto Rico. Each offers financial, management, marketing and technical assistance to current and potential women business owners. The 1999 budget request includes $9 million for this program to establish 10 to 12 new sites and to continue two initiatives begun in 1996: the Women's Business Intranet (which links all of the Women's Business Centers), and a virtual demonstration site on the Internet, called the Online Women's Business Center, which will allow women nationwide to have access to these services.

Business Information Centers (BIC).—These centers offer self-help hardware, software and reference materials, and on-site counseling provided by SCORE volunteers. Individuals who are in business or are interested in starting a business will find many resources specifically targeted at helping businesses grow or find new market niches. For 1999, the budget proposes $500 thousand for this program.

Native American Affairs.—This program supports the economic development needs of reservation communities. In 1997, over 385 loans were made to Native Americans under the agency's 7(a) program, amounting to more than $72 million in loans.

Business Assistance Publications.—The SBA provides publications on a self-funding basis and distributes an estimated 300,000 items to the public each year.

One Stop Capital Shops (OSCS).—One Stop Capital Shops are located in Urban Empowerment Zone, Enterprise Community, and Rural Economic Area Partnership communities. The objectives of these programs are to stimulate and sustain economic development in these economically distressed and underserved areas. The OSCS are a delivery mechanism for existing SBA programs that emphasize the use of public/private relationships. The SBA serves as a catalyst by offering its business development and capital resources together in one location with other federal, state, local, and private sector resources in order to leverage and complement those resources and provide better customer service. For 1999, the Budget proposes $3.1 million.

Other Services.—The SBA co-sponsors a variety of special activities with the for-profit, not-for-profit, and public sectors. Many co-sponsored events cost customers between $35 and $100, with comparable commercially-sponsored training costing $300 to $800. Among the most visible public/private co-sponsorships undertaken is SBA Online, SBA's electronic bulletin board for small businesses. The SBA Online system has been principally underwritten by Sprint, which has paid the cost of all toll-free connections to the system. Between October, 1992, and January, 1997, more than one and three-quarter million connections to SBA Online were logged, and more than 120,000 individuals used the system on a regular basis.

Performance Goals

Program and Policy Goals under the GPRA.—President Clinton has made small business formation and growth an essential part of his national economic plan. The Small Business Administration has focused on the following five program and policy goals as part of the plan: (1) increase opportunities for small businesses to succeed, including increasing access to capital and business development; (2) transform the SBA into a 21st century leading edge financial institution; (3) help communities and families recover from disasters; (4) lead small business participation in welfare-to-work; and (5) serve as a voice for America's small businesses.

SBA Strategic Plan.—It is the mission of the SBA to serve America's small businesses in the most cost effective manner possible to help preserve free competition, to contribute to strengthening the Nation's economy, and to assist disaster-ravaged communities recover from their losses.

Performance Indicators.—In the long run, the Agency's performance goal is true economic development and the capacity to assess how SBA assistance contributes to helping small businesses succeed. A variety of credit and non-credit business output and outcome measures are included in the SBA strategic and annual performance plans to measure progress in the following areas: businesses created, maintained, and/or expanded; jobs created, and revenues generated; cost effective access to quality training, counseling and information; private capital leveraged more effectively; improved customer satisfaction; reduced paperwork, more understandable regulations, and increased compliance; increased use of resource partners and more flexible lending; small businesses receiving an increased share of Federal procurement and research; efficient delivery of disaster service and a greater satisfaction level; and, delivery of SBA programs that "work better and cost less."

ciencies which may create conditions for fraud, waste, or abuse. The audit function provides internal audit, external audit, and inspection/evaluation oversight activities. Internal audits assess the general management and efficiency of SBA program operations. External audits review all program participants and their compliance with SBA regulations and procedural requirements. Inspection/evaluations address specific requirements of program management and effectiveness. The investigative function detects and investigates allegations of illegal and improper activities involving agency personnel, programs, and operations.

The 1999 budget requests $11.3 million to support critical oversight of SBA's business loan portfolio and other programs. The OIG oversight efforts and investigative activities: (1) enhance the SBA's efficiency and effectiveness; (2) serve to deter fraud and abuse in agency programs; and, (3) consistently demonstrate a high rate of return on invested funds.

Under this program, the Small Business Administration guarantees a portion of the losses sustained by a surety company as a result of the issuance of a bid, payment, and/or performance bond to a small business concern.

In 1999, the budget proposes a program level anticipated to accommodate expected demand from the preferred surety bond program authorized in P.L. 100-590. The SBA will continue to rely on both preferred and prior approval sureties to deliver this program, with SBA oversight.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records, for this program, the subsidy costs associated with the direct loans obligated and loan guarantees committed in 1992 and beyond (including modifications of direct loans or loan guarantees that resulted from obligations or commitments in any year), as well as administrative expenses of this program. The subsidy amounts are estimated on a present value basis; the administrative expenses are estimated on a cash basis.

Budget authority is not requested for the section 504 loan program in 1999.

General Business Assistance.—The Small Business Administration guarantees loans under its section 7(a) General Business Loan program to small businesses that are unable to obtain private financing. These loans must be of such value or so secured as to reasonably assure repayment. No loan may be made unless the financial assistance is not otherwise available on reasonable terms. Under the guarantee plan, the SBA agrees to purchase the guaranteed portion of the loan only upon default.

Investment Company Assistance.—A primary function of small business investment companies is to provide a source of equity capital or long-term loans to new or expanding small businesses. The Small Business Investment Act, as amended, authorizes the SBA to guarantee the timely payment of all principal and interest, as scheduled, on debentures issued by such companies. In addition, since 1994, the SBA has guaranteed the performance of participating securities issued by these companies.

Development Company Assistance.—Under the Small Business Investment Act, the SBA makes loans through State and local development companies to small businesses. Through these programs, the SBA promotes economic development and job creation and maintenance by stimulating the flow of long-term financing to small business concerns for projects involving fixed assets. These projects are designed to create or retain a meaningful number of jobs in the communities affected, with a special emphasis on distressed areas.

Program Performance

Program performance and policy goals.—SBA has the following program performance and policy objectives to support its first GPRA goal of increasing small business opportunities to succeed: (1) focusing lending on “traditionally under-served” small businesses; (2) offering specialized financing, such as venture capital, export financing, and bonding opportunities; (3) improving methods of providing credit assistance through electronic lending, less documentation, centralized functions, and one-stop capital access points; (4) reducing costs by maintaining a high quality portfolio through an improved liquidation process; and, (5) effectively implementing a loan asset sales program.

Performance Indicators.—During the past three years SBA has focused on quantitative, measureable lending goals for underserved segments of the small business market in each of SBA’s districts, e.g., minorities, women, and small exporters. The SBA began this process in 1994 when it established internal performance agreements that contained two-year lending goals. Using goal monitoring, the agency is able to track, on a regular basis, the status of each district office’s progress in meeting these goals.

Appropriate finance program effectiveness assessment involves the consideration of a number of indicators. First, effectiveness can be assessed by loan-making activity levels—the number and dollar amount of loans guaranteed by SBA. Second, effectiveness can be measured by the health of the loan portfolio—its currency and default figures, and the agency’s ultimate record on loan recovery. Beyond these very tangible indicators of success are the more difficult-to-measure indicators. These include such things as the economic benefits that accrue to the small business, its employees, and the community in which it is located.

The number and dollar volume of loans made under the section 7(a) loan program has increased dramatically in recent years. In 1992, SBA made or guaranteed approximately 24,000 loans totaling about $5.9 billion. In 1997, the SBA approved approximately 45,000 loans totaling about $9.5 billion. The section 504 program has also shown impressive growth. In 1992, the SBA provided about 2,000 financings totaling nearly $560 million. By 1997, those figures had increased to about 6,900 financings for $1.4 billion. Performance measures to be used in 1999 to assess progress in achieving the above goals follow.

Section 7(a): Reflecting ongoing improvement of 7(a) loan portfolio performance, SBA’s Liquidation Improvement Project, and technical refinements that improved SBA’s credit subsidy model, the baseline (current services) 7(a) subsidy rate declines from 2.19 percent to 1.39 percent. This decrease is also attributable to improved agency credit risk analysis. The budget includes no policy changes to the 7(a) program in 1999.

Section 504: The 1999 subsidy rate reflects further improved 504 loan performance. The current pass-through fee charged to borrowers will be reduced from .775 to .729 to maintain the baseline subsidy rate at zero percent.

Loan asset sales: As part of SBA’s transition from loan servicing to lender oversight, SBA will sell all direct and defaulted business loans, and disaster loans, over the next 3 years. These sales will allow SBA to focus its limited resources on expanding access to capital rather than servicing and liquidating a growing portfolio. The budget estimates that SBA’s business loan assets will be sold at a net gain to the Government.

Microloan Program: The Microloan programs were reauthorized and made permanent by P.L. 105–135 in 1997. The Administration is requesting $6.7 million in subsidy budget authority for these programs in 1999.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records, for loans made pursuant to section 7(b) of the Small Business Act, as amended, the subsidy costs associated with the direct loans obligated in 1992 and beyond (including modifications of direct loans or loan guarantees that resulted from obligations or commitments in any year), as well as administrative expenses of this program. The subsidy amounts are estimated on a present value basis; the administrative expenses are estimated on a cash basis.

Disaster loans made pursuant to Section 7(b) of the Small Business Act are the primary form of Federal assistance for non-farm, private sector disaster losses. For this reason, the program is the only form of SBA assistance not limited to small businesses. Through this program, SBA helps homeowners, renters, businesses of all sizes, and non-profit organizations pay for the cost of rebuilding. Pursuant to the Small Business Act, the government subsidizes borrowers who have incurred uninsured losses or economic injury as the result of a natural disaster. These loans are also a critical source of economic stimulation in disaster-ravaged communities, helping to spur employment and stabilize the local tax base. Eligibility is based on financial criteria. There are three loan programs: physical disaster loans to individuals; physical disaster loans to businesses of any size; and, economic injury loans to small businesses without credit available elsewhere.

Program Performance

Over the 42 year history of the program, SBA has helped almost 1.3 million disaster victims by providing more than $25 billion in disaster assistance. Over 90 percent has been to borrowers that otherwise would not have been able to rebuild. During 1997 alone, SBA approved nearly 30,000 disaster loans, exceeding $1 billion to homeowners, renters, and businesses.

Program Performance and Policy Goals.—The SBA program performance and policy goals are to: 1) provide disaster assistance to victims in the most effective and cost efficient manner; 2) deliver an effective program that achieves its public policy objectives; 3) provide customer-focused assistance that satisfactorily accommodates the needs of all disaster victims; 4) simplify and streamline the loan-making process by re-engineering forms, procedures and processes; and, 5) effectively implement the proposed asset sales program.

Performance Indicators.—A true assessment of program effectiveness is a long-term process, and there is much to learn about the true extent that the disaster loan program contributes to effective recovery. In the short term, SBA is committed to providing cost-effective delivery and high satisfaction levels to the customers who use its services. In the long run, the agency's goal is to facilitate true economic recovery and assess how the program's business recovery assistance contributes to the rebuilding of a local or regional economy. Performance measures to be used in 1998 to assess progress in achieving the above goals follow.

Outputs	Intermediate Outcomes
Loan decision within 7 to 20 days—number, percent.	Increased funds available at time of need.
Initial disbursement ordered 4 days after receipt of loan closing documents—number, percent.	Improved customer satisfaction due to simplified and less burdensome processes.
Loans approved—number, dollar amount.	Reduced costs to Government.

Under current law, the interest rates on Small Business Administration (SBA) disaster loans are set by statutory formulas. A lower rate, not to exceed four percent, is available to applicants without credit available from private lenders. A higher rate, not to exceed eight percent, is charged to borrowers who have credit available from private sources. To create a stronger incentive for households and businesses to plan for and to mitigate against the costs of disasters and to reduce the costs of these loans to the Government, the budget proposes to increase the interest rate on SBA disaster loans to the U.S. Treasury's cost for securities of comparable maturity, subject to a cap of six percent. For borrowers with access to credit elsewhere, the interest rate would be pegged above the comparable Treasury rate. These changes would reduce the subsidy for these loans from 22.36 percent to 5.93 percent, which will allow more loans to be provided with a given amount of budget authority.

In 1999, this proposal would allow the estimated volume of $901 million in disaster loans to be financed entirely with unobligated balances carried forward from 1998. As a result, no appropriation of new budget authority is requested for the Disaster Loan Program Account for 1999. Without the proposed increase in interest rates, the carryover from 1998 would finance only $237 million of new disaster loans in 1999.

Public Law 94-305 established this fund to alleviate the adverse impact of pollution regulations on small businesses. As a result of the elimination of tax exempt financing associated with the Pollution Control Guaranteed program, no new activity is anticipated for this program.

During 1992, the Small Business Administration started the process of redeeming a large number of outstanding bonds on which it has taken over loan payments. Most of these targeted bonds are ten years old and voluntary redemption is now viable under the bond documents. Redemption of these obligations would preclude the SBA from paying excessive interest over the next ten years.

This schedule reflects the effects of the Administration's proposal to impose a user fee on representatives of Social Security or Supplemental Security Income claimants. This monetary assessment would be imposed only if the claimant being represented is awarded past due benefits and a fee for representation is approved by the Agency. An assessment would not be imposed if the representative does not charge a fee for services. Language will be provided to the appropriations and authorizing committees. This schedule also reflects the program effects of the Administration's proposal to authorize an adjustment to the 1999 discretionary spending limits for amounts appropriated to conduct additional redeterminations of non-disability factors of eligibility under the Supplemental Security Income program.

This schedule reflects the effects of the Administration's proposal to impose a user fee on representatives of Social Security or Supplemental Security Income claimants. This monetary assessment would be imposed only if the claimant being represented is awarded past due benefits and a fee for representation is approved by the Agency. An assessment would not be imposed if the representative does not charge a fee for services. Language will be provided to the appropriations and authorizing committees.

This schedule also reflects the effects of the Administration's proposal to test allowing Supplemental Security Income and Social Security Disability Insurance beneficiaries to choose their own public or private vocational rehabilitation providers. Participating providers would be paid a percentage of disability benefits saved as a result of beneficiaries returning to work for a specified period of time.

This appropriation establishes a framework for joint Federal and State efforts to create opportunities for self-sustaining economic development and improved quality of life for the people of Appalachia. Program investments are made in the Appalachian Region for wide-ranging assistance including development highways and area development. The States, acting through the Appalachian Regional Commission (ARC), are responsible for recommending local and State projects within their borders for assistance under this program. Special targeting to distressed counties is a part of the State allocation formula.

access roads, is designed to improve the accessibility of Appalachia; to reduce highway transportation costs to and within Appalachia; and to provide the highway transportation facilities necessary to accelerate the overall development of Appalachia. Studies have found that the ADHS has been important to economic development in the Region.

The 1999 Budget marks the first year that construction of the ADHS would be funded solely from the Highway Trust Fund under the Administration's National Economic Crossroads Efficiency Act (NEXTEA) legislation. This bill includes $2.19 billion for the ADHS from FY 1998 to FY 2003. Annual proposed funding levels are $200 million, $290 million, $350 million, $400 million, $450 million, and $500 million, respectively. The ARC would exercise programmatic and administrative control over these funds, as it has with appropriated funds.

The cumulative status of the system of roads, including mileage prefinanced by the States, follows:

* Includes proposed NEXTEA funds.

2. Area development program.—Area development funds are provided to each of the Appalachian States by allocation. This funding is used to help the regional economy become more competitive by putting in place the building blocks for self-sustaining economic development, while continuing to provide special assistance to the Region's most distressed and underdeveloped counties. In 1998, the Commission allocated a minimum of 30% of area development funding specifically to these 97 severely distressed counties in addition to the overall State allocations.

The area development program funds projects which advance the goals and objectives of ARC's strategic plan. This strategic plan commits ARC to achieving five broad goals which are undergirded by 13 objectives. These five goals are: (1) Appalachian residents will have the skills and knowledge necessary to compete in the world economy in the 21st century; (2) Appalachian communities will have the physical infrastructure necessary for self-sustaining economic development and improved quality of life; (3) the people of Appalachia will have the vision and capacity to mobilize and work together for sustained economic progress and improvement of their communities; (4) Appalachian residents will have access to financial and technical resources to help build dynamic and self-sustaining local economies; and, (5) Appalachian residents will have access to affordable, quality health care. The Commission has taken aggressive steps to ensure that the area development program will make progress on accomplishing these goals, to better target resources to those communities with the greatest needs, and to increase flexibility in project submission.

Each Governor will submit for Commission approval an annual strategy statement detailing the areas of emphasis within the Region for ARC funds. Projects submitted by the Governors will include a description of goals and objectives, and projected inputs, outputs, efficiency and outcomes. After project completion, projected outputs and outcomes will be compared to actual results.

The Commission's regional initiatives are a key component to accomplishing the strategic plan and include specifically allocated area development funding. In 1998, these regional initiatives are: (1) internationalization of the economy; (2) telecommunications; (3) leadership and civic development; and (4) creating entrepreneurial economies. The first three initiatives, launched prior to the adoption of the strategic plan are in a finish-up mode and will not receive designated funding after 1998. There is strong evidence that the work encompassed in these initiatives has become imbedded in each state's area development strategy. The fourth initiative, "creating entrepreneurial economies," is the centerpiece policy of the Federal Co-Chairman and received an allocation from the overall area development funding of $5 million in FY 1998. A similar allocation is expected for 1999.

The budget for 1999 provides $57 million for area development.

The approximate project workload follows:

Area development projects .....	1997 actual	1998 est.	1999 est.
Area development projects .....	353	425	425

3. Local development districts and technical assistance programs.—The multi-county local development districts (LDDs) are the mechanism for ensuring that the local governments in Appalachia plan and work together on a regional basis. They provide competent support staff to member governments to plan, initiate, and implement projects at the grassroots level. Funding for LDDs was increased to $5 million in 1998 to reflect their increased role in strategic planning and performance measurement efforts. Technical assistance serves to strengthen the state and local governments, LDDs and non-profit organizations in the Region. The 1999 Budget provides $5 million for the LDDs and $1 million for technical assistance, with the approximate approved workload as follows:

Planning districts aided .....	1997 actual	1998 est.	1999 est.
Planning districts aided .....	69	69	69
Technical assistance projects .....	8	8	8

4. Salaries and expenses.—The Federal Co-Chairman represents the Federal Government on the Commission and leads in the coordination of the Appalachian program with Federal agencies. Since 1989, the Office of the Federal Co-Chairman includes an Inspector General.

The Federal Government contributes 50 percent of the expenses of a professional staff which works with the States and the Federal staff in operating the program. The staff members are not Federal employees but are employees of the jointly-supported Commission. The budget for 1999 provides $4 million for salaries and expenses.

The Administration proposes to apply the ARC federal-state partnership economic development model to the Lower Mississippi Delta Region. This includes the 219 county region in seven states established by P.L. 100-460 which comprised the Lower Mississippi River Delta Commission. Capitalizing on the successful ARC model and staff expertise, the Delta Region Economic Development Program would establish the Delta Regional Commission (DRC) to assist the economic development of this Region. The ARC Federal Co-Chairman would serve as the Federal Co-Chairman of the DRC. The Governors of the seven member states would serve as Commission members and would elect one of these Governors as States' Co-Chairman.

The economic distress in the Delta Region is widespread and protracted—over half the Delta counties have experienced poverty rates greater than 20 percent for at least the last four decades. This proposal would apply the proven ARC regional economic development model to an adjoining region of the country that has tremendous wide-ranging needs. Although specific allocations for economic development activities would be decided by the members of the DRC, it is anticipated that the requested funding of $26 million would be allocated approximately as follows: area development (e.g., distressed counties programs, physical infrastructure, job training, entrepreneurship), $20 million; assistance to the state-local regional economic development entities (LDDs) who would participate in project development and evaluation, $3 million; technical assistance, $1 million; and additional administrative expenses, $2 million. To capitalize on the rich body of experience and to encourage sharing of economic development strategies, as well as to minimize administrative costs, the DRC and the ARC would share a common staff. Although the requested funds would pay the full additional costs of the requested staff in 1999, after 1999, the staff of the DRC and the ARC would be jointly funded by the states (50 percent) and the federal government (50 percent).

The Architectural and Transportation Barriers Compliance Board (Access Board) was established by section 502 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 to ensure compliance with the Architectural Barriers Act of 1968. Since that time, the Access Board has been the only independent Federal agency whose primary mission is accessibility for people with disabilities. The Access Board has responsibility under three major pieces of legislation: the Architectural Barriers Act of 1968 (ABA); the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA); and the Telecommunications Act of 1996.

The Access Board's first major responsibility was to enforce the ABA, ensuring accessibility in facilities built, altered, or leased using certain Federal funds. In fiscal year 1998, the Board will continue to process, investigate, and resolve complaints of noncompliance. The Access Board has a proven record of voluntary, amicable resolution of access issues. Under the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), the Access Board gained responsibility for two major public roles: to develop minimum accessibility guidelines for places of public accommodation, commercial facilities, State and local government facilities, and transportation vehicles and facilities, all of which are covered under the ADA; and to offer training and technical assistance to individuals and organizations throughout the country on removing architectural, transportation and communication barriers.

In pursuing these responsibilities under the ADA, the Board uses citizens' advisory committees, negotiated rule-making, and other communication channels to encourage the public's full participation in the Federal rulemaking process for developing its ADA Accessibility Guidelines (ADAAG). In addition, the Board is working with the building industry toward the development of a single set of minimum accessibility guidelines, using ADAAG as the basis.

Under the Telecommunications Act, the Access Board is charged with developing accessibility guidelines for telecommunications equipment and customer premises equipment, in conjunction with the Federal Communications Commission. The Telecommunications Act requires that such equipment be "designed, developed, and fabricated to be accessible to and usable by individuals with disabilities, if readily achievable."

Consistent with the Government Performance and Results Act, (GPRA) the Access Board has adopted this mission statement to guide its programs: The Board is the catalyst for achieving an accessible America. The statement recognizes that achieving an accessible America requires bringing together public and private sectors. The Board has established long range goals that aim to bring together public and private sectors for achieving an accessible America. The Board's long-range goals are to:

- Take a leadership role in the development of codes and standards for accessibility
- Work in partnership with Federal agencies and others to make the Federal government a model of compliance with accessibility standards
- Be known as the leading source of information about accessibility and disseminate that information to our customers in effective ways

In FY 1999, the Board will implement specific action strategies for each of these goals. In the development of codes and standards, the Board will have identified the codes most relevant to accessibility and will initiate a process to work closely with the codes organizations to harmonize ADAAG and the codes. Working to make the Federal government a model of compliance, the Board will identify three to six other Federal agencies to identify benchmarks for the best practices in ABA compliance systems. In the distribution of information on accessibility, the Board will build on its existing partnerships in the private sector to develop and distribute technical assistance materials.

The Commission engages in studies concerning areas in which there may be denials of civil rights and reports on these matters to the President and the Congress. Hearings by the Commissioners are held to investigate and obtain information about denials of civil rights. Conferences and open meetings are held by staff and State Advisory Committees to gather data and issue reports providing information about civil rights problems. In addition, the Commission appraises and reports on Federal agencies enforcement of civil rights laws. Complaints alleging discrimination are referred to the proper Federal agencies.

The Commission provides liaison with private groups, public groups, and the media to provide civil rights information to Government officials, organizations, and the public. The Commission issues publications and public service announcements to discourage discrimination and denial of equal protection of the laws. The Commission also provides a library resource to support civil rights research, studies, hearings, and other Commission activities, and makes this information available to the general public.

The Committee for Purchase From People Who Are Blind or Severely Disabled was established by the Wagner-O'Day Act of 1938, as amended. Its primary objective is to increase the employment opportunities for people who are blind or have other severe disabilities and, whenever possible, to prepare them to engage in competitive employment. In 1999, approximately 36,000 people who are blind or have other severe disabilities are projected to be employed in over 660 producing nonprofit agencies. The Committee's duties include promoting the program; determining which products and services are suitable for Government procurement from qualified nonprofit agencies serving people who are blind or have other severe disabilities; maintaining a procurement list of such products and services; determining the fair market price for products and services on the procurement list; and making rules and regulations necessary to carry out the purposes of the Act. In 1999 the Committee expects to have nearly 5,300 items on its Procurement List and sales of $900 million.

The Committee staff's responsibilities include promoting and assessing the overall program; supervising the selection and assignment of new products and services; assisting in establishing prices; reviewing and adjusting these prices; verifying the qualifications of nonprofit agencies; and monitoring their performance.

The Commodity Futures Trading Commission (CFTC) administers the Commodity Exchange Act of 1936, as amended. The purpose of the CFTC is to further the economic utility of the futures markets by encouraging their efficiency, assuring their integrity, and protecting participants against abusive trade practices, fraud, and deceit. The object of commodity futures trading regulation is to enable the markets to better serve their designated functions of providing a price discovery mechanism and a means of offsetting price risk. By properly serving these functions, the futures markets serve the public interest by contributing toward better planning, more efficient distribution and consumption, and more economical marketing. The commodity futures and options markets represent one of America's most innovative and competitive contributions to the international financial services industry.

The Administration proposes additional resources above the fiscal year 1998 level for the Commission. These increases would enhance the Commission's ability to investigate and detect fraud and abuse and ensure the continued integrity of the commodities markets. In addition, such increases would provide the Commission with the enforcement and surveillance resources necessary to respond to the continued growth and use of complex trading and derivative instruments.

Market surveillance, analysis and research.—Responsibilities under this program include daily surveillance of the market activity of large individual traders and fundamental economic market factors to insure orderly markets. Contract terms and conditions are reviewed to insure conformity with current cash marketing conditions and adequate deliverable supplies. This program also systematically investigates the functioning of markets and market users and develops better tools to assist in detecting and preventing price distortions.

Enforcement.—The enforcement program is responsible for detecting, investigating, and litigating violations of the Act or regulations. These violations may include actual and attempted market manipulations, cheating and defrauding customers, and abusive trading practices such as fictitious trading, wash trading, and pre-arranged trading. This program may seek remedies through the administrative process or by injunctive actions in the Federal Courts.

The gifts and contributions account is a consolidation of two trust accounts. In one, gifts and contributions from individuals and organizations are deposited for use in furthering program goals. In the other, funds appropriated to make educational awards to individuals who successfully complete national service are maintained until such time as the individual uses those awards.

The Corporation for Public Broadcasting provides grants to qualified public television and radio stations to be used at their discretion for purposes related to program production or acquisition and general operations. The Corporation also supports the production and acquisition of radio and television programs for national distribution. In addition, the Corporation assists in the financing of several system-wide activities, including national satellite interconnection services and the payment of music royalty fees, and provides limited technical assistance, research, and planning services to improve system-wide capacity and performance. The appropriation for the Corporation is enacted two years in advance. For 2000, an appropriation of $300 million was enacted in the 1998 appropriations act.

For 2001, the Administration is requesting $340 million for general programming and system support. In addition, the Corporation should be reauthorized this year, its most recent authorization having expired at the end of fiscal year 1996. Public broadcasting plays a vital role in the educational and cultural development of our Nation. The proposed funding level will allow the Corporation to carry out its role of facilitating the provision of universally available educational, non-commercial public telecommunications services that meet the needs of local communities across the country. The table below illustrates the 1999-2001 funding levels.

In April 1997, the Federal Communications Commission issued regulations requiring broadcasters to transition from analog to digital transmissions. Public broadcasters must convert to digital by 2003 or lose their spectrum license. Funds made available in this account to the Corporation for Public Broadcasting (CPB) will facilitate public broadcasters' transition to digital signals. 1999 funds totaling $50 million are requested as part of a multi-year initiative totaling $375 million over five years. Funds will support necessary expenses such as the base equipment transition requirements to ensure continued universal access to public broadcasting in digital format.

The Veterans Judicial Review Act, 38 U.S.C. §§ 7251-7292 (1988) established the United States Court of Veterans Appeals under Article I of the United States Constitution. The Court is empowered to review decisions of the Board of Veterans' Appeals and may affirm, modify, revise, or remand a decision of the Board of Veterans' Appeals as it deems appropriate. The type of review performed by the Court is similar to that which is performed in Article III courts under the Administrative Procedure Act, title 5 U.S.C. §§ 551 et seq. In actions before it, the Court has the authority to decide all relevant questions of law, to interpret constitutional, statutory, and regulatory provisions, and to determine the meaning or applicability of the terms of an action by the Secretary of the Department of Veterans Affairs. The Court, being created by an act of Congress, may issue all writs necessary or appropriate in aid of its jurisdiction, 28 U.S.C. § 1651.

The Court is empowered to: compel actions of the Secretary that are found to have been unlawfully withheld or unreasonably delayed; and set aside decisions, findings, conclusions, rules, and regulations issued or adopted by the Secretary, the Board of Veterans' Appeals, or the Chairman of the Board that are found to be arbitrary or capricious. The Court may also set aside decisions which are abuse of discretion or otherwise not in accordance with the law, contrary to constitutional right, in excess of statutory jurisdiction or authority, or without observance of the procedures required by law. In cases involving benefits under the laws administered by the Department, the Court may hold unlawful or set aside findings of material facts if the findings are clearly erroneous.

The Court's principal office location is Washington, D.C.; however, it is a national court, empowered to sit anywhere in the United States.

Practice Registration Fees.—This fund is established under 38 U.S.C. § 7285. The fund, which receives no appropriations, will be used by the U.S. Court of Veterans Appeals to employ independent counsel to pursue disciplinary matters involving practitioners and to defray costs for the implementation of the standards of practice before the Court.

The Defense Nuclear Facilities Safety Board, authorized by Public Law 100-456, is responsible for evaluating the content and implementation of the standards relating to the design, construction, operation, and decommissioning of defense nuclear facilities of the Department of Energy (DOE) (as defined in Public Law 100-456). In addition, the National Defense Authorization Act for 1992 and 1993 (Public Law 102-190) expanded the Board's jurisdiction to include facilities and activities involved with the assembly, disassembly, and testing of nuclear weapons, and to approve any DOE plans to resume plutonium operations at the Rocky Flats Plant, Golden, Colorado. The Board is also responsible for investigating any event or practice at a defense nuclear facility which has or may adversely affect public health and safety. The Board makes specific recommendations to the Secretary of Energy on measures that should be adopted to ensure that both public and employee health and safety are adequately protected.

The National Capital Revitalization and Self-Government Improvement Act of 1997 requires that the adult felon population of the District of Columbia be transferred to the Federal Prison System over the next several years. To assist in this transition, the Act established a Corrections Trustee to provide financial oversight of, and assistance to, the District of Columbia Department of Corrections during this period. The Corrections Trustee also provides funding to the D.C. Department of Corrections associated with the prisoner population that will eventually be transferred to the Federal Prison System. Of the current D.C. adult felon population (7,200 inmates), 2,000 inmates will be transferred to private facilities contracted for by the Federal Prison System by December 31, 1999. The remaining inmates will be transferred to the Federal Prison System when the Lorton, Virginia, Correctional Complex is closed, or by December 31, 2003, whichever is earlier. It is estimated that at least 800 District inmates will already have been transferred to the Federal Prison System by the end of 1998.

In 1999, the Corrections Trustee will continue to work with the D.C. Department of Corrections on the closing of Lorton initiative now in progress. Of the seven prison facilities located at the Lorton site, three will have been closed by the end of 1999. The Corrections Trustee will also work with the D.C. Department of Corrections to restructure employee pay scales to stabilize the workforce by discouraging employee separations. The Trustee will also work with the Department to establish a system of internal controls and audits to improve the quality and accountability of operations.

The National Capital Revitalization and Self-Government Improvement Act of 1997 eliminated the annual Federal payment to the District of Columbia. The annual payment was used to partially offset the costs associated with the Federal government assuming financial and management responsibility for certain District government functions, including the courts and key elements of the criminal justice system and the unfunded pension liability under the Revitalization Act. The former annual payment compensated the District for the net costs imposed by the presence of the Federal government in Washington, D.C. A $719 million Federal payment was provided in 1997, of which $660 was provided for the payment to the general fund of the District of Columbia.

The National Capital Revitalization and Self-Government Improvement Act of 1997 establishes the Federal Supplemental District of Columbia Pension Fund to pay retirement benefits for District of Columbia law enforcement officers, firefighters and teachers after the District of Columbia Federal Pension Liability Trust Fund has been depleted. This fund consists of amounts deposited into the fund, any amount appropriated to the fund, and any income earned on the investment of the assets of the fund. At the end of each fiscal year, beginning in FY 1998, the Secretary will pay into this fund from the General Fund of the Treasury an annual amount to amortize the unfunded liability over 30 years and the covered administrative expenses for the year. Conservative estimates were used to calculate earned interest amounts.

The National Capital Revitalization and Self-Government Improvement Act of 1997 established the District of Columbia Offender Supervision, Defender, and Court Services Agency to assume the District of Columbia offender supervision, pre-trial services, parole revocation, adult probation and public defender related functions.

The new Federal agency will assume its duties no earlier than August 5, 1998 and no later than August 5, 2000. The Act established the Pretrial Services, Defense Services, Parole, Adult Probation and Offender Supervision Trustee (hereinafter the Offender Supervision and Court Services Trustee) to assist in the transition to the federal government of the District of Columbia responsibilities in the following ways: (1) overseeing the finances and directing the actions of those agencies, including those of the court system of the District of Columbia, whose functions will be transferred to the new Federal executive branch agency; (2) exercising the powers and functions of the Director of the District of Columbia Offender Supervision, Defender, and Court Services Agency; and (3) certifying to the Attorney General that the new Federal agency is ready to carry out the functions described in section 11233 and that the United States Parole Commission can carry out the functions described in section 11231 prior to federal assumption of full responsibility and liability for these duties and functions. During the transition, the Offender Supervision and Court Services Trustee is expected to improve public safety by establishing a fully integrated court services and offender supervision monitoring and information system. This system is to provide the following services for adult offenders on pretrial release, probation, parole, or supervised release: appropriate drug testing; treatment; electronic monitoring; field supervision; and intermediate and graduated sanctions, with particular emphasis on providing enhanced support to the existing drug court and domestic violence court as well as any such additional specialized programs as may be established in the future in the District of Columbia.

In 1999, the Offender Supervision and Court Services Trustee will work closely with all elements of the District of Columbia and federal criminal justice, courts and corrections systems to facilitate the transition and to improve offender supervision and court services programs, policy and practice.

The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) is the Federal agency responsible for enforcement of: the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967; title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, as amended; the Equal Pay Act of 1963; in the Federal sector only, section 501 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1963; the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990; and the Civil Rights Act of 1991. These acts prohibit employment discrimination based on race, sex, religion, national origin, age, or handicap status. The EEOC is also responsible for carrying out Executive Order 12067, which promotes coordination and minimizes conflict and duplication among Federal agencies that administer statutes or regulations involving employment discrimination.

Totals for all charges do not equal the sum of all statutes because many charge filings allege issues/bases under more than one statute.

The EEOC's budget supports three activities:

Executive direction and program support.—This activity provides for the direction and coordination of the Commission's programs. It also provides administrative and management support services for the agency. For 1999, the agency will continue initiatives designed to further labor management partnerships and improve both internal and external customer service.

Enforcement.—This activity resolves charges of employment discrimination filed with the Commission and pursues litigation to enforce compliance with Title VII, the Equal Pay Act, the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, the Americans with Disabilities Act, and the Civil Rights Act of 1991. During 1999, programs will continue to focus on improving the effectiveness of the administrative process and litigation program. This includes: using mediation in private sector enforcement activities; using charge prioritization and National Enforcement and Local Enforcement Plan priorities; and improving the processing of Federal-sector EEO complaints, appeal actions and affirmative employment procedures. The agency will continue to encourage and facilitate voluntary compliance with equal employment opportunity laws in the private and public sectors and increase the public's knowledge about individual rights under equal employment opportunity laws. The 1999 request includes funding to enhance the agency's information resource management system, to continue the use of alternative dispute resolution mechanisms, and to expand its outreach and technical assistance efforts. Together with additional staff, these initiatives will provide the tools needed to further combat excessive caseloads and prevent discrimination from occurring in the first place.

State and local grants.—This activity provides funds to State and local fair employment practice agencies to assist in the resolution of employment discrimination complaints. For 1999, the agency will continue working with State and Local Fair Employment Practices Agencies and Tribal Employment Rights Organizations to improve employment discrimination charge processing and other approaches for addressing workplace discrimination.

The purpose of the Export-Import Bank (Eximbank) is to aid in the financing and promotion of U.S. exports. To accomplish its objectives, the bank's authority and resources are used to: assume commercial and political risks that exporters or private institutions are unwilling or unable to undertake; overcome maturity and other limitations in private sector export financing; assist U.S. exporters to meet officially sponsored foreign export credit competition; and, provide leadership and guidance in export financing to the U.S. exporting and banking communities and to foreign borrowers. The bank provides its export credit support through direct loan, loan guarantee and insurance programs. The bank is actively assisting small- and medium-sized businesses.

The bank's request for administrative expenses for 1999 is $51.9 million, of which $2 million will be used specifically to cover costs associated with the renovation of the GSA-owned building occupied by the bank.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records, for Eximbank, the subsidy costs associated with direct loans and direct grants obligated, and loan guarantees and insurance committed in 1992 and beyond, as well as administrative expenses. The subsidy amounts are estimated on a present value basis; administrative expenses are estimated on a cash basis.

Operating results and financial condition.—The bank is a wholly owned Government corporation. Capital stock of $1 billion was purchased by the U.S. Treasury, and the bank is authorized to borrow up to $6 billion from the Treasury. The bank pays interest on such borrowings.

The bank has a reserve for possible credit losses, which provides for the risk of loss inherent in the lending process. This reserve is a general reserve, available to absorb credit losses related to the total loan portfolio. The reserve is increased by provisions charged to expenses and decreased by charge-offs, net of recoveries.

The provision for possible credit losses is based on the bank's evaluation of the adequacy of the reserve, taking into consideration a variety of factors, including repayment status of loans, future risk factors, the relationship of the reserve to the portfolio, and worldwide economic conditions. Providing for such possible losses does not imply that any loans will be written off. It simply recognizes the fact that the prospects for collection of some of the bank's loans are impaired. It does not provide for losses on a country-by-country basis and is intended only to provide an overall revaluation of the loan portfolio.

The bank's net operating income was $391 million in 1997. Total Government equity in the corporation was $2,830 million on September 30, 1997.

The Farm Credit Administration (FCA) is an independent Federal agency that examines and regulates the Farm Credit System (System) for safety and soundness. The System is a cooperative agricultural credit system of farm credit banks and associations that lends to farmers, ranchers, and their cooperatives. Beginning in 1990, the FCA also performs annual examinations of the Federal Agricultural Mortgage Corporation. In addition, FCA annually examines The National Consumer Cooperative Bank and its affiliate, The NCCB Development Corporation.

As of October 1, 1997, the System is comprised of six Farm Credit Banks, one Agricultural Credit Bank, one bank for cooperatives, 206 associations, five service corporations, and three related institutions, including the Federal Agricultural Mortgage Corporation. The Agricultural Credit Bank and bank for cooperatives lend to eligible cooperative borrowers nationwide.

Assessments based upon estimated administrative expenses are collected from institutions in the System and the Federal Agricultural Mortgage Corporation and are available for administrative expenses. Obligations are incurred within fiscal year budgets approved by the Farm Credit Administration Board.

The Farm Credit System Financial Assistance Corporation (FAC) was created by the Agricultural Credit Act of 1987 to provide funds to System institutions experiencing financial difficulties. Authority for FAC to issue obligations and provide assistance expired in 1992, after $1.26 billion in FAC debt had been issued. Proceeds of FAC debt issuances were paid into, and amounts for assistance and other expenses were paid from, the FAC Assistance Fund. The FAC was re-classified from a Government-sponsored enterprise to a federal entity beginning in 1993, when most of the private capital in FAC, provided by the System, was rebated from the FAC Trust Fund pursuant to the Reconciliation and Agriculture Appropriations Acts of 1989.

Except for debt issued for Capital Preservation cash-outs, the U.S. Treasury pays all the interest on 15-year, uncollateralized FAC obligations in the first five years, and up to half the interest in the second five years. The system is responsible for a greater share of the interest payment in the second five years if retained earnings exceed five percent of assets. FAC estimates that the system will pay 91 percent of the 1997 expense, 93 percent of the 1998 expense, and 97 percent of the 1999 expense. The System is required to eventually reimburse Treasury for these payments and will redeem FAC debt upon maturity or call. Under the terms of the Act, no interest payments will be made by Treasury after the year 2000.

The FAC Trust Fund holds and rebates the private capital contributed by the System. Remaining amounts in the Trust Fund are available to cover System defaults on FAC principal and interest payments.

The Farm Credit System Insurance Corporation (Corporation) was established to ensure the timely payment of principal and interest on System debt obligations purchased by investors. The Corporation is managed by a three member Board of Directors that consists of the same members as the Farm Credit Administration Board of Directors. The Corporation collects insurance premiums from insured System banks based on the level of accruing and non-accruing loans outstanding in each bank and its affiliated associations' loan portfolio. The Corporation derives its revenues from these yearly premiums and from the investment income earned on its investment portfolio. Congress established a secure base amount of 2 percent of outstanding System obligations, or such other amounts determined by its Board of Directors to be actuarially sound to maintain the Insurance Fund. The Corporation expects to achieve the secure base amount during 1998, at which time premium collections will be discontinued.

The Insurance Fund is available for payment on System obligations if an insured System bank defaults on its primary liability. The Insurance Fund is also available to ensure the timely retirement of certain eligible borrower stock, pay the operating costs of the Corporation and satisfy defaults by system institutions on obligations issued by the FAC after amounts in the FAC Trust Fund are exhausted. The Corporation can exercise its authority to make loans, purchase System bank assets or obligations, provide other financial assistance and otherwise act to reduce its exposure to losses.

The Corporation has the authority to make refunds of excess Insurance Fund balances. No refunds are anticipated before 2005.

The Telecommunications Act of 1996 provides for a major restructuring of the Nation's communications laws, promotes universal service and open access to information networks, and provides for flexible government regulations. Under the Act, telecommunications carriers that provide interstate telecommunications services are required to contribute funds, as prescribed by the FCC, to the preservation and advancement of universal service. The contributions are used to provide services eligible for universal service support as prescribed by the FCC. Telecommunications carriers receive a credit towards their contribution by providing discount service to schools, libraries, and health care providers. Support will also be provided to carriers offering services in high cost areas of the United States and to carriers offering services to low income consumers.

This program provides for direct loans for the purpose of spectrum licenses at the Federal Communications Commission's auctions. The licenses are being purchased on an installment basis, which constitutes an extension of credit. The first year of activity for this program was 1996.

As required by the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, this account records, for this program, the subsidy costs associated with the direct loans obligated in 1992 and beyond (including modifications of direct loans or loan guarantees that resulted from obligations or commitments in any year), as well as administrative expenses of this program. The subsidy amounts are estimated on a present value basis; the administrative expenses are estimated on a cash basis.

FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE CORPORATION

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC or Corporation) was created by the Banking Act of 1933 to provide protection for bank depositors and to foster sound banking practices. The Financial Institutions Reform Recovery and Enforcement Act of 1989 established the Bank Insurance Fund (BIF), the Savings Association Insurance Fund (SAIF), and the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation (FSLIC) Resolution Fund (FRF). The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991 generally requires the Corporation to use the least costly method to resolve failed banks and mandates that the Corporation take prompt corrective action against under-capitalized financial institutions.

The deposit insurance ceiling protection has been $100,000 since March 31, 1980. In order to accomplish its varied functions to protect depositors, the Corporation is authorized to promulgate and enforce rules and regulations relating to the supervision of insured institutions and to perform other regulatory and supervisory duties consistent with its responsibilities as an insurer. The Corporation is required to set assessment rates for insured financial institutions semi-annually to maintain the reserves of the BIF and SAIF at 1.25 percent of total insured deposits.

The BIF, a public enterprise revolving fund, derives its income principally from insurance assessments paid by insured banks. The fund represents the accumulated net income of the BIF and is reserved for the protection of depositors in insured banks and for the payment of administrative and insurance expenses. As of September 1997, BIF's fund balance totaled $28 billion, excluding reserves for future failed bank resolutions. The net worth of the BIF reached 1.25 percent of total insured deposits in May 1995.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991 authorizes the FDIC to borrow up to $30 billion from the Treasury to cover deposit insurance losses and provide additional loans from the Federal Financing Bank for working capital purposes. The BIF is not expected to borrow any of the $30 billion line of credit from the Treasury or from the Federal Financing Bank to finance working capital needs.

The Administration supports the transfer of health coverage for retirees and active employees within five years of retirement of the FDIC and the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve, who are now covered by in-house health care plans, to the Federal Employee Health Benefits Program (FEHBP) administered by the Office of Personnel Management (OPM). The current plans are becoming more expensive because of the small size and age of the insured group, and FEHBP coverage would be more cost effective. This proposal will reduce the FDIC's administrative costs, thereby increasing the Bank Insurance Fund balance.

The Administration is proposing that all bank holding companies and FDIC-insured banks be required to pay fees to the appropriate Federal banking agency in amounts sufficient to defray the agency's cost of supervising such institutions. In establishing fees for State banks, the appropriate Federal banking agency shall take into account the extent to which

State bank supervision reduces the need for Federal supervision. Fees would not apply to State banks with assets of less than $100 million. Currently, some financial institutions are not required to pay Federal fees for examinations. This proposal is intended to reduce the inequity among FDIC-insured banks.

The SAIF insures depository institutions formerly insured by the FSLIC. In July 1995, SAIF assumed responsibility for resolving failed thrifts from the Resolution Trust Corporation (RTC).

The Deposit Insurance Funds Act of 1996 imposed a special assessment to bring SAIF's reserves up to 1.25 percent of insured deposits. It also provides for the merger of BIF and SAIF on January 1, 1999, provided that no insured depository institution is a savings association on that date.

The FRF is the successor to FSLIC assets and liabilities from thrift resolutions prior to August 1989. Beginning in August 1989, the RTC assumed responsibility for the FSLIC's unresolved cases. On December 31, 1995, the RTC was terminated and its assets and liabilities were transferred to FRF.

Funds for FRF operations have come from: income earned on its assets; liquidation proceeds from receiverships; the proceeds of the sale of bonds by the Financing Corporation; and, a portion of insurance premiums paid by SAIF members prior to 1993. The Act authorizes appropriations to make up for any shortfall. The FRF will terminate upon the disposition of all its assets, and any net proceeds will be paid to the Treasury. Net proceeds from the former RTC will be paid to the Resolution Funding Corporation.

FDIC's Office of Inspector General (OIG) is an independent unit within the Corporation that conducts audits and investigations of corporate activities and assists the Corporation in preventing and detecting fraud, waste, abuse, and mismanagement. The OIG was established by the FDIC Board of Directors pursuant to the Inspector General Act amendments of 1988 (Public Law 100-504). The Resolution Trust Corporation Completion Act, enacted December 17, 1993, provided that the FDIC Inspector General be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. The Completion Act thus added FDIC to the establishments whose OIG's have separate appropriation accounts under Section 1105(a) of Title 31, United States Code. The OIG's first appropriation was for its fiscal year 1998 expenses. The OIG's appropriations

The Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 (Public Law 101-73, August 9, 1989) established the Appraisal Subcommittee of the Federal Financial Institutions Examination Council. Subsequent legislation (Public Law 101-235) authorized the Secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development to designate a member of the Appraisal Subcommittee.

The Subcommittee is charged with ensuring that real estate appraisals used in federally-related transactions are performed in accordance with uniform standards by appraisers certified and licensed by the States. Its responsibilities include: (1) monitoring the requirements established by the States for the certification and licensing of appraisers; (2) monitoring the requirements established by the Federal financial institutions' regulatory agencies regarding appraisal standards; (3) monitoring and reviewing the practices, procedures, activities, and organization of the Appraisal Foundation; and, (4) maintaining a national registry of licensed and certified appraisers.

Subcommittee activities, including grants awarded to the Appraisal Foundation, were initially funded from a one-time appropriation of $5 million. The Subcommittee is now operating on fee income from state-licensed and certified real estate appraisers in the national registry. The Economic Growth and Regulatory Paperwork Reduction Act of 1996 requires full repayment of the $5 million by the end of 1998. The Treasury has already been repaid $4.5 million.

The Federal Labor Relations Authority (FLRA): (1) serves as a neutral party in the settlement of disputes that arise between unions, employees, and agencies on matters outlined in the Federal Service Labor Management Relations Statute; (2) decides major policy issues; (3) prescribes regulations; and (4) disseminates information appropriate to the needs of agencies, labor organizations, and the public. Establishment of the FLRA gives full recognition to the role of the Federal Government as an employer.

In addition, the FLRA is engaged in training and facilitation in labor-management partnerships and in resolving disputes in its unified Collaboration and Alternative Dispute Resolution Program. Training and facilitation workload is reflected in the following manner: the FLRA promotes labor-management cooperation by providing training and assistance to labor organizations and agencies on resolving disputes; facilitates the creation of partnerships as called for in Executive Order 12871; and trains the parties on rights and responsibilities under the Federal Labor Relations Management Statute.

In 1997, the FLRA conducted over 340 programs involving over 10,000 employees, union representatives, arbitrators, and other practitioners.

Components.—The FLRA is composed of the Authority, the Office of the General Counsel, and the Federal Service Impasses Panel.

Authority.—The Authority adjudicates labor-management disputes in the Federal sector including: appeals on negotiability issues; exceptions to arbitration awards; appropriate units for the purposes of exclusive recognition; eligibility of labor organizations for national consultation rights; and unfair labor practice complaints.

Within the Authority, administrative law judges hold hearings on unfair labor practice complaints, issue reports, and make recommendations to the Authority to allow timely settlement of disputes arising between agencies and unions. The Authority also provides all components with administrative services.

The Office of the Inspector General is responsible for conducting and supervising audits and investigations related to the functions of the FLRA, pursuant to the provisions of the Inspector General Act of 1978, as amended in 1988.

The Federal Retirement Thrift Investment Board is responsible for managing the Thrift Savings Fund (Fund). The Fund is a special tax-deferred savings fund established by the Federal Employees' Retirement System Act of 1986. Due to the fiduciary nature of the Fund, it is not included in the totals of the Federal budget. Information on the financial status and activities of the Fund follows this account.

Program administration for the Fund is financed from the Fund. Program expenses are derived first from Fund forfeitures of agency one percent automatic contributions for employees who separate from the Federal government prior to vesting and then from earnings on all participant and agency contributions to the Fund.

INFORMATION SCHEDULES FOR THE THRIFT SAVINGS FUND

The Fund is composed of individual accounts maintained by the Federal Retirement Thrift Investment Board on behalf of the individual Federal employee participants in the Fund. All Federal employees are eligible to contribute to the Fund. However, only those employees covered by the Federal Employees' Retirement System have their contributions matched by employing agencies in accordance with the formulas prescribed by law. Employees are entitled to select how contributions are distributed among three investment funds: a U.S. Government securities investment fund; a common stock index investment fund; and, a fixed income index investment fund.

Employee participation in the Fund is entirely voluntary, so actual results could vary significantly from these estimates. The estimated status of the three separate funds is shown below:

The Federal Trade Commission (FTC or Commission) is charged by law with ensuring that competition in the marketplace is vigorous, free, and fair. This is accomplished by eliminating threats to fair and honest competition from all sources, both public and private.

Maintaining competition.—The Commission's efforts are aimed at fostering and preserving our competitive system with the goal of maximizing consumer welfare. In addition to enforcing the antitrust laws against private sector restraints on competition, the Commission also scrutinizes regulatory policies that unduly restrain competition, and encourages policymakers to harness the benefits of competition when in the development of such policies.

Consumer protection.—The Commission is charged with eliminating unfair or deceptive acts or practices affecting commerce. The goal of the consumer protection mission is to improve market performance so that consumers can make informed choices when exercising their purchasing power. To accomplish this goal, the Commission will: remove harmful private and public restrictions on market performance; encourage business to provide consumers with accurate and useful information; and, reinforce market forces that enhance consumer welfare.

The President's 1999 request will fund a total of 979 FTE. The program level for the Commission would increase from $106.5 million in 1998 to $112.9 million in 1999, allowing the Commission to continue to pursue its missions.

The programs administered by the FTC are funded by appropriated funds and fees assessed for premerger notification filings under the Hart-Scott-Rodino Act, as required by section 605 of Public Law 101-162, as amended. The 1999 requested level includes $101.2 million appropriated from the General Fund and $11.7 million derived from estimated 1998 carry-over fee balances. During 1999, the FTC anticipates collecting $86.6 million in pre-merger filing fees, which will be available for obligation starting October 1, 1999.

The Intelligence Community Management Account (ICMA) was established by Congressional direction to provide resources that directly support the Director of Central Intelligence (DCI) and the Intelligence Community as a whole in coordinating cross-program activities, improving budget oversight, and strengthening Community Management. The ICMA includes the Community Management Staff, the Environmental Intelligence and Applications program, the National Intelligence Council, the Center for Security Evaluations, the Information Systems Secretariat, the Controlled Access Program Coordination Office, the Advanced Research and Development program, the National Counterintelligence Center, and the National Drug Intelligence Center.

The Community Management Staff is the DCI's principal source of advice and assistance in planning and executing his intelligence community management responsibilities. These include: developing the National Foreign Intelligence Program budget; developing intelligence plans and requirements; and overseeing research and development activities. The Environmental Intelligence and Applications program evaluates the application of Intelligence Community archived information and current and future imaging capabilities to the study of the environment. The Advanced Research and Development program is responsible for coordination of advanced technology within the Intelligence Community and for encouragement of investment in high risk/high return technologies. The Controlled Access Program Coordination Office supports the DCI's annual review of Intelligence Special Access programs. The National Intelligence Council provides analytical support to the DCI and national policy makers. The Center for Security Evaluation is responsible for evaluating and improving security capabilities at United States embassies. The Information Systems Secretariat supports technical activities and services of common Community concern regarding interoperability between national intelligence systems and consumers. The National Counterintelligence Center was established as the primary mechanism to coordinate U.S. government national-level counterintelligence policy and activities. The National Drug Intelligence Center was established to coordinate strategic organizational drug intelligence from national security and law enforcement agencies.

The U.S. International Trade Commission is an independent agency created by an act of Congress. The sources of the Commission's principal powers and duties are the Tariff Act of 1930; the Trade Act of 1974; the Agricultural Adjustment Act; the Trade and Tariff Act of 1984; the Omnibus Trade and Competitiveness Act of 1988; the North American Free Trade Agreement Implementation Act; and the Uruguay Round Agreements Act.

The Commission investigates and makes findings concerning inter alia, whether: (1) increased imports are a substantial cause of serious injury to an industry; (2) a U.S. industry is being materially injured, or threatened with material injury, or the establishment of such an industry is being materially retarded, by reason of imported goods that are subsidized or are being sold at less than fair value; (3) there are unfair import practices in import trade; and (4) imports of agricultural products are materially interfering with certain programs of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The Commission advises the President as to the probable economic effect on domestic industry and consumers of modification of duties and other barriers to trade which may be considered for inclusion in any proposed trade agreement with foreign countries. Further, the Commission, at the request of the President, the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives, the Finance Committee of the Senate, or on the Commission's own motion, undertakes comprehensive studies and provides reports on issues relating to international trade and economic policy matters, and upon request provides other information and advice to the Congress and President on tariff and trade matters.

The Commission, in cooperation with the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of Commerce, establishes for statistical purposes an enumeration of articles imported into the United States and exported from the United States, and seeks to establish comparability of such statistics with statistical programs for domestic production.

The Commission also issues a publication containing the U.S. tariff schedule and related matters and considers questions concerning the arrangements of such schedules and the classification of articles.

Pursuant to section 175 of the Trade Act of 1974, the budget estimates for the Commission are transmitted to Congress without revision by the President.

Public Laws 99-500, 101-208, and 102-221 established the James Madison Memorial Fellowship Foundation to operate a fellowship program to encourage graduate study of the framing, principles, and history of the American Constitution. Appropriations of $10 million in 1988 and 1989 established the foundation's trust fund. The funds have been invested by the Secretary of the Treasury in U.S. Treasury securities, and the interest earned on these funds is available for carrying out the activities of the foundation. Funds raised from private sources and the surcharges from commemorative coin sales are also placed in the trust fund.

The foundation is authorized to award graduate fellowships of up to $24,000 to high school teachers of American history, American government, and social studies. College seniors and recent college graduates who want to become secondary school teachers of these subjects are also eligible.

Fellowship awards.—This activity is comprised of fellowship awards to cover educational expenses. It also supports the foundation's annual Summer Institute on the U.S. Constitution, which all current fellows are required to attend. The Institute is an intensive educational experience that will ensure that all fellows know the history of the framing, ratification, and implementation of the U.S. Constitution and the Bill of Rights. The foundation awarded 61 fellowships in 1997 and plans to award 60 in both 1998 and 1999.

Program administration.—This activity covers the costs of planning, fund-raising, and the operation of the fellowship program.

The John F. Kennedy Assassination Records Review Board was established to oversee an effort of enormous scope within a four year period. The Board is charged with locating and securing all records which relate to the assassination of President Kennedy. These records include those of at least fifteen Federal agencies, previous official investigations, the Presidential libraries, and many smaller governmental and private repositories throughout the country.

The purpose of the Board is to ensure the efficient, timely and full disclosure of these records to the American public. This effort is seen as perhaps the last opportunity to clear up the many lingering doubts and questions surrounding the assassination of President Kennedy.

1998 is the Board's fourth and final year, and it will issue a final report upon its termination.

The mission of the Merit Systems Protection Board (MSPB) is to assist Federal agencies in running a merit-based civil service system. The MSPB accomplishes its mission on a case-by-case basis through hearing and deciding employee appeals, and on a systematic basis by reviewing significant actions and regulations of the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) and conducting studies of the civil service and other merit systems. The intended results (outcomes) of MSPB's efforts are to assure that (1) personnel actions taken against employees are processed within the law, and (2) actions taken by OPM and other agencies support and enhance Federal merit principles.

Proposed legislation amending the Morris K. Udall Scholarship and Excellence in National Environmental and Native American Public Policy Act of 1992 would establish the U.S. Institute for Environmental Conflict Resolution. The Institute is designed to conduct environmental conflict resolution and training, and will provide mainly Federal agencies with assessment, mediation, or other related services in connection with a dispute or conflict related to the environment, public lands, or natural resources. Under the proposal, a new Environmental Dispute Resolution Fund would be established to collect fees from contracting parties to pay for environmental dispute resolution cases. The budget proposes $3 million to capitalize this new fund and $1 million for annual operating costs for transmittal after enactment of needed authorizing legislation.

The National Archives and Records Administration provides for basic operations dealing with management of the Government's archives and records, operation of Presidential Libraries, and for the review for declassification of classified security information.

Records services.—This activity provides for selecting, preserving, describing, and making available to the general public, scholars, and Federal agencies the permanently valuable historical records of the Federal Government; the historical materials and Presidential records in Presidential Libraries; for preparing related publications and exhibit programs; and for conducting the appraisal of all Federal records. Significant savings result from use of low cost records storage and the efficient and timely disposal of non-permanent records.

Through the records declassification program, historically valuable information in the records of the Federal Government and in donated historical materials are made available to the public by declassifying as much information as possible without endangering the national security.

This activity also provides oversight for the information security program established by Executive Order 12958 and reports annually to the President on the status of that program. It is also responsible for policy oversight for the National Industrial Security Program established under Executive Order 12829.

Archives related services.—This activity provides for the publication of the Federal Register the Code of Federal Regulations, the U.S. Statutes-at-Large, and Presidential documents, and for a program to improve the quality of regulations and the public's access to them. This activity also includes the administration and reference services portion for the National Historical Publications and Records Commission. This Commission makes grants nationwide to preserve and publish records that document American history.

Archives II Facility.—Provides for construction and related services of the new archival facility which was opened to the public in 1993. Costs of construction are financed by $301,702 thousand of federally guaranteed debt issued in 1989. Since 1994 and continuing in 1999, the Archives seeks appropriations for the annual payments for interest and redemption of debt to be made under the contract for construction and related services.

The National Capital Planning Commission (NCPC) is the central planning agency for the Federal government in the National Capital Region. It develops long-range plans and conducts project reviews in order to enhance the National Capital's historical, cultural and natural resources. During 1999, NCPC will begin its Monuments, Memorials, and Museums Study that, by identifying potential sites for new commemorative works and public buildings, will preserve the Mall's open space and encourage economic development in all quadrants of Washington. NCPC will also undertake the detailed planning work associated with its "Extending the Legacy" plan, including implementation of key First Initiatives projects. Expansion of the Washington Geographic Information System (WGIS) will focus on assessing Federal GIS needs and opportunities for partnering with the private sector in the National Capital region, and on developing revenue-generating products.

The insurance fund is used to carry out a program of insurance for member accounts in Federal credit unions and State-chartered credit unions which apply and qualify for insurance, authorized by Public Law 91-468, enacted October 19, 1970.

Budget program.—The activities consist of: (a) providing member account insurance, (b) formulating standards and requirements for insured credit unions, and (c) providing for liquidation or other disposition of the assets and liabilities of solvent and insolvent insured credit unions. The fund also reimburses the operating fund for its share of the Agency's administrative costs. The reimbursement percentage, which is reviewed and adjusted periodically, is currently at 50 percent.

The extent of the program is estimated as follows:

Item:	1997 actual	1998 est.	1999 est.
Number of insured credit unions .....	11,292	11,125	11,075
Insured shares of member institutions as of June 30 (in millions of dollars) .....	$290,161	$306,450	$321,500

It is estimated that approximately 4,200 State-chartered credit unions will be enrolled in the program by the end of 1998.

Financing.—For insurance year 1998 the credit union's required annual insurance premium of one-twelfth of 1 percent of its total member share accounts has been waived. As a result of Public Law 98-369 (July 18, 1984), each insured credit union is also required to deposit and maintain in the insurance fund 1 percent of its member share accounts. The fund is structured to be entirely self supporting through the monies paid by member credit unions. The monies received plus the income generated from their investment are expected to cover all administrative and financial costs, as well as increase the fund balance proportionate to insured share growth. In fiscal year 1997 the income generated from the 1 percent deposit eliminated the need to assess the annual premium. In addition, the fund paid a $105 million dividend to federally insured credit unions in fiscal year 1998 due to an excess in the 1.3 percent reserve requirement. The fund has $100 million in borrowing authority from the Treasury for use in unforeseen emergencies.

Operating results.—Anticipated net income of $170 million will be retained in the fund, raising the balance for unforeseen emergencies to $4 billion by the end of 1999.

The National Credit Union Central Liquidity Facility was established under Public Law 95-630. It began operations on October 1, 1979. The Central Liquidity Facility provides loans to member credit unions for seasonal and emergency needs.

The two primary sources of funds for the Facility are stock subscriptions from credit unions and borrowings from the Federal Financing Bank. Credit unions, which choose to become members of the Facility, are required to purchase stock equal to one-half of 1 percent of their assets. One-half of the subscription in stock is forwarded to the Facility and deposited in the fund. The remaining half of the subscription remains on call in the credit union in investments as approved by the NCUA Board.

The National Endowment for the Arts provides grants to, or contracts with, groups, individuals of exceptional talent in specified fields, and State or regional organizations engaged in or concerned with the arts. Programs encourage individual and institutional development of the arts, education in the arts, preservation of the American artistic heritage, wider availability and appreciation of the arts, leadership in the arts, and the stimulation of non-Federal sources of support for the Nation's artistic activities.

This presentation includes Gifts and Donations and the Arts and Artifacts Indemnity Fund which previously had been shown separately.

The National Foundation on the Arts and the Humanities Act of 1965, as amended, authorizes the Arts Endowment to receive money and other donated property. Such gifts may be used, sold, or otherwise disposed of to support arts projects and activities. Budget authority in this schedule reflects cash received each year by the Arts Endowment.

The Arts and Artifacts Indemnity Act of 1975, as amended authorizes the Federal Council on the Arts and Humanities to enter into indemnity agreements to cover certain eligible works of art while on traveling exhibition in the United States or abroad. Loss or damage claims certified by the Council are paid from this fund.

The National Endowment for the Humanities funds activities that are intended to improve the quality of education and teaching in the humanities, to strengthen the scholarly foundation for humanities study and research, to preserve cultural and intellectual resources, and to advance understanding of the humanities among general audiences.

Support is provided through outright grants, matching grants, and a combination of the two. Eligible applicants include state humanities councils, schools, higher education institutions, libraries, museums, historical organizations, professional associations, other cultural institutions, and individuals.

This presentation includes the Gifts and Donations account, which previously had been presented separately. The National Foundation on the Arts and the Humanities Act of 1965, as amended, authorizes the Humanities Endowment to receive money and other donated property. Such gifts may be used, sold, or otherwise disposed of to support humanities projects and activities. Budget authority in this schedule reflects cash received each year by the Endowment.

Field investigation.—Charges of unfair labor practices and petitions for elections to resolve representation disputes are investigated by regional office personnel. Ninety percent of the unfair labor practice cases and 85 percent of the representation cases are closed by settlement, dismissal, or withdrawal. The remainder are prepared for public hearing. The agency strives to maximize the voluntary settlement of all cases and to avoid litigation.

Administrative law judge hearing.—Administrative law judges conduct public hearings in unfair labor practice cases. Their findings and recommendations are set forth in their decisions.

Board adjudication.—In an unfair labor practice case a judge's decision becomes a Board order if no exceptions are filed. About 30 percent of these decisions become automatic Board orders or are complied with voluntarily. The remainder with exceptions filed require contested Board decision. In representation cases, regional directors initially decide the issues by Board delegation. The Board itself decides representation issues on referral from regional directors or by granting a request for review of a regional director's decision. The Board also rules on objection and challenge questions in election cases.

Securing compliance with Board orders.—If the parties do not voluntarily comply with the Board's order involving unfair labor practices, the Board must request that the appellate courts enforce its decisions.

Mediatory services.—The Board mediates disputes over wages, hours, and working conditions for some 746 rail and air carriers and approximately 795,000 employees in the two industries.

The Board also provides technical assistance to enable labor and industry representatives to explore informally the relevant economic and noneconomic problems that condition collective bargaining in the railroad and airline industries.

Emergency disputes.—When the parties fail to resolve their disputes through mediation, they are urged to submit their differences to arbitration. If neither mediation nor voluntary arbitration is successful, the President, when notified of disputes which threaten to seriously interrupt service, may appoint emergency boards to investigate and report on the disputes under section 160 of the Railway Labor Act (RLA). Such reports usually serve as a basis for resolving the disputes.

The Northeast Rail Service Act of 1981 amended the Railway Labor Act by adding a new emergency dispute procedure covering disputes between a publicly funded and operated commuter carrier and its employees. The 1981 Act requires the Board to appoint the public members of factfinding panels on Conrail.

Arbitration under sections 3 and 7 of the RLA.—Railroad employee grievances resulting from disputes over the interpretation or application of collective bargaining contracts may be brought for settlement to the National Railroad Adjustment Board (NRAB). The divisions of the Board are composed of an equal number of carrier and union representatives compensated by the party or parties they represent. Public Law 89-456 provides for the adjustment of disputes involving grievances resulting from interpretation or application of bargaining agreements in the railroad industry otherwise referable to the NRAB.

Administrative direction and support for the public law boards, special boards of adjustment, and the NRAB are provided by Federal employees who are compensated by the National Mediation Board.

The National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB), as an independent nonregulatory agency, is charged with promoting transportation safety through the investigation of accidents, the conduct of special studies, the development of recommendations to prevent accidents, the evaluation of the effectiveness of other Government agencies in preventing transportation accidents, and the review of appeals of adverse certificate and civil penalty actions taken by the Administrators of agencies of the Department of Transportation involving airman and seaman certificates and licenses.

In 1999, the Administration requests a total funding level of $53.2 million for NTSB Salaries and Expenses, including $6 million to be derived from a proposed commercial aviation accident investigation fee. This funding level represents a 5.3 percent increase above the 1998 enacted level of $48.4 million, excluding one-time costs associated with TWA 800, and will allow the NTSB to fulfill its role in improving safety on the Nation's transportation system.

The request provides additional resources to complete the investigation of TWA 800 in the first quarter of 1999.

The National Transportation Safety Board is mandated by Congress to investigate all catastrophic transportation accidents and, therefore, has no control over the frequency of costly accident investigations. The emergency fund provides a funding mechanism by which periodic accident investigation cost fluctuations can be met without delaying critical phases of the investigations. In 1999, the Administration proposes to double the size of the emergency fund to cover unanticipated costs associated with an increased number of accidents.

The major activities of the Corporation include: establishing neighborhood partnership programs known as NeighborWorks Organizations (NWOs); assisting in the expansion of NeighborWorks organizations to additional neighborhoods; providing training and technical assistance; identifying, evaluating, supporting and replicating successful neighborhood preservation projects that show promise for reversing neighborhood decline; promoting a national secondary market and other financing mechanisms for NWOs; and granting lending and equity capital to promote homeownership and other affordable housing.

The Corporation will undertake a new homeownership initiative which will extend the benefits of homeownership to 10,000 working households which are not currently served through conventional sources.

The Corporation receives both Federal and non-Federal funding to finance its program activities. For FY 1999, a program level of $90,000,000 is requested. The following tables reflect the total program activity of the Corporation and include all sources of financing, both Federal and non-Federal.

Nuclear Reactor Safety.—A major part of the NRC’s mission is to ensure that its licensees design, construct, and operate civilian reactor facilities safely. The Atomic Energy Act and the Energy Reorganization Act provide the foundation for regulating the Nation’s commercial nuclear power industry. Reactor safety encompasses all NRC efforts to ensure that civilian nuclear reactor facilities are operated in a manner that provides adequate protection of public health and safety. These efforts include reactor licensing, inspection, performance assessment, identification and resolution of safety issues, reactor regulatory research, regulation development, independent assessment of reactor operational events and experience, investigations of alleged wrongdoing by licensees, applicants, contractors, or vendors, and imposition of enforcement sanctions for violations of NRC requirements.

Nuclear Materials Safety.—Nuclear materials safety encompasses all NRC efforts to ensure that NRC-regulation aspects of nuclear fuel cycle facilities and nuclear materials activities are handled in a manner that provides adequate protection of public health and safety. These efforts include licensing, inspection, and related regulatory activities for fuel cycle facilities and nuclear materials users, and uranium recovery. This program provides regulatory assistance to the Department of Energy, including activities related to the anticipated commercial vitrification of high-level waste in Hanford tanks, the evaluation of tritium production using commercial reactors, and the external regulation pilot program.

Nuclear Waste Safety.—Nuclear waste safety encompasses the NRC’s high-level waste regulatory activities associated with high-level waste disposal at Yucca Mountain as mandated by the Nuclear Waste Policy Act, the Nuclear Waste Policy Amendments Act and the Energy Policy Act. This program also encompasses all NRC low-level radioactive waste activities associated with the disposal of waste in accordance with the Low-Level Radioactive Waste Policy Act.

Common Defense and Security and International Involvement.—Common Defense and Security and International Involvement encompasses NRC international activities, some of which support the agency’s domestic mission and many of which support broader U.S. national interests. These activities include international policy formulation, export-import licensing of nuclear materials and equipment, treaty implementation, international information exchange activities, and international safety and safeguards assistance. NRC’s domestic safeguards responsibility involves the control of and accounting for nuclear materials, the protection of nuclear materials to prevent theft or diversion, and contingency plans for responding to threatening situations.

Protecting the Environment.—Protecting the environment encompasses the NRC’s activities related to protecting the environment from potential hazards associated with the civilian use of source, byproduct, and special nuclear materials and involves actions to mitigate environmental impacts, both during the conduct of licensed activities and afterward. These NRC activities ensure that potential environmental impacts of such licensed activities are assessed and overseen, prior and during licensing, consistent with the requirements of the National Environmental Policy Act as implemented by applicable NRC regulations. NRC regulatory and oversight activities also encompass decommissioning, which involves safely removing a facility from service and reducing residual radiation to a level that permits the property to be released for unrestricted use.

Management and Support.—Management and support encompasses NRC central policy direction, resources management, and all administrative and logistical support.

Beginning in FY 2000, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission’s proposed program funding level, except where noted, will be dependent upon the actual collection of fees, and the request for general or special fund appropriations will be limited to nonfee-based activities of the Commission. To facilitate the Commission's transition to this new method of operation, the Commission will be allowed to use fees collected in FY 1999 to cover the costs of operation in the following fiscal year.

The Office of Special Counsel (OSC) (1) investigates Federal employee allegations of prohibited personnel practices (including reprisal for whistleblowing) and when appropriate prosecutes before the Merit Systems Protection Board (MSPB); (2) provides a channel for whistleblowing by Federal employees; and (3) enforces the Hatch Act. The OSC may transmit whistleblower allegations to the agency head concerned and require an agency investigation and a report to the Congress and the President when appropriate.

Overall in FY 1997, there were more than 5,762 instances in which the assistance or action of the OSC was sought by federal employees and other persons. Many prohibited personnel practice and Hatch Act cases investigated by the OSC are resolved without recourse to formal proceedings before the MSPB. In Fiscal Year 1997 the OSC obtained 82 corrective or other favorable actions, and efforts to obtain such negotiated resolutions will continue. In Fiscal Year 1997 the OSC also filed 4 enforcement actions before the MSPB in prohibited personnel practice and Hatch Act matters. The OSC also issued 1,700 Hatch Act advisory opinions (both written and oral) to people who sought advice. During FY 1997, the OSC's Disclosure Unit received 306 disclosure matters for possible referral and completed 303 of them. Fourteen Disclosure Unit matters were referred to agency heads for their review.

In FY 1998, the Office of Special Counsel (OSC) will continue to review its operations and procedures. The aim of these efforts will be to make the OSC more responsive to those individuals who seek the agency's assistance, to improve the productivity of the OSC's employees, and to ensure that the OSC is an easily accessible source of information about the rights of government employees.

In furtherance of its responsibilities, and the goals and objectives set forth in the agency's strategic plan, the OSC performance goals in FY 1999 will be to: (1) design and initiate a pilot project to test the impact of alternative dispute resolution on the disposition of prohibited personnel practice matters, (2) acquire data on compliance by federal agencies with the statutory informational program requirement, (3) implement electronic filing of complaints and disclosures with the OSC (subject to FY 1998 feasibility review and assessment), and (4) replace 20% of the agency's information technology infrastructure.

Note.—Authority to borrow is available to the Panama Canal Commission on a permanent indefinite basis. This authority is limited only in that the amount of borrowing outstanding at any time cannot exceed $100 million.

The Panama Canal Act of 1979 established the Panama Canal Commission to operate and maintain the interoceanic waterway. The Commission is self-sufficient in its operations and makes payments to the Republic of Panama as specified in the Panama Canal Treaty of 1977. Pursuant to Public Law 104-106, the Commission is a wholly-owned government corporation and is funded by a revolving fund.

Budget program—Transit operations.—The services performed by this activity are (in millions of dollars):

	1997 actual	1998 est.	1999 est.
Maintenance of channels and dams .....	52	50	43

General canal expense .....	21	23	23

Note.—These numbers are based on standard business accounting techniques and therefore do not necessarily tie with the Program and Financing schedule.

Payments to Panama include a public service payment of $10 million, a fixed annuity of $10 million, and an annuity based on net tonnage of vessels transiting the Canal. These payments are prescribed in paragraph 5 of article III and paragraphs 4(a) and 4(b) of article XIII of the Panama Canal Treaty of 1977.

Vessel traffic volume and other indices of workload are as follows:

	1997 actual	1998 est.	1999 est.
Ship transits (over 300 net Panama Canal tons) .....	13,158	12,991	13,049
Tolls (in millions of dollars) .....	494	552	570

Capital obligations for 1999 include the following major projects: continuation of the Gaillard Cut widening/straightening program, addition and rehabilitation of towing locomotives, rehabilitation of tow track, and improvement of vessel traffic management system, locks machinery control system, and other transit facilities and equipment.

Supporting services.—The services performed by these support activities are (in millions of dollars):

	1997 actual	1998 est.	1999 est.
Supply and logistical .....	23	22	23
Utilities .....	25	26	23
Other supporting services .....	15	15	15
Operating expenses .....	63	63	61

Note.—These numbers are based on standard business accounting techniques and therefore do not necessarily tie with the Program and Financing schedule.

Capital obligations for 1999 include several projects for information systems infrastructure, financial management system modernization, the replacement of overaged motor vehicles, and the procurement of small equipment items.

General Corporate expenses.—General Corporate expenses provide for the salaries and related expenses for the overall direction and administration of the Commission, including Financial Management, Personnel Administration, and the Office of Inspector General. It also provides for non-administrative expenses which are general in nature and not associated with any specific function. Included in these costs are: the amortization of the expense of the special retirement provisions of the treaty implementation legislation; the interest expense on the investment of the U.S. Government in the Canal which is paid into the miscellaneous receipts of the U.S. Treasury; the health and education services provided to Commission employees and their dependents at Department of Defense facilities; the compensation benefits for work injuries (FECA); the premiums for the Federal employees health benefits program (FEHBA); certain other statutory costs required by the U.S. Government; and miscellaneous expenses of a general nature.

(In millions of dollars)

	1997 actual	1998 est.	1999 est.
General corporate expenses .....	139	145	130

Financing.—The Commission has two Treasury accounts: the Revolving Fund, which covers operations, and the Dissolution Fund, which provides for costs associated with the dissolution of the Panama Canal Commission and will not be available for obligation until October 1, 1998. The operation of the Canal is conducted on a commercial basis with revenues derived from tolls collected from vessels and other essential supporting services. Revenues collected are deposited in an account in the Panama Canal Revolving Fund. Operating and capital expenditures are then funded from this account. The Commission may borrow from the U.S. Treasury not more than $100 million outstanding at any time. No cash withdrawals against these funds are planned.

The amount set aside from toll receipts for a capital advance in 1999 is $80.4 million. There is a provision of $2.0 million for working capital in FY 1999.

The budget reflects a two phase toll rate increase of 8.2 percent effective January 1, 1997, and 7.5 percent effective January 1, 1998. The Commission incurred an operating loss of $2.0 million in 1997 and is budgeting a modest loss of $2.6 million for 1998. Both losses will be carried forward and fully recovered in 1999.

The Postal Reorganization Act of 1970, Public Law 91-375, converted the Post Office Department into the U.S. Postal Service, an independent establishment within the executive branch. The Postal Service commenced operations July 1, 1971. This agency is charged with providing patrons with reliable mail service at reasonable rates and fees.

The U.S. Postal Service is governed by an 11-member Board of Governors, including 9 Governors appointed by the President, a Postmaster General who is selected by the Governors, and a Deputy Postmaster General who is selected by the Governors and the Postmaster General.

Decisions on changes in domestic rates of postage and fees for postal services are recommended to the Governors of the Postal Service by the independent Postal Rate Commission after a hearing on the record under the Administrative Procedure Act. The Commission also recommends decisions on changes in the domestic mail classification schedule to the Governors. Decisions of the Governors on rates of postage, fees for postal services, and mail classification are final, subject to judicial review.

Effective in 1986, the Postal Service Fund (Fund) was included in the congressional and executive budget process and taken into account in making calculations under the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 (Gramm-Rudman-Hollings). The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1989 amended title 39 of the U.S. Code by adding a new section, 2009a, which provides that, beginning in 1990, the receipts and disbursements of the Fund shall not be considered as part of the congressional and executive budget process and shall not be taken into account in making calculations under Gramm-Rudman-Hollings.

Programs.—Included are all postal activities providing window services; processing, delivery, and transportation of mail; research and development; administration of postal field activities; and associated expenses of providing facilities and financing.

The rapid development of electronic messaging systems promises to increase the effectiveness of the Nation's communications infrastructure and U.S. competitiveness in the future. As the provider of a universally available hard copy delivery system, the United States Postal Service is encouraged to examine these emerging communications technologies and to cooperate with the private sector on issues of integration, directory service, and strategic alliances that will facilitate the development of secure and reliable electronic messaging networks.

The transition from hard copy to electronic messaging already has begun. The Postal Service should assist in developing future messaging systems. The Postal Service's participation should recognize the changing needs of its business, governmental, and individual customers; should focus on determining an appropriate means for public and private sector cooperation; and should be consistent with the agency's vision of evolving into a premier provider of 21st century postal communications. The Postal Service should seek to leverage its comprehensive delivery, messaging security, and addressing directory management capabilities in a manner that promotes universal access to the benefits of these new technologies for all citizens who desire them.

Financing.—The activities of the U.S. Postal Service are financed from the following sources: (1) mail and services revenue; (2) reimbursements from Federal and non-Federal sources; (3) proceeds from borrowing; (4) interest from U.S. securities and other investments; and (5) appropriations by the Congress. All receipts and deposits are made to the Postal Service Fund and are available without fiscal year limitation for payment of all expenses incurred, retirement of obligations, investment in capital assets, and investment in obligations and securities.

Separate legislation also increased the Postal Service's statutory borrowing authority beginning in 1991. Section 2005 of title 39, United States Code, as amended, increased the Postal Service's borrowing authority by $2.5 billion in 1991 for a revised ceiling of $12.5 billion and an additional $2.5 billion in 1992 for a revised total ceiling of $15 billion. The total net increase in amounts outstanding in any one fiscal year were also increased and now may not exceed $2.0 billion in obligations issued for the purpose of capital improvements and $1.0 billion for the purpose of paying operating expenses. As of September 30, 1999, it is expected that the total debt instruments issued and outstanding pursuant to this authority will amount to $8.331 billion.

Operating.—Estimated revenue will total $64.246 billion in 1999. This includes $64.142 billion from mail and services revenue, $33 million from investment income, and $71 million accrued for revenue foregone appropriations in 1999. Total expenses are estimated at $63.621 billion in 1999.

The Postal Reorganization Act of 1970 established the Postal Service as a fully self-sufficient, independent entity. Postal revenues were to cover the full costs of postal operations. When the Act was passed, the Postal Service received substantial taxpayer subsidies, both appropriated and unappropriated. Consistent with the intent of the 1970 Act, Congress has taken steps over time to reduce these subsidies. Under the 1974 Civil Service Retirement Fund—Postal Employee Benefits Act, the Postal Service assumed responsibility for paying unfunded retirement costs from wage schedule increases under postal labor contracts. These costs are not covered by normal employee/employer contributions to the retirement fund. The 1985 Reconciliation Act shifted responsibility for paying health benefit costs of Postal annuitants retiring after 1986 from OPM to the Postal Service. The 1987 Reconciliation Act had the Postal Service make one-time payments to defray annuitant health benefit costs in 1988 and 1989 and retirement COLA costs in 1988. (Retirement COLAs, like wage schedule increases, result in retirement liabilities not covered by normal retirement fund contributions.) Under the 1989 Reconciliation Act, the Postal Service assumed responsibility for paying health benefits of survivors of post-86 annuitants and unfunded retirement COLA liabilities for post-86 annuitants.

The Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 superseded certain existing legislation and expanded the Postal Service's responsibility for benefit costs of postal annuitants. Effective October 1, 1990, the Postal Service is required to fund Civil Service Retirement System (CSRS) COLAs and the employer's share of Federal Employee Health Benefit Program (FEHBP) premiums for postal annuitants who retired after June 30, 1971, and their survivors. In addition, the Postal Service is required to fund the retroactive CSRS COLA and FEHBP premium costs for which the Postal Service would have been liable if the provisions of this new legislation had been in effect as of July 1, 1971.

Under the Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1993, the Postal Service is required to make certain payments for past COLAs and health benefits, over and above any other payments required by law, of $693 million to the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund, and $348 million to the Employees Health Benefits Fund. These two payments are to be made in three equal annual installments, beginning in fiscal year 1996.

The Balanced Budget Act of 1997 repealed the authorization for transitional appropriations to the Postal Service which had funded the liabilities of the former Post Office Department to the Employees' Compensation Fund. Effective October 1, 1997, these liabilities became liabilities of the Postal Service payable out of the Postal Service Fund.

The Presidio Trust is a wholly owned government corporation established by the Omnibus Parks and Public Lands Management Act of 1996 (Public Law 104-333) to maintain and lease property in the Presidio of San Francisco. After this former military base was transferred to the National Park Service (NPS), the Trust was created to take over responsibility for the hundreds of houses, office buildings, and other facilities in an innovative manner that uses private-sector resources, but is consistent with surrounding NPS lands. This appropriation funds the operation of the Trust. It also authorizes the Trust to borrow up to $25 million from the U.S. Treasury in 1999 to rehabilitate and prepare facilities for leasing. And additional $25 million loan is proposed for 2000.

In addition to rail social security, rail industry pensions, and special windfalls, the Railroad Retirement Board pays supplemental annuities to rail workers retiring at age 60 with 30 years of creditable rail service or at age 65 with 25-29 years of creditable service. Monthly benefit amounts are calculated from a base of $23, adding $4 for every year of service over 25, up to a maximum monthly benefit of $43. Employers finance benefits on a pay-as-you-go basis by a cents-per-hour tax, currently established at 35 cents per hour.

All railroad retirees receive the equivalent of a social security benefit, and they may also receive other add-ons including rail industry pension payments, windfall payments, and supplemental annuities. Social security benefits for former railroad employees are funded by the social security trust funds, and rail industry pension payments are the responsibility of the rail sector.

Under current law, a financial interchange occurs once each year between the social security trust funds and the social security equivalent benefit (SSEB) account. The SSEB receives monthly advances from the general fund equal to an estimate of the transfer the SSEB would have received for the previous month if the financial interchange transfers were on a monthly basis. Advances from the previous year are repaid annually to the general fund immediately after the financial interchange is received. In 1997, $3,184 million was advanced and $3,155 million was repaid.

90.00 Outlays	1

The Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act (FIRREA) of 1989 established the Resolution Trust Corporation (RTC) as a temporary agency to dispose of insolvent thrift institutions. The Savings Association Insurance Fund took over responsibility for resolving failed thrifts on July 1, 1995, and the RTC's assets and liabilities were transferred to the FSLIC Resolution Fund on December 31, 1995.

Of $18.3 billion appropriated to RTC in 1994 by the RTC Completion Act, the Thrift Depositor Protection Oversight Board determined that only $4.6 billion was required and the excess was returned to Treasury on December 31, 1997. When the RTC terminated, the Oversight Board's primary function ceased. However, approximately $3 million remains for the Board's continuing oversight of the Resolution Funding Corporation (REFCORP), which provided financing for the RTC.

The primary mission of the Securities and Exchange Commission (the Commission) is to administer and enforce the federal securities laws in order to protect investors, and to maintain fair, honest, and efficient markets.

Full disclosure.—This program ensures that investors will be provided with material facts in the public offering, trading, voting and tendering of securities. Issuers that have conducted public offerings, have securities traded in the public markets, or have total assets and security holder populations of specified sizes, are required to furnish management, financial, and business information to the Commission on a continuing basis in proxy materials and in annual and other periodic reports. The staff reviews these documents on a selected basis for compliance with the disclosure requirements. In addition, all registration statements of issuers that are making their initial public offerings of securities and all third party tender offer filings are reviewed by the staff. As a result of the review process, the staff may issue comments to issuers to elicit better compliance or, where appropriate, refer matters for enforcement action.

Electronic filing (EDGAR).—The Commission's EDGAR system provides the agency with the capability for electronic receipt, analysis, and dissemination of virtually all of its full disclosure filings. Since becoming operational in 1993, EDGAR has received and successfully processed over 1.3 million documents submitted in approximately 491,000 separate submissions from over 28,000 companies and funds registered with the SEC.

Although EDGAR has proven to be a success, the system is in need of modernization in order to take advantage of changes in technology and respond to the demands of filers and investors. The SEC has submitted reprogramming requests to both the House and Senate Appropriations Subcommittees to set aside a specified portion of excess 1997 fees (previously paid by filers) for the sole purpose of financing EDGAR modernization over a three-year period.

Prevention and suppression of fraud.—This program evaluates information indicating possible violations of the federal securities laws. Possible violations include, among other things, the illegal distribution of unregistered securities; fraud in the offer, purchase, and sale of securities; insider trading, market manipulation; and illegal conduct by broker-dealers, investment advisers, and other regulated entities. Investigations of possible violations are conducted and, if appropriate, enforcement actions are initiated. Actions include civil proceedings seeking injunctive and other relief and administrative proceedings. The Commission is now authorized to seek court orders imposing civil monetary penalties for any securities law violation as well as to seek such penalties against regulated entities in administrative proceedings. Under appropriate circumstances matters are referred for criminal prosecution.

Supervision and regulation of securities markets.—Trading in the securities markets is regulated to protect investors against fraud and manipulation and to ensure the maintenance of fair, orderly, efficient, and competitive markets. The Commission oversees the work of self-regulatory organizations, monitors securities markets and broker-dealer operations, and develops regulatory strategies for coping with market stress, promoting compliance, and meeting changing domestic and international conditions. The Commission also conducts examinations of broker-dealers and inspections of transfer agents, clearing agencies, and self-regulatory organizations.

The staff refers serious violations for enforcement action. This program also is responsible for administering the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935.

Program direction.—This program assists the Commission in fulfilling its statutory requirements and in responding to changes in the securities industry by carefully evaluating priorities, formulating and implementing policies, and managing agency resources. The staff provides management direction and analysis, internal control, financial management, personnel management, data processing, public affairs, records management, information dissemination, general administrative services, and processing of equal employment opportunity complaints.

Due to the timing of fee collections, a general fund appropriation of $118,098,000 is requested in 1999. This one-time increase in the general fund appropriation will enable the Commission to accommodate the elimination of appropriated budget authority which provides a guaranteed funding level that is later reduced as actual collections are received. The current schedule of fee collections is set forth in the "National Securities Markets Improvement Act of 1996" (P.L. 104-290), which was signed by the President on October 11, 1996. Title IV of this law amends fee language found in Section 6(b) of the Securities Act of 1933 and Section 31 of the Securities and Exchange Act of 1934. Under this law, the Section 6(b) fee rate paid by corporations to register securities with the Commission was reduced from $303 per $1,000,000 of the aggregate price of securities offered in 1997 to $295 per $1,000,000 in 1998, and will be further reduced in 1999 to $278 per $1,000,000 of the offering amount. The first $200 per $1,000,000 of this fee shall be deposited in the general fund of the U.S. Treasury, and the remaining increment will be made available for use by the Commission. In addition, to promote equity across securities markets, the "National Securities Markets Improvement Act of 1996" extended Section 31 transaction fees to the over-the-counter market at a rate of 1/300 of one percent of the aggregate dollar amount of securities transacted, the rate currently paid by all national and regional exchanges. These transaction fees are also made available for use by the Commission.

The Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA) was created in 1933 as a Government-owned corporation for the unified development of a river basin comprised of parts of seven States. The President's budget proposes that the agency's program in 1999 be financed from three sources: (1) appropriations by the Congress; (2) proceeds available from current power operations and borrowings against future power revenues; and (3) proceeds available from nonpower activities.

The President's Budget includes $76.8 million to be appropriated for the agency's non-power programs in 1999. This will ensure that these programs continue to be funded and operated as the Administration and Congress consider alternatives for the agency in both the power and non-power areas. The following table provides detailed information on programs financed by power proceeds and borrowings and programs financed by appropriations and nonpower proceeds.

TVA's program paid for by appropriations.—As a federal corporation, TVA serves national interests by operating infrastructure services for the production of electricity, economic development and the stewardship of natural resources in 201 counties in seven states.

Appropriations provide for public services to maintain and operate public resources—navigable channels, flood control, recreation, and non-regulatory, community-based programs that protect the water quality of the Tennessee River system. Federal appropriations do not support TVA's power program. The Budget proposes that $76.8 million be appropriated for these purposes in 1999.

Water and Land Stewardship.—Funds TVA's statutory obligation to operate 54 dams and reservoirs to regulate stream-flow for the multi-purpose objectives of navigation, flood control, recreation and aquatic habitat conservation; perform cyclic maintenance and repair of 14 navigation locks, maintain dam machinery and spillway gates; perform channel, lock and mooring modifications to maintain safety and passability for increasingly larger cargo vessels; conserve and improve water quality and supply in 12 watersheds and dam tailwaters for fisheries and potable supply for 4 million people; control mosquitoes and plant pests; prevent shoreline erosion and manage residential development in riparian zones; plan for and manage 630,000 hectares (1.7 million acres) of land; provide services and education to watershed communities; operate public recreation areas; and meet federal regulatory law requirements.

Land Between the Lakes.—Partially funds Land Between The Lakes as the hub of a tourism and recreation industry that annually generates $400 million in economic activity in nine contiguous counties.

Environmental Research Center.—Partially funds the cost of remediation and cleanup of TVA's Muscle Shoals Reservation site in accordance with the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act (RCRA) and other State and Federal regulations. Federal funding at ERC will be phased out over four years (1996–1999).

Chickamauga Lock and Dam.—Funds initial stages of a construction project for replacement of the navigation lock which has irreparably deteriorated and is inadequate for existing and projected river traffic.

TVA's Power Program.—TVA's role as the sole supplier of electric power to an area of 80,000 square miles in the seven Tennessee Valley States is being reviewed as the Nation considers ways to restructure the electric power industry. Income from power operations, net of interest charges and depreciation, and other operating expenses is estimated at $272,000,000 in 1999. Power generating facilities are financed from power proceeds and borrowings. The Budget reflects specific cost-cutting measures the agency is taking to implement its 10-Year Business plan and improve its ability to supply power at competitive prices. For example, TVA will cut costs and reduce its outstanding debt by $2 billion by the end of 1999.

Financing.—Amounts estimated to become available in 1999 are to be derived from (1) the requested appropriation of $76,800,000; (2) nonpower revenues and receipts of $6,885,000; and (3) power revenues and receipts of $6,486,000,000. A summary of the application of appropriations follows:

Operating results and financial conditions.—Payments to the Treasury from power proceeds in 1999 are estimated at $58,000,000—$38,000,000 as a dividend (return on the appropriation investment in the power program) and $20,000,000 as a reduction in the appropriation investment in the power program. Outstanding borrowings for the power program are expected to decrease by $965,000,000 during 1999.

Total assets are estimated to decrease by $747,000,000 during 1999 as depreciation of existing assets exceeds expenditures for new assets. The estimate of liabilities at September 30, 1999, is $962,000,000 less than the estimate at September 30, 1998. Total Government equity at September 30, 1999, is estimated to be $215,000,000 greater than that at September 1998. This change includes the requested appropriation for 1999 and the net income from power operations, less payments to the Treasury and the net expense of nonpower programs.

The Combined benefit fund was established by the Coal Industry Retiree Health Benefit Act of 1992 to take over paying for medical care of retired miners and their dependents who were eligible for health care from the private 1950 and 1974 United Mine Workers of America Benefit Plans. The Fund's trustees represent the United Mine Workers of America and coal companies. The Fund is financed by assessments on current and former signatories to labor agreements with the United Mine Workers; past transfers from an over-funded United Mine Workers pension fund; and transfers from the Abandoned mine land reclamation fund.

The 1992 Benefit Plan was established by the Coal Industry Retiree Health Benefit Act of 1992. It pays for health care of those miners who retired between July 21, 1992 and September 30, 1994, and their dependents, who are eligible for benefits under an employer plan and cease to be covered, usually because an employer is out of business. Plan trustees are appointed by the United Mine Workers of America and the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, a coal industry bargaining group. The Plan is supported by signatories to the 1988 labor agreement with the United Mine Workers of America.

The United States Enrichment Corporation (the Corporation or USEC) is the world leader in production and sales of uranium enrichment services for commercial nuclear power plants. As a wholly owned U.S. government corporation established by the Energy Policy Act of 1992 (Energy Policy Act), all common stock issued and outstanding is held by the Department of the Treasury. USEC began operations July 1, 1993, and was created as an initial step in privatizing the government's uranium enrichment activities. The Corporation provides uranium enrichment services to electric utilities operating nuclear reactors in 14 countries, including the U.S.

As directed by the Energy Policy Act, the Corporation submitted a privatization plan to the President in 1995. In April 1996, the USEC Privatization Act was signed into law. In July 1997, the President approved the implementation of USEC's privatization. USEC is working with the Department of the Treasury and other government agencies to design and implement the details of the final privatization transaction. The USEC Board of Directors, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, must determine that the privatization of USEC will satisfy certain criteria set forth in the Energy Policy Act and the USEC Privatization Act. The budget reflects a projected transaction date of May 1, 1998.

By moving out of the government and applying private-sector discipline, USEC will remain a viable competitor in the global market for uranium enrichment services, and preserve a reliable source of domestic enrichment capacity. As a private corporation, USEC will be able to make the financial investment necessary to more efficiently commercialize the Atomic Vapor Laser Isotope Separation (AVLIS) process, the next generation of enrichment technology.

Budget program.—During 1997, USEC maintained its position as the world leader in uranium enrichment by negotiating new sales agreements and working to improve plant operations. In March, as regulatory oversight responsibility was transferred from the Department of Energy to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC), the Corporation introduced initiatives to reinforce safety and efficiency as top priorities at enrichment facilities that were more than 40 years old. In 1998, USEC is cooperating with the Department of Energy to continue the demonstration of plant-scale AVLIS components at Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory, with emphasis shifting to integrated operation of the laser and separator systems to verify enrichment production economics. Progress on plant design continues in support of a license application submittal to the NRC.

USEC, in its third year as Executive Agent for the U.S. Government, continued to receive shipments of low enriched uranium (LEU) blended down from highly enriched uranium taken from former Soviet nuclear weapons. To date, USEC has purchased over 4.6 million separative work units (SWU) in the form of LEU, and has committed to purchase 22.9 million SWU through 2001. These purchases comprise nearly one third of the 20-year agreement's LEU, and will result in the dismantling of approximately 7,000 Soviet-era nuclear warheads.

Operating results.—USEC's net income for 1997 was $237 million and is expected to be approximately $101 million through the anticipated privatization date of May 1, 1998. USEC paid a $120 million dividend to the Treasury in 1997, and expects to pay a dividend in 1998. Net proceeds from the sale of the Corporation are expected to be approximately $1,600 million.

Note.—In 1998 and 1999, all staff and associated support costs for Educational and Cultural Affairs will be funded in the Exchanges programs account.

The United States Information Agency conducts the international informational, educational, cultural and exchange programs of the United States and advises the President, the National Security Council, and the Secretary of State on these matters. The Agency defines, explains, and advocates U.S. policies abroad and seeks to increase knowledge and understanding among foreign audiences of U.S. society and its values.

The USIA Strategic Plan for 1997-2002 was submitted to Congress in September 1997 in compliance with the 1993 Government Performance and Results Act (GPRA). The Agency expects to submit its FY 1999 Performance Plan to the Congress in February 1998.

USIA's efforts to realize the benefits of a well-functioning performance and results management system are underway. Agency elements are collecting data and beginning to make management and program decisions based on the findings. Overseas field posts are submitting more concise and focused reports for data collection and identifying their objectives more clearly. These objectives are closely linked to and aligned with the strategic goals of the International Affairs Strategic Plan through continuing collaboration with our counterparts and colleagues in the State Department and other foreign affairs agencies in developing a strategic framework for the mission and goals of the foreign affairs community as a whole.

Using the Strategic and Performance Plans as a guide, the Agency is focusing its resources more directly on the strategic goals and performance objectives and, to this end, is reviewing management and budget systems to achieve more visible accountability.

Agency overseas information and cultural program operations and support functions are financed from this appropriation and consist of the following major elements.

Overseas missions.—The Agency currently operates 192 U.S. Information Service (USIS) posts in 141 countries. These USIS posts administer exchange-of-persons programs and conduct informational and cultural activities using, primarily, materials and programs provided by support offices in Washington, D.C.

Bureau of Information.—This technologically advanced Bureau supports U.S. foreign policy by means of instant and in-depth communications with international opinion leaders and policy makers. The Bureau provides information electronically through the Agency's World Wide Web home pages, its daily Washington File and biweekly thematic journals. It supports the Agency's U.S. foreign press centers and overseas Information Resource Centers, which draw on databases and other electronically delivered information. The Bureau supports U.S. speakers and specialists at U.S. Information Service posts not only through overseas travel, but also through interactive dialogues via telephone and digitized video conferences. It also publishes pamphlets and other printed materials for distribution to those who influence international opinion.

Agency direction and management.—This activity includes managerial staffs, research and centralized servicing functions for the Agency.

Administrative support from other agencies.—This activity includes payment to the Department of State for USIA's share of the costs of services provided for overseas operations. The Department was reimbursed for the Distributed Administrative Support (DAS) services by participating agencies under the Foreign Affairs Administrative Support System (FAAS) in 1997. In 1998, the FAAS system is being replaced with the International Cooperative Administrative Support Services (ICASS) system. This activity also covers payments to the General Services Administration for space and services provided under the Federal building rent system, and payments to other agencies for services provided.

This appropriation provides funding for non-broadcasting information technology improvements for USIA, including purchases and development of hardware, software, contractual services, and training.

In 1999, USIA will continue with development of mission-oriented technology innovations overseas; train our staff to gain maximum productivity from our investment in technology; and continue the implementation of an improved core Financial Management System, using the State Department's Central Financial Management System. In addition, USIA will complete its initiative to ensure agency systems meet year 2000 compliance standards.

the Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs. USIS overseas posts provide support to these programs abroad.

The Agency has developed a framework for strategic planning and performance measurement of programs in accordance with the Government Performance and Results Act of 1993. In 1999, performance measurement data will be collected, analyzed, and used in Educational and Cultural Exchanges Programs budgeting and decision making.

The Bureau has established the Office of U.S. Government Exchanges Coordination to support the work of the Interagency Working Group on United States Government-sponsored International Exchanges and Training. This Office will establish an information clearinghouse for government-wide exchanges, and will collect data and conduct analysis of U.S. Government-funded and private-sector exchanges. In 1999, the Bureau will continue to develop the exchanges coordination function as an instrument of policy support, working closely with dozens of Federal departments and agencies which are striving with USIA to achieve such coordination.

The National Endowment for Democracy (NED) is a private, nonprofit corporation established in the District of Columbia to encourage and strengthen the development of democratic institutions and processes internationally. NED supports democratic initiatives in six regions of the world: Africa, Asia, Central and Eastern Europe, Latin America, the Middle East and the NIS.

The National Endowment for Democracy Act provides that the U.S. Information Agency will make an annual grant to the Endowment to enable the Endowment to fulfill the purposes of the Act. The Endowment does not carry out programs directly but its Board approves annual grants to the American Center for International Solidarity, the Center for International Private Enterprise, the International Republican Institute, the National Democratic Institute for International Affairs, and scores of indigenous organizations working to promote civic education, human rights, independent media, and other democratic processes and values.

This appropriation provides operational funding for all United States non-military international broadcasting. The account reflects the requirements of the International Broadcasting Act of 1994 (the Act) to consolidate all non-military international broadcasting activities. Specifically, the appropriation will fund the Broadcasting Board of Governors (BBG), the Voice of America, Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty (RFE/RL), Radio Free Asia, the WORLDNET Television and Film Service, Radio and Television Broadcasting to Cuba, and the necessary engineering, technical, and administrative support activities.

Pursuant to the Foreign Affairs Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 1994–95, RFE/RL continues to seek and explore opportunities for private sector funding. Significant steps have been taken over the past three years.

The RFE/RL Research Institute was privatized in 1994 by founding, together with the Open Society Institute, the Open Media Research Institute (OMRI). In 1997, Open Society Institute ended its support for OMRI. RFE/RL took back a small part of OMRI operations essential to support broadcasting. All other RFE/RL research operations were terminated.

Since passage of the Act, RFE/RL has placed priority on privatizing its Polish and Czech language services. In 1994, both services were reconstituted as separate non-profit corporations. RFE/RL explored private funding of its Warsaw-based Polish service spin-off, RWE, with several media companies over the past three years. These discussions were ultimately unsuccessful. RFE/RL's Polish-language broadcasting ceased at the end of 1997. RFE/RL entered into a joint venture with Czech Public Radio for Czech-language broadcasting in 1995. The Czech host government, which provides RFE/RL's rent-free headquarters in Prague, has asked RFE/RL to ensure that these broadcasts continue. Czech Public Radio pays most of the costs, and minor underwriting support from Czech companies has been obtained.

RFE/RL's efforts to privatize to date suggest severe limits on the potential for advertising or underwriting revenue for news and public affairs programming in the former Soviet bloc. In much of this area, significant advertising markets have yet to develop. Where advertising markets do exist, they are often barely able to sustain small, emerging local broadcasters, who concentrate mainly on popular music and other entertainment programming.

A special office at RFE/RL headquarters has been established to continue to explore privatization opportunities.

In compliance with the Government Performance and Results Act, International Broadcasting has developed five performance measures. Baselines for 1997 and 1998, and targets for 1999 have been developed. Research methodology is in place for some of the measures, while under development for others.

In 1998 and prior years, funding for Radio and Television Broadcasting to Cuba was provided in a separate appropriation.

This supplemental request would fund the additional costs associated with the 1998 Compensation cost-of-living increase (a 2.1 percent increase effective December 1, 1997) and an upward revision, based on 1997 actual data and enacted legislation, of the number of Compensation beneficiaries for 1998, as well as an expected increase in average payments to Compensation and Pension beneficiaries.

TITLE VI—GENERAL PROVISIONS

DEPARTMENTS, AGENCIES, AND CORPORATIONS

(Supplemental now requested, existing legislation)

Section 642 of the Treasury and General Government Appropriations Act 1998 (Public Law 105-61; 111 Stat. 1318) is repealed.

DEPARTMENTS, AGENCIES, AND CORPORATIONS—Continued

This supplemental request would repeal Section 642 of the Treasury and General Government Appropriations Act, 1998. That section provides an “open season” from July 1, 1998 through December 31, 1998 during which time Federal and Postal Service employees covered by the Civil Service Retirement System (CSRS) could switch to the Federal Employees Retirement System (FERS). Section 642 could raise the Federal Government’s employee retirement costs by billions of dollars over the long term. It would force agencies to use limited discretionary dollars for more retirement payments, diverting funds from pay raises and other priorities. Section 642 could also slow Federal downsizing.

AMENDMENTS TO AND REVISIONS IN BUDGET AUTHORITY FOR 1998

(Between the Transmittal of the 1998 and 1999 Budgets)

A statement of all amendments to or revisions in budget authority requested between transmittal of the 1998 budget and the 1999 budget is presented below. This statement is being included in the budget in accordance with the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 (31 U.S.C. 1105(d)).

The modifications to requests for 1998 budget authority that were made through the course of the past year took several forms:

- If the Congress had not yet acted on a pending request, the President sent amendments to the budget requests transmitted on February 6, 1997.
- If appropriations had been enacted, the President proposed either supplemental budget authority or rescission of enacted appropriations.
- The President also made available certain emergency appropriations. The availability of these funds was made contingent upon the President submitting a budget request to the Congress and designating the amounts requested as an emergency requirement.

- Finally, pursuant to the Line Item Veto Act (Public Law 104-130), the President cancelled certain items included in enacted appropriation bills.

Amendments, requests for supplemental appropriations, and releases of contingent emergency funds are printed in the documents of the House of Representatives and the Senate that are identified on the following listing. The President's proposals for rescissions are included in special messages to the Congress under the Impoundment Control Act of 1974 (Public Law 93-344). Both the special messages and monthly cumulative reports on the items covered by special messages are printed in the Federal Register. Cancellations of budget authority are also printed in the Federal Register.

ADVANCE APPROPRIATIONS, ADVANCE FUNDING, AND FORWARD FUNDING

I. An advance appropriation is one made to become available one fiscal year or more beyond the fiscal year for which the appropriation act is passed. Advance appropriations in fiscal year 1999 appropriations acts will become available for programs in 2000 or beyond. Since these appropriations are not available until after fiscal year 1999, the amounts will not be included in fiscal year 1999 budget totals, but will be reflected in the budget totals for the fiscal year for which they are requested.

The Congressional Budget Act of 1974 (31 U.S.C. 1105(a)(17)) requires inclusion in the budget of “information on estimates of appropriations for the fiscal year following the fiscal year for which the budget is submitted for grants, contracts, and other payments under each program for which there is an authorization of appropriations for that following fiscal year when the appropriations are authorized to be included in an appropriation law for the fiscal year before the fiscal year in which the appropriation is to be available for obligation.” In fulfillment of this requirement, the table below lists those accounts authorized to receive, in fiscal year 1999, advance appropriations for fiscal year 2000 and beyond and cites the authorizing statute. The listing is in two parts: Part A shows the amounts of advance appropriations included in the 1999 budget. <sup>1</sup>This citation refers to the Job Training Partnership Act's Pilots and Demonstration authority. We expect the FY 2000 advance appropriation to be carried out under new statutory authority provided in job training reform legislation.

<sup>2</sup>These statutes erroneously refer to "advance funding". Since these statutes describe and clearly intend to provide advance appropriations, the affected accounts are listed here.

II. Advance funding is budget authority that is to be charged to the appropriation in the succeeding year but which authorizes obligations to be incurred in the last quarter of the fiscal year if necessary to meet higher than anticipated benefit payments in excess of the specific amount appropriated for the year. When such budget authority is used, an adjustment is made to increase the budget authority for the fiscal year in which it is used and to reduce the budget authority of the succeeding fiscal year. Essentially, this is a device for avoiding supplemental requests late in the fiscal year for certain programs, should the appropriations for the current year prove to be low. The table below lists those accounts for which advance funding authority is requested in the 1999 budget.

Department of Labor:
 Special benefits.
 Federal unemployment benefits and allowances.

Department of Veterans Affairs:
 Veterans insurance and indemnities.
 Burial benefits and miscellaneous assistance.
 Readjustment benefits.

III. Forward funding is budget authority that is made available for obligation beginning in the last quarter of the fiscal year for the financing of ongoing grant programs during the next succeeding fiscal year. The budget authority for such programs is included in the budget totals for the year in which it is appropriated. This device is often used for education programs, so that grants can be made on a school year basis. The language providing forward funding for education programs will specify that amounts appropriated, in most but not all cases, will not be available until some time into the year of the appropriation (e.g., July 1, 1999) and in most cases will specify that such amounts will remain available until the end of the succeeding fiscal year. In other cases (e.g., Federal Pell grants), the funds become available on October 1st but are not normally obligated until July 1st or later and are available for obligation for an additional year. The table below lists those accounts for which forward funding exists or is requested in whole or in part in the 1999 budget.

Department of Education:
 Education for the disadvantaged.
 School improvement programs.
 Education reform.
 Special education.
 Vocational and adult education.
 Student financial assistance.

Department of the Interior:
 Operation of Indian programs.

In the training and employment area, forward funding provides appropriations for a program year that starts on July 1st of the fiscal year of the appropriation. Financing extends through June 30th of the following fiscal year. Program years are authorized for training programs under the Job Training Partnership Act, grants and activities under the School-to-Work Opportunities Act, operation of the State Employment Service under section 6 of the Wagner-Peyser Act, and senior citizen employment programs under Title V of the Older Americans Act. The table below lists accounts for which forward funding is requested in the 1999 budget.

Department of Labor:
 Training and employment services.
 Community service employment for older Americans.
 State unemployment insurance and employment service operations.

GOVERNMENT-SPONSORED ENTERPRISES

This chapter contains descriptions of and data on the Government-sponsored enterprises listed below. These enterprises were established and chartered by the Federal Government. They are not included in the Federal budget because they are classified as being private. However, because of their relationship to the Government, detailed statements of financial operations and condition are presented, to the extent such information is available, on a basis that is as consistent as practicable with the basis for the budget data of Government agencies. These statements are not reviewed by the President; they are presented as submitted by the enterprises.

—The Student Loan Marketing Association is a for-profit financial corporation chartered by Congress in 1972 under the Higher Education Act (HEA) to help increase the availability of student loans. Sallie Mae carries out secondary market and other functions.

—The College Construction Loan Insurance Association was organized as a private, for-profit insurance corporation to guarantee and insure bonds and loans made for construction and renovation of college and university facilities. Pursuant to legislation enacted in 1996, the association was fully privatized in 1997 and is no longer a Government-sponsored enterprise.

—The Federal National Mortgage Association provides supplementary assistance to the secondary market for home mortgages. The Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation provides a secondary market for mortgage lenders. Both are supervised by the Department of Housing and Urban Development for their roles in helping to finance low-, moderate-, and middle-income housing; both are regulated for financial safety and soundness by the Office of Federal Housing Enterprise Oversight.

—The Banks for Cooperatives, Agricultural Credit Bank, and Farm Credit Banks provide financial assistance to agriculture. They are supervised by the Farm Credit Administration.

—The Federal Agricultural Mortgage Corporation, under the supervision of the Farm Credit Administration, provides a secondary mortgage market for agricultural real estate and certain rural housing loans as well as for farm and business loans guaranteed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

—The Federal Home Loan Banks assist thrift institutions, banks, insurance companies, and credit unions in providing financing for housing and community development and are supervised by the Federal Housing Finance Board.

—The Financing Corporation functions as a financing vehicle for the FSLIC Resolution Fund. It operates under the supervision and control of the Federal Housing Finance Board.

—The Resolution Funding Corporation provided financing for the Resolution Trust Corporation (RTC) and is subject to the general oversight and direction of the Thrift Depositor Protection Oversight Board.

The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System is not a Government-sponsored enterprise, but its transactions also are not included in the budget because of its unique status in the conduct of monetary policy. The Board provides data on its administrative budget on a calendar year basis, which is included here for information. Its budget schedules and statements are not subject to review by the President.

The Student Loan Marketing Association (Sallie Mae), a shareholder-owned corporation, was created by the Education Amendments of 1972 to expand funds available for student loans by providing liquidity to lenders engaged in the Federal Family Education Loan Program (FFELP), formerly the guaranteed student loan program (GSLP).

Sallie Mae provides liquidity through direct purchase of insured student loans from eligible lenders and through warehousing advances, which are loans to lenders secured by insured student loans, Government or agency securities, or other acceptable collateral. In capital shortage areas, Sallie Mae is authorized, at the request of Federal officials, to make insured loans directly to students. Sallie Mae is authorized to advance funds to State agencies that will provide loans to students. Sallie Mae is also authorized to provide a secondary market for noninsured loans; to serve as a guarantee agency in support of loan availability at the request of the Secretary of Education; to purchase and underwrite student loan revenue bonds; to provide certain additional services as determined by its board of directors to be supportive of the credit needs of students generally; and to provide financing for academic facilities and equipment.

Sallie Mae is authorized by the Health Professions Educational Assistance Act of 1976 to provide a secondary market for federally insured loans to graduate health professions students.

Operations.—The forecast data with respect to operations are based on certain general economic and specific FFELP loan volume assumptions and should not be relied upon as an official forecast of the corporation's future business.

Financing.—Between 1974 and early 1982, Sallie Mae borrowed through the Federal Financing Bank. The Secretary of Education was authorized by the Education Amendments of 1980 to guarantee principal and interest on such obligations issued prior to October 1, 1985. Under an agreement with the Department of the Treasury reached in early 1981, Sallie Mae began borrowing directly in the private capital markets. Its last borrowing through the FFB and its last issuance of federally guaranteed obligations occurred in January 1982. During the first quarter of 1994, Sallie Mae prepaid all of the outstanding FFB debt. Its obligations today have certain characteristics, provided by charter, which give them "agency" status, but they are not federally insured or guaranteed.

Restructuring.—Pursuant to authority enacted in the Student Loan Marketing Association Act of 1996, Sallie Mae shareholders, on July 31, 1997, approved a plan to reorganize the corporation as a fully private, State chartered entity.

Under the reorganization, which became effective on August 8, 1997, the shares of common stock of the GSE (Student Loan Marketing Association) were converted on a one-for-one basis to shares of the new Delaware chartered holding company (SLM Holding Corporation). The GSE became a wholly owned subsidiary of SLM Holding Corporation.

The legal status of the GSE's debt obligations, including State tax exemptions, are fully preserved. According to the authorizing legislation, the GSE must wind down and be liquidated by September 30, 2008. All obligations of the GSE remaining upon liquidation must be placed into a defeasance trust. The GSE's outstanding adjustable rate cumulative preferred stock is required to be redeemed prior to such date.

As required by legislation, the shareholders' approval of the restructuring plan resulted in the transfer of resources from Sallie Mae to the District of Columbia for school facility improvements. The District received a total of $41.8 million, of which $36.8 million came from the sale of Sallie Mae stock warrants issued to the District, and $5 million was a payment from the Association for its decision to retain "Sallie Mae" as a tradename.

Note.—The Sallie Mae Board of Directors does not consider it appropriate to forecast corporate revenue in a public document since such forecasts could be used for speculative purposes.

COLLEGE CONSTRUCTION LOAN INSURANCE ASSOCIATION

The College Construction Loan Insurance Association (Connie Lee) was authorized by Public Law 99-498 on October 17, 1986. The Corporation was created to insure and reinsure bonds and loans of educational institutions which borrow funds to finance the acquisition, construction, or renovation of their facilities. The Association was incorporated in February 1987, under the District of Columbia Business Corporation Act.

Connie Lee's authorizing statute stated that "no obligation which is insured, guaranteed, or otherwise backed by the corporation, shall be deemed to be an obligation which is guaranteed by the full faith and credit of the United States."

Operations.—Connie Lee was structured to operate as a private corporation, subject to the same state laws and regulations as any other insurance company. Accordingly, Connie Lee secured insurance licenses in each of the various states in which it planned to conduct its insurance activities.

The Board of Directors authorized management to begin activities as a reinsurer of educational facilities bonds in 1988. Connie Lee reinsured its first bonds in December 1988. In the portion of fiscal year 1997 ending February 27, 1997 (date of stock sale for privatization), Connie Lee insured $390.2 million of debt service on bonds benefitting colleges, universities and teaching hospitals. Connie Lee also provided reinsurance on bonds representing $0.9 million of debt service.

INSURANCE AND REINSURANCE ACTIVITY

(In thousands of dollars)

Debt service insured:	1997 actual
Direct insurance .....	390,209
Reinsurance .....	899
Total .....	391,108

Financing.—In order to provide capitalization, the Secretary of Education, the Student Loan Marketing Association (Sallie Mae), and other investors were authorized to purchase stock in the corporation. Sallie Mae made an initial investment of $2 million in Connie Lee stock in fiscal year 1987. The Secretary of Education purchased $19.1 million in Connie Lee stock with funds appropriated for this purpose in fiscal year 1988. Subsequently, the corporation sold an additional $50.9 million of equity securities to Sallie Mae, increasing total capital of the corporation to $72.0 million. At the end of 1991, Connie Lee placed equity securities with private investors, providing sufficient incremental capital to obtain a triple-A credit rating necessary to engage in the financial guaranty business as a direct writer of insurance.

Management.—Connie Lee was governed by an eleven-member board of directors comprised of two directors appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury; two directors appointed by the Secretary of Education; three directors appointed by the Student Loan Marketing Association; and four directors elected by the corporation's shareholders, one of whom was required to be an administrator of a college or university.

Privatization.—Legislation was enacted in 1996 that privatized Connie Lee by repealing its enabling legislation and requiring the Federal Government to sell, and Connie Lee to purchase, the corporation's federally owned stock. This sale was completed on February 27, 1997, and the $18.3 million of proceeds were used to finance public elementary and secondary school facility construction and repair within the District of Columbia. Data on the corporation's financial position at the time of the stock sale is shown below.

The corporation will continue to insure debt of educational institutions, including Historically Black Colleges and Universities and academic institutions that have lower investment-grade credit ratings. Without the Federal restrictions previously imposed by legislation, the corporation will be able to guarantee bonds in other market sectors and diversify into new products and services.

The Federal National Mortgage Association, (Fannie Mae) is a federally-chartered, privately-owned company with a public mission to play a leadership role in mortgage finance, to improve the liquidity of the residential mortgage market and increase the availability of mortgage credit to low- and moderate income families and areas underserved by private lending institutions. In carrying out its mission, Fannie Mae engages primarily in two forms of business: investing in portfolios of residential mortgages and guaranteeing residential mortgage securities. As of September 30, 1997, Fannie Mae held a net mortgage portfolio totaling $307 billion and had net outstanding guaranteed mortgage-backed securities of over $566 billion. Fannie Mae's portfolio purchases and MBS finance about one of every five mortgages in the country.

Through a federal charter, Congress has equipped Fannie Mae with certain attributes to help it carry out its public mission and help lower the cost of homeownership for low-, moderate-, and middle-income homebuyers. These include an exemption from state and local taxes (except real property taxes), an exemption of its debt and mortgage securities from Securities and Exchange Commission registration requirements, and potential access to U.S. Treasury funds. Fannie Mae's charter also prohibits the imposition of user fees. Fannie Mae pays federal income tax; its earnings as of third quarter suggest the company will pay approximately $1.2 billion for 1997. Securities guaranteed by Fannie Mae and debt issued by the company are solely the corporation's obligations and are not backed by the full faith and credit of the U.S. Government. The common stock of the corporation is owned by the public, if fully transferable, and trades on the New York, Midwest, and Pacific stock exchanges.

Fannie Mae was established in 1938 to assist private markets in providing a steady supply of funds for housing. Fannie Mae was originally a subsidiary of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and was permitted to purchase only loans insured by the Federal Housing Administration (FHA). In 1954, Fannie Mae was restructured as a mixed ownership (part government, part private) corporation. Congress sold the government's remaining interest in Fannie Mae in 1968 and completed the transformation to private shareholder ownership in 1970. Using the proceeds from the sale of subordinated debentures, Fannie Mae paid the Treasury $216 million for the government's preferred stock, which was retired, and for the Treasury's interest in the corporation's earned surplus. As a result, the corporation was taken off the federal budget.

In 1992, Congress reaffirmed and clarified Fannie Mae's role in the housing finance system through charter act amendments included in the Federal Housing Enterprises Financial Safety and Soundness Act of 1992 ("The Act"). Fannie Mae's charter purposes, as amended by the Act, are: "to provide stability in the secondary market for residential mortgages; respond appropriately to the private capital market; provide ongoing assistance to the secondary market for residential mortgages (including activities relating to mortgages on housing for low- and moderate-income families involving a reasonable economic return that may be less than the return earned on other activities); and promote access to mortgage credit throughout the Nation (including central cities, rural areas, and underserved areas) by increasing the liquidity of mortgage investments and improving the distribution of investment capital for residential mortgage financing."

Fannie Mae's primary customers are low-, moderate-, and middle-income families. In March of 1994, the company established its "$1 Trillion Initiative" to provide mortgage financing for low- and moderate-income families in underserved markets, and passed the halfway mark in 1997. The company's 28 Partnership Offices have delivered over $40 billion in targeted investments by tailoring Fannie Mae's products and services to meet the unique needs of the communities in which they are located. In addition, enhancements to the company's automated underwriting system (Desktop Underwriter 4.0) will lower underwriting costs, speed the approval process, and expand the availability of secondary market financing.

On December 1, 1995, the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development issued a final rule that sets the levels of the affordable housing goals for 1996-1999 and establishes the requirements for counting mortgage purchases to low- and moderate-income families and families living in underserved areas with specific census tract and minority concentration requirements. Under the regulations, the low- and moderate-income target is 42 percent; the underserved area goal is 24 percent for the 1997-1999 period. In addition, the special affordable housing goal requires the corporation to target 14 percent of its conventional mortgage business in 1997-1999 to very low-income families or low-income families in low-income areas; those amounts must include qualifying special affordable purchases on multifamily units totaling not less than $1.29 billion for each year. Fannie Mae exceeded its housing goals for 1994, 1995, and 1996 and expects to meet or exceed all of its goals for 1997.

The Act also established the Office of Federal Housing Enterprise Oversight (OFHEO), an independent office within HUD, headed by a Director who reports directly to the Congress. OFHEO has statutory responsibility for ensuring that Fannie Mae is adequately capitalized and operating in a safe and sound manner. Included among the express statutory authorities of the Director is the authority to conduct examinations of the financial health of the company and to issue minimum and risk-based capital standards. The minimum capital requirements are computed from statutorily established ratios that are applied to the assets and off-balance sheet risks of Fannie Mae. The risk-based capital standard determines the amount of capital that Fannie Mae must hold to withstand the impact of simultaneous adverse credit and interest rate stresses over a 10-year period, plus an additional amount to cover management and operations risk. Total capital (shareholder's equity plus allowance for loan losses) at the end of September 1997 was $14.1 billion. The company has continued to remain in compliance with applicable capital standards and has been deemed adequately capitalized by OFHEO since its first classification in June 1993.

Fannie Mae has pursued its housing mission vigorously and productively while continuing to maintain its financial strength. It provides liquidity and stability to the mortgage market. It also passes on reduced mortgage interest rates to homebuyers—according to some studies between 25 and 50 basis points. Meanwhile, Fannie Mae has remained profitable. Through the third quarter of 1997, it earned $2.26 billion.

The forecast data contained in this material has been developed based on certain general economic assumptions prevalent in the third quarter of 1997 and should not be construed as an official forecast for Fannie Mae.

According to accounting practices for private corporations, the mortgages in the pools of loans supporting the mortgage-backed securities are considered to be owned by the holders of these securities. Consequently, on the books of the Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae), these mortgages are not considered assets and the securities outstanding are not considered liabilities. However, the concepts of the budget of the U.S. Government consider these mortgages and mortgage-backed securities to be assets and liabilities, respectively, of Fannie Mae. For the purposes of this document, therefore, they are presented as assets and liabilities in the accompanying schedules. On the schedule of Status of Direct Loans for mortgage-backed securities, the items labeled "New loans" and "Recoveries: Repayments and prepayments" are budgetary terms. However, from the Corporation's perspective, these items are "Amounts issued" and "Amounts passed through to the holders of securities", respectively.

The forecast data contained in this material has been developed based on certain general economic assumptions prevalent in the third quarter of 1997 and should not be construed as an official forecast of the Corporation's position.

Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation (Freddie Mac), is a federally-chartered, private shareholder-owned company with a public mission to provide stability and increase the liquidity of the residential mortgage market, and to help increase the availability of mortgage credit to low- and moderate-income families and in underserved areas. In carrying out its mission, Freddie Mac engages primarily in two forms of business: investing in portfolios of residential mortgages and guaranteeing residential mortgage securities. At the end of 1996, Freddie Mac held a net mortgage portfolio totaling nearly $138 billion and had outstanding guaranteed mortgage-backed securities of more than $554 billion.

Through a federal charter, Congress has equipped Freddie Mac with certain advantages over wholly private firms in carrying out these activities. These advantages include an exemption from state and local taxes (except real property taxes), an exemption for their debt and mortgage securities from SEC filing registration requirements, and a potential access to U.S. Treasury funds. Freddie Mac does pay federal income tax, however, and securities guaranteed by Freddie Mac and debt issued by the company are explicitly not backed by the full faith and credit of the U.S. Government. The common stock of the corporation is owned by the public, is fully transferable, and trades on the New York and Pacific stock exchanges.

Freddie Mac was established in 1970 under the Emergency Home Finance Act. Congress chartered Freddie Mac to provide mortgage lenders with an organized national secondary market enabling them to manage their conventional mortgage portfolio more effectively and gain indirect access to a ready source of additional funds to meet new demands for mortgages. Freddie Mac served as a conduit facilitating the flow of investment dollars from the capital markets to mortgage lenders, and ultimately, to homebuyers, increasing the amount of mortgage credit available and making it more affordable.

The Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 (FIRREA) significantly changed the corporate governance of Freddie Mac. The company's three member Board of Directors, which had corresponded with the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, was replaced with an eighteen member Board of Directors. Thirteen board members are elected annually by shareholders and five are annually appointed by the President of the United States. In addition, FIRREA converted Freddie Mac's 60 million shares of non-voting, senior participating preferred stock into voting common stock. As a result, the corporation was taken off the federal budget.

FIRREA also clarified Freddie Mac's role in the housing finance delivery system through amendments to its charter act. Specifically, FIRREA established Freddie Mac's public mission: "to provide stability in the secondary market for residential mortgages; respond appropriately to the private capital market; and provide ongoing assistance to the secondary market for residential mortgages (including activities relating to mortgages on housing for low- and moderate-income families involving a reasonable economic return that may be less than the return earned on other activities. The Federal Housing Enterprise Financial Safety and Soundness Act of 1992 ("The Act") added to Freddie Mac's public mission the promotion of "access to mortgage credit throughout the Nation (including central cities, rural areas, and underserved areas) by increasing the liquidity of mortgage investments and improving the distribution of investment capital for residential mortgage financing."

The Act also established affordable housing goals that are designed to improve the flow of mortgage funds to low- and moderate-income families in central cities, rural areas, and other underserved areas. On December 1, 1995, the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) issued a final rule that sets the levels of the goals for 1996–1999 and establishes the requirements for counting mortgage purchases for meeting these goals. The goals provide that, of the total number of dwelling units financed by Freddie Mac's mortgage purchases, 40 percent meet the low- and moderate-income goal in 1996 and 42 percent in each of 1997, 1998, and 1999; 21 percent meet the special affordable goal in 1996 and 24 percent in each of 1997, 1998 and 1999; and 12 percent meet the special affordable goals in 1996 and 14 percent in each of 1997, 1998 and 1999, including at least $988 million in qualifying multifamily mortgage purchases in each year from 1996 through 1999.

In 1996, Freddie Mac met the low- and moderate-income goal of 40 percent with purchases of 41 percent, the underserved area goal of 21 percent with purchases of 25 percent, the special affordable goal of 12 percent with purchases of 14 percent, and the multifamily portion of the special affordable goal of $988 million with purchases of more than $1 billion in qualifying multifamily mortgages.

The Act also enhanced the regulatory oversight of Freddie Mac by establishing the Office of Federal Housing Enterprise Oversight (OFHEO), an independent office within HUD, headed by a Director appointed by the President. OFHEO is responsible for ensuring that Freddie Mac is adequately capitalized and operating in a safe and sound manner. Included among the express statutory authorities of the Director is the authority to conduct examinations of the financial health of the company and to issue minimum and risk-based capital standards. The minimum capital requirements are computed from statutorily established ratios that are applied to the assets and off-balance sheet risks of Freddie Mac. The risk-based capital standard determines the amount of capital that Freddie Mac must hold to withstand the impact of simultaneous adverse credit and interest rate stresses over a 10-year period, plus an additional amount to cover management and operations risk.

Meanwhile, Freddie Mac has remained profitable. Freddie Mac recorded net income of $1.24 billion in 1996, a 14 percent increase over 1995 earnings of $1.091 billion. While accepting and managing higher interest rate risk, Freddie Mac has expanded its investments in retained mortgages from only $34 billion in 1992 to nearly $138 billion at the end of 1996 in an effort to generate higher overall returns.

According to generally accepted accounting principles utilized by private corporations, the mortgages in the pools of loans supporting PCs are considered to be owned by the holder of these securities. Therefore, Freddie Mac does not show these mortgages as assets. However, the budget philosophy of the United States Government includes these mortgages and mortgages pass-through securities as assets and liabilities, respectively, of Freddie Mac. For the purpose of this document, therefore, they are presented as assets and liabilities in the accompanying schedules. On the Status of Direct Loans schedule for mortgage pass-through securities, the items labeled "Disbursements" and "Repayments" are budgetary terms. However, from Freddie Mac's perspective, these amounts represent "Sales of PCs" and "Amounts passed through to PC holders," respectively.

FARM CREDIT SYSTEM

The Farm Credit System is a government sponsored enterprise that provides privately financed credit to agricultural and rural communities. The major functional entities of the system are: (1) Banks for Cooperatives (BC), (2) Agricultural Credit Bank (ACB), (3) Farm Credit Banks (FCB), and (4) direct lender associations. The history and specific functions of the bank entities are discussed after the presentation of financial schedules for each bank entity. As part of the Farm Credit System (FCS), these entities are regulated and examined by the Farm Credit Administration (FCA), an independent Federal agency. The administrative costs of FCA are currently financed by assessments of system institutions. System banks finance loans primarily from sales of bonds to the public and their own capital funds. The system bonds issued by the banks are not guaranteed by the U.S. Government either as to principal or interest. The bonds are backed by an insurance fund, administered by the Farm Credit System Insurance Corporation (FCSIC), an independent Federal agency that collects insurance premiums from member banks to pay its administrative expenses and fund insurance reserves. All of the banks' current operating expenses are paid from their own income and do not require budgetary resources from the Federal Government. Limited Federal assistance is provided to support interest payments on special FCS Financial Assistance Corporation (FAC) debt obligations (see discussion of FAC elsewhere in this document).

Pursuant to the Agricultural Credit Act of 1987, stockholders in 11 of 13 Banks for Cooperatives voted in 1988 to merge into a single National Bank for Cooperatives. On January 1, 1995, the Springfield Bank for Cooperatives also merged with other entities, as discussed below, to form the first Agricultural Credit Bank. The remaining Cooperative entity, the St. Paul Bank for Cooperatives, is independently chartered to provide credit and related services, nationwide, to eligible cooperatives primarily engaged in farm supply, grain, marketing and processing (including sugar and dairy.) Loans are also made to rural utilities, including telecommunications companies. The financial schedules below reflect the operations of the St. Paul Bank for Cooperatives. Loans are made for both seasonal and long-term needs.

On January 1, 1995, the National Bank for Cooperatives, the Springfield Bank for Cooperatives, and the Farm Credit Bank of Springfield consolidated to form an Agricultural Credit Bank (ACB), known as CoBank ACB. This bank is headquartered in Denver, Colorado and serves eligible cooperatives nationwide, and provides funding to Agricultural Credit Associations (ACAs) in one of its regions. An ACB operates under statutory authority that combines the authorities of a FCB and a BC. In exercising its FCB authority, CoBank ACB's charter limits its lending to ACAs located in the region previously served by the Farm Credit Bank of Springfield. As an entity lending to Cooperatives, CoBank engages in the same business activities as the St. Paul Bank for Cooperatives and it provides international loans for the financing of agricultural exports.

The Agricultural Credit Act of 1987 (1987 Act) required the Federal Land Banks (FLBs) and Federal Intermediate Credit Banks (FICBs) to merge into a Farm Credit Bank (FCB) in each of the 12 Farm Credit districts. The FCBs operate under statutory authority that combines the prior authorities of the FLB and the FICB. No merger occurred in the Jackson district in 1988 because the FLB was in receivership. Pursuant to section 410(e) of the 1987 Act, as amended by the Farm Credit Banks Safety and Soundness Act of 1992, the FICB of Jackson merged with the FCB of Columbia on October 1, 1993. Mergers and consolidations of FCBs across district lines, that began in 1992 continued through mid-1995. As a result of this restructuring activity, 6 FCBs headquartered in the following cities, remain: AgFirst FCB, Columbia, South Carolina; AgAmerica FCB, Spokane, Washington; AgriBank FCB, St. Paul, Minnesota; FCB of Wichita, Wichita, Kansas; FCB of Texas, Austin, Texas; and Western FCB, Sacramento, California.

The FCBs serve as discount banks and as of October 1, 1997 provided funds to 31 Federal Land Credit Associations (FLCA), 64 Production Credit Associations (PCAs), and 60 Agricultural Credit Associations (ACAs). These direct lender associations, in turn, make short-term production loans (PCAs and ACAs) and long-term real estate loans (FLCAs and ACAs) to eligible farmers and ranchers. Also, as of January 1, 1996, 51 Federal Land Bank Associations originated and serviced long-term real estate loans for 2 of the 6 FCBs that have no affiliated FLCAs. FCBs can also lend to local financing institutions, including commercial banks, as authorized by the Farm Credit Act of 1971, as amended.

All the capital stock of the FICB's, from organization in 1923 to December 31, 1956, was held by the U.S. Government. The 1956 Act provided a long-range plan for the eventual ownership of the credit banks by the production credit associations and the gradual retirement of the Government's investment in the banks. This retirement was accomplished in full on December 31, 1968. The last of the Government capital that had been invested in the FLB's was repaid in 1947.

Farmer Mac is authorized under the Farm Credit Act of 1971 (the Act), as amended by the Agricultural Credit Act of 1987, to create a secondary market for agricultural real estate and rural home mortgages that meet minimum credit standards (qualified loans). The Farmer Mac title of the Act was amended by the 1990 farm bill to authorize Farmer Mac to purchase, pool, and securitize the guaranteed portions of farmer program, rural business and community development loans guaranteed by the USDA. The Farmer Mac title was further amended in 1991 to clarify Farmer Mac's authority to issue debt obligations, provide for the establishment of minimum capital standards, and establish the Office of Secondary Market Oversight at the Farm Credit Administration (FCA) and expand the agency's rulemaking authority. Most recently, the Farm Credit System Reform Act of 1996 amended the Farmer Mac title to allow Farmer Mac to purchase loans directly from lenders and to issue and guarantee mortgage-backed securities without requiring that a minimum cash reserve or subordinated (first loss) interest be maintained by the lenders, poolers or investors as had been required under its original authority. The 1996 Act also increased Farmer Mac's capital requirements over time and expanded the regulatory authorities of the FCA.

Farmer Mac operates through two programs, "Farmer Mac I," which involves qualified loans, and "Farmer Mac II," which involves guaranteed portions of USDA guaranteed loans. Farmer Mac operates by: (i) purchasing newly originated or existing qualified loans or guaranteed portions from lenders; and (ii) exchanging qualified loans or guaranteed portions for guaranteed securities. Loans purchased by Farmer Mac are aggregated into pools that back Farmer Mac guaranteed securities which are held by Farmer Mac or sold into the capital markets. Farmer Mac is intended to attract new capital for financing qualified loans and guaranteed portions, foster increased long-term, fixed-rate lending, and provide greater liquidity to agricultural and rural lenders. Increased competition among agricultural lenders, stimulated by access to the secondary market, should result in more favorable rates and terms for agricultural borrowers.

Farmer Mac is governed by a 15 member Board of Directors. Ten Board members are elected by stockholders, including five by the Farm Credit System and five by commercial lenders. Five are appointed by the President, subject to Senate confirmation.

FINANCING

Financial support and funding for Farmer Mac's operations comes from several sources: sale of common and preferred stock; issuance of debt obligations; gain on sale of guaranteed loan-backed securities; guarantee fees; and income from investments. Under procedures specified in the Act, Farmer Mac may issue obligations to the U.S. Treasury in a cumulative amount not to exceed $1.5 billion to fulfill its guarantee obligations.

The Act provides for the actuarial soundness of the guarantee fee to be reviewed annually by the Comptroller General in a report to Congress. The soundness of the Farmer Mac I program is maintained through the application of multiple procedures. First, all loans are screened against Farmer Mac's credit underwriting and appraisal standards. Second, Farmer Mac assesses annual guarantee fees set at levels determined, with the assistance of computer modeling tools to evaluate Farmer Mac's portfolio under conditions of economic stress, to be adequate for potential risks undertaken. Third, Farmer Mac controls interest rate risk through matched funding and requirement of yield maintenance provisions for mortgages that prepay. Fourth, Farmer Mac's portfolio of loans and guaranteed securities must conform to geographic and commodity diversification standards set by the Board. Fifth, Farmer Mac maintains an allowance for loan losses determined to be adequate to cover anticipated losses. Lastly, Farmer Mac must maintain core and risk based capital as provided in the Act and FCA regulations. In the Farmer Mac II program, the risks are minimal because only the USDA guaranteed portions of loans are purchased and funding is matched to effectively eliminate interest rate risk.

Available funds of Farmer Mac are invested in U.S. agency securities or other high-grade commercial investments. No stock dividends are allowed under the Act until the Board determines that an adequate loss reserve has been funded to back Farmer Mac guarantees.

GUARANTEES

Farmer Mac provides a guarantee of timely payment of principal and interest on securities backed by qualified loans or pools of qualified loans. These securities are not guaranteed by the United States, and are not "government securities". The 1996 Act removed requirements that loan originators or other third parties maintain cash reserves or subordinated securities in connection with the issuance of Farmer Mac's guaranteed securities.

Farmer Mac is subject to reporting requirements under securities laws and its guaranteed mortgage-backed securities are subject to registration with the Securities and Exchange Commission under the 1933 and 1934 Securities Acts.

REGULATION

Farmer Mac is federally regulated by the FCA's Office of Secondary Market Oversight (OSMO). OSMO is responsible for examination of and rulemaking for Farmer Mac, including the determination of the stress test to evaluate the adequacy of Farmer Mac's capital and the establishment of risk-based capital requirements after February 1999. The 1996 amendments to the Farmer Mac title expanded FCA's regulatory authority to include provisions for establishing a conservatorship or receivership, if necessary, and provided for increased levels of core capital phased in over three years. As of September 30, 1997, Farmer Mac's total capital exceeds regulatory and statutory requirements. Lastly, during the capital phase-in period the U.S. Treasury and FCA jointly monitor Farmer Mac's financial condition and report to Congress biannually, as requested by Congress in connection with the enactment of the 1996 Act.

The 12 Federal Home Loan Banks were chartered by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board under the authority of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act of 1932 (the Act). The FHLBanks are under the supervision of the Federal Housing Finance Board. The common mission of the FHLBanks is to facilitate the extension of credit through their members in order to provide access to housing for all Americans and to improve the quality of their communities. To accomplish this mission, the FHLBanks make loans, called advances, and provide other credit products and services to their nearly 6,418 member commercial banks, savings associations, insurance companies, and credit unions. Advances and letters of credit must be fully secured by eligible collateral and long-term advances may be made only for the purpose of providing funds for residential housing finance. Additionally, specialized advance programs provide funds for community reinvestment and affordable housing programs. All regulated financial depositories and insurance companies engaged in residential housing finance are eligible for membership. Each FHLBank operates in a geographic district designated by the Board and together the FHLBanks cover all of the United States as well as the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, and the Northern Mariana Islands.

Advances outstanding on September 30, 1997 totaled approximately $181.8 billion, a net increase of approximately $28.5 billion from the September 30, 1996 level of $153.3 billion.

The principal source of funds for the lending operation is the sale of consolidated obligations to the public. On September 30, 1997, $284.5 billion of these obligations were outstanding. The consolidated obligations are not guaranteed by the U.S. Government as to principal or interest. Other sources of lendable funds include members' deposits and capital. Deposits totaled $15.3 billion and total capital amounted to $18.4 billion as of September 30, 1997. Funds not immediately needed for advances to members are invested.

The capital stock of the Federal Home Loan Banks is owned entirely by the members. Initially the U.S. Government purchased stock of the banks in the amount of $125 million. The banks had repurchased the Government's investment in full by mid-1951.

The operating expenses of the FHLBanks are paid from their own income and are not included in the budget of the United States. Included in these expenses are the assessments by the Finance Board to cover its administrative and other costs. The Finance Board's budget and expenditures, however, are included in the budget of the United States.

The Act, as amended in 1989, requires each FHLBank to operate an Affordable Housing Program (AHP). Each FHLBank provides subsidies in the form of direct grants or below-market rate advances for members that use the funds for qualifying affordable housing projects. The FHLBank system sets aside for its AHPs a minimum of $100 million annually. The Act also requires that the FHLBanks contribute $300 million annually to assist in the payment of interest on bonds issued by the Resolution Funding Corporation.

The forecast data for 1998 and 1999 contained in this material represents estimates and should not be construed as an official forecast of the FHLBanks System's future position.

FINANCING CORPORATION

The Financing Corporation (FICO) is a mixed-ownership government corporation, chartered by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board pursuant to the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation Recapitalization Act of 1987, as amended (the "Act"). FICO's sole purpose was to function as a financing vehicle for the FSLIC Resolution Fund, formerly the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation (FSLIC). FICO operates under the supervision and control of the Federal Housing Finance Board (the "Finance Board"). Pursuant to the Act, FICO was authorized to issue debentures, bonds and other obligations subject to limitations contained in the Act, the net proceeds of which were to be used solely to purchase capital certificates issued by the FSLIC Resolution Fund, or to refund any previously issued obligations. The Resolution Trust Corporation Refinancing, Restructuring, and Improvement Act of 1991 terminated the FICO's borrowing authority.

The Act provided formulas pursuant to which the Federal Home Loan Banks made capital contributions to FICO at the direction of the Finance Board for the purchase of FICO capital stock. FICO used the proceeds received from the sales of such capital stock to purchase non-interest bearing securities for deposit in a segregated account as required by the Act. The non-interest bearing securities held in the segregated account will be the primary source of repayment of the principal of the FICO obligations. Securities in the segregated account are kept separate from other FICO accounts and funds but are not specifically pledged as collateral for the payment of obligations. The primary source of payment of interest on the obligations is the receipt of assessments imposed on and collected from institutions' accounts which are insured by the Bank Insurance Fund (the "BIF") and the Savings Association Insurance Fund (the "SAIF").

RESOLUTION FUNDING CORPORATION

The Resolution Funding Corporation (the "REFCORP") is a mixed-ownership government corporation established by Title V of the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act of 1989 (FIRREA). The sole purpose of REFCORP was to provide financing for the Resolution Trust Corporation (the "RTC"). Pursuant to FIRREA, REFCORP was authorized to issue debentures, bonds, and other obligations, subject to limitations contained in the Act and regulations established by the Thrift Depositor Protection Oversight Board. The proceeds of the debt (less any discount, plus any premium, net of issuance cost) were used solely to purchase nonredeemable capital certificates of the RTC or to refund any previously issued obligations.

REFCORP is subject to the general oversight and direction of the Thrift Depositor Protection Oversight Board. The day-to-day operations of REFCORP are under the management of a three-member Directorate comprised of the Director of the Office of Finance of the Federal Home Loan Banks and two members selected by the Oversight Board from among the presidents of the twelve Federal Home Loan Banks ("the FHLBanks"). Members of the Directorate serve without compensation, and REFCORP is not permitted to have any paid employees.

FIRREA and the regulations adopted by the Thrift Depositor Protection Oversight Board provide formulas pursuant to which the Federal Home Loan Banks made capital contributions to REFCORP's Principal Fund and continue to make interest payments on outstanding REFCORP obligations. FIRREA also provides that the U.S. Treasury cover any interest shortfall. Funds designated for the Principal Funds were used to purchase zero-coupon bonds. The zero-coupon bonds will be held in the Principal Fund and are the primary source of repayment of the principal of the obligations at maturity.

The figures presented may differ from other Board financial material because they are prepared in accordance with OMB guidelines which vary from the Board's budget and accounting procedures.

The Federal Reserve System operates under the provisions of the Federal Reserve Act of 1913, as amended, and other acts of Congress.

Program.—To carry out its responsibilities under the Act, the Board determines general monetary, credit, and operating policies for the System as a whole and formulates the rules and regulations necessary to carry out the purposes of the Federal Reserve Act. The Board's principal duties consist of exerting an influence over credit conditions and supervising the Federal Reserve banks and member banks.

Financing.—Under the provisions of section 10 of the Federal Reserve Act, the Board of Governors levies upon the Federal Reserve banks, in proportion to their capital and surplus, an assessment sufficient to pay its estimated expenses. The Board, under the Act, determines and prescribes the manner in which its obligations are incurred and its expenses paid. Funds derived from assessments are deposited in the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond, and the Act provides that such funds "shall not be construed to be Government funds or appropriated moneys." No Government appropriation is required to support operations of the Board.

The information presented pertains to Board operations only. Expenditures made on behalf of the Federal Reserve banks for production, issuance, retirement, and shipment of Federal Reserve notes are not included, since they are reimbursed in full by the Federal Reserve banks.
